

Fire guts two-story house in McLean while family is away

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

McLEAN - There were no injuries early this morning when a two-story house burned to the ground here.

The owners of the house, the W. A. Bentley family, had left home at four a.m., according to reports, and the cause of the blaze is still under investigation.

Seven fire trucks and 22 McLean area volunteer firemen responded to the fire at 4:56 this morning. The fire was out of control when firemen reached the house located at 913 W. Fifth.

One fire truck and eight firemen from Shamrock helped fight the blaze which spewed sparks for three blocks, said McLean fireman, Clifford McDonald.

It took the combined fire departments more than four hours to put out the fire, according to McLean Fire Chief Jim McDonald. He said the fire had already burned through most of the roof by the time the report was turned in. The roof caved in shortly after firemen arrived on the scene, he said.

Because the older house had been remodeled several times and had several false ceilings, the firemen encountered problems in fighting the fire, Clifford McDonald said. Fighting the blaze was further complicated because the house was situated in one of the highest sections of McLean, making it difficult to maintain water pressure, said the fireman.

The two-story house and garage, owned by W. A. Bentley, were a total loss, said the chief.

Located on the property, about 50 yards from the house, is a trailer park, said Clifford McDonald. He said the flying embers endangered the trailers for a short while, "but the wind was in our favor. It blew the flames away from most of the homes." He also said that had the fire occurred in the summer they would have been in more serious trouble. But thanks to the wet winter, keeping the fire from spreading was easier, he added.

Embers did burn holes in the tarp on top of the pumper sitting at the fire hydrant a block away, McDonald said.

Chief McDonald said the cause of the fire is still under investigation.

"It will probably take a couple of days for Fire Marshal Jim Barker to sort everything out, because the owner is out of town," he said.

Trouble at the tables

Waitresses irate over taxes on tips

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

"I love my customers. I love my job. I love my boss. I don't want to have to quit, but paying taxes on money I don't make - I can't afford it," said Punkin McCollum, a waitress at Tom's Country Inn Steakhouse.

"Some people think our boss is taking our tips from us, so some of our customers are afraid to leave tips. Our boss is not taking the tips," said a waitress.

The government, through the Internal Revenue Service, is claiming that waitresses are making (in tips) more than eight percent of the gross income of their place of employment. And further asserting that waitresses are not reporting all of their tips, costing the nation an estimated $3 billion each year in lost tax money.

Therefore, according to the new law, the employer must record on the pay slips an amount equal to the difference between earned tips reported and eight percent of his gross income.

The waitresses say they have no objection to paying taxes. They say they already pay income taxes on what they make. However, the amount of

"But these poor ladies think my boss is taking my tips, so they spent 20 cents on a letter to send a 50-cent tip to my home," Punkin said.

The waitresses are not talking strike, or trying to make trouble for anyone, they said. The waitresses at the Country Inn were told by their boss last July about the law and its ramifications. Since then they have talked with congressmen, lawyers, waitresses and employers about the bill.

"We are just trying to get the public informed about this unfair and discriminatory law. It could put a real hardship on the industry. It could force many full-service restaurants to go cafeteria style, because they can't afford to keep the waitresses," said Nelda Simpson, waitress.

The new law creates a number of problems for the owners of these establishments. One is bookkeeping. It generates an added expense to the owners, which will necessitate price increases to cover their increased costs and finally, many restaurants will lose a great deal of employees, because eight percent is more than the employees are making; they will not be able to afford to work there," said Simpson.

According to law, all food and beverage establishments which employ more than 10 persons

"The total amount of tips reported equal $90 or nine percent of the gross receipts, so the employer does nothing extra in his reporting. No change, no allocation.

"However, if the first waitress reports $25 and the second receives and reports $40, the total, $65 is only 6.5 percent of the gross earnings.

"The employer then realizes that he is $15 short. The waitresses worked the same number of hours, under similar conditions, so it appears the first waitress did not claim all her tips.

"The employer then enters in a box on the reporting form 'employer estimated unreported tips: $15'. There is no withholding tax claimed on the $15.

"In theory, the waitress who claimed less tips then reports accurately on her tax return."

He said studies showed the national average for tipping is between 10 and 15 percent. The writers of the bill recognized those figures could be high for many areas, so they looked at what figure could be used and still bring in the needed revenue. The committee settled on eight percent after conferences with the restaurant and hotel-motel owners associations and the hotel-motel employees union.

One of the purposes of the new bill is to collect the more than $3 billion per year in taxes that are not being paid by tipped employees, who do not fully report their income, the source said.

"It is closing the loophole," he said.

The law has always required that a tipped employee keep an accurate diary of the hours (actual shift and station worked) as well as the exact amount of tips received. The amount of tips is required by law to be reported to the employer. If the amount of the tips actually received is not equal to the employer's portion of the eight percent of the employer's gross income, then the waitress has her records to prove her income, said the congressional source.

'Some of my customers are sweet little old ladies who scrape the money together to come in once a week...and leave a quarter tip' their tips has decreased from what it was even a year ago, because of the hard times, they said.

According to the waitresses at the Country Inn, Harold's Big Apple, and Stedum's restaurants, the customers cannot afford to leave tips that add up to eight percent of the gross.

According to a congressional source in the Senate

'I love my job and my customers, but can't afford to pay tax money I don't have.' - Punkin McCollum.

Finance Committee familiar with the legislation, the employer and waitress have an option. If the actual tips do not add up to eight percent of the gross, the employer should write to the IRS requesting forms to file for the five percent provision.

Waitresses said their first objection to the law is it is grossly discriminatory, as it only covers people who make tips in the food service and lounge business. That leaves a large number of other people who get tips out. And, second, this law is set up in such a manner that waitresses will have to pay taxes on the eight percent whether they make it or not, a waitress said.

"I feel my tips are love gifts I have earned by giving good service. I don't want my customers to feel they have to tip me. Some of my customers are sweet little ladies on social security who have to scrape the money together to come in for a hamburger once a week. Two of them order one hamburger, cut it in half and share it. They deserve a day out. They give me a quarter tip. It means more to me than a $5 tip left by a rich businessman, because it is all they have.

(including non-tipped employees) must report "the establishment's annual gross receipts, charge receipts, total charge tips and total tips reported by employees. Tipped employees are required to report all tips received in the course of their employment to their employer."

The new law states, if the total tips reported do not equal eight percent, then the employer must "allocate extra tip income for his/her employees. This is to be done on a payroll period or on a monthly basis, and employers will want to require employee tip reports on the same basis used for allocation." (The reporting of tips is not a new requirement.)

The law says "an employer may allocate to each employee on the basis of the percentage of the restaurant's gross sales attributed to the employee, or the hours worked by the employee as a percentage of total employee hours for the period."

The waitresses say this means they will have to pay taxes on tips they aren't getting.

The new law does not require withholding the allocated amount, said the congressional source, what it does is point out the discrepancy between what the waiter or waitress reports and what the figures show should be the tips received.

A counsel for the Senate Finance Committee gave this example:

"A restaurant owner grosses $1,000 for a given period.

"He has two waitresses who work the same number of hours. One waitress receives and reports $50 in tips for the period. The second receives and reports $40.

'If you don't help yourself, no one else is going to.' - Nelda Simpson.

Jobless rate in Pampa drops as inflation rate in nation falls

By JEFF LANGLEY and the Associated Press

The local unemployment rate and the national rate of inflation both declined, according to figures released by the government today.

The December unemployment rate for Pampa and Gray County dropped more than half a percentage point from figures for November.

The unemployment rate released this week for Pampa was at 6.6 during December, 6.7 percent for all of Gray County.

The rate for both the city and county during November was at 7.3 percent.

Texas Employment Commission Pampa Manager Charles Vance said the December decline in the local unemployment rate is partially due to temporary jobs created during the Christmas rush at local retail stores.

Other reasons for the decline, Vance said, may be that a few people out of work are continuing to leave the area, while others are finding new jobs here, he said.

The decline in the rate comes amid rumors that Halliburton Services, an oilfield-servicing company and a major Pampa employer, is planning layoffs next week.

Pampa Manager Don Sheppard said there is no truth to the rumor that as many as 40 jobs would be cut by the company.

"We may have to make a little adjustment, involving four or five people at the most," Sheppard said.

The Halliburton manager said the company has no plan for major job reductions next week.

"We would really be hurting, if we had to cut back that much," Sheppard said.

Slumping oil prices, which are keeping the local economy soft, led the way toward holding down the national rate of inflation, economists said today.

Some economists say the figures indicate the country is coming out of the current recession, but the experts also said they don't expect the recovering economy to refuel the fires of inflation.

Wholesale prices plummeted a record 1 percent last month, the government said today. Sharpest-ever drops in natural gas and home heating oil costs, plus plunging gasoline prices, led the way.

Food prices also fell, although at a more modest rate.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes called the new report a "striking confirmation of the progress that has been made in reducing the underlying rate of inflation. This is good news and indicates that the administration and the Federal Reserve, working on the same wavelength, achieved these results."

As for energy prices, which declined a record 4.2

percent overall at wholesale, Labor Department analysts said in releasing today's report that the mild winter was largely responsible for the surprising 2.7 percent fall in natural gas prices and the 9.7 percent drop in home heating oil costs.

Fuel oil costs have also been restrained by the worldwide oil glut, as have gasoline prices, which were off 3.3 percent. The department's energy price calculations actually lag a month behind the rest of the index.

Not since the wholesale price index was first compiled in 1947 have prices dropped a full 1 percent in one month. If that rate held for 12 straight months, the yearly decline would be 11.9 percent. For the last 12 months, wholesale prices, after seasonal adjustment, rose a scant 2.1 percent.

In reporting its inflation figures, the department bases its compounded annual rate on a more precise calculation of monthly changes than the monthly figure the department makes public.

January's energy price decline was the sharpest since those prices were first recorded in 1974. The 2.7 percent drop in natural gas prices compared to a 20.7 percent jump for all of last year.

That gain had been attributed in part to congressional decontrol of new-gas costs. Earlier this winter, congressional investigators said residential natural gas bills have more than doubled since decontrol began in 1978.

Job Hunter

Johnny Arnold's been out of work for about 11 months, even though he said he's beating the bushes and willing to do almost anything for a job.

Arnold, 37, of 526 N. Faulkner, and his wife and two small children have no income.

He said if it weren't for the help of family members, food stamps and a small, government-housing grant, his family would be "up the creek."

The unemployed Pampa said he has lived here off and on since about 1955.

On his last job, Arnold was working with a roofing contractor, who later went out of business along with Arnold's job.

Arnold said he has previous experience working as an oilfield roughneck and roustabout, and has worked as a painter and truck driver, with experience with tractor-trailer rigs. He has done some carpentry and small building jobs.

While in the Navy he was a cook.

Arnold said he has applied at restaurants, oilfield concerns here and in Borger, and other businesses where his labor might be needed.

Everywhere he gets the same answer, he said.

"They just don't need anybody. One guy told me, 'I have steady people now that I can't run off.' I guess everybody who has a job is holding onto it," Arnold said.

He said he doesn't drink or smoke and is a reliable employee.

"I'm not picky. If I could just find a laborer's job, that would be great," Arnold said.

He said the reason the lawmakers could not put similar regulations on other tipped employees such as hairdressers and bellhops, is because there is no rule of thumb on how to tip them. He said it is not that they don't cheat on their income tax returns, too, it is just virtually impossible to prove.

Representative Jack Hightower (D - Vernon), was not available for comment, but his aid, Steve Cotton was.

Cotton said Congress did not have a chance to pass on individual portions of the bill. He said the administration feared that if Congress had an opportunity to pick over the bill, nothing would get done, and the money was needed to run the government.

However, the bill was a joint effort passed by both the Democratic leadership in the House and the Republican leadership in the Senate, said the source.

Dublin police spokesman Jim Quinn agreed the calls probably were a hoax, and said: "We think Shergar's alive and police all over the country are searching barns, stables and similar places where we assume he's being kept."

On Thursday night, racing correspondent Lord Oaksey said the Aga Khan had refused to pay ransom for Shergar's

The worst snowstorm bequeathed Pampa more than hazardous driving conditions and a temporary food shortage last week, it also contributed art. As the snow is now melting, it seemed a good time to share a few of the snow sculptures with our readers. Brontosaurus hypothermiensis, guarded the Tallis family's door at 421 Faulkner, above, while a snow dog, Canis canis frozenstifficus, is watched by his creators, Michael Gabriel, Kelly Brown, and Carl Brown at 911 E. As strike vanishes, leaders call for end of truck walkout

By H. JOSEF HEBERT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of an independent truckers strike are calling on drivers to return to work and end a violence-marred protest that tried to force Congress into rolling back new truck taxes and fees.

While many protesting truckers say they're ready to pull their 18-wheelers back onto the highways, others accused strike leaders of caving into the government and said they may ignore the back-to-work call.

"We are officially asking independent truckers ... to get back to work as soon as possible," declared Mike Parkhurst, president of the Independent Truckers Association.

In a raucous news conference interrupted by truckers who demanded that the strike continue, Parkhurst announced he was ending the protest after winning assurances from at least 35 congressmen that the truckers' complaints would be examined.

But that was far short of Parkhurst's earlier promise that the strike would continue until Congress pulled back the new taxes and fees that truckers say will force many drivers out of business.

Witness says she lied about man on death row being at crime scene

WACO (AP) — A witness in the 1978 trial of Thomas Andy Barefoot has recanted her testimony, saying that he and the man she saw running from the scene of a policeman's murder are as different as "Mutt and Jeff."

Mary Richards of Harker Heights testified at a hearing here Thursday before a federal judge that she lied when she placed Barefoot at the scene of the crime.

"I feel horrible that I held it back this long but I didn't know where to go," she said. "For four years, it's been eating my guts out."

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton said he would rule after Feb. 21 on a request for a new trial from Barefoot's lawyers, based on Ms. Richards' revelation.

Bell County prosecutors, who say that Ms. Richards' testimony was not crucial to their case, denied Ms. Richards charge that they pressured her into testifying against Barefoot.

Barefoot's scheduled Jan. 25 execution by lethal injection was stayed by the U.S. Supreme Court Jan. 24. The high court said it wanted to use the case to decide how federal courts should handle emergency death penalty appeals, and set an April date to hear arguments.

Ms. Richards said that the man she saw running from the scene was about 6 feet tall, with a dark complexion and a big body "built like a boxer."

Barefoot is about 5 feet 6 inches tall, with a light complexion and small frame.

"When I see Mr. Barefoot, it's like the difference between Mutt and Jeff," she said.

Barefoot, 42, of New Iberia, La., has maintained he did not kill officer Carl Levin. He was convicted Aug. 7, 1978.

Barefoot had escaped from a jail in New Mexico before Levin was killed. Prosecutors argued during the trial that he Even before the announcement, however, the shutdown that began Jan. 31, was losing momentum. Authorities reported a sharp drop in violence in recent days and officials around the country said truck traffic was on the upturn with minimal interruption of commerce.

Parkhurst, the trucking magazine publisher who called the strike, said the informal commitment by the congressmen to examine the complaints about new truck fees and taxes was the best that could be obtained.

"You have to be realistic," said Parkhurst, whose group claims to represent 30,000 truckers.

But that didn't set well with some truckers who attended Parkhurst's news conference.

Rising for the audience, George Sullivan, head of a rival truckers group, shouted at Parkhurst that many truckers want to continue the strike and that the congressmen's promise is "not worth the paper it's written on."

Sullivan later said his Independent Truckers Unity Committee, which he claims has the support of thousands of independent drivers, plans to hold meetings this weekend to decide whether to continue the strike.

Other truckers said they are ready to return to work.

Defense rests without calling witnesses

DALLAS (AP) — Defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes was expected to try to persuade a jury today during final arguments that British arms dealer Ian Smalley believed he was part of a United States plot to secretly supply arms to Iran during the hostage crisis.

Haynes, who led a five-attorney defense team for Smalley, rested his defense Thursday without calling any witnesses.

Smalley, 42, of London is accused of illegally shipping U.S. tanks to Iran and anti-tank missiles to Iraq. If convicted, Smalley could be sentenced to a maximum 70 years in prison and fined as much as $61,000.

Smalley's lawyers had been expected to call a number of witnesses, including government agents who participated in the undercover investigation.

U.S. Attorney Jim Rolfe rested his case early Thursday afternoon. Most of the government's case against Smalley is built around 80 to 85 hours of tape recordings made during a 15-month investigation by U.S. Customs agents.

After Rolfe rested his case, Smalley and his lawyers huddled for about an hour and emerged with Haynes announcing: "The defense rests."

Final arguments in the trial were scheduled today.

"I don't feel the government made its case," said Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, who led the five-attorney defense team for Ian Smalley.

Smalley is accused of violating the U.S. Neutrality Act by conspiring to ship military equipment to Iran and Iraq without permission of the State Department. He also faces two counts of failure to register as an agent of a foreign government.

Defense lawyers have argued throughout the trial that Smalley believed he was working on a covert operation sanctioned by the U.S. government.

The prosecution's two key witnesses, customs agents Don Winkler and Gary Howard, testified that Smalley planned to smuggle the weapons out of the U.S. by with phony documentation indicating they were destined for Jordan and the United Arab Emirates.

The U.S. government no longer allows weapons to be shipped to either Iran or Iraq.

U.S. District Judge Robert Hill denied a defense motion to acquit Smalley on the charges of failing to register as a foreign agent, but said he might reconsider the decision.

Hill did drop a minor firearms charge at the request of both the defense and government.

Judge, mayor both claim municipal bench

TYE, Texas (AP) — A municipal judge says he will ignore his firing by the mayor of this West Texas town and take his seat as scheduled today. But the mayor says he can't — because the mayor appointed himself judge. Mayor Jim Snowden, who fired Municipal Judge Dennis Hodges Wednesday, said Thursday that his first act as municipal court judge will be to dismiss all pending cases. Hodges, however, tore up his letter of termination this week and threw it on the floor.

"I'm not going to be intimidated by him," Hodges said, noting that he planned to assume his position this morning even though "there will be nothing to do except sit on the seat."

The municipal court post, which handles mostly traffic violations, is now largely ceremonial because Snowden has fired all three members of the city's police force in a long-standing political battle in this town of 1,400 near Abilene.

Hodges said he became a charter member of the dissident Citizens for Better Government because of the organization's stated goal of putting city government back in the hands of the City Council.

"I may be considered disloyal to Snowden because I didn't bow down to him," said Hodges, "but I was not disloyal to the citizens of Tye, whom I expected to represent."

"I'm the municipal judge here until the City Council says they don't want me," Hodges said.

Snowden said he acted properly in firing the officers and the judge and will not back down.

"I won't say it doesn't bother me, but I sleep at night," said Snowden. "I don't like controversy, but I won't run away or turn my back on it."

Snowden said he fired Hodges because he was disloyal and negligent, and because "it would be a complete disgrace and degrading to the office," if he didn't.

White reports for jury duty

HOUSTON (AP) — It was a bad day Thursday for Gov. Mark White at the Harris County Courthouse. But it was an even worse day for Hilton Jerome Cesar.

White answered a jury summons, but a lawyer rejected him as a juror in an armed robbery case. And while the governor was inside doing his civic duty, his car got a parking ticket.

Cesar, the defendant in the case, had a greater disappointment — he was convicted. White was one of 45 candidate jurors, who listened to more than two hours of instructions and questions from prosecutor Richard Bax and defense lawyer Matt Leeper during the jury selection phase of Cesar's trial.

When the final selection was made, Leeper rejected White.

"I'm disappointed," White said. "I hoped to have the opportunity to serve on a jury."

"He would have made an excellent juror. A superior juror," Leeper said of White. "But I struck (eliminated) him because of the news coverage. The case would have gotten more publicity than it deserves and that would have adversely affected my client."

White showed up eight minutes late in the jury assembly room and joined a crowd of other latecomers in signing in with the clerk. On his jury form, he listed his occupation as "Governor-state employee."

When State District Judge Ted Poe ordered candidate jury panel of 45, White was given the number 22 and walked with the others across the street to Poe's court.

The governor, and others in the panel, underwent close questioning from Leeper and Bax.

White, a lawyer and a former state attorney general, was asked by Leeper: "You've tried civil suits?"

"Yes," said the governor.

"You understand the burden of proof is more strict in a criminal case?"

White nodded.

Leeper then asked the whole panel, "If Gov. White is on the (trial) panel and you are one of the 12 and after listening to the evidence you decide you're right and he's wrong, would you give in because of who he is?"

None of the candidate jurors responded.

White said he was not surprised that he was struck from the panel.

"I expected that one or the other (defense or prosecution attorneys) would strike me," he said. Asked if he would have allowed a governor to serve as juror if he had been the defense lawyer, White said: "I would have talked long and hard with my client."

The governor said he served as a juror in a civil case in 1981, when he was attorney general, and found the experience "rewarding."

"The other 11 jurors were just as independent as they could be," said White. "They weren't swayed by my being attorney general."

White was first summoned to jury duty Jan. 20, shortly after being sworn in as the state's governor. Bad weather grounded his airplane in Austin and his appearance was rescheduled.

Lefors improvement meet set

The Lefors Community Improvement Program will meet in the Lefors Civic Center at 7 p.m. Saturday, according to president Mike Shedeck.

Also present will be representatives of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission (PRPC) who will discuss the future of Lefors with residents.

Shedeck says any resident of Lefors is welcome to attend the meeting and participate in the program's activities.

The PRPC representatives will conduct a question-and-answer session with residents at the meeting, to define the needs of Lefors as a community.

"They're going to see what they can do for us," Shedeck said Wednesday.

The Community Improvement Program will also have a "Valentine Fund Raising Dinner" on Sunday from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Lefors school cafeteria.

Donation for the roast beef dinner will be $4 for adults and $2 for children under 12, Shedeck said. As usual, any resident of Lefors is welcome at the dinner.

Money raised at the dinner will be used for community improvement projects, Shedeck said, principally park and cemetery improvements.

Exploiting the taxpayer

The House of Representatives in December approved legislation that should encourage greater legislative caution in the future. When regulators rush in before they know all the facts, the final result may more often be exploitation of taxpayers than protection of consumers.

The recent piece of legislation will provide a way to compensate firms that lost money when the government banned the use of Tris, an anti-inflammatory chemical, on children's sleepwear. The total bill could be as much as $56 million, and guess who will pay it?

The problem dates back to 1971, when the Consumer Product Safety Commission decided that pajamas that might burst into flames were one of the biggest problems facing the U.S. Accordingly, it banned such garments unless they were treated with some sort of flame-retardant chemical. At the time, the most widely accepted chemical deemed suitable for that purpose was Tris.

There was a little grumbling and a couple of questions about just how wide-spread flaming pajamas really were, and whether the reported cases were the result of parental carelessness, but most manufacturers went along. Children's pajamas cost a bit more than before, but any complaints were fairly muted. Until 1977, when the government decided that the Tris it had ordered into the children's pajamas was a carcinogen.

Well, we couldn't have that. Tris-treated pajamas were ordered off the market and out of the stores. Companies that had complied with the previous law were ordered to dispose of all the offending pajamas posthaste and simply eat any revenue losses that ensued. It turned out that a fairly large number of children's sleepwear manufacturers were small businesses with fewer than 100 employees, and some were hurt badly by the order. A few got emergency loans from the Small Business Administration, but many were left holding the PJs. Well, not exactly. Any companies that actually held the pajamas were in violation of the new set of laws.

Congress required, however, that those companies were being financially embarrassed because of a series of mistakes made by government. Ever generous, it has now made provision for them to go to court, establish their losses and collect compensation. When the government makes a mistake, the taxpayers pay for it.

From an equity standpoint, that's not objectionable. One might hope, however, that the Tris experience will suggest a little caution the next time some government agency is in a rush to regulate. Do you suppose it will? Or do you suppose the lesson they will learn is that the taxpayers stand ever ready, their deep pockets to be picked in the name of making amends?

"The liberal Eastern press was right. There is something around here that's in DISARRAY!"

Whoops to you, madame

By William A. Rusher

NEW YORK (NEA) — My attention has been called to a reference to me, by somebody named Joan Hanauer, that provides grist for an instructive discussion.

I hadn't heard of Ms. Hanauer previously, but apparently she does a little column for UPI called "About People," consisting of short paragraphs based on press releases, tips from press agents and the like. The sample I saw contained, for instance, a breathless report that Hallmark Greeting Cards had donated a collection of presidential Christmas cards to the Smithsonian. Another item quoted one Shelley Duvall and her theory of the significance of fairy tales, as set forth "in the issue of Glamour Magazine that comes out Tuesday." You get the idea.

Apparently some faceless flack for CBS's Channel 2 in New York City managed to persuade Ms. Hanauer that there was occasion for hollow laughter, of the sort liberals like to enjoy at conservatives' expense, in a remark of mine on a local WCBS-TV program. The show, Ms. Hanauer gently omitted to add, was called "Daybreak," and was to be broadcast at that macabre time of day, but in fact it had been taped several days earlier at a far more civilized hour.

Ms. Hanauer's (inaccurate) version of the remark of mine that gave her such a belly laugh was as follows:

"WHOOPS! In the heat of political battle, some odd statements are made. Consider William A. Rusher, publisher of the National Review and an advocate of Republican economics. He was debating Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., a foe of Reaganomics, on a WCBS-TV New York show to air Monday. In sincere indignation, Rusher said: 'We have more people employed in this country than ever before. Sure unemployment is up, but more people are looking for work than ever before!'

Haw, haw. Whoops! Get it? Don't worry if you don't. Before wasting any ink on textual exposition, however, let's disentangle what I really said from what WCBS-TV's anonymous tub-thumper told the glib Ms. Hanauer I said. Rep. Rangel had worked himself up to the point of declaring that, under President Reagan, business had come to a halt. I promptly moved to contradict that false assertion.

"The congressman talks about business having come to a dead halt and so on. It isn't in his interest to point out that we actually have, I believe, more people employed in this country than ever before. It is true that 'unemployment' is up. What is happening is that more people are looking for work. But, far from business having come to a dead halt, we have more people employed in America than have ever been employed before."

Precisely why that paragraph should be so side-splittingly hilarious is unclear. So far as concerned unemployment, my point was that there is not, as so many people imagine, an inelastic work force in this country. With two sub-categories called the "employed" and the "unemployed" that fluctuate in strict reciprocity. It is quite possible for both employment and unemployment to rise at the same time (as they have been doing) or even to fall at the same time. This is because employment is a quantifiable fact, whereas unemployment begins with a state of mind.

Nobody, incidentally, is more acutely aware of this than the liberals — when it suits them. Recently, for example, they have been souping up the official unemployment figures by alleging that, on top of these, there are another couple of million people who "are so discouraged that they have given up looking for work." Insofar as these supposedly desperate wretches actually exist, however, they consist largely of housewives who don't mind taking a job, full-time or part-time, in years when jobs are plentiful and pay well, but who understandably choose not to pound the pavement or work for a pittance when the going gets rougher.

One reason why the official unemployment figure is so high, as I told Rep. Rangel, is that in counting the potential work force today, the government includes a large number of people who, as a result of social changes, (such as the expanding activities of women) are in the job market for the first time. But it is also — and strikingly — true that employment is higher than ever before. Understand now, Ms. Hanauer?

Social security-insurance or welfare?

By OSCAR COOLEY

Our government has stirred up some awful messes of pottage but nothing that quite equals Social Security. Set up in 1935 as a kind of insurance or old-age pension, it has turned out to be nothing of the kind.

When you were working, a certain amount was taken from your pay each payday and deposited somewhere in Washington. This, you were given to understand, was the premium you paid for insurance against poverty in your old age.

To most people, the SS tax was a petty annoyance. They resigned themselves to it as one of the New Deal goodies. At the start it did not cost much, and who knows? It just might turn out to be a real help.

In 1965, Medicare, or hospital insurance for people 65 or over, was added. It further sweetened the SS goody.

It soon became apparent the SS taxes, plus compound interest, would not accumulate enough money to begin to pay the benefits promised to folks when they retired at 65. George F. Will figures that an average wage-earner who paid the tax throughout his career and finally retired in 1982 would have paid $7,209 and could live to collect $520,000 or about 75 times the amount he had "contributed."

Money just won't multiply that fast. So, to pay our wage-earner his promised benefit, the government has to reach into the general funds of the U.S. Treasury.

Furthermore, Social Security being a government baby, is entangled in politics. Seeking ways to make themselves popular, the lawmakers have amended the SS law many times, making more and more people eligible to receive the benefit. They are said to need it, but one suspects it in the politics who are in need of votes.

As a result, great numbers of people get that SS check on the third of every month, and the total paid out by the Treasury in these checks is the largest single item, 30 percent, in the government's total outlay. This is a heavy burden on the taxpayer. It is one of the reasons we are now in economic doldrums.

Social Security is not insurance. Jane Bryant Quinn says, "It is a highly prized program of social welfare benefits whose levels of payment are subject to political negotiation." In short, it is welfare. It is not paid to people because they earned it by paying premiums, but because Congress has voted to pay it to them.

Some recipients need it to buy groceries; others, having earned savings to live on, give it to relatives or friends, or maybe invest it in stocks or bonds. But it is breaking the U.S. Treasury.

Various suggestions of what to do about it have been made. Some say increase the age at which the old become old enough to get SS benefit. Others would levy income tax on the benefits. In other words, be an Indian giver. Others would increase the SS taxes on earners, but these have already been jacked 6,480 percent since 1949.

President Reagan in his state-of-the-union address promised he will not reduce the amounts now being paid to SS beneficiaries. However, this would seem the most obvious remedy. Not everyone's benefit should be cut by the same percentage. Need should be a criterion, as it already is. It makes no sense to send a Social Security benefit check to a well-to-do person.

Basing the benefits on need would be a recognition that Social Security is welfare, not insurance. The outgo (benefits) then could be adjusted to the income (taxes) and the presently threatened bankruptcy averted.

Who's scaring us about nuclear power?

By PAUL HARVEY

Pennies will be added to your electric bill because that industry is having to "buy advertising"; not to sell electricity - but just to explain nuclear power.

Already you are seeing and hearing ads in some cities describing nuclear energy as the best and cheapest and safest investment we can make in our national security.

If that is true, why are the news media not telling it as it is - without this industry investment of $40 million?

Support for nuclear energy has declined sharply in recent years as news stories emphasized potential "hazards" and astronomical costs and "hazards" and alternatives and "hazards" and scientific dissent and "hazards."

In 1956 George Gallup's pollsters found only 29 percent of Americans objected to the nearby location of nuclear power plants.

By 1977, 33 percent objected.

By 1979, 56 percent.

The public's obvious growing unease about nuclear power relates to media exaggeration and distortion.

The vast preponderance of scientists favor development of nuclear power, but you have been misled to believe otherwise.

Reporters Stanley Rothman and S. Robert Lichter have been watchdogging the media and taking its pulse on various subjects.

On this subject - nuclear power - they found "science journalists much more skeptical of nuclear energy than are scientists."

This is especially true of science journalists at major national media outlets including the television networks and The New York Times and The Washington Post.

Among the "inner club" opposition to nuclear energy are journalists who are also politically liberal.

Much reporting on science issues is done by journalists who are not classified as science reporters.

They - especially the network TV personnel - are even more suspicious of nuclear energy than other journalists. Corroborating the Roghman - Lichter research are two separate studies, by the Battelle Center and the Media Institute.

Both found an increasingly negative treatment of the subject of nuclear energy over the past 10 years. On television, the most widely quoted "nuclear expert" was Ralph Nader.

So now you understand why the power companies are having to try to reach you through bought - and - paid - for advertising; how else?

After Indians protest

Display of skeleton cancelled

AUSTIN (AP) — The "Leanderthal Lady's" scheduled appearance in the Texas Capitol has been scrapped because of complaints from American Indians, who protested the display of what may be the oldest human skeleton uncovered in North America.

"This may be hard for many to understand, but just ask yourself how you would feel if someone dug up your great-great-grandmother and placed her remains on display in similar circumstances," said El Paso Sen. Tati Santiesteban, who is half Yaqui Indian.

State highway department workers unearthed the skeleton six weeks ago at a construction site near the Central Texas community of Leander. Archeologists estimate that the bones are at least 9,000 years old.

Department officials planned a public display in the Capitol, starting Saturday. But they threw out the plan Thursday.

"It's not worth the agony, and we're going to shut it down," said Bob Neely of the highway department's public information office.

The agency received an "inordinate number" of telephone calls Thursday from American Indian groups, other organizations and legislators protesting the public showing, Neely said.

Santiesteban said Ray Apadoca, executive director of the Texas Indian Commission, asked him to intervene.

"Although I certainly appreciate the scientific importance of the discovery of the ancient Indian grave site near Austin and the knowledge of the past which may be obtained from a study of that grave and the remains found within it, I also understand and sympathize with the feelings of those American Indians who object to a public display of the remains of the Leanderthal Woman," said Santiesteban.

The State Historical Commission and State Antiquities Committee had withdrawn their support, according to Neely.

"We had hundreds of calls from people wanting the skeleton to be displayed — teachers wanting their classes to see it and so forth, and archeology director Frank Weir thought it would be a good idea," Neely said.

Before Thursday, Neely said, "We had no flak at all, none."

Santiesteban said the highway department meant no offense to American Indians, "but it is a fact that many American Indians — including members of the Tigua tribe in El Paso — do not believe that displaying the remains of one of their possible ancestors in the middle of the Capitol with large crowds constantly flowing back and forth past them is proper or shows the kind of respect for this ancient Texan, which she is due."

Bush, Shultz report to Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is summoning Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State George P. Shultz for reports on Bush's efforts to boost support for U.S. arms policies in Europe and Shultz's attempts to smooth out relations in Asia.

Reagan planned to meet today with Bush and Shultz, who returned to Washington Thursday night from a two-week tour of Japan, Korea and China.

Bush, who arrived back earlier than Shultz, said of his seven-nation European tour: "I hope there is more understanding of our commitment to arms reduction." He added: "I think we did some good in that regard."

Shultz, meanwhile, said that as a result of his trip, the United States now has "a solid basis of common interest" on which to build closer ties with the People's Republic of China.

While Shultz said closer ties with China are still in the future because of continued friction over U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, "Our bonds with such sturdy allies as Japan and Korea are strong."

"We got some good frank talk from our friends," said Shultz, who visited China, Japan and South Korea. "We gave some good frank views back. That was construction for all parties."

Shultz, on his initial trip to the Far East as secretary of state, said a principal purpose was to form personal working relations with Asian leaders. He also discussed trade and defense issues in Japan and reaffirmed the U.S. defense commitment to Korea.

But his trip was linked in many ways to Bush's 12-day visit to Europe.

"The leaders of Europe are pretty strongly united behind the zero option," said Peter Teeley, Bush's spokesman.

White House seeks compromise on EPA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House, increasingly concerned about the congressional probe of the Environmental Protection Agency, is seeking a compromise that might end at least part of the controversy.

But congressional Democrats were raising new questions, including why paper-shredding machines were recently moved into the EPA office handling the $1.6 billion toxic waste cleanup program that is the subject of the investigation.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Thursday that presidential counselor Fred Fielding was "looking at a number of issues involved in the whole EPA matter," and that President Reagan had been briefed on the controversy.

He also disclosed that Rita Lavelle, the assistant administrator in charge of the cleanup program until she was fired by Reagan this week, was questioned at the White House on Tuesday "to review her departure procedures."

And Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., said he was contacted by White House chief of staff James A. Baker III and told a compromise to the impasse over congressional access to EPA enforcement documents would be proposed today.

A Levitas aide, Mary Jane Norville, said Baker did not say who from the White House would offer the compromise or what it would contain, but that Levitas was willing to talk.

Levitas' subcommittee originated the subpoena against EPA Administrator Anne M. Gorsuch last year that resulted in the full House voting to cite her for contempt of Congress.

That vote came after she refused, on presidential orders, to surrender the subpoenaed documents. The White House is now seeking to avoid criminal prosecution of Mrs. Gorsuch.

But even if that dispute is settled, a host of new controversies have developed around the agency.

Three admit gang rape that ended sex life for woman

HOUSTON (AP) — A man has been sentenced to 50 years in prison for participating in a gang rape that reportedly gave the victim such a severe case of a venereal disease that she cannot have sex or children.

"She tells me her doctor said that unless they come up with some kind of cure for herpes, her sex life is over," Assistant District Attorney Ned Morris said Thursday.

"She has genital warts and all the rest and is having a very difficult time with her normal bodily functions."

Dewayne Andrae Spencer, 21, pleaded guilty to a charge of aggravated rape this week and was sentenced by state District Judge Joseph Guarino.

Two others, Marques Ward, 25, and Reginald C. Manuel, 21, have pleaded guilty to aggravated robbery in the Nov. 11, 1981, incident and await sentencing.

But the director of a herpes research center said he is skeptical that herpes alone could end someone's sex life.

"I don't mean to belittle this specific case, but there have been a lot of things that have been pinned on the herpes virus," said John Graves, director of the Herpes Resource Center in Palo Alto, Calif.

"Because there's such a large amount of concern about the disease, people tend to use it as a scapegoat," he said.

HERB MILLER

Family Night Dinner at First Christian

Herb Miller, area minister, will be guest speaker at the 6:30 p.m. Feb. 20 Family Night Dinner at the First Christian Church, 1633 N. Nelson.

The dinner will be held in the church fellowship hall and all church members and the public are invited to attend, according to Jo Love, chairman of the Church in Society Department.

Miller is editor of NET RESULTS, a monthly periodical published by the National Evangelistic Association of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). He has written two books and is also the author of a booklet and tape material entitled "Blueprints for Evangelism and Church Growth."

He has conducted evangelism and church growth seminars for regions and individual congregations of various denominations throughout the United States and Canada and directs the work of 24 National Evangelism Team consultants, who make two-day visits to local congregations through North America.

DON and FAITH DUNLAP

Evening of praise, worship at Lamar Full Gospel Church

The public is invited to attend an evening of praise and worship at Lamar Full Gospel Assembly, Bond and South Summer, at 7 p.m. Sunday.

Don and Faith Dunlap will present a musical program in which their theme is "His Word Our Song," according to Pastor Gene Allen.

The Dunlups, according to Allen, feel that the singing of scriptures in praise provides an effective way of leading people into a greater understanding of worship.

Jehovah's Witnesses convene

"Be Rich Toward God, Not Covetous" will be the theme of the two-day circuit assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses Saturday and Sunday in the Amarillo Civic Center Auditorium.

Frank Rivera, local minister of Jehovah's Witnesses, estimated the semi-annual convention will attract about 1,800 delegates from 20 congregations in northwestern New Mexico and the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles.

All sessions are open to the public. Saturday sessions will be from 9:55 a.m. until 4:15 p.m. with the Sunday sessions beginning at 9:55 a.m. and concluding at 4:30 p.m.

How bad is hypocrisy?

By George R. Plagenz

It isn't that the cause — a cure for cancer — isn't a good one. And it isn't that people don't realize that cancer research costs a lot of money.

What some skeptics fear is that a good chunk of the money Oral Roberts is asking his TV viewers to send in for cancer research at his medical center will end up in Roberts' own pocket.

They have no evidence that this is so. But many of these skeptics have read "Give Me That Prime-Time Religion," a book published in 1980 and written by Jerry Sholes, a former producer of Roberts' TV shows.

In some ways, Sholes came out sounding like any other disgruntled ex-employee ready (for a buck) to dish out all the dirt on his old boss. But what if a lot of the things he said were true?

Roberts, said Sholes, walks around in $100 shoes, wears $500 (and up) suits, lives in a $250,000 house in Tulsa, wears diamond rings which are air brushed out of his publicity photos and belongs to the Southern Hills Country Club where the membership fee is $18,000.

According to the book, it isn't only Oral himself who is getting rich. When his daughter and son-in-law were killed in an air crash, they left a $10 million estate.

Sholes says Roberts is "one of the most egotistical men ever to breathe fresh air... an incorrigible show-off... the most devious man I have ever met."

The evangelist is, in Sholes' opinion, "an accomplished actor who ought to get an Emmy for his portrayal of a caring human being."

Roberts, we learn, also has an uncontrollable temper. He once became so enraged he grabbed a coffee cup and threw it against the wall. His wife Evelyn sometimes has to hide the car keys to keep Oral from racing off in a blind rage.

People who send Oral some of their hard-earned money may be upset, Sholes feels, to discover that Roberts once offered a top basketball coach a 10-year, $2.5 million dollar contract to coach at Oral Roberts University.

Roberts' empire didn't collapse after these revelations were published. People who felt they were getting something out of Roberts' telecasts continued to send him money — let the gossips' tongues wag as they will.

... with resolutions to lift yourself onto higher planes. Plan now to put more faith and trust in the Lord. Resolve now to seek God's wisdom to guide you through the year. Also plan to enter the Lord's house regularly.

"Open to me the gates of righteousness: I will go into them, and I will praise the Lord."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Dear Abby

Woman gets needed for gift she crocheted

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This year I decided to make my own Christmas gifts. Abby, I worked my tail off crocheting toilet-paper covers for some of my special friends.

I made one for a woman I used to work with, using the color scheme in her bathroom. I bought a roll of very nice toilet paper and put it inside the hand-crocheted cover, gift-wrapped it, and gave it to her before Christmas.

She never mentioned it, so after Christmas I asked her how she liked my gift, and she said she didn't care for it and I should not have included the toilet paper. Plus, she said her mother could have made the same thing!

Abby, if I get something I don't like, I would not be so rude as to tell the giver I didn't care for it. I was hurt, disgusted and disappointed. Everybody else liked the covers but her.

Do you think it was wrong of me to have included the toilet paper with the cover? And since she said she didn't care for my gift, should I ask her to return it? I'm sure I could find someone else to give it to.

HURT

DEAR HURT: One as ungracious, ill-mannered and insensitive as your co-worker shows herself to be needs sympathy. To have included the toilet paper with your gift was, I think, a thoughtful gesture. Don't ask her to return it, but if the subject comes up, offer to take it off her hands.

DEAR ABBY: Sheldon and I have been married for three years. Every year our parents exchange Christmas gifts, so Sheldon and I carry the gifts from his parents to mine, and vice versa.

My mother-in-law always makes jam as her gift for my parents. And my mother sends homemade Christmas cookies to my in-laws. She packs them in very pretty cookie tins.

This year when my mother-in-law handed me the jam for my parents, she asked me when my mother was going to send "her" jam jars back. Abby, I didn't know you were supposed to return jam jars, did you? These jars were nothing special — just plain, ordinary mason jars.

My mother never expected to get her cookie tins back. Please let me know.

MRS. GO-BETWEEN

DEAR MRS.: It's my understanding that when one gives jam, the jar is part of the gift (same as the cookie tin). However, since your mother-in-law expects the jam jars to be returned, pass the word on to your mother.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are having a difference of opinion. This is the second Christmas we received a half-dead poinsettia plant from an out-of-state sender.

The plants were sent by my husband's boss, who is known for his generosity and grand style. Of course, we don't know how much he paid for the plant, but we're almost sure he is being ripped off.

My husband says we should thank his boss for the "beautiful" plant, and let it go. I say we should let the sender know that the plant was puny, wilted and definitely third-rate. What do you say?

POST-XTMAS HASSLE

DEAR HASSLE: I vote with you. If you had been the sender, wouldn't you want to be told?

CONFIDENTIAL TO BETTY F. IN PRYOR, OKLA.: Yes, it's the glow from within that creates beauty. People are like stained glass windows; they sparkle like crystal in the sun. But when darkness falls, they continue to shine only if there's a light from within.

You're never too old (or too young) to learn how to make friends and be popular. For Abby's booklet on Popularity, send $1, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

kid's stuff™ by April Bail

Kids are very resourceful. They can think of a thousand places to put their pajamas — under the bed, on top of the bed, stuffed in a boot. Anywhere but the drawer.

But we mothers are resourceful too. After all, didn't we invent that magical dish known as a casserole? The dish that disguises leftovers. The dish that hides vegetables. Yes, we were the ones.

Well, I used the same trick. I mean imagination, to teach my kids to put their pajamas away.

I designed a Lion's Head Pajama Bag. It's so simple even kids can make it. That was another trick.

It takes just a few materials: felt, yarn, and glue.

To make the bag, cut one round head shape from felt, about 12 inches in diameter. The back is the same shape but made of two pieces, a top and bottom, each slightly larger than a half circle. The two back pieces will overlap, slightly off center, to hold the pajamas in place.

Next cut the face features: two eyeballs, two eyes, a nose and a tongue.

Use your imagination on colors. I used yellow for the lion's head, blue eyes, brown nose, and red tongue. Any color felt you have on hand will do.

You will need a long piece of yarn, about 60 inches, to sew the head shapes together around the edges. If you're working with young children, you may want to use a hole punch to make holes along the edges. The kids can thread the yarn in and out.

Older children can use a large needle. This is an excellent introduction to sewing for both boys and girls.

Tie the yarn at the top in a small bow and glue the facial features in place.

If you would like additional ideas for fun and easy crafts for kids, send for our Kid's Craft booklet, containing complete instructions and illustrations for 12 projects.

If you would like to order, please specify Project No. 200-2 and send $3.50 to Kid's Stuff, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 159, Bixby, Okla. 74008.

We enjoy receiving comments and questions from our readers. Here's a terrific idea sent in by Judy Munn of Shreveport, La.

"I found a good way to use all my fabric scraps. My Brownies draw stick people on pieces of cardboard and then cut them out like paper dolls. They use the scraps to make clothes for their paper dolls. The designs they like best are usually glued in place."

Our catalog listing hundreds of craft, art and woodworking projects for adults and older children is available at the above address for $1.50.

Phil Jeffrey, a 6-6 senior, is averaging almost nine rebounds per game to lead the Pampa Harvesters in the carom category. Jeffrey, who is averaging 11.1 ppg, will be in the starting lineup tonight when Pampa visits Brownfield for a District 1-4A game. (Photo by Lance DeFever)

Pampa outplayed Borger, but lost at foul line

Borger paved the way to victory from the foul line in the Bulldogs' 69-68 overtime win over the Pampa Harvesters Tuesday night. Pampa coach Garland Nichols agreed. "The free throws made the difference," Nichols said. "It was good game from both teams." Pampa outshot Borger from the foul line, but the Bulldogs made nine more trips to the charity stripe, and made five more points. Borger hit five of seven in the overtime period, including the one and one clinchers by Tony Tillman with 11 seconds to go. Tillman had only four points for the night. Borger, used the foul line, plus some accurate long range shooting, to come back from nine and five point deficits. With 23 seconds to go in the fourth quarter and Pampa ahead, 60-59, Kevin Willis hit a key foul shot to knot the score at 60-all. Pampa, led by 6-6 junior Coyle Winborn, hit 30 of 50 shots from the floor for 60 percent, compared to 28 of 55 and 50.9 percent for Borger. Winborn, downed 10 of 12 shots from the floor and was a perfect two of two from the foul line. He also collected 10 rebounds as Pampa had a 23-21 rebounding edge. Mike Nelson and Phil Jeffrey also had hot shooting streaks for the Harvesters. Nelson hit his first seven shots from the floor, finishing with 20 points. Jeffrey tossed in his first seven shots in the second half. He went three of three from the foul line for a total of 19 points. Pampa guards Randy Harris and Craig Chapin didn't figure much in the scoring, but both had a couple of steals to help the Harvesters maintain a lead throughout the first half. Chapin did have four points. Pampa, 8-3 in District 1-4A play and 19-6 overall, must now win its remaining three games to have a shot at the runnerup spot in the playoffs. Pampa visits Brownfield tonight. The Harvesters wiped out the Cubs, 93-60, Jan. 14 when Nelson set the school single-game scoring record of 45 points. Nelson leads the team in scoring with a 23.8 average while pulling down 7.5 rebounds per game. Winborn is averaging 13.1 points and 7.9 rebounds while Jeffrey, a 6-6 senior, is averaging 11.1 points and 8.9 rebounds per outing. Guards Craig Chapin and Terry Ferguson are averaging 3.9 and 3.8 ppg respectively. Paul Prentice is averaging 4.2 ppg in a reserve role while parttime starter Randy Harris is averaging 2.8 ppg. Pampa's last two regular-season games are at home against Dumas (Feb. 15) and Lubbock Dunbar (Feb. 18). Borger notched another one-point win, 54-53, over Lubbock Dunbar Thursday night to move one step closer to the District 1-4A title. Borger is 11-0 in loop play with three games remaining.

Compact disc changes the record

LOS ANGELES (NEA) — If you're planning to build a library of recorded music, some caution might be advisable. That's because there is a new system coming that might — just might — make all the present systems of today outmoded.

First, there was the old-fashioned record, spinning at 78 revolutions per minute. Then came the little EP and then the still-popular LP, at 33 1/3 rpm. Then the cassettes of various shapes and sizes and the portables you could jog with or walk with or drive with.

And now, on the horizon, is a system its developers claim will run all the others into the ground. It is the Compact Disc, and it has some big advantages, but also some present-moment disadvantages, which must be considered.

The Compact Disc is a small record — only 4.7 inches in diameter — and indestructible. It is recorded on one side only. You can do anything you want to it, short of melting it down, and it will still perform beautifully.

That's because the music embedded in its surface is read not by a needle but by a laser system. You just slip the little disc into a correspondingly small player, which can be hooked up to your existing system of speakers and amplifiers, and it plays.

The one side of this small record is programmed with the same amount of material as two LP sides. And the fidelity is superior to any of today's conventional systems.

There are many advantages to the Compact Disc — better fidelity, the indestructibility of the record, convenience of storage, the absence of a needle.

Because of those advantages, the people behind the development — Polygram and Sony — believe it is the sound system of the future.

"By the middle of '84," says Emiel N. Petrone, who is coordinating the introduction of the Compact Disc in the United States for Polygram, "I expect to see these systems not only in homes, but in cars and in portable stereos. And, with in 10 or 15 years, this system will have replaced all the others."

Compact Discs have been introduced in Japan already, and Petrone says the acceptance there has been "phenomenal." He says the public is buying discs even before they have the hardware to play them on.

And that's a big problem. Petrone says that, already, 38 manufacturers have been licensed to make machines to play these records. But when the equipment will be introduced here — in the fall of this year — the price of players will be somewhere between $600 and $1,000. Discs will cost, at first, in the $16-$17 range.

Petrone claims that the industry — record companies around the world — are eagerly anticipating this new introduction and will jump in to release Compact Discs.

"Polygram," he says, "is committed to putting its entire catalog on this new configuration."

But the rest of the industry appears to be adopting more of a wait-and-see attitude.

Motown said it was "looking into" the development, but declined further comment at this time.

MCA said they had made no decision yet. "It's so new," said the MCA spokesperson, "we'll just have to wait and see what happens."

Capitol said they had no plans to make Compact Discs "in the immediate future," and would say no more than that.

Patti Duke Astin claims adulthood

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Over the years, most of us have watched Patti Duke grow up. We marveled at her acting skills as a child, took pride in the fact that she made the transition from kid to adult with reasonable smoothness, never for once doubted her ability as an actress.

But what we may have overlooked — and what she would like all of us, especially, the Hollywood establishment, to notice — is that she has matured into a very beautiful woman.

That is one of the reasons why Patti Duke Astin has been elected to make her TV series bow as an adult this year. You can see her each week, opposite Richard Crenna, in the ABC sit-com.

"It Takes Two," which is probably the best of this year's slender sit-com crop. "Actually," she says, "there were four reasons why I decided to do a series at this particular time in my life."

Reason No. 1, however, is the aforementioned desire to show people that she isn't a grown-up kid anymore.

"I know I have a good reputation in Hollywood," she says, "as a serious dramatic actress, as a kind of character actress. But I want to be considered for leading lady roles now, and I think playing this part on 'It Takes Two' will help with that goal."

Another reason is one she shares with other young mothers around town — a TV series enables her to live a more normal maternal life, and be home with the children more than if she did movies and had long location trips.

"Third," she says, "is money. I have to be honest about that and, yes, the money was a consideration."

Fourth, of course, was the particular project offered to her. She liked the premise of "It Takes Two" and the people who would be involved in it with her.

With all those reasons out of the way, she adds that she would have even liked it better if her husband, actor John Astin, could have been a part of the program, too.

"He would have been a good leading man for me," she says. "I have a great deal of respect and admiration for Richard Crenna, of course, but John and I love working together. But there was no way it was going to happen on this show."

She suggested they hire him, but they said, "No." Period.

"There was no way they would let a married couple be co-stars of a TV sit-com," Patti says. "They worry about what would happen if that married couple split up, or had a fight and refused to work together."

"I told them that John and I are professional actors and, even if we had a fight or got a divorce, we are sufficiently professional to work together anyhow."

He sees no future in acting

SAN FRANCISCO (NEA) — Talk to most actors and you will get variations on the same theme. To wit: My career is just beginning, just stuck around a few years and I'm going to be bigger than Olivier and Streisand. Watch me soar!

And that's why talking to Wallace Shawn is something of a culture shock. The theme he advances, when he talks about his own career, is just the reverse: Watch me slide! In a few years I'm going to be nowhere.

Maybe that is because Shawn still doesn't consider himself an actor. He started out to be a playwright, he still wants to be a playwright, he is a playwright. All this acting nonsense is just something he's fallen into.

He is making something of a splash, with that fall. He is half of the twosome that makes "My Dinner with Andre" so special (he also wrote the film). You remember him from "Manhattan" as the wimpy-looking thing Diane Keaton was once married to. You remember him from "Atlantic City" as the wimpy-looking waiter.

Deidre Hall plays Marlena on "Days of Our Lives."

Readers of two leading daytime drama magazines have voted Wayne Northrop and Deidre Hall, stars of NBC-TV's "Days of Our Lives," their favorite actor, actress and couple.

'Walt Disney' to go off air

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Walt Disney," the most enduring prime-time series in television history that enchanted a generation of viewers with fantasy, animation and nature, is going off the air.

The last show of the series, which has been telecast on all three networks since 1954 under various titles, will be broadcast on CBS next Tuesday.

CBS announced the show's end Thursday and said it was also taking "M-A-S-H" off the air after a 2½-hour episode Monday, Feb. 28. The popular comedy will end its 11-year run, but reruns will be telecast on CBS later in the spring until September.

The hour-long Disney show, at first called "Disneyland," made its debut in September 1954. It was the first major Hollywood movie studio venture into television, which at the time was seen as a threat to filmmakers. The struggling ABC network snared Walt Disney by agreeing to help finance his dream, the Disneyland park at Anaheim, Calif.

Both the show and the park were enormous successes. Almost every American child who grew up in the 1950s waited eagerly for the program and dreamed of visiting the amusement park, which was featured prominently in many segments and in opening footage showing Tinkerbell swooping in front of Sleeping Beauty's Castle.

County seeks to block concert

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Ector County has asked a federal judge here to nullify a contract for a performance by British rock singer Ozzy Osbourne because of the controversial performer's past conduct.

Osbourne once urinated on the Alamo during a visit to San Antonio and bit the head of a bat during a concert. His scheduled performance March 8 has touched off a controversy in Odessa, where the anti-concert group Odessa for Decency has squared off against the Ozz Patrol, which says the concert is protected by the First Amendment.

Leza Sturdivant, a law clerk for U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton, said Thursday the judge likely will

Accord near on jobs bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has changed course and is near agreement with Democratic House leaders on a $4.3 billion recession relief bill that includes federally funded jobs and help for the homeless.

Two of the president's chief advisers, Budget Director David Stockman and White House chief of staff James Baker, offered the plan to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. and other Democratic leaders late Thursday.

Republican and Democratic leaders in the Senate, plus some other key House members, must also agree to the plan, but for the moment it appears that a logjam has been broken over jobs legislation to offset the nation's 10.4 percent unemployment rate.

"It's an excellent beginning," said House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas. "It goes a long way."

Reagan labeled a similar bill worth $5.4 billion as "pork barrel" during the lame-duck session of Congress last December. He said what is needed to turn the economy around is patience and trust in the eventual success of his economic program, not new federal jobs programs.

But Republican House leader Bob Michel of Illinois and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee told the president Congress will pass jobs legislation this year.

On Thursday, Wright said much of what Stockman and Baker proposed was "copied right out of our bill," the measure almost approved last year in Congress.

O'Neill has talked previously of a $5 million to $10 billion jobs measure, which would also provide food and shelter for workers and their families whose unemployment benefits have run out.

The jobs measure suggested by Stockman includes money for new federal projects, funds for construction of roads and bridges, and some humanitarian relief for victims of the recession without enough to eat or without places to sleep.

It would also speed up work on federal construction projects. That would not require additional spending authority from Congress.

Father confiscates TV-son kills himself

OAKLEY, Calif. (AP) — "I can't stand another day of school and especially another minute without television," the scribbled note said.

It was found next to the body of Genaro Garcia, a lonely, overweight 13-year-old who shot himself with his father's revolver rather than give up the safe world of television for a troubled life at a new school, his family says.

"I know I've been a lot of trouble and I'm sorry," the youth wrote in the note, which was translated and read to his Spanish-speaking parents by a coroner's investigator.

"Please tell my classmates what happened and watch if they are sad or if they laugh. But that's obvious. I never really had any friends."

The boy left the note and killed himself with a single shot to the head on Jan. 26, according to a Contra Costa County coroner's report.

Genaro shot himself just hours after his father had removed the television from his son's room, according to family members interviewed by the San Francisco Examiner.

Genaro Garcia Sr. recalled telling his son to quit complaining about imaginary ailments and go back to school if he wanted the television back.

Garcia said his son was concerned about his appearance — the youngster was 5-foot-6 and weighed 225 pounds.

Before enrolling at his new school after the family moved to Northern California three months ago, Genaro sent his father to see whether students were required to shower together after physical education classes. They were.

After that, Garcia said, the boy complained of aches in his back and legs and said he couldn't go to school.

Genaro shut himself in his room, not letting anyone in without permission. He would watch TV, play video games or read.

"I'd say 'What are your problems?' and he'd say, 'I don't have any problems,'" Garcia said.

His father, an unemployed janitor who moved his family north from Southern California three months ago at the invitation of a relative, prized a good education for Genaro and his three other children, Maria, 12, David, 10, and 6-year-old Nancy.

Learning from departure of William Agee

NEW YORK (AP) — As Professor Eugene Jennings sees it, the departure of William Agee from Bendix and its parent, Allied Corp., is another example of the demise of unseasoned executives in a time of corporate stress.

In the past five years of rapid executive turnover, said the professor, the top corporate officer most likely to be dropped was the staff man who, with little operating experience, had slipped over into line responsibility.

"We had thrown aside the traditional belief that one had to work in the bowels of a corporation extensively and have eight to 10 years experience as manager in various divisions in order to be qualified for the top," he said.

Agee's departure — Jennings calls it his failure — was "overdetermined," meaning, the professor said, there were more than sufficient reasons to have caused it. But he traces most of them to lack of seasoning.

"Singlehandedly, Agee turned Bendix into a fiefdom of Allied," said Jennings, who teaches at Michigan State University, counsels corporate chief executives, and has written many books on management and leadership.

His reference was to Agee's attempt to take over Martin Marietta Corp., which in turn sought to control Agee's Bendix Corp., creating a stalemate and an opening for Allied Corp. to buy Bendix and its Martin Marietta shares.

Subsequently, Agee, 45, resigned after having asked for and being denied the title of chief operating officer of Bendix, the company he headed before embarking on his ill-fated acquisition program.

"Every board room in the land now should know enough not to allow an unseasoned executive at the helm," said Jennings. He considers Agee, who received a masters in business administration from Harvard in 1963 and a senior vice presidency from Boise

Cascade eight years later, to be unseasoned.

The Agee experience, he said, also should "put a chill into the spine of Agee-types who, as freshly minted MBAs, rush up the staff-side ladder, hoping to slide over and become chief executives."
