

Preacher is behind bars after going over the fence at Pantex

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

PANHANDLE - The preacher has had some unusual congregations, but today the only crowd he can draw is from fellow prisoners in the Carson County Jail.

It seems the preacher went beyond the wrong fence, because behind that Carson County fence is ground zero and the plant where the nation's nuclear bombs are built.

And the heavily-armed guards who watch the facility night and day are trained to let unannounced intruders know they aren't exactly welcome.

The Methodist preacher whom law officers said entered the off-limits area of the Pantex Plant Wednesday night, has been bounced around various Panhandle congregations since he first made his views on nuclear weapons known.

Former Amarillo pastor Charles Scott Andress was arrested about 10 p.m. Wednesday inside the grounds of Pantex, located about 30 miles west of Pampa, just off U.S. 60 in Carson County.

He is charged with criminal trespass this morning, a state misdemeanor charge which carries a maximum penalty of six months in jail and, or a $1,000 fine.

Andress was held in jail in lieu of $1,000 bond this morning - but he said he doesn't want out. He has no lawyer - but he said he doesn't want one. Sheriff Connie Reed said this morning.

"You can't cram something down a man's throat, if he doesn't want it," Reed said.

"He said he expected to be arrested," the sheriff said the preacher told him.

The minister was arrested because he wanted to call attention to his opposition to nuclear weapons, he said.

The preacher's protest at the plant Wednesday was not his first. Andress participated in a demonstration at the plant Feb. 10, 1981.

"The use of nuclear weapons is totally contrary to my interpretation of the gospel of Jesus Christ," the minister said during the earlier demonstration.

When he made his views known, a committee of his Amarillo congregation asked church officials to assign the church a new preacher.

Andress was reassigned to a church in Kress and later moved on to Dumas. A church official said the protesting preacher is currently on leave of absence from the Dumas church.

Three other protesters, who live out of state, were arrested trying to scale a fence at the plant Wednesday morning, just hours before the preacher's arrest, officers reported.

The three were quickly indicted on federal charges of criminal trespass and face a maximum penalty of one year in federal prison and, or, a $5,000 fine.

The Pantex Plant is operated under the authority of the Department of Energy and is the final assembly point for all nuclear weapons in the U.S. arsenal.

Teens will tackle tough problems in mock lawmaker session

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

Should the drinking age be lowered? Should abortion be outlawed? Should the insanity defense for murder be changed?

These are some of the questions to be discussed by a mock legislature Saturday when Pampa area teenagers participate in a day-long session simulating state government.

Under the guidance of State Representative Foster Whaley of Pampa and State Senator Bill Sarpalius of Hereford, Model Legislature IV, which is open to the public, will meet at the Pampa High School library starting with registration at 8 a.m.

Rep. Whaley will serve as Speaker of the House and Sen. Sarpalius will be the President of the Senate. Any area student who wants a first-hand experience in the legislative process may serve in either the Senate or House of Representatives.

Committees will hear witnesses both for and against the legislation during the morning session.

The students will hear witnesses for and against legislation dealing with abolishing the insanity defense in criminal cases, lowering the drinking age, and requiring hospitals to provide people with emergency medical treatment regardless of their ability to pay.

In the afternoon session the House will meet in the library and the Senate in the cafeteria to discuss the bills. They will actually debate the bills in a manner similar to the Texas legislature.

"They actually get pretty heated" in their debates, said John Warner, general chairman of the event.

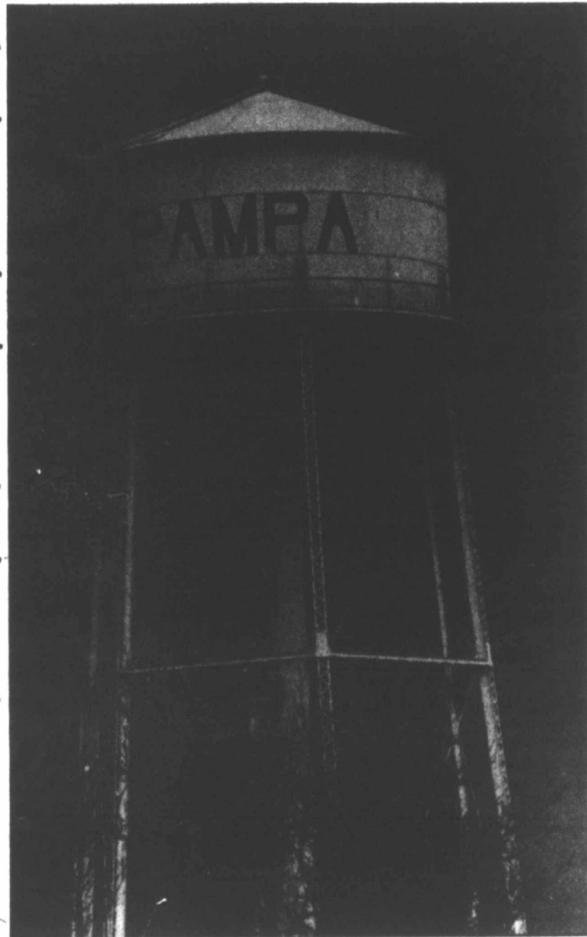

Whaley serves on the Appropriations and County Affairs committees in the Texas House of Representatives. He is Chairman of the Standing Committee on Budget and Oversight. Sarpalius is a member of the Education and Natural Resources committees. He is the Chairman of the Sub-committee on Agriculture and a member of the State Affairs Committee.

About 80 students were signed up and the sponsors are encouraging any area high school student to join the "legislature" Saturday.

The Kiwanis, Optimist Club, and various school departments are sponsoring the event.

It was a dark and stormy

These ominous black clouds appeared during Thursday's lunch hour, suggesting a lot of rain or a storm about to drop on Pampa. But the rain was light, and the big black clouds moved on out in the early afternoon. (Staff photo by Bruce Lee Smith)

Murder law questioned

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) - The fate of hundreds of persons convicted of murder in Texas may be drastically altered after the full Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin hears arguments next week on the wording of the state murder statute.

All nine justices will convene Wednesday to consider the wording of Section 19.02 of the Texas Penal Code, which deals with murder.

If the court agrees with the Dec. 15, 1982 determination of a three-judge panel of its members, hundreds of persons charged and convicted of murder will either have to be re-tried or freed, the Corpus Christi Caller-Times reports.

The statute, in effect since 1974, states in one provision that "a person commits an offense if he intends to cause serious bodily injury and commits an act clearly dangerous to human life that causes the death of an individual."

But Justice Sam Houston Clinton, writing the panel's opinion, said the statute must say "an individual did then and there commit an act clearly dangerous to human life which said defendant intended or knew was clearly dangerous to human life."

The difference is subtle but insidious, says Bell County's chief appellate attorney, Ralph Petty.

"It's like saying, yes, I had a gun and I intended to shoot this person and do him a lot of damage, but I didn't intend to kill him or I didn't know I was going to kill him," Petty said.

The case which brought about Clinton's opinion came from Petty's own Bell County. David Lugo-Lugo, a soldier at Fort Hood in Killeen, was convicted in April, 1978, of killing a 25-month-old child by kicking it in the abdomen and rupturing his liver.

"We're saying this (Clinton's opinion) fundamentally changes the nature of the statute," Petty said. "I do not believe that Clinton's reasoning is sound. He is confusing what is a very clear and workable statute."

For now, nothing has changed in the life of Lugo-Lugo. He remains in the state penitentiary and "I intend to keep him there," Petty said.

But at least two attorneys in Corpus Christi have made preliminary moves to attempt to free their clients under the Lugo-Lugo banner.

Attorney Douglas Tinker filed preliminary papers in district court this week to have one of his clients, convicted of killing her adopted child, set free.

Tinker said Clinton's opinion "makes sense to me. It's fairly clear that that's what the statute intended."

Three file for city commission election

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO
Staff Writer

Three Pampa residents have filed to run for city commission seats, including a woman who is reportedly only the second woman to run for office in Pampa in at least 15 years. Two commission seats are open and will be filled on April 2 at Pampa municipal elections.

R. W. (Bob) Curry has filed for the Ward 1 seat now held by O. M. Prigmore. Prigmore was moved from Ward 1 to Ward 2 as a result of a charter-change election last year. Curry has lived in Pampa since 1936, and is president and owner of Four R Industrial Supply, which has stores in Pampa, Borger and Guymon, Okla.

Prigmore may decide to run for the Ward 2 seat now held by Calvin Whately, who will resign from the commission on Tuesday. Whately has filed as a candidate for the mayor's job, now held by Mayor H. R. (Ray) Thompson. Thompson announced Tuesday that he will not run for reelection.

Vickie Moose, who has lived in Pampa all her life, has filed for the Ward 3 seat which will be vacated by commissioner Melvin Hammon. Hammon has not formally filed for reelection.

Moose and her husband have one son, and she is a corporate secretary for C & E Propane, Inc., and runs a temporary employment service called Temporarily Yours in Pampa.

"I feel I'm qualified for the job, and now is the time for a change," she said today. Moose may also be the only woman ever to run for city commission, according to city secretary Erma Hipsler.

E. L. (Smiley) Henderson has also filed for the Ward 3 seat. He is a chartered life underwriter (CLU) with Equitable Life Insurance of Pampa. He has lived in Pampa since 1932, and he and his wife Betty have four children.

"My candidacy is a matter of offering myself to be of service to a community that I've enjoyed the benefits of over the years. I'd like to see Pampa kept up."

Dow, Fields file for office

Dr. Dwight H. Dow and Kenneth Fields have filed to run for the two school board places which will become vacant April 2.

Dow, who is running to fill place 7 on the board, was defeated in his last bid for election to a place on the Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees.

Fields is running for re-election to his seat at place 6 on the board.

Requests by candidates to have their name placed on the ballot for the election must be in writing and filed with the secretary of the board not later than March 2, 1983. School board elections will be held April 2, 1983 as prescribed by state law.

Weather

The weekend will be cool and dry in Pampa. Tonight will fair and cold with lows in the mid 30s. Saturday will be partly cloudy, windy and cooler than today, with highs in the mid 50s. Winds will be out the west at 15 to 20 mph, shifting to northwest 20 to 30 mph late Saturday.

$25,000 reward offered for tax fanatic

By KENT FLANAGAN

JAMESTOWN, N.D. (AP) - After four days of futile searching, the U.S. Marshal Service is offering a $25,000 reward for the arrest of an anti-tax radical accused of killing two marshals, because "the perpetrator is so dangerous."

The announcement Thursday night came hours after a small army of law enforcement officers searched three houses in Ashley and a farm in nearby

Wishek without finding the protester, Gordon Kahl.

"This is the first time we've offered a reward of this amount," said U.S. Marshal Howard Safir. "We do this because we feel that this case is so significant and that the perpetrator is so dangerous that the sooner we can get him apprehended, the better off the citizens of North Dakota and of the country will be."

The reward will be paid for information leading to Kahl's arrest, Safir said.

Kahl, 63, has been wanted since Sunday night, when two marshals were shot to death and another was wounded critically as they tried to arrest Kahl for violating probation on a 1977 income tax evasion conviction.

During Thursday's searching, more than a dozen vehicles carrying 50 to 60 law enforcement officers drove from Jamestown to Ashley, a prairie town of 1,200 residents 10 miles from the South Dakota border.

The officers sealed off highways into Ashley, where they searched the homes of three men involved in a local anti-tax movement, authorities said. They have said Kahl was active in Posse Comitatus, a right-wing paramilitary organization that opposes federal taxation.

Mike Phillips, one of the three, said in a telephone interview that an FBI agent called him about 9:30 a.m. and said his house was surrounded and he should come out peacefully.

"I said, 'Hey, you bet. Right away. I want no trouble,'" Phillips recounted. "I walked out across the road. They said they had a search warrant and asked me if Gordon Kahl was in there."

Phillips said Kahl hadn't been there since a meeting nearly two weeks ago.

"I think they pretty well know I wasn't there (at the shooting) and wasn't involved in anything," Phillips said. "I told them I didn't know where Gordon was and never have advocated any type of violence."

The FBI agent in charge of the search, Richard Blay of Minneapolis, accused reporters of tipping off Kahl to the search in Ashley by reporting that a law enforcement convoy was en route from Jamestown, but later took the charges back.

Blay said Thursday night that Kahl simply "wasn't there this morning" and had not been scared off.

Agents also searched an unoccupied farm in the Wishek area, about 10 miles northwest of Ashley. Blay said no one was found, although someone had been in the buildings within the last few days.

Job Hunter

Ernie Moreno has done everything from loading groceries in a warehouse to welding and carpentry. He has lived in Pampa for two years and has a wife and child. He's been out of work for three months and has been as far as Amarillo looking for work.

Moreno has seven years experience as a grocery-produce handler, and has done some welding and carpentry as well. He has also worked in building, running and fixing pumps and painted and worked on cars. He would like to learn to do bodywork on cars as well.

In addition, he has worked on the "kill floor" of a slaughterhouse and driven a tractor-trailer. He holds a Texas DPS commercial license to drive truck. He has also been a security guard.

He'd like to drive a school bus or work as a janitor in a school. Also, he'd like to be an interpreter, since he is fluent in both Spanish and English. Among other jobs he'd like to train in are police work and telephone repair.

He says he is willing to relocate, and is a good worker.

Employment Commission, Coronado Center, at 665-0938.

Maybe it was Big Bird...

VALLEY FALLS, Kan. (AP) - An alarmed motorist thought the situation warranted a call to the Highway Patrol. "You won't believe this," the caller said, "but I think I just saw an ostrich."

Their curiosity piqued after Thursday's call, a trooper and Jefferson County deputies drove to an area on Kansas 4 south of Valley Falls, in northeast Kansas, and soon helped capture a plucky gray-and-white rhea.

a South American ostrich.

The rhea belongs to a retired Valley Falls veterinarian. It and another rhea were discovered missing from their pen on Monday.

The second bird was still missing, and believed to be wandering the countryside. Authorities were advised by the owner that the birds have "a mean kick" and should be handled carefully.

Rain halts search for woman

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) - Soaking rains have halted the search for a woman authorities believe was murdered and buried in her backyard.

Herman E. "Cowboy" Bennett, a 47-year-old oilfield worker, was released Tuesday after being held in $50,000 bail on murder charges for three weeks because his wife's body had not been found. Capt. Gene Smith of the Brazoria County sheriff's office said.

The charges were dropped. Smith said the investigation will continue but hard rains early this week forced officers to stop their excavations with a backhoe.

"It's just too wet. It looks like from the rain yesterday (Tuesday) it'll be a week or two before we can get back in there," Smith said.

Pupils see parents caught by INS

DALLAS (AP) - Some elementary school students saw their parents being taken away by federal immigration agents during a roundup of illegal aliens staged near a predominately Hispanic school, teachers said.

Students, teachers and school officials were able to watch federal agents load suspected undocumented workers on a government bus parked outside a nearby recreation center Thursday, officials at Mount Auburn Elementary School said.

Teachers explained what was happening, but some said their students already knew.

"To see the kids staring out the windows and seeing their parents being put on that bus, it was heartbreaking," said Mara Estrada, a teacher. "They know what that bus is."

Many pupils were forced to spend Thursday night with neighbors or relatives, not knowing whether or when their parents would return, according to school staff members.

"There were several uncles and relatives here today (after the roundup) telling the kids not to go home tonight, but to go to the uncle's house," said teacher Cindy Berry. "It made me sick."

"I understand they've got a job to do, but it seems they could have found a better way," said Bill Wiseman, assistant principal.

Trapper works in the shadow of progress

By SUSAN MILLIKEN
Beaumont Enterprise & Journal

ROSE CITY, Texas (AP) - The threads of fur trapper Abdy Moreau's life intertwine and tangle in a host of contradictions.

First, there's the trapper himself. He can gently wipe barbecue sauce off a child's mouth one second and then attack his own meal with a Bowie knife moments later.

Second, there is the way in which he discusses his work. He stands, swarthy and weather-beaten in his tanning shed, wearing a pistol and a couple of knives on his belt. He explains how to prepare the skin before stretching it.

"I have to remove all the tissue or the hide will decay and the fur will pull out," Moreau says, flipping the carcass inside out to show the fatty tissue inside. Once the tissue is removed, he stretches the hide on a board for a few days until it dries.

The tanning shed holds a funky aroma, and the sight of skins hanging up to dry tends to make the uninitiated a bit queasy.

Moreau possesses such professionalism and tact, however, that his matter-of-fact explanation of fur preparation could easily be carried on over tea and little cakes.

The last set of contrasts comes from the marsh where Moreau works. He can see the Edison Plaza and the Mobil Oil refinery if he looks up while checking his traps. As he eyes those monuments to civilization, he has to beware of water moccasins and of stepping into mudholes too deep to handle.

"I carry a walking stick everywhere I go and check each step," Moreau says as he demonstrates a spot of marsh, just a few feet off the road, that easily could absorb a grown man.

Moreau drives down the road, shining a light out the window of his truck. When an animal is caught in one of his traps, the eyes will shine back in the dark.

At one point Moreau sees a nutria (he calls them "nutra rats") caught in another trapper's setup.

He stops his truck and knocks the animal out so it won't suffer waiting for the other trapper to show up.

"I believe animals were put on this Earth for us to use, but there's no reason for them to suffer. That's why I check my traps before sunrise. I want to get the animal out as soon as I can so they don't suffer any more than need be," Moreau says.

"I use leg-hole traps, which some bleeding hearts will tell you are cruel. I've been caught myself in my traps plenty of times. One time a buddy had to get me out of it. After about 10 minutes, you go numb and don't feel pain anymore."

"Some people say we should use live traps, but live traps weigh 40 pounds apiece, and in the terrain I have to cover, there's no way I could get around with a bunch of 40-pound traps."

Woman goes free after shooting her husband for beating her up

By KURT J. REPANSHEK

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) - A trial that tracked six years of savage beatings and mental torment ended with a courtroom full of spectators cheering an innocent verdict for a 29-year-old woman accused of murdering her husband.

"The community has spoken, and justice has been done," defense attorney Allan Karlin said Thursday after the Monongalia County Circuit Court jury acquitted Lorraine Momen.

Mrs. Momen, who was charged with first-degree murder, never denied shooting Wayman Momen last June 21. But she contended that she killed her husband only after enduring years of physical and mental abuse.

"I'd like to think I could have done something else," Mrs. Momen said minutes after the jury returned its verdict. "I'd like to have had another alternative."

The seven-woman, five-man jury deliberated just 40 minutes. Mrs. Momen burst into tears as spectators stood and cheered the verdict.

The crowd included members of a women's group who had said the case showed the failure of authorities and society to protect battered women.

Ms. Momen said she never will recover from the trauma of the shooting last summer or the six years of abuse that preceded it.

"I think you never get over being abused," she said. "It's Missing ham has the governor smoking...

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - A renegade ham is being held unlawfully in Kentucky, says Gov. Robert D. Orr, who has signed extradition papers to bring the bacon back home to Indiana.

Orr won the ham in a wager with Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown over the outcome of a Dec. 22 basketball game between Indiana University and the University of Kentucky.

"The bottom line is, you have to kill animals eventually for the hide or for the meat or whatever. I try to be as humane as I can," Moreau says.

The trapper wears a hat with a feather and two locks of hair tucked into the headband.

"The hair comes from two scalps taken in 1869. Do you believe that?" Moreau teases.

Actually, Moreau wears the locks of hair in keeping with Indian tradition.

"One lock of hair is from my wife, the other from my first-born. They bring me good luck," Moreau says with a grin.

Moreau has the air of a man who makes his own luck. He's been trapping in the Rose City marshes since he was 10 or 11 years old.

"My mother died when I was a baby, and my father had lung disease and had to live in a dry climate. My mother's folks raised me here in the marsh, and my uncles knew their way around it."

"I was so small when I started trapping that I had to skin my animals out here in the marsh, because they were too heavy for me to carry back home," Moreau says.

The tradition of the Cajun trapper will be carried on.

"When my boy is out of school, he comes down here and traps with me. Some of these traps weigh four pounds. Carrying a dozen of them on your back is some chore."

"He never complains, though. He enjoys being out here."

Lethal injection

Dr. Juan Perez and wife Argelia walk from the courtroom in Monahans Tuesday afternoon during jury selection where Perez is on trial for attempted murder and aggravated assault. The state alleges Perez attempted to kill 27-year-old Michael Hoffman by injecting air into the man's veins. (AP Laserphoto)

Doctor's trial could be landmark

MONAHANS, Texas (AP) — Defense and prosecuting attorneys in the trial of a doctor accused of trying to hasten the death of a mortally wounded patient have just one more chance to sway a jury that includes 10 of the physician's patients.

Cuban-born Dr. Juan Perez Valladares is accused of trying to hasten the death of a dying gunshot victim by injecting 20 cubic centimeters of air into one of the patient's veins.

Presiding State District Judge Joe Connally of Odessa told attorneys to present their final arguments today in what he said is the "first trial on murder by air injection in Texas" and perhaps the first in the nation.

The American Medical Association's law department in Chicago said Thursday that no physician has ever been convicted of attempted murder or murder for injecting air into a patient's blood stream.

Perez, 57, is charged with attempting to kill Michael S. Hoffman on Nov. 4, 1981, while the Bloomington, Ind., truck driver was being treated at Ward Memorial Hospital in Monahans.

Two attending nurses, Brenda Rowan and Peggy Brown, testified Hoffman died within two minutes after they saw Perez inject air into the patient's blood stream.

However, pathologist Richard Cohen said the bullet fired through Hoffman's head 40 minutes earlier was the cause of death, not an injection of air.

Perez has denounced allegations by the attending nurses, the hospital administrator and an ambulance driver that he confessed to the injection.

The nurses also testified that Perez complained that he was tired the evening of the incident and wanted to go home.

And they said the Havana native, a popular Monahans physician for 15 years, violated medical ethics when he collected urine and blood samples from Hoffman before the victim had died.

Hoffman had been shot once above his left eyebrow at point-blank range during a barroom brawl in Monahans, a West Texas town of 9,000.

James Ralph Echols of El Paso has been charged with shooting the 28-year-old and is being held on a 1982 robbery charge in Riverside, Calif.

Cohen also testified it would take 100 to 300 cubic centimeters of air injected rapidly to kill an adult.

But Cohen said he was perplexed by allegations that Perez, one of five town doctors, injected air into the victim to cause an embolism. An embolism is a mass of air that travels through the bloodstream to the heart and causes heart failure, Cohen said.

"There is no known therapeutic benefit to injecting air into a human," he said.

The defense rested its case Thursday without calling Perez.

Thursday, 31 witnesses, including two priests and two nurses, testified Perez was a gentle practitioner and was incapable of committing a violent act.

"He's a good man and a good doctor. He likes baseball and is interested in youth. That's the type of man he is," oil executive Bill Hammett said.

A highly partisan crowd echoed Hammett's feelings and gasped when allegations against Perez were made in court.

"Everyone who knows Dr. Perez knows he is not a murderer," Joe Bravo said.

Attending nurse Thresa Johnson testified Thursday she never saw the doctor try to harm Hoffman.

"We were just trying to help him breathe," she said.

What is likely to be tested is whether the jury is favorably disposed to Perez. Ten jurors were empaneled despite acknowledging they or their family members were Perez' patients.

Perez belonged to the 2056 Brigade, a Miami-based, anti-Castro group.

Study details Texas water problems

AUSTIN (AP) — More than a year of work and 700 pages later, state water officials have been presented with a 50-year water plan that offers the same old dry picture.

"We do not have a solution to all the projected water demand quantities in the state," engineer Herbert Grubb told the Texas Water Development Board on Thursday.

Grubb, the board's director of planning and development, said conservation is more important than ever, but Texans cannot save their way to plentiful water.

The only hope, he told the board, is importing water from other states.

"We have identified surplus water, but the neighboring states have not volunteered to allow us to secure it."

The 700-page report — entitled "Water for Texas, Planning for the Future" — gives a basin-by-basin glimpse of the future. The report says it will cost $40.2 billion to try to keep up with the growing demand and shrinking supply of water.

Texans will get to comment on the report at hearings around the state in coming months. The board could revise the report after the hearings.

The state's first long-range water plan was produced in 1968. The report released Thursday updates the 1968 report and plugs in newer data.

"There's a lot more emphasis on conservation than there was in the past," Grubb said.

He told reporters that the biggest waste of water for household use is watering of lawns. However, he said household conservation can only make a small dent in the overall problem. In 1980, agriculture accounted for 72 percent of the water used in Texas.

"The big payoff is in agriculture," he said. "By 2020, even if conservation is fully implemented, the water (in the High Plains) would support only 70 percent of the 5.7 million acres now under irrigation."

Texas' major cities face crises before the end of the century, according to the report.

Portions of the Dallas-Fort Worth area are in good shape beyond 2010, but other Metroplex suburbs could be in trouble by 1990, according to Grubb.

Judge blocks mail delivery

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Mail addressed to Money Tree, a Fort Worth-based organization accused of operating a chain letter scheme, will continue to pile up in a post office here because a federal judge issued an injunction blocking its delivery.

U.S. District Judge David O. Belew Jr. on Thursday issued the preliminary injunction preventing operation of Money Tree until an administrative postal service hearing determines if the operation is legal.

Postal officials are trying to shut down Money Tree, which they say is an illegal scheme because it is not selling a product.

Since Belew issued a temporary restraining order last week, 1,000 pieces of mail addressed to Money Tree have piled up here, postal officials said.

Money Tree attorney Jim Shaw said 25,000 people are involved in the organization, many of them in Texas and Louisiana. Money Tree is legal, Shaw contends, because the company sells a quarterly newsletter for the $20 fee.

"It's working for some people. I think people are caught up in it," Shaw said of Money Tree. "It's kind of a faddish thing for them to do — a $20 fling."

Local officials in Shreveport also were investigating the Money Tree operation.

"There has been some suggestion in inquiries made to this office that although the solicitation is in substance a chain letter, it is somehow saved from illegality."

Crew unearths Civil War-era cannonballs

HOUSTON (AP) — A construction crew unearthed 75 cannonballs and mortar rounds — many still containing live explosives — that historians believe came from a Confederate supply ship pillaged after sinking in 1862, police said.

The rounds were found about noon Thursday on a National Car Rental Systems lot.

Ron Luce, the firm's manager, said a Coyote Construction Co. crew was excavating a drainage ditch about three-feet deep when "they just started popping up."

Sgt. Bobby Morgan of the Houston Police Department's bomb squad said officers removed 65 cannonballs, ranging from the size of a baseball to a bowling ball, and about 10 mortar-style rounds 10 inches by 4 inches.

Morgan said the ammunition would be detonated at an undisclosed location because much of it still contained black powder, which if kept dry retains its blasting capability even after more than a century.

Historians believe the cannonballs date back to the Civil War because they were round, like those used for muzzle-loading cannons, Morgan said. That type became obsolete soon after the war and was replaced by cylindrical, breech-loaded shells, he said.

Carroll Lewis, a Houston historian, said several cannonballs have been found in downtown Houston because a supply ship sank and a Civil War munitions plant were looted after Union troops occupied the city.

Lewis said young boys would haul away cannonballs and other wartime artifacts aboard the sunken ship when the water in Buffalo Bayou dropped.

Dangerous ignorance

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — At a time when the country desperately needs national leadership to guide its transition from an industrial to a technological society, this city's politicians generally remain oblivious to the importance of that issue.

Many members of Congress refuse to even acknowledge the fact that uncounted thousands of jobs in the auto, steel and other traditional "smokestack" industries have been irretrievably lost while employment opportunities in high-technology fields are becoming available at an accelerating rate — but can be filled only by those with the required training and skills.

The few farsighted legislators who have sought to focus public attention on the subject are derisively referred to by members of both political parties as "Atari Democrats."

President Reagan's lack of understanding of the profound change now underway in our society was embarrassingly obvious early in his term when he professed to be perplexed about why so many people were unemployed at a time when newspapers abounded with help wanted ads.

After belatedly discovering that the vast majority of the positions advertised required technical expertise not possessed by many job-seekers, the president made a special trip to the Boston area in late January to tour high-technology industries and job retraining centers.

But whatever concern the president may have expressed about what he accurately described as "a great transition period" was almost totally obliterated by his impromptu — and highly controversial — suggestion during the tour that the federal tax on corporate income ought to be abolished.

To further divert attention from the day's serious business, Reagan made a staged-for-television appearance at an Irish pub in Dorchester. As a result, the most memorable visual impressions of the trip were photos of the president hoisting aloft a mug of beer.

Reagan was absent and only a few members of Congress were present just a few days later when the Government Research Corp. held a day-long conference here on "High Technology Industries: Public Policies for the 1980s."

In a paper prepared for that conference, Dr. F. Karl Willenbrock, a member of the engineering faculty at Southern Methodist University warned:

"The weakness of the U.S. educational system, the failure of U.S. companies to use their technological workforce efficiently and a lack of public understanding of the technological basis of the U.S. economy can make the United States increasingly competitive in the global high technology race."

In another paper prepared for the conference, Pat Choate, a senior policy analyst for TRW, Inc., noted:

"The nation has no strategy or policy to identify and fill a number of key critical skill shortages... (or) to stimulate businesses to invest more in training of its own workers or to assist the 3 to 4 percent of the workforce that is permanently displaced from their jobs because of technology and trade-induced change."

A 1981 survey of member firms conducted by the American Electronics Association indicated that by 1985 there would be a need to fill more than 113,000 new engineering positions and 140,000 paraprofessional engineering jobs.

But a recent report from a special commission established by the National Science Board found that "as many as one-third of the nation's 21,000 secondary schools do not offer sufficient mathematics to qualify their graduates for admission to accredited engineering schools."

Even more striking in the report on "Today's Problems, Tomorrow's Crises" was the finding that fully 25 percent of all mathematics offerings at the nation's four-year public colleges are remedial courses.

In addition to adequately preparing new entrants to the job market, it is crucial to retrain current members of the workforce because today's adults will comprise 90 percent of the workforce in 1990 and 75 percent in 2000.

Those education and retraining challenges must be met, warns Choate, because what's at stake is nothing less than "the longer term fate of the U.S. economy and the well-being of virtually all citizens."

See no evil

When governments indulge in censorship as a matter of policy and then decide (as they seem to do at one time another) that the criteria may not be perfect, or that there ought to be an exception here or there, the results can be amusing. The latest example comes from the Philippines, where First Lady Imelda Marcos is sponsoring a film festival that is showing some films heretofore banned by the government headed by her husband.

Lady Imelda, of course, isn't about to attack the government policy of censorship moves as a matter of course. But her very own special festival was designed to be a showcase for the cultural development sponsored and supported by the enlightened government and was therefore exempted from the normal censorship laws. Manila Cardinal Jaime Sin (that's his real name) objected, citing the damage that might be done to Filipino youth if some uncensored sex scenes were displayed.

Imelda then came up with enough anti-censorship cliches to choke a charter ACLU member. "I never argue with the church. I never argue with God," she said as a preface. But...

"Hopefully our people will be mature enough and sophisticated enough to know what is good and what is bad. I am sorry that cheap pornography has affected some very fragile senses, but this is part of growing up." Maybe expensive pornography would be less affecting. "Pornography is not in sight or in vision. Pornography is in the mind or heart." Filipinos over 18 (we do have some standards) who attend the festival "are not going to be destroyed by a movie or two here and there."

As it turned out, the festival evidently demonstrated and enhanced the cultural enlightenment. Imelda has been trying so hard to promote. Though ticket prices were doubled, theaters were jammed, with the emphasis on spicy flicks that had been banned previously. According to the Associated Press, the most popular entry was an item called "Virgin People," a previously banned vehicle featuring Filipina starlet Pepsi Paloma, "who appeared nude in torrid scenes of lovemaking."

You don't suppose that all the embarrassment will cause the Philippine government to think twice about the advisability of banning movies, do you? Probably not.

If banning movies all year-round creates suppressed demand and a box-office bonanza for the First Lady's very own festival, the government will probably be reluctant to let commercial exhibitors get in on the action.

Somebody, however, should remind Imelda Marcos of her remarks in the context of an effort to repeal government film censorship altogether.

For better and worse

By Don Graff

OK, here we go again. In its news coverage, the Wall Street Journal is a paragon among newspapers.

BUT...

The latest and highly successful effort of the WSJ to tick us off is a recent editorial. The subject is one that has received some exposure in this space — some might say overexposure.

El Salvador. Specifically, the Reagan administration's straight-faced certification to Congress a few days back that the fractured Salvadoran government — an assembly dominated by the radical right, an army holding the real power and a figurehead president, installed by the latter and largely ignored by the former — has advanced the human rights of Salvadorans because "only" some 5,000 of them have perished in the last year at the hands, it is widely accepted in the majority of cases, of agents of their own government. That government is thus deemed worthy of continued U.S. aid.

What ticks off the WSJ is criticism of the certification. The editorialist magnanimously allows that most of the critics — who include a very large chunk of Congress and much of the media beyond the jurisdiction of the WSJ's editors — are not motivated by enthusiasm for Soviet imperialism, in which the WSJ finds both cause and significance of the unpleasantness in El Salvador.

No, theirs is another heresy entirely.

"They are people who think the United States lost in Vietnam because its political objectives were evil, a source of needless bloodshed. As vindication of their position on Vietnam, they hold that U.S. hegemony over any part of the world, even close to the U.S. border, is unjustified."

Well, it goes to show again that whenever you get to wondering just how distorted the view of the world from the WSJ editorial page can get, it can be counted on to do its damndest to show you.

There is, of course, a Vietnam connection — but not the one the WSJ makes. It is the alarming propensity of the United States to allow itself to be sucked into a winless situation deeper than anyone ever intended because the policymakers refuse to recognize when the time has come to cut losses.

But the issue of most concern to most critics is more fundamental. It is not a question of whether the administration's objectives in El Salvador, and Central America in general, are evil but whether they are in the real interests of the United States.

They are not. The maintenance of hegemony, even should that have its short-term political advantages, is not worth the long-term alienation of populations that is the inevitable consequence of identifying American interests with repressive regimes that deservingly earn the hatred of their own peoples.

The greatest American handicap in advancing our real interests in Latin America is the American record there. Administration after administration has lined up time after time with rapacious thugs pretending to be strong leaders in the mistaken belief that they represent stability.

With the result that when a despot finally gets the boot — a Batista in Cuba, a Somoza in Nicaragua — the popular rage is also directed at the United States, and it can virtually be guaranteed that the new regime will be hostile.

In the world according to WSJ and others who prefer myth to truth, it is always someone or something else that bears responsibility for the American setback, a malevolent outside force such as Soviet imperialism. Or the liberal American press.

See Cuba, Fidel Castro, Herbert Matthews and the New York Times. Matthews and the Times did not create Castro. Years of misrule in Cuba did that. And, by bringing him to world attention, they did not enable him to overthrow Batista. Batista's own brutal excesses did that.

Well, does any of this really matter? After all, most Americans aren't supposed to be all that interested in what goes on to our south.

Yes it does. And we ought to be.

We have some degree of choice elsewhere in the world in selecting the peoples with whom we are closely associated. Not in the Americas. Geography has pre-selected them.

We cannot afford to be the agents of their alienation.

Look to Maine

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Many conservatives are enthused about so-called enterprise zones. The concept of the enterprise zone involves freedom from some of the regulatory red tape and taxation that makes it difficult for new businesses to get started. It is a flawed concept, however, for only specially designated areas would enjoy the opportunities that all enterprises should enjoy. It amounts to a special privilege for selected businesses.

The market economy offers much more promise in the long run. The rapid changeover to computer capitalism is creating all sorts of new business opportunities, including opportunities for revival of areas long in economic decline.

A friend of mine, who is a shrewd investor, is betting on the State of Maine. To most people, that is an unlikely area for growth. This beautiful Northeast state, once a center of maritime activity, has been going downhill for years. Its principal asset is tourism in the summer months. The climate is forbidding, and high energy costs have worked against the revival of Maine's handsome old towns.

My investor friend sees much change in the future. He points out that the Boston area is the hub of high-tech businesses in the Eastern half of the country. This area is doing very well, despite the recession. Many observers of the business scene believe that the Boston area will become increasingly prosperous in the 1980s and 1990s. Among other things, the city will provide a showcase center for high technology research and development.

As commercial rents rise in the Boston area, computer-related industries may look to area not distant from the New England metropolis. It may well be that Maine will attract many companies that want to relocate. The affluent, sophisticated types associated with the computer industry are likely to enjoy what Maine has to offer — a beautiful setting, freedom from urban crowding and social pressures, a low crime rate, and inexpensive real estate.

If this hunch is correct, the State of Maine will regain much of the prosperity that it enjoyed in the 19th century when shipbuilding, coastal shipping, and forest industries provided a solid base for the good life. Already, the city of Portland has undergone an attractive restoration.

Thus, economy of New England could enjoy a major boost — all without government subsidy or special privilege.

I couldn't have done it alone

By ART BUCHWALD

It's hard to imagine what happens to a person who lives in a town that has won the Super Bowl. For Washington, D.C., a city that never gets any respect, you have to be very careful so all the adulation doesn't go to your head.

I am happy to report as a Redskin fan I've kept the greatest football victory in modern history in its proper perspective.

It hasn't been easy, because ever since the final whistle of Super Bowl XVII blew I've been taking calls from all over the country from friends congratulating me on the championship.

On Monday, when the first one came in, I resorted to what I now realize was false modesty. When the caller said, "Congratulations, you were magnificent," I responded, "I had nothing to do with the win, though of course I am happy with the results."

"What do you mean you had nothing to do with it? You've been a Redskin fan for years. Jack Kent Cooke, the owner, and Joe Gibbs, the coach, said on nationwide television they couldn't have won the championship without the fans."

"We were always there when they needed us," I admitted.

"But just because you root a team doesn't mean you can take any credit when it wins."

"It's typical of someone like you to play your role," he said. "But I want you to know I am proud I have a friend in Washington who never lost faith that his team would win all the Super Bowl marbles."

The calls kept coming in — from Oklahoma City, Chicago, Los Angeles, and even Dallas, congratulating me on the magnificent victory I had achieved.

By early afternoon I decided to drop the pose that I had nothing to do with the Redskin triumph.

When a call came in from an old college schoolmate in San Francisco, I changed my tune.

"I never thought when we roomed together that someday you would be a Super Bowl champion," he said.

"I couldn't do it alone," I told him. "There were 49 other guys on the field that I have to share the triumph with. The thing that did it for us is that we played together as a team."

"But you were a believer from the beginning. It was your inspiration that defeated the Miami Dolphins."

"I only did what any Redskin fan would do under the circumstances. I yelled my heart out."

"I know you're just saying that, but I'm sure you had a lot more to do with it than that."

"Let's just say it was a team effort and let it be at that. I don't want any of the other Redskins to think I'm getting more than my share of the credit."

By late afternoon I decided I had been protesting too much.

When Bob Markay, a Jet fan from Long Island, called to say if anyone had to win the Super Bowl he was glad it was me, I told him, "After my game against Dallas, I was sure I could beat the Dolphins. Their defense was overrated and I knew if I could open a hole for John Riggins, he would do what he was paid to do. In the fourth quarter when we were down 17 to 13, I told Joe Theismann, my quarterback, 'The game isn't over until the fat lady sings.' It gave him new life, and the kid took it from there."

Bob said, "Nobody deserves a Super Bowl ring more than you."

"The ring is important," I told him. "But what really counts is that I'm finally going to get some respect."

That night when I got home I asked my wife if there were any calls.

"Why? Were you expecting any?"

"I thought President Reagan might call to congratulate me on my victory."

"Why would he call you?"

"Well, he telephoned the Redskin coach, Joe Gibbs, after the game. The least he could have done is call me."

"It's still early," she said. "Maybe he'll ring you after he gets a reaction to his budget."

"It really doesn't matter," I said. "I know I'm number one and he knows I'm number one, and that's the only thing that really counts."

Khadafy warns US Navy to keep away

By The Associated Press
Libyan strongman Col. Moammar Khadafy has threatened military action if Libya is "pushed too far" by U.S. naval maneuvers that might extend into Mediterranean waters claimed by his country.

He said the Gulf of Sidra will be turned into a "red gulf of blood" if the U.S. aircraft carrier Nimitz and its battle group move too far into the disputed waters in the southern Mediterranean off

Libya's north coast. "We will not permit America or any foreign state to enter the Gulf of Sidra or any other part of Libyan waters," Khadafy said Thursday in a speech to his Parliament. "The Libyan people are ready to fight to defend their land, their water and skies."

President Reagan has said there are no plans to engage U.S. forces in the region even if Libya clashes with its U.S.-backed neighbor Sudan.

But Reagan did say American troops are authorized to defend themselves if fired upon.

In August 1981, two U.S. jetfighters from the Nimitz shot down a pair of Libyan planes after being fired on while conducting war games over the gulf. The Nimitz and its battle group just completed another set of maneuvers in the area.

Today, the official Soviet news agency Tass denounced the U.S. naval movements as a "dangerous provocation ... a continuation of the U.S. anti-Libyan campaign."

Tass said the Pentagon's "provocative militarist fuss" was intended to "establish undivided rule of U.S. imperialism in the region through military pressure, undisguised blackmail and dictat."

Khadafy, in his speech, said, "Entering Sidra is an invasion of Libya. Libyan people want to live as free people and won't accept foreign occupation. The Gulf of Sidra will turn into a red gulf of blood if anyone tries to sail through it by force."

Some of the waters claimed by Libya are 100 miles from its coast. The United States recognizes a three-mile limit.

Khadafy, whose speech was broadcast by Libya's official JANA news agency, said the U.S. Navy, operating north of the Gulf of Sidra "forms a challenge to the Libyan nation. The Libyan people won't stand and watch idly if pushed too far."

Pentagon sources in Washington said the United States has sent AWACS surveillance planes to Egypt and moved the Nimitz 100 miles off Egypt's northwest coast to counter a Libyan aircraft buildup possibly aimed at Sudan.

Reagan said the radar surveillance planes were in the area for an exercise, and Egypt said its pilots were receiving routine training in use of the planes.

Pentagon sources who declined to allow use of their names said they received a report that Libyan planes recently flew out above the Nimitz. Planes from the carrier were aloft at the time, but there were no incidents, the sources said.

Adm. James D. Watkins, chief of U.S. naval operations, told the House Armed Services Committee that the Nimitz sailed from the coast of Lebanon for training operations in an area of the central Mediterranean claimed by Libya.

He said the carrier's assignment was not connected with Libyan military moves.

Reagan hedges on executive privilege

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration is now hedging on just what President Reagan meant when he promised not to assert executive privilege over documents Congress is seeking for investigations of the Environmental Protection Agency.

The White House on Thursday said the president was in no way dropping his claim of executive privilege.

At his press conference, Reagan said, "I can no longer insist on executive privilege if there's a suspicion in the minds of the people that maybe it is being used to cover some wrongdoing."

But deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Thursday that the president envisioned turning documents over to the Justice Department for review of possible wrongdoing, not to Congress.

The president's statement was "absolutely not" intended to waive executive privilege, Speakes said, adding that the issue was part of on-going discussions with Rep. Elliott H. Levitas, chairman of the House Public Works subcommittee.

The refusal of the administration to turn over dozen of documents to Levitas in December led to an historic contempt of Congress citation against EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch.

The administration is now offering to let Levitas and the ranking Republican member of the committee see the documents and make excerpts available to other members of the subcommittee. Negotiations between Levitas and the administration were expected to resume today.

"We're very confident an agreement will be worked out," said Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair. "It just remains for Levitas and (Deputy Attorney General) Edward C. Schmults to get together and nail it all down."

The negotiations were taking place as two House subcommittee chairmen promised more revelations today of mismanagement at the EPA. Reps. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., and Mike Synar, D-Okla., scheduled a news conference to discuss failings in the $1.6 billion "superfund" hazardous waste clean up program.

Scheuer and Synar are heading two of the six congressional investigations of the embattled EPA into allegations the superfund was manipulated for political purposes, that "sweetheart" deals were struck with polluters and that EPA officials violated conflict-of-interest laws.

In another development, sources inside and outside EPA said Thursday that John P. Horton, the EPA assistant administrator for administration, was under investigation for allegedly using a government secretary and phone for private business.

In addition, the FBI and the Justice Department are conducting their own probes. All the activity was triggered after Reagan last week fired Rita M. Lavelle, head of the hazardous waste program.

Michael Brown, named acting assistant administrator to replace Ms. Lavelle, confirmed Thursday night that Mrs. Gorsuch has referred several items to the Justice Department to investigate.

Army is seeking nerve gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rebuffed by Congress last year, the Reagan administration is launching a fresh drive to win approval for production of a new generation of nerve gas weapons.

Army officials are pushing for a nearly $140 million program which would include money to start turning out 155-millimeter shells to carry binary chemicals.

Binary weapons are those in which two non-lethal chemical components are packaged separately and then combine to form a killing nerve agent while the projectile carrying them is in flight toward a target.

Specialists contend the new binary weapons will not be dangerous either to military personnel handling them nor to civilians living around storage areas.

President Reagan appealed to Congress in 1982 to approve production of new lethal nerve gas weapons, contending they are needed to deter Soviet use of chemicals in a war.

Dear Abby
Wife's ears ring when widow calls on husband
 By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Four months ago my husband and I lost a very good friend and neighbor. Naturally we offered our condolences and help to this man's widow, who happens to be a very attractive woman about my age (middle 60s). Now my husband gets calls quite often. Her faucet is dripping, her furnace is making a noise, her storm window needs fixing, etc.

His last visit to her house lasted 44 minutes. And there's always a freshly baked apple pie waiting for him over there. (His favorite.)

Tomorrow he is taking her to the dentist! That's where I put my foot down. But he said he had already promised to take her, so off they went. Of course, this is only the first of three appointments. Another neighbor made a little joke about how attentive my husband has been to this widow. I laughed it off, but I was burning up inside.

What now? I feel better just putting this down on paper.
 GOOD OLD JANE

DEAR JANE: Don't be too "good" or you'll be old before your time, Jane. Tell your helpful hubby that the neighbors are talking and enough is enough already. Then go along for the ride. And while you're sitting between them, get Jane's recipe for the apple pie. Three may be a crowd, but there's safety in numbers.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but here goes: I am dating a younger man I'll call Jimmy. I am deeply in love with him. The problem is that there is this girl at work who is after him. (Let's call her Shirley.) Shirley is married, but she wants to have Jimmy's baby. She says she isn't in love with him, but her husband has a low sperm count and they can't seem to have a baby, which they want very much.

Jimmy tells me that he doesn't want to lose me but he would like to accommodate Shirley. He says he doesn't love her the way he loves me, but they have necked in his car a few times.

This hurts me, Abby, because Jimmy and I have talked about marriage and I was counting on maybe having a spring wedding.

Please tell me what to do.
 JUST ABOUT HAD IT

DEAR JUST: You don't say how "young" Jimmy is, but he sounds immature and naive. A man who would consider fathering a child as an accommodation is not ready for marriage. And the fact that he and Shirley have necked in his car a few times indicates that he has more than a casual interest in her. Wise up, and say goodbye to Jimmy.

DEAR ABBY: I recently read a verse in the letters to the editor column in the Youngstown (Ohio) Vindicator. I don't know whether it's original, but I think it's worth passing on. I hope you agree.
 NEWCASTLE READER

DEAR READER: I do. And here it is:

IT ISN'T THE CAR, IT'S THE DRIVER
 "Sir: It isn't the car that begins to whine when forced to stop for an old stop sign — it's the driver."
 "It isn't the car that takes a drink, then quickly loses its power to think — it's the driver."
 "It isn't the car that fails to heed the dangers of reckless, discourteous speed — it's the driver."
 "It isn't the car that steps on the gas and causes an accident trying to pass — it's the driver."
 "A car may be bent and twisted awry, but it isn't the car that will have to die — it's the driver."

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS
 What is a second cousin? Are you having difficulty establishing this type of kinship? Many people, including genealogists, are often confused by the proper kinship designation for their cousins.

A full cousin (whether first, second, third, etc.) is of the same descent you from the same ancestor. A "removed" cousin is a different generation from the same ancestor. The child of your first cousin would be your first cousin once removed and your children would be second cousins.

Dale Talkington, 400 E. Northrup Dr., Midwest City, Okla. 73110 has developed a chart known as "Cousin-Finder" that allows you to establish relationships easily. Be sure and include a self-addressed stamped business size envelope when writing for any copies.

Many of you know or are familiar with the column on genealogy by Kenneth H. Thomas Jr., which appears in the Sunday edition of The Atlanta Journal. Thomas' columns through Dec. 24, 1978 have been published and can be ordered from the author, P.O. Box 901 Decatur, Ga. 30031. Send $22 plus $1.50 postage and handling and request his book "Ken Thomas on Genealogy."

The book is good reading for those interested in history and genealogy no matter where you open the book. It contains 242 pages including 86 pages of index and a variety of material besides queries. Texans might be interested in his section on "Westward Bound Georgians" and anyone with Georgia relations would find the book beneficial. His column was devoted to questions and answers pertaining to Georgia genealogy and history.

A reader asked what to do when the date and place of birth are different on the census or do not correspond with known family information. Census records are notoriously inaccurate, especially with names, ages and places of birth. Often the name given the census taker was a nickname and then the following census the proper name would be given, allowing for confusion.

Female members of a family seem to gain only seven or eight years between each enumeration, while males seem to gain more than 10 years.

Doesn't this happen today? During the war years, ages of young men were often reported younger to avoid the draft. When a researcher is able to follow a family through the census for several enumerations these discrepancies usually clear enough to establish proof when combined with other data.

Kid's stuff

Children learn at an early age that what goes up, also comes down. To my dismay, my kids made that discovery the first time they threw their applesauce out of their bowls.

But if you're lucky, they graduate quickly to balls and paper airplanes. No matter what the age, children continue to be delighted by throwing things up and watching them float to the ground.

And that's why they'll love making their very own parachute complete with its very own little man. And Mothers, you'll love it, too, because it won't break your coffee table.

And what's more, you'll have most of the materials on hand. All you need are fabric scraps, yarn, empty thread spools, wooden beads and chenille bumps. (These look like fat pipe cleaners and can be found in most craft stores.)

To make the parachute, cut a piece of light cotton material about 17 inches square. Just above each corner of the square cut a small slit. You may also want to sew a 1/4-inch hem around the square.

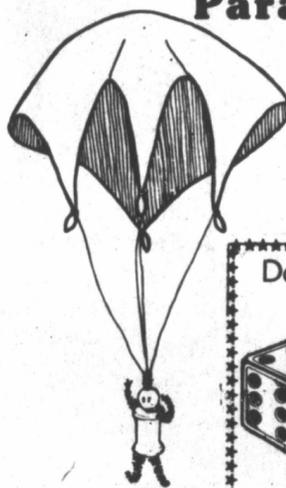

The empty thread spool will be the man's body. The wooden bead his head as the chenille bump will be his arms and legs.

Cut a 12-inch piece of chenille and fold it in half. Insert the looped end through the spool and then the bead, so it extends about 2 inches on each end. Twist the two pieces extending from the bottom to make the legs.

Cut a 5-inch piece of chenille and twist it around the doubled piece between the bead and spool to form the arms.

Cut three - ply yarn into four 20 - inch pieces. Tie one end of each piece through a slit in the parachute. Tie the opposite ends to the chenille loop above the head.

Draw a face on the bead, if you like, with a magic marker or acrylic paint.

Foursquare Gospel Church schedules special services

Evangelist Mike Lee of Pueblo, Colo., will present special services at the Foursquare Gospel Church, 712 Lefors, beginning tonight and continuing through Sunday. Services tonight and Saturday night will be at 7:30 p.m. Sunday services will be at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m.

A native Missourian, Lee has traveled throughout the nation in full-time faith ministry.

Lee is a graduate of the Southeast Missouri State University School of Music and for three years was a music instructor for a consolidated school district in southeast Missouri.

He and his wife Hallie have recorded four albums, including their latest release titled "Rejoice...Rejoice."

Satellite seminar set at Victory Faith Fellowship

A live "via satellite" teaching seminar will be conducted at Victory Faith Fellowship, 523 W. Foster, at 6:40 p.m. Sunday through Wednesday.

Featured speaker will be Robert Tilton, pastor of the Word of Faith Outreach Center in Dallas. He will be teaching the series "charting your course by the dream in your heart."

Writer-performer David Ingles will present special music. The seminar is the second in a monthly series to be presented by the congregation. In March Paul Cho will be featured. Jerry Saville will conduct the April series and Kenneth Copeland will appear in May.

The public is invited to attend the seminar.

Singer at First Assembly

Judy Lynn, country and western singer, will appear at the First Assembly of God Church, 500 S. Cuyler, during the 10:45 a.m. Sunday service.

Pastor John Farina said the congregation extends an invitation to the community to hear her inspiring testimony and music.

Miss Lynn has made several television appearances, including the Johnny Cash Show, Mike Douglas Show, Jerry Lewis special, Dick Clark Show as well as her own syndicated series.

Family Night Dinner planned

The First Christian Church, 1633 N. Nelson, will hold a Family Night Dinner Sunday evening. Herb Miller, area minister, will be guest speaker.

Members and guests are encouraged to attend.

Lent and right-doing

By George R. Plagenz

The Ten Commandments (or Decalogue, a Greek word meaning "10 words") are found in two places in the Old Testament — Exodus 20 and Deuteronomy 5.

They are not, however, numbered in the Bible. Later theologians have done that, and they have not agreed on a standard arrangement. The result is three different sets of numbering: one used by Catholics, one by Lutherans and the third by other Protestants and Orthodox Christians.

The Bible says the commandments were given to Moses by God. No mention that they were written on two tablets on stone is made in Exodus 20 or Deuteronomy 5. But the tablets are mentioned elsewhere in the two Old Testament books.

While the commandments are often thought of as primarily prohibitions against wrong-doing, Martin Luther in his catechism expanded the meaning of the commandments to include commands to right-doing.

For example, Luther gives this meaning to the commandment which begins the series and these Lenten meditations:

"We should fear, love and trust in God above all things."

The First Commandment: Thou shalt have no other gods before me (Exodus 20:3 and Deuteronomy 5:7).

Most of us have an easy time with this commandment.

Too easy. The trouble is that ours is often primarily a "speculative monotheism." We believe in only one true God. No problem. There is little danger of our worshipping a golden calf.

As a practical matter, however, we must admit we often love and trust other things or other people more than we love and trust God.

As for fearing God, we just don't.

The ancient Israelites' idea of God could at times be very primitive. When their God was angry, slaughtering was ordered of animals, even innocent children and babes in arms. Certainly no one would want to go back to such a conception of God.

But perhaps we need to recapture the Israelites' idea of a God who must be feared as well as loved and whose laws and commandments have to be obeyed. And to be reminded that when they are not — when "God is angry" — there are tragic consequences not only for the wrong-doer but for countless innocent parties as well.

The sins of the fathers, God reminded the Israelites when he gave them the commandments, "are visited upon the children" — innocent children. We know that to be so. And the consequences often outlive us and our children — "unto the third and fourth generation," God said. And we know that can be true too.

God should perhaps be compared in our thinking to electricity. Although we can't see it, it can light up our lives and give us warmth and comfort. And provide power.

But it must also be feared and respected or it can destroy us.

Religious Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — A religious archaeology and language scholar suggests that the Bible says woman was created as a "power equal to man," not just as a helpmate.

David Freedman of the University of California writes in the Biblical Archaeology Review that the age-old Scriptural image of woman being made subordinate to man may be the result of a translation error.

He says the Hebrew word, "ezer," usually translated in the Book of Genesis as a "helper" or "helpmate," actually has roots indicating it should be translated as "a strength" or "a power," and that "kenegdo," usually translated as "fit," should be translated "equal."

That would have the Genesis account reading that woman was created as "a power equal to man" instead of a helper fit for man.

Join Us In Worship

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

The STRENGTH of a Nation . . .

At this time, our thoughts are turned to our nation and the war that was fought to bring freedom to our land. Pictured here is a monument to the leader of our people at that time. The people were willing to give their lives that we might be free from tyranny, and have the right to worship as we please. God was with us then as he was with the children of Israel when Moses led them from Egypt. Upon receiving their freedom they sang . . . "The Lord is my strength and song, and he is become my salvation: he is my God, and I will prepare him an habitation; my father's God, and I will exalt him." Exodus 15:2

Help keep our Nation strong by relying on the strength of the Lord. Attend Church Regularly.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Youth charged in Australian fires

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Police charged a teenager today with deliberately setting one of a string of blazes that killed at least 69 people in the drought-punished southeast coast and left farms and forest looking like they were "attacked by napalm."

Meanwhile, fire roared through the parched hills ringing Melbourne and threatened the town of Warburton, 50 miles north of the city. Flames swept through a forest in the watershed that supplies Melbourne's drinking water.

Andrew Mervyn Davey, 19 and unemployed, was charged with unlawfully and maliciously setting fire to scrub Wednesday at Kersbrook, about 22 miles northeast of Adelaide.

Davey was ordered to be held in custody for his own protection.

"I must look at the safety of the public and, in this case, the safety of the defendant," Magistrate Andrew Moss said of Davey. "He will not be the most popular person in Adelaide," he said.

Davey's lawyer said he believed his client would be found innocent. Davey was ordered to appear in court again on March 4.

Earlier, authorities said the fire Davey was accused of setting erupted in the Adelaide hills, where nine people died and 100 homes were destroyed Wednesday.

Badly-burned animals were being shot today by workers from the agricultural department in the state of Victoria. A spokesman said at least 15,000 sheep and 8,000 cattle had died in the fires, which destroyed about 750 Victoria farms.

"The fire-hit areas of Victoria looked like had been attacked by napalm," said Adm. Sir James Murray, the governor of that state.

"It was like a giant flame-thrower," an exhausted firefighter said.

At least 69 bodies had been found by this morning, including those of 12 volunteer firemen who died when flames engulfed two fire trucks in Cockatoo. About 900 people were reported injured, and officials estimated damage along a 500-mile stretch affected by the brushfires at $400 million.

John Lahey, a reporter for a Melbourne newspaper, said today he was one of 83 people who squeezed into a concrete storm drain as a firestorm devoured houses and trees in Upper Yarra Valley, 50 miles north of Melbourne, Thursday night.

Among them were 20 children and three pregnant women. Lahey said fathers sang lullabies to calm children who took their pets with them into the tunnel which carries water pipes leading to Melbourne.

"It's a miracle they survived," a fire official said.

By late Thursday, more than 4,000 firefighters had controlled most of the brushfires, except for those in the hills around Melbourne, Australia's second largest city.

The fire, which began Wednesday, consumed about 3,000 homes in seven towns, in Victoria and the state of South Australia, authorities said. Some of the homeless slept on cricket fields.

At least 2,600 acres of farmland, brush and forest were devastated. Regal stands of pine and eucalyptus became giant bonfires as flames grew 300 feet high.

Desert summer winds, as mighty as 60 mph, fanned flames as they lashed through the Adelaide hills and down the coast past Melbourne into the Dandenong Ranges. "The wind was like it came from a huge hair dryer," said a man who lost his home.

House Demos pushing unemployment extension

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats, overriding objections from the Reagan administration and Republicans in Congress, are pushing to provide up to 10 additional weeks of jobless benefits for unemployed victims of the recession.

A ways and means subcommittee approved the proposal Thursday, calling for a maximum of 65 weeks of benefits in the worst-off states. That would match the maximum level of unemployment compensation available in the recession of 1974-1975, according to congressional aides.

The push by Democrats was a sharp contrast to the spirit of bipartisan cooperation on another proposal for recession relief. The administration and House Democratic leaders have been working together to assemble a bill for public works jobs as well as food and shelter for the needy.

Reagan has proposed a $4.3 billion package, and Democrats have reserved the right to change or increase the proposal. But both sides have gone out of their way to stress their desire for ultimate agreement.

That measure is expected to be approved by the House Appropriations Committee next week.

Doc Severinsen's repairman Trumpet fixer makes beautiful music

By Mary Ann Sebrey

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (NEA) — Dave Monette would have been a good candidate for the old television show "What's My Line?"

Monette is one of the few people in the United States who repairs and rebuilds trumpets. Among his customers are Doc Severinsen, band leader on "The Tonight Show," who says Monette brings "something new to the manufacturing of brass instruments."

Monette, 26, of Bloomington, Ind., has been involved with trumpets in one way or another since grade school. But, he says, he never expected to be working with the likes of Severinsen. Now he talks to the famous musician several times a week and flies all over the country (at Severinsen's expense) to work on his trumpets.

A native of Kalamazoo, Mich., and a member of a musical family, Monette played with a traveling dance band for a year, which he describes as "a terrible lifestyle." Then, for two years, he completely gave up music. But, he says, "I really missed being around music and musicians."

He wandered into a music store one day and found himself being "pulled back into it." So he enrolled in the apprentice program at Allied Music Corp. in Elkhorn, Wis., which he described as the "world's largest instrument repair shop."

There he learned to fix all sorts of musical instruments. When he got bored with that, Monette decided to specialize in trumpet repair, so he could improve his own horn. (Monette still plays his trumpet, but no longer performs.)

While working with a music store in Salem, Ore., Monette began his association with Severinsen. Today Monette has his own business in Bloomington. He works closely with Charles Gorham, chairman of the brass department at the Indiana University School of Music, and with other top trumpeters, many of whom are symphonic players.

Monette believes one reason for his success is his approach to his craft. "Most of the development in the brass family has been done by trial and error," he says. "I like to think some of the time I'm getting beyond trial and error."

He asks his customers what they don't like about their horns and then changes the trumpet accordingly. Monette's talent is that he knows what effect the slightest changes will have on a trumpet's sound.

Changing just one dimension of one part of the trumpet by a thousandth of an inch can make the difference. Changing the shape slightly can also produce a different kind of sound.

Monette makes the first tube of the trumpet — called the lead pipe — in his workshop. Severinsen, for example, is always experimenting with different lead pipes Monette has manufactured.

According to Monette, many trumpet players believe that Severinsen is probably the best all-around player in the world, although there are others who are better at jazz or symphonic music.

Monette recalls a time when Severinsen flew him to Los Angeles. After playing Severinsen's trumpets, Monette discussed them with the handleader. Says Monette, "I told him his sound was too narrow and direct. I was sweating telling him that." But Severinsen apparently wasn't insulted. He simply asked, "What are we gonna do about it?"

During such discussions, Monette says, the conversation is often "really abstract... We talk about sound concept, breaking the sound of the trumpet into tone color, tone shape, clarity of sound and presence of sound."

Severinsen says he works with Monette because "he has the unique understanding of the problems I encounter physically playing the trumpet. Through his research, he's devised ways of making the horn more productive to my needs."

Dreamed of Hayley Mills: plays a princess

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cheryl Ladd was a child when Grace Kelly ended her movie career and married Prince Rainier of Monaco. So she grew up dreaming of British child actress Hayley Mills.

"Hayley Mills was my big favorite growing up in the 1960s," Miss Ladd says. "I loved Doris Day's movies and Paul Newman's. But Grace Kelly was married in 1956 and I was too young for her films."

But last year she sat down and watched nearly all of the movies Miss Kelly made. She plays the former actress — who became Her Serene Highness, Princess Grace — in the ABC movie, "Grace Kelly." The two-hour film, which ends with Miss Kelly's marriage, will be telecast on Monday.

Miss Ladd said she sees the movie as a tribute to Princess Grace, who died after an automobile crash last September. Her death came shortly before the movie was to go into production and all work was temporarily halted.

"My initial reaction when she died was that I didn't want to think about the picture," she said. "I thought of her children and family. I felt we had gotten to know them doing research for the picture."

Miss Ladd's husband, Brian Russell, who is co-executive producer, flew to Monaco last year to confer with Princess Grace about the project.

Dreams really can come true. Nine-year-old Amy Plank had hers come true recently when she visited the set of NBC-TV's "Days Of Our Lives."

It all began in Amy's hometown of Edwardsville, Ill., when a local paper ran a picture of her with an article about her desire to go to California and meet the stars of her favorite television program, "Days Of Our Lives." Amy is a victim of leukemia and recently, at the suggestion of her doctors, was taken off the painful treatments she had been receiving because they felt the disease was spreading too rapidly to be controlled.

As in all fairytales, a wonderful "fairy godmother" named Stella Southmayd saw the picture of little Amy and read of her wish. Stella was so moved by the story that she contacted the paper and asked them to have Amy's mother call her.

A benefit dance was held with donations going to the fund to help send Amy to California.

Amy was going to California, accompanied by her mother, Sheila Clements, and her Aunt Lisa.

Her first request was to meet Josh Taylor and Joe Gallison (Chris Kostichuk and Dr. Neil Curtis on the series). The actual meeting was a tremendous thrill for Amy as well as the actors. "You're even better looking than you are on television," Amy told handsome Josh Taylor.

She was escorted by the stars onto the set, into the control booth, into the make-up room, through the dressing rooms, and treated like a little queen. "I have never seen her light up like this," her mother said, "she's on cloud nine."

Harvesters host Dunbar tonight

Pampa's 63-61 double overtime setback to Lubbock Dunbar Jan. 24 was a game of missed opportunities for the Harvesters.

Pampa, normally a 60 percent shooting plus team from the foul line, hit only one of seven free throw attempts. Dunbar made good on 15 of 19 tries.

With the score tied, 57-all, and nine seconds to go in the regulation period, Pampa missed two consecutive field goal attempts that would have won the game.

Most significant was the 10-point lead (49-39) that Pampa squandered going into the fourth quarter.

The Harvesters will try not to let those same opportunities slip by again in the return match against Lubbock Dunbar tonight in Harvester Fieldhouse.

Pampa, ranked No. 10 in the state in the latest Class 4A poll, can wrap up the runnerup spot in District 1-4A with a win over Dunbar. The Harvesters would then advance into bi-district play. A loss would mean Pampa and Dunbar would have to meet in a playoff to decide second place.

Fifth-ranked Borger has already claimed the loop title.

Tonight's first game tips off at 6 p.m. between the Pampa and Dunbar sophomore boys. The varsity game gets underway at 7:45 p.m.

Former Pampa High basketball coach Clifton McNeely and former team members will be honored during halftime. McNeely guided the Harvesters to four state championships during his 13 years as head coach.

Former players are urged to register at the door with Earl Davis prior to the game. Davis will have a registration table set up near the front door on the east side of the gym. A seating section will be roped off for the former players.

Also on the halftime agenda tonight is the introduction of the Pampa High Basketball Sweetheart.

Big crowd needed at golf meeting

Don't send a proxy, send yourself...if you are interested in having a public golf course in Pampa.

That's the message Buddy Epperson of the Pampa Golf Corporation wants to get across to local duffers as the public meeting date (Sunday, 2:30 p.m. in Harvester Basketball Fieldhouse) draws closer.

"I want to point out that if insufficient interest is shown, the project will likely be disbanded," Epperson said. "Our response is going to be based on the response of the people. The people will have to give us the incentive to keep going."

Epperson said the status of the proposed golf course will be explained at the meeting, followed by a question and answer session.

"Weather permitting, we're going to have a golf course architect there to field some questions," Epperson added.

Interested persons will also have an opportunity to join the corporation, Epperson said.

"Charter memberships will be accepted," he added.

Skellytown has perfect season

Skellytown seventh-grade boys finished the basketball season with a perfect record by defeating Groom, 20-12, last week.

Wendell Ledford led Skellytown with 10 points. Gary Davis added six points while Raymond Burditt and Mike Holloway had two points each.

Groom won the girls' game, 25-15. Jo Lyne Russell led Skellytown with five points, followed by Becky Wise and Ruth Ann Hinds with four points each. Dana Walden added two points.

Skellytown lost to Groom, 41-25, in the eighth-grade boys' game. High scorer for Skellytown was Rabbit Rogers with eight points. Joe Brown had six. Lance Cross and Freddie Hutchinson had four points each while Bryan Thurmond added three.

Skellytown eighth-grade girls also played Miami last week and lost a 23-16 decision. Lorien Woods led Skellytown with eight points.

Lance Cross scored 10 points to lead Skellytown past Miami, 33-24, in the eighth grade boys' contest. Also scoring were Joe Brown with seven, John Shackelford six, Rabbit Rogers four, Bryan Thurmond four and Mike Holloway two.

Amarillo High favored to win district swim meet

Pampa High swimmers enter the District 3-5A meet today at Amarillo's Maverick Club with Amarillo High favored to win both boys' and girls' divisions.

In the boys' division, Clay Douglass (100 butterfly and 200 IM) along with divers David Fatheree and Shawn White are Pampa's best hopes to garner some points.

"Amarillo High boys should walk away with it, but I think we can make it real close with Tascosa for second place," Pampa coach Jema Allen said.

Douglass, a senior, is the defending champion in the 200 IM.

Pampa girls will be handicapped after the loss of talented sophomore Brinna Marsh, who recently underwent an appendectomy. Marsh was the leading first-place individual winner for the Pampa girls.

Amy Raymond, another sophomore, is a threat in the 100 meter flystroke, 100 butterfly and 100 meter breaststroke.

Julie Turner, a senior, has been a consistent placer in the 200 meter and 400 meter freestyle events.

"The loss of Brinna really hurt us, but I think we can make it pretty close," coach Allen said.

The diving events start at 4 p.m. today, followed by the finals at 7 p.m.

Soccer signup

Spring soccer registration for newcomers will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Saturday and Feb. 26 (Saturday) at the Pampa

Mall.

Youngsters who competed during the fall need not sign up again, said Miles Cook of the Pampa Soccer Association.

More information on the upcoming season can be obtained by calling 665-3036 or 665-3431.

Panhandle girls lose in bi-district

BORGER—Stratford made a comeback in the fourth quarter to down Panhandle, 45-35, in Class 2A bi-district girls' basketball action Thursday night.

Panhandle was leading by one point after three quarters, but Stratford outscored the Warriorettes, 17-6, in the final eight minutes.

Sheila Cummings topped the winners with 16 points.

Leslie McCaskey led Panhandle with eight points while Monica Reining followed with seven.

St. John's storms past Connecticut

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Leave it up to Lou Carnesecca to put a basketball game in perspective.

"Their Kelley was out — and our Kelly was in," said St. John's colorful coach.

With Connecticut's leading scorer, Earl Kelley, out of action with a sprained right ankle, Bob Kelly of St. John's scored 20 points, dished out seven assists and made seven steals to lead the sixth-ranked Redmen to a 98-78 victory over the Huskies in a Big East game Thursday night.

Kelly had been averaging less than three shots a game this season. But Thursday night, he took nine. He was also having problems with his free throws. But Thursday night, he was 10-for-10 from the foul line.

"All along, Lou's been telling me, 'You have to shoot more,'" Kelly said. "Tonight I got the ball in a lot of great situations. It was easy for me to score."

The Redmen rebounded from a 17-point loss to Boston College Tuesday night.

"It was important for us to win this game, after having such a bad game against BC," Carnesecca said. "You want to bounce back and we did. There was still one part of the game I wasn't happy about, however — turnovers."

The Redmen endured 22 turnovers.

Chris Mullin was the high scorer for St. John's with 27 points. The Redmen never trailed, leading by as much as 24 points at one stage, to boost their record to 21-3. Bruce Kuczenski led Connecticut with 17 points, followed by Vernon Giscombe with 15.

In other action involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 10 UCLA whipped Stanford 99-86; No. 12 Missouri held off Kansas 74-69 and No. 20 Ohio State walloped Northwestern 71-55.

Top Twenty

Darren Daye scored 18 points and Brad Wright added 15 to lead UCLA to an easy victory over Stanford.

The Bruins, 18-3, displayed a balanced attack with seven players scoring in double figures. Kenny Fields and Rod Foster had 14 points apiece and Ralph Jackson, Michael Holton and Gary Maloncon scored 10 each.

Greg Cavener scored 21 points and grabbed nine rebounds to help Missouri beat Kansas. Missouri broke open a close game in the last three minutes as Cavener scored nine of his points.

Cavener had been shooting only 58 percent from the free throw line this year. But he hit five key free throws in the late stages of the Tigers.

"He made them when we had to have them," Missouri Coach Norm Stewart said. "We thought about taking him out of the game when we went to the half-court offense late in the game, but he hung tough and he was the one who made them when we needed them."

Tony Campbell scored 21 points and Ohio State pulled away from Northwestern in the second half. Campbell hit seven of 15 field goal attempts, seven straight free throws and collected eight rebounds before leaving the game with more than five minutes to play and the Buckeyes owning a 62-42 cushion.

Jim Stack, whose three-point play at the buzzer beat Ohio State in their first game this season, led the Wildcats with 21 points.

Navratilova, Austin advance to quarterfinals of Virginia Slims

CHICAGO (AP) — Martina Navratilova is taking fewer chances with reporters these days than she is on the court.

Moments after a 6-1, 6-1 win over Czech Iva Budarova that put her in the quarterfinals of the $150,000 Virginia Slims of Chicago tennis tournament Thursday, she appeared in the interview room accompanied by her pet — K.D., short for "Killer Dog."

"I brought him along," she said calmly, "to screen questions."

But there wasn't much to ask about the way the world's ranking woman player dispatched her 23-year-old opponent. No. 3 Tracy Austin, on the other hand, had to win a second-set tie-breaker to sneak past hard-hitting Anne Smith 6-1, 7-6 (7-4). Fourth-seeded Pam Shriver also needs a tie-breaker to get past West German Claudia Kohde 7-6 (7-5), 6-3 while unseeded Eva Pfaff clawed her way to 5-7, 6-4, 6-3 upset over fellow West German Sylvia Hanika, the No. 6 seed.

NBA Roundup

Cummings leads Clippers to 112-102 win over Warriors

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

As Terry Cummings gets better and better, so do the San Diego Clippers.

The brilliant rookie scored 37 points, his National Basketball Association high, and added 15 rebounds as the Clippers rolled to a 112-102 victory over the Golden State Warriors Thursday night.

The triumph improved San Diego's record since Christmas Day to 14-13 after a 4-23 start. In that same span, Cummings was named NBA Rookie of the Month in January with a 23.5-point average and has been even more impressive in February with a 27.7 norm.

"In basketball, for me, it's not enough to be one of the best," Cummings said. "I want to be the best."

In other NBA games, New York beat Cleveland 108-92. Los Angeles had lost twice in Dallas this season on last-second Mavericks' shots, but the Lakers left no doubt about the outcome this time as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 32 points and Norm Nixon and Ervin "Magic" Johnson added 25 each.

Los Angeles, which outscored the Mavericks 55-39, outscored Dallas 27-17 in the fourth period by hitting 12 of 14 shots in the quarter. The Mavericks managed only six baskets in 19 shots in the period.

"The Lakers were upset about losing to us and they were out to get us," said Mark Aguirre, who led Dallas with 22 points.

Nuggets 117, Nets 106

Alex English hit 15 of 17 free throws and had 33 points and 14 rebounds to lift Denver over New Jersey.

Kiki Vandeweghe added 28 points for the Nuggets, who came back to beat the Nets one night after they had trailed Philadelphia by 32 points at halftime and lost by 21.

"We seem more capable of winning after a poor effort," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "We'll be in the hunt for the playoffs if we play like this every night. If we could only respond to wins this way. Unless adversity gets bad enough, we're too nice."

The Clippers led 80-74 after three quarters and built a trying out little things on each other," she said. "But there really aren't many surprises."

Austin moved out to a quick 3-1 lead, weathered Smith's groundstrokes and closed out the match when her opponent hit a backhand wide of the mark.

"It was just a case of going for too much," said Smith. "I tried for too many winners."

Shriver did the same and came up looking rosy when she served an ace to take a 6-5 lead in the tie-breaker, then followed it with a passing shot to defeat Kohde.

Trailing 4-1 in the extra session, Shriver tore off four straight points before giving up one to go 5-5.

"I saved something for the end," she said. "I feel I'm just a half-step from being in the next group (the top three ranked women in the world) and I think the difference is mostly mental."

Pfaff did plenty of concentrating through the three-set marathon, but decided the difference may have been the bounce of the ball.

Will NBA players go on strike next?

NEW YORK (AP) — Although at least one owner is hinting National Basketball Association owners would be better off if the players went on strike, the official league line is that a walkout would hurt the sport.

Sam Schulman, owner of the Seattle SuperSonics, said Thursday he would relish a players' strike because it "would enable us to return things to normalcy."

"I dare them to strike," Schulman said. "The players are overpaid."

An NBA spokesman, responding to Wednesday's announcement by players association general counsel Larry Fleisher that a strike was possible if a collective bargaining agreement is not reached by April 1, said, "We think a strike would do great harm to the sport."

The spokesman added that the league believes the best hope for a settlement is for the players to agree to a revenue-sharing plan "to help ensure the stability of the league."

In a written memo, Brian McIntyre, director of public relations for the league, said that NBA players average $246,000 a year. Since the previous collective bargaining agreement expired last June, McIntyre said, "the NBA and its teams have continued to provide every each and every benefit previously given to the players under the prior agreement."

"In fact, there has never been any discussion by the NBA of discontinuing or modifying these benefits," McIntyre said.

The NBA says that at least 10 teams in the 23-team NBA are having financial difficulties that might cause some franchises to fold, be sold or be merged.

In an effort to reduce player costs, the NBA proposes to limit each team's player payroll to approximately $4 million a season. If the players agreed to this proposal, the league would guarantee the players a fixed percentage of the league's revenues that would be disbursed to the players in accordance to a formula established by the union.

McIntyre said that Fleisher said last week at a meeting of the NBA's Labor Relations Committee that he "was willing to accept the concept of revenue sharing if the plan was deferred for four years."

"The owners are talking about how they're going out of business and that we are going to give back a lot, to save the league," Fleisher said. "We are not going to do that. They are still demanding to take away virtually all of the benefits won by the players over 15 years of collective bargaining."

Fleisher said the league was "demanding that the system of free agency agreed upon in the 1976 Oscar Robertson antitrust suit be modified."
