Keep the dogs home or Thomas will kill them

W.D. Thomas has an unusual solution for reducing Pampa's population of stray dogs - he kills as many as he can with a .20 - gauge shotgun. He says the dogs he shoots on his property are livestock killers - he has the dead animals to prove And he says the dogs that come onto his property to kill his animals are fair game - literally dead game now. Thomas said he killed 136 stray dogs last year. He said he blasted to death 25 to 30 marauding dogs so far this year.

The Pampa man has killed so many dogs near his livestock pens just southwest of town that he dug a huge mass grave to dispose of the carcasses. He said he dug a pit "10 feet square and 10 feet deep" and stacked the dead dogs he shot into the pit "like

He said he throws lime onto the mass of rotting flesh to aid decomposition.

Thomas lives in town, but he owns several buildings and pens on a piece of property southwest of McCullough and Farley Streets, just outside the city limits. He's tried to raise livestock there for the table, for sale and for his son's school ag projects But the wild dog packs have killed nearly all of his animals, Thomas said.

He said he is unable to keep the dogs out of his barns and pens. He said the dogs either jump or dig under the fences and then kill, and only sometimes eat, the animals. One bunch of dogs even jumped through a glass window in his barn to get at his animals, he said.

Last year, dogs killed all 11 of his hogs and other stock, including caged rabbits, he said. Three months ago, the dogs killed a 250 - lb. calf. Three weeks ago, he had 86 chickens - Saturday, he had one left, and "they'll get it tonight." he said,

Also Friday night, the dog packs killed his son's school ag project - the only pig he had left on the property

He said that pig alone represents about a $300 loss, accounting for the purchase, feed costs and

"I told him to get it out of there - I said 'those dogs are gonna get it.' He told me he was going to take it to the bull barn, where they keep school projects, on Monday. But he didn't make it 'till Thomas said

Thomas said he was "so mad I couldn't talk" when he discovered the dead stock Saturday morning

He promptly dispatched two dogs with his 20

the pens Saturday, but "he got away. 'His time's limited, though," Thomas said.

gauge that morning. He tried to kill a third dog near

Thomas has been blasting the dogs near his property for about three years now, he said. He said when he first began killing the dogs, he just tossed the bodies into a ditch near his pens

"I had about 60 of 'em lined up in the bar ditch about a hundred - yards worth of dogs. "When they saw so many stacked up - they wrote a story in the newspaper - said they didn't know where all of the dead dogs were coming from Well - it was me," Thomas said.

"I've shot 'em with a .20 gauge, a .30-30 and a .30 06. I've used steel traps on 'em,' he said.

He once killed seven dogs one morning, he said. "I went out to feed. I saw a window knocked out in the door of the barn and heard 'em in there making a bunch of noise. I looked in there and saw the dogs and all the dead chickens. There were only two chickens left (alive), and the dogs had them trapped over in one corner. So, I just slipped in there and closed the door. I got all seven of them.

Thomas says he would shoot "four or five or six a day," if he lived on the property full time.

The stray dogs come from the south side of Pampa in Prairie Village and the Cole Addition.

Of the 150 dogs he estimated he's killed in the past two years, only one "had a collar." He estimates there are still 200 strays on that side of town, and Thomas said his ongoing effort to thin the population has done little to control it

'For every one I shoot, 10 more come back." he Thomas said the dogs attack his stock because "they re starvin' to death.

He said the unemployment situation here has had an effect on the stray dog population. Thomas said many people who lost jobs here moved away and left dogs behind.

The Pampa man said no one will claim the dogs

'Nobody's going to claim a dead dog." he said. He said he once followed two dogs he saw near his pens back to a house nearby. He said he talked to the resident there, who denied owning the dogs Thomas said he traced the dogs back to the same house a second time. The third time the dogs came near his animals, he shot them and returned them to the reluctant owner, he said

"I dumped them out in his front vard." Thomas

He said he wants to poison the dogs, but "they ve outlawed all of that. 'If I could poison them, I'd need a dump truck to haul them all off." he said.

Though he is unable to get the needed poison. Thomas said he would be reluctant to place the bait out anyway, due to potential danger to children.

He said Pampa animal control officers work the area on that edge of the city. But he said officers' hands are tied, after the dogs make a kill and later return to the owner's property

They can't go up on somebody's property and take the dogs away. And they're hard to catch. These dogs have been around a while." Thomas

"If the officers used a tranquilizer gun, that would help. I'd be glad to do it for 'em. I'd drive down the middle of the street," he said.

Thomas said he can't figure out a permanent solution. He said he called the city and sheriff's office for help, but so far, the officials have done Thomas said he doesn't want people to get the wrong ideas about his one - man effort to control the wild dogs. He said when he received earlier publicity about shooting dogs, someone shot two of his horses.

Thomas said he loves dogs himself, but shooting the strays is the only way he can protect his

"I used to show dogs. I hate to see any animal suffer. I hate to gut - shoot a dog and have to shoot him four or five times. But I wish people could understand how I feel." he said.

Last week, another stock owner just up Farley street from Thomas's pens lost two show pigs to the dog packs. Dogs dug under Ray Shults' pens at 1042 Farley and killed the school projects of his son Wendell and student Troy Drinnon.

Shults told The Pampa News at the time that he also plans to send the strays near his pens to doggie heaven, by way of a bullet

Thomas said all he has left in his pens now are a couple of horses and one steer. He said he believes those animals are large enough to avoid death at the fangs of the dogs. But he said the dogs can chase them to death.

The owner of the dead livestock said he won't replace his animals until he builds a 10 - foot high prevent dogs from digging under

In the meantime. Thomas will do the best he can to protect his animals. 'I'll just keep shootin'.'' he said says the delay is "inexcusable Police Chief Billy Prince said a police dispatcher was faced with eight calls Thursday afternoon when a 29-year-old woman telephoned to report she heard men in her yard. "At this point, I don't know what he (the dispatcher) could have done." Prince said. "We were out of officers. Jackye Patrick. 29. had been stabbed to death by the time officers arrived at her residence in surburban Oak Cliff. Officers were dispatched to three other calls before responding to Ms. Patrick's call, records show

Ms. Patrick's sister, Donna Patrick, said the delay was

'incomprehensible 'It is unexcusable. It is unbelievable. They'll never make me understand why it took so long to get there. Never," she said. "I lost someone I loved and I don't understand it.

Several Dallas city councilman pledged to investigate the police department's handling of Ms. Patrick's call. Prince said a peliminary internal investigation showed proper procedures were followed.

The call to police headquarters came during a shift change and Ms. Patrick "did not sound frantic, and she never indicated it was a life-threatening situation," said police spokeswoman Vicki Eiker.

Prince said a tape recording of Ms. Patrick's call showed that the telephone clerk answering the call asked how many prowlers she saw "I can't judge. I don't want to go to the window. First somebody came knocking to my door two or three or four different times today. They don't think I'm home because my car's gone ... I can hear them at the back now. The dogs are barking." Ms. Patrick was quoted as saying.

Police refused to allow reporters to listen to the tape. The response time of police may have been affected by a shortage of officers on the police force, officials said. "Last year it took us an average of 41/2 minutes to answer a call. We were late on this one," said Dallas police spokesman Ed Spencer. "Right now we have all kinds of questions on it and not very many answers.

"I don't know what happened. It was a shift change, maybe the dispatcher had trouble getting a car available to go, then it took 15 minutes to get there," Spencer said. "By the time we did get there, they'd gotten her

Grandstaff's parents: Lives of bitterness and tales of hassle

(Ed. note: Following a seven - part series about the shooting death of Four 6s cowboy Jim Grandstaff, his father and mother called The Pampa News to tell a story of their love for the victim. The innocent cowboy was allegedly shot to death by Borger police. About 4:30 a.m., Aug. 11, 1981, police were chasing fugitive Lonnie Cox, who crashed and temporarily escaped near Grandstaff's ranch home. When the cowboy went to check on the commotion caused by that attempted arrest, he was shot in a barrage of police gunfire as he stepped out of his pickup truck. In a federal lawsuit since filed against the Borger officers and others, police deny killing the cowboy.)

his slain son, cowboy Jim Grandstaff. We did everything together. It was me and him," the father said Joe wanted to talk to a reporter after a recent series of stories about his son's shooting death in The Pampa News He said he wanted to talk about it, even though Grandstaff said police have harassed him since Jim's death and despite warnings from his Borger friends to keep his mouth shut Borger Police Chief Arthur Waight said the harassment charge was not true, "as far as I'm aware of," adding he wouldn't allow such things to happen The elder Grandstaff, 56, said "murder - minded" Borger officers have taunted him since his son was shot. And he said because he refuses to remain quiet about it, he expects police to shoot him too.

Grandstaff lives alone in Borger and still works for Phillips Petroleum Company, where he has worked more than 30 years. He said he would like to leave Borger, but his job makes him unable to move away, he said.

'My friends tell me. 'You better shut up. they're gonna blow you away." Grandstaff said.

'But I'm not afraid to talk about it. They took everything I had in the world, so I've got nothing to lose," he said about his son's death.

'I'd say it to Ronald Reagan.

"I expect them to tie into me some night when I come home from work. I'll go outside some day, and they'll shoot me too. But he's all I had, so they can just tie into me. Only I won't make it as easy for them as Jim did. I'll be ready, Grandstaff said.

They've harassed the hell out of me. They (Borger police in squad cars) circle around the house. And they stop out here in front and blow the siren. They see me downtown, and they honk the horn and smile at me.

"They didn't have to kill him. They knew it wasn't Lonnie Cox. The only reason he's dead is because they wanted to kill someone. They are murder - minded - that's the kind of people they hire on the force. That's the most cold - blooded bunch of people there ever was.

'They murdered him. They shot him. They handcuffed him. Then, they hammered him around, after they forced him to lay down there and bleed to death.

'Anybody who would drive up in the middle of three or four squad cars with their lights flashing and get out sure as hell isn't a fugitive. They knew he wasn't the man they were chasing - they just wanted to kill someone. They knew it wasn't Jim — a 10 - year - old would have known."

Grandstaff said during an interview this week.

They patted them on the back and told them to go on they were braggin' about it," he said about the patrolmen

He blames the officers and Chief Waight for his son's death. He said officers on the city's force have "no training." And Grandstaff said the elected city officials in Borger

California storms may hold off until after Super Bowl whistle

The week's fourth powerful storm battered Southern California through the night, toppling a pier, sending floodwaters through homes and blanketing a major coast route with mud before wearing itself out this morning. After a day-long respite Friday, driving rains returned in the night to pound already ravaged coastal homes and businesses. The Pacific rainstorm capped a week of violent weather blamed for 11 deaths and property damage estimated at $70 million statewide. Forecasters predicted two more storms churning across the Pacific would hit Monday and about mid-week, though at least the first was expected to be much weaker than those that have wreaked havoc up and down the coast, leaving hundreds of seaside homes and businesses dangling tenuously as breakers smashed at their underpinnings. Coastal residents, whose homes were battered in the previous onslaught of wind and waves, had braced for the renewed tidal assault by fortifying beachfront defenses with Forecaster Bill Exley had said high tide would crest at 7.5

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) - A private plane that crashed into the Atlantic Ocean. killing all seven aboard, was being chased by two Air Force fighters in a restricted military zone before a collision with one of them, according to a flight

The pilot of the private plane was told about four minutes before his aircraft crashed Jan. 9 that military planes were "right on your tail," according to a Federal Aviation Administration recording of a conversation with the tower. The tape was obtained by television station WTKR in Norfolk and played Friday.

Air Force officials declined comment on the tape and the National Transportation Safety Board also declined comment while its investigation continues. The collision took place in cloudy weather about 40 miles

Texas counties have spent more than $350 million building and renovating jails in the past five years, county officials said. Much more could be required soon, Dial said.

CHRIST AS LORD

"And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Lk. 6:46) To recognize Christ as Lord is to do what He says. Deut. 18:15-19 is quoted by Peter in Acts 3:22, "Moses indeed said, A prophet shall the Lord God raise up unto you from among your brethren, like unto me to him shall he hearken in all things whatsoever he shall speak unto you. And it shall be, that every soul that shall not hearken to that prophet, shall be utterly destroyed from among the people." Peter declared that the prophet Moses was speaking of is Jesus Christ.

God verbally announced His approval of Jesus on the mount (Matt. 17:5). We have the testimony of the prophets, the eye-witness account of the apostles, the spoken word of God and overall, the inspired account in the Bible of Jesus Christ as the Son of God. He is the authority in religion (Matt. 28:18; Acts 4:12). He is the Head of the body, the church (Eph. 1:22,23).

When people call Him, "Lord, Lord", yet do not do the things which He says, they become liars because to call Him Lord is to recognize His word and His teaching as the doctrine necessary in order to salvation. To recognize such authority is to submit to His decrees in order to be saved (Heb. 5:9). To call Him, "Lord, Lord", is to reject any and all human creeds and church manuals. It is to reject all synods, conferences, and church conventions as without any authority in legislation for religion.

When people render obedience to the simple gospel of Christ, they become members of the Lord's church. In so doing they are properly calling Jesus their Lord and Mas ter. As long as they continue to obey His every word, they have every right to call Him, "Lord, Lord".

Every billion saved helps U.S. deficit

James Walker, a retired government economist, has written to federal budget chief David A. Stockman, asking that a temporary freeze be placed on further cost of - living increases in federal retirement pensions, including his own.

He retired from the Department of Labor in 1967, when he was earning $17,000 a year. Now, thanks to cost - of living increases, he receives $29,000 a year in retirement pay. He says it is more than he deserves and more than

The result is that federal pensioners have seen their pensions increase far faster in recent years than the income of other retired people or of people in the working population, whether employed by the federal government or by private industry. Inflation has reduced the real earning power of the average American, but federal pensioners have been fully protected from its

Until 1976, the government made cost - of - living adjustment in federal pensions twice a year and sometime almost every three months. Now such adjustments are made only once a year, saving billions of tax dollars.

Congress in August made another move moved to reduce federal pension costs. The annual cost - of - living adjustment for retirees under the age or 62 will be delayed one month in each of the next three years. Cost of - living pension increases to "double dipper" military retirees who hold federal civil service jobs were eliminated. Changes added up to a three - year savings of more than $4 billion

THIS WEEK'S STATE OF THE UNION: Retrospect

Ignoring the cheap gas

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - The natural gas that's readily available from easily accessible geological formations beneath Ohio and New Mexico hasn't been selling very well in recent years - because it's too cheap.

But the natural gas that's especially difficult to retrieve from offshore fields and very deep wells in Louisiana and Texas has been in great demand throughout the early 1980s because it's unusually expensive.

That preposterous situation was created by an oil and gas industry which currently is seeking the removal of federal price controls on the low-cost gas, an action it claims will produce substantial savings for its customers.

But that same industry is now withholding from the market natural gas which costs less than $1 per thousand cubic gas whose wellhead price is as high as $10 per Mcf.

Although that high-cost natural gas is being "rolled in" or blended with cheaper fuel to moderate the price, the wellhead cost of the most expensive natural gas is equivalent to more than $60 for a barrel of oil at a time when oil is selling for about half that.

The firms which dominate the industry - the natural gas producers (principally the country's major oil companies) and the corporations which operate the long-distance gas transmission pipelines - blame the unconscionable price disparity on the provisions of the Natural Gas Policy Act of

That federal law did indeed establish a disparate array of wellhead prices for approximately two dozen different categories of natural gas - but it surely did not require that unjustifiable emphasis be placed on production and sale of fuel in the most expensive price classifications.

Nevertheless, wells have been "shut in" or temporarily capped in natural gas fields throughout the country which contain substantial, proven reserves of low-cost fuel. In other instances, there are reports of cheap gas being vented from the wellhead into the atmosphere and thus irrevocably

Nowhere are the inequities of the situation more apparent than in the Guymon-Hugoton field, the nation's largest single natural gas reserve which covers more than 4 million subterranean acres stretching from southwestern Kansas into the Oklahoma and Texas panhandles.

Natural gas from that vast reservoir sells for as little as 27 to 50 cents per Mcf at the wellhead, but the five interstate pipeline companies which rely upon that field have dramatically reduced their withdrawals in recent years.

The Panhandle Eastern Pipeline Co. says it is "temporarily resting its wells" in the Guymon-Hugoton field. The Cities Service Gas Co. has cut back its purchases from the field while signing new contracts for natural gas priced at $7 to

When a Cities Service executive was asked if the firm was considering renegotiating those contracts, he replied: "Why should we be doing that? How would that benefit our customers?" Instead, the firm has petitioned federal regulators for millions of dollars worth of rate increases - which eventually will be borne by consumers of the fuel,

The El Paso Co. has rebuffed small producers in the San Juan Basin of New Mexico which previously sold the pipeline firm natural gas at wellhead prices of $2 to $3 per Mcf for transmission to El Paso customers in Southern Califor-

Instead, El Paso has been paying $8 to $10 per Mcf for natural gas from the Anadarko Basin in Oklahoma — which then must be transported a greater distance to the West

In mid 1982, the Columbia Gas System Inc. asked thousands of its suppliers of low-cost natural gas in Ohio and adjoining states to shut down their wells for the same time, the company was committed to purchasing 270 million cubic feet of natural gas from other producers at a projected cost of $8 to $8.50 per Mcf.

The effect of those practices was candidly and succinctly described by Consolidated Oil and Gas Inc. in a report to its stockholders last year explaining that the pipelines preferred expensive natural gas from other sources rather than the cheaper fuel offered by Consolidated. "The end result," said Consolidated, "is higher prices to the consumer than would otherwise be charged.

Letters to the Editor

Downright thievery

The price of gasoline has recently dropped again in Pampa. Self Service Regular is down five cents, now $1,14.9 all over Pampa. In Amarillo it is .97.9 and in little Panhandle. Texas it is 99.9

Let's figure. That is 17 cents difference or 17 cents more that we pay in Pampa per gallon. Conservatively, is you use 30 gallons a month, that is $5.10 more you pay per month or $61.20 per year In checking, I find that there are approximately 23.000 vehicles in Pampa, including pickups and trucks. Pickups and trucks use more with lower mileage. Twenty-three thousand vehicles at $61.20 per year more than we pay over other places equals a staggering $1,407,600.00 extra

That is not a rip-off, that is downright thievery. That is not the total cost of gasoline, but the extra we pay in Pampa. That is money that could be well spent on other necessities and to think, it goes to only a few. Now, I know of only one place that has us, the consumer, in mind. Can you find him? My letter, as yours should be, will be in the attorney general's office soon. I may personally deliver mine.

An example

Starting with the article on the front page of the News Who was that maked Mayor? -- he is supposed to be the leader of this town. This is not a good example for anyone else. Leaders, or bosses should not do anything anyone else is not allowed to do. As for our criminal rate, a lot starts in our, or a portion of our, probation and law enforcement If a person on probation is allowed more than a couple of chances without being punished, or because he tells on someone else doing the same thing they have not stopped being friends to some of the officers. We are contributing to crimes. They get the criminal then turn them loose to commit the same crime and do more. Some go to prison, but more are running loose to continue or All this stealing, robbing, shooting, dope, and all the other criminal acts on people is because they know they can give excuses and go right out and do it over.

Think of all the people who are trying to be law-abiding

It is indeed a sad state of affairs when "THE BOSS" of that body which is elected to govern our citizens cannot find within himself the gumption to obey those laws which are already in existence

And what of the officer and his supervisor? Are they also Above the Law"? Of course! they are "THE LAW". That alone makes is just OK to run that stop sign (Right, Charley?) or to fail to signal for a turn, or even to gun down an innocent man in his own front yard. Perfectly OK, right? Not in my books, folks.

That "officer of the law" is in a position to be noticed by everyone from small children playing in the school yard to other supposedly law-abiding adults if for no other reason than that of being so obvious; (ie: emergency lights, vehicle markings (Protect and Serve?)), etc. At his worst, he should obey these minor traffic laws. For who will our children look to as an expample of 'Law-Abiding Citizens' if not to us and our police officers? I believe what transpired Tuesday was but another example of the daily routine of "Selective Enforcement" that is practiced by our police force. For example, have you ever seen any of those droves of who park in the middle of Foster at the Post Office get a ticket? NO! Maybe the officers aren't allowed to patrol that area due to some convenient law enacted by our illustrious city commission headed by ... H. R. Thompson, Jr.

As far as I am concerned, the officer in question and his supervisor are both guilty of shirking their duty and should be charged and prosecuted accordingly

Who gets to choose which laws we obey, then? The mayor? The man in uniform? Me? None of the above. We are all only men, and equally subject to the same laws. You pick yours, and I'll pick mine!

> Breaks the Law There is no LAW!

> > NELSON BRIDGES

Who's boss?

According to a story published Jan. 26, 1983, an officer felt it necessary to radio his supervisor for advice on ticketing an illegally parked car. If the mayor is "the boss" he knows the laws, or is supposed to know them. And if he doesn't follow the rules, why should I? Is he one of the chosen few? I appreciate the newspaper letting me know events like this. I wish we could get a lot more in the open about city dealings.

Is it possible there are more behind-the-back doings we, the people, don't know about?

I am a homeowner, voted in the last election, and try to abide by the laws to the fullest as they come to my knowledge. And I believe that the officers or any person that lives or passes through Pampa should obey the laws. If people don't obey the laws there are no laws.

Work, work, work. Little time to play.

The words describe the way Robert Cornelius Grider, better known as "R.C.," spent much of his 68 years... until just about two weeks ago, anyway.

Grider has come out of retirement almost as much as Muhammad Ali. But his comebacks, especially one from cancer of the colon, were more successful than the champ's. Grider retired from the Cabot Carbon Black Plant in 1971. and Jan. 14. he retired from his "post - retirement" job at The Pampa News.

This time he and his wife expect to make the retirement life of fishing, traveling and relaxing a permanent thing. Grider was born July 8, 1914 at Cooper.

He never saw his real father - Grider's dad was stomped to death by a horse before the Pampan was born.

They lived on a farm. His dad advised him against getting such a fractious horse. It threw him to the ground and stomped him, before he could get away." Grider said his mother told him about his real father's death.

After Grider's father was killed, his mother went back to school and became a teacher. She married Samuel Thurman when R.C. was 5 years old.

The family later moved to Paris and Lubbock. During the Depression year of 1931. Grider's family "went broke in the grocery business" in Lubbock.

His stepfather was forced to move the family to Pampa. where Thurman found work in the oil patch "It was tough. Everybody was hustling. Everybody was trying to stay alive - work was hard to come by." Grider

To help the family get by and put groceries on the table, R.C. worked a full - time night job while he attended Pampa

He worked for three Pampa movie theaters as watchman, usher, popcorn and ticket salesman and janitor, Grider did "anything that needed to be done." he said. The theaters were owned by a large national theater chain. Griffith Amusement Company. He worked nights at the theaters from 10 p.m. to 8 a.m., seven days per week. His salary for the job was a whopping $7 per week. or 10 cents an hour After he got off work at 8. Grider had to report to school at

Despite the lack of sleep. Grider graduated from Pampa High School in 1933. Soon after leaving school, he landed a job with the pipeline division of Humble Oil Company

He later lost that job. four days after he married his hometown girl, now his wife of 46 years, Mildred.

After he was laid off, times were still tougher than tough. and even a hard - working man like Grider couldn't find a and I got the job. At the time, they had a huge billboard up outside the plant that said 'Positively No Help Wanted — Keep Out." Grider said.

He went to work as a general laborer on that scarce "regular" job at the big money rate of 50 cents an hour.
The General Atlas plant was bought by Cabot in September 1945. Grider had worked his way up to shift foreman when Cabot bought the plant.

His work for Cabot saw Grider doing everything from sacking "fluffy" carbon black. "a filthy job." to training employees in England at a new Cabot plant

Livin' easy

Grider suffered a bout with cancer of the colon in 1969. A Pampa doctor performed successful surgery which removed the cancerous tissue. He continues to go back for a checkup every six months, and the checkups have shown no cancer for about 13 years now.

"I guess I was pretty lucky," Grider said. He took early retirement from Cabot "April 1, 1971" at age

"A friend of mine, Carl Anderson, and I went fishing every

How do legislators spell trouble? This year it's T-A-X-E-S...

AUSTIN (AP) - Legislators who will write the state spending bill for 1984-85 already know they are in trouble and trouble in Austin may be spelled "t-a-x-e-s.

Although the House Appropriations and Senate Finance committees see almost a $1 billion "surplus" on the books, they are scratching hard to keep from ending up at least $500

"The good ol' days are over," said Rep. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, head of the House Appropriations bill writers for the last eight years.

"We've got to do some trimming in a lot of places."

If the two committees, along with Gov. Mark White's budget office, can not squeeze $500 million to $700 million out of the Legislative Budget Board's proposed $32.9 billion spending bill, that's when the tax talk begins.

The House and Senate versions of Texas' budget for the next two years will be debated in each chamber with the final draft written by a 10-member conference committee. probably just before the session ends May 30.

Since the Texas Constitution decrees a pay-as-you-go policy, the approved bill must pass inspection by the comptroller - spending for 1984-85 cannot be more than expected state revenues

For the past decade, Texas' growing sources of revenue. particularly oil and gas taxes and sales taxes, have allowed biennial increases in the major state funds of close to 30

There is no room for a 30 percent increase this time. according to Comptroller Bob Bullock's money forecasts. He cut his revenue estimate for 1984-85 by $1 billion and hinted it would drop even more if Texas' economy does not rebound in 1983 as expected

With Bullock's latest estimate of a "surplus" of $958 million, legislators could write a bill increasing major state funds by $4.2 billion, or 21.8 percent without the need for a

"Taxpayers may wonder why any new revenue is needed beyond the $4 billion available from existing sources," said a special report from the privately financed Texas Research "A 20 percent spending increase in the midst of an economic decline and at a time when nearly every other government in the nation is facing budget cuts might be

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has said the Legislature might have to pass a tax bill of up to $1.5 billion if state agencies get all they Both Gov. Mark White and Speaker Gib Lewis say the state should live within its present revenues.

Possible new or increased taxes mentioned most in early talks have been a one-cent increase in the state's four-cent sales tax, which would produce $1 billion more a year, and a five-cent increase in the five-cent state gasoline tax, which would produce $500 million annually.

Each state agency and board wanting state or federal funds will be questioned closely by the House and Senate committees. Members of each house hope to have a bill to debate about the middle of April.

White also will submit his budget recommendations. probably the first week in February

We need to get at least $700 million below the Legislative Budget Board bill." said Dennis Thomas, the governor's budget officer. "Our recommendations will generally follow the LBB bill, but we will have our suggestions. Said Presnal

"I think we need to cut at least $500 million to $600 million out of the LBB bill. Some of the things that looked like emergencies a little while ago may not be emergencies now. "I think we can make it." Presnal said. "If we can't, then it's up to the leadership (governor, lieutenant governor and speaker) to decide what to do. We sure don't want to end up like California, where they are thinking about issuing warrants instead of paychecks — promises to pay when the money is available."

After 40 years, top Nazi hunter still looks

By KENNETH JAUTZ

VIENNA. Austria (AP) - For nearly 40 years Simon Wiesenthal has hunted former Nazis, but the survivor of Hitler's concentration camps insists he is working for the future and not avenging the past.

At 74. Wiesenthal is still busy perusing documents and prodding governments in hopes of tracking down what he says are an estimated 110,000 suspected Nazi war criminals not vet accounted for

The renowned Nazi hunter rebuffs critics who say he is a man obsessed by the past. Wiesenthal maintains that his work is important for young people today.

"One half of the world's population was born after World War II." he said in an interview. "They have no personal relationship to the Nazi genocide of that time, and it is important that we continue to teach them about it.

Reflecting on the 50th anniversary of Adolf Hitler's election as German chancellor, on Jan. 30, 1933, Wiesenthal says the study of Nazism is still important because of widespread unemployment in Western Europe and the Hitler was "a man who promised to wipe out unemployment." Wiesenthal said. When millions are out of work, the appeal of political extremists from both the left and right is strengthened, he warned.

Surrounded by cluttered bookshelves and commemorative plaques from wartime resistance groups, the balding and portly Wiesenthal directs his Jewish Documentation Center from a tiny office near Vienna's old Jewish quarter.

Saying that "the Jews must honor the dead," Wiesenthal began tracking prominent ex-Nazis after Germany's defeat in 1945, first with the United States Army and later on his

By his own count, he has helped bring some 1,100 Nazi fugitives to trial. Some of the famous cases include Adolf Eichmann, who organized Hitler's ordered extermination of Jews: Stefan Rojko, a warden in the Theresienstadt death camp, and Erich Rajokovic, Eichmann's chief deputy in Poland.

But the master Nazi hunter said he is not driven by the desire to punish, and acknowledged that the mass murder of six million Jews by Nazi Germany was a crime that can never be avenged.

"My work is a warning for the potential murderers of tommorrow," he said. "We are telling them that they will not die in peace, and in doing so we may be helping to prevent future genocide.'

The Jewish Documentation Center now has open files on some 2,000 cases. But Wiesenthal estimates that about 150,000 Nazis were involved in war crimes, and says his office's extensive archives are only "the tip of the iceberg."

Since World War II, 40,000 former Nazis were tried for war crimes, according to the center's figures. Most were found guilty, although no exact tally is available.

Wiesenthal's best-known unsolved case is his decades-long pursuit of Dr. Josef Mengele, the infamous "Death Angel" at the Auschwitz concentration camp.

On at least five occasions, Wiesenthal said, he has come close to capturing Mengele. who is thought to be in Paraguay or Uruguay. Last year he raised the reward for information leading to Mengele's arrest from $50,000 to $100,000.

In recent months Wiesenthal said he has provided information about dozens of suspected Nazi criminals to public prosecutors in West Germany and other European countries, and has repeatedly criticized Poland's martial law regime for reviving anti-Semitic propaganda.
"In Central and Eastern Europe anti-Semitism has survived the Jews," he said. While most were killed in Hitler's extermination programs, others emigrated to Israel

A strong-willed and opinionated man. Wiesenthal is quick to criticize and praise. He said the West German government has provided an admirable amount of money and manpower for the hunting of Nazi criminals, but added: "That is their ticket back into the community of civilized said the United States, although now actively pursuing former war criminals through the Department of Justice's Office of Special Investigations, "started too late."

Wiesenthal estimated there are "many thousands" of war criminals now in the United States, and said the Justic

He also praised other West European governments, but

Department is investigating 300 cases.

Born in Buczacz, Poland, Wiesenthal was taken by the Nazis after German forces overran Poland. His entire family died in concentration camps, and he was moved from camp to camp, eventually spending much of the war in Wiesenthal said he has no plans to retire or to cut back his busy schedule, which takes him frequently around the world to examine documents or interview yet another aging witness. He also appears regularly at fund-raising events for

'I ask only that God grant me good health and that my friends give me more money," he said. "With that I will continue for as long as I can.

Meallen Texas (AP) -Sporting a Texas-size cowboy hat and a diamond-studded bracelet that reads "Big Daddy. the tall Mississippian saunters through the chic emporium's marble-floored aisles.

He stops to explore a palm-size rhinestone-covered evening bag that resembles a snowbird and sells for $1,750. He hands the bag to the curious shopper next to him. then sizes up the spacious department store.

This isn't Neiman-Marcus, is it?" Big Daddy asks.

"It's better," replies Lan Jones, president of Jones & Jones, the Rio Grande Valley's answer to the Dallas specialty store

In its 56th year, Jones & Jones specializes in some of the finest and most unusual merchandise in the world and enhances both by employing sales clerks that "receive customers as they would receive them in their own living room," said Jim Jones, son of founders Frank and Amy Jones. The Jones family has built a multimillion-dollar operation by catering almost exclusively to the region's wealthiest families - who, in the young Valley of Frank and Amy's time. were making their fortunes from citrus, land and gas. "People were then and are with my family, knows many now surprised to find a little bitty town like this with a store that has so many high quality lines," the senior Jones said.

The Jones & Jones reputation for quality and service has grown from a town that now claims just 75,000 residents

Its customer list today could comprise a "Who's Who" of the affluent from both sides of the Rio Grande despite Mexico's current economic woes.

Margaret McAllen, whose husband descends from the city's first family, recently spent half a day under Jones & Jones' 24-foot ceiling in La Plaza mall. She made arrangements for a trip to Hawaii at the travel center, selected cosmetics from lines that include Orlane and Clinique. and stopped for lunch at The Patio, the garden-style restaurant offering a luncheon fare some say rates among the city's best.

Asked how many years she's patronized Jones & Jones. Mrs. McAllen replied: How long has it been in existance?

Like other shoppers, Mrs. McAllen lists "the friendliness of the personnel" first when asked what keeps her coming back. "We have nine different buyers who buy for their departments," said Jim Jones. "Each of them, along of our good customers, knows what their tastes are and buys with a particular customer in mind."

Merchandise quality also rates high among shoppers. Never are the words "too expensive" mentioned. although $500 for a casual dress is not unusual.

Jones & Jones purveys women's lines that include Oscar de la Renta (gowns in the $5,500 range). Albert Nipon, Halston and Anne Klein.

For men, the store offers lines that include Oxxford (a $3,950 guanaco wool coat) and Walter Morton, among others.

For anyone who can afford it. Jones & Jones provides a Lalique lead crystal table for $59,500, fine porcelain by Boehm, china by Royal Copenhagen (one design at $1.875 a place setting). sterling silver by Buccellati and antiques from Europe and the Orient bought

ICE DAMAGE The recent ice storm caused considerable damage to a lot of trees and shrubs as well as various power lines in parts of the

These storm damaged trees should have all of their broken branches removed. Try to reshape the tree at the same time if a lot of branches have to be removed. Broken limbs should be pruned back to a main scaffold branch or the central trunk.

Cuts on trees should be made with a sharp saw and made flush to a side branch or to the tree trunk, making certain that no stubs are left.

Broken trunks, split crotches or cracked limbs often are mended by restoring the damaged part to its original position and holding it there permanently with such things as screw rods or cables. You may need to consult professional arborists for this type of work

Dr. Wayne Hayenga will present the program. He is extension economist and project group supervisor in farm management. In addition, he is an attorney and has an excellent background to assist farmers, ranchers and agri business people in developing estate plans to save taxes. He will give you several ideas and methods to lower your estate tax burden. The program will start at 9 a.m. and conclude around 4:30 p.m. each day.

SOIL TEST BEFORE TOP DRESSING WHEAT During the fall, the dry weather held dryland wheat to very little growth. Producers who had soil tested last August were given instructions to topdress nitrogen if suitable soil moisture was received. The moisture we have received since Thjanksgiving is a start towards restoring our soil moisture. Normally, 30 pounds per acre of actual nitrogen is suggested as a topdress when there is suitable moisture on drylands. A soil test is a good guide to estimate available nitrogen contained in your soil whether you plan to cut grain or grow wheat for grazing. For those planning to cut grain, a ppm of nitrate - nitrogen in your soil will furnish sufficient nigrogen to produce a bushel of wheat

NITROGEN IN RECENT SNOWFALLS

Producers ask about the amount of nitrogen received from the snow that we have each year. This year, the soluble salts, nitrates and pH was measured in the snow that fell before and after Christmas at Lubbock. The snowfall measured 8 inches and when it was melted down, it measured a total of 1.25 inches of water. The soluble sale measurement was about 50 ppm (about normal). The pH of the water melted from the snow was 6.3 which is slightly more acid than rainfall last spring.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Texas A&M researchers are working on a project which they hope will produce instruments that speak to farmers through their tractor radios. telling them when to shift gears to save fuel.

"Many of the tractor operators today are not experienced," said with Dr. Stephen Searcy, a microcomputer expert at the university. "They are foreign nationals and kids."

The researchers, sponsored by John Deere and Co., may first develop a system of lights which flash to tell a tractor driver when he can improve efficiency by shifting to a higher gear. Stout said. Such a system is being used by some automakers, he noted.

"But a more sophisticated way to go would be to talk to him through the radio that's in the cab." Stout said.

ICE DAMAGE The recent ice storm caused considerable damage to a lot of trees and shrubs as well as various power lines in parts of the

These storm damaged trees should have all of their broken branches removed. Try to reshape the tree at the same time if a lot of branches have to be removed. Broken limbs should be pruned back to a main scaffold branch or the central trunk.

Cuts on trees should be made with a sharp saw and made flush to a side branch or to the tree trunk, making certain that no stubs are left

Broken trunks, split crotches or cracked limbs often are mended by restoring the damaged part to its original position and holding it there permanently with such things as screw rods or cables. You may need to consult professional arborists for this type of work

We have an excellent pruning publication - B - 1347 Pruning and Training Landscape Plants. If you would like a copy, call or come by the County Extension office. It contains a lot of useful illustrations

SOLAR SEMINAR The Solar Seminar which was postponed from last weekend has been rescheduled to Feb. 18 and 19. It will be held at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd., West, in Amarillo.

As before, the Friday program, Feb. 18, will be from 6 to 10 p.m. The Saturday program from 9 a.m. until noon. The Saturday program will be at a lumber yard in Amarillo. Participants will learn Solar Energy applications for the home, agriculture, food drying and other uses as well as technical information on construction of solar collectors and storage. A collector will be built at the lumber yard by the participants on Saturday

Pre - registration of $15 per person will be required. This will be handled through the Oldham County Extension office. Box 380, Vega. Texas 79092. Registration will be limited to the first 300 received in the Oldham County Extension office. Checks should be made payable to "Oldham County Program of the ideas and tax savings discussed.

ESTATE PLANNING SEMINAR A two - day Estate Planning Seminar will be Feb. 14 and 15 in Pampa at the Coronado Inn. This is similar to the program held last year. We heard many nice comments about the value

Dr. Wayne Hayenga will present the program. He is extension economist and project group supervisor in farm management. In addition, he is an attorney and has an excellent background to assist farmers, ranchers and agri business people in developing estate plans to save taxes. He will give you several ideas and methods to lower your estate tax burden. The program will start at 9 a.m. and conclude around 4:30 p.m. each day. The registration fee is $10 which includes both non meals. refreshments and materials and can be paid at the door. Preregistration is needed by Feb. 11. Please call 669 - 7429 or come by the County Extension office SOIL TEST BEFORE TOP DRESSING WHEAT

During the fall, the dry weather held dryland wheat to very little growth. Producers who had soil tested last August were given instructions to topdress nitrogen if suitable soil moisture was received. The moisture we have received since Thjanksgiving is a start towards restoring our soil moisture. Normally, 30 pounds per acre of actual nitrogen is suggested as a topdress when there is suitable moisture on drylands.

A soil test is a good guide to estimate available nitrogen contained in your soil whether you plan to cut grain or grow wheat for grazing. For those planning to cut grain, a ppm of nitrate - nitrogen in your soil will furnish sufficient nigrogen to produce a bushel of wheat.

NITROGEN IN RECENT SNOWFALLS

Producers ask about the amount of nitrogen received from the snow that we have each year. This year, the soluble salts, nitrates and pH was measured in the snow that fell before and after Christmas at Lubbock. The snowfall measured 8 inches and when it was melted down, it measured a total of 1.25 inches of water. The soluble sale measurement was about 50 ppm (about normal). The pH of the water melted from the snow was 6.3 which is slightly more acid than rainfall last spring.

Through tractor radios

Sensors may speak to farmers

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Texas A&M researchers are working on a project which they hope will produce instruments that speak to farmers through their tractor radios, telling them when to shift gears to

Dr. Bill Stout, an energy specialist with the school's agricultural engineering department, said the research is especially aimed at helping inexperienced workers reduce fuel waste

"Many of the tractor operators today are not experienced," said with Dr. Stephen Searcy, a microcomputer expert at the university. "They are foreign nationals and kids."

The researchers, sponsored by John Deere and Co., may first develop a system of lights which flash to tell a tractor driver when he can improve efficiency by shifting to a higher gear. Stout said. Such a system is being used by some automakers, he noted.

But a more sophisticated way to go would be to talk to him through the radio that's in the cab." Stout said.

Stout said he believes the project. can help farmers cut fuel consumption by as much as 25

Commercial red meat production down

WASHINGTON (AP) - Total commercial production of red meat in 1982 was about 37.3 billion pounds, down percent from 1981, says the Agriculture Department

Year-end production figures released by USDA's Crop Reporting Board show that beef output was up 1 percent to nearly 22.4 billion pounds and that veal increased 2 percent to 423 million

But pork production, reflecting the cutbacks by hog producers, dropped 10 percent last year to 14.1 billion pounds. the report said.

Lamb and mutton output, at 356 million pounds, was up 9 percent from

In the fourth quarter of last year." total meat output was 9.66 billion pounds, down 4 percent from October-December 1981, the report

Production of beef during the quarter was 5.82 billion pounds, up 2 percent from a year earlier, while veal production was 110 million pounds. down 4 percent.

The production of pork in October-December was 3.64 billion pounds, down 12 percent from the last quarter of 1981. Lamb and mutton rose percent to 93 million pounds.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The number of egg-type chicks hatched last month totaled 31 million, a decline of 6 percent from a year ago, says the Agriculture Department

Further, eggs in incubators were reported at 28 million, a 14 percent decline from a year earlier, the USDA's Crop Reporting Board said.

Looking at broiler-type chicks, the report said the December hatch was 374 million chicks. up 2 percent from a year earlier. The 311 million eggs in incubators on Jan. 1 were also up 2 percent The hatch of 12.5 million turkey poults in December was up 4 percent from a year earlier, and the number of eggs in incubators on Jan. 1 was up 2 percent, the report said.

4 - H PROJECTS WHERE THE LEARNING IS 4 - H projects are where the "real" learning takes place.

4 - H encourages "learning by - doing" and provides citizenship and leadership skills. 4 - H wants to involve all youth - rural, urban, suburban, teens and pre teens, and from all races, creeds, ethnic and economic backgrounds. 4 - H youth learn, work and play

In 4 - H. young people can learn how to make things, grow things, take care of things and repair things in a wide variety of projects.

And the great part about the whole program is that 4-H youth can select what they want to do. Projects include things such as nature study. wildlife, entomology, animal science, beef cattle, horse and pony, dog care, plant science, gardening, field crops, home economics, foods and nutrition, clothing. automotive, bicycle, small engines, mechanics, electricity. personal development, citizenship. leadership and public speaking.

4 - H has a lot to offer. So if you have a desire to learn and want to get involved in an action - oriented program. contact the county Extension challenged over 2,000 miles of trackless wilderness west of the Mississippi. Captain Meriweather Lewis, army officer and frontiersman, chose the artist and mapmaker Lieutenant William Clark for his partner. From 1803 to 1806 the two young men combined their skills and talents to search for a northwest passage to the Pacific Ocean.

GM recalls Arlington workers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) General Motors Corp. has recalled 600 autoworkers laid off for more than a year from the company's assembly plant here, GM officials say.

The workers, who will be back on the job by March 7, were among 21,400 laid-off GM employees to be called back to work Thursday by the nation's largest automaker.

The company decided to increase production at its assembly plant across the nation as a result of improving auto sales and current dealer orders, GM officials said.

The 600 employees returning to work here are among 900 workers who lost their jobs last January when production at the Arlington plant was reduced by 20 percent to compensate for slow sales. The recall will increase the arm's reach of the double bed is a holster holding a few Associated Press Writer rusty bullets and his pistol. CHIHUAHUA CITY.

Mexico (AP) - The bullet-riddled car that Mexican bandit Pancho Villa was driving when he was slain 60 years ago is the centerpiece of this Northern Mexico city's new Museum of Revolutionary History.

"It seems a bit macabre. but the car is an important piece in Mexico's history." says Chihuahua City taxi driver Juan Lara Espinosa.

Villa's black Dodge Brothers sedan parked under an archway in this two-story estate is famed now because 25 bullets ripped through the car in 1923, killing Villa and his secretary in Hidalgo de Parral.

No one is sure who killed Villa: some suggest the United States hired a killer to end its embarrassment over Villa's bloody 1916 raid into Columbus, N.M.

Villa and his renegades burned Columbus to the ground in the only foreign attack on a community in the continental United States, killing 16 citizens and soldiers, to retaliate for America's banning of gun exports to Mexico, historians

Gen. John "Blackjack" Pershing's punitive expedition swarmed into Mexico against that government's wishes with 10,000 men and the first American airplanes to be used in war-like manuevers. They never captured the elusive Villa.

With the death of his widow last year at the Quinta Luz estate about 250 miles south of El Paso, the Mexican government converted his home into that nation's first revolutionary museum.

For 10 Mexican pesos, one can see Villa's bedroom. where his pants, vest and tan coat are draped casually over a chair beside his satin-sheeted bed. Within

Museum showcases car Pancho Villa was killed in

By RANDALL HACKLEY

Villa, born in 1879 as Doroteo - the masculine version of Dorothy - Arango, did well for himself during his life; Mexican schoolchildren refer to him as their country's Robin Hood.

By 1923, Villa drove a Dodge sedan with 12-spoke wooden-frame tires, black top and leather seats. Horses, though, were more common in the high desert country between Chihuahua City and the Texas frontier area that Villa frequented. Villa once lived in El Paso and captured neighboring Juarez for nationalists during Mexico's 1910-20 revolution. He also looted a saloon near Lajitas in the Big Bend National Park, but no casualties occurred.

A famous photo of the mustachioed Villa riding his horse during one of his group's raids is featured prominently in the museum; also disdainfully shown are pictures of U.S. soldiers who occupied Veracruz in 1914 to protest the arrests of American sailors in Tampico.

U.S. Army canteens and khaki packs captured during skirmishes with American troops in the punitive expedition also are showcased like treasures of Prominent pen-pals such as John Reed, portrayed in the recent movie "Reds," wrote glowingly of the beefy-faced Villa's valor: "The soldiers idolized his valiant sensibility and fresh good humor."

Villa, who died at age 44. had a dark side, though. He hanged Chinese immigrants whenever he crossed them in his travels, something historians say borders on the hatred Adolf Hitler held for Villa not only wanted to keep the Mexican race as pure of outside influence as possible, he had expensive tastes for his times.

Two brass-handled swords, seven hand-tooled leather saddles, six bolt-action rifles and silver spurs are still kept in one estate room. The home also has a marble bathtub. shiny silverware, classic wooden dressers and paintings of peacocks.

The Quinta Luz home belonged to one of Villa's three wives. Historians say she was his favorite wife and was tending the garden the day Villa was ambushed while driving into Parral.

Several sharpshooters poised at a turn in the road caught Villa and secretary Miguel Trillo in a crossfire, killing both instantly.

In Columbus' city museum, pictures show Villa dead at the wheel, and Trillo splayed backward over the passenger

Says tourist Lonnie Zent Villa probably got what was due him.

The rest of the government-run museum feaures memorabilia of Villa's expeditions when he sought control of Mexico after the 1911 fall of President Porfirio Diaz, the 1913 murder of President Francisco Madero and Venustiano Carranza's ascension to power.

Villa also attacked Americans on trains in Mexico, slaying some while looting passengers. Villa and several hundred bandits controlled most of Northern Mexico until 1920.

The Harvesters travel to Canyon Tuesday night for another district meeting before returing home Friday night to host Lubbock Estacado and honor former Pampa High Coach Clifton McNeely.

"I'm going to keep my fingers crossed, but I think we're back in the groove now," Nichols said. "The kids kept their composure and their mental alertness. That was a big factor. Levelland, the top-ranked Class 4A girls' club in the state, overpowered Pampa's Lady Harvesters, 69-15, Friday night. "The score sounds bad, but we played pretty good defense," Pampa Coach Jerry Johnson said. "We just couldn't get our offense going." Keva Richardson led Pampa with six points while Debi Young added four, Kerri Richardson, Trecia George two points each, and Melissa Reed one. Lisa Logsdon led Levelland with 18 points. Young pulled down nine rebounds for Pampa.

PSHOF names Nelson player of the year

Pampa's Mike Nelson, who makes the tough plays look routine on the basketball floor, has been named the 1982 Player of the Year by the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame.

The 6-3 senior, who has been a four-year starter and the Harvesters' leading scorer the past two years, will be honored in special ceremonies at 2 p.m. Feb. 6 in Amarillo College's Ordway Auditorium.

Nelson guided the Harvesters to the state playoffs last season, averaging 19.2 points and five rebounds per game. Besides scoring, he led the Harvesters in assists (7.1) and steals (2.7) last season while being named the Class 5A State Tournament All-Star Team.

Honors have been coming Nelson's way since he was was named the district's newcomer of the year as a freshman. Nelson has the league's most valuable player the last two seasons.

Nelson's impressive play this season has brought out a large following of college coaches from all the Southwest Conference schools and such faraway places as Southern Cal and Georgia. Nelson is currently averaging 23.8 points and 7.4 rebounds per game and has broken school career and single-game scoring records. In the ninth game of the season, Nelson broke Jimmy Bond's career mark of 1,484 points as Pampa downed

Putnam City, Okla., 58-49, in the Bi-State finals. His 45-point outing in Pampa's 93-60 win over Brownfield two weeks ago broke George Bailey's single-game record

Each year the PSHOF (Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame) selects the top athlete from each sport in the Panhandle area as well as inducting Hall of Fame members

Acting next best to being

NEW YORK (AP) Barnard Hughes was born here, the son of Irish-Catholic immigrants. During his school days at La Salle Academy on New York's Lower East Side, he thought of becoming a priest.
"So did everybody," he says, sipping tea. He smiles. "I suppose this was the next best thing."

He means acting. Which he's done steadily for nearly 50 years, carving out a respected career as a character actor. He triumphed on Broadway four years ago - and won a Tony - as the cranky, loveable Irish rascal of "Da.

Now he's back. As a priest, Father Bill, a kindly Irish padre with an edge of sadness, tending his flock of impoverished Indians at a dusty Catholic mission in New Mexico in Lanford Wilson's new "Angels Fall."

"Angels Fall," recently transferred from off-Broadway's Circle Rep. concerns the considerable musings of the priest and a group of locals and travelers when a nuclear accident

nearby temporarily traps

Hughes, a short, balding man of 67 with a sunny disposition, nods when asked if he has the Barry Fitzergald concession - often called on to play the sort of padre he essays here. "Oh, yes, yes," he says with just a trace of an Irish brogue. "I thought for a while, though, I was going to get the Gene Lockhart award, cringing villains and all that He's played other than men of the cloth, of course. Like the homosexual tourist Jon Voight beat and robbed in 'Midnight Cowboy." Or an around-the-bend patient in ''Hospital.'' Or an Emmy-winning judge in "Lou Grant," a senator in the stage version of "Advise and

But the churchly roles keep popping up. A parish priest in "Hogan's Goat" and "All in the Family." Parson Anderson in "The Devil's Disciple." Father Feeley in "I Was Dancing." The Priest in John Gielgud's 1964 edition here of "Hamlet."

"Well, you've got to catch me in this," he says. laughing, referring to his current call to holy orders.

George Peppard as master of disquise

By JERRY BUCK

AP Television Writer LOS ANGELES (AP) George Peppard plays a master of disguise in his new NBC series, "The A-Team," and in this scene on a Las Vegas hotel room set he is totally unrecognizable.

Peppard is disguised as a waiter - a black waiter. He wears a white wig, and every inch of exposed skin is covered with dark makeup.

It's a disguise to get him inside the hotel room so that he can rescue a college mathematician from the mob, which has kidnapped him because he's devised a system to beat the gambling

"The A-Team," a movie about a group of soldiers of fortune, is a combination of "Mission: Impossible" and "The Dirty Dozen." They're mostly misfits and mavericks, escapees from a military prison in Vietnam. who've joined forces to take on daring assignments.

The two-hour movie pilot was telecast last Sunday, and the series makes its debut on Tuesday, Feb. 8.

"I've never had a role before where I had to assume other characters or disguises," says Peppard. who remains in makeup and the waiter's uniform during a break in the filming.

Why did Peppard, veteran of two NBC series, "Banacek" and "Doctors' Hospital," return to television?

His answer: "The character is probably the best part I've had in my career. It was a good script and a good script is hard to find." After a pause, he adds, "And I can use the money.

Hannibal Smith, a former Army colonel who Peppard portrays, is just one jump ahead of the military police looking for him. Like David Janssen in "The Fugitive." he has the dogged pursuer on his trail

"But the really fascinating thing about this character, Hannibal Smith, is the character himself, not the Earth mound covers Hitler's last stand

By ERIC WAHA

BERLIN (AP) - A simple mound of bulldozed earth, now a playground for rabbits. covers the bunker where Adolf Hitler chose suicide rather than watch the defeat of his Third Reich.

The ground, now green with grass, lies in the shadow of the Brandenburg Gate, in a fenced-in no-man's land on the East German side of the Berlin Wall off old Wilhelmstrasse.

Once a broad, manicured boulevard flanked by palaces and government buildings of the Nazi elite, it is now a jumble of neglected gardens and parking lots fringed by office buildings and the modernistic Czechoslovak and North Korean Embassies.

It was here that Nazi storm troopers staged a jubilant. torchlight parade when Hitler became chancellor of Germany half a century ago on January 30, 1933.

A parking lot stands on the site of the former Reich *Chancellery where Hitler took the stiff-arm salute of goose-stepping troopers.

A dozen years later, as the 1.000-year" Reich crumbled about him. Hitler and his mistress. Eva Braun committed suicide, according to accounts from their companions in the bunker. Trusted aides said they carried the bodies to the surface and set them alight with gasoline. Only charred bones remained when Red Army troops took the area.

The historical significance of the site is apt to be lost on casual visitors to East Berlin - a result of the Soviet denazification campaign.

Little escaped damage from allied bombers and field guns in the battle for Berlin and much of what remained was razed by the blades of Soviet bulldozers, bent on scraping away the Nazi past.

Tour guides are silent about what happened here when their buses trundle down Wilhelmstrasse. Even the street has been given a new name: Otto-Grotewohlstrasse after the late East German premier.

Gone too is the building erected to house Joseph Goebbels' infamous Ministry of Propaganda. Allied bombers leveled the building and Goebbels poisoned himself in the final hours of the Third Reich.

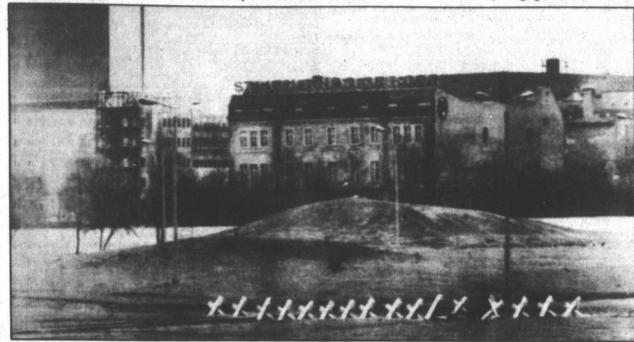

The Kaiserhoff Hotel where Hitler stayed while manuevering to become chancellor has been replaced by the steel and glass North Korean Embassy

Only the former Ministry of Aviation was usable after the war. It has been converted into an East German government office building with no indication of its former use.

The main East German government and Communist Party buildings were erected three miles east of Hitler's

But despite efforts to erase signs of the past, the 50th anniversary of Hitler's rise to power is not passing unnoticed by East German officialdom. The government has used the occasion to reiterate its claim that German capitalists brought Hitler to power.

They also contend Communists alone spotted the danger of Hitler early on and called for a popular uprising against him BONN, West Germany (AP) - Fifty years ago, Jan. 1933. Adolf Hitler was named chancellor of Germany and watched with joy as a great torchlight parade heralded the beginnings of his Third Reich.

Mass rallies for peace now have replaced Nazi stormtroopers marching through the streets.

Economic strength has succeeded the inflationary chaos that helped Hitler win

Fifty years ago, more than 200 rowdy brown-shirted Nazis sat in parliament. Today, some 90 percent of West Germany's electorate supports two stable democratic parties whose soft-spoken leaders hardly evoke images of "der Fuehrer.

The changes have not quieted some fears at home and abroad that Germany could turn from democracy as it did in the 1920s. But most of the 61 million West Germans of today believe they are unlikely to see a repeat of what happened in 1933 when Hitler came to power as chancellor.

"The two eras are basically different. First of all, there is no Hitler, which makes a difference." historian Sebastian Haffner. 75, said in an interview.

there is more broad-based vanished. apport for democracy than existed before.

Hitler) stood on one leg. The on its territory. right wing regretted the monarchy." Haffner said.

'Today we have a democratic right wing.... Support for democracy is broadly based," he said.

Two traits which Hitler exploited, extreme nationalism and reverence for militarism, also have declined. Most West Germans today are either resigned to the division of their country or hoping for a future European political union with all countries as equal partners.

'Chauvinistic nationalism of the expansionistic type that was found in National Socialism (Nazism) during Weimar and the Third Reich is out of the question in both West and East Germany. wrote Eugen Kogon, a historian who spent several years in one of Hitler's concentration camps.

The army, which had become the glorified symbol German of German nationalism, plays no political role today and official emphasis on German historians say militarism, has largely

Taking chances & reaching for stars

At right, Sandy arrives at M. K. Brown auditorium Saturday morning ready to rehearse for the pageant later that night. In the photo at left, she puts on an earring in the dressing room while getting ready to appear on stage.

Most little girls dream of being Miss America sometime during their lives. They imagine the beautiful dresses, the sparkling crown, the fragrant

Usually the dream goes no further than their magination, but a few actually take a chance to reach for the stars and grab elusive Fame. Few catch the Miss America title, extremely few. But at least one young Pampa woman says she is a better person for trying Pampa's Miss Top O' Texas scholarship pageant is generally set for August of each year. The local pageant is a preliminary of the Miss Texas and Miss America scholarship pageants. In 1982 with Gray County's 80th anniversary celebration and other events scheduled all about the same time, pageant officials decided to wait and set the pageant for January 1983.

That gave Sandy Jones, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jones Jr. of Pampa, a little more time to prepare, or so she thought. She discovered that some things involved in participating in a Miss America preliminary are not as she expected them

First, Sandy realized she couldn't find that special all - important evening gown she wanted. She didn't know exactly what it was she wanted, except that the gown would be blue, but no dresses in area stores had that "look" she knew she wanted. She even tried Dallas stores — nothing was right.

Finally, in Dumas of all places, she discovered "the dress." This dress was a flowing, brilliant red chiffon with empire waist accented with sequins, and slim. spaghetti straps. One problem, though: the waist was too big and the dress was too long.

After alterations, Sandy found the dress was still · wrong — waist too tight, hem uneven. A seamstress in Pampa eventually corrected all these problems and the gown was ready.

Next Sandy had to decide what her talent act dancing would be her best choice for a winning act. Now she must find the "right" song and dance routine. Thumbing through her dance teacher's albums, she finally decided on lyric jazz routine to the music "Life is a Celebration" from the KIDS FROM FAME album

Working with her dance teacher, Madeline Graves, Sandy perfected the choreography for her routine, practicing and practicing until the act was

As the date of the pageant approached, more and more responsibilities gathered around Sandy. She's a cheerleader at Pampa High School, so two nights a week she goes to basketball games to cheer the teams on and she dances two other nights a week. She is preparing for track season this spring when she will run the 800 yard and mile relays. As a senior wanting to attend the University of Texas next fall to study physical therapy for handicapped children, she has to maintain good grades in her work at school, in addition to responsibilities at Things were snowing down on Sandy as surely as the three inches of snow covered the icy ground here the week prior to the pageant.

Friday, Jan. 21 and Saturday, Jan. 22 - the fateful day - Sandy rehearsed with the 12 other pageant contestants. Saturday afternoon, she discovered the most difficult part of vying for the Miss Top O' Texas title - the interview with the

This one section of the judging is never witnessed by the public. Contestants do not even see other contestants being interviewed. All questions and answers are strictly between the judges and the contestant interviewed at the time. This is also probably the most important part of the contest.

No matter how beautiful, how talented a contestant may be, if she is not intelligent, up on would be. Although a pianist for eight years, she felt current events self - confident and able to express her feelings clearly, she hasn't much of a chance of winning the title.

In all her preparations for the pageant, Sandy did not realize until her interview that she had not paid much attention to current events.

'The interview was the hardest part of the whole pageant," Sandy confided. "I was really upset afterwards, because I knew I hadn't done very well. Last week I was so busy getting ready. I never had a chance to read the paper or listen to the news. I had no idea they were going to ask me the questions

She was asked a number of questions such as Why was President Reagan's son in the news last week?". or "What was the AFC and NFC?", "How to rate yourself in dancing on a scale of 1 to 10?' "How would you change yourself if you could?" 'Where will the Super Bowl be played this year?' 'Why did you decide to dance as your talent instead of playing the piano?'

'I had studied on the Payment in Kind program because it had really been in the news lately, but no one asked me anything about that." Sandy lamented.

"I loved being in the pageant. I met a lot of girls and made new friends. It didn't seem like we were competing with each other." she said. "It was a good experience for me. I learned how to relate to people and gained more self - confidence. I learned how to get in front of a people I don't know and do well and I learned how to talk to strangers.

Sandy said she wasn't at all disappointed after the pageant even though she didn't win anything. "I was so happy for (Brandi Huff, the winner)." said. She and Brandi had been best friends for years. In fact, Brandi had piqued her interest in dancing after the two had played like they were dancers wearing Brandi's dance costumes.

"Saturday night, afterwards, I said 'Never again! but now I think I probably will try again next year. A Sandy said.

Gardening by Moon Signs

The Moon will be Decreasing: 1-12: 27-28. The Moon will be Increasing: 13-28. The Fruitful Signs are: 3-5 (Scorpio); 13-15 (Pisces): From 12:30 p.m., the 22nd to 2 p.m., the 24th (Cancer):

The Semi-Fruitful Signs are: 1-2 (Libra); 8-10 (Capricorn);

18-19 (Taurus)

The Barren signs are: 6-7 (Sagittarius); 16-17 (Aries); 20 until 22 Noon the 22nd (Germini); from 2 p.m. the 24th until 2 p.m. 26th (Leo); from 2 p.m. the 26th until 2:30 p.m. the 28th The Moon requires 27 and 1-3 days to make a cycle with respect to the stars and the zodiac 12 signs passing through them just once in a month. This is called the Zodical Cycle. The astrological system of naming the lunar phases does not always correspond to those used in other almanacs and calendars. It is therefore important to follow only The Moon Sign Book, there is only one Moon Book.

February is an "off" month as to working in the garden, but what you do at this time can make or break your gardening program and activities for the rest of the year.

You need to make a study of what you are doing, why you do it. How much time it takes for the seed to germinate, how much time it takes for the plant to reach maturity, when it can be planted outside. If you are planting outside, you will need to know about the soil temperature when they should be planted.

A working knowledge of these factors will enable you to get your gardening program started indoors on a practical schedule, moving your plants outdoors as local weather permits. A program thus maintained will permit successive crops, double harvets that should fill your freezer and shelves for next winter. And you should bear in mind that plants that are given a good start and come early to maturity are better able to withstand insect attacks and midsummer dry weather.

But when you plan - and start - in February, it makes it an "on" gardening month. Some of the vegetables that should be planted at the last of the month are cabbage, peppers, tomatoes, broccoli, eggplant, kohlrabi, and lettuce. Seeds of many annual flowers can be sown at this same time.

If you have no already ordered all the plants, trees, including fruit trees, do it now. Then you won't have a letter from your nurseryman with a note attached, "Sorry, all sold

Be sure and keep your records of sowing and planting dates. the length of time elapsed before they germinate, the dates of transplanting, blooming, etc.

This is the month we like to prune our grape vines. If weather permits, we would like to do this on the 3rd, 4th and

If you are lucky enough to find a second - hand storm door, you can put together an electric hotbed, which should give you a really early start on spring. Make the form to fit the storm door. The back should be about 12 to 18 inches high, the front about six to eight inches. It should be placed on the south side of the house near an electric outlet.

We like to dig about six inches of soil, then we place two inches of compost and then place the cable on the soil. Fill in with two inches of sand and vermiculite. This will help you off easy to maintain successive crops.

Continue to water bulbs (tulips, amarillis) until their tops turn yellow and store in a cool place until spring when they can be planted outside

Snow, sleet and ice formed by the fog recently really took its toll on many of our trees around town. Our big elm tree had more branches on the ground than left on the tree. The elm tree is very brittle and does not take ice storms at all.

You can have a vase of sunny yellow forsythia or soft gray ussy willows bursting into bloom in just a few weeks by oringing branches indoors and "forcing" them.

After bringing the branches into the house, pound the stem ends with a hammer to open them for water absorption. Then submerge the branches in warm water. Leave them 24 hours. Remove and stand the stems in water with a teaspoon of liquid bleach to prevent bacterial growth. By the the end of the week, bring the branches into a warm, sunny window. Mist the branches once a day. The more advanced the bud stage when you cut the branches, the sooner they flower. Usually it takes rom three to four weeks for them to flower.

If rhubarb is to thrive consistently, it should be protected from extreme winter freeze. Otherwise, the shallow crowns may be severely damaged or killed.

After the first freeze and the leaves have disappeared, cover the plant with old hay straw or straw stable manure. This will keep them protected even if we go to 10 degrees below. This mulch must be removed in the spring about early April, being careful to avoid breaking any tiny leaf stalks that may be pushing through the earth

February is one of the best grape planting months. We have some of the new seedless types; they produce early.

Try planting a dwarf apricot tree. We are putting out Sungold and we put out Moongold last year. We plan to dry some of them if the freeze will let us have some fruit. Split the halves open, steam for five minutes to kill decay enzymes, then dry them in a food dryer. You know how much these cost in a store.

February 2 comes the traditional Ground Hog Day. If the sky is murky, when the ground hog appears there will be no shadow so he stays above ground and so an searly spring is coming. If the sun is shining he will shadow and therefore retreat back into his burrow for another six weeks.

This legend probaly came from Europe and was predicted by the hedge hog or German badger. When the German settlers arrived in this country they found no hedge hog so they fitted their legends to the ground hog.

A ground hog is actually a ground - dwelling squirrel who lives only to eat and sleep. His hibernation begins in mid autumn and continues until March.

Many Valentines receive pots of hyacinths, tulips or daffodils. These blossoms will last longer if the pots are kept in a cool location. The soil should be kept moist. Turn the pots frequently to keep the stems upright.

Once the followers fade, do not let them dry out and when spring comes they can be removed from the pot and planted outside, you may have some blooms next spring. You may have some tips of leaves from your bulbs poking through the ground. This generally does not damage the flower. It would be a good practice to mulch the plants.

Computers are used to find cancer clues

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Scientists are turning to artificial intelligence to help them find long-sought causes of cancer, according to Dr. Gilles Klopman, professor of chemistry at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland.

Klopman told a recent meeting of the American Chemical Society here that computers are being used to predict whether various chemicals will cause cancer, and in some cases explain why or why not. His own work, supported by the Environmental Protection Agency, focuses on suspected carcinogens called nitrosamines, commonly found in cigarette smoke and beer.

To determine if an untested chemical can cause cancer, the computer compares its structure with that of many other chemicals, whose cancer-causing potential is already known, Klopman explains. When enough data is compiled, scientists can begin to speculate on how a certain chemical structure is able to trigger the dis-

He says that with more than 6 million chemicals known, it is important to know which ones focus on. Computers, he says, can often make this decision quickly and at little ex-

I never go to a class reunion that I don't come away feeling desperately sorry for all those pathetic people in their twilight years who look their ages, but don't act it.

With me, it's different. I look the same as I did in college, have the energy of a 20 - year old and the body of an athlete. I cannot fathom why age has not taken its toll on me. And don't ask me to explain why we were all 21 or 22 when we graduated and I am now the youngest person in the room. I just accept it.

You can imagine my surprise when a survey came out a few weeks ago claiming that two-thirds of the men and women in this country perceive themselves as younger than they are. Once they reach middle age they think of themselves as anywhere from 5 to 15 years younger ... most of them putting themselves between 30 and 35.

Translation: Two - thirds of this country has the mentality and attitude of a 30 - year old. No wonder Social Security is in trouble. No one figures they're old enough to get it. No wonder unemployment is at a high. No one wants to retire. No wonder car sales are down. Everyone is out running marathons. Small wonder divorce rates are rampant. Everyone thinks they are single.

I can't figure out what's so great about being 30. I can truthfully say I never aspired to lock into that decade. They weren't the best of all years for me. My hair was its natural color, maternity underwear was a staple and I had a four - phrase vocabulary: "Shut the dorr," "The check's in the mail," "I'll be out in a minute. What do you want?" and "You should have gone before you left

The days had 36 hours in them and I felt like I was 50 years old.

Age 30 was a time of struggle. A time when you only went to your reunion if you were selling insurance or cars. A time when you got mad if your husband - wife didn't fly into a jealous rage when someone talked to you. A time when the car payments outlasted your car by two years.

It's a little scary that two - thirds of this country are in a youthful holding pattern, dictating what music will be played, what television shows will be watched, what books will be read and what laws will be passed.

Maybe it's time for someone to step forward and volunteer to assume their rightful age of wisdom and experience. It's a rotten job, but someone has to do it.

rotten job, but someone has to do it.

I'd volunteer, but who would believe me?

Dr. Lamb Watch those antacids

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read in one of your columns about the gradual buildup of magnesium in the blood. I've taken hundreds of Maalox tablets during the last 25 years. I'm 44 now. I have those disoriented, sluggish, feeling of old age symptoms you spoke about in relation to magnesium toxicity and it struck home.

Can you please elaborate? Does the body eliminate the excess magnesium if one stops taking such products? Is the damage permanent?

Is the damage permanent?

DEAR READER — Ordinarily the small amount of magnesium absorbed from antacids and laxative preparations is rapidly eliminated by the kidneys. But after age 50 the ability of the kidneys to eliminate magnesium may decrease. The routine blood tests can't identify this for doctors and they have to do a renal clearance test or use conversion charts to determine it. You should be all right since you are only

Yes, if you stop the magnesium intake the kidneys should eventually catch up with clearing the blood of excess magnesium provided you have reasonably good kidney function. And with that, any symptoms retained magnesium may have caused will disappear.

caused will disappear. There are quite a few problems with antacids. Not only can magnesium be a problem in older patients but there are questions about aluminum absorption and whether it is related to memory loss or possibly Alzheimer's disease. This is still speculative. But aluminum does limit absorption of phosphates, which can lead to inadequate calcium phosphate in bones, causing dissolving bones. In any case, people should not take antacids on a regular basis on their own without their physician's supervision. He may have something much better to offer and it is important to know what is being treated.

The effects of the ingredients in antacids and the ingredients in various common antacids available to the public are included in The Health Letter 10-4, Use and Abuse of Antacids, which I am sending you. Others can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY

DEAR DR. LAMB — Our daughter has six children. Three are in school and three are preschoolers. This past year she has had strep throat five times. Two times she developed pneumonia. We are very concerned.

Even though she cleans and washes constantly, could she be overlooking some area or using the wrong kind of disinfectant? What about carriers in the family? How can she get at the root of

DEAR READER — I doubt it has anything at all to do with cleanliness or disinfectants. We are all exposed to various germs, including streptococci, but because the number is small and our body defenses are developed we can ward off these noxious agents. When the bacterial invasion is much larger or our defenses are down we get an infection.

She may have an immunodeficiency; her immune system may not be functioning at top level. She might have her doctor check this, including her gamma globulin level. We more often see gamma globulin deficiencies in young children. And looking for carriers is not a bad idea. Finally, if she really has such frequent infections, continuous preventive medicine, such as daily penicillin, might be considered.

Homemakers News By DONNA BRAUCHI

County Extension Agent Choosing to become a parent is one of the few irreversible lecisions of life. Parenthood further requires a jump into

Until quite recently, culture and religious pressures made arenthood a foregone conclusion rather than an option. Birth control information and the value society places on individual levelopment have made it possible for people to exercise their ptions in parenting based on lifestyle, financial well - being and personal and - or religious values. Sometimes the responsibility for decision - making can be leavy, especially when the choice of to-be or not-to-be a parent nvolves another life, responsibility for a dependent person and alteration of current lifestyles.

Three questions to consider prior to parenthood are: (1) Does your decision follow your true values? (2) Have you considered all the alternatives? (3) Are you the one making he final decision

Adolescent pregnancy in Texas is being called an epidemic. Gray County statistics would support this viewpoint. One national survey reports that half of all teenage births are unintended. Fertility among women in general has declined during the last two decades, while fertility among 14 to 17 year olds has not. The number of babies born to girls 14 and under in Texas has increased nearly 64 percent since 1967

Teenage mothers have several major concerns. Seventy five percent of mothers 17 and younger have no insurance, and even more are not covered for maternity expenses. Inadequate prenatal and medical care usually result when teenagers have no insurance. Infants born to teenage mothers are more likely to die, have birth defects, and - or low birth

Teenage mothers are more at risk for illness or injury related to birth than older mothers. Mothers under 15 are more likely to die from toxemia than older mothers and are more subject to illness due to nutritional depletion Married or single, being a teenage parent has a lot of built in problems. Teenagers who get pregnant out of carelessness. ignorance or a misinformed belief that a baby provided instant adulthood acceptance and independence are apt to be disappointed.

Education and understanding seem to be the keys to solving the problem. Adolescents need to have access to reliable. accurate information concerning their sexuality. A parent child relationship where open communication is the pattern is the most successful way to achieve understanding

Texas Agricultural Extension Service will be sponsoring a training on teenage sexuality on May 17 in Amarillo. six persons from Gray County will be trained to conduct seminars and educational opportunities in Gray County.

Goals for the training are: (1) Become aware of recent facts nd statistics about adolescent sexual activity and pregnancy (2) Explore the development of sexual identity in adolescense as an important part of growth toward healthy adulthood; (3) Consider ways of communicating with their own sons and daughters about issues of human development sexuality and decision making during the adolescent years; (4) Identify appropriate roles for parents, schools, churches and other community agencies in making available necessary information and guidance to parents and young people in their own community

If you or someone you know would like to be a part of the Gray County team to receive training on teenage sexuality, contact the County Extension office at 669 - 7429

MARLA SUE PORTER & RICHARD L. HILL JR.

Porter-Hill

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Brown of Columbus, Ohio, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter Marla Sue Porter to Richard L. Hill Jr. of Columbus, Ohio. The prospective groom is the son of Vivian L. Hill of Grove

City. Ohio, and Richard L. Hill of Obetz, Ohio. The couple have set the wedding date for April 23 at the Parkview United Methodist Church of Columbus The bride is a 1980 graduate of Central High School in Columbus and is employed as secretary for Morris Sheet Metal of Columbus. She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Palmitier of Pampa.

The groom is a 1975 graduate of Grove City High School and is employed by Big Bear, Inc.

Marriage: keeping up with changing times

The vast majority of couples today are choosing formal and traditional affairs. According to a recent Bride's magazine survey, 98 percent of the brides choose a white or ivory dress, 97 percent plan a religious ceremony and 89 percent invite 100 guests or more.

Wedding ceremonies today are full of options Some clergy members are willing to perform interfaith ceremonies allowing the couple to choose a religious or civil ceremony.

Etiquette in relation to remarriages has been altered so that the couple may decide on what they feel is appropriate: Children may be part of the ceremony, engagement rings worn with pride, a romantic noneymoon planned.

The personal touch

Increasingly popular are classic weddings with a personal touch. Future brides vidualized vows and select their favorite music.

Family members may serve untraditional roles in a traditional service: Dad and Mom could walk their daughter down the aisle and give her away together Young girls may be ring bearers as well as flower girls. The groom's father could also be his best man.

An important ceremonial tip: Don't be tempted to surprise your mate at the altar with a change of hair color, a sudden dark tan or a substantial loss (or gain) of weight.

"Just the way you are" Engaged couples share the sentiment of Billy Joel's lyrics, "I love you just the way you are." That song implies mutual care and respect, important elements in a loving relationship, and de-emphasizes

Celebrate Chinese New Year

Make easy homemade egg rolls

Looking for a way to beat the winter doldrums? Why not have a New Year's celebration all over again! But this time instead of ringing in 1983, welcome 4681. the "Year of the Boar." This four - day Chinese observance, which this year begins on Feb. 13, is the perfect time to gather family and friends for good fun and good food. Sure to be a hit of the party are Chinese Egg Rolls. These homemade appetizer - size delicacies are so tasty you'll be apt to serve them at all your parties.

Since cooked pork is the star ingredient in the rolls. you'll want to coordinate their preparation with a roast pork dinner. Now is an excellent time to buy pork roasts for this fine meat is being sold at most attractive prices because of plentiful supplies. Buy a large enough roast to insure leftover meat for the egg rolls which also include a collection of other Chinese favorites - celery cabbage, bean sprouts and water chestnuts

Adapted from Venezuelan cookery. 1 cup long-grain rice

3 cups water 1 teaspoon salt

½ cup sugar 4 cup canned flaked coconut 1 cup milk

Grated rind of 1 medium lemon (about 2 teaspoons) Ground cinnamon

Half-and-half Rinse rice several times in hot tap water. In a heavy 2-or 3-quart saucepan bring water and salt to a boil; stir in rice and bring to a boil; boil 15 minutes; drain. In the clean saucepan stir together rice, sugar, coconut and milk; cover and cook over low heat, stirring often, until milk is absorbed, rice is tender and grains stick together - about 15 minutes. With a fork stir in lemon rind. Pack a 6-ounce custard cup with rice, filling 34 or completely full; loosen edge with a small metal spatula and turn out into a shallow individual dessert bowl; sprinkle top with cinnamon. Repeat with remaining rice. Serve at once; pass half-and-half. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Dear Abby

Counsel to men who dress up is given a dressing-down

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: To quote the letter to you from Christine Jorgensen: "In the past, Abby, you have recommended the Janus Information Facility as a counseling source for transvestites and transsexuals.'

Leaving aside transsexualism, why, Dear Abby, is it necessary to refer so-called transvestites for counseling at all? "Transvestite" has become, in the last half-century, a male-only word, and is therefore sexist.

Since we don't refer women for "counseling" for wearing men's clothes, advocating the need for counseling for men who wear women's clothes is perpetuating a sexist myth.

True sexual equality will never be realized until men are allowed to be as feminine as women are now allowed to be

J.F. IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR J.F.: In the last half-century women started wearing trousers for reasons of convenience rather than compulsion. ("Rosie the Riveter" would look rather silly repairing a fuselage in a skirt.)

Men, on the other hand, took to wearing feminine attire because it provided some kind of sexual thrill. Big difference.

Counseling helps people to understand and come to terms with their feelings, hence only men who cross-dressed felt the need to be counseled. But even more in need of counseling are those who are unwilling to accept that everyone is entitled to be himself or herself without apologizing.

DEAR ABBY: I am at my wit's end and don't know where to turn for help. We have two daughters, 9 and 7. Our 9-year-old has given us a minimum of problems in school and out. The 7-year-old is the problem. She does fairly well in school, but she has presented what I consider a unique problem. I'm really not sure how to put this, but her teacher has told us that her behavior around the little boys at school needs looking into. She pulls up her dress and pulls down her pants. She was sent to the principal and punished for this once and promised not to do it again.

LE

Well, she broke her promise, and I don't know how to handle it. She's a normal little girl. She goes to church, and we have tried to set a good example at home. We can't understand why she acts this way. WHAT'S A MOTHER TO DO?

DEAR MOTHER: Your little girl is trying to get attention, and is using the most outrageous way she knows to get it. Please take her to a family counselor. Explain the problem to the counselor and leave it to her - or him. Your problem may seem unique to you, but it's a very common "look at me" game most children play at some time in their lives.

DEAR ABBY: Every once in a while I see letters in your column concerning the pros and cons of remaining a vir-

I'm 27 years old, attractive (or so people say) and I'm saving myself for the man I marry. Outside of the fact that premarital sex is morally wrong, here are a few other

1. I do not have to worry about getting a disease.

2. I do not have to worry about getting pregnant. 3. I do not have to wonder if a guy really cares for me or if he's just using me for sex.

I have been out with many guys who have tried to get me into bed, and after I tell them I am saving myself for the man I marry, I never hear from them again. This is fine with me. Why waste time on a guy who looks at me only as something to be used?

When I get married, I want to give my husband a very special gift, something I've given to no one else I've ever known. What can be more special than myself? HOLDING OUT AND PROUD OF IT

DEAR HOLDING: Your reasons for "holding out" are valid, sensible and marvelously refreshing!

"Native Texans" stand up for rights

By JAY JORDEN
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — So you've arrived in the Sunbelt, your worldly possessions stuffed inside a station wagon and lashed onto the top luggage rack, hoping to land a job to replace the one you lost back

Well, don't hope for much sympathy from Native Texans. They're mad as hell - riled about the steady influx of migrants into the Lone Star State that threaten to take away their dwindling supply of jobs, housing and other opportunities. They're fed up with seeing out-of-state license plates and having to decipher foreign

And they're tired of hearing about homesick out-of-staters ganging up to form New York social clubs. One in particular, they say, has an appropriate name: "Damn

A native Texan gets the feeling these days in Dallas and other of the Lone Star State's larger cities that he's not in Texas any more. "I Love New York" stickers abound everywhere.

The native Texan's answer: "Love New York? Take Interstate 30 east But, unlike the popular image. Texans do not always say what they're thinking. Now's there is an organization to speak for

'We feel like Texas is not getting equal representation, that we are not standing up for ourselves," said Kenneth Kemp of Dallas, a co-founder of the Native Texan Association. "Being from Texas is something to be proud of." Every week, about 2.000 out-of-state residents arrive in Dallas and Houston searching for a new job and a new start, according to Texas Employment Commission

TEC officials say out-of-state job applicants have reduced the number of jobs available to Texans in their own state and contributed to unemployment

Clements once boasted that Texas was recession proof.

"We've had so many immigrants from the east down here, Texans were just sort of mesmerized by all of it," Kemp said. "We feel like that in starting this club, we have ruffled some feathers and that is good.

His partner. Paul Calvert of Dallas, agreed. "In the opinion of people from other states, we're allowing them to come in and take what we have to offer,' Calvert, 28. said. "And we have been acting fat, dumb and happy about it.

But more than 1,000 native Texans have signed up in the newly formed club to change

"We are saying that if you are from Texas, your basic Texan is an easy-going individual who has more patience than the average person, and yet at the same time, they are the last persons you want to have on your back." said Kemp, 28. We are trying to get these people to stand up.

Not that we are saying, all right, go outside and meet these Yankees in the streets But we do notice this much that if you are from Pittsburgh or New York, you don't seem to have a problem telling other people what you

So native Texans have taken some stands, made some demands. They say out-of-staters need to carry their own weight in their new

'We feel like we would like to have a voice and say to some of these people, that if you are driving down the freeway in a car with New Jersey plates and taking up a space, then go to the trouble paying your fair share of state taxes and get Texas plates on your car," said Kemp, a consultant.

And not many born-and-bred Texans would have approved of rock star Ozzie Ozbourne's urinating on the Alamo last year

"He should have been run out on a rail," one native. Texan said.

Living in Texas demands loyalty to the state.

Texas is more than a state of mind," said Calvert, a commercial artist. "If you come from somewhere else to live here, come live with us, not against us. We don't appreciate our state being run down But native Texans are not totally without heart. Kemp and Calvert are working to establish a halfway house for homeless out-of-staters. The association has entered into negotiations with a real estate investor for a vacant schoolhouse that could serve shelter for homeless families in a gesture of Texas hospitality.

This would be for all of the people who have been living in roadside parks and makeshift tent cities." said Kemp. "We need to clean up Texas and make it more attractive for our own residents. But this situation has grown even worse recently, not better.

The halfway house, planned for the Dallas area, would be for "a man and his family who are coming here to keep from starving." Kemp said.

'Because the economy's bad, a lot of these people have nowhere to go," he said. "If we can put an alternative out there to help the statistics, we'd like to.

Kemp and Calvert, friends since college, conceived the idea for Native Texans over happy hour drinks.

We are both native Texans, we were raised with lot in common," said Calvert. "We felt we'd be proud to associate ourselves with anything that would be an asset to Texas.

The club struggled initially after it was formed in Dallas but Kemp says he plans to franchise it in other Texas

We noticed that as far as getting together a group of have had more luck here if we'd been promoting a club for people from New Jersey." he said. "There seem to be a lot of them around here. But Both believe Texans wouldn't lie about their birthright.

the Texans have come out of

"If you call up, I'm not going to leave any doubt about it," Kemp said. "I will ask you if you are a native Texan, but I won't go so far as to ask to see your birth certificate. If you want to be so bold as to lie about it, then more power to you. If your fantasy is to be a native Texan, we will not bust your bubble. But if you really are a native Texan, we want you to stand up and be counted.

T-shirts and mugs are being sold by the club, and a magazine and bumper stickers are planned.

'We would like to maintain a Texan culture," Kemp said, 'and we want to be a sustaining voice in it."

Youngsters use video skills

in careers

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) - Some youngsters today are combining their arcade video game experience with technology learned in school to carve out careers and earn money in the computer game business.

This new breed includes an 18-year-old Californian who sold his creation to Atari last year, a pair of Chicago youngsters who invented a video game, then created their own software company to market it, and another California teen hired as a special consultant to a major electronic games company.

Latest on the list, according to Tarnie M. Williams, president of Sydney Development Corp., a software manufacturer here, are Jeff Sember, 16, and Don Mattrick, 18, who have just sold his company the game of "Evolution," which traces the progress of man from his Darinian beginning.
