Three Secret Service agents killed in crash

By CATHERINE WILSON

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (AP) — Three Secret Service agents were killed and two sheriff's deputies were injured in a traffic accident Saturday as Queen Elizabeth II's motorcade headed up a winding mountain highway to Yosemite National Park.

The agents, part of an advance security team, were killed in the head-on collision of their car and a car from the Mariposa County sheriff's department, state trooper Jim Fulton said.

The accident occurred on California 132 "miles ahead" of the royal party, which detoured around the crash and continued into the park, troopers said.

A 15-vehicle motorcade was taking the queen and her husband, Prince Philip, from Castle Air Force Base to Yosemite, where they were to spend a quiet weekend after a full week of pomp and ceremony.

The 2½-hour drive from the base to the park follows a winding, scenic highway that cuts through the Sierra Nevada foothills.

The victims were part of a security team assigned to detective duty at Castle Air Force Base, Fulton said. It was unclear which vehicle crossed the center line, he said. A sheriff's sergeant was in stable condition and an injured deputy suffered minor injuries.

"The queen has heard about this very sad accident and she's of course very saddened by the news," said Michael Shea, her press secretary. "We had to divert to drive around where the accident was. And as I say, she's very upset to hear the news."

Shea said the queen's doctor, Norman Blacklock, traveling with the royal couple, offered his assistance, but "local medical authorities had everything in hand."

In Los Angeles, Nancy Reagan said: "I feel so terrible. I'm heartsick," according to White House spokesman Anson Franklin.

The royal couple paused for about five minutes at Inspiration Point, a part of the park that affords a spectacular view of El Capitan, a 7,569-foot-high granite monolith, and Bridalveil Fall.

At Yosemite, the royal party took over the entire Ahwahnee Hotel. The couple's sixth-floor room has a view of Glacier Point, Yosemite Falls and the Royal Arches.

More troops to El Salvador

But Reagan reassures nation this will not be another Vietnam War

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he may increase the number of U.S. military advisers in El Salvador past the current administration-imposed limit of 55, which is expected to be reached soon.

But the president, answering questions after a speech to the Commonwealth Club in San Francisco, repeated the administration's assurance that it had no plan to send U.S. combat troops to El Salvador.

NBC News said Friday night that the president was prepared to send as many as 150 advisers to El Salvador because, in the words of what the network called a "highly placed administration source," Reagan "is not about to lose another country to communism. That is not what Ronald Reagan is programmed to do."

Meanwhile, in Washington, two congressmen urged FBI Director William H. Webster to reassign one or more FBI agents to the U.S. Embassy in El Salvador to help investigate slayings of American citizens in that country.

"Important questions of human rights are at stake here," said Reps. Don Edwards, D-Calif., and F. James Sensenbrenner Jr., R-Wis., in a letter to Webster.

The San Salvador embassy now has an FBI agent responsible for coordinating investigations of the murders of four U.S. Catholic churchwomen and two American trade unionists. He is due to leave El Salvador shortly.

On the subject of military advisers, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has said twice in the past two weeks that any increase in number, if decided upon, would number in the "10s or 20s."

Asked about the NBC report, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said: "No decisions (have been made). And consultations with Congress will continue."

In his San Francisco speech, the president rejected any analogy with the war in Vietnam.

"In no sense are we speaking of participation in combat by American forces."

Going off welfare may force him back on...

WARREN, Ohio — A 50-year-old man who got off welfare by buying an old tow truck to start his own business says he may have to go back on the dole because his success cost him an exemption from child support payments.

"I'm trying to get off welfare, and they're trying to keep me back on," says Richard Parker, whose luck had seemed to be changing.

A few weeks ago, the ex-trucker received a settlement of several thousand dollars from a Chicago-based peanut butter manufacturer after Parker reported glass fragments in a jar he bought in a Warren supermarket. He said his attorney advised him not to disclose the specific amount.

Parker bought the truck with the money, fixed it up and started a small business. He told local welfare officials about his windfall so they would take him off the rolls.

When Parker left welfare, however, he lost his exemption from making child-support payments for his 6-year-old daughter, who lives with his ex-wife and receives Aid to Dependent Children benefits. Parker said he had fallen behind by $7,000 on child-support payments after he lost his job two years ago.

He said that when he told welfare caseworkers in Trumbull County about his court settlement, they said they would ask the court to take away his truck to make good on the $7,000 back payment. If his truck is taken away, Parker said, he'll land back on welfare.

"I only collected $98 a month from general relief," Parker said. "I could make it back easy if they'd let me keep my truck."

He said he wants to earn a living so he can support his daughter and is not trying to avoid the payments.

"I'm 50 years old," he said. "What can I do? It's hard for a young man to find work. It's harder for an ex-trucker who's 50 years old. In the last two years this has been my only opportunity to work with a truck. It's my only job hope."

Barbara Reese, supervisor of social services at the welfare department, met Thursday with Parker.

"We're obligated to file a change in status (to Domestic Relations Court), but the judge does his own thinking," she said. "We have no power at all to make him give up his truck. It's up to the judge."

Allergic deaths nix Zomax pills

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — An "apparent increase" in allergic reactions to a prescription pain reliever called ZOMAX, including five deaths, has prompted the manufacturer to recall the drug.

Johnson & Johnson Inc. said Friday that its subsidiary, McNeil Pharmaceutical of Spring House, Pa., is "temporarily withdrawing ZOMAX" until a new label spelling out possible side effects can be issued in consultation with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

The drug, introduced in October 1980 and since used by an estimated 15 million people, will not have to be taken from the market permanently, FDA spokesman Chris Smith said in Washington.

The company said it noticed an "apparent increase in the number of allergic reactions" to ZOMAX last month. It did not indicate how long the product might be off the market.

"The latest number of total allergic reactions we have had reported to us is about 1,001. The severity of these reactions have ranged from mild rash" to extreme hypersensitivity, a Johnson & Johnson statement said.

The company did not reveal the identities of the five ZOMAX victims or exactly when they died. Two deaths occurred in Massachusetts, and one each in New York, North Dakota and Kansas, said company spokesman James Murray.

ZOMAX often is prescribed to arthritis sufferers. "We request that any consumer having ZOMAX return the drug to the drugstore" for a refund, said the statement.

The product also is sold overseas, but no action on foreign distribution has been taken pending "discussion with the appropriate regulatory agencies" in other countries, said spokesman Marshall Molloy said.

"Three of the deaths occurred during the last two months," said Robert Andrews, another Johnson & Johnson spokesman.

Mrs. Faubus had premonition of her own murder

HOUSTON (AP) — Elizabeth Faubus, the third woman found slain in a bathtub here last week, believed someone was trying to kill her and bought a cemetery plot two months ago, says her estranged husband, former Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus.

Mrs. Faubus, 44, told her son, Rick Westmoreland, shortly before her death that she thought someone was going to murder her, Faubus said after traveling to Houston from his home in Little Rock, Ark.

"He said she didn't say anything else, just that she thought someone was going to kill her," Faubus said.

Mrs. Faubus' nude body was found Thursday immersed in a bloody bathtub in the master suite of her two-story brick home. She lived alone.

The Harris County medical examiner had made no ruling in Mrs. Faubus' death, investigator James Ebdon said Saturday.

"It's on hold," Ebdon said, adding that release of the findings is up to doctors involved in the autopsy. "I don't know what they're waiting for."

Mrs. Faubus and two other victims, Ruth Kottler, 61, and Bertie Eakens, 74, were smothered or asphyxiated, said homicide detective J.C. Mosier. Mrs. Kottler and Mrs. Eakens were found Tuesday fully clothed and face-down in their bathtubs, Mosier said.

All three women, described as "financially secure," had wounds that were similar in some respects, Mosier said. He declined to elaborate.

Investigators have found no hard evidence linking the three deaths, Mosier said. But he said detectives "will not rule out the possibility that the cases are connected."

No motive has been found in any of the cases, Mosier said. Two months ago, Mrs. Faubus bought a burial plot at Memorial Oaks Cemetery and instructed Geo. H. Lewis & Sons on Bering Drive to handle the funeral arrangements should anything happen to her, said funeral home director Bob Jones.

"She was quite insistent about it being the Bering Drive home," Jones told the Houston Chronicle.

Mrs. Faubus had lived alone in the house since her husband moved out in late 1981. He returned to Arkansas to become director of the state's Veteran Affairs Department, a job he since has left.

Mrs. Faubus filed for divorce in October and neighbors said sale of the $250,000 home was pending. She was planning to move into an apartment in The Woodlands north of Houston.

Faubus, 73, said he and his wife had discussed selling some antiques and she had agreed not to sell two items, both of which were missing from the residence.

Among the missing items were a cherry-walnut desk and chair with the state seal of Arkansas and Faubus' name inscribed. The other was a large portrait of Faubus given as a gift while he was governor.

"She expressed a desire to keep the desk and chair and had expressed the intention of sending the painting back to me. If someone obtained them properly through her, I would at least like to know where they are," he said.

Faubus said he spoke to his wife on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday and she was "appreciative of everything I was doing for her and thanked me two or three times before I hung up."

Faubus said he heard of Mrs. Faubus' death from relatives who heard the news on a radio report Thursday.

He said she was "one of the most frail people I have ever known. She could be so easily overcome."

Study looks at mass murderers

By FRED BAYLES
BOSTON (AP) — He is in his 20s or 30s, a little shorter than average, a little overweight. He prefers a firearm — usually a rifle — and is likely to kill his victims in their homes. More often than not, he sports a mustache.

That, say two Northeastern University professors, describes the American mass murderer, a killer who they say does not fit the popular perception of a gibbering madman who kills strangers from rooftops or performs mutilations.

"The typical mass murderer is extraordinarily ordinary," said Jack Levin, a sociology professor who, with criminology professor James Fox, has studied 42 mass killers. "He's the guy next door. He doesn't stand out in a crowd."

Fox and Levin looked at cases involving murders of four or more people from 1973 to 1980, comparing them to single homicides.

The cases of mass killings, involving at least 500 deaths, provided the researchers with a strong impression of who is likely to kill and what factors lead to such deadly bursts of rage.

"The mass murderer is a distinct phenomena that we should try to understand," said Fox. "What we understood until now was based on a few case studies which are biased."

The researchers also say mass murder is on the increase, possibly because of the increasing pressures of society. Many of the killers studied had recently lost their jobs or undergone divorce. Others went on homicidal benders for money.

In the past two months, the country has recorded two separate mass murders. Twelve men and one woman were slain Feb. 19 in a holdup at a Seattle Chinatown gambling club. Two men in their early 20s have been charged with the crimes.

This week six residents in remote McCarthy, Alaska, were shot and killed. Authorities have charged Louis D. Hastings, a 39-year-old unemployed computer programmer, with the deaths. No motive has been established in the killings.

Fox and Levin say mass murder is a masculine crime. Of the 42 cases studied, only one involved a woman. It is also a white man's crime. Fox said only eight of the mass murderers studied were black.

The researchers found that in half of the mass killings studied, the murderer knew his victims. More than likely, those victims were family members.

"Homicide usually emerges out of a fight, over money, out of honor or love. You don't have that kind of fight with four people at once," he says.

Levin said these killings often have their roots in revenge. Levin said the other large percentage of mass killings take place during another crime, usually robbery. These types of murders are usually the well-planned acts of a sane person.

"These people are not crazy in either a psychiatric or a legal sense," said Levin. "They are evil, but not crazy."

Police car hit in intersection

A Pampa patrol car and a 1966 Chevrolet collided Tuesday (March 1) about 12:30 p.m. at the intersection of Cuyler and Foster resulting in $205 damage to the patrol car, according to a report issued by the Pampa Police Department.

By law an accident must be reported only when the estimated amount of damage exceeds $250. However, because this accident involved a patrol car, an investigation by a Texas Department of Safety trooper, said J. J. Ryzman, Pampa chief of police.

According to the report, Patrolman Kenneth Hopson was going to assist another officer. Hopson had his emergency lights and siren running as he approached the red light. He was almost through the intersection when the Chevrolet driven by Tipton Ovie Smith, came through on her green light, clipping the rear end of the patrol car.

"When emergency equipment is running, an officer is asking for the right of way," said the chief. He said it is no excuse for running a red light, however courtesy should cause citizens to yield the right of way.

Investing should not be an impulse

By TOM BYRD

In continuing our discussion on securities (stocks and bonds) it is essential that we point out regardless of what security we select it should meet our goals.

One of the major factors about investing is that it should not be a field of impulse shopping. Know what you want before you buy. Now determine if your selection will do for what you want - in short, will it meet your need?

If, for example, you wish your investment to give you income then you must expect your choice to provide suitable dividends (stocks or equity investments give dividends) or interest (bonds or debt securities produced interest) to meet your needs.

In addition, you must be reasonably convinced that this income will be paid to you regularly and dependably.

In past discussions we pointed out that whether or not you get your income will depend on the ability of that particular corporation to pay it. It is also generally true that the higher your yield or return, the more risk you are assuming.

A U.S. Government guaranteed bond will not bring you as much income as an unsecured note of some small corporation. On the other hand, the government bond will afford you a lot more safety and peace of mind. So if you're aiming for maximum income on your investment, chances are you're going to have to sacrifice a bit of safety. To put it another way, "There's no such thing as a free lunch."

Now, if income to you is secondary and you're after capital appreciation, then you will probably be seeking securities that you think may eventually be sold for more than you paid for them.

One thing you can be certain of, however, is that no stock or bond can simultaneously offer you minimum risk, attractive income, and good potential for growth. If a security features one of these, the others will be secondary or perhaps practically nonexistent. However, at certain times it may be possible to obtain securities which offer a period of potentially some modest combination of these features.

Severe thunderstorms hit the state

By The Associated Press

Tornadoes cut a swath through Central and Northeast Texas Friday, demolishing barns near Boerne, knocking down two brick walls and knocking down a church steeple in Tyler, destroying a mobile home in DeKalb, and uprooting trees, downing power lines and causing roof damage in numerous communities.

No serious injuries were reported, however, from the storms which cut their path through Texas in the heart of the day.

Heavy thunderstorms lingered in Southeast Texas early today, and a severe thunderstorm warning was in effect for more than an hour for Jefferson and Orange counties. The storm system was headed northeast toward Louisiana and out of the state.

A large part of Central Texas and East Texas was under a tornado watch from 11 a. m. until 5 p. m.

In Tyler, a tornado cut a path through an area about eight blocks from downtown late in the morning, knocking down two brick walls at a warehouse, nipping the steeple off a church and downing trees in a cemetery, Tyler Police Capt. Henry Ford said.

"I would say we were lucky," Ford said. "You go out our back door (of the police station), go across a parking lot and you're in that cemetery."

At 11:10 a. m. a tornado was reported about 50 miles to the northeast — five miles north of Longview, where several trees were uprooted and power lines were down.

Less than 30 minutes later, several trees were uprooted and power lines damaged west of Kildare, about 10 miles north of Jefferson, in Marion and Cass counties.

Shortly later, the high winds battered the communities of Avery and DeKalb in the northeast corner of the state. Several barns were toppled near Avery, and one man was reported injured. At DeKalb, 12 miles to the east, power lines were down, the mobile home destroyed, and extensive roof damage was reported.

The Red River Army Arsenal, in the same vicinity, also was hit, with the same kind of damage.

"Most of the roof damage reported with the storms was from falling trees," the National Weather Service said in a statement issued today.

Yantis, about 50 miles northwest of Tyler, also reported a twister. Officials said the tornado caused roof damage to a post office and bent the flag pole.

The twister at Boerne, northwest of San Antonio, struck early in the morning and knocked down power lines, demolished barns and uprooted trees.

"It touched down at least four times, but mostly in rural areas," Kendall County Sheriff Lee D'Spain said. "We've got some power and telephones out."

"We were lucky," he said. "There aren't even any livestock injuries that I know about. Just lots of damage to barns, trees and fences."

Very heavy thunderstorms moved east out of Johnson City, 50 miles northeast of Boerne, at midmorning and were in an area of scattered thunderstorms that extended from southwest of Kerrville to north of Austin and east of Temple.

Another tornado was reported by the public near Fairfield, which is in Freestone County, about 75 miles northeast of Temple and about 75 miles southwest of Tyler.

The sheriff's department in Anderson County, which abuts Freestone County on the east, said the tornado near Fairfield apparently touched down in a rural area.

Severe weather was reported from San Antonio northward and flash flood watches were issued for the eastern third of North Texas.

KKK combat camp is being used

DOUBLE BAYOU, Texas (AP) — Bayou swampland that a federal judge called a "principal training ground" for Ku Klux Klan militia last year again is being used by paramilitary units, the Chambers County sheriff says.

Sheriff C.E. "Chuck" Morris said he has received several complaints about renewed training at Camp Puller, about 40 miles east of Houston. But Morris said he is not sure the troops are part of the Klan.

U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald ordered the Klan to stop paramilitary training at that camp and all others like it. Her order stemmed from complaints by Vietnamese fishermen that the Klan and the American Fisherman's Coalition had threatened them.

"From our interpretation of the judge's order, it only applies to persons who are members of the Klan," Morris said Friday. He said if the group training at the site now is not made up of Klan members, it is not doing anything illegal.

The camp is being run by Robert John Sisente, who denies being a Klan member. Morris said Sisente contends he is running a "survivalist school."

Morris said Betty Bowles, who bought land that once was part of Camp Puller, has complained about rapid gunfire and war training at the site. He said she also told him someone was carried across her property on a stretcher.

Mrs. Bowles' land used to belong to former Klan Grand Dragon Louis Beam Jr., who quit the Klan in 1981.

Lucille Standley, 83, said she has also heard training exercises.

"One night the racket woke me up," said Mrs. Standley, who owns property adjacent to the camp. "It sounded like something was hitting on my house. Then I checked and it was them down there practicing at midnight."

The Southern Poverty Law Center, which represented the Vietnamese fishermen in federal actions against the Klan, is continuing to monitor Camp Puller, said John Furman, the center's research director. He said further motions will be filed if attorneys find the Klan is involved in training there.

Champ show lamb didn't come sheep

HOUSTON (AP) — A 1,255-pound animal named Black Velvet, belonging to an 18-year-old Rio Grande Valley youth, has been selected grand champion steer of the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo.

The youth, Clifton Smith of Lyford, is the son of a cotton and grain sorghum farmer. His steer was picked the best of 28 finalists before a crowd of nearly 43,000 at the rodeo performance in the Astrodome Friday night.

Chosen as the reserve grand champion was a 1,260-pound steer named Desire, owned by James Henson, 16, of Abilene, whose father is a home builder.

The selection of the two steers is considered a highlight of the nation's biggest and richest livestock show.

The grand champion is an Ohio steer out of the herd of David Shane of Postoria. It is out of a half Maine-Anjou cow and a purebred Chianina bull. The reserve champion is one-half Chianina and one-half Angus.

In the auction sales of champions Friday, Baytown Budweiser beer wholesaler Jim Ferris bid $71,500, the highest price ever paid for the grand champion lamb of the show.

Other records set in the auction ring were $61,000 for the champion pen of five broiler chickens, $40,000 for the grand champion turkey and $28,000 for the reserve grand champion turkey.

The $71,500 goes to Geyer Wiseman, 13, of Brownwood, for her 141-pound Suffolk sheep named Ralph Lauren. Geyer follows in the footsteps of her father, Dr. Wesley Wise, who showed the grand champion sheep at the Houston Fat Stock Show in 1956 and sold it for $2,000.

Wise, now a thoracic surgeon, says the actual value of his daughter's sheep for slaughter purposes is about $100. The previous high was $63,000, paid here in 1982.

A group of five Houston businessmen paid a record $40,000 for the grand champion turkey sold by Ricardo Jauregui, 10, of Hye in Blanco County. The high bid by Jim Motley, Dave Gray, Chris Richardson, Tom Lile and Tom Gray topped the previous high of $28,000 paid here last year.

They're 'thinking green' in Shamrock again this year

By Bill Howe

Shamrock, Texas (Special) — Everybody's "thinking green" in Shamrock, Texas as the count-down begins for the 37th running of the city's famed St. Patrick's Celebration.

The local newspaper editor has already taken pills to turn his beard green, the special edition of The Shamrock Texan printed on green newsprint is set to go to press, and candidates for local offices have included in their campaign promises vows to wear green underwear.

Irishmen by the thousands, most sporting onegal beards, with Irish colleens on their arms, are bound for Shamrock to join in the shenanigans honoring the great St. Patrick. And, of course, they'll be wearin' o' the green and thinking it, too, to carry out this year's celebration theme.

Shamrock, population 3200, located in the dry and dusty portion of the Eastern Panhandle, will turn green as the Emerald Isle itself the weekend of March 18-20 as an expected 25,000 visitors join with the homefolk to insure an enthusiastic and successful celebration.

The biggest St. Patrick's party held anywhere outside Ireland is headed up this year by James Lunsford, general chairman, assisted by many committees doing the legwork for the celebration.

A pre-St. Patrick's Banquet featuring Mike Morrow, Executive Director of the Association of Texas Professional Educators, will open the celebration Friday night, March 18, at National Guard Armory. Morrow, who says: "we have enough people who tell it like it is; I tell it like it could be," is often described as "America's Happiest Speaker."

Also entertaining banquet guests with her singing will be Heidi Allen of Pampa, Miss Irish Rose of 1981.

The real celebrating starts Saturday morning, March 19, with an old settlers reunion, the hour-long St. Patrick's Celebration Parade led by the green-clad Shamrock High School Irish Band, followed by Donegal Beard Judging, the Miss Irish Rose Contest, street carnival, team and calf roping, math contest and mud drag racing, a new feature of the Irish Party this year.

The annual St. Patrick's

Celebration dance at National Guard Armory, featuring the unique music of the "West Texas Express," will begin at 9:00 p. m. A dance for teens has been planned at the old Grand Slam Motor Company building on West Highway 66.

Shamrock Ministerial Alliance will host a program at High School Auditorium at 7:30 p. m. presenting Johnny Ray Watson, a unique individual with a timely and necessary message for today's world.

It all began in 1938, when the late Glenn Truax talked Shamrock Boosters Club into sponsoring a St. Patrick's Celebration to honor the name of the town, after the senior play for that year had been cancelled.

IS THERE ANYTHING IN A NAME?

Is there anything in a name? Does it really make any difference what a person is called religiously? That names are important is evident in that God gave Adam the responsibility of naming all the animals (Genesis 2:19). We all have names as a means of identification. Many times, our names have other distinctions in that they relate to some of our ancestors. But, in any event, names are important.

"For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth. And the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness, and all kings thy glory; and thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the Lord shall name" (Isaiah 62:1-2). The prophet here speaks of the age of Christ when both Jew and Gentile should be united in one body (Ephesians 2:11-22). Then, they would be called by a new name. The name was Christian (Acts 11:26).

Peter says, "but if a man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God in this name" (I Peter 4:16). The name of "Christian" is the name we are to wear religiously. James says, "Do not they blaspheme the honorable name by which ye are called?" (James 2:7). While other terms are used in the New Testament to designate the followers of Christ, the word "Christian" is the only name given to them.

The name of "Christian" is God-given and, since it is the new name authorized by God, then any other name would be wrong.

Did we learn the thirties lessons?

Winston S. Churchill II, grandson of Britain's great wartime leader, observed not long ago that "there are many people on both sides of the Atlantic who are going about marching in favor of peace as if we haven't got it, as if it is something we need to look forward to."

This is dangerous, he said, "because the peace activists of the 1930s led us directly into the Second War by causing the Western democracies to disarm in the face of the Nazi build-up."

"To disarm today in the face of the growing Soviet build-up would be catastrophic."

Britain again has a strong disarmament movement, but there are encouraging signs that some Britains have learned the painful lessons of the 1930s.

At Oxford University the other day, the Oxford Society voted to reverse what the elder Churchill denounced 50 years ago as an "ever shameful" action.

This was the 1933 resolution by the debating society that "this house will in no circumstances fight for king and country."

"Those of us who voted for the original motion," said Lord Beloff, who was an Oxford undergraduate in 1933, "have perhaps a duty to make atonement and warn against this kind of foolish arrogance."

At about the same time, the governing synod of the Church of England was defeating a resolution that would have called for the unilateral nuclear disarmament of Britain.

Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, who is no hawk, spoke against the resolution as "a moral inconsistency" that would not result in reciprocal disarmament by the Soviet Union.

The peace movement in Britain and elsewhere in Western Europe is, of course, being heartily encouraged by the Soviets - just as its counterpart in the 1930s was good news for the tyrants and enemies of peace of that era.

The Wall St. tycoon who was a spy

By William A. Rusher

NEW YORK (NEA) - Michael Straight's volume of confessional memoirs, entitled "After Long Silence," is now available in bookstores, and it affords a fascinating tour of the mental processes of a certain type of liberal who once flourished in this country.

Straight is a wealthy and socially prominent sprig of the Whitney clan who was educated in England before World War II and threw his weight around extensively in liberal and leftist circles in this country after the war. In 1946 and 1947, he was publisher of The New Republic, in 1948 he became its editor, and served in that capacity until 1956. He was one of Henry Wallace's closest associates in the early years of the Cold War, sharing the fatuous Wallace's opinion that Harry Truman was being much too hard on the Soviet Union. (Wallace, in fact, served as editor of The New Republic when Straight was its publisher.) I erred, however, in a recent column when I stated that Straight and his magazine supported Wallace's third-party bid for the presidency in 1948. To their credit, they parted with Wallace when American Communists effectively took him over and steered him into that dead end.

Straight remained a flaming liberal, though, battling "McCarthyism" and lobbying zealously for just about every fashionable leftist cause in the decade of the 1950s. During the '60s and '70s he quieted down, for some reason not immediately apparent.

Now, in his memoirs, Straight acknowledges that he had joined a Communist cell while a student at Cambridge University in 1937. Not only that, but he was recruited by a young Communist don there to commit acts of espionage for Russia when he returned to the United States in 1938 to become a social friend of the Roosevelts and to hold various jobs in FDR's second and third administrations.

Straight's version of these events is, perhaps naturally, highly self-serving. He wants us to understand that he refused to become a Wall Street tycoon, which had apparently struck his Soviet superiors as the shrewdest course. And although he admits passing documents to a Soviet intelligence agent known to him only as "Michael Green," he insists that these were not classified government papers, but merely his own "analyses" of events in Washington.

In 1941, Straight maintains, he broke his ties with communism, although he concedes that for 20 years thereafter he kept running into Cambridge contemporaries whom he had known as fellow Communists (e.g. Guy Burgess) who were now in sensitive jobs in British intelligence, the British Foreign Office and elsewhere. He resisted all temptations to unmask them, however, preferring to accept such assurances as Burgess' repeated claim that he would be retiring from government service soon anyway. (He finally did - escaping in 1951 to Moscow, where he died.)

Not until 1963 did Straight get around to telling the FBI, very privately, the truth about himself; and the public would not have this explanatory volume even yet if his name had not finally surfaced involuntarily in 1981, in connection with the long-delayed exposure and disgrace of that young Communist don: Sir Anthony Blunt.

Straight is not, of course, by a long shot the first or only Communist, or even Communist spy, to leave the party. Most of them, however, have subsequently turned sharply against it, and become passionate anti-communists. (Whittaker Chambers comes to mind.) To Straight, however, that would merely have been - as Richard Nixon might put it - "the easy thing to do." Straight wanted to have his cake and, yet, eat it, too: to distance himself from communism, while concealing his communist record and remaining a sturdy left-liberal, fiercely opposed to "red-baiters," "cold warriors" and the like. Which is exactly what he did.

At the core of certain aristocrats like Straight one finds a cool arrogance that makes such a thing as becoming a Communist, and a spy for the Communists, possible in the first place, and then equips its possessor with the gall to expect that he can end such activities without any consequences whatever - not even disclosure - and keep right on lecturing the human race on how it ought to behave politically. One would like to think that at last, late in his 60s, Michael Straight will learn a modicum of the humility that would so have become him in his teens, "and put on wisdom with the Robe of Dust."

'... bring a toothbrush or comb... (they) cannot furnish these...'

Bring a toothbrush

I read with a heavy heart the front page story on the Coronado Nursing Center this week. May I suggest that the person or persons who had so many complaints about the home spend just one hour a week doing volunteer work at that home? (And bring a friend who in turn is asked to bring a friend, etc.)

How much better world this would be if we spent more of our time helping someone in need rather than criticizing them.

I am not saying that everyone at the home gets the best of care, but I do believe that Mr. and Mrs. Moore and their staff do the very best they can with inadequate help.

When you visit either of the nursing homes, and I hope that you do, ask the activities director what you can do to make the home more pleasant for the residents. Bring a pen and pad with you to write a letter for someone, a spool of thread and needle to do a little mending, or just bring someone a toothbrush or comb. The home cannot furnish all of these things. Little Bingo prizes would be more than welcomed also.

See how good it makes you feel to know you have done something special for "the least of My brethren." God will bless you for it.

Help the needy?

Recently one of our utility companies said that they would like to help the needy. I find this hard to believe. We received a gas bill for $73.20, if paid by 2-15-83. Since I just returned to work after a recent layoff, the bill was paid on 2-18-83.

My wife gave the cashier a check for $73.20, and nothing was said about a late payment. Our next bill came today with an $8.14 charge added on.

I think if Energas was trying to help anybody, they wouldn't try to charge more than 11 percent interest for a bill that is three days late.

I'm also sure that they don't pay you that kind of interest if they have to refund an overcharge to you.

I have to call that usury. I'm also not going to pay it.

School board recipe

Take several individuals capable and willing to be members of a group. Add concern for the betterment of education for all children regardless of age, race, religion, mental or physical ability. Mix in understanding of problems facing educational leaders, students, and parents. Pour in a generous amount of courage to face directly and voice opinion on all situations that might arise in the educational system from plumbing to firing and hiring.

Stir all above qualifications to a smooth mixture of love, compassion, and willingness, together with the business and legal status in mind to achieve what is best for the whole. Place in a hometown community and ice with pride, devotion, desire, and determination to never lose sight of yesterday, fulfill today, and always look ahead to tomorrow.

The above are the ingredients of a well organized, concerned, and above all - A COMMUNITY SCHOOL BOARD - of which each citizen of Pampa can trust, have pride in, and knowledge that our educational system is among the best for the present generations to come as the followers of today will be the community leaders of tomorrow.

Tax the spending

When the president came on the T.V. the first part of January to tell the American people that unemployment had dropped in December and our nation's economy is full on the road to recovery, inspired me to write this article.

A couple of things the president forgot to tell the American people is that the unemployment all through history has dropped in the month of December due to the extra Christmas help employed by the business and postal service.

There was a big increase in unemployment for the month of January because the Christmas help had been paid off.

Also, for the first time, the American military around the world was counted in the unemployment percentages. This makes unemployment look good on paper, but it didn't do anything for the millions of people unemployed around the country.

When the American people see or hear something they don't like, they have a tendency to look the other way and not see it or to turn a deaf ear to it, and ignore it.

The president wants to change the tax system. He says the American people are spending more money than ever before, so why not stop taxing income and start taxing spending? He is right about more people spending more money, because it takes more money to live. But your take home pay is less.

People on social security, SSI, Vet pensions and unemployment checks better take notice because their spending will be taxed also. When the disabled and elderly pay a $100 gas or electric bill there will be also a $10 spending tax. That is $10 less food on the table. There will be no deductions on spending tax that you will get back at the end of the year.

The president says that medicare on short-term hospital patients should be raised from $260 to $750 and lowered on long term stays (over 60 days in the hospital) in order to help the long-term patients. Big deal. There may be one in a million that stay over sixty days. Usually within sixty days most people either die or go home. So he helps one long-term patient and hurts 999,999 short-term patients. There are millions of Americans whose only income is social security and are going to have to pay $750 from it. They are going to be hurt. I know that congress and the senate got $9,000 per year cost-of-living raise. But what about the people on social security? I doubt if they will even get a $90 a year raise.

Take a good look at what the five-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax is going to do to the economy. It will hurt so much at the gas pumps, but when the trucking company has to pay more, they raise their prices. Then the wholesalers and retailers raise their dollar prices and the consumer has to pay more for a product. The buying power of the dollar goes down.

Another time the American people turned their heads was when Castro opened up his prisons and mental institutions, put the inmates on boats and headed them for American shores, scattering thousands of hardened criminals and mentally insane people throughout our nation. Castro didn't send funds to take care of them or to pay to have the courts lock them up when they rob, rape, or kill. It doesn't help the tax payers or our overcrowded jails.

Now we bring up the Vietnamese people, thousands can be seen when you look around. They all have fine homes, nice cars, some have businesses. They live much better than the average American. It makes me wonder where they got the money. They aren't on welfare or unemployed. Their fishing boats are superior to the American fishing boats. I wish someone would tell me who is paying for it. I think myself, that if we owed the Vietnamese anything, it was paid back in American lives.

The administration says that the economy is on the rise, that Americans are paying less income tax, but the administration failed to mention that the corporations and people making over $50,000 got a tax break. The tax for the working man is bringing home one dollar more for every $500 he makes. You hear people say "Why don't you put the squeeze on the rich industrialist and big corporations to foot the bill. I don't know but my guess that they would be offended and could cost the administration some bucks in contributions to the campaign for re-election. But who is going to pay when the working people are paid out? I am just one of the poor Americans that is thankful to have freedom of speech and freedom of the press in our great country. I am a vet and have fought for this country. There is no place I would rather live. Our government is set up for the people, by the people. So if you think something is not right, don't look the other way. Write your congressmen and senators. The poor could get poorer and the rich could get richer.

Proud of nurses

I would like to take this time to congratulate the geriatric nurses of Pampa. Recently becoming one myself has given me the opportunity to work and get to know some of these dedicated nurses. They work hard to provide emotional support as well as good physical being for our senior citizens. The hard work and long hours are sometimes overlooked. Their rewards are sometimes gratified only by the smile of a resident or being told how much they are missed while not being there. I salute these nurses. I'm sure they will be rewarded.

Also, the senior citizens of today are great teachers of life. The wit, humor and wisdom seen everyday from them lets us learn some of their values and helps us to better understand the heritage they are leaving for us.

I'm overwhelmed by their ability and understanding to accept this stage of life with so much love and dignity. I am proud to be a small part of these people's lives.

Erroneous

I take issue with the completely erroneous and irresponsible report concerning the Coronado Nursing Center in your Sunday paper.

This facility provides adequate care and good food in a pleasant environment. The residents are clean and well-nourished; their beds and rooms are clean and attractive. Each receives individual care and attention.

I have never been employed by, nor have I any financial interest in this facility, but I do deplore the hatchet job you have done to an institution that is trying its very best to provide a unique service to this community.

What's a hill?

I was attracted by "Letters to the Editor" concerning hills on the Pampa - Perryton, highway 70. It boiled down to "what is a hill?"

I, as a resident engineer for the Texas highway department, located Texas 70 from Pampa to Perryton and supervised most of its construction. It traverses flat, rolling and hilly terrain. It climbs up what I call the "North Plains Escarpment" several miles north of the Canadian River at what the oldtimers called "Sourdough Pass" - actually an animal and wagon trail.

The present highway 70 ascends it on a five-percent grade (five ft. per 100 ft.) and around a two-degree to 30-foot curve (a vehicle changes direction two and a half degrees per 100 feet). This is a fair grade for this type of road, but a gentle curve.

The biggest problem on this project was to obtain a practical and secure crossing of the Canadian River flood plain. The present structure is supported by 14-inch steel piling, 78 feet long. It still might offer some flood hazard, if the big upstream reservoirs were not there.

Needs photos

I am writing to see if you can help me in finding pictures of some older buildings of Pampa. You put out an extra brochure of this sort. If you have a copy and can get one for me, I would appreciate it greatly.

I was a resident of Pampa for 49 years. My former father-in-law and mother-in-law (Mr. and Mrs. C.E. "Tiny" Pipes) were both sheriffs of Pampa, and my husband was on the police force in the 1930s.

I am making a memory quilt of Pampa for my son C.E. Pipes III, who graduated from Pampa High in 1951. My late husband Charlie Pipes was security guard at the Hughes Building for 15 years, until his death in 1972.

My son wants to give this quilt to the White Deer Museum on Cuyler Street, so I need pictures of the Pampa depot, the Methodist church (old building), Baker School, post office and the old high school.

I am hand painting this quilt. It will have 35 blocks, and I have 21 of them made.

Appreciates honor

We appreciate the homecoming given by the Harvesters and parents the weekend of February 18. It was a lovely affair and so well planned.

The barbecue, presentation at halftime, reception and the continental breakfast gave us the opportunity to visit with friends. The reunion with the 27 Harvesters and their families was a special treat and the introductions at halftime brought to mind many fond memories. Many outstanding ball players performed in the fieldhouse during the years we were in Pampa. It was an honor and privilege to be their coach. The plaque presented to me represented thirteen years of good times, a few tears and a relationship with players that can only be developed through coaching.

Any success we attained in Pampa would have to be attributed to the players, parents, student support, community, school administration, news media and lots of hard work.

We will be in Pampa this summer to visit and look forward to seeing all of you. Thanks again for your support and may the Lord bless each of you.

Ever since Pat Massey carved his first airplane at age four, he's been a nut about flying.

He whittled his first plane out of old wooden crate ends. He first fell in love with planes after he saw a World War I plane fly overhead, and for 58 years he's been flying planes of one kind or another.

Today he builds his own radio-controlled planes and is a member of PROPS, the Pampa Radio Operated Plane Society, which meets monthly and tries to foster interest in the hobby of flying radio-controlled airplanes.

Most of Pat's planes are made of wood with some type of fabric stretched across the frame. The silk or polyester fabric is then covered with aircraft finish called "dope," making the finish tough and shiny. The plane is then covered with paint and then more dope is put over that, he said.

The planes can have a wingspread of up to 20 feet, and the bigger ones run on a chain saw or lawnmower motor. Most of Pat's planes have a wingspread of about four feet.

A model life

His planes run on signals transmitted from a special radio bought just for that purpose. A radio can have up to eight channels or controls. The things to be controlled are how high it flies, controlled by elevators; how it turns, controlled by the rudders; and how fast it flies, controlled by ailerons.

He even has one plane with electric brakes. But his latest project is a one-third scale model of a Rose Parakeet, a plane out of the past, designed by a man named Rose.

Pat designs his own planes too, so he takes a plane from the mechanical drawing stage to the finished product. He even builds his own engines, which run on a fuel mixture of alcohol, castor oil and nitro-methane. Higher proportions of nitro-methane are used for racing models, he said.

The radio-controlled planes can fly in up to 25 mile-an-hour winds, he says. The easiest thing to do is get the plane up, and the hardest thing is to land, according to Pat. The planes are more fun than full-size planes, which he has also flown, because "they'll do everything a big plane will, and some things it won't," he said.

He tries not to get too attached to the planes he builds, because he knows something will happen to them. But he has gotten attached to one of his creations, a pilot he built for one of his planes years ago.

"Murdock," the pilot, is made of wood and is bolted into whichever plane he happens to be piloting. He is about five inches high sitting in the cockpit, and is one of Pat's favorite creations.

When Pat and his wife Jean moved here from Ponca City, Okla. in 1978, (they had lived here before) they lost Murdock in the shuffle of packing. They sifted through the garage and moving boxes for him, but he was nowhere to be found. Finally, they picked up a crumpled piece of packing paper off the floor, and there was Murdock safe and sound.

"I'd built this new plane and thought Murdock would be perfect for it because he's got so many hours on planes," he said.

Pat has quite a few hours on planes himself. He was the first civilian pilot to graduate from the pilot training course at West Texas State University in 1940. He flew full-size planes for a while, as well as smaller models.

He and a friend from Lefors, Babe Hall, won several awards with a set of U-Control Speed Planes, which run on wires. The radio-controlled planes give a pilot more flexibility and a chance to do out-of-the-ordinary things with the planes, he said.

When he first started to fly radio-controlled planes in 1959 because "it seemed like a good idea at the time," he "tore up one because there was nobody to teach me." Now he teaches other PROPS members how to fly them.

He says practice is the key to learning, just like learning to fly a full-size plane. As he got more experience in flying the planes, the ones he built became bigger and more complicated. But flying them gets easier with practice.

"If you can drive a car, you can fly a plane. The trick is to let everything go smooth," he said.

PROPS is planning a fly-in for May 15 and 16, Pat said, where people will come and fly their planes in a fun competition. In October, they'll have another competition, but this time with trophies and prizes.

Some of the things involved in "fun flying" are flying the plane under a ribbon stretched between two poles, with the ribbon getting lower and lower all the time. Or "spot landing," trying to land on the middle circle of three on the ground.

Pat remembers a fly-in two years ago when the weather was extremely foggy. But one member flew his plane into the fog anyway and stacked (crashed) his plane. At the same time, another pilot flew his plane into the fog and turned it around without realizing it, and it came right back out at him.

The hardest thing about building his own planes, he said, is making them balanced from nose to tail. If the plane isn't balanced, it won't fly. In the 1930s, the radio controlled planes ran on a spark and gasoline, just like a car, but now, Pat said, technology is so advanced the engine is the least of a pilot's worries.

The planes do crash occasionally, but they aren't necessarily demolished. And while wood is stronger than plastic, there's no guarantee that the wood will hold up in every situation.

"When something hits something else at 100 m.p.h., something's gotta give," he said. Usually if it's the plane hitting the ground, it's the plane that gives.

Most of the planes used by PROPS members fly at speeds of 60 to 100 m.p.h., and in racing, they can go as fast as 200 m.p.h. But the radio makes it hard to lose a plane under normal conditions, even if it's out of sight.

"It can get so high you can't see it anymore, and you can still control it," Pat said.

He says model helicopters are the really hard things to fly, not the planes.

PROPS now has about 27 members from Pampa, Lefors, and White Deer. The only requirements for membership in the club (besides a love for flying their craft) are an Academy of Model Aeronautics license, and an FCC license. And an understanding wife, Jean said.

"If a wife doesn't take an interest, her husband won't go as far with these planes," she said.

And how far has Jean herself gone?

"I can make a good left turn," she smiled.

The future for farmers continues to be bleak

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — One way to sum up the nation's farm economy is to point out that net income is depressed for the third straight year, the market outlook continues dim for at least the near future, and many farmers are struggling just to survive.

A new outlook report issued Wednesday by the Agriculture Department didn't put it that bluntly — but the meaning was

"Livestock producers' returns improved during 1982 — a change that normally would suggest a general expansion of livestock output this year," the report said. "However, red meat production for 1983 is currently forecast to show little, if any, recovery from last year's decline."

"Faced with weak overall farm financial conditions, producers seem more concerned with keeping their farm operations viable."

The report also suggested that many farmers have had to sell off part of their livestock and other inventories to raise cash for debt payments and spring planting, or else go deeper into debt. The economists explained:

"As the farm sector has grown more integrated into national money markets and the overall economy, farmers have had to consider ways to enhance their cash-flow position and improve their ability to secure operating funds for future production. At times, these decisions seem to run counter to cash-price

4-H JUDGING WORKSHOP

On March 26-27, at the Texas 4-H Center, the first statewide 4-H Judging Training Workshop will be conducted. This workshop will focus on training judges for 4-H Record Books and 4-H Method Demonstrations.

Judging of 4-H members work in demonstrations and record books has long been an important part of 4-H. Recently volunteer adult leaders have become more involved as judges. These workshops provide a way to update leaders, agents and others on methods of judging. Participants attending complete workshops will be certified as having received the training course.

Due to the expected popularity of this workshop and due to the limited space for training, only three persons from each county can attend.

The cost of the workshop will be $25. This includes meals and lodging plus all workshop materials beginning at noon, March 26 and ending after lunch on March 27. If you are interested in attending, contact the Extension office before March 17.

4-H SHOOTING SPORTS LEADER TRAINING

This is the workshop of the year! You can't afford to miss it.

A 4-H Shooting Sports leaders training will be held March 25-27 at the Texas 4-H Center in Brownwood. This workshop is designed especially for those coaches who want to learn how to teach. The workshop will feature outstanding instructors who will make you better teachers.

Four workshops will be offered and each participant may choose only one. The workshops are as follows:

- 1) Advanced International and American Skeet
- 2) Advanced Rifle
- 3) Basic Shotgun
- 4) Basic Archery

Student motivation, coaching psychology, and 4-H organization will be taught to all participants. We are interested in getting an Archery Project started in Gray County. If you have any archery background please come forth! If the counties present at the workshop are in favor of and will support a state level archery competition, a state 4-H Archery Tournament will be formed in connection with the 4-H Trap and Skeet Shoot.

The workshop will last from 5 p.m. Friday, March 25 to noon Sunday, March 27. The cost will be $39.70. This includes meals, lodging and registration fees.

Registration deadline is March 11. Contact the Extension office if you are interested in attending.

March 29-31 — PIK Signups - Ron Knutson

TOMI can help you with your decision-making, and the information is only a phone call away.

CONSERVATION FARMING PIK

Water conservation practices developed at Bushland are adapted to PIK program acres. Using herbicides on land in the PIK program will control moisture robbing weeds while making it possible to maintain soil and moisture conserving crop residue on the soil surface where it does the most good. For acreage to be used for corn or sorghum in 1984 an application of three pounds of atrazine and one pound of 2,4-D applied after grazeout or when weeds begin to grow will give excellent weed control and provide a moisture laden minimum or no-till seed bed for the next crop season. PIK acreage intended for wheat in subsequent years may be sprayed with Glean. Volunteer wheat or other crops as well as Glean-tolerant weeds can be controlled with a low rate of Roundup or paraquat. In some instances a sweep tillage operation may be the most practical alternative.

Land that is intended for the PIK program for several years can be planted to perennial warm or cool season forage grasses or legumes and utilized in the winter season. Forage sorghums would also provide the necessary soil protection plus providing supplemental forage for producers that have a livestock enterprise or can lease the forage to stocker operators.

Land going into the PIK program that is devoid of crop residue may have to be chiselled to prevent wind erosion this spring. Weeds can be allowed to grow to provide an adequate soil cover. A contact herbicide or a combination including a residual herbicide can then be applied. It is important to kill the weeds before seed is produced. After a satisfactory soil cover is established weed growth should be kept to a minimum to conserve moisture for subsequent crop production.

We have a booklet on "Managing Idle Acres" that has a lot of herbicide and weed control practices outlined for various crops in following years. Come by for a copy of this booklet.

TIME TO PLANT OATS AND BARLEY

Some producers could not plant all their wheat acreage due to drought and then were further delayed by wet conditions. Some of this land can be planted to barley or oats. These crops should be planted as soon as possible to get better tillering and yield potential than later plantings. As winter hardiness is not a factor now, varieties such as Rogers, Tambvar 401 and spring varieties may be used if seed of Will or Post is not available. For barley production on dryland one bushel (48 pounds) per acre is suggested while the irrigated planting rate is 70 to 80 pounds per acre.

Oats can be grown for either hay or grain. Cimarron and Checoita make good hay yields as well as grain. Ora is a shorter strawed oat that produces plump heavy kernels which are preferred for horse feed. Seeding rates of 70 to 80 pounds per acre is adequate for irrigated oat production. Oats are generally not adapted to dryland production on the High Plains. Glean is labelled for use on barley, but the permissible rate depends on the soil PH. Glean is not labelled for use on oats.

Congress seeks farm loan payment deferrals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite protests by the Reagan administration, Congress has taken a major step toward legislation giving financially pressed farmers a right to demand deferral on federal loan payments.

The Senate Agriculture Committee approved deferral legislation on Thursday. Administration officials say it would tarnish farmers' credit reputations.

But Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., who sponsored the bill now headed for the Senate floor, said there is an urgent need for federal credit programs "to be adjusted immediately to prevent foreclosures" on many of the nation's farm borrowers.

Sen. Ed Zorinsky, D-Neb., added, "Daily, farmers are going bankrupt and going broke, and we're losing family farms."

The bill, similar to legislation coming to a vote next week in the House Agriculture Committee, requires the Farmers Home Administration, the government's farm credit arm, to defer loan payments. It applies to any farmer who can prove that he is in a financial bind through no fault of his own and will be able to resume loan and interest payments once the deferral expires.

The bill would also make $200 million of FmHA operating credit available to farmers during the current planting season, raise the loan limits for individual farmers and extend special authority to make loans in economic emergencies.

Although the bill passed the Senate committee without objection, several members expressed some of the same concerns as Agriculture Secretary John Block. He has labeled such deferral plans as a cross-the-board moratorium that will turn millions of dollars in farm loans into outright gifts.

Congressional budget analysts estimate the bill would cost the government $1.9 billion.

"For the farmers, the great number out there are saying why should I pay my loan and stay current when we're having a moratorium for the guy who got in over his head?" said Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., chairman of the committee's rural credit subcommittee.

FmHA, which provides about 12 percent of all farm credit, serves the highest risk producers who can no longer qualify for credit from commercial sources. Those are the producers most needing the help, supporters claim, pointing to the fact that nearly 8,000 FmHA borrowers were forced out of farming last year through foreclosure or involuntary liquidation.

But critics contend the deferral proposals undermine the credit integrity of American agriculture and are inherently unfair to the vast majority of farmers who are paying off commercial loans and would not qualify for the aid.

Block also says the FmHA is effectively doing what the law intends, having voluntarily deferred, rescheduled or reamortized the loans of 40,000 of its 270,000 borrowers last year alone. Other top USDA officials have estimated that less than 5 percent of the nation's 2.4 million farm families face serious financial problems.

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department spokesman says it may be some time before a replacement for Agriculture Undersecretary Seeley G. Lodwick is announced.

Lodwick resigned two months ago but agreed to remain on the job until a successor was found. He officially ended his duties earlier this week.

Rumors have circulated that Dan Amstutz, a former New York commodities official who formerly worked for Cargill Investor Services in Chicago, has been chosen to succeed Lodwick.

The $68,400-a-year job is one of two undersecretary positions in the Agriculture Department, ranking third behind the secretary and deputy secretary. Lodwick's duties included overseeing international affairs and commodity programs.

Gene Hemphill, an aide to Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, said Thursday that Amstutz has been hired as a special assistant to Block. Hemphill said he had no information that Amstutz would be Lodwick's successor.

"I haven't heard any talk at all recently about Seeley's job," Hemphill said in reply to a question. "My speculation is that until we get this PIK sign-up over with, all eyes are going to be there."

That was a reference to the payment-in-kind program Block is promoting as a way of reducing 1983 production of wheat, corn, sorghum, rice and cotton. Farmers who participate in PIK will get surplus commodities in return for reducing their crop acreage.

The sign-up for PIK is to end on March 11. It has been a common practice in USDA in the past to hire prospective appointees as "consultants" or in some other capacity until the White House has cleared the individual for a particular job. The position of undersecretary is a presidential appointment and must be confirmed by the Senate.

REVITALIZE FRUIT TREES

Suppose you have recently acquired property which already has fruit and nut trees growing on it, but the trees have been neglected for several years. Is there any hope? The answer to this question depends on the condition of the plant to be revitalized.

The main objectives of pruning mature trees are to reduce overcropping and increase the size of the potential fruit; to stimulate new fruit wood; to remove interfering and broken branches; and to contain tree height and spread for convenient harvest. (It is not necessary to top home walnut trees.)

Most fruit trees, when not pruned, produce more fruit than they can size and mature properly. To prevent overproduction, remove several limbs annually when the trees are dormant (in the winter). Peaches require severe pruning, whereas cherries require little, if any, pruning. Other fruit trees are intermediate in their pruning needs. Bearing nut trees will produce nuts of adequate size with little or no pruning.

When fruit trees have not been pruned for several years, they become spindly and weak and stop producing satisfactory fruit wood. New fruit wood is necessary each year for most trees to maintain production of good fruit. This is accomplished by annual pruning. For example, peach trees only produce fruit on fruit wood that grew the previous year. They require extensive annual pruning to develop adequate fruit wood for the following year's crop.

Over 80 percent of last year's wood is removed to develop wood for next year's crop. Other fruit, such as apples, plums, and apricots, bear fruit on older spurs for several years. Assuming that the same spurs will bear fruit for five years, if not shaded out, sufficient pruning to produce about one-fifth new wood each year is necessary to maintain normal cropping. Some thinning out also is desirable to permit light infiltration so that the fruit wood will stay healthy.

Wind, heavy crops, and disease can break and kill branches. Overcrowding and lack of sunlight also will cause branches to die. Pruning is necessary to remove dead, damaged, broken, diseased and weak branches. Limbs that cross the center of a tree should be removed, too.

If left unpruned, trees will become too large to harvest, even with a tall ladder. In addition, most of the fruit of unpruned trees will grow in their tops. Once a fruit tree has reached a height of 8 to 12 feet, it should be pruned annually to keep it at that height. A combination of thinning out and topping upper limbs can be used effectively to maintain reasonable tree height for most fruit trees.

Old unpruned fruit trees often are eye-sores among low fruits, that are small, wormy and worthless. These trees can be rejuvenated and made attractive in your landscape. An old tree may have several large, primary branches emerging at narrow angles, close to each other. There may or may not be any low side branches. The functional portion of the tree is usually a solid canopy of weak but crowded branches at the top of the tree. At first sight, pruning one of these old trees may look like an impossible task. But if you keep the following system in mind, pruning becomes manageable.

1. A few large pruning cuts accomplish more than many small cuts. Often the elimination of one or two misplaced, large, primary limbs in the center opens up the tree and gives it an entirely new look.
2. In reducing tree height and opening up the top branches, simply apply this same principle — a few cuts rather than many fine ones. Only one to three cuts on each remaining primary branch may be all the tree needs.
3. All pruning cuts greater than two inches in diameter should be painted with a latex-based paint in order to prevent infection. Drastic pruning tends to invigorate the tree and brings heavy vegetative growth the following spring. Avoid applying any fertilizer containing nitrogen for at least a year after this heavy pruning.

It takes two or three years to rejuvenate an old tree. Direct growth by selecting well placed new branches as eventual replacements for the old higher ones. Control excessive shoot growth by thinning out and heading back those that are left. Leave the tree open to be sure that enough light penetrates to its center. This helps promote fruit bud formation on the new interior shoots.

Continue to head back and thin out the top of the tree, gradually eliminating the old top as newer branches begin to take over.

The only living witness

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — In the early morning hours of Feb. 15, 1978, a madman entered the Chi Omega sorority house on the campus of Florida State University at Tallahassee.

Disturbing no one but his victims, he mutilated and murdered two sorority sisters and savagely assaulted two others.

Incredibly, the intruder was not through for the night. Police believe the killer invaded a nearby apartment house before dawn and attacked but did not sexually molest another young woman.

That man, say the authors of "The Only Living Witness" was Ted Bundy, a handsome and charmingly glib one-time law student and one of the most profound enigmas in the history of U.S. criminal justice.

Frederic Robert Bundy, 37, now resides on Florida's Eighth Row, awaiting execution for the murders of the two college co-eds and a 12-year-old girl.

Police believe the Florida episode was merely the climax of a murderous, four-year rampage through five states. They say Bundy may have killed more than 30 young women.

Authors Stephen G. Michaud of New York and Hugh Aynesworth of Dallas build a compelling case to support that theory in their new book, released Feb. 28 by Linden Press-Simon & Schuster.

Though the fifth book on Bundy, "The Only Living Witness" goes beyond superb investigative reporting and terse prose to provide a chilling insight into a psychopathic personality.

"I can't imagine that it won't be a classic on mass murder a century from now," said New York Times author-reporter Bob Lindsey. "It's like looking into the mind of Jack the Ripper."

The book depicts both the relentless horror of cold-blooded murder and the unsettling ease with which it can be carried out.

"No woman after reading it will ever again walk down a dark street or take a short cut through the woods or enter a dimly lit parking lot without fearful awareness that a murderer might be lurking in the shadows," says Mary Higgins Clark, herself an author.

Aynesworth, a widely respected investigative journalist, and Michaud, a veteran editor and reporter, spent four years compiling and writing the book.

The authors, who once worked together at Newsweek, traveled to 33 cities and towns across the country, conducted scores of interviews and examined thousands of court documents while tracing Bundy's steps from Washington State to Florida.

But the most gripping segments of their book stem from a series of tape recorded prison interviews with Bundy in which he confesses nothing while "speculating" on the mind, motives and methods of the deranged killer.

The publisher was hardly excessive in claiming that what Bundy gave the authors was a "bizarre chronology of the life and times of a psychopath who could only be Ted Bundy."

At one point, Michaud wrote that "Ted leaned forward in the prison interview room, lit a cigarette, and took the tape recorder in his lap. At first, I didn't understand what he was doing as, in an even, professional tone, he began to speak of themes in modern society — violence, the treatment of women, the disintegration of the home, anonymity, stress.

"When I interrupted, he shushed me and told me to be patient. It was going to take a while to get into it... Finally, he turned from the sociological to the specific, and began describing the killer. Within 'this individual,' he explained, there dwelt a being — Ted sometimes called it 'an entity,' 'the disordered self,' or 'the malignant being.'"

"The tr f'n nysbrhem lwy hooial, a consistent tale of gathering psychopathy that nurtured itself on the negative energy around it."

Michaud said Bundy called it "a hybrid situation," a psychopathology in which the "entity" is both in and of the killer, not some alien presence but a purely destructive power that grew from within.

"Psychiatrists who have listened to these tapes tell us there is no doubt Ted was talking about himself," Michaud said.

He said he felt he was encountering a "wholly novel" form of insanity.

Physical evidence often suggested that Bundy's victims were strangled or bludgeoned or both, and many were raped and mutilated.

"Had Ted Bundy fit the public's stereotype of the mass murderer, the identifiable lunatic, these tragedies might not have provoked the terror that they did," observed Michaud.

"But as one of Bundy's friends later explained to me, 'Ted was one of us.'"

"He shattered the comfortable preconceptions about who is capable of such monstrosities, presenting a mass killer both gross to contemplate and wholesome to behold; a likable, lovable homicidal mutant."

Aynesworth said after his final interview Bundy thanked him for taking him through the ordeal although he did not like reliving certain episodes.

"He said he felt cleansed, that he wouldn't have to deal with it anymore.

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — When William Least Heat Moon listens, people talk.

He listened to people all across the country, from Ninety Six, S.C., to Hat Creek, Calif., and from Dime Box, Texas, to Thief River Falls, Minn., as they talked to him in cafes, in bars, in their homes.

"Wherever I went, I found people interested in talking about the odd historical aspects of their town," he said in an interview. "In a small town when you've lived there 40 years everybody's heard your story and when a stranger comes in they're pleased to find a fresh pair of ears."

Adding to that a fresh pair of eyes, and a keen interest in people, places and ideas, Heat Moon, 43, has written a book, "Blue Highways: A Journey Into America," about his three-month trip of 13,889 miles — more than halfway around the world.

Following the double trauma of a failed marriage and the loss of his job as a college English teacher, Heat Moon fitted his half-ton van with a bunk, packed his old U.S. Navy seabag with clothes, added a tape recorder and camera, and took off on America's back roads — the ones marked in blue on the old maps.

Shunning the interstates, he headed for places like Nameless, Tenn.; Opelousas, La.; Liberty Bond, Wash., and Hungry Horse, Mont.

"I love names and peculiar words; I have a fascination with the poetry of the land, and once you know the history behind the names, they definitely become poems," said Heat Moon, a slim, bearded man in jeans, who is part American Indian.

"Every town seemed to have the unofficial historian, more frequently a woman. Most have a resident cogder who seems to lie in wait for a stranger, and one regular in the bar who makes it his business to talk to whoever comes in."

Though he slept in his van, called Ghost Dancing, and prepared many of his meals there on a small stove, he always ate breakfast in the local cafe or grill, where it was easiest to strike up a conversation.

"I found that breakfast was a good time to get the pulse of the community," he said. "And if you were talking to an elderly person they were much more alert than later in the day."

"I'd be talking naturally to someone, but once I started hearing good stories, then I would switch to my reportorial mode and listen with a different ear. Later, going down the road, I would turn on my microcassette recorder and would try to reconstruct the conversation as best I could."

Heat Moon was invited to "so many meals," especially in the South, where he found "Southern hospitality" a reality.

"In the north-central states it was more difficult to take a conversation past hello and goodbye," he recalls. "No place between Idaho and New York state did a single person buy me a beer or I buy them one. But in the Northeast, which is thought of as being cold, I found people quite friendly."

Heat Moon, strangely enough, also found it difficult to strike up conversations with Indians, probably, he says, because of his Anglo appearance.

"But going on the road and wandering put me in touch with the spiritual side of tribal America," he said. "My angle of vision changed and I was beginning to see things in the context of the long heritage of red America."

When Heat Moon, who is also known as Bill Trogdon, located the grave in North Carolina of an ancestor eight generations back, William Trogdon, he found another side of his heritage.

"I had seen a photo of the tombstone in a Trogdon family history written in the '20s and it was something I'd always wanted to see since I bore his name. In a way it was like meeting him."

Heat Moon, who went back to the University of Missouri for a degree in photojournalism after having previously received a Ph.D in English there; is remarried and living in Columbia, Mo., where he still has Ghost Dancing. He is working on another book stemming from his journey around the country's perimeter, "going into the people and the land."

Former undercover cop

State Police Lt. Michael A. Bryan sits in his office in New Orleans after living the life of an undercover agent for 14 years. Bryan gave up the role after his identity was blown in a Nassau County, N.Y. operation involving $3.7 million in stolen paintings. (AP Laserphoto)

They knew him as Lester, a laid back crook

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Lester Williams was a laid back crook with a southern drawl, a .38 in a shoulder holster and good connections to high rollers with big bucks. "He was the kind of guy who could set up big deals," said State Police Lt. Michael A. Bryan. The lieutenant ought to know. He played the undercover role of Lester around New Orleans for 14 years. But today we bury Lester. His cover was blown, he is no more. He had to be sacrificed in a Nassau County, N.Y., police operation that uncovered $3.7 million worth of stolen paintings. The paintings, and some silver, were stolen by three masked bandits who broke into a mansion at Sands Point, Long Island, on April 13, 1982, and carted off 23 pieces of artwork, including a $400,000 Picasso and a Monet valued at almost $600,000. As the bandits should have known, selling such identifiable loot is not easy. Three months after the robbery, holders of the loot were still looking for a buyer. Word trickled down to Lester.

George turned out to be George Haag, 57, of Ridgewood, Long Island. Bryan said Haag used to rob banks for a living but, having served time on those enterprises, now prefers to study law. Lester arrived in style, by private plane. His accouterments included a borrowed diamond ring that looked as big as a golf ball. He told George he knew nothing about art, was mistrustful on the subject, and so had brought along his own $600-a-day art expert — actually an FBI agent whose specialty is art. George kept in touch by telephone but cautiously stalled on dealing. Lester threatened to fly home. George then admitted he was having the shady lady flown to New York to make sure Lester really was Lester. Ah, one must laugh, eh? It all came to a head on July 15, 1982, in a motel dining room. Lester was eating breakfast when Haag walked in with two women from New Orleans. The women pointed Lester out and left, mission accomplished. No longer suspicious, Haag joined Lester at the table. Actually, in addition to talking to a State Police lieutenant from Louisiana, Haag was 'smack in the middle of a sizeable Nassau police operation.

"They had up to 30 people there," said Bryan. "The businessmen and airline pilots at neighboring tables were police. The busboys were police. I've been in this business a long time and I know what a good operation looks like. They put on a fine operation." A helicopter lingered over the area, just in case. Radios crackled. Lester knew he had his man hooked. Haag was in up to his eyes with a loan shark and had to deal. "I could have beat him down to 5 per cent instead of 12 1/2 but what was the point?" Lester said. The $465,500 purchase price, most of it paper with real money as flash, was in an attache case held by Lester. He refused to deal until his art expert examined the merchandise. That was no problem, said Haag. The stuff was in a room at a motel just down the street.

Hammer predicts cure for cancer by end of decade

HOUSTON (AP) — Businessman Armand Hammer, chairman of a panel that advises President Reagan on cancer research, predicted Friday that a cure for all cancers will be found by the end of this decade. Hammer, who previously has offered $1 million to the person or people who develop a cure for cancer, made his prediction at a meeting of the cancer panel at M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute. Hammer, chairman and chief executive officer of Occidental Petroleum Corp., is a physician but does not now practice medicine. He recently was appointed by Reagan to a second two-year term on the three-member cancer panel. "Because of the progress made in the last few years, I am of the opinion that we already have a cure for some cancers and I predict a cure for all cancers by the end of this decade," Hammer said. Dr. R. Lee Clark, a former member of the President's Cancer Panel and a former president of M.D. Anderson Hospital, is not as optimistic. He said, though, that he believes that by the end of the decade, 50 percent of the cancer patients will survive at least five years. That figure is now about 40 percent, he said. Professor Clark said that he does not foresee a universal vaccine for all forms of cancer. He said more than 100 diseases are classified as cancer and researchers are proceeding disease by disease in seeking treatments. Hammer said he particularly was encouraged by reports at a conference he sponsored at the Salk Institute in La Jolla, Calif., on monoclonal antibodies and cancer. Hammer said that two days ago, he had visited the Wistar Institute in Philadelphia and saw records of three patients who had rectal and colon cancer. Other forms of treatment, including chemotherapy, had failed to stop the disease but all signs of cancer disappeared or injections of mouse antibodies, he said. Cancer has not returned to those patients for periods of up to 14 months, he said. He said that Dr. Hilary Koprowski of the institute was convinced that success will be found in fighting other types of cancer as researchers become better able to tailor the monoclonal antibodies to the specific antigens on cancer cells. Koprowski predicts that the use of monoclonal antibodies in treating many kinds of cancer "will be as routine in the near future as surgery and chemotherapy are today, and even more successful." Hammer said.

Trial for policeman in 'Algiers case' opens Monday in Texas

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In the aftermath of a police crackdown that claimed four lives and shook New Orleans, a federal court trial opens in far away Dallas Monday for seven New Orleans policemen.

Charge: violating the Civil Rights Act by roughing up people during an intense investigation of the murder of Patrolman Gregory Neupert, shot to death in his patrol car on Nov. 8, 1980.

Four blacks were killed before the investigation ended.

The resulting blast of political heat cost the police superintendent his job and kept Mayor Dutch Morial, the first black mayor in New Orleans history, ducking and dodging for months.

These seven officers stand before U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer due to a change of venue, granted when the defense argued that so much newspaper and broadcast exposure had been given the case in New Orleans it would be impossible to seat an unbiased jury.

Presumably, few around Dallas know much about it — even those who might have watched a TV news show that dealt with the case a couple months back.

The CBS "60 Minutes" segment was broadcast despite attempts by U.S. District Judge Adrian Duplantier to censor it.

Twice Duplantier, the original judge in this case, ordered the broadcast withheld due to defense claims it would make the change of venue useless.

Twice the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overruled him.

Afterward, Duplantier filed a notice that he had held CBS in contempt for rejecting his alleged authority, and will impose the heaviest punishment possible. The notice said he didn't act immediately because his law clerk had not yet discovered what the heaviest punishment would be. There has been no further word.

The onset of trial ends more than a year of preliminary infighting that erupted after the indictment was issued on July 9, 1981.

At one point, Duplantier threw out the indictment, accusing U.S. Attorney John Voiz of having pressured grand jurors into approving it even though they first voted no.

Voiz appealed. The 5th circuit reinstated the indictment.

Trial was first scheduled for Feb. 7 but Duplantier granted the defense a month's delay due to the TV program. Then he withdrew from the case, citing illness. It was reassigned to Buchmeyer.

The death of Officer Neupert, who was white, had no racial aspect at first. It soon acquired one. He was killed while patrolling near the tough, all-black Fischer Housing Project in Algiers, a section of New Orleans on the west bank of the Mississippi River.

Department reaction was fast and severe.

Assuming the shooting had something to do with dope, officers ranged through the project like hounds on a hot track, interrogating all likely looking subjects — brooking no back talk.

The first man killed was Ray Ferdinand, 40. The two black officers who stopped him on Nov. 11 said he pulled a knife. It later developed he was an informer who was simply putting on an act — but the two officers didn't know him.

Stomach staples make people 'tiny'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Dee Bennett tried everything — Weight Watchers, the Stillman diet, the Scarsdale diet — nothing worked. In March 1982, the 50-year-old Internal Revenue Service clerk stood 5-foot-2 and weighed 376 pounds.

Since her stomach bypass surgery (commonly referred to as stomach stapling) last March, Dee has lost more than 125 pounds.

That's skinny when you think in terms of being able to sit on a regular little stool to have your picture taken. Or in an ordinary movie theater seat without having it cut into your sides. Or just walking and talking at the same time. All those ordinary activities were out of the question for Dee until recently.

Those diets worked as long as I stayed on them," Dee says, "but I can't stay on any diet. It's not in my makeup. I like food too much. These staples are in me forever, and I love it. It takes the weight problem out of my hands. I didn't want the responsibility, I guess," she says candidly.

Dee Bennett wasn't always heavy. As a child, she had no weight problem. "My mother controlled my diet," she says. "I used to be allergic to wheat products, so my mother prepared all my meals for me. Instead of cake on my birthday I got Rye Crisp with some icing on top," she groans.

"I was 125 (pounds) when I got married 28 years ago, and as soon as I had a kitchen of my own I went wild! I baked all those cakes and breads that I couldn't eat before. I gained 10 pounds the first week we were married and kept on going."

Stomach stapling was a last resort. At first the weight came off rapidly and Dee was ecstatic. "The results were instantaneous — I didn't get discouraged like I did on all those diets." But there came a crisis point: She lost 99½ pounds and became terribly depressed.

"I felt sort of like my nerve endings were exposed. I guess I felt like the food and fat were insulating me," she says. She passed the 100-pound mark, and the crisis passed. It was as if losing 100 pounds meant losing a person buried within herself.

The new Dee Bennett, she says, is a happier person. She gets a thrill just from seeing herself without all that padding.

"Look! I've got a neck!" she proclaims with glee. "I've gone down from a size 50 to a 26½, and my hips went from 79 to around 59." But the changes are deeper than appearance alone.

"My husband says he sees changes, but they're subtle. I'm not so angry any more. I used to joke a lot, but really I was angry at myself. Maybe I'm more outgoing, too. Absolute strangers will stop and talk with me now — they notice me. If they noticed me before, they'd pretended not to."

"And I get so many compliments. Sometimes I feel a little shy, having all this attention paid to me. And for the first time in years I enjoyed Christmas. I was able to move around. I'm not so sedentary any more. For some reason, I didn't get panic attacks (from crowds) in the stores the way I used to, either."

Dee has become more aware of the role food plays in society. The surgery left her with only a tiny opening in her stomach through which food passes, so now she's rarely hungry.

"But do you notice how people say, 'I'll meet you after dinner?' or 'How about coming over for dessert and coffee?' Food is really a social thing. It amuses me now to see people stuff themselves. I think, 'If they only knew where it's going...'"

But Dee's children are obese, also. Don't they see where it's leading?

"Sure they do," she responds, "but they're just like me — they can't keep on a diet either. My 23-year-old girl is thinking about getting her stomach stapled, too. It'll be her decision if she does."

Dee's goal is to be down to 125 pounds again. But first it's down to 200, then 150. She's losing weight more slowly now, but she's not losing her motivation.

"Besides," she quips, "if I eat too much, I throw up, so this is one diet I can't get off."

Dee's husband, who also has a weight problem, has been supportive all the way.

By now, you know that IRA and Keogh Plans are excellent ways to reduce income taxes and set aside funds for your retirement.

But are you aware what's happening—or could happen—to those funds you've prudently invested, tax-deferred, for your retirement?

This seminar may surprise you. Because all IRA and Keogh Plans are not alike.

Some do more for you than others. Specifically, in how your money is invested.

Many offer only a limited number of investments (some only one!). Merrill Lynch opens up virtually the entire range of investment opportunities to you.

You'll learn how your IRA or Keogh funds can be invested in over 50 different ways—stocks, bonds, zero coupon bonds, money market funds, Government securities or even a mix. The selection is yours. And you can change investments any time.

What's best for you?

Talk to us about your needs and goals. Then you'll be able to tailor an IRA or Keogh investment plan specifically to meet them. There's no charge or obligation.

The seminar is free, but reservations are essential. To reserve seats, call or mail the coupon.

IF YOU HAVE AN IRA OR KEOGH PLAN -COULD YOU HAVE A BETTER ONE?

Oil spill plaintiffs may settle for 1 percent of damage claims

HOUSTON (AP) — Lawyers for private concerns that sued for damages resulting from the world's largest oil spill are preparing a settlement that would pay plaintiffs between $2 million and $3 million, according to a published report.
 The settlement would be less than 1 percent of the damages, originally claimed, the Dallas Times Herald reported in today's editions.
 Sidney Ravkind, a Houston attorney representing a group of South Padre Island tourist businesses, said Thursday he was distributing copies of a proposed agreement to attorneys for three other groups of plaintiffs and to SEDCO Inc.
 SEDCO, a Dallas-based company founded by former Texas Gov. Bill Clements, owned the Ixtoc 1 drilling rig that blew in Campeche Bay in the Gulf of Mexico in 1979, spreading oil along the shorelines of the United States and Mexico.
 Theodore C. Dimitry, a SEDCO attorney, said the settlement would satisfy virtually all claims filed against the company by shrimpers, fishermen, hotel and motel owners and other private interests.
 The settlement should be announced within two weeks, Dimitry said.
 The U.S. Justice Department announced Wednesday it had reached a $2 million settlement with SEDCO after initially seeking $12.5 million in cleanup costs and unspecified sums for damage to natural resources.
 Ravkind said the settlement of the private lawsuits would be "more than the federal government got," but less than $3 million.
 Private concerns originally filed suit for about $300 million "at a point in time when the results from the spill appeared to be disastrous," Ravkind said.

United States Football League opens its first season today

Herschel Walker is a Hope Diamond surrounded by rhinestones, a blue-chip security in a common-stock world.

He is the showpiece of the United States Football League, America's newest professional sports enterprise, which opens its first season Sunday.

An extensive marketing survey found that fans said they would watch football in the spring and summer, periods on the sports calendar traditionally left to basketball playoffs and baseball pennant races. It's that research that makes the USFL's owners certain that it can avoid becoming another World Team Tennis, another Women's Basketball League or another World Football League.

Walker is the hottest pro football prospect of the year, perhaps even more of a "franchise" player than quarterback John Elway will be for whichever National Football League team drafts him next month.

Walker is the Heisman Trophy winner from Georgia, the undergraduate turned millionaire. He is one of a small band of stars surrounded by dozens of spear-carriers — players who never made it in the NFL, who made it marginally or who once were stars themselves.

He will wear the red-and-blue colors of the New Jersey Generals, who play their home games within sight of the New York skyline. He is right where the USFL wants him — for the next three years, at least. And he will put people in the stands and in front of television sets.

Anybody can form a new league. Gary Davidson did, creating the WFL nearly a decade ago. But without a major TV network contract, it died in its second season. Without TV, WTT and the WBL went under, too, and pro hockey and soccer struggle along. TV is the bankroll for the USFL's first two years — $15 million from ABC, $11 million from the ESPN cable system.

Chet Simmons is the USFL's commissioner. His credentials: 25 years in television. He was an executive with ABC 23 years ago when the American Football League was born. When it switched to NBC four years later, so did he. He

Koch leads Inverrary Classic

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Gary Koch, for five long years a non-winner but now seeking a second consecutive triumph, birdied his last two holes for a 68, moved past collapsing Ray Floyd and took the lead Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Honda-Inverrary Classic.

Koch played his back nine in 4-under-par 32 in winds that gusted to 35 mph. He finished three rounds over the Inverrary Country Club course in 207, nine shots under.

"The two birdies at the end were a bonus," said Koch, a 5-shot winner last week at Doral. "I'd have been happy with a 70."

"I felt that if I played a good, solid round today, I could get myself in position again."

He did. But he had to have Floyd's reluctant assistance to do it.

The current PGA champion, winner of three titles in each of the last two seasons and recognized as one of the game's best frontrunners, blew a 3-shot lead with a scramble, 6-over 78 — by five shots his highest score of the season — and went skidding back into the pack. Five strokes off the lead at 212.

"Raymond is one of the best we've got. But that's just a good example of what can happen," Koch said.

Wayne Levi, who took over second place with a 208 total, a single stroke off the lead, agreed.

"It's unexpected," Levi said of Floyd's highest score of the season. "He's a good frontrunner, but he's human like anybody else. That can happen."

"And let me tell you, it was tough out there. If you get it going bad, you can shoot some bad scores."

Levi, a two-time winner last season, spiced his round with a 65-70 foot putt for an eagle-3 on the 15th hole. He had a share of the lead until he bogeyed the 18th, putting his approach over the green.

Johnny Miller and rookie Dan Forsman were another stroke back at 209. Forsman had a 69. Miller shot a 68 and said he had "the best putting round I've had since the mid-'70s."

The group at 210, six under and very much in title contention, included Fred Couples, Payne Stewart, Mike Donald and Dave Edwards. Couples had a third round 70. Stewart shot 71 while Donald and Edwards matched par 72.

Koch matched two birdies with as many bogeys over the front side, then made his move over the back nine.

He "kind of manufactured a shot," he said, to get a low, 5-iron out of the trees on the right and to within 15 feet of the flag on the 11th. And he made the putt for a birdie.

Douglass qualifies for state swim meet

Clay Douglass of Pampa qualified for the Class 4A swim meet in the 200 individual medley and the 100 butterfly events Friday during the regional swim meet held in Lubbock.

Douglass will compete in the state meet March 18-19 in Austin. Swimming finals were scheduled for Saturday in the regionals.

Douglass had qualified for regionals by winning both the 100 butterfly and the 200 IM at the District 1-4A meet.

Lady Bucks win track title

CANADIAN — White Deer girls rolled up 131 points to capture the Canadian track meet Friday.

Tina Ford paced the Lady Bucks with two first-place finishes, winning both the 400 in 2:27.3 and the high jump. Her 5-4 leap broke the old mark of 5-3 set by Canadian's Alicia Hobdy in 1979.

Miss Ford also took third in the long jump and second in the 100-yard dash.

Kay Ford, also of White Deer, won the 800 in 2:27.3 and broke the old record of 2:29.25 set by Wells of Shamrock in 1981. Miss Ford also placed second in the high jump.

White Deer's 1600-relay squad also finished first with a time of 4:19.75.

S. Giddon of White Deer placed third in the 200 in 29.42 while teammate P. Arcela took third in the 32.00.

Canadian, led by Betsy Rader, placed third with 100½ points. Miss Rader tossed the discus 95-7 to place first, while taking second in the shot.

Also placing for Canadian were Stephanie

Mitchell, second, long jump and third, high jump; Ricki Boone, second, 100 low hurdles and Tammy Schaeff, second, 200.

Perryton was second with 118½ points. Canadian and White Deer's 400-relay teams placed second and third respectively. Canadian and White finished one-two in the 1600-relay.

In the boys' division, Perryton outpointed Sanford-Fritch, 167-104, to win the meet. Canadian placed third with 91 points and White Deer was fourth with 70.

Wellington was fifth with 43 points. Canadian had two first-place finishers in Harper Johnson, 800 (2:07.2) and Monty Wheeler 110 high hurdles (16.2).

Others placing for Canadian were Jimmy Anderson, second, 400; Taylor Newcomb, third, 300 Intermediate Hurdles; Mike White, second, 200.

Placing for White Deer were Darin Bennett, second, long jump and second, 110 high hurdles and Larry Martin, third, 1600.

Lefors hosts Pampa Junior Varsity in baseball opener

The brand new Lefors High School (LHS) baseball team will play its first game against Pampa's junior varsity squad Monday at 4 p.m. on the Pirates' home field, according to Lefors Coach Rick Palmer.

Palmer's team was formed after the Lefors Independent School District Board of Trustees approved starting a baseball program for high school boys earlier this spring.

The team is a mixed squad of all classes from LHS, and has been practicing since mid-February when basketball season was over for 1983.

In addition to playing baseball, 10 of the team's 15 members are also running track this spring, Palmer said, but the track and baseball don't interfere with each other.

Even though the team's practice has been somewhat limited due to the bad weather, Palmer says its batting has picked up since practice began.

"Now I need to find four of these kids who can throw strikes," he said last week.

The LHS team is scheduled for nine games this season and Palmer said he's had to turn down more because of scheduling problems. Among the schools Lefors will face are Dumas, Palo Duro, Caprock and Amarillo High School. Palmer said the team will play mostly Class A schools' junior varsity teams, because they're a young team.

As the Lefors team gets more mature, team members will get more experience and be able to face Class A varsity squads, Palmer said.

Longhorns hold down second in SWC swimming championship

AUSTIN (AP) — When Rick Carey had a strong preliminary showing, despite some problems, he thought something sensational might be in store for him in Friday night's finals.

He was right. The University of Texas sophomore set a national record in the 100-yard backstroke Friday, helping the Longhorns hold onto the lead after the second day of the Southwest Conference Swimming and Diving Championships.

"I felt good this morning," said Carey. "I had a bad start and a couple of weak strokes so I knew I could go at least as fast as I went tonight. But I think I can improve on that time."

Carey's time of 48.80 seconds bettered the old backstroke mark of 48.94 set in 1982 by Stanford's Dave Bottom in Gainesville, Fla.

Looking For Two

Akeem Abdul Okajuwon (34) of Houston looks for an opening during the first period of the Cougars' Southwest Conference game Saturday with Baylor. Closing in on Olajuwon are Baylor's David Glover (50) and Ozell Hall (21). Houston won, 93-64. (AP Laserphoto)

Houston rolls past Baylor, 93-64, to finish SWC season unbeaten

WACO, Texas (AP) — It took the members of Houston's "Phi Jamma Slam" fraternity 30 minutes to wake up, but once the top-ranked Cougars got rolling Saturday, the Baylor Bears found out how their opponents earned their nickname.

Houston rolled to a 93-64 victory over the Bears behind Michael Young's 21 points and Clyde Drexler's 20 to finish the Southwest Conference basketball season unbeaten.

The Cougars were slow to arouse after their SWC clinching victory against Arkansas Thursday night just like Coach Guy V. Lewis knew they would be.

"I knew there was a chance of a letdown," Lewis said. "It would be a natural thing and I think in the first half we showed that.

"It took us a whole half to get uncorked and running," he said.

Lewis changed the Cougars from a zone to a man-to-man defense and it paid immediate dividends to start the second half.

"I think we went to sleep in the first half and we got some key steals out of the man-to-man," Lewis said. "I thought we woke up and decided to play. I thought we were fired up in the second half."

Drexler entertained the crowd with two flying dunks, one of which included a double pump before the ball was sent crashing through the hoop.

"Now we know why

Houston is Number one," said Baylor Coach Jim Haller. "They are the best team I've ever coached against and they are to be congratulated. I've never seen a college team with more depth. They just flat wore us down in the second half."

Haller added, "I thought we played well for about 25 minutes. Then Houston became Houston."

Houston's 20th consecutive victory gave the Cougars an unblemished 16-0 SWC season. It was only the 11th time a school had gone unbeaten through the regular campaign and the first time since Arkansas did it in 1977.

Houston now has 24 consecutive SWC victories, tying a league record established by Rice 1926 through 1928.

The Cougars, who had clinched the SWC title Thursday at Arkansas, shot only 37 percent from the field in the first half and led the Bears 40-32.

Freshman guard Alvin Franklin, who had a career-high 14 points, kept the Cougar offense perking.

Houston ripped off a 12-0 streak early in the second half and ran away from the Bears, who finished in seventh place in the SWC standings with a 4-12 ledger. Baylor is 12-15 overall and will travel to Lubbock Monday night in a first round SWC tournament game.

Houston will not play in the SWC tournament in Dallas until Friday night.

Larry Micheaux scored 15 points and seven-foot center Akeem Okajuwon added 10 points in out-muscling the Bears.

Daryl Baucham was high for Baylor with 19 points and Ozell Hall added 12 points for the Bears in the regionally televised game in Heart O' Texas Coliseum.

Croeso wins Florida Derby

HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP) — Croeso, an 85-1 shot shipped here from California and supplemented to the race for a fee of $5,000, outdued odds-on favorite Copelan in the stretch and won the $250,000 Florida Derby Saturday at Gulfstream Park.

Frank Olivares put Croeso quickly on the lead, and he led Copelan and Chumming past the stands the first time, around the turn and down the backstretch.

Then, as Chumming dropped back, Copelan moved to challenge the lead. The favorite and the longshot battled head-to-head past the quarter pole and into the upper stretch.

Croeso opened up a clear lead at that point and held it as an estimated crowd of 33,000 roared in disbelief.

Croeso reached the end of the 1 1/4 miles on a fast track in 1:49 4/5, 1/4 lengths ahead of Copelan, who was 3 1/4 lengths ahead of Law Talk. My Mac was fourth in the field of 13 3-year-olds another head back.

Croeso, owned by Cardiff Stud and Roy Fowler, paid $172, $35.80 and $12.40 for his first victory in three starts this year and his fourth triumph in 14 races. It was not the biggest winning payoff in the 32-year history of the Florida Derby. Williamston Kid paid $183.80 in 1966.

Roy W. Hooper's Copelan, a winner of five stakes last year and an impressive winner of a division of the Fountain of Youth in his 1983 debut here Feb. 21, paid $3 and $2.60. Buckram Oak Farm's Law Talk returned $5.60.

The winner and Law Talk each carried 118, while Copelan and My Mac carried 122 apiece.

All-District 1-A team

Haley Clark, a 5-7 junior, and Mary Ann Gill, a 5-1 sophomore, of Miami were second-team picks to the All-District 1-A girls' basketball squad, announced Friday by league coaches.

Miss Gill averaged around eight points per game. Miss Clark averaged about six ppg.

Named to the first team were Kris Terrel and Dori Roots of Follett, Cindy Turner and Dione Miller of Booker, Bonnie Detriche of Higgins and Wanda Boston of Darruzzett.

Also named to the second team were Delaine Wick of Booker, Carla Steinberger of Follett, Laura Craft and Trudy Ashpaugh of Higgins.

Boosters to meet

Pampa High Booster Club will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday night for a general business meeting in the high school athletic office.

The public is invited to attend.

The two Brooklyn Dodgers who scored on Cookie Lavagetto's double in the fourth game of the 1947 world series, Al Giolfriddo and Eddie Miksis, were both pinch runners. The hit broke up a near no-hitter for Floyd Bevens of the Yankees.

The nickname of the great baseball manager, John McGraw, was "Muggsy." It used to enrage him.

Levelland, Sudan win state titles

AUSTIN (AP) — Mont Belvieu Barbers Hill defended its Class 3A championship with a dramatic three-overtime victory Saturday. Hardin captured its third consecutive 2A championship, and Levelland and Sudan won crowns for the first time at the girls' state basketball tournament.

Barbers Hill fought off Sweeny 86-81. Hardin edged Hale Center 41-39. Levelland defeated Corpus Christi Calallen 41-28 in Class 4A, and Sudan beat LaRue LaPoynor 46-34 in Class A.

Barbers Hill's victory over Sweeny in a rematch of last year's 3A finals was thought to be the first triple-overtime title game in the 33-year history of the tournament.

Levelland held Calallen to 11 points in the second half after leading only 18-17 at intermission. The Lobos seized the momentum in the third period with Calallen's 6-1 Cara Wilks on the bench with four fouls. Wilks finished with only one point and three rebounds.

Levelland outscored Calallen 15-4 in free throws, and Darla Isaaks and Frances Williams combined to block eight Calallen shots. Lisa Logsdon scored 10 points for Levelland, and Isaaks Kami Schonerstedt each had 9.

Pennee Hall, a highly sought college prospect, tossed in 38 points for Barbers Hill and teammate Tami Rogers scored 24 and hauled down 23 rebounds.

Trina Williams scored 34 for Sweeny, which now has finished as the runner-up in all four of its trips to the tournament. The hard-luck Lady Bulldogs lost by two points in the 1979 and 1981 finals and by 15 last year to Barbers Hill.

Teri Irby of Barbers Hill threw in a 13-foot field goal with two seconds remaining to tie the game 71-71 in regulation play.

Both teams scored four points in the first three-minute overtime as Williams missed a shot at the buzzer that would have won it for Sweeny. In the second overtime, Hall was called for charging with one second remaining, but Jill Burttschell missed the possible winning free throw, and the game went into a third extra period tied 79-79.

Rogers hit four free throws and Hall three for all of Barbers Hill's points in the third overtime to give Barbers Hill its second state title in two tournament appearances.

Four Sweeny players fouled out, including high-scorer Williams, with 30 seconds remaining in the last overtime. Barbers Hill tossed in 32 of 44 free throws, with Hall swishing 16 and Rogers 14. Sweeny was nine of 18 in free throws.

Kristy Lockett of Hale Center tossed in 19 points to lead all scorers. Tammy Reescano had 14 and Doffing 12 for Hardin.

Lisa Wood scored 16, Sharla Harrison 14 and Missy Fisher, who was five for five from the field, 10 points as Sudan captured its first girls' basketball championship. Sudan shot a blistering 71.9 percent from the field.

Karen Spencer was high with 14 for LaPoynor, which failed for the third straight year to win a title in the state tournament.

Only one free throw was shot in the game, and Fisher missed that with 47 seconds left in the final quarter.

Pampa places third in Hereford Invite HEREFORD—Paul McIntire of Pampa shot a 153 (75-78) to capture medalist honors in the Hereford Invitational Golf Tournament, which concluded Friday with the final 18 holes.

Pampa finished third in the final team standings with a 642. Coronado won the meet with a 637 while Amarillo High came in second with a 640.

Clif Baker followed McIntire with a 153 (75-78) while David Snuggs had a 160 (77-83). Ryan Crosier 173 (86-87) and Reid Sidwell 166 (78-88).

Randy Mickey of Plainview was medalist.

Meanwhile, Pampa girls are holding down fourth place in the District 1-4A tournament after Friday's second round.

Borger is in first place with a 385 while Canyon is second at 411, Dumas third at 428 and Pampa fourth at 453.

Red Raiders routed

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Claude Riley, scoring 14 first-half points, led Texas A&M University to a 93-70 blowout of Texas Tech here Saturday in a Southwest Conference basketball game that clinched third place for the visiting Aggies.

A&M pulled ahead of Texas Christian University in the final standings, posting a 10-6 record, 17-13 on the year. Tech, which had made an earlier run for third place, wound up with three consecutive losses and fell to 7-9 and sixth place. The Raiders are 10-19 on the season.

A&M now draws a first-round bye in the SWC tournament, and Baylor must travel to Tech for the first round Monday night.

Riley led six players for A&M with 23 points, while Bubba Jennings of Tech had game-high honors with 24.

Texas women's exhibition now on display at Lovett Library

Texas Women

A celebration of history

Texas Women's contributions to history subject of exhibit at Lovett Library

Previously tucked away in attics, diaries, museums and libraries, the stories of Texas women are told at last in the exhibit "Texas Women — A Celebration of History," on display at Lovett Library of Pampa from March 1 to March 31.

Produced by the the University of Texas Institute of Texan Cultures in conjunction with the Texas Foundation for Women's Resources, the exhibit highlights the impact of women on Texas culture, government, economy, family and community life.

Texas women were adventuresome, courageous, inventive, but above all, they were activists. They developed most of the cultural life of the state — museums, symphonies, parks, monuments and libraries — 85 percent of which were organized by Texas club women.

Texas women were effective politicians and reformists, responsible for enacting legislation on child labor, infant health care, women's suffrage, prohibition, education and prison reform. They ran ranches, businesses, hospitals, schools and charities. In short, these women made life worth living for their men, children and entire communities. They brought civilized life to Texas.

Using photographs, artifacts, diary excerpts and words of women themselves, "Texas Women — A Celebration of History" depicts not only the state's most accomplished heroines, but also reveals the struggles, sorrows and joys of the more typical women.

Panhandle women's efforts honored in permanent display at museum

PANHANDLE — Permanent exhibits at the Carson County Square House Museum in Panhandle show women's contributions to the history of the Texas Panhandle for the 1983 celebration of National Women's History Week, March 6-12.

The Square House Museum displays several permanent exhibits which highlight women's contribution to our local history through outstanding work in music, art, literature and the folk craft of quilting.

Examples of quilt work in the museum's Freedom Hall show local women's sensitivity to design, quality craftsmanship and Panhandle history.

Pioneer women made their own bed covers with scraps of material from worn out clothing and remnants. Many women cut these material scraps into odd shapes and pieced them together for crazy quilts.

Trained early in the needle arts, women made their family's clothing and for entertainment participated in quilting bees. One quilt on exhibit, quilted by the Ladies Aide Society of White Deer in 1917, was made in this community spirit. Sensitive to the history of their community, these women embroidered the names of their town's citizens. Included were lists of Sunday School teachers, a tally of church organization members, names of the ministers of different congregations, carpenters and even building committee members.

Other quilts in the exhibit include an 1860 quilt with a modified "Whig Rose" pattern, a "Grandmother's Fan" quilt in lavender, blue, white, green, orange, red and gold, a "Goosetracks" quilt in red calico with a white background, "Tumbling Block" quilt made before the turn of the century with piecework in silk.

Individuals recognized in the museum's exhibit "The Plainsman and His Quest for Freedom" are Georgia O'Keefe, Radie Britain, Loula Grace Erdman and Mary Ruth Evans Smith.

Georgia O'Keefe, internationally known artist, found inspiration in the stark landscape of the Texas Panhandle when she taught art at Amarillo High School from 1914-1915 and at West Texas State Normal from 1916 to 1917. Following the death of her photographer husband, Alfred Stieglitz, she moved from New York to her present home in Abiquiu, N.M.

Radie Britain, native of the Panhandle and daughter of pioneer rancher Edgar Charles Britain, has won international music awards which include the Julliard Publication Award for her "Heroic Poem." She received a gold medal in organ which led to study in Paris under masters Pietro Yon and Marcel Dupre. Her symphonic and choral compositions have been performed by Chicago, New York, Los Angeles, Burbank, Atlanta, San Diego and Amarillo symphonies. In Germany, Russia, Brazil, at the White House by the U.S. Air Force Symphony of Washington, D.C. and by orchestras throughout the U.S. and the world.

Loula Grace Erdman came to the Texas Panhandle from Missouri in 1926. She authored 16 books including the award-winning "Year of the Locust." She was professor of creative writing at West Texas State University and writer-in-residence.

Mary Ruth Evans Smith is a native of Carson County and teaches in Panhandle public schools. In 1975, she set to music and copyrighted the melody for "The Pledge of Allegiance." For this contribution she was awarded the 1976 National Award from the Freedom Foundation at Valley Forge.

The idea of Women's History Week originated in Santa Rosa, Calif., where the first observance was held in 1978. By 1981, National Women's History Week had been proclaimed by the U.S. Senate.

The museum's exhibits are open for public viewing Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Sundays, 1 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Americans are going crazy over American quilts, both old and new in a kaleidoscopic variety

America's going crazy over quilts

By DAVID M. MAXFIELD
Smithsonian News Service

It's a crazy thing about quilts. They're warm — and right now, they're "hot." They're perfectly at home in bed — or showing off on the wall.

From the Blue Ridge Mountains to, yes, the Hawaiian Islands, where hand-stitched quilts sport a tropical look of floral design and color, interest in — and affection for — the American quilt is as boundless as the variety of kaleidoscopic patterns that now dazzle countless aficionados and quilters alike.

The American quilt, moreover, has become the Cinderella of the art world, rising in the past few years from its humble patchwork roots to places of prestige in prominent museums and art galleries. What was once considered a functional homespun craft is now often looked upon as something more, the fabric equivalent of fine paintings.

"A number of modern artists are choosing quiltmaking as a medium of expression," says Doris Bowman, specialist for the Smithsonian's 300-piece quilt collection. "It's amazing how many beautiful quilts are being made."

There's also international attention to quilts made in the U.S.A. "You can go to London, Paris, Tokyo, Milan — all have shops selling American quilts," reports Robert Bishop, director of the Museum of American Folk Art in New York City. "They're used in contemporary living as art; they rarely get to bed."

At home, the American craving for both antique and contemporary quilts, the latter based on traditional patterns or stunning, innovative designs, has created a crowded calendar of fairs, craft shows, gallery exhibitions and workshops across the nation.

Quilt sales in country shops, city boutiques and auction houses, supplemented by sales of publications and quilting supplies, ring up a reported $50 million to $100 million annual business. At Made in America on Manhattan's posh Madison Avenue, pieced, solid and applique quilts dating back to 1845 sell briskly at prices starting at $300 and climbing to $4,000. Owner Margie Dyer said men and women are equally interested, and about as many customers buy quilts for decorative purposes as for cozy comfort.

In Athen's Ohio, Quilt National '83 is set for June 5 through July 5. The National, organized by the Dairy Barn Southeastern Ohio Cultural Arts Center, Inc., is a juried exhibition of contemporary quilts, requiring that entries be "original, not a copy of traditional designs," though "original interpretations" of old patterns are acceptable.

"Contemporary work has just taken off," said National organizer Pam Parker.

Last year, entrants came from 36 states and five foreign nations, and, while most of the participants are relatively young, the older generation also is taking up the new approaches.

"I've been quilting for 60 years," one woman told Parker, "but this is the first time I've been treated like an artist."

Not all quilt enthusiasts are turned on by the same things by any means, a factor that accounts for quilting's large, diverse following.

"People look at quilts in two ways," Bishop said. There are those who are interested in the graphic design of the material and relate to art world images, particularly modern geometric abstractions, op and even pop art, all of which, ironically, the Amish quilters of Pennsylvania anticipated a century earlier in their boldly dramatic designs.

A second group, usually older women, likes to look at quilts from the perspective of craftsmanship.

"They are concerned with such things as the number of stitches per square inch," Bishop explained. "There's not much crossover between these two groups."

Were earlier generations aware that they were turning out something of artistic value? One school holds that theirs was a naive approach, basically utilitarian. But the noted quilt authority Jonathan Holstein feels the early craftwomen knew exactly what they were creating: "Always it was planned and, with rare exceptions, planned completely."

And Bishop thinks these women did view their quilts as works of art. "These often were the only beautiful things in a house. It was grim and dingy, dark and cold. Quilts were a spot of beauty."

Dear Abby

Woman wants to get hitched but fiancée is still in harness

By Abigail Van Buren
1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've lived with my fiance for six months. We're planning to marry and I am expecting a baby in four months. We love each other very much and everything would be ideal, except that he is only legally separated from his wife. She has their two children and is living with her boyfriend.

She has filed for divorce, but that's where it stands. They had a written agreement that he would pay for the wedding and she would pay for the divorce.

She says she doesn't have the money. (She gets welfare, child support, plus a lot of help from her boyfriend.) I have a good job but everything is so high these days, it's hard to make ends meet, let alone save anything.

I'm not worried that they might have a reconciliation because they both agree that their marriage was a joke from the start.

Don't tell me to leave him, because he is my whole world. Can I do anything to force her to get the divorce?

ALMOST A MRS.

DEAR ALMOST: No. I hope you realize that your "whole world" is a man who went into a marriage expecting it to fail, had two children in this marriage that he says was a joke from the start, then started a second family with you while still married to somebody else.

Since you seem to be the only one in this three-ring (less) circus who's in a hurry for the divorce, it appears that the only way to get it is to pay for it yourself.

DEAR ABBY: What is the difference between a tourist and a traveler?

LEON

DEAR LEON: A tourist is a traveler who looks like he hasn't traveled much.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who is 75 and a widower. (I'll call him "Paul.") He lives alone, and I am just a neighbor he's known for quite a few years. I'm 54 and a bachelor. Paul's health has been failing the last few years, so I've been looking after his needs, such as buying his groceries, providing transportation to his doctors, etc. He says I am his best friend, and he's told me repeatedly that he is leaving everything he has to me. I always say, "That's nice," then I change the subject.

Paul says he has a handwritten will in his drawer. He has no children, but he does have a younger brother in town who is a prominent attorney, but Paul doesn't plan on leaving him anything because he thinks he is a snob. Paul says his handwritten will is as good as one drawn up by a lawyer. He didn't want a local lawyer to draw it up because he says lawyers talk, and he doesn't want his brother to know what's in it.

Is it true that a person can make up his own will without a lawyer or witnesses?

PAUL'S PAL

DEAR PAL: Yes. It's called a "holographic" will. It must be entirely written, dated and signed in the handwriting of the maker. No witnesses are required, and no printing or typing may appear on the paper.

Holographic wills are legal in most states, but not in all.

Deer struck by autos help feed the needy

By JIM YADAMEC
Greensburg Tribune-Review
GREENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Not all the deer killed in Pennsylvania go to hunters. Some of the whitetails end up on the tables of non-hunters and the needy.

Considering the unemployment situation, Eastern Greene County game protector Bob Shaffer says, "The meat is sure appreciated by some families."

Shaffer offered high praise for the Game Commission's relatively new policy of permitting a person who hits a deer on the road with a vehicle to keep the animal. It wasn't always like that.

"All the person has to do is call me and obtain a permit for the deer," said Shaffer, who reported 24,699 deer were killed on the roads in Pennsylvania last year.

Even in a rural county such as Greene, the road kill totaled 331 last year.

Road kills that go unclaimed, illegal kills, or that small percentage killed for crop damage usually go to the needy. As might be expected, Shaffer has a ready idea of those in need of food.

"In November and December, I turned over 60 to 70 deer to needy families," said Shaffer.

The game protector said a deer carcass contains about 45 pounds of meat.

Across the state, Shaffer said, "tons of deer meat" are consumed by the public because of Game Commission policy.

If Shaffer has time, he usually saves the antlers of the deer that are killed on the roads. He has some of them on display at the game lands at Garards Fort, proof that not all the bucks are taken by hunters.

Under the Game Commission's road-kill policy, the hide and head of a deer killed on the road and obtained by permit must be turned over to the game protector in 12 hours.

"If the hide and head are just discarded in the woods, someone could come across it and mistakenly think a deer has been poached," said Shaffer. The action eliminates confusion.

Also, the hides saved by Shaffer and other game protectors are kept in good condition.

"We salt each one," said Shaffer.

The bundles of hides eventually make their way to the Southwest District offices at Lionier.

"Usually, in late February, people come in and bid on the hides," said Shaffer.

Local opera talent finishes concert season with flourish

Review by BILL HALEY

A performance by Mary Jane Johnson, rising young operatic soprano and recitalist, closed this year's Community Concert Season Thursday night in M. K. Brown Auditorium.

The occasion was of particular interest here since Miss Johnson is a native of Pampa, where she is descended from well-known and well-remembered parents and grandparents.

During the past year or so she has performed extensively throughout the U. S. High points in this activity have been Die Fledermaus at Santa Fe and two appearances with Metropolitan Opera super tenor Luciano Pavarotti.

Ahead are engagements with the Chicago Symphony and the San Francisco Opera.

Her program Thursday was of the highest quality dealing predominantly with art songs by Brahms, Granados, Britten and Copeland. The Brahms group with its illusive harmonies and rhythms was the most impressive. "The Maid and the Nightingale" which the Spanish composer Granados patterned after a Goya painting was sensuous and quite lovely.

In addition to the art songs there were three or four operatic arias. Closing the concert was "Musetta's Waltz" from La Boheme by Giacomo Puccini who,

KAY (WHITE) FURR

Pampan brainstorm new phone floral service

Kay (White) Furr, formerly of Pampa, has begun a new business venture by which consumers can now order flowers at any time by calling an 800 number. Furr, who is vice-president of the firm, put together a national network of selected florists, noted for creativity and imaginative design.

Furr, who previously worked on Governor Bill Clements campaign, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. White. She graduated from Pampa High School in 1970, where she was cheerleader and class favorite, Lions Club Sweetheart and the recipient of the 20th Century Forum Study Club business scholarship. She now lives in Dallas.

The idea behind 800-FLOWERS, Inc. is to provide a way for consumers to order flowers by phone 24 hours a day, seven days a week, by calling 1-800-FLOWERS.

Peeking at Pampa

Hands of the clock move steadily along as we recall late February events and mark calendars for the special occasions of March.

Pampa's Mary Jane Johnson appeared at M. K. Brown auditorium Thursday night as star vocalist in the Community Concert Association's final concert of the season. (Remember when she turned pages for a concert accompanist while in high school here and how even then many predicted her "return as the star") How wonderful it was to share the pride of her family. David and little Taylor, Maxine and Rex Rose! Alleith (Mrs. Bob) Curry arranged the reception hosted by the concert board at the Pampa Country Club following the concert. Mary Jane was magnificent!

Friend!
"Did your doorbell ring at 6:30 a.m. on your birthday? Carolyn (Mrs. Price) Smith would say. "Yes!" Betty Tom and Howard Graham, Marge and O. C. Penn, Frances and Max Louvier burst through the door singing "Happy Birthday," and wagging 50 large black balloons and cinnamon rolls for all. How's that for the most unusual birthday celebration of the decade?"

Dr. Lamb:

Hernias are a common malady

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been diagnosed as having a hiatal hernia. Why do so many people have this? Is it a weakness and does it ever get better? I've been told no. I have to live this way the rest of my life. It's a terrible thing to have. It has changed my whole life. Because of it, I suffer a terrible shortness of breath. If I get a virus my stomach gets very weak so I can hardly breathe. I have to stay in bed until I'm completely better. The same thing happens if I do too much housework. The doctors have said this is the only thing wrong with me. They told me it is not serious, but as a result of it I am a very nervous and unhappy person. My doctor has me on Donnatal and Gaviscon. He told me to build up my stomach by walking every day. Could my stomach be built up by taking vitamins? I get a B-12 shot once a week and that seems to help my nerves.

DEAR READER — Many people have a hiatal hernia and have no symptoms at all from it. It is usually an enlargement of the normal hole in the diaphragm that permits a portion of the stomach to slide through into the chest. If the hole is rather large or allows a large portion of Peggy and Doug Fisher hosted the 90th birthday celebration of her father, Tom Owen, last Sunday. A building contractor for several decades, Tom shined up tall ladders like greased lightning as recently as five years ago. Family and friends were there.

A gourmet dinner group of six couples shared the fun of Mardi Gras with hosts Jane and Richard Steele. For the once - a - month affair hosts select the theme, make menu assignments and give a short pre - dinner history. Steeles provided ham with mustard sauce and pralines, Margaret and Bob Williams brought chicken gumbo, Kay and Lloyd Harvey — maquechon (a corn dish), Sherry and Jerry Carlson — hominy bread, Judy and John Forister — bacon - wrapped bread sticks, Betty and Bill Hallerberg — pears in wine sauce Azaleas, balloons hung from the ceiling, multi - colored confetti and scrumptious food all conveyed the essence of Mardi Gras in New Orleans.

Pampa Nursing Center had a fun time Game Night recently for volunteers, residents, family and staff. Velda Jo Huddleston, recreational director, is a remarkable person, bringing friendliness and happiness to the elderly residents. Other volunteers assisting included Enola Rape, Reed Echols, Ned Prvor (playing a wicked piano!) and Joyce Roberts — whose already twinkling brown eyes are really sparkling over a new grandbaby in Fort Worth. T. J. Keeling, young son of Terri and Jimmy, has coloring usually reserved for canvas only and too beautiful to describe.

More brisk walkers seen around town: Lois and Cambern Marsh (volunteer workers, too) and Clara (Mrs. Don) Nenstiel.

It's good to have Janie and Jerry Stephens and their children back in Pampa. Janie's more beautiful than ever.

A couple with lots of zest and zip, June and Tark Cook of Perryton spent a recent afternoon here on business. Tark's an attorney and his wife is his office manager. She's quite an artist, too.

Nellie Ruth Wray is an attractive, elegant lady. Another shiny - eyed new grandmother is Mary (Mrs. Larry) McWilliams. Add Genetta Poole to the long list of avid camera bugs. The Rev. Fred Brown has the bug, too. Ramona and Henry Urbankzy just returned from a high - flying trip to Acapulco. (They're still newlyweds.)

Wendy Duncan, ever so slender, looked fabulously feminine the other day with cheeks aglow, pleated camel trousers tucked in high leather boots.

Congratulations to Sherri Scott and Dean McKnight! They'll be married March 11. Laura Fatheree is recovering from hip surgery in an Amarillo hospital.

Mentioned Nina Sponemore has been under the weather after a recent heart attack. Hear she's in the pink now after receiving a pacemaker. She said a real factor in her quick recovery was a certain paramedic.

David Minks, who attended her in the ambulance when she was transferred to an Amarillo hospital for surgery. She was comforted during the trip by his lovely singing.

Sumi (Mrs. Billy) Hayes (always so pleasant) has an interesting family album. She's from Oknawa, an island of rich tropical greenery and lots of water.

There's a new minister to be welcomed to Pampa, the Rev. John Ferrina and his family of the First Assembly of God Church.

Later this month a number of Pampa High graduates are to return to share their career expertise with students at the 1983 Career Clinic, sponsored by the Altrusa Club, Rotary Club and Chamber of Commerce. Some alumni expected to appear at the clinic are David Triplehorn of Dallas, son of Alberteen and Bob; Karen Kleiboeler, John Warner's sister of Richmond, Mo.; David Chambliss of Amarillo, son of Bonnie and David; and the locals, Doug Carmichael, Dr. George Walters, Mark and Vanessa Buzzard, Jim Stroud, Leonard Hudson Jr. and Randy Enterline.

More than 100 senior citizens attended a recent Golden Agers luncheon and afternoon of Bingo at the Salvation Army. Members of Phi Epsilon Beta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi did everything possible to make it a special occasion.

Seen on a bumper sticker from Missouri: "An addict alone is in bad company." See you next week. KATIE the stomach to slide through, then the very size of the stomach in the chest can compress the lungs and may contribute to a sense of breathlessness.

Anything that increases pressure within the abdominal cavity may force more of the stomach through the hole. About 80 percent of women have some degree of a hiatal hernia during a pregnancy. As the pressure within the abdominal cavity is decreased, the pressure to force the stomach through the hole is diminished and the problem may not be as great or may not even exist.

That is why it is important for a person with a hiatal hernia to get rid of any excess body fat he or she might have. Walking helps eliminate fat by using calories. So will a proper diet.

You can do a lot to help yourself; your lifestyle really makes a difference if you have symptoms from a hiatal hernia. I'm sending you The Health Letter 4-8, which outlines the things you can do.

No. Vitamins will not correct hiatal hernia problems.

Beef Empanada combines many favorite Mexican flavors — beef, tomato, refried beans, cheese and spices — in a flaky cornmeal pastry.

Ground beef stars in Empanada

For many families today, ground beef is considered a staple ingredient in the kitchen for it is used on a regular basis. This popular meat is a frequent lead item at the supermarket.

Since ground beef comes to the table so often creative cooks always appreciate a new way to use ground beef and will want to try this recipe for Beef Empanada, the Mexican version of meat pie. Providing an especially tasty variation of this favorite south-of-the-border entree, in this recipe spicy ground beef filling is wrapped and baked in a simple cornmeal pastry.

The filling will definitely appeal to fans of Mexican cuisine for the ground beef is combined with refried beans, tomato sauce and Cheddar cheese. Chili powder, cumin, oregano leaves and garlic powder join flavor forces to season the ground beef robustly.

Meat pies have long been popular with thrifty cooks, not only because they are delicious and add variety to menus, but also because they are usually economical. You will want to add Beef Empanada to your file of special ground beef recipes.

BEEF EMPANADA

- 1 1/2 lb. ground beef
- 2 t. instant minced onion
- 1/4 c. water
- 2 t. chili powder
- 2 t. flour
- 1 t. salt
- 1/4 t. cumin
- 1/4 t. oregano leaves
- 1/4 t. garlic powder
- 1 can (8 1/2 oz.) refried beans
- 1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
- 1/2 c. shredded Cheddar or Monterey Jack cheese
- Cornmeal Pastry. (recipe follows)
- 1 egg
- 1 t. water

Combine onion and 1/4 cup water. Brown ground beef in large frying pan; pour off drippings. Combine chili powder, flour, salt, cumin, oregano and garlic powder; sprinkle over beef. Add refried beans, tomato sauce, water and onion, stirring to combine. Cook slowly 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir in cheese. Cool.

Meanwhile, prepare Cornmeal Pastry. Roll pastry out on lightly floured surface to measure 14 x 15 inches. Cut two 1/2 x 15 - inch strips of pastry; twist, cover and reserve. Transfer remaining pastry to baking sheet. Place meat mixture lengthwise in 5 - inch strip down center of pastry. Bring long sides of pastry together on top, overlapping slightly at seam, and press to close. Press ends firmly together and pinch into a twist or rope edge. Place a reserved twisted pastry strip along each side of center seam. Beat egg with 1 teaspoon water; brush over surface of pastry. Cut seven 1/4 - inch crosswise slits on top of pastry, of each side. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 35 to 40 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes before cutting. 8 servings.

CORNMEAL PASTRY

- 1 1/2 c. flour
- 1-3 c. cornmeal
- 1/2 t. salt

1/4 c. lard
 5 T. cold water
 Combine flour, cornmeal and salt; cut lard into mixture with a fork or pastry blender until it resembles coarse crumbs. Add water, 1 tablespoon at a time, mixing quickly and evenly until dough just holds in a ball when pressed. Yield: pastry for 14 x 15 - inch crust.

Serve slices of Beef Empanada with a combination of cooked carrots and celery. A crisp salad of mixed greens will offer nice contrast. End the meal on a cool note with cups of orange sections sprinkled with shredded coconut.

Spelling boo-boo: Chili con what?

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
 Associated Press Food Editor
 Present-day American cooks who enjoy trying ethnic recipes have their predecessors. American cookbook writers of a century and more ago sometimes gave recipes for foreign dishes — but often misspelled their names. They were also known to misspell the names of American recipes. Here are some examples.

MISSPELLING: Chile Con-Cana. This spelling mistake was made in her comprehensive cookbook, by a 19th century lady who conducted one of the best known and most successful cooking schools in the United States. I'm glad she didn't brush up on her Spanish because the error is so amusing.

The correct spelling is, of course, chili con carne. There are many versions of the dish as there are chili freaks. On my bookshelves right now are about half a dozen cookbooks giving hundreds of different recipes for chili. Nevertheless, according to Webster, chili con carne is "a highly spiced stew of chopped or ground beef and minced chilies or chili powder, usually served with beans."

MISSPELLING: Jambolaya. The same honorable lady who created Chili Con-Cana in her cookbook managed a double-whammy one page later. Not only is the name misspelled; the recipe for this pride of Louisiana cookery appears in a section of her book entitled "A Group of Spanish Recipes."

The correct spelling is Jambalaya. Only three ingredients — rice, liquid and chili peppers — appear in all recipes for it. Meat, sausage, poultry, game and shellfish as well as onions, celery, tomatoes and virtually the entire spice rack are other recorded additions to this adaptable dish. Jambalaya seems to be limited only by the state of your desires and bank account.

MISSPELLING: Sabyllon. This appeared in a recipe booklet published at the turn of the century by a New England apothecary company to tout its new patent medicine.

The correct spelling, in both English and French, is sabayon, which evolved from the Italian zabaione or zabaglione. Originally Italian, sabayon is a dessert sauce of egg yolks and sugar beaten together over-hot water until very thick. It is flavored with a wine such as Marsala, or with orange or lemon. Warm, it may be a sauce for fresh fruit, especially strawberries; cold, with whipped cream folded in, it makes a heavenly foamy custard dessert.

MISSPELLING: Mint Julip

— as the words appear in a charming small cookbook, "Suggestions for Charleston Tea," published in South Carolina at the turn of the century.

The correct spelling is Mint Julep. A mint julep is a "tall drink consisting of bourbon, sugar and mint served in a frosted tumbler filled with finely crushed ice." To my, and perhaps your, surprise the recipe in the oldtime South Carolina book calls for adding rye whiskey rather than bourbon to this drink.

MISSPELLING: Penotchie. Another of the famous 19th century cookbook authors is responsible for this boo-boo. And she made another; she allowed that the word could also be spelled "Penuchie." Too bad, because the word may be spelled seven ways — but none of them as above.

The correct seven spellings are: penuche; panocha; panochie; penuchi; pinoche; pinochi; or penoche. However it is spelled, penuche is a luscious fudge made usually of brown sugar, butter, cream or milk and nuts. Worth making and tasting.

New approach to meals

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — For older people, who sometimes get into a rut when it comes to eating, Rosemary God, extension nutrition education specialist at Oklahoma State University, has some suggestions:

Start an eating club — potluck style, or share a meal with a friend; eat in a different room, near a window, or outside if the weather is nice; for variety, eat breakfast foods for lunch and lunch foods for dinner; listen to music or watch TV while you eat.

You'll be lookin' good, casual and carefree with a precision cut 'n style. Now sale priced, $12

Kid's Stuff

Shrink a meat plate for rings

By APRIL BAIL

How does that nursery rhyme go? "She's got rings on her fingers and bells on her toes..." Or was that nose?

Whatever it was, I think it flashed through my mind as I unwrapped the hamburger meat one night for supper. Why on earth you may ask?

Well, it's because I was thinking of my one hundred and second way to use the plastic tray that comes with packaged meat. (I already know 101 ways which I'll share with you another time.)

Anyway, as I was chanting the nursery rhyme, the meat tray magically turned into a ring holder and the ring holder turned into a project I knew six little Blue Birds would love.

This magical transformation of the plastic tray takes place in the oven and is called shrink-art. The tray is cut into a desired shape, placed in the oven and shrunk into a perfect miniature version of the original.

The original in this case is the shape of a hand which is perfect for holding rings. The hand is fitted, with plaster of paris, into a "sleeve cuff" which I made from the lid of an empty hairspray can. (Any similar plastic lid will do.)

Trace or draw a large hand (it really shrinks a lot) on the plastic tray and cut it out.

Pre-heat the oven to 325 degrees. Place the hand on a cookie sheet and pop it in the oven. (There's no need to cover the cookie sheet with foil, and if you've cut out several hands, you can bake them all at once.)

It's fun to watch the shrinking hands which takes only a few minutes.

Use a spatula to remove the hands from the cookie sheet and place them on a flat non-burnable surface to cool.

Remember the plastic will be very hot for several minutes after it is taken from the oven.

After the hands are completely cooled, you're ready to place them in lids.

Mix the plaster of paris following the manufacturer's directions. Be sure to cover your work surface with newspaper when working with plaster of paris.

Fill the lid about 3/4 full of plaster and insert the hand. The plaster will need to dry overnight or until the next meeting, as was the case for my Blue Bird troop.

The next step is to spray or brush paint the plaster and hand. Let dry.

To add the finishing touches on the "sleeve cuff" you'll need lace and buttons. Cut a length of lace long enough to wrap around the lid, overlapping about half inch. Glue the lace to the lid. Next glue two buttons onto the lace, positioning them as you would on a real cuff.

As more people enter the job market, appearance will become increasingly important, not only in hiring, but in job retention and promotion among equally skilled candidates as well.

Women applying for jobs need to recognize the importance of proper dress. This is particularly true for women applying for jobs as secretaries, in sales or other positions requiring contact with the public. Recent research shows that the more contact with clients that is required by the job, the more emphasis is placed on appearance in the hiring decision.

Clothing creates immediate impressions about the applicant's economic level, educational level, trustworthiness, social position, sophistication and moral character. These impressions influence the decision to hire or not to hire — often within the first two minutes of the interview.

If a hiring agent believes an applicant looks sloppy, he might think that's the way she does her work. An applicant wearing "wild" style clothing might be considered immature. In general, hiring agents look for people who can represent the firm and project a good image.

Both employers and employees emphasize that appearance is only one factor in the hiring decision. Other criteria include skills, personality, promptness, attendance, cooperativeness and the ability to handle problems.

Hiring agents also rank attitudes very high, but when forming first impressions, information about attitudes is typically not available. Clothing and appearance are two things a job applicant can control in a hiring situation.

For the professional woman, classically styled garments help project an appropriate image for business. With the competitiveness of today's job market, projecting this image is important.

A recent survey shows working women believe their manner of dress is important in creating a successful image, and most said that purchasing garments which project competence is vital to their careers. Of these women, 86 percent preferred classically styled clothing and were generally less influenced by current fashion.

Because classical garments are an investment that will last several years, less money must be allocated to the clothing budget each year. Classical designs, unlike fads, are seasonless. In women's clothing, they are similar to men's tailored suits: simple, clean, yet elegant. There is no clutter and no direct focus, but rather a style that reflects a hint of authority.

To achieve a classic look, emphasize suits, skirts, soft blouses, blazers and jacket dresses to develop a slim and natural silhouette. For a businesslike appearance, use straight lines, restrained curves and vertical movement. Avoid soft curves, small detail and pastel colors because they project a weaker, feminine image.

People who dress and look successful tend to receive preferential treatment in business encounters. So the proper wardrobe can be a practical aid for success in the business world.

NEW YORK (NEA) — David Fletcher wears white gloves to bed, and before he puts them on, he slops moisturizer all over his hands. He's forever buying creams.

Once a week, he soaks his fingertips and sculpts his nails short with an emery board — "I get under the nails at a slight angle and come around in one direction, like bowing a violin."

The he cleans them out with a cotton-tipped orange stick dipped in nail polish remover, chases his cuticles back with a cuticle pusher, hacks off unsightly "skin flakes" with a clipper, and raises a shine on his nails with a buffing disc.

If you were getting $541 a day as a hand model in TV commercials, you'd do all that, too.

In the past two years, Fletcher's hands, which on first sight are no big deal, have acted in roughly 50 commercials. Says the 26-year-old actor and magician from Philadelphia, "I've moved a package of denture cream, sawed wood, pointed to names on packages, lifted up chicken, cut pizza, sliced vegetables, assembled fast food sandwiches, opened a magazine as if the camera was the reader — and my index finger has pressed the button on a camera."

Then there was the cracker caper. "I had to snap a cracker in half. It was an extreme close-up and the camera had to remain focused at that distance, so I rigged up things to hold my elbows steady. Then I had them score the back of the cracker so as I pressed down, it would break just right and you'd see the flakiness."

Mind you, it was only his elbows that needed steadying. His hands can hold a bottle motionlessly over and over and over, which is what a hand model has to be able to do, once they get you doing it. Says Fletcher, "The thing about hand modeling that blows me away is you can sit there from 7:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. waiting to do a four-second insert. The amount of money spent on commercials is so great and so many egos and jobs are on the line that everyone wants to make sure it's right, so the whole thing is getting the lighting right and things arranged. Then you do 90 takes. They always say, 'Beautiful! Let's do it again.'"

Not that Fletcher minds (at "double scale" per diem?). But not that he came to New York to scrunch under a table for hours while a camera shoots his hands cutting something on top either. He came to show his talents as an actor and a magician. But then so did thousands of others and commercials, he says, "are a viable part of the industry. They allow me to earn my living in the marketplace, although now I'm also working in clubs as a magician."

He is also appearing on-screen these days as himself in a chicken commercial.

Still, it's the one or more hands-only commercial he does a week that gives him knees and lean my arm on the table and make signs with my fingers — an 'L' with my thumb and index finger, a victory sign — and then I poured the wine.

What's more, he says, "My hands are the smallest men's hands in the business. I'm a size eight." Which counts when they need someone to snap a cracker

ASPIRING ACTOR and magician David Fletcher gives his hands plenty of tender, loving care. And no wonder — they have appeared in roughly 50 commercials and are his main source of income.

There's profit inside Pakistan's trash cans

By RICHARD BILL,
Associated Press Writer
ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistan is a recycler's delight. Instead of paying for your garbage to be taken away, they pay you.

Premium items are empty whiskey bottles, preferably with label, and beer cans. Islamic law bans Moslems from consuming alcohol, but empties keep popping up thanks to a thirsty foreign community.

Old newspapers also rank high on the list of disposable collectables with English-language dailies fetching twice the price of Urdu-language vernaculars.

Even broken wine glasses have their price since they can be melted down for other uses. Nor are bones from the Sunday roast exempt — they are collected and ground up for fertilizer.

In a country where annual per capita income is only $300 and a rigid caste system governs every man's life, garbage dealing ensures that even the humblest unskilled worker can eke out a living.

It is also an example of private enterprise, since the rubbish dealers have pre-empted the government from earmarking funds to cope with this particular environmental problem.

With several thousand foreigners, mostly diplomats who entertain lavishly, there's more than enough garbage in the capital for those who want to try their hand at making an extra rupee.

Collectors are called "kabari." They roam Islamabad's wide thoroughfares in twos, always mindful not to encroach on another group's patch. But bargaining can be tough. All rubbish is sorted out by the cook, who holds the highest status among any household's domestic staff.

It is the cook who piles up newspapers, separating them into heaps, and arranging bottles by the crate and beer cans by the dozen.

There is no fixed price for items that a household owner discards. Everything has to be negotiated — often to the point of fisticuffs.

The Legend of the Sandollar

There's a pretty little legend
That I would like to tell
Of the birth and death of Jesus
Found in this lowly shell.

If you examine closely,
You'll see that you may find there
Four nail holes and a fifth one
Made by a Roman's Spear.

On one side the Easter Lily
It's center is the star
That appeared unto the shepards
And led them from afar.

The Christmas poinsettia
Etched on the other side
Reminds us of His birthday
Our happy Christmastide.

Now break the center open
And here you will release
The five white doves awaiting
To spread Good will and Peace.

This simple little symbol
Christ left for you and me
To help us spread His Gospel
Through all eternity.

A piercing decision

When you have your ears pierced, it's important to care for them correctly to prevent infection. Keep earlobes and earrings clean by washing them several times a day with a cotton ball soaked in alcohol. It's also important to rotate the earrings several times a day. Earrings should not be removed until healing is complete — it takes about a month. Women with highly sensitive skin should choose earrings with hypoallergenic or surgical steel posts. If you notice any redness or puffiness accompanied by oozing, consult a doctor.

Scarf sense

A scarf can be one of your most versatile accessories. Try these wearing tips. A dramatic effect is yours when you knot a narrow bow around a high-necked ruffled blouse. Let the ends of the bow drape low for maximum impact. Or try knotting a small bow under the collar of a tuxedo blouse. A turtleneck gets the dressy treatment when you knot a scarf on top of it, ascot-style. Or soften a suit by tying your scarf in a menswear knot under the collar of a simple blouse. To keep scarf in place, use a bar or stick pin.

Tootsie tips

Feet that are encased in heavy shoes all day can get sweaty, which can lead to embarrassing foot odor. Here are some hints that may help. Wear leather shoes as much as possible — synthetics and vinyls don't let feet "breathe." Wear cotton or wool socks, too; nylon stockings hold moisture in, can make an odor problem worse. Whenever possible, go barefoot. Try commercial foot sprays and powders. Charcoal-activated foot pads are also helpful, replace them often. Air out all your footwear after wearing; try not to wear the same pair of shoes two days in a row.

Super salad

Tired of the same old tossed green salad? This delicious carrot and raisin mix will add dash to your diet — at only 60 calories per serving. Mix 2 cups grated carrots with 4 tablespoons raisins, then add 4 tablespoons drained, crushed pineapple. Next, blend 4 tablespoons plain yogurt, 2 tablespoons pineapple juice, and salt and pepper to taste. Toss yogurt mixture with carrot mixture, divide into 4 servings and spoon over lettuce leaves.

Cold combat

Spunky Claudette Wells of TV's "Square Pegs" knows how to cope with a cold. "I don't do anything or go anywhere when I catch a cold," she confessed to Beauty Digest magazine. "I make a special vegetable soup and I drink that and eat plenty of my favorite foods."

Dress groupings for business wear

NEW YORK (NEA) — The first time a woman used to putting separates together jumps into the ease of a dress, she's likely to wonder where this time saver has been all her life. Then she may notice she looks a lot more confident, not to speak of being able to forget about keeping everything in place all day.

Designers are calling their spring dress groups "VP Chic," meaning that they're for businesswomen. Liz Claiborne, known for separates, emphasizes the ease of dresses with the long-torso silhouette, such as her gray chambray with white bib, short puffed sleeves and full skirt gathered at the hipline. Poly crepe de chine in awning stripes of red, blue or green and white is cut blouson-style, with full, pocketed skirt and white for the ascot neckline and wristbands.

Albert Nipon's Executive Dress collection also features stripes and easy two-piece looks, such as a royal and white grouped stripe poly crepe de chine with a loose top dropped over a soft, pull-on skirt. The two-piece at Pierre Cardin Boutique is striped in magenta or aqua tones and has a jewel neckline for business pearls.

The stripes go on in other chic business looks.

Treating winter hair ills

By Florence De Santis

NEW YORK (NEA) — A shampoo may not be everything in good hair treatment, but a new one reminds us that a few traditional "natural" ways of handling hair can dispel the effects of such winter problems as steam heat, head coverings and over-processing.

Do you give your hair a brush workout morning and night? Work from the roots up, sides and back, to stimulate the scalp and distribute oil along the hair shaft for shine. Unbrushed hair soon looks dull and limp. Do you have it properly trimmed about once a month? Untrimmed ends get split and ragged.

Shampooing matters because the wrong shampoo can over or under-cleanse the hair, or can be too hard on it, especially if it's fine hair. The new shampoo we've been trying is called Natural's, from a firm called Nature's Organics Plus. They say Natural's and its accompanying conditioner are the first such items that are truly all-natural — including the preservative, often the one ingredient on which cosmetics makers give up.

It also should be noted that when coloring or perming hair, such processes should always be used at as low a level as possible. Even the best of these does some damage to the natural condition of the hair. To bleach black hair to blonde is foolish, as is frizzy perming or super-straightening of curly hair.

Breaking away from John Boy role

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — When actor Richard Thomas was asked to play country-western singer Hank Williams Jr., he wondered: "Why me?"

"It was a great story but at first glance it seemed so inappropriate for me," said Thomas, best known as John-Boy on "The Waltons."

But the more he thought about the project, the more convinced he became to become involved.

His role in "Living Proof: The Hank Williams Jr. Story," which NBC will telecast on Monday, is a departure from John-Boy. The movie tells of the struggle of the young singer to escape the shadow of his folk-hero father, Hank Williams Sr., and become a star in his own right. Along the way, he has bouts with liquor, drugs and an attempted suicide.

"I think it's a picture with a lot of surprises," Thomas says. "People may know Hank Williams Jr.'s music, but they don't know the man. You're left with a feeling he's not a perfect guy and he hasn't solved all his problems. Hank's only 33 and it's still up to him what he's going to do with his success."

The role is a new direction for Thomas and he handles it well. He shows, as he has in other roles since "The Waltons," that he has outgrown his image as the idealistic youth.

Thomas said that Williams was "freaked out" when he heard he was playing him. "John-Boy! He couldn't believe it. He wanted Jeff Bridges or Kris Kristofferson. I went to see him and won him over. I said,

"Hank, you've been trying to get out of the shadow of your father and here you're telling me what I can or can't do. I'm trying to get out of the shadow of John-Boy."

It's also Thomas' first singing role. For scenes early in Williams' career he sings such Hank Williams standards as "Honky Tonkin," "Your Cheatin' Heart" and "Jambalaya."

"It was very scary," Thomas said. "I'd never sung before or played the guitar. I was with all professional musicians. That was one of the things that bothered me about the role in the beginning. You don't want to look like a jerk."

Thomas served as co-executive producer with Michael Lepiner and involved himself in every aspect of the production, from getting the final script written to the editing.

"I'm now pitching three projects of my own to the networks," he said. "They say you should be able to wallpaper a room with rejection slips before you know what you're doing. I'm writing my own ideas, for better or worse."

over whose 250 mighty watts come such things as music, call-ins, rumors, "The Weekly Art Minute," and if the wire copy can be found, news.

The station's sign-off slogan: "If you can find someplace better than Tuna, then move!"

Twenty Tunas are in the show. Most are basically bigoted, fundamentally decent and about a quart low.

They range from a Klansman to a Humane Society savior of fish, from a feasting hippie to Bertha, a polyestered, beehived book-banner who wants "Roots" buried because "it only shows one side of the slavery issue."

Satirical sketch inspires skit, then a play

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Two or so years ago, actors Jaston Williams and Joe Sears were in Austin, Texas, at a party thrown by Ben Sargent, the Pulitzer-winning cartoonist.

They were asked to do a skit. "Joe and I were upstairs, drinking, wondering what we were going to do," Williams says. Then they spotted a satirical Sargent sketch hanging on a wall. It inspired their skit.

The skit inspired a play. The play inspired Gary P. Nunn, former leader of the Lost Gonzo Band, to drag a visiting New York critic to see it. The critic wrote a rave. Also touted the show to a New York agent.

In due course, "Greater Tuna," an affectionate satire of small-town life in the mythical town of Tuna, Texas, came to New York. It became an off-Broadway hit hailed by many critics, one calling it a Lone Star version of National Public Radio's acclaimed, mythical Lake Wobegone, Minn. — "The town that time forgot and decades cannot improve."

Card of Thanks

KATHRYN "BILLIE" GATLIN
When I must leave you for a little while, Please do not grieve and shed wild tears And hug your sorrow to you through the years, But start out bravely with a gallant smile, And for my sake and in my name Live on and do all things the same, Feed not your loneliness on empty days, But fill each walking hour in useful ways, Reach out your hand in comfort and in cheer And I in turn will comfort you and hold you near, And never, never be afraid to die, For I am waiting for you in the sky!

Weekday I thank our many friends and neighbors for the lovely flowers, memorials, food, prayers and thoughts that are with us each day. We especially would like to thank the ladies of the Lefors Church of Christ and Mary Ellen Church of Christ in the preparation and serving of the food.
