

Teenage girl charged with encouraging friend to kill himself

HOUSTON (AP) — A 17-year-old girl, accused of giving her boyfriend "verbal encouragement" to shoot himself, faces up to 10 years in prison if convicted on a charge of aiding a suicide.

Jean L. Miller was indicted on the felony charge by a Harris County grand jury Thursday in connection with the Aug. 27 shooting death of Kent Kretsinger, 18. Bond was set at $10,000.

Kretsinger shot himself once in the chest with a .38-caliber pistol at his family's home, according to prosecutor Brian Rains. In a note found at the shooting scene, Kretsinger said he was happy and gave no reason why he would take his life, Rains said.

The girl allegedly helped Kretsinger arrange to take his own life and "provided verbal encouragement" for him to shoot himself, Rains said.

Ann Kretsinger, the victim's mother, told authorities Ms. Miller had "some kind of power" over her son, Rains said.

Ms. Miller wanted to attend Kretsinger's funeral and play punk rock music as a memorial, but the victim's family did not allow her to attend, Rains said.

According to Rains, Ms. Miller allegedly spent several days discussing with Kretsinger his plans to kill himself.

During this period, Rains said, Kretsinger asked his mother about writing a will, and indicated he wanted to leave his car and other possessions to Ms. Miller. Kretsinger lured his mother from the house by saying his car was stranded, then shot himself, the prosecutor said.

Upon returning to the house, Mrs. Kretsinger did not notice anything unusual until Ms. Miller and a group of other teenagers came to the home and told her to check her son's bedroom, where the body was discovered, Rains said.

A few days after the suicide, Ms. Miller allegedly explained to Mrs. Kretsinger how the shooting was arranged, he said.

Mrs. Kretsinger said her son had been on the Klein High School track team until his senior year, was a member of a school religious group and was the photographer for the school yearbook until he graduated in May.

Ski Pampa

What do you do when there is plenty of snow and nary an Alp to be had? Andrea Adcock, 12, of 2400 Comanche, has never been skiing, but solved the flatland problem. After her dad made a hill from the snow cleared off the driveway, Andrea decided to get in a little practice. She borrowed a pair of skis from her brother and took to the man-made slopes in the front yard. Andrea said she hopes to do some real skiing on her birthday later this month. (Staff Photo by Bruce Lee Smith)

Wheeler preacher stops his campaign against movie house

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

WHEELER — Trial on the issue has been delayed, and Wheeler preacher Ricky Pfeil has stopped his crusade to banish "R"-rated movies from the Rogue Theater here, theater owner Ed Nall said.

Nall filed a libel suit against Pfeil and claims the preacher and his congregation at the Wheeler Christian Center have harassed him and his movie customers.

The jury trial for the suit was "unofficially" delayed this week at Pfeil's request, according to Nall's lawyer.

The suit was earlier set for trial February 14 in Wheeler by 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhenny. The lawyer for Nall, James Fling of Shamrock, said Thursday that a continuance in the trial was requested by the defense. Fling said the motion is to be filed today, and he said he won't oppose it.

Fling said he expects the lawsuit will be reset for trial sometime before June.

The lawsuit filed by the theater owner against the preacher says Pfeil and his congregation have "abused, threatened, slandered, libeled and otherwise harassed" Nall since he began showing "R"-rated movies at the Rogue in 1981.

After a hearing seeking a temporary restraining order against Pfeil October 27, McIlhenny ordered the preacher to halt all contact with the theater operator and his family.

After the injunction against Pfeil, Nall said the preacher has given up his crusade against the restricted movies.

Pfeil Thursday declined comment about the lawsuit or his work to abolish movies displaying nudity.

The preacher had no legal counsel during the October hearing, he represented himself. Pfeil and the church have since retained lawyers to defend them in the lawsuit.

The injunction barring contact with Nall does not suspend Pfeil's constitutional right to protest the films or picket in front of the theater, something Nall says the preacher has been doing for the past year and a half. The judge restricted Pfeil's picketing at the theater to a maximum of four people at one time.

But the movie operator said the preacher has given up his protest since the injunction was returned.

"I don't think he can even get the four people," Nall said. "I think he gave up. Somebody put a lid on him. We're still showing 'R' movies — where is he now?" Nall asked.

Nall said his lawsuit seeking more than $500,000 in damages is the reason the preacher quit his protests at the theater. He said Pfeil knows his actions were wrong and now realizes he can lose a large amount of money because of the preacher's actions, Nall said.

"They realized somebody's going to cough up (monetary damages). He used to tell me money is the root of all evil. I think he's the one worried about money. Where is he now?" Nall asked.

After protesting daily for about the past year and a half, Nall said Pfeil stopped showing up at the theater, shortly after the injunction. He said the last time the preacher protested at the Rogue was in early November when "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" was playing. During that protest at the theater, Pfeil was pelted with rotten tomatoes by passersby.

Nall said some of the movies shown since Pfeil gave up his protests include "Friday the 13th - Part 3," "Halloween III," "Creep Show" and "Fast Times at Ridgemont High," all "R"-rated movies.

A newspaper promotion for "Fast Times" pictured a smirking, long-haired youth who in the ad exhorts, "Hey, Bud. Let's party."

Starting tonight, the Rogue is showing the restricted movie, "First Blood."

"Seems to me if he was right, he would be here tonight," Nall said.

The theater owner said in the past, the preacher harassed him and customers on a daily basis.

"He would be walking back and forth in front of the theater handing out pamphlets. Some of the customers would run inside when they would see him," Nall said.

"He was always here, peering through the windows. He was always saying things to me like, 'I love you. I love you. Mr. Nall. Is it really worth it, Mr. Nall? If you died tonight, do you know where you would go?'" the owner of the Rogue said the preacher asked him.

In an earlier interview with a Pampa News reporter, Moral Majority member Pfeil says he is against "R"-rated nudity because, "The Bible forbids looking at the nakedness of your neighbor's wife. It forbids all nudity except within the confines of marriage. Viewing a naked woman walking across the screen is forbidden by God," Pfeil said.

The preacher said then he believes movie patrons are "polluting their minds."

Snowstorms keep coming

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO
Staff Writer

It's not over by a long shot, according to the National Weather Service (NWS) in Amarillo. Snow was falling at the rate of an inch an hour this morning, piling three inches on top of the eight left over from storms earlier in the week by 8 a.m. Another six to eight inches may fall before the storm moves on late Saturday.

The Department of Public Safety (DPS) was urging motorists not to drive if they can avoid it, and to be very careful if they do drive. Pampa Police Chief J.J. Ryzman said he is also encouraging people not to drive unless absolutely necessary.

J.C. Wells of the NWS in Amarillo said a winter storm warning will be in effect and traveler's advisories will be posted through Saturday. It was snowing over the entire Panhandle at 8 a.m. today, with snow reaching into Oklahoma, New Mexico, and the South Plains.

The probability of measurable precipitation will be 100 percent today, dropping to 50 percent tonight and 20 percent tomorrow, Wells said.

Pampa city departments have been taking precautions and using emergency management skills to get Pampa through what is fast becoming a blizzard.

Steve Vaughn, Pampa emergency management coordinator, said his office has a list of about five people with four-wheel-drive vehicles to supplement the city's two four-wheel-drives. These vehicles will be used to transport doctors, nurses, and people in other emergency-related occupations.

Anyone who needs or wants to offer assistance can call 665-2411, the Civil Defense line. Vaughn said the phone will be answered 24 hours a day as long as the storm keeps up. Anyone requesting help should give the operator on duty their name, what service is needed, and where it is needed, he said.

Vaughn also said that the State Office of Emergency Management will be monitoring Pampa and its emergency management procedures in case state help should be needed. He said the Emergency Management office acts as a "helpline" to city agencies, whether assisting with extra emergency vehicles or volunteers to help.

Pampa police will also transport anyone who is in trouble or need of emergency help. Ryzman said. Officers have pulled stranded motorists out of snowdrifts and driven some stranded motorists home if necessary since Monday, he said.

Ryzman also said anyone who is worried about a friend or relative and can't get in touch with them can call the police department and officers will be dispatched to check on them. People should not try to drive to reach the person they are concerned about, because that could lead to being stranded in a cold car far from home, he said.

The police department has even borrowed two John Deere snowmobiles in case city vehicles are not available or are inadequate for the service being performed. Ryzman said his department is functioning at pre-blizzard levels of efficiency, although at a slower pace.

"We've made all our calls," he said this morning, "but we've been delayed on some."

The police "war wagon," a four-wheel-drive truck belonging to the police department is a special asset to the city in weather like this, he said.

"That vehicle can run over a building if it has to," he said.

Pampa public works crews worked all night Thursday night to try and keep main streets clear, according to City Manager Mack Wofford. Wofford said the crews would work all night tonight if the situation warrants it.

"We're just trying to keep the main thoroughfares open," Wofford said this morning.

Wofford also said the city would not sand any more intersections until the snow slows considerably or stops completely, because the snow falls over the sand so quickly it covers the sand and makes it useless.

City hall and the Lovett Memorial Library closed at 11 a.m. today because of the weather, and the Gray County courthouse closed at noon.

Snow was reported this morning in Shamrock, Canadian, Wheeler and McLean, with hazardous road conditions reported all over the area.

Amarillo DPS said no highways through Amarillo were closed at 8:30 a.m., but visibility was only about three-quarters of a mile due to the snow.

Amarillo International Airport was still open at 9:30 a.m. today, but a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman said the Tucumcari, N.M. airport was already closed.

Weather

Heavy snow warning in effect today and Saturday. Snow ending about noon Saturday, with six or more additional inches forecast. High today mid 20s. Low tonight near 15. High Saturday near 25. Winds light and variable today, southeast 5 to 15 mph tonight and Saturday.

Texas may change the way it looks at books

By KATHRYN BAKER

AUSTIN (AP) — The process by which Texas — and possibly the nation — chooses what textbooks its children will study comes under scrutiny today as the State Board of Education begins three days of hearings that may result in changes in the system.

The board is scheduled to hear opening statements from its members today, about 60 public witnesses Saturday, and consider recommendations for changes in the adoption process Sunday.

Publishers say that Texas, as the nation's biggest textbook market, can dictate the contents of texts nationwide, since publishers cannot afford to put out one edition of a book for Texas and one for the rest of the country.

Complaints about the process have focused on the annual hearings, where only protesters — not supporters — of books proposed for sale to Texas public schools are allowed to testify.

If they want to sell a book to Texas, publishers can be asked to change it so it will conform with the state's Textbook Proclamation, a set of guidelines by which the books are judged.

At the 1982 hearings, one science teacher complained a Texas requirement that books teach evolution as theory, not fact, had set back the teaching of science nationwide.

The evolution-as-theory caveat was put into the proclamation in 1974 after the board received a letter requesting it from Norma and Mel Gabler, a conservative Longview couple who have been protesting textbooks for 21 years.

The Gablers' most often complain, though, about books that do not support "traditional family values" or which call for class discussion. The Gablers maintain that students should be taught facts, and that classroom discussion invades students' privacy and subjects them to peer pressure.

The Gablers testify around the country, not just in Texas, and have a full-time staff of eight, plus volunteers who help read the hundreds of books up for adoption each year.

They, as well as many other groups and individuals, present their protests before a 15-member Textbook Selection Committee of teachers and school officials that meets each year to recommend to the state board which books to put on the schools' approved shopping list. Publishers are allowed to respond to specific criticisms raised in the testimony.

The state's 1983 shopping list is expected to mean about $60 million to publishers.

Last year, the Texas selection process and the Gablers were challenged by People for the American Way, a liberal, anti-censorship group founded by television sit-com producer Norman Lear. PFAW, a national organization, opened a Texas office specifically to launch a campaign to change the state's textbook selection process.

PFAW contends the Gablers are managing to censor textbooks sold nationwide. The Gablers say they are merely exercising their right and insist they do not "keep score."

"If the Gablers and their allies continue to have an impact on publishers, the Texas State Textbook Committee and the Texas State Board of Education, their philosophy ultimately may affect the analytical and problem-solving skills of school children across the country," concluded a report released earlier this week by PFAW.

PFAW has targeted changing the adoption process so textbook defenders can combat the Gablers and other conservative protesters at the hearings.

The group was allowed in 1982 to submit general written comments for the hearing record, but was not allowed to testify. If the board does not change the hearing process on its own, the group says, PFAW will push for a legislative action. A bill that would open up the hearings already has been introduced.

Errant hydrant sinks a policeman

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Policeman Royal MacKenzie, all 200-plus pounds of him sinking fast, did some fast thinking. "I grabbed onto the hydrant and thought, 'I'll never see my wife again.' My next thought was, 'I'm getting my gun all wet.'" MacKenzie said after he was pulled Thursday from a huge hole in the ground caused by thousands of gallons of water escaping from a broken fire hydrant. As he tried to help shut off the water main to the hydrant, the 13-year police officer began sinking into the sand piled around the hydrant as ground fell.

almost up to my neck in muddy, yucky water," MacKenzie said, "I just kept going down and down. I panicked." MacKenzie was pulled out and rushed back to police headquarters by fellow officer Glen Brentner for a hot shower and change of clothes. "The water ruined everything," MacKenzie said, "even my billfold and shoes." MacKenzie said city workers later determined the hole he sank into was 8 feet wide and about 4 feet deep. The hydrant was broken when it was struck by a car.

Tank commander amused by clash

By MARCUS ELIASON
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — An Israeli army officer says he's "rather amused" that his tank column in Beirut was halted by a pistol-waving U.S. Marine, and his commanders say they have won U.S. approval to patrol the disputed zone where the showdown flared. The American leatherneck had claimed the Israelis were encroaching on U.S.-controlled territory and told the Israeli officer, "You're going to have to kill me." to get the three tanks past him on a road in southern Beirut. In another development, Palestinians in the Lebanese city of Sidon said Thursday that Christian Phalangists have killed at least nine Palestinian men recently in a terror campaign against refugees. Lebanese officials confirmed eight deaths, but said they didn't know who was responsible. Israel and the United States have been at odds over the movement of Israeli troops in the Beirut area, where Marines are deployed as part of a multinational peacekeeping force. On Thursday, the Israeli army said it had won a renewed commitment that U.S. peacekeeping forces would allow Israeli patrols in the area where Wednesday's tank showdown occurred. But a State Department official in Washington said that while a tentative agreement had been reached, final details remained open. Israel's Lt. Col. Rafi told a Tel Aviv news conference Thursday how his showdown with U.S. Marine Capt. Charles B. Johnson reached its peak.

Rafi, whose last name was not disclosed under Israeli security policy, said Johnson "pulled out a pistol, pointed it at the sky and stood on the road" after saying the tanks were in an American-controlled area. The Israeli tank commander said he drove around Johnson and the American leatherneck "ran after me with his pistol drawn." "The whole matter of the pistol rather amused me, although I understand that he (Johnson) was very impressed by this pistol," Rafi continued. Johnson, 30, of Neenah, Wis., told reporters in Beirut that when he jumped on the lead tank he grabbed the Israeli commander and stopped him from advancing. Washington officials hailed him as a hero. Brig. Gen. Amnon told Israel Radio that contrary to expressions of concern and anger from Washington, the Americans in Beirut had admitted to him the tank affair was "half-funny, half-sad, no more than that." The general, whose last name also was not given, said the Americans told him the Marine officer acted under the mistaken impression that the Israeli tanks were headed for Marine-controlled territory. An Israeli army statement said U.S. and Israeli officials had reaffirmed a key Beirut boundary, agreeing among other things that the scene of Wednesday's dispute is open to Israeli patrols. It said the zones "will be marked in the field by colored barrels to prevent any future misunderstanding."

Fewer teens using narcotics now

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fewer American high school students are using marijuana, hallucinogens and cocaine, but teen-agers in the United States probably take more drugs than anywhere else in the industrial world, the government says. Two surveys, one dealing with high school seniors, the other with the general population, concluded drug use is dropping. Edward N. Brandt, assistant secretary for health, said the "department can confirm that the rapidly increasing epidemic of drug use in this country in the 1960s and 1970s has finally begun to recede, particularly among young people." He added: "Although there has been a decline in drug abuse in recent years, the decline is relatively small and we as a nation still face a serious health problem." Despite the declines, one American in three over age 12 has tried some kind of illicit substance, the government said. "These are truly staggering levels of substance use and abuse, whether by historical standards or in comparison with other countries. In fact, they probably still reflect the highest levels of illicit drug use to be found in any nation in the industrialized world," the survey of high school seniors said. Brandt also said that injuries from the use of illegal drugs are increasing. The National Institute on Drug Abuse's Drug Abuse Warning Network reported that for the first nine months of 1982, there were 9,139 emergency room reports of heroin use, about one-third more than the comparable period in 1981. The proportion of high school seniors who smoke marijuana daily — at least 20 days in the previous month — dropped from more than one in 10 in 1978 to one in 16 in 1982.

The high school seniors reported less interest in using marijuana because of peer pressure and concern about the health consequences. About 20 percent of high school seniors have smoked marijuana daily for at least a month at some point in their lives, and about two-thirds of all American young people — 64 percent — try some illicit drug before they finish high school. The study said about 11.5 percent of the high school seniors has used cocaine in 1982, down from 12.4 percent the year before. Between 1975 and 1979, cocaine use doubled. Another drug that declined in popularity for the first time was methaqualone, known as Quaaludes. The number of teen-agers trying it declined from 7.6 percent to 6.8 percent. In addition, 2.2 percent of high school kids used PCP, down from 7 percent in 1979; and 6.1 percent used LSD, a slight drop from 1981. Alcohol use also was reported down among those between the ages of 12 and 17.

Pampa teens held for burglaries

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer
Four burglaries and a check forgery may have been solved by the arrest of two teenagers in Pampa, police say. Pampa Police Chief J.J. Ryzman said Michael Dan Boyd, 17, of 320 Anne, was arrested Thursday along with an unidentified 15-year-old Pampa girl. The police department said Boyd was arrested on a warrant for forgery by check, following investigations conducted by police detectives Oren

Potter and Ron Howell. The juvenile girl was also arrested as a result of the burglary investigations, and has been referred to juvenile authorities for action. Two burglaries took place at the residence of William Helms of 524 S. Ballard, in which one of the items taken was a checkbook. It was the reported unauthorized use of this checkbook at a local store which led to the arrest of Boyd, Ryzman said. Mandy Bluejacket of 440 Pitts and Lori Green of 915 Schneider had also been burglarized, according to the report. Ryzman said all the the property has been recovered. The total estimated value of the recovered property $400. Boyd was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge on Thursday. Bond was set at $5,000. The chief said Boyd will be held in city jail until an opening becomes available at county, at which time Ryzman hope to transfer him, pending posting of bond.

Farmland may shrink more in '84

By BOB FICK
WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite wide farmer support for the administration's swap of surplus crops for idled land, a top Agriculture Department official says farmers probably will have to cut back production again in 1984 to end price-depressing surpluses. Dawson Ahalt, acting USDA under secretary for commodity programs, says continuation of the payment-in-kind, or PIK, program through the 1984 growing season will depend on weather and other conditions this year. He said the decision on whether to continue the program will be made this summer. Ahalt told a Senate Agriculture subcommittee on Thursday that while a successful PIK program this year will lower grain stocks, "it is unlikely that we will bring them down enough not to have a similar program next year." Under the PIK program, farmers agreeing to idle 20 percent of their acres for cash and continued price support protection can idle another 10 percent to 30 percent. In return, they receive from the government free surplus grain equal to 80 percent to 95 percent of what they would have normally harvested on the additional idled acreage.

National farm organizations endorsed the PIK program during the subcommittee's hearing. But only the National Grange and the American Farm Bureau Federation gave unqualified approval. Other farm leaders said the government must take action to immediately bolster farm prices, now expected to continue at low levels for the rest of this year. Noting a new USDA analysis projecting no significant change in 1983 net farm income from last year's depressed level, Ahalt acknowledged that farmers won't see any real financial improvements the PIK program until next year. But he repeated the administration's contention that once grain supplies are finally brought back into balance with demand, farm prices should rebound strongly. The American Agriculture Movement and the National Farmers Union, while endorsing PIK, urged the panel to set a floor price for the millions of bushels of payment-in-kind grain that farmers will receive. They argued that farmers need protection against the possibility that PIK grain will flood the market at harvest time, forcing already depressed prices lower. But Ahalt said a floor price could actually prompt farmers to dump their PIK grain on the market all at once since they would be assured a set price.

Grand jury indicts 5

The 31st District Grand Jury indicted five people at its session Wednesday morning. Jurors were dismissed at noon because of inclement weather. The jury will reconvene Monday, February 7 at 10 a.m. in the Gray County Courthouse. Indicted on charges of "burglary—entering with intent to commit theft" were: Jimmy Lee Phillips of Borger, Johnny Ray Arnold, John Wessel England, and Ricky Palmer. Ray A. Montgomery was indicted on a charge of "aggravated assault with serious bodily injury." England was brought before the grand jury for indictment by Pampa Police, who arrested him on January 22 when Officer John Goes found him in a Pampa alley. Goes recognized the name from a traffic warrant from January 21, the day before. Pampa Police are holding England on suspicion of burglary, and their investigation led to England's possible grand jury indictment. All five who were indicted will be arraigned before 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhenny in the near future.

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is weighing the idea of speeding up planned government construction projects to ease unemployment, which economists predict will hover at double-digit levels for some time.

WASHINGTON — With the ink barely dry on President Reagan's 1984 budget, Republicans are setting key portions of it aside and are drafting their own program to reduce the federal deficit and provide a quick injection of relief from the recession.

WASHINGTON — Members of Congress and special interest groups are lining up to critique the Social Security bailout plan before a House subcommittee drafting the legislation needed to repair the decaying system.

TEL AVIV, Israel — The Israeli army and U.S. authorities reach tentative agreement on jurisdiction in the Beirut area after a confrontation between an American Marine and three Israeli tanks. An Israeli general says the Marine was mistaken about the boundaries of his territory.

Murder case goes to jury today

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The government's case against Jamiel A. "Jimmy" Chagra goes to a federal jury today for deliberations on his guilt or innocence in the 1979 assassination of a U.S. district judge in Texas.

Attorneys gave their closing arguments Thursday after three weeks of testimony from 87 government witnesses and two defense witnesses in the federal murder trial, moved to Jacksonville because of extensive publicity about the case in San Antonio.

Chagra, 39, is charged with murder, conspiracy to commit murder, conspiracy to obstruct justice and conspiracy to import marijuana as a result of an investigation into the murder of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. of San Antonio.

He is accused of paying Charles V. Harrelson $250,000 to murder "Maximum John" Wood to eliminate him from a 1979 narcotics case which eventually led to a 30-year prison sentence for Chagra.

Harrelson already has been convicted of firing the rifle shot which struck Wood in the back outside his San Antonio townhouse on May 29, 1979.

In his final argument, prosecutor John Emerson told the jury that Chagra's fear that Wood would give him a life sentence for narcotics trafficking, coupled with his fear of losing a lifestyle of "abounding wealth," caused him to contract Harrelson to kill the judge.

"His solutions to his problems was nothing more than an absolute assault on our system of justice, an act of terrorism against the system and Judge Wood," Emerson said.

Defense attorney Oscar Goodman, who contended that Harrelson had extorted money from Chagra after threatening to implicate him in Wood's death, countered that it was incredible that Chagra would have ordered Wood's assassination.

Evidence showed, Goodman said, that Chagra's attorneys were five years apart from prosecutors in arranging a plea-bargain sentence — a difference of 10 years vs. 15 years.

Chagra knew, Goodman said, that whatever the sentence for narcotics charges he would have the chance for a parole.

Goodman attacked the credibility of government witnesses who testified under immunity from prosecution. He ridiculed the testimony of a San Antonio taxi driver who said he took a man resembling Harrelson to the judge's condominium complex the night before the murder, but who didn't come forward for more than a year.

The defense attorney said Chagra's conversations with his brother and wife, tape-recorded by the FBI and introduced as evidence, proved nothing. In some of the tapes, Goodman noted, Chagra made incriminating statements but in others denied knowledge of Wood's murder and questioned if Harrelson had anything to do with it.

Goodman questioned the motives of the prosecution's star witness, Jerry Ray James, a habitual criminal who turned informant and taped his Leavenworth Penitentiary conversations with Chagra for the promise of $250,000 reward and parole from a life sentence.

"Does that give him incentive to make up anything, to create any conversation?" Goodman asked.

Goodman said justice would be served by Chagra's acquittal.

"I submit to you that the ultimate tribute you can pay to the honorable John H. Wood Jr. ... would be to return a verdict of not guilty," he told the jury.

In rebuttal, co-prosecutor Ray Jahn reviewed more tapes, including one in which Chagra said: "If I get indicted I'll be convicted, unless I can fabricate some story that Charlie did it... that he knew (Chagra's brother) Lee... that he blackmailed me, scared me."

"An acquittal," Jahn said, "would be nothing more than a travesty."

Chagra was named Feb. 26, 1979 in a five-count indictment in the Western District of Texas alleging he was head of a multi-million dollar marijuana and cocaine smuggling operation.

Chagra was from El Paso, where his brothers Joseph and Lee were prominent defense attorneys. Lee Chagra had been murdered in his office in late 1978.

At the time of the indictment, Jimmy Chagra was living in Las Vegas. Witnesses testified that he gambled hundreds of thousands of dollars in casinos.

Customs officer learns about politics

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Jim J. Dukes, a U.S. Customs Service patrol officer in Texas, took a course in political parties at Pan American University, he wound up with an A.

Now he may wind up with a 30-day suspension from his job as well, just for fulfilling a course requirement that he get involved in a political campaign. And the suspension, he says, could cost him $2,300 in lost pay.

"It will have a significant impact on me, that's for sure," said Dukes, 34, of Brownsville, who is married and has five children.

"It'll just totally wipe out my savings," he said.

Dukes' problem stems from the Hatch Act, which bars federal employees from taking an "active part" in election campaigns. He has been charged with violating the act by working on several weekends as a volunteer in the 1978 re-election campaign of Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

Dukes worked for Tower simply to fulfill a course requirement that he participate in a political campaign and write a paper on his experience.

The federal Merit Systems Protection Board, which rules on election law violations by federal employees, still is considering Dukes' case after several years of legal maneuvering.

"I've gone through just practically every emotional experience you can with something like this," Dukes said. "It's been on my mind constantly for over four years."

"It's made me very bitter," Dukes said. "And several times I've actually considered resigning, just to get it over with and get away from a system that works like this."

Last month, K. William O'Connor, the board's special counsel, recommended leniency. But a board spokesman, Lon Anderson, said it could be some time before a final decision because of the complexities of the case.

According to documents filed with the board, Dukes enrolled in the course in the fall of 1978. After satisfying himself it would not be a violation of the law, he worked for between 10 and 20 hours as a volunteer in Tower's campaign office in Brownsville.

He occasionally answered telephones, helped in a voter identification survey and reminded Tower supporters to vote. Then, for his paper, Dukes wrote a humorous account of the experience.

"I got an A on it," he said. "I got an A for the course. So far, so good."

But in July 1980, the merit board's special counsel charged Dukes with violating the Hatch Act. Dukes contended his activities on behalf of Tower were so limited they didn't constitute an "active part" in the campaign.

But, hoping to simply resolve the issue, he agreed to accept a 15-day suspension as punishment, a settlement recommended to the merit board.

However, in October 1981 the board rejected the compromise, concluding the minimum penalty required was 30 days. Last December, an administrative law judge recommended the board suspend Dukes for 30 days.

She was the only reporter there accompanied by her mother

AUSTIN (AP) — Like many of the other reporters at Gov. Mark White's news conference, Naomi Liebowitz wanted to know what he planned to do for Texas public schools. Unlike the other reporters, however, Naomi wanted to know because she goes to one.

Naomi, a fourth-grader at Brooke Elementary School here, was invited to White's weekly news conference after she requested an interview with the governor for her paper, the Lion's Mane.

Other reporters vied for White's attention by trying to out-shout each other, but they might take a lesson from Naomi, who won the chance to ask a question by simply raising her hand.

"I believe this lady has a question," said White, quieting the three dozen other reporters, regular members of the Capitol press corps Thursday.

Naomi politely rose to her feet and asked the governor, "What do you think are the three basic needs of Texas schools and what can you do about them?"

White answered, higher teachers' pay, distributing funds equally among school districts and "making certain no child is deprived of an education because he doesn't speak English."

Naomi, who attended with her mother, Judy Liebowitz, asked another question — whether Texas would build a new museum in Austin.

White said it was "under consideration."

Senators approve Pope as chief justice

AUSTIN (AP) — Jack Pope has called the Senate's bluff in a political card game and, with Gov. Mark White as his ace in the hole, won approval as chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court.

Senators who seemed dead set against the lame-duck appointment of Pope voted 29-2 to confirm him Thursday, after White said Pope was a "very outstanding public servant and outstanding jurist."

"I always felt that we were right, and because of that I always felt that everything would come out all right," Pope told a reporter.

He had bristled at the suggestion that 14 Democratic senators might reject his appointment, once stating "if I go out, I'm going to go down in flames."

The controversy arose not over Pope's qualifications or party affiliation — Democrat — but over the fact that former

Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican, appointed Pope after Clements lost to Democrat White in the Nov. 2 election.

The appointment filled the vacancy created when former Chief Justice Joe Greenhill resigned Oct. 25 to practice law here.

A Nov. 8 letter signed by the 14 senators said they were "committed to take every step" to make sure White, and not Clements, got to appoint the new chief justice.

Nevertheless, Pope, 69, refused to promise he would retire before the 1984 primary elections, presumably so another Democrat such as former Attorney General John Hill would have an easier race for the job.

"He's running a bluff on the Senate and these 14 senators, and now we'll see who calls his bluff," Brooks said during the negotiations.

Thursday, only Brooks and Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, opposed Pope's appointment. Washington said no senator really knew if Pope was White's first choice.

The other 12 senators voted to confirm the 18-year member of the high court, with several stating the letter had achieved the desired result with Clements' appointment of the "highly qualified and competent" Pope.

White also said the letter had "served its purpose well," and Pope acknowledged "the letter was a factor in my selection for the appointment."

"Some fights are not worth having, and given the quality of the man involved, this is one of those," said Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, one of the signers of the letter.

"I didn't sign that letter because I love Mark White," said Washington. "I would have signed that letter if Donald Duck had been governor of Texas because he (the incoming governor) ought to have the right to make that decision."

Dallas man arrested for cruelty to animals

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Dallas rancher will stand trial in April on charges he cruelly treated a herd of malnourished horses seized from his East Texas ranch.

Charles Eugene Parrish was arrested Thursday at the Hunt County Courthouse where he appeared for a hearing at which authorities were to show just cause for seizing the animals. He later was released on $5,000 bond.

Twenty-four starving horses were seized Jan. 25 from Parrish's ranch near Quinlan.

Bobbie Stinson, a member of the Hunt County Humane Society, said Thursday that one of the horses seized on the low-lying Sabine River bottom land since has died from lack of nourishment.

The remaining 23 horses were transferred to a Funds for Animals refuge near Tyler after they were rounded up, she said. Their fate will not be determined until the charges against Parrish are settled.

Authorities found at least three carcasses and 10 piles of bones on Parrish's 270-acre ranch. Ms. Stinson said. Many of the surviving horses were worm-infested, she said.

She said she had been told the land had been under water about six times this winter, and that the horses were stranded on small islands.

A trial date on the animal cruelty charge, a Class A misdemeanor, has been set for April 14. If convicted, Parrish could be fined up to $2,000 and spend up to a year in jail.

Justice of the Peace Merrick Money had signed a warrant for Parrish's arrest on Jan. 26.

Another East Texas rancher, Joe Corbett, was arrested Dec. 19 and charged with mistreating a herd of mustangs, acquired in a federal "Adopt-a-Horse" program.

Driver escapes shot

DENTON, Texas (AP) — A truck driver narrowly escaped injury today when a shot was fired at his rig from an overpass on Interstate 35E north of here, authorities said.

The rig was passing another truck near an overpass when the driver, an Oklahoma City man working for a trucking company, "heard a loud noise hit the side of his cab," according to Hal Chute, a deputy with the Denton County Sheriff's Department.

The man contacted the driver of the other rig by radio and the two pulled over about a quarter mile away from the shooting site. Chute said.

Chute said the bullet, probably from a high-powered rifle, penetrated the cab about two feet behind the driver's head and exited on the other side.

History will note Reagan's choices

Whether or not he is deliberately trying to improve his reportedly low political standing with women, President Reagan certainly hasn't hurt his image by his nominating two women to head a Cabinet department.

The first was White House aide Elizabeth Dole, designated to replace Secretary of Transportation Drew Lewis. The second was former Massachusetts congresswoman Margaret Heckler, named to succeed Richard Schweiker as Secretary of Health and Human Services.

Counting U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, this will give the Reagan administration three female members of Cabinet rank, more than any previous administration.

Of even greater surprise to feminists and women's rights activists, the Justice Department has taken their side in an important pension case before the Supreme Court.

A brief has been filed supporting a suit which challenges the insurance industry's traditional system of calculating retirement benefits for women. Based on actual tables showing that women live longer than men, pension plans generally pay women smaller annual benefits than men.

According to solicitor General Rex E. Lee, the action reflects the administration's belief that equal rights for women are best protected not through a constitutional amendment but through enforcement of existing laws - in this case the Civil Rights Act.

It is impossible to predict if all this will cut much ice with the anti-Reagan female public. It may take more than a record number of female Cabinet secretaries or the appointment of the first female Supreme Court justice to dispel the ingrained perception that the president is callous towards widows, orphans and pregnant teenagers and soft on nuclear war.

But Ronald Reagan's exceptional record in elevating women to positions of the highest importance in the government will definitely be taken note of by historians of his administration, if not by women voters.

Fat and sassy

In an effort to keep population from growing to no more than 1.2 billion by the end of the century, China has adopted a number of draconian measures. There are all kinds of rewards for one-child families, but couples who have a second child forfeit 15 percent of their salaries. Even stiffer penalties exist for a third child.

The only-child emphasis is having an unforeseen consequence, however - growing numbers of spoiled brats who, according to the China Daily, "quarrel with their friends and refuse to share their toys" in kindergarten.

A physician in Shanghai reports a high rate of obesity among these youngsters because their mothers give them too much food and candy. In Peking, a survey of children between the ages of 3 and 5 found that 29 percent of only children had become "fussy eaters."

On the other hand, the same survey reported that the sibling-less are "cleverer, more imaginative, more creative and more inquisitive" than children from large families.

The prospect of tens of millions of spoiled, clever, imaginative, creative and inquisitive citizens coming of age in China is one that should give the communist authorities pause. It does us.

The one boat plan
By PAUL HARVEY

Interesting thing happened to President Reagan in Oklahoma. He went there to address the Farm Bureau. He learned that his audience had given enthusiastic support to a proposal by Oklahoma's Senator Boren. Sen. David Boren has proposed a "one boat plan" for us all.

To drastically slash the federal budget, Senator Boren proposed freezing all government spending - now. The response by the bipartisan audience was almost unanimous.

Within hours President Reagan proposed "a pay freeze for all government employees."

The impetus, if not the idea, for his recommendation came from an Oklahoma Democrat.

Now...

Government workers, understandably, will resent seeing other people get income increases while theirs are frozen. That's why Senator Boren's larger concept - of a freeze on all government spending - seems more likely to win universal acceptance.

Maybe we need recessions once in a while for Americans to rediscover their own selflessness.

In union after union, industry after industry, even in public service jobs - workers are voluntarily accepting pay cuts for themselves to prevent layoffs of others.

Senator Boren's "one boat plan" would pinch everybody a little and nobody a lot.

He means from the President on down and including the Congress - and including so-called discretionary spending - all should agree to an immediate income freeze.

He projects these numbers:

- Freeze all scheduled increases in government workers' salaries, benefits and pensions and save $40 billion.
- Postpone the income tax cut one year and save $24 billion.
- Freeze congressional spending and save another $10 billion.
- Cut back military spending (still allowing for a 4 percent increase) and save $15 billion.

Senator Boren believes that his "one boat plan" would tend to pull us all together, cooperating instead of bickering. He believes it would make it easier to resolve the Social Security impasse and to freeze the medical reimbursement rate.

And it would slash our deficit in half for fiscal 1984.

These economies requiring nothing more than a freeze - on paper at least - could balance our budget within three years.

The alternative is ominous: another trillion dollars of red ink within seven years would drown us.

Playing the fools

on El Salvador and thus in full knowledge that it is not being told the whole truth and nothing but the truth, has preferred to accept State's word rather than recognize reality.

Having claimed a prerogative, Congress is reluctant - afraid might be the more accurate word - to exercise it. And so becomes an accessory to administration hypocrisy.

The performance in Washington would be funny if the situation in El Salvador were not so tragic.

This latest certification rests on the assertion that during the past year only some 5,000 Salvadoran civilians have been slaughtered by extra-legal "death squads," most believed to have military connections. That is about half the previous year's death toll.

But even accepting "only" 5,000 dead - a disputed figure - as the good news, it is all too obvious to anyone who will look that the Reagan administration's policy in El Salvador is a shambles (a word for which, coincidentally, Webster's provides one especially apt definition among several: "a scene of mass slaughter or bloodshed").

The election of last March that had State in paroxysms of joy because of the large turnout did not produce an effective government. There is a government that Washington can pretend to work with only because the military stepped in and imposed its own choice upon an assembly that left to its own choices would have opted for representatives of the anti-democratic far right.

So much for making El Salvador safe for democracy through the democratic process.

As for the Salvadoran military, its successes in the capital are not matched in the field against a guerrilla opposition it cannot defeat. Much is made, in Washington, of the guerrillas' inability to challenge the army in open battle. But what are they expected to do? March around like British Redcoats, presenting convenient targets?

Elusiveness and the sneak attack have ever been the most effective tactics of guerrilla warfare and continue so in El Salvador, disrupting public services at a cost of mounting millions of dollars. Half the country is frequently blacked out.

Meanwhile, even some administration team tempers are fraying. U.S. Ambassador Deane R. Hinton in November publicly blasted the Salvadoran right for engaging in "Mafia" activities. Sounding uncannily like his fired predecessor, Robert White, he warned failure to curb rightist "gorillas" might mean a cutoff of U.S. aid.

Washington promptly muzzled Hinton, but that's not the same as changing his mind.

Although Capitol Hill critics of Salvadoran policy are more vocal than ever, there is no reason to expect Congress to respond any differently to the mandated certification of "progress" this time around.

The opportunity to effect a real change is more likely to come in October, when the 1981 legislation expires. Congress will have several options - rewriting with stiffer provisions, even barring aid to the Salvadoran "Mafia" altogether. Or it may decide to let bad enough alone and simply renew.

How do you think it will go?
So do I.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Feb. 4, the 35th day of 1983. There are 330 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

- On Feb. 4, 1789, George Washington was elected the first president of the United States.
- On this date:
 - In 1783, hostilities ended between the United States and Britain in the Revolutionary War.
 - In 1861, delegates from six seceding Southern states formed the Confederacy in Montgomery, Ala.
- In 1887, the Interstate Commerce Commission was established.
- In 1977, two elevated trains crashed in Chicago, killing 11 people and injuring more than 150 others.
- Ten years ago: It was disclosed that the U.S. Justice Department was amassing millions of documents for the biggest antitrust action ever taken, a suit against International Business Machines Corp.
- Five years ago: Carter administration officials said intelligence reports suggested that Cuban pilots based in Ethiopia were carrying out air strikes against Somalia.
- One year ago: The Senate approved a measure that barred federal courts from ordering busing plans that would transport school children more than five miles.

Today's birthdays: Feminist Betty Friedan is 62. Actress Ida Lupino is 65.

Thought for today: "History is, indeed, little more than the register of the crimes, follies and misfortunes of mankind." - Edward Gibbon, English historian (1737-1794).

By Social Security panel

Doors opened to politicians, lobbyists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Politicians and special interest groups are stepping up their efforts to influence the tax writers in Congress who will draft legislation repairing the Social Security system.

The House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security was opening five days of hearings today with 25 members of Congress parading before the panel to critique the $168 billion bailout plan fashioned by the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

More than 100 organizations and individuals, ranging from Americans for Democratic Action to the Bowling Proprietors Association of America, will testify before the legislators next week.

The subcommittee will write the first draft of Social Security legislation that is expected to go to the House floor by March 10.

The full Ways and Means Committee wrapped up three days of hearings on Thursday with Richard S. Schweiker, speaking on his final day as secretary of health and human services, declaring, "There is no more time for rhetoric or delay. "Fear on the part of both retirees and younger people that Social Security is tottering on the brink of collapse has been allowed to continue too long," said Schweiker, who is leaving the President Reagan's Cabinet to become chief lobbyist for the life insurance industry.

Schweiker said the interests of retirees and taxpayers alike "cannot be allowed to fall victim to narrow viewpoints now when we are so close to restoring Social Security's ability to meet its commitments today and for the future."

But various interest groups and politicians have begun increasing the pressure for and against the package that includes payroll tax increases, a six-month delay in July's cost-of-living increase, a levy on benefits going to middle- and upper-income retirees and other steps.

The executive committee of "Save Our Security," a coalition of 140 labor, senior citizen and civil rights groups, voted 48-2 Thursday to endorse the reform commission's rescue plan. The two negative votes were cast by the American Association of Retired Persons and the Grey Panthers.

Gene Zack, a spokesman for the coalition, said the SOS leaders "accepted the six-month COLA (cost-of-living increase) delay with great reluctance, but they accepted it."

The reform commission plan also calls for single elderly people to pay income taxes on half their Social Security benefits if their adjusted gross income exceeds $20,000 or, for a couple, $25,000.

Rep. Richard T. Schulze, R-Pa., who was appearing before the subcommittee today, was making a joint announcement later in the day with Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, recommending that Social Security save money by deferring benefit payments to middle- and upper-income retirees.

This would be accomplished by giving the retirees bonds which could be redeemed at some later time. Aides said the savings would eliminate the need to tax benefits.

Is the ozone going? Scientists don't know

WASHINGTON (AP) — No one knows if the ban on aerosol propellants is saving the protective ozone layer around Earth, but it has sharply reduced the use of the chemicals, say scientists who are still debating the extent of the hazard.

The ozone layer, 20 miles above Earth, screens out hazardous ultraviolet radiation from the sun. That radiation could lead to an increase in skin cancer if it got through, scientists warned in the late 1970s.

Imposed between 1977 and 1979, the ban eliminated fluorocarbons from use as propellants, such as in hair spray and deodorant. But the chemicals are still used in some applications, notably as refrigerants, in dry cleaning and in plastic foam cushions.

Released into the air, fluorocarbons can damage or destroy ozone, according to a National Academy of Science study. The Academy projected in late 1977 that 15 percent to 18 percent of the layer could be depleted.

"At that time there were essentially few, if any, measurements that had actually been taken, and people really were scared," recalled Edward A. Klein, director of the chemical control division of the Environmental Protection Agency's office of toxic substances.

Dr. Lester Machta, director of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's air resources laboratory, said studies since the ban have shown a "tremendous drop" in the amount of fluorocarbons being released into the air.

Machta said figures from the Chemical Manufacturers Association show $80 million pounds of one of the chemicals, Freon 11, released into the atmosphere in 1981. That's down from 715 million pounds released in 1976, he said.

As to whether the drop has saved the ozone layer, Machta says, "I wonder if we'll ever know."

Klein said various agencies have conducted studies of ozone depletion, and "we haven't been able to measure any significant changes."

"The monitoring hasn't borne any real fruit up to now," he said.

Dr. James Angell of NOAA said that "it looks as though in the middle and upper stratospheres ... there may be a 2 percent decrease in ozone over the last 10 years, but you just can't be sure of something like that."

That, he said, is because of counterbalancing factors, including an increase in carbon dioxide in the air, which could result in an actual increase in ozone.

"What hurts people is (a drop in) the total amount of ozone, and Jim finds no change in that," said Machta.

But Donald Heath of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported in a 1981 study that he had found the first evidence that a change is occurring in the ozone layer, a finding that he said "represents a partial validation of the theory that (fluorocarbons) will destroy ozone."

His studies, based on information collected from satellites, showed a 4 percent ozone decline at 24 miles above the Earth. "It's small, but we feel it's significant," he said at the time.

Heath declined to detail his work recently, saying it will be published in a scientific journal. But he said further research has not changed his 1981 conclusions.

"We've extended our analysis over a considerably longer period of time. We're still left with the same conclusion: that there is an effect and the most likely candidate is fluorocarbon."

It's not yet proved, he cautioned, but "that theory seems to fit the observation best of all."

A National Academy of Science report, issued last March, cut in half its prediction of the expected reduction in the ozone layer. The new estimate calls for a decline of between 5 percent and 9 percent by late in the next century, the academy said, based on the same assumptions used in its 1977 study.

Shultz meets premier

Chinese leader wants to visit Washington

PEKING (AP) — Declaring that he wants "lasting, stable and friendly relations" with the United States, Premier Zhao Ziyang said today that he plans to visit Washington and invited President Reagan to come to Peking.

Zhao said he did not think disputes over American arms sales to Taiwan would interfere with his visit or the invitation, but warned that the issue remains "the main obstacle" to better U.S.-China relations.

China claims Nationalist-ruled Taiwan as a province and says U.S. weapons deals with Taipei violate Chinese sovereignty.

"I would very much like to visit the United States and President Reagan has invited me and I have accepted. But the date is not yet fixed," Zhao said before he met with visiting Secretary of State George Shultz.

"China attaches great importance to Sino-U.S. relations," the Chinese premier said in a rare news conference.

"We hope China and the United States will have lasting and stable and friendly relations because this is not only in the interests of the two peoples but in the interests of peace and stability in the world."

Zhao indirectly referred to a visit by Reagan during the news conference and was quoted later by the official Xinhua news agency as saying the government would like Reagan to visit China "at a convenient time."

A U.S. official who briefed reporters on the outcome of the talks between Zhao and Shultz said U.S. arms sales to Taiwan took only 10 or 15 minutes of the more than two-hour conversation.

Shultz repeated the American commitment to honor last summer's agreement to gradually reduce those sales, said the official, who asked that his name not be used.

Zhao appeared somewhat more concerned about U.S. high technology sales to China than about Taiwan, the official said. China repeatedly has complained that the United States has not lived up to its promise to increase such sales.

China also is concerned about its traveling artists and athletes defecting while in the United States, and the topic came up in today's talks between Zhao and Shultz, the official said.

Zhao and Shultz also discussed the presence of Vietnamese troops in Cambodia, Soviet troops in Afghanistan and Sino-Soviet relations, according to the official.

China demands the reduction of Soviet troops along its border, withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan and an end to Soviet support for Vietnam's occupation of Cambodia.

The Chinese premier earlier had told reporters he had little hope that U.S.-Soviet arms control talks on nuclear missiles would yield "substantial progress."

Shultz also met today with Prince Norodon Sihanouk, former Cambodian ruler and president of the three-party coalition formed to drive the Vietnamese out of Cambodia.

The United States gives humanitarian and political support to the two non-communist factions but not to the communist Khmer Rouge faction.

In study of court system

Second-graders try fairy tale characters

PRESCOTT, Wash. (AP) — The Big Bad Wolf was guilty of property destruction as charged. Gretel was cleared of murder in the killing of the old witch, but it took four polls of the jury to acquit her.

Teacher Bill Wolford uses fairy tale characters who are good, bad or just everyday citizens to show his class of about a dozen second-graders at Prescott Elementary School how the American judicial system works. He said it also trains them to think on their feet.

The students, ages 7 and 8, play defendants such as the smirking wolf who blew down the Three Little Pigs' houses, or the frightened Gretel, who shoved the witch into the oven and banged the door shut.

Students also play witnesses, lawyers and jurors. "Their reading, comprehension and listening have developed because they have to think," Wolford said Thursday. "I generally sit down with the students and let them throw out ideas."

Wolford said he sets aside 45 minutes each Friday for the discussions and fairy tale trials for his pupils in his southeast Washington community. Angela Gessel, 8, appropriately defiant as the Big Bad Wolf, was grilled about whether she huffed and puffed and blew down one little pig's straw house.

"Just as I was beginning to talk to the little pig, a strong wind came up and blew the house down," she claimed. The jury didn't buy that story and convicted her.

In the case of Gretel vs. The Second Grade, the jury had a tougher time. Gretel baked the witch to death, that's clear; but was it murder or justified homicide?

Jurors finally acquitted Gretel because of testimony by a woodcutter who said that after the witch died, all her belongings vanished. The woodcutter added, however, that the witch always fed him cookies and seemed nice enough.

Since the witch tried to roast Hansel and Gretel, she had to be a bad witch, not a good one. Gretel, the jury concluded, did what needed doing.

When students recently discussed "Jack and the Beanstalk," they questioned whether Jack had the right to run off with the giant's golden horn.

"I read the story and then asked them 'if there was anything wrong with it,'" Wolford said. "They agreed Jack was stealing and that wasn't right."

"Then they started thinking about Jack's cutting down the beanstalk and killing the giant. Some pointed out that if he hadn't cut it down, the giant would have killed him. But one boy said he could have just scrambled down the stalk and run away."

Congressional Republicans looking for own relief

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the ink barely dry on President Reagan's 1984 budget, Republicans are setting key portions of it aside and are drafting their own program to reduce the deficit and provide a quick injection of relief from the recession.

During testimony before five separate House and Senate committees, top administration economic advisers encountered as much opposition from Republicans as they did from Democrats.

Democrats in the House and Senate, meanwhile, are going ahead with a $5-to-$10 billion emergency proposal to aid victims of the recession and provide public works jobs to reduce unemployment.

The legislation is likely to reach the House floor next month, and will include direct federal aid for homeless persons in need of food and shelter because they are unable to find work.

Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said Thursday they would also prepare a public works jobs bill designed to provide jobs almost immediately on projects that have been deferred for lack of funding.

"They are projects that would be needed with or without the recession," Levin said. Meanwhile, House Republican leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois on Thursday appointed a task force to compile a GOP jobs bill within 30 days.

Rep. John Erlenborn of Illinois, senior Republican on the House Education and Labor Committee, will head the 10-member task force which Michel said should produce "something new and fresh."

Michel said he wants to avoid legislation which would "dredge up a revised public service jobs program."

Publicly, Reagan opposes new federal spending for jobs, and there are no major employment programs in his 1984 budget blueprint.

However, White House aides are said to be reconsidering support of some jobs legislation at a time when 12 million people are out of work.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said there had been discussions with the administration on a Republican jobs bill. "I think there is some motion," he said Thursday.

Also in the Senate, Republican Slade Gorton of Washington announced a replacement federal budget for fiscal 1984 that would spread over two years the 10 percent income tax cut scheduled to take effect in July.

Critics of the reduction say it will sharply reduce revenues at a time when federal deficits, predicted to be $208 billion for 1983, should come down quickly.

Reagan says the cut should be allowed to take hold because economic recovery now just beginning depends on increased saving and spending by consumers.

In the Senate Finance Committee on Thursday, one Republican after another attacked the tax cut as counterproductive and likely to slow economic recovery.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the committee chairman, also indicated the panel was unlikely to act on Reagan's proposal for a steady income and oil tax, at least until ways have been found to collect $120 billion in federal taxes which go unpaid each year.

More signs of economic recovery being seen

BY JOHN CUNNINGHAM AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — No, the recovery itself might not have been sighted, but signs of it have.

And, more people are seeing signs today than in the previous quarter, and some believe so strongly in the signs that they are willing to stick their necks out and make tentative forecasts.

"We find good reason to look for an upturn," says Citibank once again. "Economic recovery is at hand," says Wharton Econometrics.

The American economy is showing some small signs of recovery," says Data Resources.

President Reagan sees the signs clearly, and so does Martin Feldstein, head of Reagan's council of economic advisers, who said he finds "stronger and stronger signs that recovery is imminent."

The chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, Paul Volcker, came right out and said it, that there are "signs that we may be at the trough of the recession and that recovery may be taking its first steps."

There is a corollary to the forecast: Never say you see possible signs of a possible recovery without adding that the possible recovery might — not will — be modest or weak or less than robust.

And by all means suggest an alternative scenario, a fall-back position that might save your reputation.

Feldstein did it. If recovery begins this month the 1983 gain in gross national product could be 5 percent. If it is delayed until the second quarter, he warned, it could mean just a 2 percent increase.

What this suggests is that the signs themselves, or significance of them, isn't entirely clear.

"Let us examine the signs of recovery," says Merrill Lynch's "Business Outlook." Among its long list of portents are these:

The momentum of decline in industrial production has slowed, the index of leading indicators has risen in eight of the past nine months, the ratio of coincident to lagging indicators has risen for five months in a row.

And more: The purchasing managers' diffusion index rose in December, commodity prices have rebounded from October-November lows, short-term interest have receded, the Fed has been accommodating.

And still more: The inventory of new single-family homes is at its lowest since 1971, initial unemployment claims have fallen to their lowest level since August 1981, durable goods orders and shipments rose late in 1982.

The hazards of anger

By George R. Plagenz

Violence, we all agree, is bad. But what about anger, which gives rise to violence — and to broken families, mental illness and much of our unhappiness. Is anger bad too?

On that we do not all agree. In the January issue of Psychology Today magazine, a clinical professor of behavioral medicine and psychiatry at the University of Virginia gives a long list of troubles that follow in the train of suppressed anger — including greater risk of premature heart attack and major dental problems as well as increased hostility and heightened probability of homicide and spouse and child abuse.

Dr. W. Doyle Gentry is responding to a writer in the November issue of the same magazine who cited new research indicating "there is little evidence that suppressing anger is dangerous to health."

Gentry's further point is that suppressing anger may be dangerous not only to the angry person's health but to the health of the person he is angry at — that is, suppressing anger can lead to violence. By letting your anger out in words, you and your opponent have something to talk about which can forestall a rain of harmful blows.

What did Jesus say about anger? We don't really know. According to the King James Version of the Bible, Jesus said in the Sermon on the Mount, "He that is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment." But a later translation, "The New Oxford Bible," omits the words, "without a cause."

This follows many of the earliest manuscripts of the Bible which quote Jesus as saying simply, "He that is angry with his brother shall be in danger of the judgment." Some scholars feel the words, "without a cause," are an addition of later Bible editors.

"Even if anger may be called for at times, I agree with those who say that we are living in an age that 'deifies' the expression of anger."

"Anger today is becoming one of our most praised values," writes Melvin Maddocks, a columnist for the Christian Science Monitor. "In raising anger to an emotional ideal, we have gravely misgauged the limited utility of adrenalin's quick flashes."

What can we do about it? "There is one thing we can do about it," says Maddocks. "We can refuse to glamorize anger, especially when it is self-indulgent — the sound of baby shoes stomping."

Robert Raines, who wrote "To Kiss the Joy," is another who believes that one thing this world needs is a thermostat for hotheads.

"Sometimes when I let all my anger out," says Raines, "it may give me momentary relief but it may destroy someone else. Sometimes I should hold my anger in for the sake of another."

Now we are back to where we began. Won't holding in our anger be dangerous?

There is not one shred of evidence that it is dangerous to suppress anger," says Dr. John Decker, a physiologist at Arizona State University. Anger is a deliberate choice, he says, and can be avoided with no ill effects.

Anger, once forgotten, has no more force, Decker insists. It is when a person continues to harass himself by remembering old hurts that anger may well cause depression — and worse. This person experiences the hurt not once but maybe a hundred times "and a person can stand only so many defeats."

But, you say, anger is automatic and out of our control. Not so, says Henry Marksberry, counseling supervisor at Bethesda Hospital in Cincinnati. Anger is the animal side of a person that is reacting. With practice, the rational side can quickly quiet "such prehistoric rumblings."

Why do we have so many angry and violent people today? There are many factors: a sense of rootlessness, a changing value system which leads to confusion about right and wrong and our "here and now" philosophy which emphasizes living for today and downgrades the future.

But it is still not too late for us to exchange anger for something more civilized and becoming. And less likely to blow up in our faces. Sometimes literally.

Saving the sermon

Is there anything that can bring the Sunday morning sermon back to life?

The most popular sermons today are the short ones. The suggestion has even been made that, instead of announcing their sermon topics in advance, ministers should announce how long they plan to preach.

"When someone wants to know what the sermon is going to be about," says a modern sermon critic, "what he really wants to know is whether it is going to be about 10 minutes or about 30 minutes. If it's anything over 12 minutes, he'll stay home."

The popularity of short sermons is obviously due to the fact that people find most sermons boring.

One of my correspondents has suggested a "worst sermon contest."

"There would be awards," said the writer, "for all-around worst sermon, longest, dulllest, most juvenile, least comprehensible and most pointless."

Winners?, the letter writer suggested, would be locked up in a room where they would have to listen to tapes of their sermons played over and over.

At one church recently, the pastor announced on Sunday that because of certain circumstances there would be no sermon that morning. The people broke out in spontaneous applause.

Jokes about boring sermons are not new of course. The best known perhaps concerns the minister who paused during his discourse to instruct an usher to wake a man in one of the pews who had fallen asleep.

"You wake him," the usher replied, "You put him to sleep."

There are some people who think it would be a good idea for most ministers to "steal" their sermons from books of "Best Sermons" — or in any case to make liberal use of sermon outlines and illustrations which are published under such hidden titles as "The Minister's Manual" or "Resources of Inspiration."

"At least then we could get a good sermon every Sunday," says one disgruntled sermon-listener. "Who cares if most of it was plagiarized?"

What makes a good sermon? Louis Cassels, the late, respected religion editor of United Press International, once said, "A good sermon is not just an argument or a moral lecture or a sales talk. It is a challenge, an invitation, a dare and a promise."

Billy Graham has been one of the most popular preachers for more than 25 years. What is his secret?

According to Rev. Dan Poling, a former syndicated religion writer, "Graham is an attractive, articulate speaker in a time when public speaking seems to be a lost art. His message is filled with contemporary illustrations, quotes from the New York Times and saturated with biblical scenes."

Rev. James Montgomery Boice, well-known radio preacher, says great preaching is built on a "belief in the Bible as authoritative and infallible." He says the pulpit goes into decline whenever ministers substitute the Biblical proclamation, "Thus saith the Lord," with the words, "It seems to me."

Not all popular preachers limit their sermons to 12 or 15 minutes. Rabbi Daniel Jeremy Silver of The Temple in Cleveland speaks for about 45 minutes each week.

"In our world," says Silver, "there are few, if any, subjects which can be polished off in 15 minutes. Despite our passion for instant coffee and instant success, sermons that are over in an instant are rarely worth listening to."

As for what a sermon should provide, Silver says, "In a sermon we remind decent folk of decent urgencies. Crusades are not won by words, yet it is right and necessary to preach righteousness forthrightly. By doing so, we confirm many in their commitments."

Women preachers are still not popular with many congregations but a seminary professor of my acquaintance who teaches homiletics says, "Some of the best preaching I hear is by women. They have a sensitivity to human relationships and they see a theological significance in the ordinary things around them."

Will it be women who will rescue preaching from the doldrums?

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

A VITAL PART

A stop watch is a vital part in many sports. For instance, in track man races against time. The stop watch has enabled us to compare racers of one generation with that of another. In football it is a race to end up with the highest score when time runs out.

The Church is a vital part in man's life. The Church offers comfort, love, peace, and understanding. Just as we wouldn't leave the watch out of football, don't leave out the vital part in the greater things of life.

ATTEND CHURCH REGULARLY

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without love by loving in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedom which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Dear Abby

Family affection may become love

By Abigail Van Buren
1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I were close to my brother and his wife. We took many vacation trips together and were a very compatible foursome.

Two years ago my wife passed away and I have been very lonely since. Two weeks ago my brother died very suddenly. During the few days I spent with the entire family, it occurred to me to speak to my bereaved sister-in-law about a possible future together, but I thought it would be much too premature and in poor taste, so I said nothing.

Naturally she will have a period of mourning, followed by a period of adjustment, but after that I think she and I could find companionship together in the years ahead.

My question: How long should I wait? I'm afraid if I wait too long some other man may step in ahead of me. She's a very attractive woman.

I have a hunch she would favor me if she knew I was interested. How can I handle this in good taste?

AN EYE TO THE FUTURE

DEAR EYE: As a member of the family, you have an inside track, but don't crowd her. Be attentive, solicitous, sympathetic and available for hand-holding in a brotherly, non-aggressive manner. Don't make any moves until she indicates that she has more than a platonic interest in you. Just be there with a soft shoulder to cry on, and if your hunch is right, when the time is right, she'll drop into your palm like a ripe peach.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a college student who has dated this young man (also a college student) for a year. We've become very close, see each other often and, of course, he has met my parents. (I live at home, and so does he.)

In all the time we've gone together, I have never been to his home, nor have I met his parents. I have hinted that I would like to meet them, but he always says it's not convenient because we live so far apart (45-minute drive). I have offered to drive over to his house, but he's never taken me up on it.

I really can't understand it. I'm not ugly or stupid, and I have good manners. I can't think of any reason why he should be ashamed of me. I've met the parents of other guys I haven't been nearly as close to.

What do you think is wrong here?

PUT OFF AND PUZZLED

DEAR P AND P: I think he's ashamed of his parents. Or his home. And possibly both.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't mention my name if you print this letter. I visited a home and was shocked to find that the lady of the house had hung a lot of family pictures in her bathroom!

I could not restrain myself and told her how shocked I was. Please let me know if you have ever heard of this.

CAN'T GET OVER IT

DEAR CAN'T: I have not only heard of it, I've seen such a gallery. Decorating is a matter of personal taste, and there is no reason why people shouldn't hang pictures wherever they wish.

DEAR ABBY: You often receive letters from young girls asking, "Should I or should I not go all the way before marriage?"

I was given a beautiful reason why I should not, and I never forgot it. There were no heavy warnings or confusing explanations. It was simply this: "Intimacy between man and woman is God's wedding gift to the newlyweds, and his gift is not to be opened early."

Big Band sound comes to Pampa

Fans of the big band era eager to relive moments spent beneath mirrored balls will have their opportunity Saturday evening when Community Concerts presents the Big Band Cavalcade at the M.K. Brown auditorium at 8 p.m.

Oldies but goodies from the 30s and 40s will be presented by some of the stars who made them great when Frankie Carle, Roberta Sherwood, and the De Castro Sisters are backed up by the Russ Morgan Orchestra conducted by Jack Morgan, weather permitting.

Featured in the concert for seat holders will be Frankie Carle on the keyboard playing his most noted composition "Sunrise Serenade." Carle began playing for money in the 1920s and played with such greats as Jack Teagarden and Gene Krupa before starting his own band in 1936.

Roberta Sherwood, returning to public life after 15 years as wife and mother, will sing her greatest hits including "Lazy River," "You're Nobody Till Somebody Loves You," and "Ace in the Hole." She was once featured vocalist with the Buddy Rogers orchestra, sang for nightclubs in Miami Beach, and has recorded 11 albums.

A song called "Teach Me Tonight" sold five million records for the fabled De Castro Sisters, and will highlight their part of Saturday's concert. They are also known for "Too Late

Now." "Blue and Broken Hearted," and "With My Eyes Wide Open, I'm Dreaming."

Following the death of bandleader Russ Morgan, his son Jack picked up the baton and has been leading his father's dance orchestra on tours and in concert appearances in Las Vegas.

McNeely night canceled

Halftime activities tonight honoring ex-Pampa High basketball coach Clifton McNeely and former players have been postponed until Feb. 18, according to Harvester head coach Garland Nichols.

McNeely coached in Pampa for 13 years, leading the Harvesters to four state titles. Pampa had three unbeaten seasons under McNeely. He now lives in Irving where he is Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent of Schools.

"We're just afraid a lot of people wouldn't be able to make it because of the snow," Nichols said.

A Saturday coffee for McNeely at the Pampa Country Club has also been canceled. A dinner and reception for McNeely tonight has also been called off.

Pampa's Feb. 18 opponent will be Lubbock Dunbar, who defeated the Harvesters, 63-61, in overtime last month. It will also be the final District 1-4A game of the season for the Harvesters.

Pampa's swim meet this weekend in Amarillo has also been postponed.

Pampa is scheduled to enter the District 1-4A swim meet Feb. 26-27 in Amarillo.

Dickerson may sign with USFL

DALLAS (AP) — All-America running back Eric Dickerson of Southern Methodist would prefer to play in the National Football League, but says he might sign with the Arizona Wranglers of the United States Football League if the money is right.

"I'm looking for a lot of money. I'll be honest with you," said Dickerson, third-leading vote-getter in 1982 Heisman Trophy balloting.

"My (pro) lifespan is too short. I'm trying to get the most (money) in the quickest, shortest amount of time. That's the main thing I'm concerned with."

Dickerson wishes he knew the outcome of the NFL draft in late April, in which Baltimore, Houston and the Los Angeles Rams have the first three picks, in that order. He thinks one of the teams may select him, and he doesn't want to go to Baltimore.

"Nothing against them, but I don't want to be in that cold weather," he said. Dickerson said he would go with Arizona — provided the contract was lucrative enough.

"If they gave me $3 million or $3.5 million over three or four years, I'd sign right now. There'd be no point waiting for the NFL draft because there's no way they could match that," Dickerson told the Dallas Times-Herald.

Dickerson turned down a 3-year, $1,250,000 offer from the Wranglers. Club officials confirmed Thursday in Casa Grande, Ariz., that they raised the offer Wednesday to $1.5 million over three years, but want a quick commitment.

Dickerson, the sixth pick overall in the USFL draft Jan. 4, says he won't meet a weekend deadline imposed by the Wranglers on the latest offer — a deal that would make him the league's highest-paid player to date.

"That's a lot of pressure to make up my mind in such a short time," Dickerson said in an interview with Houston radio station KIKK.

"I've got to decide if I'm

Nelson sparks Pampa past Canyon

CANYON—Pampa senior Mike Nelson proved once again why he was selected as the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame basketball award winner Thursday night.

Nelson scored 30 points and hit six of six from the foul line in the fourth quarter in the Harvesters' 56-53 win over a determined Canyon club.

The makeup District 1-4A game left Pampa with a 7-2 league record and 18-5 overall. Canyon drops to 3-6 in district play after giving Pampa quite a scare.

Canyon led for most of three quarters and by as much as six points before the Harvesters scored eight straight points to take a 48-41 lead at the 5:58 mark in the fourth quarter.

Canyon scored the final six points, four by Russell Schmidt, but time ran out on the Eagles as Pampa held onto its three-point lead.

Both teams hit better than 50 percent from the floor and 70 percent from the foul line, but Pampa made more trips to the charity stripe than Canyon the second half...and made the most of them. Pampa downed 10 of 13 tries while Canyon was two of two. That turned out to be an important difference in the game as Canyon hit two more field goals than Pampa the fourth quarter.

Nelson's scoring output was the fifth time this season he has hit 30 points or better. The 6-3 senior is now averaging 23.6 points per game and is scheduled to receive the PSHOF award Sunday in Amarillo College's Ordway Auditorium. Labry Welty led Canyon with 16 points while Keith Brock chipped in 12. Greg Allen, the Eagles' top scorer at 15.0 ppg, had only eight points after getting into early foul trouble. He fouled out late in the fourth quarter.

Phil Jeffrey added eight points and nine rebounds for the Harvesters while Coyle Winborn had six, Craig Chapin and Paul Prentice four points each, Al Buchanan and Randy Harris two points each.

Pampa's district game with Lubbock Estacado tonight has been postponed until Monday due to bad weather. The girls' varsity game begins at 4 p.m., followed by the boys' game at 6 p.m. in Harvester Fieldhouse.

Pepsi Challenge set this weekend

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Winning the pole for an endurance race is prestigious, but usually not a key factor once the race gets under way.

That's why Frenchman Bob Wollek was relatively calm after breaking his own track qualifying record Thursday to take the top spot for this weekend's 24-Hour Pepsi Challenge sports car endurance race at Daytona International Speedway.

"A race driver always tries to be the fastest. That's part of his job," the four-time Porsche Cup champion noted. "But winning the pole is not important at all for the race. It's really more of a reward for the team, the owner of the car and the sponsor because of all the effort they put into it."

Wollek pointed out that during the course of 24 hours of racing — from 3:30 p.m. EST Saturday to the same time Sunday — the only time that starting from the front is an advantage is the first lap.

CHERYL TIEGS

TOM SELLECK

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP)—Model Cheryl Tiegs apparently will be the cover girl again next week for Sports Illustrated's annual swimsuit issue, even though the magazine is trying to keep it a secret.

The blonde, blue-eyed model is still well remembered for her 1978 appearance in a see-through fishnet suit.

The word from fashion modeling and magazine circles is that Ms. Tiegs, 35, will display a $58 suit designed by Monika Tilley for Elton of California.

Sports Illustrated had no comment on whether Ms. Tiegs will be the cover girl.

"We'd rather keep it a surprise," said Gilbert Rogin, managing editor.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Magnum P.I. star Tom Selleck has filed a $20 million lawsuit against the National Enquirer over three articles, including one that claimed he carried on a "blockbuster" romance with actress Victoria Principal.

The libel suit, filed Thursday in Superior Court, contends "entire articles" were contrived on "absolutely no factual basis."

According to Selleck's publicist, Esme Chandler, Selleck, 38, never even met Miss Principal.

One article, published in November, was headlined "Here's the Poster Tom Selleck Didn't Want You to See."

Selleck's lawyer, Jay Lavelly, said distribution of the poster—a drawing of the actor showing him wearing only a pair of unzipped jeans—had been restrained by a judge as part of an out-of-court settlement with the company that released it.

Selleck's suit also is based on the Enquirer's references to drinking and partying by the actor, the lawyer said.

"It is the Enquirer's intention to defend this lawsuit as vigorously as can be," said Enquirer attorney Irving Younger by telephone from Washington, D.C. He declined to comment further.

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP)—Former President Gerald R. Ford is facing minor surgery to correct a problem created by an old football injury to his left knee that kept him off the golf course.

The problem forced Ford to cancel his annual appearance in the Bing Crosby Pro-Am Golf Tournament at Pebble Beach this week, said spokeswoman Penny Circle.

She said the knee has troubled Ford occasionally since a football injury in his youth.

Ford, 69, will have arthroscopic surgery Saturday at Eisenhower Memorial Hospital here, she said.

News briefs

DAY CITY, Mich. (AP)—A $2.85 million settlement of farmers' claims over livestock feed contaminated with the chemical PBB was "the best deal" for the plaintiffs, a lawyer for the farmers says.

More than 15 million contaminated animals had to be destroyed after Farm Bureau Services Inc. accidentally mixed the chemical with the feed in 1973. PBB, used for industrial fireproofing, also was found in human food.

The agreement, reached Thursday, sets up a $2.85 million fund for payments of claims, requires Farm Bureau, which mixed the feed, to forgive $350,000 in unpaid bills for 88 families, and allows the farmers to press suits against Velocid Chemical Corp., which owns the company that made the PBB.

The settlement must be approved by the farmers and a federal judge.

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Saying a child must not be caught in the "crossfire" between her father and her grandparents, the state Supreme Court overturned an order giving partial custody to the grandparents.

A lower court had ordered partial custody of 5-year-old Shannon Genaro for Ignatius and Marion Zaffarano after the girl's widowed father, Richard, refused to let her visit his parents-in-law alone.

But in overturning the order Thursday, the high court noted that the custody battle stemmed from a family argument and that Shannon "deserves a chance to grow up in an environment free of continuing hostility between family members."

DOVER, Del. (AP)—Gov. Pierre S. du Pont IV is seeking a special session of the General Assembly to reintroduce a drunken-driving law that was declared unconstitutional by the state Supreme Court.

The court ruled unanimously Thursday that du Pont did not have the right to cut funds for alcohol rehabilitation programs to $20,000 from $135,000 when he signed the measure into law last June. The court threw out the law, wiping out charges against at least 1,150 people charged under it.

Penalties ranged from suspension of a driver's license for 90 days to an 18-month jail term and a $500 fine. The state now must revert to its old, less stringent drunken-driving law.

WASHINGTON—John Anderson is thinking about running for president again, but the Federal Elections Commission says it can't tell him yet whether he would be eligible for federal campaign funds in 1984.

Saying the question really was not ready to be decided, the FEC voted unanimously on Thursday to duck the issue and take it up later this year in the consideration of all the FEC rules for the 1984 general election.

Anderson wrote the commission late last year asking about the possibility of federal funds. As an independent candidate in 1980, Anderson received about 6.6 percent of the vote and qualified for $4.2 million in federal money.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Scientists at Kansas State University have produced a cross between the tomato and the potato, according to a report in Science magazine published.

The team headed by James F. Shepard, professor in the university's department of plant pathology, got four hybrid plants—which visually resembled potato plants to produce sterile yellow fruit up to about an inch in diameter—"liberating a tomato-like odor."

The Kansas State researchers did not say if they tasted any of the "potatoes."

WASHINGTON (AP)—Fifteen organizations, including the Congressional Black Caucus and the American Civil Liberties Union, are calling for a special prosecutor to oversee the investigation of the killing of five persons at a Greensboro, N.C., "Death to the Klan" rally in 1979.

The Justice Department is now guiding the probe.

Mike Connor 669-2863 Irvine Dunn,

by Mary Ann Cooper

America's sweethearts, Luke Spencer (Tony Geary) and Laura Baldwin (Genie Francis) as they last appeared on ABC's "General Hospital."

Genie Francis, the young actress who gained national prominence as the notorious Laura on the daytime drama "General Hospital" and made her prime-time dramatic debut in the highly rated miniseries "Bare Essence," will star in the new NBC-TV series "Bare Essence," which will debut Tuesday, Feb. 15 (9-10 p.m. NYT), it was announced today by Brandon Tartikoff, President, NBC Entertainment.

Francis will again star as Tiger Hayes, a 22-year-old Californian who is thrust into a world of international glamour and corporate intrigue when she marries a playboy and heir apparent to a vast conglomerate that ventures into perfume manufacturing. She received national attention last year when she appeared on the covers of many national magazines, including Newsweek, People, US and TV Guide, in the wake of Laura's celebrated romance with Luke (Tony Geary) on "General Hospital."

Noted designer Luis Estevez will create the wardrobe for Francis and other female members of the cast of "Bare Essence." GUIDING LIGHT — Jennifer accuses Mark of having an affair with Frish but he denies it. Tony protects Suzi from the police. Floyd decides not to live with Leslie Ann. Venessa schemes to make Henry detest Quint. Josh and Morgan go to bed together. During an argument with Jennifer, Morgan blurts out the truth that Mark and Amanda had an affair. While driving in the car, Quint and Rebecca argue and drive over a cliff.

THIS WEEK: Will Quint and Rebecca survive the crash? Venessa tries to get Alan in trouble.

RYAN'S HOPE — Kim turns over Amanda's therapy tapes to Kirkland and Catsby decide to keep Amanda from regaining her memory because it can mean trouble for them. Catsby decides the way to do this is to drug Amanda. Kirkland is worried about an all night therapy session Amanda will have with Doctor Pagano. Kim tells Kirkland Amanda slept with Pat, and he is upset. Siobhan is propositioned by Ace and this angers Joe. Delia asks Roger for fifty thousand dollars and he agrees to give her twenty thousand for all the wine at the Crystal Palace.

THIS WEEK: Jill and Seneca discuss marriage. Catsby steps up her plans to keep Amanda from remembering anything. ANOTHER LIFE — Lori seems to be returning to normal after her con-

He scores on third time up

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — You can excuse youthful impetuosity. You can excuse the restlessness of a man in his early 40s. But that's about as far as you can go excusing a man for failing to become a success. And Robert Loggia isn't about to excuse himself again.

Loggia is chest-deep into what amounts to his third crack at major stardom here in the Hollywood vineyards. When he was young and brash, he starred in the Disney series "Elfego Baca," which did well, and he almost certainly could have used that as a springboard to major Hollywood fame and fortune.

"I turned my back on the offers I had then," he says, "and went back to New York. At that time (the late '50s) it was fashionable for frontation with Blue. Soil analysis tests at the Canterbury Office Complex site show the soil is unsuitable. Nancy and Vicki forge the documents to read that the soil is suitable so that they can get back at Gil. Russ catches up with Blue in a warehouse but is unable to kill him. When Blue rushes for the gun, it goes off however.

THIS WEEK: Vicki wonders what's wrong with Peter. Ben protects Lori.

AS THE WORLD TURNS — Margo loses her baby but Tom refuses to have anything to do with her because he thinks she had an abortion. John appears in court and causes the charges against Dee to be dropped. James has Karen's background looked into. Margo slaps John's face and runs out of the courtroom. Maggie tells John he is in serious trouble for letting everyone assume he was dead. James sees John and nearly faints.

THIS WEEK: John wonders how to make things up to Margo and Andy. Craig blames Betsy for his problems.

SEARCH FOR TOMORROW — Rusty resolves to break up Liza and Travis soon so Travis can father Aja's child and put Rusty, as the child's trustee, in charge of Tourneur Industries. Liza overhears part of Rusty's conversation with his lawyer concerning this but not enough to piece everything together. Brian rushes over to patch things up with Suzi when he learns about Kristin's "miscarriage" but is shocked to learn she is already married to Warren.

THIS WEEK: Travis and Liza have another fight. Brian drowns his sorrows while Kristin uses Stephanie to hold on to him. THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS — Jack becomes the loving husband but it may be too late to make a difference to Patti. Jack retraces Patti's steps and realizes she has reason to be turned off. Julia tells Victor someone is out to kill him.

CAPITOL — Trey is warned by Sam to make his marriage a family decision. Wally can't seem to get to first base with Ronnie and Brenda still longs for a permanent relationship with Wally. Larry turns the tables on Frank.

EDGE OF NIGHT — Raven is held captive by Mr. Snell. Ian overpowers Mr. Snell. Raven asks Ian what it is all about but Ian refuses to tell her until their wedding night. Miles and Jody are stunned by Nicole's confession. Camilla begins work for Gavin and is pleased that Gavin and Jody are having

New York actors to turn their backs on Hollywood. Besides, my wife at the time didn't like California."

He was a New York stage actor for some years after that, when he once again came to Hollywood, and once again the Big Time beckoned. He had another TV series ("T.H.E. Cat") and, for the second time, had a shot at the whole thing.

"But I left again," he says. "I was away for six more years, from age 38 to 44, in what I call my mid-life crisis. I don't regret that — I found myself during those years."

He found himself mostly, he says, through finding a lady named Audrey O'Brien, currently his fiancée, although they may be married by the time you read this.

problems. Sky tells Gunther he thinks Gunther killed Nora. Nancy is called away to South America.

THIS WEEK: Suspicion falls on Gunther and Camilla makes a move towards Gavin.

ANOTHER WORLD — Louis decides to turn himself in to the French police. He tells Elena he doesn't trust Cecile or Felicia. Mac decides to let Rachael have custody of Amanda. On their way to their wedding trip to Bermuda, Steve is killed in a car crash. Mac tells Ada he really cares for Rachael. The doctors tell Jamie and Mac that Rachael may be blind. Felicia confronts Elena about taking care of Louis's finances.

THIS WEEK: Calf and Cecile join forces to hurt Mac. Felicia warns Calf to stay away from Cecile. DAYS OF OUR LIVES — Neil decks Alex when he tries to make time with Marie. Stefano plants a Marlena look-alike dummy in her apartment with a knife in its heart to make her change her wedding plans. Marlena is determined to marry Roman, however, on schedule. Renee lies when she tells David she must remain at the DiMera house a while longer.

THIS WEEK: The wedding preparations are in full swing. Renee has second thoughts.

GENERAL HOSPITAL — Alan tells Monica that Susan's behavior is driving him to violent thoughts.

Edward warns Susan to stay away from Lila or else and Scotty overhears this. Susan stalls Tolliver and he gets upset. Jackie tries to reconcile with Robert but he tells her he's asked Holly to marry him. Finally, Robert convinces Holly to marry him so she can stay in the country. Lee finds out Scotty is behind the eviction and promises to fight him. Susan finds out that Scotty withdrew Jason's money and, in a rage, his Heather with a cane.

THIS WEEK: Jackie's heart is broken. Hand searches for Lu.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE — Asa manages to keep Brad from selling Bo's birthright secret to Bo by upping the ante and buying Brad out. Delilah plans the wedding but Asa plans to elope as soon as possible. Katrina is arrested for Stubbs' murder when cosmetic samples and shoes of the murderer match Katrina. Herb urges Katrina to tell the police she transported illegal tapes but did not commit the murder. Edwina and Gary make love but are interrupted afterward by a disappointed Marco.

THIS WEEK: Pat plans to join Tony in Beirut. Edwina is not over Marco yet. ALL MY CHILDREN — Greg moves back home to take care of his mother. He gives Tad tickets to take Jenny to a dance. Tad borrows the Martin car from Ruth but Joe does not like this and argues with Ruth about it. Tad makes a play for Liza but she turns him down flat. Steve confesses to Tom that he still loves Nina and doesn't know what to do about it. Tom and Brooke remember the good old days together.

THIS WEEK: Tad doesn't take no for an answer. Nina is upset by office gossip.

THANK GOODNESS IT'S FEBRUARY... MAGNAVOX REBATE MONTH

MAGNAVOX REBATES UP TO $100 ARE STILL AVAILABLE!

Time is running short — but we're still long on values and savings — as Magnavox rebate month continues through February 25th, with important savings on selected Magnavox portable and console color TV, projection TV, video cassette recording equipment and the Magnavision videodisc player.

If your old color set has seen better days and is up for replacement — or — if you're about to embark into the exciting world of videotape and videodisc — these Magnavox direct rebates will add new value, quality and enjoyment to your family's entertainment needs — while taking a load off your budget!

Stop in today, while the selection is still complete — and — while the Magnavox rebates are still available. But remember — Magnavox rebate month ends February 25th! So hurry!
