Prison negotiations underway for release of hostage guards

OSSINING, N.Y. (AP) — Corrections officials and inmate negotiators faced each other through steel bars today in talks aimed at freeing 17 guards held hostage after a "spontaneous" uprising at the maximum-security prison once known as Sing Sing.

Face-to-face talks between five inmates and the members of a special hostage negotiation team began about 7:30 p.m. Sunday, nearly 24 hours after convicts armed with broom handles and night sticks took over the Cell Block B at the state's Ossining Correctional Facility.

All the hostages were reported safe, the rest of the prison was calm and there was only one minor injury, officials said.

Gov. Mario Cuomo, who had set up what an aide described as a "command post" at his New York City office 30 miles away, said today the inmates submitted "a list of requests" which he did not detail.

The governor's statement was read by a spokesman, Peter Johnson, who said there would be no elaboration on the number or nature of the inmate requests. The prisoners' demands have never been made clear.

"We believe the hostages have not been harmed," Cuomo said. "Last night the inmates agreed to allow them to be fed."

Negotiators did their bargaining over tables separated by a barred gateway in a narrow prison corridor. The state's team, established three years ago and not tested until now, was trying to persuade convicts to free the guards taken prisoner Saturday night.

An ABC television crew also was allowed in the cellblock for a time late Sunday night in response to the inmates' demands.

State Sen. Ralph Marino said overcrowding "is one of the big gripes. They are just very uncomfortable in there." The prisoners also were asking for amnesty, he said.

"Most of the inmates locked in there really don't want any part of this," Marino said. "Eighty percent want the hostages released immediately and returned to their cells."

State corrections spokesman Lou Ganim said one reason for the unrest was prisoner "idleness." He said inmates held in that cellblock were awaiting transfer to other facilities and "don't have a lot of activities."

Officials originally reported that 16 guards were taken hostage, with one of them later freed. But early today, a state spokesman said that two other missing guards were also hostages.

"Two guards were missing and believed to be in hiding in the cellblock," said spokesman Peter Johnson. "We did not include them in the direct number count at the time in the interest of their safety."

Marino, who heads the Committee on Crime and Corrections, said the hostages were being guarded by a group of prisoners he described as "Muslims."

Authorities believe it was a "spontaneous and unplanned" uprising, Ganim said. The situation was "calm and the hostages are safe," he said.

No serious injuries were reported, although an unnamed guard was hurt by a blow to the head during the takeover. He was released early Sunday, about eight hours into the siege, in exchange for some prescription medicine.

Officials had been talking intermittently with the inmates by telephone Sunday afternoon, an unidentified prisoner speaking through a loudspeaker said an inmate committee wanted to meet with the prison administration and reporters.

About 200 of the cellblock's 618 inmates were out of their cells for recreation when the incident began, Ganim said.

"What happened was essentially, there was a lot of loud complaints. One inmate started it. He didn't want to go down the hall to the recreation area — he wanted to stay in the gallery," an open area in front of the cells, Ganim said.

After a sergeant and a lieutenant tried to talk to them, one of the inmates began yelling and breaking furniture, he said. Hostages were taken during the melee.

None of the inmates or guards has been identified.

At one point Sunday, an inmate told reporters through a loudspeaker, "We don't wish to harm anyone. That would be our last alternative."

Inmates unfurled banners from broken windows saying, "We Don't Want Another Attica," an apparent reference to a 1971 riot at Attica state prison where 43 inmates and state employees died.

"We live like animals in here," one prisoner shouted through a window.

Ganim said that nine inmates had left the cellblock since the siege began. An inmate who complained of chest pains was carried from the cellblock Sunday by four other prisoners who did not rejoin the others.

Ganim said prison officials spoke with one guard over the telephone Sunday afternoon. The hostage told officials he was fine, Ganim said, and asked that electricity be turned back on in the cellblock.

State Corrections Commissioner Thomas Coughlin was at the scene and had briefed Gov. Mario Cuomo, who set up what an aide described as a "command post."

Court of Criminal Appeals, will be returned to Beaumont.

So Miss Perillo soon will be the only woman in the state awaiting a date with the executioner.

She is evasive when asked about her guilty or innocence, but claims she doesn't remember confessing to the 1980 strangling murder of which she was convicted.

She was convicted in August 1980 of what prosecutors called the "thrill killing" of a 26-year-old Louisiana mechanic, Bob Skeens.

Ambulance rate hike requested

The Pampa City Commissioners will consider a rate hike request by Pampa Medical Services (PMS), the city's six-month-old non-profit ambulance service, when they meet at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in city hall.

Commissioners will also consider raising plumbing and electrical licensing and installation fees, and consider approving two residential subdivisions.

PMS will ask for a $10 rate hike on ambulance rides, bringing the cost to $65 per ride, and for hikes in the fees charged for related medical services rendered by PMS employees, according to Joe Zillmer, PMS president.

Zillmer said the hikes are necessary because the original fee schedule was based on an estimated patient load of 100 patients per month, and the service has averaged only about 70 calls per month since July 1, 1982.

Zillmer says that while PMS is not in financial trouble now, it could see trouble in another six months if its patient load continues to be lower than 100 patients per month and current rates are charged.

Two ordinances governing the rise in plumbing and electrical fees will get their second reading at Tuesday's meeting, after which they will become law. Plumbing fees have not been raised since 1976, and electrical fees have not been raised since 1958, according to Steve Vaughn of the city inspection division.

Fee hikes will average about 150 percent over the current rates. Vaughn says the hike is necessary because the current fees do not even begin to cover the cost of inspecting plumbing and electrical work. Also included in the ordinances are changes in the rules for licensing and apprenticing plumbers and electricians, Vaughn said.

The two residential subdivisions (plats) scheduled to be considered for final approval are Unit Three, Kentucky Acres, and Sunrise Acres, both in the northwestern corner of the city.

Also on the agenda is a proposal which may result in the creation of parking spaces and ramps for handicapped persons at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Commissioners will also consider advertising for bids to sell surplus fire department protective clothing and one used ditch digging machine. These items must first be officially declared "surplus," which is also scheduled for Tuesday's meeting.

The commissioners will also consider awarding a bid for the purchase of four new police cars, according to City Manager Mack Wofford. Wofford said the city buys new cars on a regular basis and will trade in some of the present police vehicles on the new ones.

Also on the agenda is a proposal to award a contract to Lawrence K. Hans & Associates to design and oversee the building of a swimming pool at M.K. Brown Auditorium. Wofford said the pool will be built with M.K. Brown Foundation funds, and not out of city money.

In addition, the commissioners will hear a request for a zoning variance concerning a side yard setback and conduct the routine business of paying the city's bills and approve scheduled salary changes for the month of December.

Earthquake swarm is subsiding

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. (AP) — A swarm of 3,000 mostly small earthquakes rumbled on for a fifth day today amid heightened concern about possible volcanic activity in this mountain resort, authorities said.

"They're still having some," Clyde Campbell, warning controller at the state Office of Emergency Services in Sacramento said early this morning.

The trembling that began Thursday is certainly continuing, said seismologist David Hill late Sunday by telephone from the U.S. Geological Survey center in Menlo Park, near San Francisco.

Quakes registering between 1 and 2 on the Richter scale slowed considerably, he said, while "the ones between 2 and 3 (still too small to be felt) are still popping along at about three or four an hour."

Asked if that meant the swarm might be ending, Hill said, "I think that's everybody's first guess."

If so, he said, it probably means "whatever process was driving this thing has reached equilibrium (and stopped) at least for the moment. Then our concern would fall back down."

But, he added, even if the swarm ended, "Our long-term concern would not change." Last May the USGS issued a "notice of potential volcanic hazard" — the lowest of three official levels of concern — for the area.

While the swarm continues, Hill said, "The chances of this developing into something are greater than when there are no earthquakes."

The smaller quakes have not caused any damage, but two moderate tremors that jolted the area Thursday evening knocked out power for several hours, collapsed a hangar onto a private airplane and tossed merchandise from store shelves.

Small tremors have been hitting this snow-covered resort on the eastern slope of the Sierra Nevada 200 miles east of San Francisco at a rate of 30 to 40 an hour.

The swarm sent at least 40 scientists through deep snow with surveying gear and assorted instruments in search of clues to any possible volcanic hazard.

The region has seen dozens of volcanic eruptions in the past few million years — the most recent about 40 miles north of here just 350 years ago.

Bill Ellsworth, head of seismology at the Menlo Park lab, said, "The weight of the evidence is suggesting there is some volcanic component" to the swarm. But he added that this does not necessarily mean a tongue of molten rock, called magma, is rising toward the surface with potential for an eruption.

The activity could reflect some movement or swelling of a huge chamber of partly molten rock about 5 miles beneath the surface, without any magma trickling upward, he said.

CIA chief testifies on Nicaraguan activities

WASHINGTON (AP) — In secret testimony last month, CIA director William J. Casey confirmed that U.S.-backed rebels have launched sabotage raids into Nicaragua, but denied that the agency is trying to overthrow the country's leftist government, sources say.

Asking to remain anonymous, sources knowledgeable about Casey's testimony said the CIA chief told the House and Senate Intelligence committees that the covert actions are intended to cut off weapons headed for El Salvador while applying pressure on Nicaragua's Sandinista government.

But Casey and other intelligence officials reportedly denied published reports suggesting that the covert actions were out of control and were now trying to topple the Sandinistas.

Nicaragua has charged repeatedly over the past year that CIA-supported, rightist rebels have conducted military raids into Nicaragua from neighboring Honduras. The Reagan administration has refused comment on the reports.

Sources said Casey's testimony was intended to defuse congressional concern over the direction of CIA clandestine activities in Central America, and by most accounts, he succeeded in reassuring some skeptical committee members.

Some members, however, continue to question the difference between pressuring the Nicaraguan government and trying to overthrow it, the sources said.

In his testimony, Casey said anti-Sandinista rebels who have been working with the CIA have conducted raids into Nicaragua and destroyed bridges, the sources said.

Nicaragua charged last March that "counterrevolutionaries" had dynamited and destroyed the Rio Negro and Ocotal bridges, but the sources said it was not clear from Casey's testimony if this was the incident he was referring to.

One source also said Casey avoided giving a direct answer when asked if American agents have entered Nicaragua. But another source said Casey and other intelligence officials stated clearly that Americans had not penetrated Nicaraguan territory.

Casey reportedly put the number of CIA agents involved in the clandestine activities at less than 50, in contrast to published reports that have estimated the size of the U.S. contingent at as large as 150.

Congress has expressed growing concern over CIA activities in Central America, even voting last month to bar the CIA from supporting "military activities for the purpose of overthrowing the government of Nicaragua or provoking a military exchange between Nicaragua and Honduras."

The House adopted the ban on a 411-0 vote after beating back a more stringent prohibition. The Senate accepted the House-passed restriction after it defeated an amendment to ban use of any U.S. funds "in support of irregular forces or paramilitary groups" in the region.

School board to meet

The Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees will meet at 5 p.m. Tuesday in the Carver Educational Service Center Board Conference Room at 321 W. Albert Street, Pampa.

The board will discuss and take action on a bill presented by Lewis Construction Co. for concrete work and on release of maturing bonds which have been pledged as securities to the Pampa Independent School District Depository Account.

There is also the possibility of an executive session on discussion of personnel.

Juveniles arrested in stolen pickup

Two juveniles were arraigned before Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge this morning after they were apprehended driving a stolen pickup truck bearing California license plates.

The pair, aged 15 and 16, who were reportedly runaways from New Mexico, were charged with auto theft in connection with the incident. Bond was set at $20,000 each.

The truck was reportedly left unattended in a rest area on Interstate 40 near Groom when it was stolen.

Department Public Safety (DPS) troopers from Groom chased the pickup to a location four miles south of Pampa on U.S. 70, and were assisted by other DPS troopers and Pampa Police in stopping the speeding pickup.

Officers chased the pickup at speeds of over 100 m.p.h. between Groom and Pampa.

The pair was transferred to Carson County jail in Panhandle by DPS troopers following their arraignment.

Police charge two youths in burglary

Ricky Wayne Powell, 17, of 327 Sunset and Johnnie Max Spotts, also 17, of 517 Perry, were arrested January 2nd and 4th, respectively, by Pampa police officers for burglary of autos. Bonds have been set at $15,000 each.

Detectives have recovered auto stereos and speakers from several autos.

Weather

The forecast calls for fair and warmer weather for Tuesday, with highs in the low 60s. Tonight will be clear and cold with lows in the mid 20s. Winds will be out of the west at 10 to 15 mph through Tuesday. Sunday's high temperature was 54 degrees and the overnight low was 27.

Condemned woman tires of waiting for death

GATESVILLE, Texas (AP) — Pam Perillo broke down and cried in her death row cell when she heard that Charlie Brooks Jr. had been executed.

Miss Perillo says she is convinced that her time is coming.

The 27-year-old California native, one of only five women ever given the death sentence in Texas, awaits her execution in a small cell here brightly adorned with handmade dolls and pictures of horses and Jesus.

People tell her the State of Texas would never execute her, but she says she doesn't believe them.

Brooks, the first inmate executed in Texas in two decades, was put to death in December.

"People tell me every day, 'Pam, they're not going to execute you or any woman on death row in Texas,'" she told the Waco Tribune-Herald.

"But I heard they were not going to execute anybody and they executed him."

She learned last Thursday that her fellow death row inmate and close friend, Linda May Burnett, whose capital murder conviction was reversed two months ago by the Texas

Court of Criminal Appeals, will be returned to Beaumont.

So Miss Perillo soon will be the only woman in the state awaiting a date with the executioner.

She is evasive when asked about her guilty or innocence, but claims she doesn't remember confessing to the 1980 strangling murder of which she was convicted.

She was convicted in August 1980 of what prosecutors called the "thrill killing" of a 26-year-old Louisiana mechanic, Bob Skeens.

Skeens who was in Houston visiting a friend, Robert Banks, an oil company employee, who had picked up Miss Perillo and two hitchhiking companions — Mike Bridle and his wife, Linda. The trio spent two nights at Banks' apartment.

During the morning hours of Feb. 24, Skeens and Banks went out to eat. While they were gone Miss Perillo and Bridle decided to rob and kill their host and his buddy, according to testimony.

When Skeens and Banks returned, they were strangled with a rope.

Miss Perillo fled to Colorado. Within five days after the men's bodies were discovered, she contacted Denver police and made a 26-page confession, a statement she says she doesn't remember giving.

She claims Mrs. Bridle lied on the witness stand.

"I was drunk and had been doing speed (methamphetamine) for five days" before furnishing Denver police with the statement, she said.

"I woke up the next day in jail and I hadn't even remembered turning myself in. But they had a 26-page confession in front of me ... and that confession is what got me the death penalty. It was right there before me with my signature on it, but I didn't remember doing it.

"If I had wanted them men to be murdered or if I was that heartless, a cold-blooded killer, I would have just kept running," she said.

Bridle, who allegedly emulated mass murderer Charles Manson and advertised in a California motorcycle magazine for young women to enlist in a prostitution ring, was sentenced to death in 1982.

Hearing is set on controversial process of schoolbook selection

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Board of Education plans to take a look this year at the controversial way that Texans pick textbooks for their public schools, a process that critics say censors what the nation's children learn.

The selection process has come under fire recently from observers who say state officials pay less attention to parents and teachers than to textbook opponents, some of whom are professional consultants.

Board Chairman Joe Kelly Butler of Houston said Saturday that he is naming a 13-member committee to study the process and hold a public hearing Feb. 5.

"For a long time I have been convinced that the textbook selection process in the state of Texas — although it has served its purpose well — is not well understood by the general public and has become so surrounded by controversy that a strong need exists for it to be examined in depth by the State Board of Education members," Butler said after a regular monthly meeting.

A critic of the selection process said he hoped the study would result in the board broadening the amount of comment allowed in public selection hearings.

The hearings are an annual battle between publishers who want to make a sale to one of the nation's largest markets and protesters who use the hearing to air grievances about everything from communism to sexism.

Books that are rejected in Texas normally are not published for other states.

"We hope that this study committee, after its public hearing in February, will recommend that all Texas citizens have an equal opportunity to submit public comment and appear before the State Textbook Committee and the State Board of Education," Mike Hudson, who directs People for the American Way.

One of the most criticized aspects of the selection process is that the textbook selection committee only allows critics of a textbook to speak at the group's public hearings.

Textbooks proposed for public schools are screened by the committee in the public hearings before they are submitted to the Board of Education.

A supporter of the process also said he welcomed the public airing on the issue.

Taxes, drunks, utility bills will occupy time of Texas lawmakers

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas House and Senate doors swing open Tuesday for lawmakers who will try to figure out how to pay the state's mounting bills, keep drunks off the roads and hold down rising utility costs.

Beyond that, the 181 legislators will consider thousands of other issues, some old and some new.

Legislative reruns include racetrack betting, Sunday shopping, and water supplies — a perennial problem that has attracted a lot of attention in the past but little action.

But Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has said, "The three big issues are going to be money, money and money." He predicts a tax hike of up to $1.5 billion may be needed. Texans have not paid a new state tax in over a decade.

The bills concerning Texans' daily lives are many and varied. There are several efforts to get drunken drivers off the road, and a gubernatorial task force wants the drinking age raised from 19 to 21.

There's also a move to ban drinking while driving by enacting an "open container" law prohibiting motorists from drinking alcoholic beverages while on the road.

Roads are among the big-money items on the agenda. State highway officials say the state's roads are going to potholes. They want $5 billion over the next two years for repairs and construction.

Utility bills, which were made a major campaign item by Gov.-elect Mark White, will draw much attention during the 140-day session. Lawmakers will decide whether the Public Utility Commission, which since 1975 has set water, electric and telephone rates, lives or dies.

By law, the commission self-destructs unless the Legislature takes action to keep it in operation. That debate is sure to include assorted proposals for revision, such as electing the commissioners instead of letting the governor appoint them.

Texans' shopping habits probably will come in for their biannual legislative review. The state's Blue Law, which bars the sale of a hodgepodge of items on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays, might not survive another session.

The legalization of pari-mutuel gambling, another perennial issue, will make another go-round. There could be added impetus toward approval this year because Oklahoma has approved local option elections for legalized gambling at racetracks.

Jury selection to begin for man accused of hiring judge's killer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Convicted drug smuggler Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, accused of masterminding the first murder of a federal judge in more than a century, will be tried in the very courtroom where the victim presided just months before his death.

Jury selection was scheduled to begin today in Chagra's murder trial. Prosecutors say Chagra, 39, paid a hit man $250,000 to kill U.S. District Judge John H. Wood on May 29, 1979, outside his San Antonio apartment.

The trial was moved here because of heavy publicity in Texas. Wood had presided as a visiting judge in the courtroom just two months before he was shot down hours before he was to hear a narcotics case against Chagra.

A team of five prosecutors, led by Ray and LeRoy Jahn, has trucked more than a ton of files — the products of a three-year, $6 million investigation — to Jacksonville for the trial, expected to last four to six weeks.

Chagra is charged with murder, murder conspiracy and conspiracy to obstruct justice. If convicted, he could be sentenced to life in prison.

Wood, 63, died of a single gunshot wound in the back. He had been under federal guard after a 1978 assassination attempt on an assistant U.S. attorney in San Antonio, but the protection was lifted at the judge's request three weeks before he died.

Wood was known as "Maximum John" because of the stiff sentences he handed down in drug cases. He gave the maximum in 72 of 90 narcotics convictions in his court and once sentenced a drug trafficker to 35 years for contempt of court.

The indictment says Chagra hired Charles V. Harrelson, who had the reputation of a card shark and gun for hire, to murder Wood. Chagra, the indictment says, feared that Wood would sentence him to life in prison if he was convicted in the narcotics case.

He was later convicted and is serving 30 years on that count in the federal penitentiary at Marion, Ill.

Last December, Harrelson, 44, was convicted of murdering Wood. His wife and Chagra's wife were found guilty of conspiracy in the death, and all three are to be sentenced March 8.

Producers hoping Texas TV soap opera will float

HOUSTON (AP) — Will a Hollywood experiment in Texas-made soap operas played out on an 11,000-square-foot sound stage here float?

Tomorrow Entertainment, a company with more than 20 Emmys, and MFC-The Texas Outfit of Houston are betting it will.

The melodrama, "The Lone Star Bar and Grill," is believed to be the first episodic TV show ever produced in the United States entirely outside California or New York.

But the plot is probably more Hollywood than Texan: Buddy Tyler, once a singing cowboy, and his vocal wife, Mary Beth, launch the Lone Star Bar and Grill, a haven for bored housewives, night shift workers, disgruntled society ladies and offshore oil rig types.

But before opening the club, Tyler is paralyzed from the waist down in an auto accident. Mary Beth finds herself drawn to Tyler's best friend, a singer named Dave Spiker.

Two months behind on a mortgage payment on the place, Tyler tries to persuade Mary Beth to sign with a shady talent agent in a deal that would turn ownership of the bar over to him if the debt isn't repaid.

Mary Beth refuses, and then a suspicious fire guts the bar. And in the fighting to put it out, Tyler discovers he can walk. His paralysis apparently was psychological.

If the developments in "The Lone Star Bar and Grill" sound like they were concocted by a Hollywood soap opera writer, it's because they were.

But there is melodrama within melodrama. "The Lone Star Bar and Grill" is considered the first series made in America for cable television.

Tomorrow Entertainment has sold six 90-minute episodes to Showtime, a cable company with about 4 million subscribers, the second-largest audience in pay TV.

If the show succeeds when it airs later this year, it may spawn a new film-for-cable industry in Houston. Tomorrow Entertainment vice president Philip D.

Fehrl told the Dallas Times Herald.

"Right now a lot of pay television programming goes to Canada because production there is so much cheaper," he said.

Cable companies generally cannot afford to spend as much as the commercial networks for made-for-TV films.

One Hollywood producer estimated that it costs $2 million to make an inexpensive made-for-TV movie.

Fehrl will not specify the exact cost of "The Lone Star Bar and Grill," but he said that it will be "less than half the cost of equivalent programming on network television."

MFC is keeping down costs by shooting the series on 16 mm. rather than 35 mm film, and is hiring both union and non-union workers, most of whom were found locally.

Bravo Barney Clark!

By PAUL HARVEY

Barney Clark volunteered to pioneer, to become the world's first bionic man.

He suffered as he knew he would. The greater gallantry was demonstrated as he fought back against setbacks.

And then - just before the first Christmas of his second life - doctors removed the large air tube in his throat, replacing it with a much smaller one.

Now by holding his finger over a small hole he could force air through his larynx and speak audible words.

He motioned for Dr. Kolff to come close. Dr. Willem Kolff had invented the kidney dialysis machine, also had inspired research on this first man - made heart. He came close.

It was to him that Barney Clark whispered his first words: "Don't give up."

Bravo, Barney Clark! Since the first Easter, in the image of sacrificial lambs, some men have been willing to take on the sicknesses of the world.

Historically, it has been gallant doctors who offered their own lives to test possible cures for the bite of the rabid rat or the sting of the Anopheles mosquito.

Since the first polyurethane heart replace the living heart of a calf, researchers have known - the FDA has known - that sometime, somewhere, someone's human heart would be required for the ultimate test.

It would have to be a very special kind of person.

An only child, after his father died he'd gone to work to support his mother. He then worked his way through dental school and applied himself so vigorously to the practice of dentistry that he was able to retire at fifty-five, to serve his church, to enjoy his family and to play golf.

Whatever the mysterious viral infection which results in cardiomyopathy - it leads to a flabby heart muscle and eventually, to congestive heart failure.

When Dr. Clark went to the University of Utah to witness for himself the animal experiments with the artificial heart, he said: "Whether the operation is a success or not, I'd like to make a contribution."

December 1, 1982 Salt Lake City was the culmination of years and the confluence of some uncommon careers:

Dr. Willem Kolff, Dutch-born genius with a dream.

Dr. William De Fries and Dr. Robert Jarvik whose hands moulded that dream into a workable organ. And all their gifted co-workers.

And Barney Clark.

It would be easy to exaggerate the potential - to imagine that routine installation of inexpensive mechanical hearts would soon extend the lives of 66,000 Americans whose hearts wear out prematurely every year.

The astronomical cost of the technology precludes that possibility.

But every innovative medical procedure has faced that hurdle - and eventually surmounted it.

And we must ever hear the voices - in shouts and whispers - of Columbus and Lindbergh and Edison and Bell.

And of Pasteur and Fleming and Curie.

And of Barney Clark: "Don't give up!"

Taking a united stand

By Rusty Brown

In my mind, I see this big map of the United States. A lot of cities are marked with small light bulbs. And, as I'm looking at the map, red lights are coming on all over.

The lights are blinking wherever groups of people, mostly led by women, are protesting the X-rated video games that make fun of rape, racism and sexism.

The most bizarre is "Custer's Revenge," in which a caricature of Gen. Custer, clad only in hat, scarf and boots, dodges arrows to rape an Indian woman. Each time the two are "mated," the Indian woman's legs fly up to the strains of a bugle charge.

Two other offensive offerings, by the same manufacturer, are "Beat 'Em and Eat 'Em" and "Bachelor Party."

Outraged women, from California to New York, have tried to block the sale of these games, priced at $50.

Here is what has happened around the country:

- In New York City: A hundred women from Indian organizations, the YWCA, NOW and Women Against Pornography united to demonstrate outside the Hilton Hotel where the game was introduced in mid-October at a trade show.

- In Los Angeles: Feminist and Native American groups stirred up enough fuss that the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors banned the sale of the three games.

- In Albuquerque, N.M.: Just three days after "Custer's Revenge" was stocked at three video cartridge outlets, an alliance of 17 Indian and women's groups, including the Rape Crisis Center, sent a task force to each of the stores to deliver written and verbal complaints.

- In Waterbury, Conn.: Women involved in the Sexual Assault Service, a YWCA-sponsored project, also complained to the manufacturer of "Custer's Revenge" and said the game "raises grave concerns for those of us working with victims of sexual assault."

- In Oklahoma City: A delegation led by the head of the city's Human Rights Commission convinced the city council to write a resolution branding the games "distasteful" and "not in the best interests of the community."

- In Suffolk County, Long Island: Pleas from protesters prompted the county consumer affairs commission to ban the sale of the games, an action now being tested in court by the video game makers.

Much of the widespread national alert can be credited to Jacqueline Delahunt of Olga, Wash., a 20-year veteran of the national YWCA board and chair of its racial justice committee.

A Sioux Indian who grew up on the Rosebud Reservation in South Dakota, she was among the first to personally confront Stuart Kesten, president of Multiple American Industries, the Northridge, Calif., company that manufactures the three games, including "Custer's Revenge."

Says Ms. Delahunt: "He told me it was just a game not intended to offend and that if I was, it had to do with what was in my mind, not his."

Kesten has admitted he timed the distribution of his Custer game to make a hoped-for $4 million killing in the holiday sales market. I just hope the amount of bad press he has received cut into that Christmas bonanza.

What is so impressive about all of this is how quickly the indignation flared. I can think of no other instance when a women's issue received such an immediate and widespread response. In just weeks, a sisterhood of women of different races organized to boycott sales of the games all over the country.

What also impresses me is the number of people who want the younger generation - the chief video game players - to be aware that rape is violence, not entertainment.

As Y leader Ms. Delahunt says, "We can't let our young people think we condone this type of exploitation of women."

By William A. Rusher

NEW YORK (NEA) - The 15-member bipartisan commission appointed to propose reforms in the Social Security system appears to be in danger of forgetting why it was created in the first place.

Tampering with Social Security or even expressing doubts about it, is the most dependable technique for committing political suicide in America today - as various incautious politicians have discovered to their sorrow. The program was wildly oversold by the liberals from its start, and as a result scores of millions of Americans have reached old age sincerely believing that a benevolent government has provided for them. The truth is that Uncle Sam, like a crooked trustee, systematically spent almost the entire corpus of the trust, and for years has been making benefit payments, Ponzi-like, out of the contributions of younger participants in the system.

Naturally the elderly don't like to hear this, and their growing numbers have until recently ensured that, in our democratic society, they didn't have to hear it. Any politician honest enough and brave enough to warn that the Social Security system was heading for the rocks was carted out the door, feet first, at the next election. The rest took care to ensure that the system would keep on grinding out the promised payments for a few more years, and prayed that they themselves would be retired, or better yet dead, when the roof fell in.

As late as this past October, in the last weeks of the off-

A cowardly commission

year congressional election campaign, Charles Manatt, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, was still cynically playing hard-ball politics with the issue, and may have succeeded in flipping a few more congressional districts into his creel with his widely publicized last-minute charge that the GOP had a "hidden agenda" to cut Social Security benefits. It wasn't true, of course, but a good many elderly voters may have decided not to take the chance.

And yet, as the inevitable day of reckoning approaches, it has become obvious that something will have to be done to reform the system or old folks' benefits will have to be cut whether that is on anybody's "hidden agenda" or not. The problem was the old one: Who would bell the cat? Neither political party wanted to risk it; the other might - the Democratic Party already had - try to make political hay out of it.

So President Reagan proposed to go the bipartisan route. He created a commission with 15 members, naming five of them himself. Of these five, three (including chairman Alan Greenspan) are Republicans and two are Democrats. Senate majority leader Howard Baker also named five members - similarly divided between the parties (AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland and Sen. Daniel Moynihan, both loyal Democrats, and Sens. Robert Dole, William Armstrong and John Heinz, all Republicans). Finally, House Speaker Tip O'Neill also proposed five, divided the other way: three Democrats (including Rep. Claude Pepper) and two Republican House members.

Mr. Reagan asked this commission to come up with its recommendations for reform of the Social Security system by the end of this year - his thought being that if this distinguished commission could agree on a set of reform proposals, both the Republican administration and Senate and the Democratic-controlled House of Representatives could go along with them without sustaining unacceptable political damage or being vulnerable to attacks by the other party.

Instead, however, the Greenspan commission has, at the eleventh hour, started calling publicly for recommendations from President Reagan and House Speaker Tip O'Neill! This is a spectacular example of putting the cart before the horse: asking the political figures who are the most vulnerable and have the most to lose to make recommendations (which must inevitably be politically unpopular) to a bipartisan commission that was appointed expressly to take the heat and diffuse it safely between the two parties.

It was, in retrospect, a serious mistake for Baker and O'Neill to appoint so many sitting members of Congress to this commission. Men like Sen. Dole, who regards himself as a presidential candidate if Mr. Reagan doesn't run again, and Rep. Pepper, who is still being re-elected by his elderly Florida constituency as their protector, can hardly expect to stick their necks out on this one. But perhaps a substantial majority of the Greenspan commission can yet "screw its courage to the sticking-place" and do the job it was named to do.

Dollars and democracy

By Don Graff

Bob Shamansky, D-Ohio, is not your ordinary congressman.

For one thing, a reasonably liberal Democrat, he represented a firmly Republican district in the 97th Congress.

For another, in the 97th's lame-duck session he was the genuine article - an incumbent who lost on Nov. 2. And as such, he was even more of a rarity - the only sitting Democrat to be defeated by a Republican challenger. Other House Democratic losses were the result of redistricting that threw two incumbents into the same ring.

Shamansky, the first Democrat to represent Ohio's 12th in 44 years, is quick to point out, however, that he also was handicapped by redistricting, the work of a Republican-controlled legislature in which his opponent, a state senator, had a hand.

But there's something more that sets Shamansky apart from the congressional herd. In an era of escalating political spending increasingly channeled through proliferating political action committees, he has paid a large part of his own way.

He estimates that about two-thirds of the costs of his winning 1980 race, in which he defeated an entrenched Republican incumbent, came out of his own pocket. The figures are still being counted on 1982 spending, but he guesses when they are all in his share will be "maybe 20 percent." And, because he will be obligated to no one but himself, Shamansky has been exceedingly choosy as to where the money for his campaigns that is not his own comes from.

He thus has informed opinions on the impact of money on politics that, in the wake of the humongous spending in the 1982 election, is spurring new demands for another try at reform.

To start with, Shamansky does not see rising costs of political activity as the real problem. They are high and inevitably will go higher because the necessities of a political campaign today cost a lot - "whatever TV is going to charge, they're going to charge."

The real problem is how to pay, without candidates being forced to sell themselves for the financial support without which they could not conduct effective campaigns.

He agrees with many critics that increasingly the only alternative appears to be personal wealth, making politics a game for those who have already made it. Or, he adds, those who have nothing to risk.

These alternatives, Shamansky worries, leave out the overwhelming majority of potential candidates that we should want to keep interested in the political process - concerned individuals determined to vote their own convictions.

He does not, however, go along with suggestions that PAC money be eliminated entirely or believe that a healthy political system is necessarily endangered by special interests.

For one thing, he has reservations about that term since

"every interest is special to the person who has it."

For another, there is nothing to be gained through restraining the PACs, which were supposed to be the antidote to excessive individual contributions but have proved no cure, unless provision is made for obtaining political financing elsewhere.

Shamansky doesn't claim to have all the answers but does have some ideas as to the direction in which we might at least begin looking. And that is the funding of presidential campaigns.

Federal financing has not been without its problems, but it has been beneficial. At the very least, presidential committees are no longer awash in hundreds of thousands of unaccounted-for dollars.

There is a precedent there that should be explored, Shamansky believes. It should be possible to work out a fair system for incumbents and challengers that would fix levels of spending, taking the money element out of politics by recognizing it as a necessary part of a functioning democracy.

Is this of anything other than academic interest to Bob Shamansky, ex-congressman, ex-lame duck? Possibly. He's back home in Columbus but still a politician, and under the right circumstances wouldn't rule out another run for Washington.

And after all, one of the trophies picked up by the Democrats in November was control of the Ohio legislature.

This is only a sampling. Oh, one last name to drop — can her husband match brains with Albert Einstein? LEFTY IN BEAUMONT, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: I have this problem and really don't know whom to ask, so I'm turning to you.
I used to be what you would call a lesbian, but that is all in the past. I have never had a love affair with a male, but I have had a few affairs with females.
I have met this guy whom I really love, and we plan on getting married. He thinks he is marrying a virgin. I told him I was one, and I think I am, but now I wonder. Am I?
Another problem: Should I tell him about my past? We plan on getting married in June after I graduate from the University of Minnesota.

QUESTIONS IN ST. PAUL

DEAR QUESTIONS: Technically you are a virgin. The Human Sexuality Program at the University of Minnesota offers expert counseling. Go there. You need to learn more about your own sexuality. (A few lesbian experiences during one's adolescence does not necessarily a lesbian make.) And don't tell your fiancé anything until you have all the answers.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Right-Handed Mama," whose husband was forcing their naturally left-handed child into right-handedness because he believed "left-handed people are clumsy and stupid".
If they're clumsy, how would he like to have boxed heavyweight champion Gentleman Jim Corbett, played tennis with Jimmy Connors, baseball with Babe Ruth, Reggie Jackson, Sandy Koufax or Lou Gehrig, golf with Ben Hogan or basketball with Willis Reed?

As for being stupid, he is obviously no match for Alexander the Great, Clarence Darrow, Julius Caesar, Napoleon or Queen Victoria, not to mention American Presidents Truman, Ford, Garfield and Reagan.

As far as creativity, what about Michelangelo, Leonardo da Vinci, Pablo Picasso or Bach?

Counselor's Corner

By DAVE BRUMMETT, MDIV

In today's world of high prices, devastating unemployment and rising taxes, it's a struggle to keep up. Our country is the most prosperous in the world and we citizens are expected to pay such prices for essential food. How were we able in the middle of the 20th century to pay less and get more? Now we pay much more and receive less. How do we continue without knowing what's in store for us? What happened to the light at the end of the tunnel.

The best advice heard lately is — be flexible. This means to be fair with everything and everyone we come in contact with. There is something about being fair that's comforting. When I'm fair to my family they seem to respond more happily. When I'm fair, my employees seem to appreciate me more. Fairness is a flexible way to relate to people.

Flexibility calls on us to be lenient, too. It isn't always necessary to be rigid and containing with those around us. Using leniency helps another person feel less confined, less a victim of someone who want's what's best for him.

Taxes are a necessary evil in order for us to have highways and other high living levels we expect. So, let's be lenient with our complaints and not close off what we want in luxury by limiting those who pass laws to give us what we want. Take away taxes and we all suffer equally. Who wants to suffer at all? It may be better to be lenient with our officials who want the same things we do and who pay taxes as we do.

Energy is a partner of flexibility. As we confine energy, we risk losing it. No guarantees are made on how much energy we own. It's hard to measure when awakening in the morning. Sometimes we feel we have a lot, others we feel we have none. Energy is often set aside until it's needed. Spend your energy. It seems to replenish itself substantially when it's used.

Imagination is at home with flexibility. There is space to think new ideas, plan innovative seeds for maturity at the moment awareness is perceived. There is no limit to one's imagination. Flexible minds let their imaginations give civilization conveniences.

It takes a brave person to be flexible. Most of us want it only a certain way immediately. Risky people make our lives cozier. They do not fear failure. They welcome a new horizon and possibilities. Intuitively, they reach deep within and pull out something not yet approved, believed or welcomed. Bravery is a way to help your country become a better place to live. It's a risk, though. You may lose.

However, winning is a better possibility. Winning can be explained in several ways. The way it's used today is to be flexible.

Lap people are winners. They know where they belong — their available when we need them.

My grandmother had a soft lap, one I could snuggle into and soon feel better. Cuddling close to Grandmother, I felt intact. Her feelings were like transparent tape — you could see right through them.

Her consoling voice left me options to decide my own destiny. Knowing me well, Grandmother led me firmly to pursue challenging goals, using fairness, leniency, energy, imagination, bravery, intuition and my lap to possibilities never dreamed before. She believed in flexibility.

Whatever is in store for us depends on our values and principles. We believe in ourselves, those close by and the human race to first bring a light to the end of the tunnel for wayward lives to rise out of their deprivation.

At that moment we are together and there is nothing to bring us darkness again. The struggle is less threatening whenever we allow flexibility in our thinking and realize the best is yet to arrive. A lap person prepares the way by doing for others.

Lend your lap to someone for a moment and be flexible.

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys and Green Bay Packers meet in the National Football League playoffs Sunday for the first time in 16 years.

And the last time, Bart Starr was the quarterback for the Packers.

It will be Starr, the coach, versus Dallas Coach Tom Landry, who lost 21-17 to the late Vince Lombardi in that NFL championship game in 1967, at 3 p.m. CST in Texas Stadium.

Dallas set up the second round National Conference playoff meeting by whipping Tampa Bay 30-17 Sunday. The Packers defeated St. Louis 41-16 Saturday.

"I'm delighted to be playing my friend Bart Starr," Landry said. "They are well coached."

Landry has befriended Starr several times in the past when he was having tough going as the Packer coach.

Dallas' fifth victory against no losses against Tampa Bay was hard-earned.

The Bucs led 17-16 early in the fourth period before rookie reserve safety Monty (Big Game) Hunter intercepted a Doug Williams pass and returned it 19 yards for a touchdown.

Quarterback Danny White, who had a sore thumb and a toothache, threw a career record 45 passes and completed 27 of them for 312 yards and two touchdowns.

"Hunter's interception gave us the breathing room we needed," Landry said. "Danny played well considering his injuries. He let one sail on him but I thought he threw the ball pretty good."

White hurt the thumb in practice last week and got the toothache Sunday morning.

He said, "Four or five times I really noticed my thumb bothering me, including the long interception that got away from me in the end zone."

In the second quarter, linebacker Hugh Green picked off a fumble in the air after White cocked his arm to throw and ran 60 yards for a touchdown.

"On Green's fumble, the ball slipped out," White said. "My hand pulled up too fast, the ball kept going and the next thing I knew Green had a touchdown."

White said he took a shot of novocaine at noon before the game for his bad tooth but once the game started "I didn't notice it."

He said he appreciated the support of the sellout crowd of 65,042, including only 19 no-shows.

White said, "It was real gratifying to hear them (the fans) come alive like that. It was inspiring, there was no way we were going to lose that game."

Running back Tony Dorsett said "the crowd was fantastic ... I hope they continue to do that. You talk about the 12th man; it's great to have the fans behind you, get you pumped up, the adrenalin was flowing."

Asked why he thought the normally blasé Cowboy fans were so enthusiastic, Dorsett said, "There were 20,000 tickets left on Thursday. Maybe we got some of the real fans this time — some of those who can't get season tickets."

Williams, who had a 49-yard scoring pass to Gordon Jones, also had three interceptions and completed only 8 of 28 passes for 113 yards.

"I didn't have the mobility I usually have," said Williams, who played despite a pulled hamstring. "The defense had a hell of an effort and the offense didn't help them."

"But I'm not embarrassed. I've seen people have worse days."

Dallas jumped ahead 6-0 on a pair of 33-yard field goals by Rafael Septien but Green struck to put Tampa ahead.

Bill Capece kicked a short field goal for the Bucs, but White threw a 6-yard scoring pass to Ron Springs to give Dallas a 13-10 halftime lead.

Septien hit another short field goal before Williams hit Jones, who broke a tackle and ran 30 yards after he caught the pass, giving Tampa 17-16 lead.

Diet facts & fallacies

Being overweight affects your job, your health, even how long you will live. Over 80 million Americans are struggling to lose over 2.3 trillion pounds of unwanted fat—and for good reason! Diet Center believes obesity is a chronic, incurable disease that must be controlled.

It is a sad, but proven fact that overweight college and job applicants are turned down more often than normal weight applicants.

An overweight condition is often a dangerous forerunner or complication to other diseases. Heart attacks, strokes, diabetes, arthritis, high blood pressure and gout have all been directly linked to obesity. Overweight people also more commonly suffer from varicose veins, abdominal hernias, cancer and respiratory problems than normal weight individuals.

Your weight has a definite effect on how long you will live. Only 10 percent of obese persons reach the age of 80 as compared to 30 percent of slim people.

If these facts alarm you, take a careful look at your eating and exercise habits. Diet Center believes that permanent weight loss comes only through dedication to changing yourself forever. See your Diet Center Counselor today to win your fight against obesity and its harmful results.

Chargers, Jets and Vikings win playoff games

(AP) The New York Jets fired their cannon, the San Diego Chargers attacked by air, and the Minnesota Vikings refused to fold in the first weekend of play of the National Football League playoffs.

The NFL's revised and expanded 16-team playoff format, necessitated by the 57-day players' strike that wiped out seven weeks of the season, also produced a few surprises and guaranteed new finalists for Super Bowl XVII on Jan. 30.

Jets 44, Bengals 17
"When you've got a cannon, you're supposed to shoot it," New York Coach Walt Michaels said. "Today, he (McNeil) was our cannon."

McNeil, who also rushed and passed for two touchdowns, gave the Jets their first playoff victory since Joe Namath led New York to victory in Super Bowl III.

High scorer

Chargers 31, Steelers 28
Dan Fouts' third touchdown toss didn't come a minute too late in leading San Diego over Pittsburgh. He hit Kellen Winslow on a 12-yard flare pass with one minute to play to rally the Chargers.

"I watched him before on TV," said Pittsburgh quarterback Terry Bradshaw of Fouts. "I just watched him go up and down the field. I saw them do it on TV, then I saw them do it to us today."

Vikings 30, Falcons 24
Trailing 24-23 with 6:45 to go, Minnesota drove 72 yards with Ted Brown following a Rickey Young block to go in from the 5 with 1:44 left for the winning points.

Raiders 27, Browns 10
Jim Plunkett had one of his finest games, completing 24 of 37 passes for 386 yards in leading Los Angeles to its ninth victory in 10 games. The Browns finished 4-6.

Rookie Marcus Allen, who rushed for 72 yards on 17 carries and caught six passes for 75 yards, had touchdown runs of 2 and 3 yards and Frank Hawkins scored on a 1-yard run for the Raiders.

White Deer girls win title

WHITE DEER—White Deer girls held off Panhandle, 34-28, to win their own tournament Saturday night, and also avenge an earlier loss to the Pantherettes.

The Does, 11-3 for the season, led by 11 points in the third quarter, but had to hold off a Panhandle rally led by Leslie McCaskey and Karen Strawn in the closing minutes.

Kay Ford led White Deer scorers with 12 points, followed by Cindy Wyatt with seven, Chris Urbanczyk six, Tina Ford five and Rose Williams four.

Strawn and McCaskey had 12 and 11 points respectively to pace Panhandle, now 11-5 for the season. Alison Kotara and Monica Reining had two points apiece while Amy Kennedy had one. Valley edged Sanford-Fritch, 55-53, to win the boys' title.

River Road downed White Deer, 72-64, for third place in the boys' division.

Jeff Reynolds tallied 20 points to lead River Road while Darin Russell countered with 20 for White Deer. Darin Rhuthardt added 17 points for the Bucks.

Panhandle defeated Mobeetie, 62-51, to take the boys' consolation title.

Todd Lamberson led Panhandle with 13 points while Wes Wood added 11.

Wade Hathaway pumped in 21 points for the losers while Mike Kelsey chipped in 16.

IS SKIING A SAFE SPORT?

You hear the crackle of the soft snow; you feel the crispness of the wind on your face; you tingle with the warmth of the sun on your back; you are exhilarated with the speed and movement. It is estimated that more than five million Americans will experience the joy and freedom of skiing this year. Unfortunately though, it is also estimated that 600,000 will experience the pain of injury.

That's a lot of injuries. The next questions then is, "Is skiing an unsafe sport?" The answer is "no"—it is no more unsafe than most other sports. Oh certainly, statisticians and insurance actuaries can issue a list of sports and rank them in order of danger. But this is based on frequency of injury rather than inherent qualities of the sports themselves.

It's not sports that are dangerous—it's the people who participate in them.

According to skiing authorities, about 50% of the injuries are equipment-related, while the other 50% are due to poor physical conditioning and negligence. So that leaves very little to blame on the sport itself.

First, let's talk about physical conditioning because that should be second nature to anyone who would even consider so vigorous a sport as skiing.

Physical conditioning is important because the energy-absorption ability of the bone is minimal. The skier's primary defense against injury is muscular conditioning. According to doctors of chiropractic, especially those in ski areas, there is a direct relationship between lack of conditioning and structural injury.

Anyone who thinks he can go away on a ski weekend without being prepared physically is making a serious mistake. Skiing not only requires specialized attention to knee and leg exercises, but also a general good tone of the body. It is the type of sport that requires endurance and structural maneuverability.

In terms of equipment, remember that it should be of high quality construction, proper fitting, and well maintained. For example, because some parents consider ski-bindings for their children in the category of "toys," children often have inferior equipment. The result: a high frequency of injuries of the bone growth centers among children.

The American Chiropractic Association also reports that ski poles have been the basis for many shoulder and thumb dislocations, and for muscle problems in the arms and back. Without pull-away straps, a pole caught in a shrub exerts a tremendous shock on the limb as the body moves forward with speed.

Also, the skier should not overlook his or her clothing. The skier must be properly dressed for the activity—not become chilled or overheated. Too much or too little clothes can both contribute to colds and other respiratory problems.

Properly designed ski clothes let you take simple falls without getting wet and without getting hurt. Ski clothes should have a high coefficient of friction, which slows the speed of the skier when he comes into contact with the snow.

Whether you are a novice or a seasoned professional at snow skiing, remember that your body is your machine. To protect it, you must practice safe procedures and keep it operating efficiently. Since chiropractic is a health discipline which places particular emphasis on the structural integrity of the body, many skiers visit their doctors of chiropractic frequently—utilizing the procedure as a preventive, as well as a curative measure.

American journalist faces Costa Rica trail

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — An American reporter goes on trial here Wednesday, accused of practicing journalism illegally by not being a member of the government-approved press organization. If convicted, he faces a maximum penalty of two years in prison.

The case has aroused a debate over press freedom in a nation where that liberty is guaranteed by the constitution.

The reporter, Stephen B. Schmidt, 34, worked for the English-language weekly newspaper in San Jose. The Tico Times.

He currently edits a commodities newsletter in Wisconsin, but plans to return voluntarily to defend himself against the charges brought by the Costa Rican College of Journalists, a professional association.

Under Costa Rican law, membership in the college is mandatory for a journalist to work in the country.

But admission is tightly restricted to those who were journalists when the organization was founded a decade ago, and to National University journalism graduates or graduates of approved foreign journalism schools. Foreigners must live here five years before applying.

In theory, the law prevents visiting reporters from gathering facts and writing about Costa Rican events, but it has not been strictly applied to foreign correspondents who report to their organizations abroad.

The Associated Press and the Dallas Times-Herald each have a U.S. citizen stationed here, but so far neither has been bothered, even though the newsmen are not members of the college.

The last case in which the law was invoked involved Joseph Phillips, editor of the defunct San Jose News, also an English-language newspaper. Phillips, an American, was convicted in 1978 of "illegally practicing the profession" and given a three-month suspended sentence.

Recently, college officers have been telling fellow reporters the organization had won its case against Schmidt, claiming he "fled" the country to avoid prosecution.

Ranchers blame lion refuge for stock losses

GUADALUPE MOUNTAINS NATIONAL PARK, Texas (AP) — New Mexico ranchers say the National Park Service has created a refuge for mountain lions that make raids on livestock — at a cost of thousands of dollars.

The New Mexico Game and Fish Department is joining the angry ranchers in asking permission to pursue the offending animals into the park to kill them.

"It's okay with me if they kill all of the lions, but I think the park service, the federal government and the state of New Mexico should at least kill some of the lions," one of the ranchers, Marion Hughes, told the Dallas Times Herald.

Hughes herds 2,000 sheep on 35,200 acres adjacent to the park, and said the lions killed 500 of his sheep in 1980.

The park service, which is also fighting a suit filed by two environmental groups, is in the middle of a two-year, $30,000 environmental study to assess the lion population in both this 77,500-acre park and nearby Carlsbad Caverns National Park in New Mexico.

So far, the consultant and tracker hired to do the study have outfitted three lions with radio collars, and hope to eventually monitor the movements of 12 more.

Hughes, who calls the study a waste of money, said the government should instead kill the lions as the ranchers did before the government created the refuge.

Dan Liesner, the Eddy County, N.M. agricultural extension agent, said that since 1980 ranchers in the county have suffered losses as high as 40 percent in excess of normal herd damage caused by coyotes and bobcats.

The appearance of a lion in Carlsbad a week ago "indicates their population has definitely increased to the point these cats have spread out and are searching for food."

Parks Superintendent William Dumire acknowledged that the mountain lion population has increased, but said some of the offending animals don't live in the two parks.

"By principle, wildlife is preserved and protected within a park, but if this (sheep killing) becomes a crisis situation we're going to have to look for ways to assist the ranchers without going into a new policy," he said.

Farm leader endorses Reagan grain proposal

DALLAS (AP) — President Reagan will probably win endorsement from some farm leaders Tuesday for his plan to raise crop prices by paying farmers surplus grain to cut the acreage they plant, an agriculture official says.

Reagan is expected to announce details of the payment-in-kind program here Tuesday at the annual convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

"It is folly to think we can consume, store or export our way out of price difficulties," the group's president, Robert Delano, told reporters Sunday.

"The only possible answer, I suggest, is to clear off the shelves, empty the bins and caves, and start over," he said.

Delano, a Virginia grain farmer, predicted that delegates to the five-day convention will support policies like Reagan's to cut production.

"There is no way to predict how the 270 delegates will vote in policy sessions, but I expect them to continue to support a market-oriented agriculture and programs to strengthen farmer's power to bargain for price."

But Delano said he was concerned that the government ensure that future reserves are not allowed to rise, because of further overproduction.

"We have to make sure that not too much grain comes back on the market. I'm not too sure how to do that," he said.

This year's convention is being held in a state that has been particularly hard hit by low commodity prices, which are blamed partly on overproduction, and bad weather.

Farmers nationwide are going through "a period of readjustment" with many facing bankruptcy, Delano said.

"There are jobs being lost now that will never reoccur again," he said.

Five killed, 64 injured by stampeding crowd

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — "Screaming and moaning" filled the air, witnesses said, as five women were trampled to death and 64 other people were injured by a crowd stampeding through an airport gate for the arrival of Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang.

"People were stamping on each other and pushing to get through the gate and I could see people being squashed on the ground," a witness told the Zimbabwe Inter-African News Agency.

China was a major supporter of the black struggle to rule Zimbabwe, the former British colony of Rhodesia, and the nation's state-run press had urged people to greet Zhao at the airport to give him a "warm welcome."

But the crowd, estimated at 5,000, went out of control when police opened the gate to the airport tarmac about an hour before Zhao's entourage arrived for a three-day visit.

Police and witnesses said many people were knocked to the ground, while scores fainted in the crush. Police said five were killed in the stampede and 64 others injured.

"It was like a carnage without blood," one airport security officer said. "People were screaming and moaning and sobbing. It was horrible."

Ambulances careened to the scene, sirens wailing, to ferry the dead to mortuaries and the injured to hospitals.

Two of the injured, one a young girl, were admitted for treatment at Parirenyatwa hospital, acting medical superintendent Doreen Shennan said. Most of the others were treated for minor injuries and discharged, she said.

PELE XUXA RICHARD NIXON JERRY LEWIS

SADDLE RIVER, N.J. (AP) — A fit Richard Nixon, who turned 70 over the weekend, is settling down happily in this affluent New York City suburb and doesn't look his age, the mayor says.

The former president spent a quiet birthday at home Sunday with his wife, Pat, their two daughters and three grandchildren. He planned no elaborate celebration, according to spokesman Nicholas Ruwe.

Neighbors say Nixon is driven the 50 miles each weekday to his Manhattan office from the $1.2 million home he moved into in October 1981, and appears fit during his daily morning walk.

"I think he likes the town, and we like him," said Mayor Duncan Cameron, who also is 70. "He doesn't look that old. He's in excellent shape — his hair isn't as gray as mine."

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles and Princess Diana may be skiing today in Switzerland, but palace officials are keeping their exact whereabouts a secret.

The royal couple are vacationing without their 6-month-old son, Prince William.

A spokesman for Buckingham Palace in England said only that the royal couple "are going on skiing," and "may well be skiing."

At Zurich's international airport, a spokesman confirmed that Charles and Diana arrived here Sunday aboard a twin-engine royal jet flown by the heir to the British throne.

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Brazilian soccer hero Pele says he may marry 19-year-old Xuxa, one of his nation's top fashion models, "but not now."

"We have a very great friendship," he said in a television interview Sunday night. "And when this friendship gets to the point where I should marry her, I will."

Pele, 40, has retired from professional sports and spends most of his time in the United States making films and promoting soccer.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Comedian Jerry Lewis, who underwent emergency heart surgery three weeks ago, appears to be his old joking self and says he feels "in great shape."

Lewis arrived at Desert Springs Hospital on Sunday for an hour-long checkup, and, pointing to his chest, told reporters doctors wanted to "see this thing is holding together."

The 56-year-old comedian underwent double-bypass surgery Dec. 21 and was released Jan. 1. His doctors say he will be able to lead a normal life, but must give up smoking.
