

The Pampa News begins 'Job Hunter' to help neighbors find work

By ANTHONY RANGLES
Managing Editor

These are tough times, perhaps the toughest since the Great Depression of the 1930s. There is no one in the United States left unaffected by the Recession, not this newspaper, not this town, and no one in it, despite previous economic conditions.

We are facing a crossroads in the nation now: the point where a tough decision must be made. Do we keep plugging along relying on the economic indicators to give us the hope we need to see this difficult turn-around through, or do we simply throw up our hands and start making governmental make-work programs to get some of those 11 million Americans back to work? This newspaper feels that private enterprise and individual Americans can accomplish much more than any fleet of governmental programs in putting people who want to work back in harness again.

For that reason, The Pampa News is starting a daily feature called "Job Hunter" (see bottom of page 1 today) to let area businesses and industries know the caliber of individuals who are looking for work.

It is our belief that neighbors looking out after neighbors is the best system to follow in our society, so we'll do our part by spotlighting a different resident each day who needs work.

If you are unemployed and really want to find a job, let us give you a hand. Charles Vance at the Texas Employment Commission (665-0938) will be happy to send you over to see us.

Soviet satellite remnant believed down in ocean

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon officials said they assume the radioactive remnant of a Soviet nuclear-powered spy satellite tumbled to its doom over the South Atlantic Ocean shortly after 6 a.m. EST today.

Confirmation was delayed until the North American Aerospace Defense Command could complete checks by its tracking radar.

"We now assume it has entered the Earth's atmosphere harmlessly," said Major Douglas Kennett, a Pentagon spokesman.

Earlier, the defense command had predicted a re-entry point about 1,100 miles east of the Brazilian coast. However, specialists cautioned that there might be some variation from the predicted point, in part because the satellite section was tumbling in orbit.

The predicted position was plotted at about 19 degrees south latitude and 22 degrees west longitude, Pentagon officials said.

The North American Aerospace Defense Command tracked the final section of Cosmos 1402 as it gathered speed in the ever-increasing grip of gravity.

"It is impossible to predict whether significant amounts of radioactive material will reach the Earth's surface," the Pentagon said in a statement before the satellite re-entered the atmosphere. "The highest probability is that the core will nearly completely burn up" as happened an identical satellite which disintegrated over northern Canada five years ago, the statement said.

It recalled that small radioactive particles from that 1978 satellite, Cosmos 954, were spread over large areas with pieces of hardware distributed over a track several hundred miles long and about 30 miles wide.

The satellite section that descended today was all that was left in space from an 8,000-pound ocean surveillance satellite launched by the Soviets last summer. The main section plunged into the atmosphere and burned Jan. 23 over the mid-Indian Ocean.

The last section was believed to weigh about 200 pounds and include 110 pounds of enriched uranium fuel.

Earlier, Department of Energy officials had predicted the satellite's remains could spread radioactivity over an area 600 miles long and 30 to 40 miles wide. But they stressed it was unlikely anyone on Earth would be hit by debris.

The Energy Department's Nuclear Emergency Search Team was on alert to help retrieve any debris.

The satellite was launched Aug. 30, for a mission normally lasting about five months.

The main section of Cosmos 1402 started its descent, which ended a little over two weeks ago.

Barbie trial will be the biggest since Israelis tried Eichmann

PARIS (AP) — Former Nazi officer Klaus Barbie, called the "Butcher of Lyon," will be retried in France in the most important war-crimes trial since that of Adolf Eichmann, who was executed in Israel 21 years ago.

There will be at least one major difference under current law the former World War II German commander faces a maximum penalty of life in prison.

Barbie, 69, was expelled from Bolivia last week and flown to France — a move hailed by the Soviet Union on Sunday and one that prompted an offer of prosecutorial help from the Israelis.

France has accused Barbie of sending 7,591 Jews and resistance fighters to concentration camps and ordering another 4,000 executed while he served as Gestapo chief in Lyon from 1942-44.

Frenchmen who suffered at Barbie's hands in Nazi-occupied Lyon — and those who remember him — are infuriated he no longer faces the death penalty after twice being sentenced to death in absentia.

"I want to put a bullet in his head! He tortured everyone in my family!" screamed a middle-aged woman as police took her into custody Saturday at the Lyon airport, where she had expected the plane carrying Barbie to land.

Renee Moulin, widow of France's most famous resistance fighter, said Barbie "should be shot or hanged high with a short rope." Barbie is accused of beating to death Mrs. Moulin's husband Jean.

"Death would be too mild a punishment for him," said Lise Lesevre, a French resistance messenger who is one of Barbie's surviving victims.

Eichmann, a Nazi who oversaw the deportation, torture and murder of millions of Jews during World War II, was tried and executed in Israel in 1962. He had been located by Israeli agents and abducted to Israel, where he was convicted for crimes against the Jewish people and against humanity.

French Premier Pierre Mauroy said Sunday the government will retry Barbie for "crimes against humanity" to remind French youth of the Nazi era.

Mauroy said in a statement after Barbie's return. "The younger generation must know what happened so they can be ready to protect the dignity of their country at all times and, even more so, the dignity of man."

Officials said no date has been set for trial and cautioned that it could take months before prosecutors are ready to present their case against Barbie.

West German authorities have also said they want to try him for his World War II role.

Barbie's trial in France will focus attention on the period between 1940 and 1944.

Chain reaction accident Saturday kills one trucker, injures another

ALANREED — It all began when one trucker stopped to help another who was stuck on a slick road — it ended when truck after truck slammed together and into victims.

The chain-reaction crash of four big rigs on an icy Interstate 40 near Alanreed late Saturday brought death to one trucker and critical injuries to another.

According to investigating Department of Public Safety troopers, the following events led to the multi-rig wreck.

Joe Miller, 63, of Oklahoma City, stopped his westbound truck behind another tractor-trailer rig which was jackknifed across the westbound, ice-covered lanes of I-40.

Miller stopped his truck and got out. He was walking toward the jackknifed truck, when another westbound truck slammed into the parked Miller rig.

That truck ejected its driver and continued along the interstate to run over Miller.

Miller suffered massive head and internal injuries, and he was listed in critical condition this morning at St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo.

The driver of the truck which struck Miller and his truck was pronounced dead at the scene L.G. Keith, 60, also of Oklahoma City, was pronounced dead by Gray County Justice of the Peace R.C. Parker of McLean. After his semi-tractor slammed into the Miller truck, Keith was thrown from his rig. A truck following Keith's semi then ran over Keith.

Don Harvie Kines of Alma, Ark. was driving the fourth and final truck involved in the accident. His truck ran over Keith Kines truck then continued along the highway and hit the first rig, the truck driven by Sarguson, to lose control on the ice.

The accident occurred at 8:30 p.m. Saturday about seven miles west of Alanreed, near the Lake McClellan interchange.

Following the pile-up, traffic along I-40 backed up for about a mile. As late as yesterday, a heavy-duty wrecker vehicle pulling a disabled tractor-trailer was one of the vehicles stopped in the traffic jam. State police officers had the wrecker driver unhitch from the load he was pulling and directed him to the highway blocking big rigs. The trucks were pulled out of the way and traffic continued along the hazardous road.

Druse claim 25 dead in mountain fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Druse militiamen say they've seized control of the central mountain town of Aley and killed 25 Christian Phalangist fighters in a snow-shrouded clash between the two sectarian factions.

In other Mideast developments Sunday, U.S. officials angrily denied an Israeli news report that an American Marine's breath smelled of alcohol when he used a pistol to halt three Israeli tanks last week in Beirut.

The Israeli officer who headed the column was slightly wounded in a bomb explosion Sunday.

The Druse political party said its militiamen took Aley on Sunday and set the Christian Phalange Party headquarters ablaze during a raging snowstorm.

The Druse claimed 25 Christian fighters died in grenade, artillery and rocket attacks in Aley and surrounding areas east of Beirut.

Violence is reported down in truckers strike

By The Associated Press

One strike-defying trucker was beaten and more sniper shots were fired, but a government spokesman said violence was down sharply and predicted drivers would be returning to the road as the independent truckers' shutdown entered its second week today.

The cost of getting products to market was up sharply in some areas, shippers said, and the hike was expected to be passed on to consumers.

In Pennsylvania, four men were arrested Sunday night near Pittsburgh when deputies arrived at a restaurant while they were beating a driver they had forced off the road, said Allegheny County Sgt. Robert Thomas. The driver was hospitalized, Thomas said.

The weekend's worst incident occurred in Ohio, where a driver leading a convoy was seriously injured Saturday night, his leg shattered by a sniper's bullet. Shots were fired Sunday at working drivers in Louisiana and Iowa, but no one was hurt, authorities said.

Mike Parkhurst, president of the Independent Truckers Association, claimed again Sunday in Omaha, Neb., that 70 percent of the nation's 100,000 drivers support the shutdown, and he called the violence the work of "a small group of wackos."

The length of the strike would depend on the drivers' determination," said Parkhurst, who rallied the strike to protest rising fuel taxes and highway fees.

Tom Blank, a Department of Transportation spokesman, said federal officials see a clear decrease in overall violence over the last several nights.

"We think we'll begin to see an easing of the strike in terms of owner-operators beginning to drive again at the beginning of the week," Blank said. At the start of the strike Jan. 31, Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said only 20 percent of independent drivers stopped work.

Only 24 new incidents were reported Sunday in Ohio and Pennsylvania, two states on the crucial Chicago-to-New York corridor that had been violence-prone.

That compared with 748 incidents in those two states during the walkout's first week, authorities said. In all, more than 1,200 acts of violence have been reported in 38 states, including one death, at least 61 injuries and 74 arrests, authorities said.

Job Hunter

Jerry Williams came to Pampa three years ago and had no trouble finding a job. But last October, he lost his job as the manager of a full-service gas station in Pampa and has been unemployed ever since the longest he's been out of work.

He discovered he was ineligible for unemployment compensation, and he, his wife and five children have seen hard times since. Because the children are all in school, moving the whole family would be a problem.

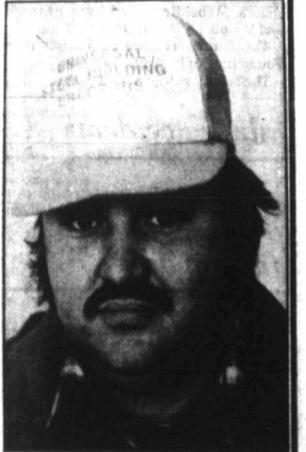

If he could find work anywhere in the area, even if it meant leaving his wife and children in Pampa for a while, he would do it, he says.

In addition to being a gas station manager (and doing a little bit of everything involved in working at a full-service gas station), he has also managed apartments, and maintained a fleet of 107 police cars for a department in California.

He has also driven truck, with the largest truck being a five-ton, five-speed-ten-speed with double rear axles. He was an oilfield roughneck for two years and a floorhand in the oilfields as well. Williams says he will do anything for work—even if he has to learn a new job.

"I'll learn anything, if someone would just give me a chance to do my best to learn," he said.

He will also take odd jobs if they're available. He shoveled snow last week while the snow lasted, and the money helped. He has also done handyman-carpentry type work and would welcome even a short-term job doing any of those odd jobs.

Inspecting the troops

Tension eased after Shultz visit, but bilateral problems remain

PEKING (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz apparently succeeded in easing Sino-U.S. tensions on his trip to Peking but pressing bilateral problems remain unsolved.
 After his departure Sunday for South Korea, the official Chinese news agency Xinhua said Shultz' trip was successful only "to some extent." It denounced U.S. arms sales to Taiwan and said China demands "actual deeds rather than empty words" to improve relations.
 Foreign diplomatic analysts said the talks appeared to have been very tough but suggested that relations now might settle on a sound, realistic footing, without great expectations or grand strategic designs.
 U.S. officials had cautioned in advance that no major agreements or breakthroughs were expected from the four days of talks with Chinese leaders who have accused the United States of unreliability and seeking to dominate other nations.

 Instead, the Americans said, the focus would be on the overriding, intangible problem of mutual suspicion and the blurred relationship between Washington and Peking.
 Before Shultz came, one well-informed Chinese source said the political relationship had "gone sour."
 But the political air cleared by Saturday night and Shultz told his farewell banquet: "While problems do exist, I leave our discussions more convinced of the real opportunities for enhanced cooperation... We depart having set the stage for renewed advances built on a stronger foundation of confidence and mutual trust."
 His visit, Shultz said, "launched a process that merits conscientious follow-through."
 The visit had two positive and concrete developments:

— Premier Zhao Ziyang accepted a longstanding invitation to visit the United States this year, although the date was not fixed. Administration sources say however, that President Reagan is unlikely to visit China during this term lest he offend the rival Nationalists on the tiny island of Taiwan.
 — China and the United States agreed to explore renewed and expanded military contracts and exchanges. A State Department official said top Chinese military personnel still are welcome to visit Washington for discussions and possible purchase of U.S. weapons.
 Shultz told a news conference that the question of arms sales to China was not discussed but he added that a visit by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger was possible.

Medicare-Medicaid changes would save government billions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's proposal to require Medicare recipients to pay more of their hospital bills should prevent thousands of hospitalizations and save the government up to $5 billion, says the author of a health care study.
 Rand Corp. economist Charles E. Phelps said the savings — greater than the government is estimating — would come about because the more people pay for health care, the less they visit a doctor.
 However, Phelps said another proposal being considered won't eliminate unnecessary trips to the doctor. That idea, to charge the needy $1 to $2 for each Medicaid visit, "basically just transfers money from the low-income population to the Treasury," he said.
 The Medicare and Medicaid proposals are among several Reagan is seeking to combat rising health care costs, which are rising faster than the overall cost of living and which continue to claim an ever-increasing share of the federal budget.

 The Medicare change Reagan proposed to Congress last week would require beneficiaries, most of whom are 65 and older, to pay not just for their first day of hospitalization as they do now but for 8 percent of each subsequent day for two weeks.
 Those hospitalized for longer periods would be required to pay 5 percent of their daily charges after the 15th day, and the government would pick up the full bill for those still in the hospital after 60 days.
 With the average cost of a day in the hospital now at $304 and expected to rise to $350 next year, that means a Medicare recipient hospitalized for more than 60 days might pay up to $1.512 in hospital charges next year compared to the $304 now.
 Phelps, who recently published a study on the consequences of requiring people to pay more of their own health care costs, notes that the government estimates the change will save $1.2 billion in fiscal 1985.

 Much of the saving to the government would essentially come from new charges that patients would have to pick up that they don't pay now.
 The Rand study says people are less likely to go to the doctor if they have to pay a substantial share of the cost.
 In order to have a substantial impact, the Rand report said, welfare recipients and others qualifying for Medicaid would have to pay about 25 percent of their medical bills, up to 5 percent of their total income.
 That would cost the average recipient just under $260 a year and result in savings of $6.9 billion for state and federal governments. But as the report noted, it might well "prove unacceptable politically."

Burger wants Congress to create temporary court to ease workload

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger says he wants lawyers to help him convince Congress that the Supreme Court is dangerously overworked and the judicial system needs "fundamental changes," including a new appeals court.
 "My proposal today is to provoke you and others and to stimulate a vigorous debate and discussion," Burger said in a 50-minute speech Sunday to the winter convention of the American Bar Association.
 "We can no longer tolerate the vacuous notion that we can get along with the present structure 'because we have always done it that way,'" he said.
 "Only fundamental changes... will avoid a breakdown of the system — or of some of the justices."
 His proposal, in effect, calls for a temporary shadow Supreme Court to handle up to a third of the 150 cases that the high court decides with formal written opinions each year after full hearing.
 Burger suggested 26 judges could be selected from the 13 federal circuit courts and that seven or nine of them would serve terms of one year to handle the cases. The court would expire after five years and be renewed only if it proved successful.

 The new panel would decide issues on which any two of the nation's 13 U.S. Courts of Appeals reached conflicting decisions. Such an approach, Burger believes, would eliminate the need for the Supreme Court to resolve the conflicts.
 The ABA, which represents about half of the nation's 600,000 lawyers, can play an important role in convincing Congress of the need for drastic changes to relieve the overload, he said.
 Burger previously has expressed concern over the court's workload, but this was the first time he had endorsed a specific solution.
 Burger's claim that the Supreme Court is near drowning in "a tidal wave" of cases was greeted skeptically by some legal specialists.
 Judge Alvin B. Rubin of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which is based in New Orleans, said, "I know the Supreme Court is overburdened only because they say they are."

 Rubin said that issuing 150 written opinions a year means "slightly more than one opinion a month" per justice. The three-man appeals panel on which he serves produces about 150 opinions a year, he said.
 Arthur D. Hellman, a University of Pittsburgh law school professor, said complaints by the justices "puzzle me a little. The Supreme Court only must consider a case if it is important, not if it was decided improperly" by a lower court.
 "It ought not to take that much time," said Hellman.
 Burger, at 75 one of five of the court's nine members over 70, did not assert that the court's capacity to decide cases diligently had been exceeded. But he said the trend is in that direction.
 In the last 30 years, the number of cases appealed to the court have more than tripled, from 1,463 to 5,311, Burger said. Last year, the court issued 141 opinions. In 1953, the figure was 65.

Senate in recess, House committees working

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House concentrates on committee work and housekeeping matters this week while the Senate takes a week-long break for Lincoln's Birthday.
 A variety of special interest groups, ranging from government employees to the elderly, were offering their views on Social Security reform today to a House Ways and Means subcommittee.
 The panel is considering a $168 billion package of payroll tax increases and benefit cuts to bail out the financially troubled Social Security system.

 The House Budget Committee will hear testimony Tuesday and Thursday on policies to aid economic growth from AFL-CIO president Lane Kirkland and several prominent economists.
 The committee will hear retired Gen. David C. Jones, a former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and former arms control negotiator Paul Warnke discuss defense spending on Wednesday.
 Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, who spent much of last week testifying to congressional panels on behalf of the Reagan administration's military budget request, returns to brief the House defense appropriations subcommittee Tuesday and Wednesday.

 While the Senate is in recess, the House plans to deal with a few housekeeping matters, including a resolution to re-establish the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, whose charter expired at the end of the last Congress.

Chagra jury in fourth day of deliberations

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The jury in the murder trial of Jamie "Jimmy" Chagra today began its fourth day of deliberations, after indicating that it may have reached decisions in two of four counts stemming from the 1979 San Antonio, Texas murder of a federal judge.
 The 10-woman, two-man panel recessed Sunday afternoon after discussing the murder of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. for almost 14 hours over three days, and rehearing about four hours of tape-recorded evidence.

 U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions was excusing the jury for the evening when foreman William T. Johnson, holding two manila envelopes, said: "We have reached some... just before being cut off by Sessions."
 "You have some verdict forms?" asked Sessions. Johnson nodded yes and the judge asked him to turn the envelopes over to a marshal. Then Sessions sealed both a note from the jury and the forms.

One dead in Sunday Texas capitol fire

AUSTIN (AP) — An early morning fire at the state Capitol killed one man, ravaged the lieutenant governor's quarters and came close to destroying the century-old home of Texas government, says the man who led the battle against it.

The fire was just getting ahead of us quicker than we could get ahead of it," acting Austin Fire Chief Brady Pool said Sunday.

"I mean the whole shooting match" could have been lost, Pool said. "From about a quarter to six until about 7:30, I wouldn't have bought no stock in it."

About 100 Austin firefighters battled the blaze for over two hours before it was controlled at 8 a.m. Sunday. The fire started in the library of Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's Capitol apartment, Pool said.

The man killed was Matt Hansen, 23, a horse trainer from New Caney. Hansen apparently died of smoke inhalation.

Hansen, James and Joan Waterman of New Caney, and Hobby's 18-year-old daughter Kate were in the apartment during the fire. The Watermans own the ranch where Kate Hobby's horses are trained. Hansen was the trainer.

All four were in town for a Saturday night banquet at which Miss Hobby was honored for her horsemanship. Hobby, who lives in a duplex nearby, uses the Capitol apartment as a guest quarters.

Pool said early indications were that the fire was sparked by an electrical appliance, possibly a television, in the library of the east wing apartment.

Hobby credited Austin firefighters with saving the Capitol and thanked Capitol police for saving his daughter.

Bob Cargill, Hobby's press aide, said the library looked like an "inferno" had been ignited.

Hobby said the parts of the apartment suffered "just complete destruction." A hallway behind the Senate was gutted by the blaze. There was little damage in the Senate. Hobby planned to convene senators as scheduled today, although there would be no heat or light.

The only damage in the chamber was in a corner near a doorway leading to the apartment, although the offices of several senators sustained smoke or water damage.

The Watermans escaped through a back stairwell and Miss Hobby was led to safety by Capitol police. Six firemen and one Capitol policeman were hospitalized. None was in critical condition.

"I have never witnessed a more professional performance," Hobby said of the firefighters. "To them goes the credit for saving a historic and irreplaceable building."

Capitol police headed to the second-floor apartment, behind the Senate, after a heat-sensitive alarm went off in their security office at 5:25 a.m. Firefighters were quickly called to Capitol police tried to rescue the four people in the apartment.

Officer James Mitchell pounded on Miss Hobby's door, according to Bob Cargill, Hobby's press aide. She screamed that there were three others inside.

Intense heat — a "sea of flames," Hobby said his daughter recalled — stifled initial rescue efforts. Officer Joel Quintanilla kicked in a library door, but it exploded out on him. The 56-year-old officer was hospitalized with burns on his face, arms and hands, Cargill said.

"We heard Officer Quintanilla screaming that he needed help," said Officer Wilfred Spinks. "We then got down on our hands and knees and tried to find him."

Police did not reach Hansen in time, however. The horse trainer was found dead, probably of smoke inhalation, on the floor between two single beds in the apartment.

"He would have had a better chance if he knew the surroundings," said Pool. "He may have missed the door."

The early fight against the blaze was aided by Gov. Mark White, awakened by sirens as firetrucks raced to the Capitol, a block from the governor's mansion. White said he helped firefighters carry air bottles at the scene.

Several officials said the frequently renovated Capitol needs upgraded fire controls. Pool said firefighters had to find their way through false ceilings — three in some areas — to get to the flames.

White said, "This building is over 100 years old. They've made a lot of changes from time to time that didn't take into account problems like this."

"This is a real good opportunity to make those checks," the governor said.

Hansen's death was the first fire fatality in the 309-foot-tall domed, granite building, a replacement for a previous Capitol that burned to the ground in 1881 while it was under construction.

Officials did not estimate the dollar amount of damage, but several portraits were destroyed or damaged, and the back section of the apartment, which housed several antiques was "complete destruction," said Hobby.

Carpenter wins Terlingua liars contest

TERLINGUA, Texas (AP) — Carpenter Vann Lister won the first Liar's Contest with a tale he sawed off about a blast that lofted his home into the heavens when he mistakenly set fire to a case of cactus moonshine.

Lister claimed title this weekend to Terlingua's Silver Tongue Award by narrowly defeating fellow tale-teller Richard Sharp, who finished second among four contestants with a story about Texas' rare migrating desert cucumber.

Lister won with his tale of Sokol, a Mexican moonshine made of fermented cactus juice. He fooled five judges and about 100 T-shirted and topless onlookers with his 10-minute talk from the Chisos Mining Company store porch in this West Texas ghost town.

The Wichita, Kan., native captured the attention of the raucous crowd with his saga about the unhappy ending to 11 bottles of Sokol that he had hidden in his fireplace to savor for the holidays.

Because he had already finished one of the bottles, obtained from a Mexican moonshiner who urged him to sample his wares, Lister said Saturday that he promptly forgot in his inebriated state where he had stashed the case.

When a traveling band of teachers happened by on the night of Dec. 20, they claimed they were cold. So he lighted his fireplace — "and with a flash I remembered where I had hidden the Sokol," Lister told the beer-guzzling group.

The crowd cheered as Lister explained how his house flew off into the sky, powered by the enflamed bottles of Sokol. The teachers, thinking they were witnessing an act of God, fell to the ground in prayerful awe, he said.

He dared not disclose the origin of the blast that leveled his home, the 37-year-old said.

Sharp nearly matched Lister's tale with a story of desert cucumbers that spawn during their march from Texas' Marathon Basin to "the great cucumber crossing in New Mexico."

But Sharp conceded halfway through his tale that "most of this is a lie." The crowd, made up of tailgaters perched on the ends of their pickup trucks and Texas University students from Austin, tossed crumpled beer caps in jest.

Others derisively yelled "Liar!" The Liar's Contest, the centerpiece of a weekend of activities in this town of 100 near the Big Bend National Park, was the idea of professional river-runner Steve Harris.

Harris, one of the organizers of the annual Terlingua Chili Cook-off, rounded off the festival with a 100-yard dash for smokers only. But it was the Liar's Contest that drew the most praise.

"We need more things like this — just good clean fun and funny tales to lighten all the bad news we hear these days," Joyce Jamison of Austin said.

Lister agreed: "I just made the story up. But this (win) is more important to me than all the ungulating cucumbers on the Cherokee Trail."

Sheriff Billy Pat McKinney of sparsely populated Brewster County pronounced the weekend activities "wholesome," but declined to tell a locally famous story about an encounter with three women during his law duties.

"My wife's here," he explained. "Lynch him!" The crowd enthusiastically responded.

North Carolinian Ken Kyte finished in third place with a tale of $15,000 white-faced steer that was purchased for "herd improvement" purposes. He conceded his story was "a lot of bull."

Fourth-place went to a Terlingua man who told about an encounter with a midget in an elevator.

Panel recommends open textbook hearings

AUSTIN (AP) — Textbook protesters and backers will debate each other at this year's textbook selection hearings if the State Board of Education adopts a rule change recommended by a panel of board members.

The state board's Ad Hoc Committee on the Texas Textbook Selection Process voted for the change Sunday after two days of hearings.

People for the American Way, a national anti-censorship organization begun by "All in the Family" producer Norman Lear, challenged the Texas system. The group complained the system allows only protests of textbooks without rebuttal before the Textbook Selection Committee, which meets annually to choose which books will be bought by Texas public schools.

Texas is the nation's biggest buyer of textbooks, and publishers say they frequently cannot afford to produce a book that is not accepted by the state.

American Way coordinator Michael Hudson said the organization came to Texas to combat Mel and Norma Gabler, a conservative Longview couple who have been testifying at the textbook hearings for 21 years.

The ad hoc committee, made up of 13 of the 27 board members, sends its recommendations to the full board, which would have to adopt new rules before the change would go into effect. The ad hoc committee meets again Thursday. Its final recommendations go to the full board Friday.

The committee also voted to recommend that the 15-member Textbook Selection Committee be expanded to 27 members, one from each congressional district, but most of the debate centered on how to handle testimony at the annual hearing.

"Today's textbooks do not just set forth mathematical equations; they set forth concepts and beliefs that are open to debate," board member Will Davis of Austin argued in favor of the proposal.

"We must provide a forum. You can't vaccinate yourself from a disagreement. You can't make yourself immune," Davis said. Board member James Whiteside of Lubbock complained that open debate at the often emotionally charged hearing would create a "circus."

Republican executive committee chief is asked to quit

DALLAS (AP) — A majority of the State Republican Executive Committee has asked the state party chairman to resign, but has no way under the group's guidelines to force Chet Upham from office.

Tom Carter, a Dallas oil and gas lawyer who represents the 16th Senatorial District on the 62-person committee, said Sunday that 37 members of the committee signed a letter asking Upham, the Texas party chairman, to quit.

Carter said the group seeking Upham's resignation was concerned mainly about the $312,000 debt confronting the state party, and the direction the party has taken recently.

Upham criticized some of his opponents, including Carter, at the SREC meeting in Corpus Christi Saturday.

Jim Brandon, Jerry Smith and Tom Carter all want to be state chairman. There is some harassment going on and some members have asked me to resign as the state officer. But we will continue to operate the party in a prudent manner without a budget," said Upham, who could not be reached Sunday.

The party has no recall or impeachment provisions, and if Upham chooses to remain he can stay until the next state convention. The party is to meet in June 1984 in Fort Worth to consider presidential nominations, and in September 1984 in Corpus Christi to consider the party's gubernatorial candidate.

Carter said that if Upham stays on as chairman, "I'm willing to work with him, but at the same time the committee has its own mind and the members have their own minds. We feel some things need to be changed."

Upham became chairman of the party in 1979 at then-Gov. Bill Clements' request.

Carter said the letter was delivered to Upham at the SREC meeting here Saturday.

"A lot of people felt that we really didn't pursue the same type of grassroots campaigning in 1982 that we had in 1980," Carter said.

"We let our coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats slip away. We did a lot of mailing and media work, but not much with volunteers and door-to-door grassroots campaigning," Carter said.

At the weekend executive committee meeting, Carter said, party leaders "gave us a litany of good ideas, but they didn't seem to be cohesive with any sort of plan to win the next election."

The letter asking Upham to resign was signed by "pretty much the same people who voted to delay the budget," Carter said.

Upham had recommended that the committee adopt a $900,000 budget. Despite warnings from one delegate that the party would appear to be in disarray if the budget weren't approved, the committee voted 38-24 to postpone action on the proposal.

Fred Gray of Pasadena, who was with James Lyon of Houston when he delivered the letter to Upham, said that Upham rejected the request that he step down Saturday.

"He didn't agree to relinquish the leadership, and in addition, he emphasized that if he did, it would not be to some unknown person. He'd have to know who it was he was stepping down for," Gray said.

"And there's no one person this group has agreed on. It's just that the majority would like to have their own man in there, whoever it might be."

Carter denied that he wants to be chairman.

"I don't know where he came up with that," he said. "We haven't even talked among ourselves about a candidate. I don't see anybody out there lusting after the chairman's position."

"This isn't really a personal thing against Chet Upham," Carter said. "He did the best he could. But now that Clements is no longer there, a lot of people feel that Chet should step aside and let someone else take the reins."

He's been there four years. We need someone else to carry us through the next four years.

"We don't delight in having our difference, but if we're going to have them, now is the time," Carter said. "There's never going to be more time to make the changes, get back to the grassroots, woo those conservative Democrats, in time for the next election."

Remaining campers await court hearing

HOUSTON (AP) — Mike Kovalcik hoped to learn today if he would be forced to tear down a carefully constructed enclosure around his van parked beneath a bridge and move on.

Greg Lincavage, 34, an unemployed cook and motorcycle mechanic, was camped nearby during the weekend in a small tent with his two German shepherd dogs, also pondering his future.

They both were awaiting a hearing before State District Judge William Blanton today concerning the fate of the controversial Tent City, located 30 miles northeast of here at a picnic and campground on the bank of the San Jacinto River.

Kovalcik and Lincavage have been camped at Tent City for about two months and are among the few residents remaining on the site after Harris County Fire Marshal J.J. Pruitt threatened to arrest those who were not out of the park by noon Friday.

Pruitt declined to carry out the eviction, however, after Dr. Nathaniel Wirt of Texas City filed suit seeking a temporary restraining order to prevent the closing of the park.

Blanton refused to grant the order but scheduled a hearing on the case today.

Some residents who left Tent City last week, say they have been threatened with arrest for trying to camp at another sites where the San Jacinto River intersects Interstate 10.

State police spokesman Jim Garrett and spokesmen from the Harris County Sheriff's Department and constables said they had been unable to locate any officers who had confronted the campers.

Camper Darlene Shelby, 23, said two state troopers arrived at the I-10 campsite Friday afternoon and ordered all squatters to leave or be arrested. She said she was not present when the troopers arrived but her brother had seen them.

The campers claimed the officers told campers if they were at the campsite Saturday they would be arrested, their children turned over to child welfare authorities and their vehicles towed away.

Budget won't reflect reductions

A new congress has convened, a new budget is being prepared, and all the rhetoric about deficits, Social Security crises, spending, taxes and cuts will be trotted out for one more go-round. Perhaps it would be helpful to view what promises to develop into a very confusing circus with a certain amount of perspective.

First, despite all the presidential self-congratulation and crocodile tears from other quarters, federal spending has not declined under Reagan. It increased 13 percent in fiscal 1982 and consumed 24 percent of GNP, an unprecedentedly high mark. The lame-duck Congress, by passing a "continuing resolution" instead of dealing with appropriations bills separately and responsibly, virtually assured that federal spending in fiscal 1983 would increase by an additional 11 or 12 percent - much faster than the inflation rate. The federal budget is likely to top $800 billion this fiscal year - twice what it was as recently as 1977.

The current recession reduces tax revenues and ushers in higher spending for welfare - like "entitlements." Solid recovery in the private sector would help, but high taxes, regulation and uncertainty delay recovery. Even talking about higher taxes, for only because they promise to drain more of the productive sector's lifeblood, but because changing the tax laws every year limits ability to plan for the long run.

The recession is not the only impetus to higher spending, however. The simple fact is that both Congress and the administration continue to act like drunken sailors, giving only lip service to the crisis that faces the country. We need to remember that background when the debate heats up about the minuscule cuts in social spending Reagan may propose. The leaks so far haven't suggested spending levels for fiscal 1984 that are actually lower than 1983 - and 1983 spending will be almost 25 percent higher than 1981.

Genuine reductions in unemployment can come only from economic recovery and growth. Economic recovery will be delayed until federal spending is actually reduced, though a weak recovery is possible if spending is kept in check. Meaningful tax cuts would help, of course, but Washington talks only of taking away the breathing room we gained in the 1981 tax package.

Unfortunately, most of the discussion in the capital this year is likely to induce people to forget these basic facts.

WASHINGTON (NEA) - If the 11 steam generators originally ordered for the Clinch River Breeder Reactor were supposed to cost a total of $56 million, how much should the Department of Energy pay for the first two units?

In the Alice in Wonderland world of the CRBR project, the "correct" answer to that question is $143 million.

Federal officials originally solicited competitive bids for the steam generator contract but rejected all of the offers received, including a proposal from the Foster Wheeler Corp. to provide all the generating units for $20 million.

They then awarded a non-competitive $56 million contract to Atomics International, a division of the Rockwell International Corp. Six years later, the government had received only two of the 11 units but had paid more than two and a half times the cost of the complete order. The contract was belatedly cancelled in 1981.

That episode is typical of the CRBR project, which has become notorious for cost overruns, chronic delays and slipshod production - yet which continues to receive billions of dollars from the federal government.

ETTA ©1983 FORT WORTH STAR-TELEGRAM
HULME
NEA

Good money after bad

When the White House made a commitment in 1972 to build the nuclear-powered generating station in Tennessee, the project was supposed to be a joint venture between the federal government and a consortium of more than 750 utilities represented by the Project Management Corp.

The original cost estimate for the project was $400 million, with the utilities pledged to pay more than half of that amount. But they secured an agreement from the federal government which limited their liability to their original commitment of $257 million.

Today, Clinch River Breeder Reactor cost estimates are in the range of almost $3.6 billion or more. "The best index of the project's true worth," says energy expert Denis Hayes, "is the private sector's adamant refusal to shoulder any of the awesome cost escalations the project has seen."

The CRBR's insurmountable problems were apparent as early as 1973, when the principal subcontractor, Burns & Roe, conducted an internal review of its involvement in the project. A company memo summarizing that examination said:

"The Project Management Corp. general manager has privately advised Burns & Roe to get out of the ... job now, since it does not have a chance of success and could harm us badly."

By 1981, a House subcommittee had produced a report characterizing CRBR as a management fiasco and financial disaster. "The principal prime contracts have been written without binding provisions for cost, schedule or specific technical performance," noted the scathing congressional assessment. "It is not clear whether this bizarre practice is a symptom or a cause of the state of disarray in the project."

The principal rationale for the project in the early 1970s was that a breeder reactor produces more nuclear fuel than it consumes, thus providing an inexhaustible supply of fuel for the 1,000 nuclear powered generating stations then expected to be in operation by the end of this century.

Now, however, that estimate has been drastically scaled down to fewer than 150 nuclear power plants. At the same time, a glut of uranium has led to a sharp reduction in the price for that reactor fuel, down from $40 per pound in 1977 to $17 per pound today.

A 1981 study conducted by the Department of Energy's Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory concluded that the price of uranium would have to rise to $165 per pound before breeder reactors would be economically feasible substitutes for the conventional nuclear power plants now in operation.

Leading the lobbying campaign against the project is the Taxpayers Coalition Against Clinch River, whose members include leading environmental groups such as Friends of the Earth, Natural Resources Defense Council, National Audubon Society and Sierra Club as well as labor and religious groups.

But they recently have been joined by some improbable allies - a coalition of many of the nation's best known conservative organizations including the Heritage Foundation, Conservative Caucus, National Taxpayers Union and Conservatives Against Liberal Legislation.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Who drains whom?

Quite a stink has been made in Washington over the fact that some Ronald Reagan appointees to the board of the Legal Services Corp. billed the government for hefty consulting fees.

The furor, ignited by the Washington Post, is of course not attributable to the fact taxpayers were being further drained, but rather to who was doing the draining. The Reagan crowd frowns on the growing use of legal aid as a class action weapon against businesses and for expanded welfare benefits. Poverty lawyers and Big Media, in turn, frown on giving up that club.

Reagan's directors (most of whom he is replacing for other reasons, by the way) say they earned their keep by working hard to control a program that has been running wild, right under the noses of all the congressmen and journalists who are wrought over a couple hundred grand in fees.

Judging propriety of the payments is another question. What is eye catching, though, is a somewhat related story out of New York City that received comparatively scant attention. Seems that attorneys for the Legal Aid Society there recently walked off their jobs (and away from their needy clients) for 10 weeks in a dispute over, among other things, money. They were demanding a 9 percent annual raise. They settled earlier this month for 11.2 percent over two years, retroactive to last July.

By the time the new contract expires, pay for the lawyers will range from $19,500 (for a law school graduate who hasn't passed the bar exam) to $45,900 for one with at least 12 years in practice.

Establishment Washington has smirkingly observed for days that the people Reagan appointed to look after the legal needs of the poor attended to their own interests first. Evidently they weren't the only ones.

"I'm trying to remember... could he walk on red ink when he was governor of California?"

The other ABC

By PAUL HARVEY

Steel workers, auto workers and construction workers - for too long underpaid - got organized.

After some bitter and sometimes bloody battles they won recognition for their unions - sought and got higher wages - And higher and higher.

Now workers in these three industries are disproportionately unemployed.

And it has nothing to do with Reaganomics: auto workers were suffering 20 percent unemployment before Reagan. They priced themselves out of the international market. Foreign workers produced more for less.

So Americans started buying foreign cars and foreign steel and start building smaller houses - or no houses at all. Or started building with non-union labor.

Nationally, last year, only 35 percent of our nation's construction work was performed by union workers.

The average union construction worker now demands, in wages and fringes, $19 an hour. That is $760 a week.

Yet, potentially more costly are featherbedding, payola, strikes, jurisdictional disputes, travel allowances and other arbitrary demands.

It is mostly these considerations which hike the cost of renovating a Boston condo apartment to $39,000.

While a block away Merit worker workers are doing the same job for $16,000 less!

"Merit workers," rather than union workers. Merit workers are paid in proportion to the quality, as well as the quantity of work they do, an incentive to increase productivity.

The "Merit Shop" philosophy was spawned in and promoted by the ABC - the Associated Builders and Contractors.

This ABC now has 16,000 contractor members nation-wide and has cornered more than 60 percent of all commercial and industrial construction.

Were it not for the antiquated, outdated Davis-Bacon Act which straightjackets contractors on federal government projects, the Merit Shop workers could reduce that load by up to 15 percent, saving taxpayers billions each year.

Before Orrin Hatch became a U.S. Senator from Utah he was a union construction tradesman. Yet, he recognizes this "Merit Shop" is bringing competition back into the construction field.

The ABC insists it is reviving the "free enterprise" system where employer and employee had a right to choose one another.

You have heard much about increased industrial growth in sun-belt states even during the recession.

More than the sunshine, this reflects the fact that most of those states are "right to work" states where the ABC can take the fat out of construction contracts and build more factories for less money.

You may have noticed, if you've been paying any attention at all, that the new Congress is dealing for the most part with old business.

The deficit-ridden budget, more military spending, less for domestic programs, Social Security, the MX. Not on the list at the moment, however, is immigration, which was big in the last Congress and, in the form of the Simpson-Mazzoli reform bill, passed the Senate with a thumping bipartisan majority only to be amended to death by the House in the lame-duck last gasp of the 97th Congress.

A lot of people think that is a shame, including Leo Cherne, chairman of the International Rescue Committee. While the IRC's reason for being is the political refugee, and there will be more on that subject in a later column, it has a half century of expertise in human desperation that was the basic issue addressed by Simpson-Mazzoli.

A pause here to refresh memories. While billed as an immigration measure, Simpson-Mazzoli differed substantially from its predecessors. The focus was not admission procedures and quotas for legal immigration but the flood of illegal immigrants that has overwhelmed efforts of the United States to maintain control of its own borders. The primary features were penalties for U.S. employers knowingly hiring illegals and amnesty for aliens who had illegally entered the country before 1980.

Leo Cherne, like many of the bill's supporters, is quick to acknowledge its flaws. For one thing, the penalty provision, which would have the effect of switching the policing of illegal immigration from the porous borders to the job market, which is the magnet, could be a pretext for racial discrimination against legal as well as illegal residents of an obvious ethnic minority.

But that concern is by and large exaggerated, in Cherne's view, because employers moved by bias of any kind are, for the most part, going to exercise that bias in some fashion anyway. The important point is that the penalties - fines and, in extreme cases, prison terms - would provide an instrument where no other has been available to curtail the exploitive demand for cheap labor that draws the illegal immigrants. With the cost of transgressing the law borne by the employer as well as the worker, the former could be expected to take greater pains to keep within it.

Would this eliminate the problem of illegal immigration? Cherne doubts it. But it would bring the numbers down to manageable proportions, he believes. The grapevine would do it - word filtering back that the easily crossed border was no longer the only obstacle to a job in the United States.

The proposed amnesty, criticized as a reward for successful lawbreaking, Cherne sees as no flaw at all but in the American tradition. For as long as the country has exercised control over immigration, there have been periodic amnesties with the promise of eventual citizenship for evaders.

"We do not have the stomach," observes Cherne, "for permanently maintaining an underground population."

Issue on hold

The economic impact on communities and states is another matter. In a recessionary period with severe budgetary problems, communities would be understandably hard pressed to handle large numbers of impoverished, unskilled aliens straining public services and often requiring public assistance. Although he is not of the view that these should be "condemned by their previous state to an eternity of illiteracy and poverty," Cherne believes the economic burden they represent and the fact that the debate came to focus on Hispanics effectively killed Simpson-Mazzoli in the 97th Congress and weaken its chances of being brought up again in the 98th.

It may be too late for this particular effort at reform, anyway. Cherne foresees a real possibility in the coming months that Mexicans, fleeing economic distress at home, will be trying to enter the United States in numbers greater than anything previously encountered.

It is the penalty the nation will have to pay for the unwillingness of Congress to accept a less than completely adequate solution to the illegal immigration problem.

To repeat, Leo Cherne thinks this a shame. Simpson-Mazzoli was flawed, yes, but there are no completely acceptable alternatives to the procedures through which it proposed to address the problem.

"Inadequate remedies are better than non-existent ones," Cherne points out.

And the issue won't go away.

Can You Afford To Send 10% of Your Interest And Dividend Income to Washington?

With Your Cooperation, We Can Keep You Hard Earned Savings Growing at Home for Your Benefit!

You need to act NOW to protect earnings on your savings from the Automatic 10% Withholding Tax Congress passed last summer on interest and dividends.

Congress has passed a bad law. Legislators used an elephant gun to kill a mouse. This Withholding Tax will apply to stocks, bonds, retirement accounts, savings, certificates of deposit, government bonds, credit union shares—All types of personal savings.

It Is In Your Best Interest To Get Congress To Repeal This Unnecessary Law For The Following Reasons:

The Withholding Tax will discourage savings, and will hurt small savers and retired persons, the very persons who cannot afford it.

The Withholding Tax will not generate a large amount of money for the government. It will speed up the collection of your money for taxes.

The Withholding Tax will generate a blizzard of unproductive paper work for all financial institutions, businesses and for YOU.

Our customers pay their taxes due on interest and dividend income. The government implies there is a great amount of tax avoidance. Over 95% of all taxes due on this savings income is paid.

All financial institutions and payors of dividends have been required for years to report to the government, by Social Security number, all interest and dividends over $10 paid to YOU.

Please Join Us In Writing Your Elected Representatives, Urging Them To Repeal a Law That Should Never Have Been Passed. If We Work Together, We Can Get Their Action.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't hesitate to go to friends for help or advice today if you find yourself in a tight spot. They may have the solutions you lack.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Where your major objectives are concerned today conditions could be a trifle tough. Nevertheless, you can prevail. Be persistent.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) When making important decisions today, try to provide for contingencies. Take the long-range view instead of the immediate one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Things may start a bit slow today in your business or commercial dealings, but don't be pessimistic. The ball is in your court.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There's a possibility you and your mate may have to make a difficult decision. It may at first seem hard and calculating, but it will prove to be wise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll only receive that which is fair for your efforts today — no more, no less. To derive proper compensation, work hard.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A firm hand will be required today if you are managing others. Don't let the reigns of authority slip away.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Treat seriously any financial situations today which could affect your family. If you stay on top of things, you can grind them out to your satisfaction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The authority role fits you well today. You see things for what they are. Your realistic approach will be helpful to those under you.

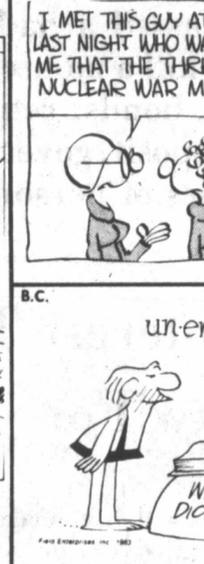

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This should be a profitable day for you businesswise. If it comes down to push-and-shove, you'll be able to drive a harder bargain than your competition.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you're in need of companionship today, seek out old friends with whom you feel comfortable and for whom you don't have to put on any pretenses.

The prediction was true. We are experiencing a tough winter. Ice, sleet and snow have caused wrecks, fatalities, a slow down overall and a need to be in control.

Confinement seems to unsteady our nerves instead of quiet them as the situation offers. Winter is a seasonal change, an opportunity to relax for a while and gain control.

Control is necessary for our mental health to continue. We become more cautious by recognizing "cabin fever" whenever the roads become to hazardous to get out. At times like this we stock our pantries and refrigerators in case the winter slow down continues.

Occasionally someone omits the safety of home and risks a venture outside only to get lost or stranded. One thing man has not been able to outsmart is the law of nature. As Nature speaks, it is best not to omit her message. We suffer when we do.

So, let's notice when the weather gets dangerous to reckless behavior. It's time to see facts and move alongside them instead of competing with them.

In the quiet of the home, tune in to yourselves. Be aware of the need for rest and relaxation. Take a load off your minds. Do something different. Enjoy the chance to get your emotional signals straight. Tune in to things you have been missing.

This can be done by recognizing the needs of your families. Kids have probably been begging for your attention for a long time. Play their games. Listen to their interests. Be in touch with the ones taken for granted too often. Kids can also recognize the direction their parents are moving and everyone can regroup.

It's an honor to be quieted by nature. Most of us live at such an active pace we would probably "burn out" if winter didn't fulfill its responsibility. From now on, let's be more cheerful to winter. Even if you already favor some of it, spend some of your confined time by watching, seeing, smelling, tasting and touching the cold of the winter season. Winter can speak a clear message — slow down.

And laugh. It's okay to be happy in your home. Make some hot chocolate, roast some marshmallows, sing a few songs, sit together without the distractions of television, radio, stereo and telephone. Be aware of the control you and your family gain in the safety of your home.

Our mental health depends on the winter freeze. It slows us down to relate to the significant — our families in good health around the home fires.

Dear Abby

Hotline for runaways is lifeline for parents

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The Saturday after Thanksgiving our 16-year-old daughter walked out of our home. A few days later she phoned a friend and told him she had too many problems to face so she was leaving town. We haven't heard from her since.

We felt very close to our daughter and knew she had some emotional problems for which she was receiving professional help. The pain we felt through Christmas and New Year's was almost unbearable. We love her very much and pray each day for her safe return.

Abby, please publish your message to runaways and the Runaway Hotline number as you have done so often in the past. Our daughter read your column every day in the Las Cruces (N.M.) Sun-News. Maybe she will read it today wherever she is.

THE SHAWS

DEAR SHAWS: With pleasure. Runaways, call this toll-free number: 1-800-231-6946. If in Texas, use this number: 1-800-392-3352.

An operator will take your call and telephone your parents anywhere in the United States with a message from you. There will be no lecturing or recriminations. Your call will not be traced. And only one question will be asked: "Do you need anything?" If you do, you will be told where you can get it, free. I repeat, no attempt will be made to contact you or bring you back home — regardless of your age.

If you are a runaway, I beg you to forget the past and send a message to your parents now. They will sleep better tonight and so will you. God bless you.

ABBY

P.S. Runaway Hotline was established in September 1973 by a handful of public-spirited volunteers with the support of the governor of Texas. To date, it has placed over 500,000 calls from runaways, assuring their families that they are OK. Beautiful!

DEAR ABBY: I have a son named Brad. He is 7 years old and deaf. Like most kids, Brad was very excited about Christmas, and he prepared his "want" list.

I am enclosing his letter. The words are his, but I took the liberty of correcting the spelling and punctuation. Being a mother yourself, I think you will understand how this made me feel.

Abby, please print this. It might call attention to what deaf people must face every day.

JANE GALLAGHER, YORBA LINDA, CALIF.

"Dear Santa: My wish is to have no voice on TV because our TV station doesn't have C.C. (closed captions) very much. I want no voice at all on TV for the hearing people until they give up and let all shows be C.C. Then everyone can watch TV at the same time and enjoy it. OK?"

DEAR ABBY: For Christmas I received several "gifts" that were not my idea of what a gift should be. I was simply notified that since I didn't need anything, a "gift" had been sent in my name to a charity of the giver's choice.

I think it's very generous to give to charity at Christmas time, but what it really amounts to is a tax-deductible gift.

Now, who gets the deduction? The generous bigshot who decided to make a donation in lieu of giving me a present? Or, since the "gift" was made in my name, do I get the deduction?

What sayest thou, fair oracle?

GIFT HORSE

DEAR HORSE: Whoa! The person who makes the contribution gets the deduction.

...

DEAR ABBY: Last summer my fiance gave me a necklace for my birthday. It was worth about $400. It came with a card saying, "A gift from ()," and Gerald signed his name.

We have since broken up because of his mother's constant interference. She has called me several times to tell me that Gerald wants the necklace back. I told her that I would have to hear from Gerald, so she put him on the phone and told him what to say. I decided to keep it anyway.

Since then she has called me several times and asked me where the necklace was, and I have told her I have no intention of returning it. I found out the other day that Gerald still owes $100 on the necklace. (The store called and informed me.)

I know I am legally entitled to keep it because I have proof it was a gift. My parents say I don't have to give it back or pay what's owed on it. My friends say I should give it back.

What do you say?

CONFUSED IN MISSOURI

DEAR CONFUSED: Give it back. And be glad you're not stuck with a wimp like Gerald.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

White throws touchdown; NFC downs AFC

HONOLULU (AP) — The Pro Bowl, showcase for the National Football League's elite, wasn't the most flawlessly played football game ever, but it had its moments.

The most decisive was in the final moment, as Dallas quarterback Danny White and Green Bay wide receiver John Jefferson combined to pull out a 20-19 victory for the National Football Conference on Sunday.

Trailing the AFC most of the game, the NFC marched 65 yards to the winning touchdown, the score coming on an 11-yard pass from Pro Bowl rookie White to Jefferson with 31 seconds left.

Washington's Mark Moseley, who had missed three field goals and had another blocked, kicked the extra point to give the NFC the triumph — but only after his first attempt was wiped out by a penalty against the NFC.

A diving reception by Jefferson on the play before the touchdown kept the NFC's winning drive alive. The NFC had fourth-and-7 at the AFC 25 when the Packers' receiver made his fingertip grab of White's throw for a 14-yard pickup.

On the next play, Jefferson broke open momentarily for the middle and White drilled the ball in for the touchdown.

"It was a little like playing sandlot ball there at the end," said White, who completed 14 of 26 passes for 162 yards while splitting quarterback duties with Washington's Joe Theismann. "We were making up plays in the huddle. Of course J.J. (Jefferson) made it work."

"The guys really wanted to win," said Jefferson, named the game's co-MVP with San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts of the AFC. "Now we have bragging rights for a year."

Moseley, whose field goal misses could have made him the game's goat, said he wasn't nervous when he lined up for the decisive PAT.

"I would have liked to have had a better day," said the Redskins kicker, who missed from 27, 48 and 49 yards and had a 33-yard attempt blocked. "But all in all, it came out fine in the end."

The NFC victory overshadowed a Pro Bowl record passing performance by Fouts.

Pampa hosts tough district games

Pampa squares off against Lubbock Estacado tonight at home, and the Harvesters face Borger Tuesday night in their home game.

Tonight's girls varsity game starts at 4 p.m.; boys tip off at 6 p.m.

Pampa boys squeaked out a win, 48-47 over Estacado in the first meeting this year. The girls fell 42-40 in overtime.

The district games against Estacado tonight make up games postponed Friday night due to bad weather.

Reserved-seat tickets for the Borger game are still available today at the athletic building at the high school, but will probably be gobbled up in a hurry, coach Garland Nichols said today.

Pampa-Borger games always match emotional rivals; this year is no different. Borger began Pampa's woes earlier this year, after handing the Harvesters their first district loss.

That game in Borger hosted a standing-room-only crowd; Tuesday's game forecasts the same.

"There are still some reserved seats available, but they better get them today. If they don't, they're on their own about getting a seat," coach Nichols said about the Pampa-Borger match-up.

Pampa was flying high at No. 4 in statewide 4-A ratings when Borger earlier dumped the team at Borger. Borger has also been in the top twenty most of the season, and jumped ahead of Pampa in the ratings after the earlier thrashing.

Against Borger Tuesday, varsity girls play at 6 p.m.; boys meet at 7:30.

Coach Nichols and the team hope to return Borger's earlier favor and district loss Tuesday, but are not looking past tonight's district contest with Estacado.

Seventh, eighth and ninth-grade Blue teams play against Borger tonight in the junior high gym. The junior high games begin at 4 p.m. The junior high Red-team games against Canyon, also scheduled for today, were canceled, Nichols said.

Kite wins Crosby

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Tom Kite got the victory and said it was a step in the right direction toward an undisclosed goal.

Rex Caldwell tied for second — the third week in a row he has had a least a share of the runnerup spot — and said he's already achieved a goal.

"When I first came on Tour, it was my dream to be recognized in any pro shop I went into. Now they recognize me in any grocery store I go into. It's great," Caldwell said Sunday after chasing Kite to the title in the 42nd Bing Crosby National Pro-Am golf tournament.

Caldwell, who has yet to win on the PGA Tour, lost in playoffs in the Bob Hope Classic and the Phoenix Open, his two previous starts. He didn't force it to a playoff this time. Kite won outright, by two shots, with a closing 73 in rain and wind and cold that raked the Pebble Beach Links, and a 276 total.

Caldwell also had a 73 over the final 18 and a 278 total. He shared second with Cal Peete, who pitched in for an eagle-2 on the way to a closing 70.

But Kite was the first to note that it could have been different. "If Rex had made those (birdie) putts on the last two holes, you could have had a very interesting story," Kite said.

But Caldwell missed them and Kite, despite bogeys on three of his last four holes, rode his once-commanding five-shot lead to his fifth PGA Tour triumph, a surprisingly low total for the man who led the 1981 money-winners and has taken the Vardon Trophy for the past two seasons.

"I'm awfully glad to get the win," he said.

"This is one you set your sights on, for a couple of reasons: the courses and the fact they always have such a strong field.

"This is a stepping stone, but I have a long way to go to complete my goals for the year."

He declined to name those goals, however.

A year ago, however, in a plane over the Atlantic headed for Great Britain, he spelled them out: "Win, and win consistently."

And Jack Nicklaus passed another money milestone. He birdied four holes in a row beginning on the 14th, a comeback that salvaged a closing round of par 72 and sixth alone at 280. He won $11,790 and became the only man to go past $4 million in career earnings.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—The Oakland A's won't have to clash with any of their players over an arbitration table this year.

The signing of base-stealing king Rickey Henderson to a reported $800,000 one-year contract on Friday solved the last of the possible arbitration cases for the team.

Henderson, who had a Feb. 14 date for an arbitration hearing, had been asking $850,000 while the team had offered $750,000.

The 24-year-old left fielder won't be the highest paid player on the team despite shattering the major league stolen base mark last season with 130 thefts. Center fielder Dwayne Murphy recently agreed to a four-year pact averaging $825,000 a season.

Henderson, who went to school in Oakland, hit 267 last season, but in past seasons he's topped 300. He batted .303 in 1980 and .319 in 1981 and he's hit 26 home runs and 77 doubles in his four-year career.

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—Bjorn Borg, still intent on retiring from the professional tennis circuit, used Roscoe Tanner's own best weapon to turn back the hard-hitting American in their latest exhibition.

The 26-year-old Swede served aces for the last two points Friday night in a 6-4, 6-4 triumph over Tanner in a $50,000 match watched by a crowd estimated at 5,300 at the Scope arena. They were the seventh and eighth aces for Borg, but Tanner finished with 14.

At an earlier news conference, Borg said his retirement decision, first announced last month in Thailand, is "very firm. I don't have the same motivation and I don't enjoy it as much as I did before."
