LEFORS — The Lefors Town Council wants to throw the animals out of town.

The council will meet at 7 p.m. Friday in the town civic center to consider final reading of an ordinance which will make it illegal to keep livestock inside the city limits.

Yvonne Pittman, city secretary, said there are currently several livestock owners who keep swine, cattle and horses inside the town limits, much to the detriment of neighbors' noses, she said.

She defined the animals which the council is trying to ban as any critter with four legs. However, the four-legged definition does not apply to dogs and cats, Pittman said.

In addition to the total ban of the in-town hay, slop and grain munchers, another section of the livestock ordinance will provide penalties for allowing the animals to roam "at large" inside the town limits, she said.

Previous approval of the livestock ban and other ordinances to be considered for the final time Friday has already been granted by the council.

Another ordinance to be considered by the Lefors council concerns abandoned and junk vehicles. The new ordinance will provide for penalties and impoundment of junk cars in town.

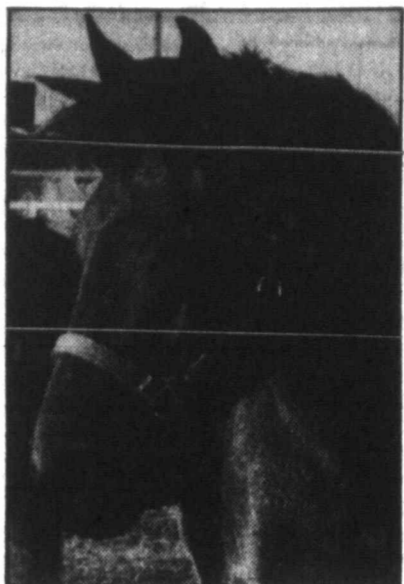

And nearly everyone's heard the stories about little kids who have climbed into an abandoned ice box or refrigerator, closed the door, and then suffocated. The council wants to take care of that potential problem, too, with an ordinance against the potential hazard and eyesore of abandoned ice boxes, Pittman said.

Two other ordinances to be considered on final reading concern Lefors' appearance. One deals with damaged buildings. The ordinance will allow the town officials to condemn a building and order the owner to make repairs or face the prospect of forced sale of the property, the city secretary said.

The final ordinance deals with trash and garbage in Lefors. That town law will provide penalties for failure to

Soviet nuclear satellite will crash to earth this month

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nuclear-powered Soviet spy satellite will likely blaze back to Earth within weeks, and the Pentagon says it could spread destruction and radioactivity if its broken pieces fall in a populated area. It is too early to say where it will hit.

Cosmos 1402 is tumbling out of control in an orbit that covers mostly oceans but also goes over most of North America, most of the Soviet Union, the entire African continent, all of South America, and much of China, the Defense Department said.

On Jan. 24, 1978, another Soviet nuclear-powered spy satellite came back into the earth's atmosphere over northern Canada. Most of Cosmos 954 burned up in the atmosphere, but some intense radiation was discovered near the eastern shore of Great Slave Lake.

After the 1978 crash, President Carter proposed banning nuclear-powered satellites. The United States has none.

"We do not know where it will land, nor do we know precisely when to expect re-entry," said a Pentagon statement.

But Pentagon officials pointed out that three-quarters of the earth's surface is water and that there are wide expanses of sparsely populated land areas.

The five-ton Cosmos 1402 is powered by a nuclear reactor with about 100 pounds of enriched uranium, the same amount of fuel that was in the 1978 reactor.

Should it fall into the water, "there would be no consequential risk," said Maj. Douglas Kennett, a Pentagon spokesman. But if it hits on land, "there is a health risk from debris," he said.

Geoffrey Perry, a leading English satellite tracker, said "it could prove very dangerous" if Cosmos 1402 hits in a populated area.

Both the Soviet Union and the United States use a variety of satellites to spy on each other.

The Soviet satellite was launched last Aug. 30 and uses the nuclear reactor to power its radar, which tracks American naval vessels. The Russians normally use the satellites for about six months before they are replaced.

Cosmos 1402 was launched in an orbit of 173 miles by 157 miles, according to the Soviet news agency Tass.

Usually, when the Soviets are finished with the satellites, they are boosted by rockets from the craft into high orbits, around 500 miles up, to keep them from being pulled back to Earth by gravity.

Judge halts foreclosures of homes owned by jobless as problem grows

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A judge says a crisis among jobless homeowners convinced him to halt mortgage foreclosures on owner-occupied houses two days after the local sheriff saved 42 homes from the auction block.

"I've had suggestions that several people have even committed suicide because of their economic problems," Common Pleas Judge Nicholas Papadakos said Wednesday as he announced the moratorium.

"Defaults are increasing. It's a serious problem. The situation now is becoming so critical that I felt I had to do something," Papadakos said.

The order will give hard-pressed homeowners time to negotiate repayment terms with lenders, he said.

The order applies to "debtor-occupied" homes, not to "businesses or rental properties or the property of deadbeats," Papadakos said.

Mortgage payments are delinquent on 22,000 properties in the four-county Pittsburgh area and lenders are foreclosing on about 3,200 of them, according to estimates by Action Housing Inc., a private, non-profit agency.

"I'm glad to see the system show some mercy," said Ed Wills, an Action Housing researcher studying mortgage foreclosures for the Mon Valley Unemployed Committee, which had begun protests at the monthly sheriff's auctions of repossessed homes.

"But it has a negative aspect in that it cuts off cash flow to the lending institutions, which are not in such great shape themselves," Wills said.

Papadakos, administrator of the Allegheny County Court's civil division, acted without a formal petition, and a local mortgage lawyer said he thought the action might be illegal. "I don't think he can do it," said lawyer Bernard Markovitz. "I've never heard of a case where the judge took the first action."

Bad loans jeopardize the savings of small investors, he said. "We don't want to sell these properties, but we can't let them sit in limbo," he said.

The issue of mortgage foreclosures prompted a noisy demonstration, Tuesday in Springfield, Colo., where a group of farmers trying to halt a farm foreclosure sale was broken up with tear gas.

Doug Goodpaster, 31, and his 56-year-old father, Jim, were arrested on charges of assaulting a police officer, a felony, said Baca County Sheriff Willard Goff. They remained behind bars Wednesday on bond of $100,000 each.

The Pittsburgh judge, who said his foreclosure moratorium is legal under the state Rules of Civil Procedure, said he would issue moratorium eligibility guidelines in time for the next sheriff's sale Feb. 7.

Fire Captain Leo "Stinky" Tyerrell carries what remains of part of a sofa from the teacher's lounge at Pampa High School to the outside, during a smoky fire discovered there Wednesday. Tyerrell, from Pampa's north fire station, was one of the firemen who responded when an alarm sounded at 3:30 p.m., just as the dismissal bell was ringing, causing some confusion. When firemen arrived, they found the fire had already been extinguished by school officials using a dry powder fire extinguisher. Firemen helped the students make an orderly evacuation of the smoke-filled hallways. There were no injuries and only light damage to the lounge. (Photo courtesy Ed Copeland of PHS)

Freeway construction stopped by 9,000-year-old skeleton

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Excited archeologists believe they may have unearthed one of the oldest human skeletons in North America in a grave thought to be at least 9,000 years old.

The discovery of the ancient burial site, 18 miles north of the capital, halted construction of a new freeway to give experts time to excavate. Besides the skeleton, which has not yet been completely dug up, workers have found more than 100 arrowheads.

Workers at the site, near Leander, Texas, jokingly dubbed the skeleton the "Leanderthal Man." It was not known immediately whether the remains were that of a man or a woman.

The skeleton was found at a depth of 12 feet, lying on its side in a typical ancient grave posture, said James McCarver of the state highway department.

The department has its own archeology section to handle such finds, and director Dr. Frank Weir said he is certain the skeletal remains are older than 9,000 years, dating back to 7000 B.C.

A more exact date is expected after radio-carbon tests, which should take about a month.

Dr. Dave Dibble, director of the Texas Archeological Survey at the University of Texas at Austin, has called the site "the best Plainview site in the Western Hemisphere." Plainview is the term archeologists give to prehistoric artifacts of a certain type, generally among the oldest in North America.

State archeologist Robert Mallouf called the excavation "one of the three or four oldest intact grave sites in North America." He said the oldest find, although its age is disputed by some experts, was a human skeleton dug up in Washington State said to be 13,000 years old.

"One reason this site is so important is it has so much cultural information about some of the least known prehistoric periods in North American archeology," Mallouf said.

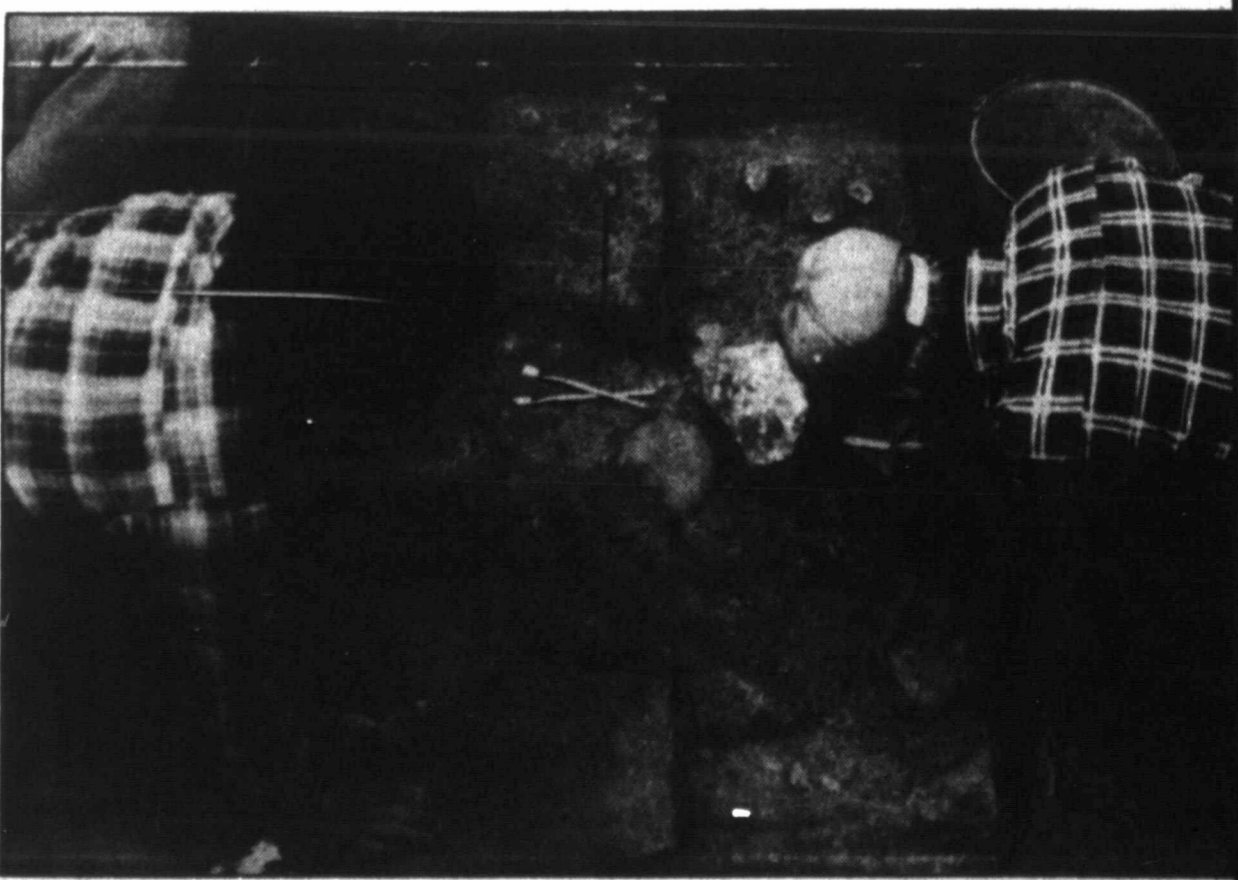

McCarver, a graduate student in anthropology, said it was during the period when man changed from a hunter to a vegetable-gatherer.

"This site is very important. Most sites give you a fragment of information — a page out of a novel. This one has the whole novel," he said.

McCarver said workers were able to unearth most of the skull Wednesday and hoped to complete the dig before the weekend, when rain that could flood the site is forecast.

He said it was not known if other skeletons would be found. The burial could have been the result of a death during a tribal migration.

Texas Highway Department workmen delicately dig around the remains of a human skeleton believed to be about 9,000 years old. If confirmed, it could be one of the oldest human skeletons unearthed in North America. (AP Laserphoto)

Condemned man protests death

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) - A Texas prison inmate ordered to die by injection Jan. 25 vows guards will have carry him to the death chamber.
"I'm not going to walk for them. They will have to carry me," said Thomas Andy Barefoot, 37, of New Iberia, La., who was sentenced to death for the 1978 murder of a Harker Heights police officer.
While he vows he will not cooperate on his execution day, Barefoot said he will not physically fight officers.
"I am not going to physically strike them or anything like that. But I am going to passively protest this. I am forced against my will," he said.
If Barefoot dies strapped to a medical cart just after midnight Jan. 25, he will be the second U.S. convict executed by a deadly solution of sodium pentathol.
Barefoot, who once worked as a roughneck, has had two previous stays of execution. His attorneys are asking the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to review the case again.
Charlie Brooks Jr., who was convicted in the shooting death of a Fort Worth auto mechanic, became the first to die by injection after last-minute appeals failed. The 40-year-old inmate was executed Dec. 7 at the Texas Department of Corrections' Walls Unit here.
Barefoot on Wednesday compared his situation to a person hiding behind a car while an assailant invites him to come out so he can kill him.
"I don't believe in suicide," he said.
Barefoot has insisted he did not kill officer Carl Irving Levin, 30, in August 1978.
Levin, the father of five children, was shot in the head as he approached a man suspected of setting fire to a nightclub

Steve Chance picked to be the police-school liaison officer

Pampa Policeman Steve Chance, recently selected as Patrolman of the Year, has been appointed the liaison officer for the Pampa schools following the resignation of Officer "Dusty" Golobay last Monday.
Golobay resigned for personal reasons, during a time of internal investigation, according to Pampa Police Chief, J. J. Ryzman.
Officer Chance is mainly involved with crime prevention. He meets with groups of citizens who are interested in setting up Neighborhood Watch programs.

The schools can call upon him to give talks to the students on any subject related to crime prevention, including drugs. Chance will give the kids the straight "dope" on dope, not the "if you smoke that it will stunt your growth" misinformation, Chief Ryzman said.
Chance also conducts safety programs for the kids.
"His job is to let the kids know that a policeman can be their friend," said Ryzman.

Warsaw nations propose no-fight treaty with NATO countries

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) - The Soviet-led Warsaw Pact nations have proposed a mutual agreement with NATO to renounce the use of military force and outlaw or limit a wide array of weapons, from neutron bombs to lethal chemicals.
The new peace proposal was announced after Wednesday's final session of a two-day Warsaw Pact summit here, the first such meeting held under the leadership of the new head of the Soviet Communist Party, Yuri V. Andropov.
Details of the proposal were released today in a communique from the Czechoslovak news agency CTK that was translated into English by The Associated Press.
The East Bloc proposal comes amid concerted Soviet propaganda effort seeking to enlist U.S. and Western European peace groups in its campaign to block NATO's planned deployment of U.S.-made cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe. The missiles are intended to counter Soviet missiles aimed at the European NATO allies.
"Member states of the Warsaw Pact turn to the member states of the North Atlantic (Treaty Organization) pact with a proposal to conclude an agreement to renounce the use of military force and to preserve peaceful relations," the communique said.

During a Washington news conference Wednesday evening, President Reagan said the Warsaw Pact proposal for a mutual renunciation of force deserves consideration by the NATO allies.
But he added that the proposal was new and said, "It is something that would require consultation with all of our allies in NATO."
The Warsaw Pact communique said East Bloc leaders "expect that since the Soviet Union has accepted a unilateral commitment not to use nuclear weapons first, all nuclear powers which have not done so far will take similar steps."
This mention of the first-strike option was likely to raise problems, since the numerically inferior NATO forces, led by the United States, have balked at giving up any option in the face of a Warsaw Pact attack.
The Warsaw Pact document went on to call for talks on reducing or eliminating nuclear weapons testing, chemical weapons, neutron weapons and foreign military bases.
Here are some of the other proposals:

Prague residents indifferent to Pact meeting

By LARRY GERBER

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) - Residents of this venerable European city, who have weathered the onslaught of Soviet tanks and years of strict government control, appeared unconcerned about the Soviet bloc summit conference this week.
Official press reports that the Warsaw Pact meeting had produced a "new great peace proposal" for averting nuclear war also failed to attract much attention, and residents appeared more interested in scouring the stores for rare items and bargains.
East Europeans had been told in advance that a summit was going to take place, and the Czech capital was suggested as the venue. But Prague residents didn't know about the meeting until the leaders began arriving.

"Where? Here? No!" was the almost simultaneous reaction of a young man and woman walking along the cobblestone streets when asked about the meeting.
An East German tourist, told that her country's leader Erich Honecker was here for the conference, said, "So that's why there are so many police around."
Leaders of the Warsaw Pact alliance gathered Tuesday and Wednesday at the ninth century Hradcany Castle, a hilltop stronghold commanding a view of Prague. Afterward, Soviet Communist Party chief Yuri V. Andropov said: "We have jointly determined a policy for the future."
A summit declaration, based on renunciation of military force between the Warsaw Pact and NATO, was expected to be made public today.
But few people interviewed on the streets through an interpreter said they were concerned about the summit.

"We don't read the paper," said a man who would identify himself only as Richard, when asked if he knew of the political developments. "It is always the same."
"I mostly read the sports pages," said Rudolf Kadlec, a 34-year-old electrical worker. But he added that he is worried about the economic situation in Czechoslovakia, one of the most prosperous nations in the East bloc.
In Romania, Poland and other nations of the Warsaw Pact, shoppers must stand in lines for soap, food and other items.
"Very slowly, gaps in supplies are beginning to appear," he said when interviewed at the old town square, an historic landmark in a city that was among the most splendid centers of Europe as the Bohemian capital in the 14th century.
He said most people are still getting plenty of basic food but families earning less than the $275 average monthly income are having a tough time finding enough meat, a major part of the traditional diet.

The cost of about two pounds of choice sirloin beef is as much as $11.50, while cheaper cuts are about $6 for the same amount. Expensive cuts are plentiful but the cheaper ones are hard to come by.
Shoppers searched the shops for post-Christmas buys on skis and other items, like Cuban oranges, the only variety available. Supplies are good and the taste sweet, though consumers complained that they are rather pulpy.
A rare supply of bananas recently appeared in shops, but were quickly bought up. None have been seen since.
"I think things are getting worse here. But I think Reagan is a Hollywood cowboy," said a 24-year-old woman who refused to give her name.

Gramm resigns, joins GOP

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — Although he admitted the move might plunge him into political oblivion, maverick Democratic Congressman Phil Gramm will risk his seat by asking voters to re-elect him as a Republican.

"I have never allowed partisanship to stand between me and what I believe in," he said.

Gramm, 40, announced Wednesday in his Bryan office that he had resigned from Congress so he could run as a Republican in a special election.

Gramm rejected the party that rejected him when it refused Monday to reassign him to the House Budget Committee because of his active support of President Reagan's economic programs.

Gov. Bill Clements immediately scheduled a Feb. 12 special election, with a filing deadline of 5 p.m. Jan. 12.

Reagan, asked about Gramm as he was leaving a nationally televised news conference Wednesday, declared: "I think it's disgraceful, a man who put country before party has been thrown out of his party."

House Republican leaders said they would recommend Gramm be assigned to the Budget Committee if he wins back his congressional seat. Gramm said he had made no deal with Republicans, but understood they were "reserving a seat for me."

But even if Gramm wins re-election, Republican strength on the committee will be diluted. The Democratic party controls the majority of seats on the committee, and Gramm had been, in effect, an "extra" Republican.

Gramm would have to replace an already-sitting Republican on the Budget Committee if the GOP assigns him to the panel. The Democrats, meanwhile, can appoint a loyalist Democrat to take his place on their side of the committee table.

The former Texas A&M economics professor could simply have announced he was switching parties, but he said he believed a special election would "provide the opportunity for the people to speak their minds."

More likely, since Gramm enjoys strong support in this conservative East Texas district, a special election will give him the opportunity to draw greater attention to his rift with the party he says he grew up in.

"I recognize that my political future might, because of this action, go down into oblivion," Gramm told reporters packed into his office. "But in the final analysis, I can only follow the course which in my heart and conscience I believe to be right."

Gramm said that he would foot the bill for the special election if no one ran against him. He also said he would challenge any Democratic opponents to split the cost of the election, which could be as high as $100,000.

Gramm, who was elected to his third term in November, said he expected Democrats to "make an all-out effort to defeat me."

However, two of the rumored candidates — state Sen. Kent Caperton of Bryan and state Sen. Chet Edwards of Duncanville — both said Wednesday they had decided to stick with the legislative seats they just won in November.

"In a special election, I think Rep. Gramm would have a tremendous advantage ... and Democrats are not noted for turning out large numbers in a special election," Caperton said.

Edwards said he felt an "obligation to complete" his term, but might consider challenging Gramm in a regular election.

But former state Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, who ran unsuccessfully for land commissioner last year, said "the odds are 70-30" that he would run against Gramm.

Kubiak said he has strong support in the congressional district and suggested Gramm was "trying a sympathy vote procedure which I think is going to backfire."

He said he would talk with Democratic leaders and announce this week whether he will run.

Republican leaders, meanwhile, praised Gramm's courage and pledged their support in his campaign.

The battle of fuel adjustment charges extended to February

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The battle of fuel adjustment charges — one of the top issues of the 1982 gubernatorial campaign — has been extended until Feb. 2 by the Public Utility Commission.

Commissioners heard more than three hours of testimony Wednesday before saying they were not ready to decide on a proposal to ban electric companies from automatically passing fuel costs on to customers each month.

"I don't think the fuel adjustment clause is sacred," said Commissioner George Cowden. "We have come almost to believe it's sacred, like Scripture, and we ought not fool with it. That's wrong."

Witnesses from electric companies testified Wednesday that the automatic pass-through of fuel costs is essential.

"It is simply not possible for a utility to operate unless it can recover its fuel costs on a timely basis," said G.H. King of West Texas Utilities. "We could not survive."

The proposed rule would force electric companies to come to the PUC for quarterly reviews of fuel costs.

Gov.-elect Mark White has said the fuel adjustment clause unfairly raises electric bills. However, several witnesses and Commission Chairman Moak Rollins said Wednesday the proposed rule would not cut bills.

"It's extremely important the public realize the fuel clause is not the problem," King said. "It's the rising cost of fuel. Gas prices will continue to increase. We cannot expect to see any relief in electric utility prices until gas prices stabilize."

Rollins said the proposed rule was drafted as a result of the White campaign statements against the fuel adjustment clause.

Although Rollins said he does not think the new rule — or any revision of the fuel charges — would reduce bills, he said changes might be needed.

The major consumer complaint now is that the price of electricity is not set until the end of the month, after it is used.

"The customer objects to being told after they have used the product what the price was going to be," he said.

Two consumers complained about the fuel adjustment clause and electric bills in general.

"Rate increases have been too frequent and too high," said James Matz of Harlingen, representing the Association for Local Control of Utility Rates. "A lot of folks in the state of Texas don't believe the PUC has acted in consumers' interests."

Josephine McLean of Brownsville, who said the hearing looked like a meeting of a "good ol' boys club," said customers have received "shabby treatment" from utility companies.

"The fuel adjustment charge has been abused, and changes must be made," she said.

The Texas Municipal League also wants the fuel adjustment eliminated.

Urgent appeal made for liver donor

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A fund-raising effort has been launched for the family of a 3-year-old girl who has been given only six weeks to live unless a donor liver is found.

Another child must die before tiny Kelly Owen, listed as the top candidate for an experimental liver transplant in Pittsburgh, can be saved, said her doctors, who are trying to locate an accident victim whose survivors could donate the organ.

Doctors at the Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh have agreed to perform the transplant if a donor of blood group A-negative, between the ages of two and four years old, can be found, family members said.

Mayor Henry Cisneros, in joining the appeal for a donor, has announced a fund-raising effort through the Groos National Bank to help Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Owen of San Antonio fund the $150,000 operation.

"I have two daughters myself and I can imagine the pressure of this race against time," Cisneros said. "The Owens could be any one of 100,000 San Antonians who have children, but he's got a daughter he is... oev9 ng60 and his fight to save his child merits the help of all the people of San Antonio."

"Anyone that might know of a possible donor should call collect area code 412-DONORS7. This is the telephone number of the Transplant Organ Procurement Foundation at the University of Pittsburgh... All donors have to be processed through this department," a statement from the family said.

Dr. Michael Hoffman of the Santa Rosa Medical Center Children's Hospital said that Kelly's condition is so serious that she now is the No. 1 candidate in the nation for the experimental liver transplant procedure performed in Pittsburgh.

Emergency rooms across the nation have been alerted by the Pittsburgh hospital for possible donors, Hoffman said.

Second man dies after explosion

DALLAS (AP) — A West Texas oil well explosion claimed its second victim when a Snyder oilfield worker burned over virtually all of his body died in a hospital here.

Lloyd Israel, 25, died at 7:20 a.m. Wednesday in the burn unit at Parkland Memorial Hospital, assistant administrator Claude McCain said.

David Brecheen, 32, of Snyder was pronounced dead at the Kent County oilfield Monday. The well is located near Clairemont, about 80 miles southeast of Lubbock.

Another worker injured in Monday's explosion, Henry Wood, remained in critical condition, McCain said. Wood suffered burns over 70 percent of his body, he said.

Claybrook's bribes

A news story quoted Joan Claybrook, president of one of the Ralph Nader political action groups, attacking those in Congress whose voting record has been consistently against higher taxes, more government control and expanded welfare handouts, as being in the pocket of "big business."

Further, Ms. Claybrook alleges that, because some of these people accept contributions from political action organizations connected with business they have succumbed to "legalized bribes."

Now all of this has a very amusing side to it. First, Ms. Claybrook is in the tradition of the socialist - left which believes that big government is the answer to all our problems.

Candidates she finds acceptable, however, are those who can freely go before groups of organized labor and proclaim their faithful subservience while receiving gobs and gobs of money (over $20 billion for the current election) from probably the largest single political action group in America.

Ms. Claybrook's pals, the socialist - liberals, have been receiving what she describes as "legalized bribes" from organized for the last 50 years but, you see, it was a swell practice when her philosophic ox was being fattened.

Now that the opposition has rallied and is trying to get elected people of a different political persuasion, her self-righteousness is overwhelming.

But then, her self-righteousness is as phony as the proverbial three dollar bill to begin with.

Engineers are needed

Engineering, like the Greek titan Atlas, holds the Earth on its shoulders. Bridges span rivers, hydroelectric dams transform motion into electricity, electronics networks gird the globe.

From the microcomputer to the megalopolis, the role of the engineer is vital to civilization. Yet the number of young Americans wishing to pursue the rigorous graduate study of engineering is diminishing even as technology burgeons. Why?

Many undergrad college the appeal of a $35,000 job is high. But today's opportunity may become tomorrow's role job, as undergraduate knowledge reaches limits that eventually limit a career.

Many frontiers still exist in technical fields, and the changing needs and demands of society will open up more. Engineering is indeed a career with a future.

Nakasone now in charge

Although Japan is one of the most important of U.S. allies, its prime ministers don't become household names for Americans in the way of British, French and West German leaders.

This is likely to change with Yasuhiro Nakasone, 64, the longtime Japanese parliamentarian, a chieftain of the ruling Liberal Democrats, and now the new prime minister of Japan.

In significant ways, Nakasone is the Japanese version of Ronald Reagan; he is conservative and controversial. Like their American counterparts, Japanese liberals are tearing their hair and rending their garments over their arch enemy's accession to power.

The new prime minister has made a dramatic three-point pledge to the Japanese people: To bolster Japan's lagging economy, to bolster Japan's military strength and to improve Japan's relations with the U.S.

Famed already as "Japan's De Gaulle," Nakasone has made it plain his government will avoid the consensus-style policymaking so long preferred in Japan. He has said the "uncertainties, that beset the Japanese people in their daily lives have caused them to want politics to be carried out with clear-cut leadership."

Mexico's debts

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

The management of debts incurred by foreign countries, especially those of Mexico, Brazil, Argentina and Venezuela, has become one of the most vexing international problems.

The British journal, The Economist, estimates that about $300 billion is owed by Latin America nations. It also concludes that more dollars will be supplied to Latin America and that "the money will probably not be seen again." The banks, which are being urged to provide the money, reportedly will be lucky even to get paid the interest.

The banks which loaned the money in the first place will be in enormous danger if one or more major Latin borrowers default on loans. In the judgment of The Economist, a default "would send a hurricane through Wall Street; it would cause the certain collapse of a number of American banks."

This kind of problem is so enormous and complex that the public can't really contribute to finding a solution. However, we should be aware of the dark cloud on the horizon. If Mexico were to default on its debts, for example, the big U.S. lenders would call for a government bailout on a huge scale. It might be impossible for the government to refuse, for the alternative would be collapse of major lending institutions on which thousands of businesses and scores of thousands of individuals depend for credit.

The American people also would be effected by the political chaos that would result, especially in the case of Mexico. Who can say what would happen south of the border. Would a Castro-type Mexican regime seize power? Would the Mexican middle class flee across the Rio Grande as the Cubans fled to Florida at the end of the 1950s? Would there be an even bigger invasion by poor Mexicans, hungry for jobs? What would happen to U.S. - Mexican trade? Would the U.S., in the midst of a deep recession, have the means to handle a new influx of Mexican workers? Would a giant border patrol

HOUSTON (NEA) - Like millions of other loan applicants, George P. Mitchell encountered considerable resistance when he went to the bank to borrow money. In fact, the bankers thought he was at best naive and at worst demented.

That's because Mitchell wanted to use the money to carve out of a desolate forest 30 miles north of here a city so large that it represented the most ambitious "new town" construction project ever attempted in this country.

Mitchell's dream included homes for 160,000 people, employment opportunities for 100,000 workers and a vast array of educational, recreational and commercial facilities - all carefully integrated into a $5 billion venture known as The Woodlands, the nation's most elaborately planned community.

"We had problems with the bankers worrying about credit," Mitchell says in recalling his 1974 experience with local financiers. "They refused to honor their verbal agreement to lend me $10 million" to begin work on the project.

Two years later, the bankers returned to reinstate their offer, but Mitchell says he told them, "Forget it, you're too late." Today, The Woodlands is well on its way to becoming a living monument to the vision, initiative and dedication of a truly extraordinary businessman.

Future city is booming

Born in Galveston, Texas, 63 years ago to parents who had emigrated from Greece, Mitchell secured his first job in the petroleum industry as an oilfield roustabout and roughneck, moved up to become an exploration engineer and geologist, and then formed his own company.

Today, he is president and board chairman of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp., one of the nation's largest independent oil and gas producers. Headquartered in The Woodlands, the firm last year generated more than $1 billion in gross revenues and $115 million in net earnings.

The no-nonsense businessman, who probably qualifies as a billionaire, also is an executive with a social conscience who sponsors the biennial Woodlands Conference on Sustainable Societies and has invested or donated $20 million to restore Galveston's historic business district.

But Mitchell's pride and joy is The Woodlands, a "city in the forest" whose quality of life is so appealing that sales of new homes have been booming throughout the housing depression of recent years. Almost 16,000 people already live there.

Apartments, cluster homes, townhouses, detached houses and modest estates can be purchased at prices ranging from $38,000 to more than $500,000. Elderly residents eligible for federal assistance pay as little as $30 to $50 per month to rent attractive garden apartments.

Three 18-hole golf courses have already been completed and two others are planned. Other recreational facilities include swimming pools, a fully equipped athletic center, an ice-skating rink, an equestrian center and 30 tennis courts.

Those who commute into the Houston business district are served by a 40-vehicle van pool, but The Woodlands has already attracted almost 300 employers. Among the major corporations with office, light manufacturing, research or distribution facilities in the new town are American Hospital Supply, Kraft Food and Eckerd Drugs as well as Texaco, Exxon, Superior, Pennzoil and other oil companies.

The Woodlands Inn and Conference Center can accommodate 500 guests and another major hotel is planned for the future. Also on the drawing boards are a fully equipped hospital, a regional shopping mall housing five major department stores, a dam project which will create a 25-acre lake, and a shopping and commercial center patterned after San Antonio's famed Riverwalk.

Mitchell and his company have also contributed more than $8 million in cash and $65 million worth of land to attract a consortium of major universities to The Woodlands. With them will come hundreds of scientists, engineers and technicians.

"We are fully committed to building a world-class community here," says Edward P. Lee Jr., president of the development company guiding the growth of The Woodlands. He's already well on his way to demonstrating that the properly planned cities of tomorrow can avoid many of the problems experienced in urban centers today.

When good news is bad news

The good news last week was that OPEC met in Vienna to discuss ways of keeping the price of oil up, and couldn't arrive at an agreement.

At least I thought it was good news until I talked to an American economist who told me it was bad news.

"Why is it bad news?" I wanted to know.

"Because the OPEC nations and the non-member producing countries will have to sell oil under the table at a much cheaper price."

"But shouldn't that be good news for the rest of the world?" I asked.

"Not necessarily. You see, the OPEC countries borrowed heavily from the Western banks, and if the price of oil falls they will have a hard time honoring their loans. If they don't pay back the money the entire Western monetary system will be in jeopardy."

"Why did the banks loan them so much money if they weren't certain they could pay it back?"

"At the time the banks made the loans, they considered the oil-producing countries blue chip risks because the price was going up and they were sure the cartel would help make sure it remained high."

"So what happened?"

"There was glut because people couldn't afford the price. So the OPEC countries started double-crossing each other by selling oil under the table at a lower price than they had agreed upon. For example, everybody vowed to sell their oil at $34 a barrel and cut back on production to preserve it. But a lot of countries, up to their ears in debt, were forced to sell it for a lot less."

"Iraq went to war with Iran and needed money to pay for arms. Iran had to sell oil at any price it could get to repulse Iraq. Nigeria spent more money than it had. And Kadafi of Libya sold his barrels way under price to sock it to Saudi Arabia."

"What a way to run a cartel," I said with disgust.

"The worst of it is that at the very moment OPEC was sticking it to us, the world went into a recession and demand dropped further. So instead of the countries dictating prices, the free market took over, and with the glut the oil-producing nations found themselves fighting for the same customers."

"So aren't we all better off because OPEC decided to commit fratricide?"

"We would be except all the oil countries are in hock to the Western banks, and if the OPEC members default on their loans the banks could go under."

"Therefore the public has to root for the price of oil to stay up to keep our own banks afloat?"

"That seems to be the case."

"Why should we suffer because a bunch of stupid bankers were making a lot of stupid loans to a lot of stupid countries?"

"It was the only way we could recycle the money the oil countries were charging us for the oil. Until the oil glut the OPEC nations were our best customers."

"Wait a minute. Didn't the OPEC cartel put us in a worldwide recession in the first place?"

"They made a big contribution. But that's no reason to hold a grudge against them."

"That's easy for you to say because you're an economist. But it wouldn't bother me if they had to sell their oil for $3 a barrel again."

"Now you're talking like a selfish consumer. Don't you realize that every time Kuwait sneezes Chase Manhattan gets pneumonia?"

"I don't see that as my problem."

"It's everybody's problem. The eight largest banks in the U.S. could go down the same hole as the oil-producing countries if the bottom falls out of the petroleum market."

"So I'm supposed to cry for Libya?"

"I'm not asking you to cry for Libya. But you have to feel something for the Morgan Guaranty."

They call it journalism

By William A. Rasher

NEW YORK (NEA) - It was in New Zealand, on my recent swing around the Pacific Basin, that I chanced to come upon the article by Robert Chesshyre that constitutes the subject of this column, and that is why I shall always think of Chesshyre as "the noted New Zealand political reporter." Newspapers these days are very eclectic, however, and for all I know Chesshyre, whose spoor I had not come across before, may be rooted and based in Boston.

Anyway, he landed an interview with Sen. Ted Kennedy, and it was his account of their conversation that was picked up and published at the other end of the world, where I stumbled across it. It was a routine job, with a little of this and a little of that, and I would have forgotten it within minutes if a sentence toward the end hadn't caught my eye. Chesshyre is explaining that Sen. Kennedy has tried to use the nuclear freeze issue to put a little wind in his political sail, and pauses to brief his readers on a collateral point. Quoth Chesshyre:

"Ronald Reagan - perhaps believing the American public is nostalgic for Spiro Agnew, who branded everyone with whom he disagreed as a 'Communist' - has accused the many millions of freeze supporters of being manipulated 'by some who want the weakening of America.'"

Now, being a columnist myself, I know how Chesshyre happened to write that sentence. He was in a hurry, and he simply counted on the inveterate hostility of the world's liberals (which is the audience he is apparently cultivating) to Agnew and Reagan, to excuse the intellectual sloppiness and downright falsity of his attacks on them. But there are still quite a few people around who know a bucket of mud when they see one being slung, and I rise to nail Chesshyre in the act.

The chief object of his assault is, of course, Ronald Reagan. According to Chesshyre, Reagan's recent assertion that nuclear freeze demonstrators are being manipulated "by some who want the weakening of America" is a falsehood comparable to the accusation that an innocent person is a Communist.

Now, the first thing any rational reader of Chesshyre's sentence must notice is that, whatever the truth of Mr. Reagan's charge, accusing someone of being "manipulated" by America's foes is not anywhere nearly in the same category as accusing him of being a Communist - i.e., a conscious agent of those foes. "Manipulation," almost by definition, assumes the unawareness of the manipulatee. Quite a difference!

In the second place, if one stops to think about it, Mr. Reagan's assertion isn't all that implausible. Certainly it doesn't fall of its own weight, as Chesshyre (and Kennedy) seem to think. They evidently assume that the "many millions" of Americans who support a nuclear freeze simply constitutes too large a number of people to be "manipulated." But it was Abraham Lincoln who told us that, on the contrary, "You can fool all of the people some of the time" - a piece of world-weary wisdom that tends to get lost in our gratification at its sequel. Suckering a few million people into the nuclear freeze movement has been child's play, as Reagan ruefully observed.

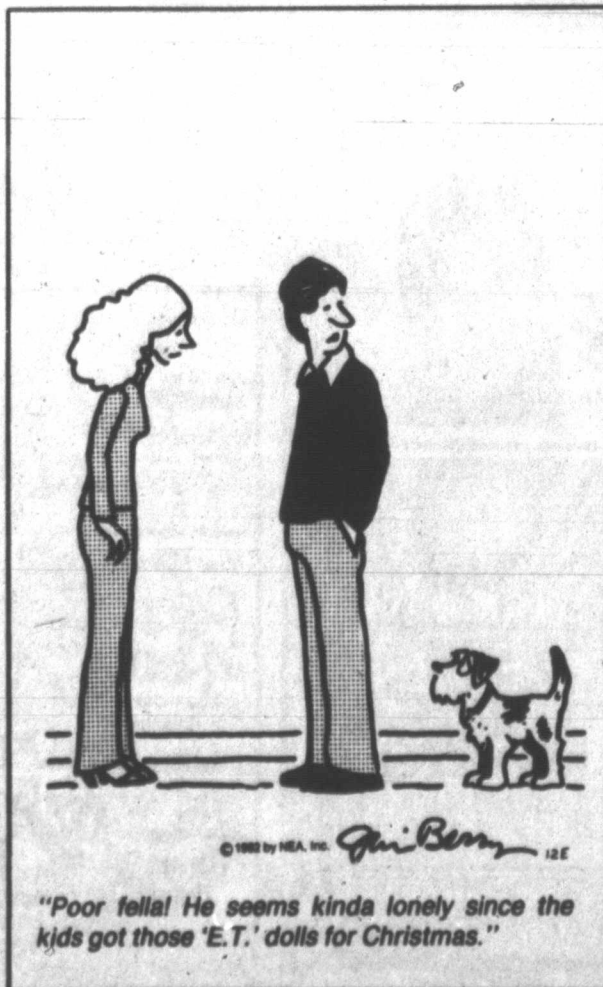

What really made my gorge rise, though, was Chesshyre's parenthetical clause about Spiro Agnew. The particular canard Chesshyre is trying to float is, of course, that old chestnut called "McCarthyism" - named for the late Wisconsin senator who supposedly called everybody he disagreed with a Communist. Actually, if you are really up on Joe McCarthy you can have a lot of fun inviting his critics to name one person he falsely branded a Communist; but let that pass. The term "McCarthyism" has acquired a meaning and vogue quite independent of whatever relation it may have to the truth about McCarthy himself. It has, in fact, become a cliché, and that is why Chesshyre doesn't use it.

Instead he reaches for a name that his sensitive ear tells him will serve his purpose practically as well: Spiro Agnew, Nixon's much-execrated vice president, who was forced to resign in the face of graft charges, and whose worst epithet for someone who disagreed with him was "radical-lib."

Never mind that Agnew is not, in fact, known for calling everyone he disagreed with a Communist. The general liberal hostility to Agnew can be counted on to float Chesshyre's raft right over that pesky sandbar. After all, what is a little falsehood among friends? Reagan, Agnew, McCarthy - they are lapped in a common malignity, and deserve similar fates.

And they call it "journalism."

Dear Abby
by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Over the years you've had "prayers" in your column from children, parents, mothers-in-law, secretaries, etc., so I thought you might find this prayer also worth sharing with your readers. I don't know who wrote it. Maybe one of your readers will.

ELLIE IN ILLINOIS

DEAR ELLIE: It is:

CALORIE COUNTER'S PRAYER

The Lord is my shepherd I shall not want.
He maketh me lie down and do push-ups.
He giveth me Hollywood bread.
He restoreth my waistline.
He leaeth me past the refrigerator for mine own sake.
He maketh me to partake of the green beans instead of the potatoes.

He leaeth me past the pizzeria.
Yea, though I walk through the bakery,
I shall not falter, for thou art with me;
Thy Tab and Fresca, they comfort me.
Thou preparest a diet for me in the presence of mine enemies.
Thou anointest my lettuce with low-cal oil.
My cup will not overflow.
Surely Ry Krisp and D-Zerta shall follow me all the days of my life,
And I will live with pains of hunger forever. AMEN

DEAR ABBY: Several of us are going in on a gift. There are six of us altogether — two married couples and two singles. The married couples think the cost of the gift should be divided four ways. The singles think it should be divided six ways. Which is the fairest way?

ONE OF THE SIX

DEAR ONE: Married couples are usually considered "one," so in my opinion, the cost should be divided four ways.

If this isn't agreeable to all concerned, perhaps the single ones should go together on a gift, and the married couples go together on another.

You're never too old (or too young) to learn how to make friends and be popular. For Abby's booklet on Popularity, send $1, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38823, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Hanger strikes

If you've been putting off starting an exercise routine simply because you think your appetite will increase, you should know that it's not really true. Physically active women often consume less calories. For one thing, overeating due to boredom is usually no longer a problem for active women. Also, the "appetite control" center in the brain is regulated to some extent by body temperature; our temperature goes up when we exercise, causing our appetite to slow down. So

Bedroom eyes

Eyeliner is making a comeback — here's some tips for making your eyes gorgeous. Create an almond shape by using dark liner (plum or black), drawing a very thin line in the center of your eyelids and thickening the line as it moves out toward the corners. For real drama, extend the liner from the corners up and out, just to the end of your eyebrows. Blend and smudge for a sultry look.

For a wide-eyed look, apply blue liner to the outer corners of the upper and lower lids and use a light gold pencil at the inner corners.

A better bath

Comedienne Phyllis Diller takes bathtime seriously. Here's what she told Beauty Digest magazine recently about her favorite ritual: "First, I fill the tub with comfortably hot water, then add my favorite bath oil. I turn on some restful music, get in and close my eyes. Then I slowly add more hot water until the bath reaches the just-under-too-hot mark. I relax, enjoy the music and just soak. After I dry off, I use a body lotion over every part of me. Try it — you'll feel like a million bucks."

Persons you've helped in the past will be instrumental this coming year in giving you a boost up the ladder of success. They'll be there when you need them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There is a possibility you could experience some financial extremes today. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Strive to fulfill your ambitions today, but don't do so in ways which could make others think less of you. Being a good guy is more important.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You can achieve what you set out to do today, but be prepared to overcome some obstacles and to put forth a second effort.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful today that you don't let financial dealings with a pal jeopardize your relationship. Both should consider friendship more important than money.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There's a possibility some essential information could be withheld from you today, so don't rush into making decisions on limited facts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your productivity could be lessened a bit early in the day because of a tendency to do things the hard way. Fortunately, you'll find easier routes later on.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Commercial transactions should not be conducted hastily today. Your first moves may be wrong ones. Study everything with care.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The faults and shortcomings of others will be very apparent to you today, but you'd be wise to pretend you didn't notice them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If your extravagant urges are permitted to take control today, you'll wind up spending more than you should. Instead, look for ways to save money.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Lady Luck tends to favor you today, especially in situations which could lead to personal gain. Be careful not to do things that could stymie her.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Early in the day you could, uncharacteristically, worry about things which might never happen. This is a big mistake. You should be quite lucky.

SWC Roundup

Mustangs roll past Red Raiders, 94-77

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP)—Just how good are the Southern Methodist Mustangs? They'll find out Saturday night when they visit the awesome Houston Cougars.
Forward Larry Davis scored a season high 25 points and center Jon Koncak hauled down a career high 20 rebounds Wednesday night to pace SMU to a 94-77 victory over depth-thin Texas Tech in a Southwest Conference opener.
In another SWC league opener, Baylor bounced the Rice Owls 75-54 in Heart O' Texas Coliseum at Waco.
Unbeaten and 10th-ranked Arkansas downed Mercer 83-62 in a non-conference game at Pine Bluff, Ark.
It was SMU's sixth consecutive victory and boosted the Ponies' record to 9-3, the best start since Dave Bliss has been the coach.
"We've won six straight and it's great," said Koncak. "Everyone is beginning to pull together as a team. "We're looking forward to playing the Cougars Saturday. I guess we'll find out then how good we really are."

Texas Tech, now 2-11, suited out only eight players because Coach Gerald Myers suspended three starters. "We didn't embarrass ourselves at all," Myers said. "We'll just have to hang in there."
The Red Raiders led 6-0 before SMU tied the game at 8-8 then went on a 14-point blitz before Tech could score again.
Freshman Carl Wright scored a career high 16 points. Koncak and Dave Piehler each scored 17 points.
The Red Raiders were led by freshman Ray Irvin, who scored 23 points and guard Bubba Jennings, who had 16.
"SMU is a good team," said Myers. "They are much improved. Butch Moore runs their offense very well and Koncak controls the rebounds. They'll be a team to be reckoned with."

Bliss said, "This was a big game for us. We've shown we can win and win on the road but this is the first time we've really shown that we can win in conference play."
"We were pleased with our rebounding."
Bliss said he had sympathy for what Myers is going through.
"I've been where Gerald is now," Bliss said. "Sometimes you have to make sacrifices to be good of the whole team."
Two of the Red Raiders fouled out and Myers was just down to six players late in the game.
Guards Jay Shakir and James Stern led the way for Baylor, which took off to an early 24-point lead after the Owls couldn't find the basket.
Teddy Johnson paced Rice with 12 points and forwards Renaldo O'Neal and Mike Cunningham chipped 10 each.
Baylor coach Jim Haller, whose team's 9-3 record represents its best start in recent years, said the Bears would have to play even better to beat Arkansas Saturday in Fayetteville.

"As well as we played the first 16 minutes, that won't be good enough to beat Arkansas," Haller said. "We'll have to play that way for 40 minutes to win up there."
"They shot well and go on the offensive boards, especially early," Rice Coach Tommy Suits said of the Bears. "Shakir and Stern were impressive for them and I felt Teddy had a good game for us."
Rice is now 6-5 for the season.

A renewed commitment to our partners

As the hopeful anticipation of 1983 begins, it is time to count blessings and to think about how the accomplishments of the past year will make the new year better.
Only a few weeks ago, an important energy decision made years ago became a reality and commitment to the future of the Southwest.

The decision was made by the customers and the employees of Southwestern Public Service Company, working together as partners to make a difference in the cost of electricity. The reality and commitment was symbolically begun in November, as literally thousands of Southwesterners toured Tolk Station.

The new power plant near Muleshoe, Texas. The first of two electrical generating units at this new facility is now producing electricity—from coal.
Because this and other SPS power plants are designed and built by SPS's own engineering and construction department, the cost to our customers is less than one-half the national average cost for coal-fired plants and less than one-fourth the national average cost for nuclear power plants. SPS is one of only two electric utilities in the United States which can design and build its own power plants.
That's money saved for everyone, especially our customers.
The employees of Southwestern Public Service Company thank you for your understanding, your encouragement, and your support.
As you and SPS enter 1983 together, as partners managing electricity, you can be assured that Tolk Station will make a difference in helping provide you with dependable electric service at the lowest possible cost.

You and SPS, partners managing electricity, make the difference.

Officials seek to identify fatal capsule

HILLSBORO, Ore. (AP) — The cyanide poisoning of a woman who died after taking Anacin-3, in the first death from a tainted drug since the Tylenol killings, was probably an isolated tragedy, says the state medical examiner. An autopsy and toxicology examination revealed cyanide and bits of an unidentified capsule in the stomach of 31-year-old Patricia F. Bennett, a college security guard. Medical Examiner William Brady announced Wednesday in Portland. Mrs. Bennett died at about 4 a.m. Tuesday in the intensive care unit of Tuallity Community Hospital about 5 1/2 hours after she was driven to the hospital by her husband Norman, 45, a self-employed carpenter.

Family members reported Mrs. Bennett took Anacin-3 a couple of hours before she became ill, said Washington County Sheriff's Capt. Harold Kleve said Wednesday. Tests were planned today to learn whether capsule fragments found in the victim's stomach were from Anacin-3 or another medication, Brady said. Trace amounts of cyanide were found in the air of an Anacin-3 bottle taken from her home, he said, and tests of the remaining capsules and other drugs in the home also were to be conducted today. Brady did not release the lot number for the Anacin-3 bottle, and said he was not advising a recall of the pain reliever. "We don't want to create an inappropriate attitude of public concern," Brady said. "I think this is most likely — and my office is treating it as — a single isolated tragedy at this time." Seven people in the Chicago area died last year between Sept. 29 and Oct. 1 after taking Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules laced with cyanide. The deaths set off a nationwide wave of product tampering incidents, but Mrs. Bennett's death was the first confirmed fatal poisoning. Kleve and Brady said Mrs. Bennett showed no sign of mouth or throat burns, indicating that the cyanide was taken in capsule form. Brady said she probably swallowed one or two capsules. "We're certain the capsules contained cyanide," Brady said. "This lady ingested cyanide-filled capsules." Upham advised people to check all over-the-counter medications for tampering. "The same precautions they have been advised to utilize since the Tylenol matter."

Walls tell Lebanon's story

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The story of Lebanon today can be read from Beirut's walls, where the green cedar of the Lebanese flag has been plastered over fading leftist slogans and portraits of the departed Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat. The flags are part of a campaign by Christian President Amin Gemayel to instill a sense of nationalism in a country of 4 million people divided into 17 officially recognized religious sects and scores of paramilitary political parties. In the wake of Israel's invasion and expulsion of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Beirut is no longer the capital of world revolution and symbol of all that is unruly in the Middle East. But the end of the Lebanon war has not brought unity and stability either, and a specter of permanent partition hangs over U.S. efforts to mediate a pullout of all foreign forces. The most dramatic change brought about by Israel's invasion has been the shift in the balance of power in favor of the Maronite Christians, ending the no-win, no-lose situation that had prevailed since Moslem-Christian rivalries produced the 1975-76 civil war. "This time there is a victor and a vanquished," Fady Frem, commander of the Christian Phalangist militia, said in a speech in late November marking the 46th anniversary of the founding of the Phalange Party by Pierre Gemayel, father of the incumbent president. The vanquished, he said, were the Moslems and leftists who had sided with the losers in the Lebanon war — the Syrians and Palestinians. Although the Christians view themselves as non-Arab "Occidentals," the Moslems, possibly 60 percent of the population, traditionally has been aligned with Arab states in the region, and consequently has been left with a feeling of uncertainty and betrayal. "The Moslems are more at a loss now because thousands of Syrians and Palestinians walked out and left the militias powerless," ex-Prime Minister Saeb Salam, a Moslem leader, said in an interview. Sectarian violence has already rent the delicate fabric of coexistence in the Israeli-controlled central Chouf Mountains, where a 300-year-old feud between Maronite Christians and members of the Druse sect has claimed more than 150 lives in the past two months. Clashes between militias of two Moslem sects — the Sunnis and pro-Syrian Alawites — have taken dozens of lives in the Syrian-occupied northern port city of Tripoli. Lebanese politicians say privately they fear that American and European governments supporting a 4,000-man peacekeeping force in Lebanon will view the religious-political fighting as a countdown to self-destruction and reduce their commitments. Without such backing, permanent partition might result, Israeli forces keeping control over south Lebanon and Syria retaining troops in the east and north.

Efforts to interview Wood jurors blunted

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed renewed motions by four newspapers and The Associated Press to interview jurors in the trial of three people convicted in connection with the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. Chief U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions signed a two-page order Wednesday saying a federal appeals court ruling last week in a separate case could not be applied to the Wood trial. The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, on a motion filed by The San Antonio Express-News last year, last week ruled that Local Rule 500-2 was unconstitutional. The El Paso Times and The AP contended the rule, which prohibits interviews with the Wood jurors without Sessions' permission, unconstitutionally restricts freedom of the press and freedom of speech of the jurors.

Social Security panel seeks a breakthrough

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the Social Security reform panel are still hoping for a last-minute agreement on a rescue plan, but President Reagan says they'll have to do it without his help.

Reagan, speaking at a nationally televised news conference Wednesday night, said if the commission members can't agree on a comprehensive plan for saving Social Security by Jan. 15, they should present him with a list of alternatives.

"And then I think that is the time we should join together and seek to work out a compromise," he said. But he firmly rejected suggestions from some commission members that he become directly involved in the talks now.

"I believe that for me to impose myself, I don't care how much they ask for it, for me to impose myself on the commission and say, 'Hey fellows, this is the way I want you to go,' I would then stand back, cock my ear, and wait for the loud outcry from Capitol Hill, and the same old political football would be seen going up in the air like a punt on third down," Reagan said.

But Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said after the news conference that he was "kind of disappointed the president didn't take a stand" on Social Security. He said he intends to send Reagan a letter today urging him to come up with more specific proposals.

Reagan spoke after several commission members, including chairman Alan Greenspan, reportedly conferred with administration officials. There was no report of progress.

Reagan established the commission last year after proposing changes in Social Security that drew a hostile reaction in Congress, particularly from Democrats. When Reagan set up the commission, he said he wanted to remove it from politics.

He also said he would reject any proposal that reduces benefits for Social Security recipients. "I think those people have been scared enough by demagoguery," he said.

The Greenspan panel will go out of business on Jan. 15. The 15 members agree the system needs to save $150 billion to $200 billion over the next seven years, but they have been unable to agree on a precise mix of payroll tax hikes and a slowdown in the growth of benefits to generate the savings.

Greenspan met with Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, on Wednesday. Also attending the meeting were former Social Security Commissioner Robert M. Ball and Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., two Democratic members, and Rep. Barber Conable of New York, the top Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee.

Oil company to admit bribes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Papers filed in federal court by the Justice Department say a Houston oil equipment company will plead guilty today to paying bribes to an official of Mexico's national oil company.

Gary D. Bateman, owner of Applied Process Products Overseas Inc., will enter the plea on behalf of the company, according to papers filed in U.S. District Court on Wednesday.

The department said Bateman will also plead guilty on his own behalf to five counts of violating U.S. currency laws.

The court papers said Bateman paid $342,000 in bribes to Guillermo Cervera, administrative secretary to the chief of purchasing of Petroleos Mexicanos, known as PEMEX.

In return, Bateman's company received $5 million in contracts for compression equipment, according to the department.

The firm will plead guilty to a violation of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, which prohibits officials of U.S. firms from bribing overseas officials to gain contracts for the U.S. companies.

The company faces a maximum fine of $1 million while Bateman faces a maximum of five years in prison and $5,000 in fines.

First woman transportation secretary named

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elizabeth Dole, President Reagan's choice as his new transportation secretary, is expected to breeze through Senate confirmation and become the administration's first woman to head a Cabinet department.

Reagan announced Wednesday night he will nominate Mrs. Dole, a presidential assistant, to replace Drew Lewis, who leaves the administration next month to head a major cable television company.

"Welcome to the Cabinet," the president said as Mrs. Dole accompanied him at a nationally televised news conference. She later issued a statement saying she was "deeply honored" and will accept the assignment "with enthusiasm."

Mrs. Dole will become the first woman transportation secretary. She will head the government's sixth largest department with 75,000 employees. Its agencies range from the Federal Aviation Administration to the U.S. Coast Guard.

Formed in 1965, the department dispenses highway and mass transit money, regulates air transport and federal aid to airports as well as overseeing maritime issues. During the past two years the department has spearheaded the administration's drive to get users of various transportation systems to pay a greater share of operation.

In succeeding Lewis, Mrs. Dole takes over from the most visible transportation secretary since the department was formed. Lewis also was considered among the most capable members of the Reagan Cabinet.

Mrs. Dole, 46, a lawyer, former member of the Federal Trade Commission and wife of Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., is the highest ranking woman at the White House as the president's assistant for public liaison.

The liaison job has been characterized as particularly difficult since much of Mrs. Dole's assignment has involved dealing with interest groups — such as minorities, women's groups and organized labor — openly critical of administration policies.

Although a team player, Mrs. Dole's views have at times differed from those of most other members of the Reagan inner circle.

Doctors repair once-fatal heart defect

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors have rebuilt the hearts of two babies born without a left ventricle, the main pumping chamber, and say the technique can save the lives of other newborns with the until-now fatal birth defect.

This defect, called hypoplastic left heart syndrome, leaves babies with a right ventricle but no left one. The aorta's main artery that takes blood to the body, also is very narrow.

The condition is the fourth most common cardiac defect and afflicts about 8 percent of all children born with malformed hearts. During a recent 10-year period in New England alone, 223 babies had the condition, which usually leads to death within weeks.

"The death of such a neonate (newborn) is particularly poignant since most are well-developed babies with normal birth weights," and they rarely have other birth defects, the doctors wrote.

The surgery was conducted at Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston by Dr. William I. Norwood. The operation has been done twice, and both patients are doing well.

Norwood and Drs. Peter Lang, a cardiologist, and Dolly D. Hansen, an anesthesiologist, reported on their first attempt at the new surgery in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

"I doubt that he's going to become an Olympic sprinting champion," Norwood said of the first child, a boy, now 2 years old. "On the other hand, to be able to live an active healthy life — running around in the backyard, going to school and becoming a lawyer or physician or whatever — is distinctly possible."
