21-hour search finds Pampa girl safe

DeAnn Ingrum

Massive air, ground search began when she disappeared from Pampa's bull barn Friday

By JULIA CLARK Staff Writer

A 21 - hour hunt ended happily Saturday night at 6:15 when DeAnn Ingrum, 13, was found unhurt at a friend's house on the south side of Pampa.

DeAnn was the the object of a day - long search involving the Pampa Police Department, Gray, Roberts and Hemphill County Sheriff's Departments, REACT and numerous other

"We really thank everybody coming out and helping. There must have been two or three hundred people out looking for her today and we appreciate the heck out of it." said Gerry Ingrum, DeAnn's father.

Another family member observed, "Everybody was great about this. This isn't a cold hard town like some people say. We're just glad we didn't find her in a ditch."

The search began shortly after 9:15 p.m. Friday when Ingrum discovered his daughter was not in the restroom of the bull barn of the Clyde Carruth Pavillion. She had spent the evening currying her calf, getting it ready for the Junior Livestock Show now going on there.

Her father and friends and the Pampa Police searched the immediate area and on east of town trying to find the missing girl.

About daylight, Kenneth Gray of Gray Flying Service took his plane into the sky above Pampa and the outlying area in hopes of seeing her.

After twelve hours of searching, Ingrum turned to the media to get help in finding his daughter.

He came to The Pampa News about 10:30 Saturday morning to tell his story.

He said, "She is a responsible girl. She worked too hard and too long on that calf to just run off the night before the

In the afternoon, while the police and sheriff's departments were checking names and places in the search for DeAnn, Gerry Ingrum was with Gil Phetteplace, a neighbor, and Mack McCallum, a volunteer, organizing another air search. William "Woody" Mitchell, of Crossroads Trucking, heard about the search and donated the use of two of his planes. The pilots flew the airplanes in grid patterns both north and south of Pampa from White Deer to Miami.

KGRO and KSZN. Pampa radio stations, aired a plea for anyone going to Amarillo to stop by the Pampa News office to take pictures of the missing girl to the news media in our neighboring city. The TV stations were going to broadcast her picture and story in an effort to locate her.

Not five minutes after the plea was broadcast over the Pampa radio stations, Ralph Jackson called the News and said he was going to Amarillo and would be glad to take the pictures to the Globe News.

The Pampa News printed pictures and gave them to volunteers and the police and sheriff's offices to use in their search.

Expectant fatherhood could have prompted escape from jail

By JEAN TIERNEY

With a Monday morning date in court and his wife's baby due any time now in New Mexico, Larry Wellborn escaped from the Gray County Jail in Pampa Friday night.

By 6 p.m. Saturday, however, he was back in custody, arrested by state troopers who found him hitchhiking on Interstate 40 west of Amarillo. Gray County deputies planned to return their slippery prisoner to Pampa from the Potter County Jail Saturday night, Deputy Mike Wopperer said.

Wellborn. 19. awaiting trial on burglary charges, apparently walked out of the fourth-floor jail in the county courthouse by using the same trick deputies have used to open the elevator door when it has locked them out.

'He apparently jimmied the elevator door, which opens only from inside the shaft, with a coat hanger. Wopperer said. Deputies Saturday afternoon found a coat hanger and tennis shoe prints on the roof of the elevator. Sheriff Rufe

Jordan said Saturday that his deputies have had to do do that themselves a few times in the past; there are no coat hangers in the jail wards, he added.

Wellborn apparently then slid down the heavy elevator cables in pitch dark, landed on the roof of the elevator and walked out of the shaft onto the second floor of the courthouse building. Jordan said: "If he came down those cables, he came down fast."

From the second-floor hallway. Wellborn may have walked downstairs in the empty courthouse and past the sheriff's office, where the night jailer, James Smith, was on duty, and out the unlocked east door. Jordan and his wife live in an upstairs apartment in the courthouse, but deputies on duty were out patrolling. The prisoner could also have escaped through a window in the men's restroom in the courthouse or left through the basement door, which unlocks from the inside.

Wellborn was wearing white coveralls with
"Gray County Jail" printed across the back.

Deputies discovered him missing at about 8:45 a.m.

Saturday, when they took breakfast to their 10

In Jordan's 37 years with the department, only two other inmates have escaped: in January, 1960, two prisoners made themselves a key and opened the jail door from inside, the sheriff said. Deputies later found the key, which looked as if it had been fashioned from a tobacco can.

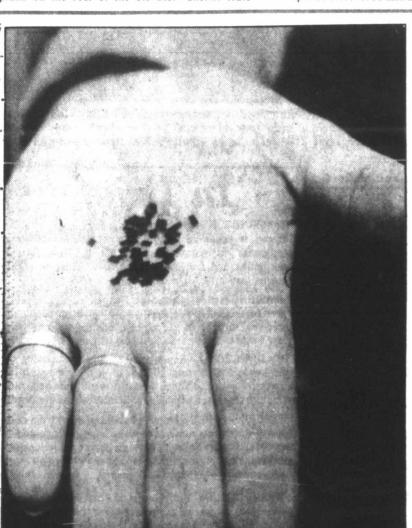

Wellborn, whom deputies said they arrested Jan. 14 climbing out of the Harvester Lanes bowling alley through a hole in the room, was awaiting trial on six charges of burglary. He had been in the county jail since his arrest, unable to post the $60,000 bail bond set for his release until trial. As a prisoner, he was well-behaved, Jordan said.

At 11 p.m. Friday, Chief Deputy Ken Kieth rode the elevator to the fourth-floor jail, checked doors and windows and prepared to turn the lights out for the night, as usual, Jordan said.

Oil rustlers beware! One producer is 'branding' its petroleum

By JEFF LANGLEY Senior Writer

The next thief who slips away in the middle of the night with a load of drip gas or crude oil stolen from a Panhandle lease might also pick up a secret message and a ticket to the state pen.

What spies use to send secret messages, a Panhandle oil company is using to try and send oil and gas thieves to jail.

Micro - Dots, tiny bits of photographic film the size of a typewritten "O," are being dumped into oil and gas storage tanks owned by Pioneer Production Corporation. The Amarillo - based firm is the first Texas oil company to use Micro - Dots, newly developed to prevent oilfield thefts.

Micro - Dots Inc., based in Edmond, Okla., developed the product, owns a patent, and incorporated last year. The firm's founders saw a need for something which would specifically identify oil and gas produced from individual wells. Micro - Dots dumped into oil and gas storage tanks and pipelines provide that specific identification and will help convict oil and gas thieves, the company says.

Microdots are as tiny as a typewritten 'O.' (Staff photo by Bruce Lee Smith) Stealing oil and gas is big business: "The problem of crude - oil theft is ever increasing. It is estimated that six percent of the average daily production in the U.S. is being stolen each year." Micro - Dot officials say. The company says the thieves cost consumers nearly two cents per gallon at the gas pump.

Ken Moss, the Pioneer official who made the company the first Texas firm to sign up for the Micro - Dots program, said thieves have taken oil and condensate, or drip gas, from several of the company's leases. He said the operators who take oil and gas from isolated leases range from "ole' Joe Blow and his next door neighbor," trying to make a few illegal bucks, to organized gangs.

Moss said one gang operating in Wheeler County and other parts of the Panhandle has a fleet of 10 to 15 vehicles used to steal oil and gas. He said the most common vehicles used are campers and vans with 500 - gallon tanks hidden inside.

The thieves drive up to an isolated lease and tank battery after dark, and in a short time, fill a tank with stolen drip or oil. The oilfield bandits seldom attract attention, even during early - morning hours, because Moss said legitimate work and activity at the sites are common 24 - hours a day.

Without a market, stolen drip or oil would be almost worthless to a thief, but Moss said numerous "unscrupulous" purchasers in the Panhandle and western Oklahoma make for easy sales. He said one Panhandle major - brand, service - station owner on Interstate 40 pays 50 cents a gallon for drip gas, "no questions asked." The station then sells the drip at regular gasoline prices to drivers on the Interstate. "mostly tourists," who probably never realize they bought a tank of drip gas, Moss said.

Drip gas, or the liquid condensate which collects in natural gas pipelines, will run a car, though the car's engine may "ping" and water in the condensate may rust the gas tank and internal parts. Moss said.

The executive said small refineries in Oklahoma also purchase crude or gas on the same "no questions - asked" basis.

"Elk City (Okla.) is a den of thieves," Moss said.
The lease manager said oil and gas thefts have registered a "definite increase" in the past year, which he attributes to a larger number of local unemployed workers out to make money.

"It's probably the easiest thing in the world to steal," Moss said.

Without Micro - Dots, "You dang near have to catch them in the act," Wheeler County Sheriff Doyle Ramsey said.

The need to catch a thief "red - handed" in the act of taking the liquid loot is because, after the fact, one load of oil or gas looks like another, even after chemical analysis, Moss said. Consequently, it is nearly impossible to prove a load was stolen and to obtain a conviction, he said

However, Micro - Dots "fingerprint" or "brand" the oil or gas produced and stored at individual wells.

Once dumped into the produced oil or gas, the Micro - Dots stay suspended in the liquid, the new security company and Moss say. The thousands of tiny pictures can easily be strained out through pantyhose or will break down and dissolve during refining. The photographic film from which the Micro - Dots are made is cellulose - based and dissolves under the heat of the refining process, Moss said. He also said the tiny dots do not clog valves or pumps.

After a well's oil or gas is branded with Micro - Dots, a sign is also placed in front of the site and warns that Micro - Dots are in use. The warning serves would - be thieves notice that the liquid is branded and acts as a deterrent. Moss said.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has subscribed to the Micro - Dots program for wells in Kansas, and companies in Oklahoma and Wyoming are also using the system, the manufacturer says.

Area law officers know about the Micro - Dots program, and "They are real enthused about it," Moss said. He said a meeting in January at Canadian of lawmen from nearly every agency in the Panhandle outlined the Micro -

Under Texas criminal law, a person convicted of unlawfully carrying a weapon "is entitled to the weapon seized upon request." But it adds that the presiding judge may withhold the weapon if the person previously was convicted of a weapons violation — one of Walker's previous convictions.

Walker was arrested at the scene of his wife's shooting. police Lt. Roger Duncan said.

The Walkers "were arguing over some domestic-type problem and he became enraged and shot her," said Duncan

Walker, who served one day in jail Feb. 16 for unlawfully carrying the weapon, repeatedly visited the court where he was sentenced to ask for the .32-caliber pistol.

Ms. Turner and Fuller refused to discuss the case. referring all questions to Shepherd, who said he was studying how the gun was released to Walker. Shepherd said a judge's authorization is not an "absolute" requirement in releasing weapons and other evidence. "It's a procedure that we follow when I am here. My staff is to exercise their best judgment in any particular case." he Texas law also allows a felon to keep a firearm "on the premises where he lives.

Appeals courts have ruled that people legally can carry firearms to their homes or to a shooting range and such an exception might apply to a felon transporting his gun home.

Walker, who had pleaded guilty to the weapons charge, was sentenced by County Criminal Court Judge John Orvis who was sitting in for Shepherd. Orvis was on vacation Friday and could not be reached for comment.

Shepherd said Orvis may not have been aware of Walker's previous convictions when he sentenced him to one day.

"A judge only hears what is brought before him ... It is up to the state to bring any background before a judge," he said.

Police records show Walker was convicted of aggravated assault with a prohibited weapon in 1967 and given a two-year probated sentence. A year later, he was convicted of assault with intent to murder and sentenced to five years

Walker was paroled in 1970 and convicted six months later of burglary. He received a five-year sentence and was paroled in August 1973.

He was convicted of driving while intoxicated in 1974 and received a fine and three-day sentence. He received the same sentence for a 1976 DWI conviction.

In March 1978, he was convicted of unlawfully carrying a prohibited weapon and sentenced to 45 days in jail. And in March 1982, he was charged with the count of unlawfully carrying a weapon to which he pleaded guilty last month.

for a wide variety of programs in Texas, including education, vocational training and food stamps, according to a preliminary analysis by the state office here.

Reagan's proposals "could have an extensive effect on funding of education programs in Texas" and would also "severely affect job retraining efforts in the state." according to a preliminary budget report released Friday by the Texas Office of State-Federal Relations.

For the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, Reagan has called for a spending "freeze" that would hold the overall increase in federal spending to 5.4 percent, the projected rate of

But included within that "freeze" are larger hikes for some areas - such as defense, targeted for a 14 percent increase - and cuts in a broad range of others.

The cuts would cost Texas federal funds for a wide variety of programs, though money for transportation, water projects and certain welfare programs would increase, the analysis concluded.

According to the report:

-Proposed revisions in student aid programs could cost Texas up to $35.3 million in net assistance for post-secondary education, or a 20 percent reduction from the current fiscal

-Texas would lose $24 million in funds for vocational education, or a reduction of 44 percent from this year's level, under proposed reductions and revisions in funding for vocational and adult education.

-A proposed reduction in funds for bilingual education would also have "a severe effect on Texas," according to the report. It said that under the president's proposal, Texas would receive $11.4 million for bilingual eduction next year. a reduction of 2 percent from this year and 30 percent from -The president's proposal to eliminate funding for the federal Economic Development Administration would cost Texas the $266,000 it will receive this year for publics works and development assistance.

-Texas would face a 4 percent reduction in federal money to enforce child support laws and an 8.4 percent cut in food stamp expenditures

-Funding for the Women, Infants, and Children food supplement program would drop by about $300,000 in the -Texas would see at least a $15.3 million reduction in the Police dog finds $1 million jewel cache

AMARILLO (AP) - "Risky" usually spends her working days at airports sniffing for narcotics. But when police detectives took the German Shepherd to a local warehouse. she uncovered $1 million more than they had bargained for.

Detectives opened a bin Friday that was singled out by the dog at the warehouse. Inside, they found suspected narcotics. Underneath the plastic-sealed white powder was a cache of diamonds and jewels that officers believe were stolen by a major ring operating in the Texas Panhandle.

"Some of the diamonds are large," Davis said. "We have not had the diamonds appraised but we are estimating their

"It's beyond the imagination "he said

The recovered diamonds and jewels will be placed on display at Amarillo police headquarters while detectives try to identify the items.

Detectives, acting on a confidential tip, seized a large quantity of a white power believed to be methamphetamine and arrested one man at his central Amarillo home. Amarillo Detective Captain Jimmy Davis said.

Donald Wayne Strout. 32, of Amarillo, was charged with aggravated possession of a controlled substance and three

> Davis said police expected to make several more arrests in connection with the case. He said police believe they have uncovered a major burglary and fencing operation in the Texas Panhandle.

The diamonds were removed from their mountings and stored in clear plastic packages or plastic vials, Davis said. Davis said the storage firm was not involved in the case.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Louise Fletcher Publisher

Anthony Randles Managing Editor

Why you won't read it here...

By this time, some of you have probably heard on the radio and television stations the story of a Pampa man who had supposedly been indicted by a federal grand jury in Amarillo on Wednesday for failing to file tax returns for 1976 and 1977.

You won't read it in this newspaper today, because there is no evidence it really happened.

Not that it isn't true, mind you, but no one in the federal bureaucracy in the State of Texas will confirm or deny it.

Here's what happened. An agent from the Internal Revenue Service came into this office Friday afternoon with a piece of paper (no letterhead) which gave the name and age of a Pampa man and information that he had been indicted in Amarillo Wednesday. It looked above-board, all right.

It first took two telephone calls to Amarillo to discover the messenger was indeed an I.R.S. agent. Yes, Agent Myers said, he works for us. No, I don't know who typed it. No. I've never heard of Mr. X (the supposed subject). Why don't you call the U.S. attorney's office, since they

But it says on this paper that you investigated it." Sorry, sir. Don't know anything about it. Never heard of the guy. Don't know who handled the case. Call the U.S. attorney.

The U.S. attorney in Amarillo didn't answer his telephone. The U.S. attorney in Fort Worth did. They had never heard of Mr. X, they had never heard of Pampa, they knew nothing of any IRS investigation and why didn't I call IRS?

I did, and they referred me to you. Well, I can have Mr. Kleinschmidt call you, but he won't be in until Monday.

Then I called the IRS in Lubbock (the news release said they had worked on the case for years). I was on hold for five minutes; then a man said they weren't allowed to answer questions and he was transferring me to Dallas

Dallas had only two people who knew anything or were allowed to speak to the press, but they might call me if they got in. Sorry, sir, I never heard of Mr. X, and I couldn't tell you if I did. Have you tried the local office in Amarillo? I see, well, how about the U.S. attorney's

So I tried calling Mr. X. He wasn't home and he wasn't at his business, but a man who was at the business said Mr. X knew nothing of any indictments and was going to be out of town for several days.

So maybe you heard all the details and the man's name, and how much money he is supposedly accused of not paying taxes on. Maybe you didn't.

But you won't read it here today. Until someone in that great accusatory bureaucracy accepts enough responsibility to return a simple telephone call, Mr. X's alleged charges will remain alleged, and his name and address won't be found in these pages

'He lost his lunch money...and went without'

Ticked off

In going through our daily life we always find things that tick us off. People always have a policy but can't explain what the policy means

My grandson is in the eighth grade at Pampa Middle School, and we have always paid our way for him to go to school. He lost most of his lunch money March 10, and when he asked to be fed he was turned down, so he went all day without food

All they had to do was feed him and then let him call me and money would have been taken up to them. I feel that this is an injustice because they feed so many children that can't pay, and then to have him turned down?

He asked a teacher to loan him 45 cents and was turned down. When I called about it, I was told that was the policy. How well can a child do in school if he hasn't been fed?

BETTY GODDARD

Cable snarl

Everyone has their own problems with the utility companies. Just as Cookie Bennett had problems having her phone connected, I want to testify about the cable TV company of Pampa.

I did not have cable TV for a long time, so I decided I would apply for service. In the latter part of November, I went to the Pampa office and applied for service. I paid for the connection charges and the first month's service. The lady helping me said I would receive some cards through the mail, and to pay my bills with them monthly. I never received them, but with the rush of Christmas I forgot about them. I took a week's vacation from 1-7-83 to 1-16-83. When I returned from out of town, I picked up my mail from the post office. After sorting through the mail, I found a notice from the cable people dated 1-6-83. It stated that they were going to turn off my service if I did not pay my bill in five days from the date on the notice. This was the only notice I received I went by the cable company and tried to explain to the lady that I had never received the cards, and had I been in town to contact them, when I received the notice. I would have. She indicated that if the late notice found its way to my house, then I must be lying about having never received the payment cards. I was told that I would have to pay the re-connect fee even though I was out of town when the notice was mailed. I wrote her a check for the re-connect fee and one month's service and left.

Well, the more I though about it, the more angry I became. so I went back about two hours later and told another lady to leave my service disconnected and that I would pay what I owed with another check. She was very nice and returned my check. She told me that I owed for the whole month because she could not pro-rate for the days already past in this month. She explained that I would receive a notice from Dallas, the corporate office, concerning my refund and that I could bring it in and get cash. So what do you do?

Well, I waited 47 days and nothing came through the mail so I went by to the cable office in Pampa. The lady who had helped me first waited on me again. I told her I had never received my credit. She checked the computer and said it amounted to $3.61. Then she just looked at me like she wondered if I wanted the refund or not. Well, by this time it had become the principle of the thing to me.

I asked her how I could get the $3.61 back and she said that she would fill out an application for reimbursement. After filling out the form, she asked me what the reason for reimbursement was!

I signed the form and then she told me I would receive the credit slip in the mail. I left and returned to work.

I am curious to see if I ever receive the credit slip and how many more trips I have to make back to their office. I guess that just goes to show that utility companies all have their own red tape, and everyone has their own grudge to bear with one of them.

High labor

Lot of people in Pampa quit taking the Pampa newspaper because it got too high. But don't blame the Pampa News, because working men and women priced themselves out of

When labor goes up, material goes up, and the News has to go up or close. No one to blame but ones that are out of a job. I am glad we have a good paper, and wouldn't want to live in Pampa without Pampa News or someone trying to get in

One man who wants to get in city hall said people living outside the city limits should not have anything the city has because they don't pay sewer or garbage. I wonder if this man would like to pay for somethings he don't get. like people outside the city limits going to Amarillo to get their dental work done, and he pays for it. I bet he'd change his

Lots of people don't care how much steak costs as long as tax people pay for it and he eats it. We had them kind in city hall for over 50 years. That kind is why Pampa didn't become a big city 50 years ago. Odessa, Texas, wasn't one half as big as Pampa, and today is six or seven times bigger. There are 88,206 in the city limits, and about 30,000 outside the city limits. Why? Because they have builders in city hall...commissioners that want to build Odessa, and the best city manager in Texas including Pampa.

Also, they have water outside the city limits, lots of industries, big payrolls, and they're building every day. Pampa doesn't have any. No city can grow without water and industries outside the city limits.

I would like to build me a new home in Pampa, but I'm afraid to as the city dads beat me out of everything I have put in Pampa. I put in the first city water in the Talley addition. The city promised to pay me for this water line, but wouldn't pay me for it.

I built a house in the 500 block of north Cuyler Street, and the city put a no parking sign in front of it. It is the only house in the 500 block you can park in front of or cross the street from. How would you like a dirty deal like that? You can get it at Pampa City Hall.

Now you wonder why the population keeps going down every year since 1950. That sign on the highway doesn't mean anything. It hasn't been changed in 25 or 30 years. There's no such thing as equal rights in Pampa City Hall.

Note of gratitude

My husband and I are both elderly and under the care of a doctor. The day of our first big snow, after the rain and sleet, we had an appointment with our doctor. When we left the Hughes Building, our car, like all others, was covered with snow. We had to stop at a drug store to have a prescription filled and two more refilled.

When we arrived home, I discovered we had forgotten one of the refills my husband uses. The next morning our very good neighbor Wayne Mitchell called to see if there was anything we needed. I told him about the prescription and he proceeded to go get it for us.

The following Monday, before the second snow, we again had to see the doctor and I parked on the east side of the Hughes Building. When we came out I could not get the car to back up the small incline off the ice. I tried to use the window scraper to dislodge some of the ice from behind the wheels.

Out of nowhere it seemed, came a very nice young man who proceeded to try to push the car out. Then I saw two more gentlemen coming from the Chamber of Commerce, or near there, and the three men proceeded to push our heavy 1964 Pontiac out into the cleared lane so we could proceed.

To all of the persons mentioned above and to other good neighbors who offered assistance during the two big snows and to our son and two young granddaughters who shoveled at least a foot of snow off our driveway and sidewalks, I say "Thank You."

MRS. A.J. EDWARDS

Why vote?

According to our friend, Mr. Webster, the definition of the word vote is "The legal right to express one's view in response to a poll or election of a candidate for office." With this thought in mind I recall an interesting incident I was involved in a couple of weeks ago.

While enjoying my lunch at one of the local downtown lunch counters. I and several others began discussing the governmental bodies and laws which all citizens of a community, state, and nation have to abide by. Of course, pros and cons were voiced from each member involved in the discussion, which I might add were all women. After all opinions were expressed most profoundly and the discussion ended, an elderly gentleman on the stool to my left who had remained silent during all the chatter tapped me ever so softly on the shoulder and said, "You know little Miss, I had to wait until I was 21 before I could vote and I have voted ever year since, so I have really gotten things in a mess." I laughed and responded, "Well Sir, at least you did vote and that is what really counts.

Later in the afternoon sitting at my desk trying in earnest to complete the mounds of paper work before me, I thought how courageous, concerned, and yet warmhearted the gentle, soft spoken senior citizen had been over a period of perhaps 55 years. Courageous because no matter what the outcome of the elections he voted in, he had taken the bad with the good and was concerned because he had exercised his privilege to express his view by voting. Should not every citizen be as courageous and concerned by following his example to vote? Because your vote does count and can make a difference. Perhaps ONE vote is all that is needed to achieve the betterment for the whole and that one vote was YOURS or MINE.

JUNE CHAMBERLAIN

Defense spending

The Daily News' editorial of February 9 entitled "Defense spending can't be slashed" came across my desk recently. and I welcomed your newspaper's strong support on this vital issue. Your persuasive arguments for rebuilding our national defenses as a deterrent to the real Soviet threat indeed could not have been expressed more clearly.

During the decade of the seventies, defense spending declined in real terms by about eight percent while non defense spending increased 100 percent. Defense has been starved, and we must pay the price by playing catch - up in many areas. In my view, our country can afford to provide an adequate national defense and an adequate standard of living for the socially and economically disadvantaged. In making budget decisions, I believe we must consider the security of the U.S. and defense of our vital interests as our number one national priority. To do otherwise, as your editorial concludes, is "an open invitation for mischief by our enemies:" on warp ad or youw

Midnight mix-up?

Last week an article was run on the front page stating that. 'Midnight the horse' was to be shot because the owners couldn't afford stabling out of town and the new Lefors law prohibits horses in town

I spoke with the Giffords (Midnight's owners) and they told me this story: The author of the article (without identifying herself) asked Mrs. Gifford what she thought about the new law. In answering, her disdain was evident and when asked what she was going to do with Midnight, she sarcastically said "I guess we'll have to put her to sleep.

In short, the Giffords felt that the article misquoted her for the sake of catching readers' attention and appealing to the public's humane sentiment; consequently, they were portrayed as "heartless" and inhumane when in reality, just the opposite is true...there was never an intention to destroy Mrs. Gifford cried a lot after reading that article. The newspaper lady did identify herself after the "interview" but the words were already spoken for her to rearrange as

In my opinion, it would be good for you to personally go talk to Mrs. Gifford and get the story for yourself because they have been receiving many offers to take the horse. board the horse, and buy the horse. The chiding that would naturally follow such a public revelation has doubtlessly upset them and if the story wasn't factually and properly written, a retraction and-or apology by the newspaper might be appropriate.

> FRANK BONNER Balko, Oklahoma

(Ed. note - We agree that if an error is made, an apology isdue, but Reporter D'Antonio says she has spoken with the Gifford family twice since the interview and no word of criticism was offered. In fact, she says, the story helped them sell "Midnight" to help clear up the predicament they were in. I suppose each person is free to read anything they want in a story. My impression was not that there was anything inhumane about the Gifford family, but simply that they had a problem and needed an answer. And D'Antonio did identify herself as a reporter before the interview took place. We're happy "Midnight" and her caring family have worked out their problems with the new city ordinance. "I'll bet I ate more corn than my horse did," said former Panhandle cowboy, Joseph William Shelton.

He was born in Eldridge, Gray County, in 1888, which nakes him 95 years old. In those days the basic means of ravel for a cowboy was by foot or on horse - back. When the cowboys were on a long cattle drive, a chuck wagon was essential to carry bedrolls, extra equipment and the all-important food and water.

"We ate bacon and beans, canned corn, dried fruit like prunes (a lot of prunes), peaches and tomatoes, and drank a lot of coffee. We had sourdough biscuits, but not all the time." Shelton said.

Considered standard pieces of equipment, barrels of water were always tied to the sides of the chuck wagon because " "there's lots of gyp water out there."

"Gyp" water is water that carries large amounts of salt and minerals. Drinking it can make man and beast pretty ill. Shelton pointed out.

Sometimes the "good" water wasn't all that tasty, he said, so the cowboys drank lots of coffee, made from freshly ground coffee beans. He said the best known kind was Arbuckle" which came in one - pound bags. The cook had a coffee grinder attached to the side of the chuck wagon and ground the beans each time he made a batch of coffee.

Even nasty tasting water was wet, so cowboys didn't gripe when it was the only water around. However, Shelton remembered when an Easterner drank the water from one of the lakes out here.

"He soon learned to accept what water was available," Shelton laughed.

Cowboys needed a place to sleep and changes of clothing when they were on cattle drives. Shelton's bedroll consisted of an 8 X 16 foot tarp, a pair of wool blankets - the rough scratchy kind - and eight quilts. The tarp was laid on the ground and the blankets and quilts were put on top of half of it. He said he used the quilts as a mattress and the blankets to cover him. He wasn't sure if the pillow was white or black after a while on the trail. The other half of the tarp was pulled up over the top of the bed to form protection against wind and rain. "It made a kind of lean - to, because it could get pretty frosty out there," he said.

Each morning the cowboys rolled up their bedding and put it beside the chuck wagon. "If we left it anywhere else, the cook didn't see it and instead of going into the chuck wagon. it got left behind.

He said he did have a couple changes of clothing, but 'sometimes we postponed changes - more likely 30 days or so." They would wait until they got to a town where they could get a bath and a shave.

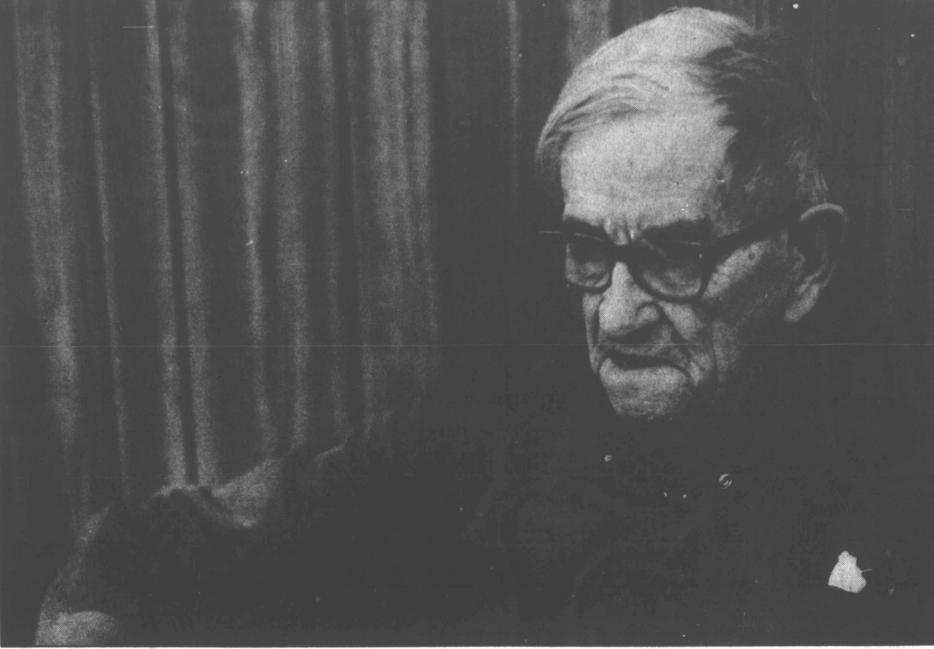

His standard outfit was long. two - pieced underwear. ordinary blue ducking baggy pants, a checkered shirt. Big 4" Stetson hat and boots. The hat was "real heavy, when the wind blew a new hat off my head, it would roll like a wheel across the plain," he said. Yes, he used it to water both himself and his horse, when necessary.

Shelton's daddy was a cowboy, so he grew up on ranches. He said when a new hand came to apply for a job, he had to prove himself a good rider and worker. The hand was invariably given the "special" horse. The special horse was always one with a "bad repuation," he was difficult if not impossible to ride. If the new hand could stay with the horse, he kept it until either he earned the use of a better one or left the ranch, Shelton said.

When Shelton was 14 he took part in a cattle drive from the Bar C ranch, north of Miami on Home Ranch Creek, to Dalhart. He said they drove 1800 head across the trail north of Pampa which ran "between the old red school house and Frank Carter's house.

The cattle were strung out in a long narrow line with two cowboys as "pointers" riding in the front, two more as "flankers" and two bringing up the rear. Shelton said on a 'cattle drive, one cow usually became the "leader" and the rest of the herd followed behind. Once in awhile, one would wander off the path a bit far and the flanker would bring it back into line, he said. As a flanker, Shelton said he "ate dust "for 19 days on that drive."

On the drive they were always looking for good grass and water. If they had gone for a few days without, when they did find some, they would rest over for a day, Shelton said. It was free range (not many fences) in those days and the cowboys were allowed to take down a section of fence for the cattle to cross over another ranch, as long as they replaced the fence. However, the host "didn't want us to stay too long" because a herd concentrated in one spot could damage the grass which was scarce.

The last night out, the cowboys and cattle stayed at a ranch outside of Dumas. In 1902 Dumas consisted of "two houses, the post office and a general store." Shelton

They were taking the cattle to Dalhart because it had the nearest railroad crossing and they were shipping the cattle to Montana by rail. Shelton said just 15 years before, in 1883, his father had to drive cattle all the way to Dodge City. Kan. to the railhead

Shelton's first experience with driving cattle down Hobart Street to the railroad cattle yard in Pampa came in 1908. He was working for the Wilson Poppin Cattle Company. It was near the end of April, he said, and they were driving 1400 head of cattle with eight men, including the horse wrangler. into town from the north

He remembered a fence running down the center of Hobart and turnning east, making a corner just north of the old hospital. The cowboys had been watching a "big bad storm" coming in from the northwest all afternoon. It was an "all hands in the saddle" kind of storm which reached Pampa about 10 that night. He said it "hit like a ton of coal" with a lot of lightning and thunder. The cattle were up against the corner of the fence. He was very grateful that he had a good "night horse that knew more about cattle than I did." The cattle miraculously stayed in the corner and didn't knock the fence down, he said

"Old John Goers was the foreman of that drive. He knew how to get a day's work out of a man," Shelton grinned. He figured out one time that he made five cents an hour including chuck and room working for Goers.

The headquarters of that ranch were in White Deer. The bunkhouse is still there, he said. It had a big room in front and seven smaller ones in the back.

Cowboys' lives kept them living in different places. When they were lucky they had a roof over their heads. Not all roofs were on bunkhouses, however. In the early days, when cowboys were riding line, they would stay in "dugouts," which Shelton said were more sturdy and warmer in the winter than frame line shacks. The dugouts were nice, he said. because they usually had a fireplace or cookstove and a dirt roof. However, rattlesnakes and centipedes, liked to share the dugouts and the men weren't too crazy about their roommates

Shelton smiled at the memory.

In the old cow camps, another name for line shack, it was 'okay to stay overnight, and eat what you wanted - but, you must DO DISHES!" Shelton said any person with any sense never left his dirty dishes behind, because if he did, he would never be welcome again. Of course, this was all on the honor

Bronc riding was not the same when Shelton was a cowboy, before the days of professional rodeo cowboys, as it is today. In the late 1800s and early 1900s a bronc rider was a working cowboy who could stay on an untamed horse - a

In Shelton's opinion, the "best bronc rider who ever hit the Panhandle, was a Negro man named Matthew Hooks. 'Bones' would clamp onto a bronc with his knees hook his spurs into the front cinch and hang on until the horse gave Shelton quit cowboying when he was 24, but at almost 95 years, he still vividly remembers his adventures and seems to enjoy telling about them to those who ask.

Dorm hit twice by arsonist

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) - An arsonist struck again at a University of Southern Colorado dormitory, just 19 hours after an incendiary fire in the same building injured 32 students and forced some to leap from windows into blankets held as safety nets. officials said.

The second fire was discovered at 9:15 p.m. Friday in a trash can in a second-floor closet of the four-story dorm. The fire was extinguished quickly after about 30 students were evacuated and no one was Authorities said they were investigating the possibility that the two blazes were related.

Meanwhile, they said they have questioned 11 people about the fire early Friday that injured 32 students and left four of them hospitalized in critical condition today.

The fire late Friday brought to six the number of arsons reported at the residence hall in the past 10 days, officials said. All were small fires set in trash cans, except for the blaze Friday morning.

All those questioned were dorm residents detained because of their past actions." Pueblo District Attorney Gus Sandstrom said. He did not elaborate but said no arrests had been

Campus police said they also held a man briefly for questioning in the second fire. then released him.

Asked about a motive for the string of arsons, Sandstrom said:

"It all depends on which rumor you want to believe. We've got revenge by somebody who's mad at the resident manager, we've got a love triangle, we've got a lust triangle, so take your

Pueblo Fire Chief Robert Drake said at least two fires were set early Friday in widely separated areas of the 200-foot hall of the second-floor women's wing. Several students reported smelling gasoline as they fled from their rooms.

Fire hoses in the wing also had been punctured and would have been useless if students had tried using them, he said.

Fireman arrived at the dorm about 2 a.m. to find suffered broken legs and ankles, but others escaped with minor injuries.

Many students already outside grabbed blankets and held them for others to jump into, an action Drake credited with "saving many lives."

Reagan urges a return to values of the past

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan called today for a return to prayers in schools and "the sound principles" of the past to reverse what he called a two-decade decline in American education

"It's time to face the truth," Reagan told a noontime radio audience. "Advocates of more and more government interference in education have had ample time to make their case, and they've failed.

Look at the record. Federal spending on education soared eightfold in the last 20 years, rising much faster than inflation. But during the same period. Scholastic Aptitude Test scores went down, down and down.

To strengthen national defense, modernize industry and move into high technology, the president said, the country needs a smart, highly skilled work force.

Associated Press Writer CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) - An innovative Juarez funeral home is selling "once-in-a-lifetime" burials at less than half the cost of a Texas funeral, thanks to the Mexican peso crisis.

But few customers have been sold on the idea that the burial services they buy from Salvador Perches for about $800 equal the casket, embalming and cemetery services that cost about $1,800 across the Rio Grande in neighboring El Paso.

'We've advertised a lot in the Juarez newspapers, but burials don't sell like shoes," Perches' partner, daughter Teresa, said.

Sales of the so-called bargain burials have tapered to a handful since the Perches Funeral Home advertising campaign started last fall.

"In these difficult times, save yourselves more than $1,000," Perches' ads in Juarez papers read. The funeral home now is considering television commercials for those who can't read. Ms. Perches said.

Perches funeral prices in this Northern Mexico border city of 900,000 start at about $800 for a metal casket, prayer booklet, required death certificate and cemetery service. whether it is in Juarez or metropolitan El Paso. The burial plot Comparable funeral prices in El Paso start at about $1,800.

Perches, owner of Juarez's largest funeral home for 25 years, says he can sell burials cheaply because the battered Mexican peso has fallen in value since February 1982 from 26 to the dollar to 150 to the dollar.

Now, with Mexico in the throes of its worst economic crisis in a half-century, domestic labor costs about $3 a day and Mexican-made metal caskets cost about half the price in the

Brothers continue climbing mountains because of the challenge

Associated Press Writer SEATTLE (AP) - In the Pacific Northwest, mountain climbing and the Whittaker brothers are synonymous. It was 20 years ago when Jim Whittaker became an American hero by climbing to the summit of Mount Everest. the world's tallest peak Jim's achievement brought him national fame. He received a gold medal of commendation from President John Kennedy for becoming the first American to reach the summit of the 29.028-foot Everest. on May 1.

The 6-foot-5 Whittaker and his mirror twin, Lou, started climbing mountains when they were in the Boy Scouts at Lou is co-owner of Rainier Mountaineering Inc., a guide service that operates out of Mount Rainier National Park. He was selected as a team member with Jim in 1963 but had to drop out because of business commitments.

The Whittakers are 54 years old. Jim, who is left-handed, was born 10 minutes before Lou, who is right-handed

Their sport is a perilous one. People who don't climb mountains have a hard time understanding why the people who climb them do, says Lou.

"I think," Jim explains, the biggest reason we do it is the challenge - the challenge to the individual. All climbing, technical climbing, is dangerous climbing.

WHEAT PASTURE BLOAT With wheat rapidly growing and there being some trouble with cattle losses on wheat pasture, I thought a reprint of an article I ran about a year ago would be appropriate at Wheat pasture forage with a high percentage of water leads to frothy bloat and grass tetany. Dr. B.A. Stewart, soil scientist at the USDA Conservation and Projection Research Laboratory at Bushland, and three other researchers determined this in a three year study in Texas and Oklahoma.

Frothy bloat and grass tetany usually cause two or three percent death losses on wheat pastures on the Southern Great Plains. This is bad enough, but sometimes losses jump up to 20 percent. Stewart says most severe losses occur in the spring after a cold winter when the soil is wet and temperatures rise fast. Under these conditions. wheat plants take up a lot of water and nutrients. This increases the level of potassium in the forage to above normal levels, which can cause greass tetany. The percentage of carbohydrates decreases, which in turn

Stewart and his USDA co workers, Drs. D.L. Grunes, Ithaca, New York: A.C. Mathers, Bushland; and F.P. Horn, El Reno, Okla: determined nitrogen (N), bloat potassium (K), calcium (Ca), magnesium (Mg). phosphorus (P), and total nonstructural carbohydrates in wheat pasture forage at Bushland and El Reno for three winters during the mid -70s. They found that N. P. K.

and water content of forages increased about two weeks earlier than growth increased yield of dry matter. bloat. This condition was at its worst at El Reno during the spring of 1978. The winter had been so wet and cold that forage sdamples could not be collected from Jan. 12 to March 14. Then it warmed rapidly, causing ideal growing conditions. The N and K in the forage increased dramatically. The K increased from two to four and one - half percent in two weeks. Unfortunately, Mg and Ca did not increase rapidly. This increased the ratio of K and Ca and Mg up to five, which is very hazardous to lactating cows.

according to Stewart. The scientists found also that N in forage increased

Rations above 2.2 are rapidly under these conditions. High nitrogen in forage leads to increased concentration of fatty acids. This causes foam formation in the rumen, which results in

In looking over all their data, the scientists noticed a common demoninator. When conditions leading to grass tetany or bloat came about, wheat forage contained a high percentage of water. In other words, measuring dry matter in the forage would be a good indicator for the hazard of grass tetany and

Although studies were not conclusive, Stewart and the other scientists think that wheat forage that has at least 25 percent dry matter is safe. There is some hazard when dry matter ranges from 18 to 25 percent. If dry matter drops below 18 percent, there is a good chance that bloat and grass tetany will be a problem

The scientists advise people with cattle on wheat pasture to watch for weather conditions leading to rapid growth after a cold spell and take the following precautions. Lactating cows should be put on other pasture, and young calves and feeder cattle should be fed some hay or other dry feed. Feeding cattle molasses salt blocks with an anti foaming agent will decrease the chances of bloat. These precautions should be continued until wheat growth slows and dry matter content of the forage increases. NEW LABEL FOR GLEAN ON WHEAT Glean was used with generally good results under an experimental label in 1982, however, the new label is more specific and restrictive. Glean can no longer be used on land that has a PH greater than 7.5. With a PH of 6.6 to 7.5 only one - third oounce per acre is permissable. Fields with a PH of less than 6.5 can receive no more than one half ounce annually. Glean be used for wheat and barley.

Test strips of other crops are suggested for a season to verify that the residual will not injure crops such as cotton, corn, sorghum and sunflowers. Sugarbeets are very sensitive to Glean, while soybeans appear to have a fair amount of tolerance.

With the limited applications permitted, plans to use Glean for controlling weeds in the summer - till period in a continuous wheat system may have to include some tillage. Other herbicides may be needed to control the more resistant weeds as well as the volunteer wheat under minimum tillage.

should be used only on land to New astronauts considered

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - NASA officials are considering taking applications this year from people who want to be space shuttle astronauts for the first time since 1980, the man in charge of hiring says.

George Abbey, director of flight operations at the Johnson Space Center, said the final decision has not been made, but the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is "seriously considering" reopening the application process. The agency will probably hire fewer astronauts than the 18 accepted in 1980, said Abbey.

VETERINARY SCIENCE PROJECT

We are trying to start a veterinary science project group. We need at least four participants for the group to form. If you are interested in a veterinary science project, call the Extension office for more information. GARDENING GREAT FOR 4-H'ERS

Spring will be here before long, and that means gardening time - a great time for 4 - H'ers.

Gardening can be a wholesome and worthwhile learning experience for 4 - H'ers that can result in lots of fresh, mouth watering vegetables such as cucumbers, tomatoes, green beans, watermelons, radishes, onions and lettuce.

4 - H'ers can take an active part in growing these tasty treats through a 4 - H gardening project.

Gardening is a good way for 4 - H'ers to help their families beat the high cost of living and provide good homegrown meals. Furthermore, a gardening project helps youth learn responsibility and about such things as seed germination, plant growth and development, pollination and flowering. Young people can also learn the basics of insect and disease control and fertilization principles.

A gardening project can range from a window box or pots and cans to a full - fledged backyard plot.

Plants grown in containers will have to be watered and fertilized more often than those grown in the ground. Soil should be a mix of organic matter. peat moss and sand.

Vegetables can also be grown around the edges of flower beds. A border of lettuce, onions, carrots or parsley is attractive as well as edible. Plant tomatoes, peppers or eggplants with taller flowers and put beans and cucumbers against a fence or screen so they have climbing space.

Whatever the size of the garden or the tupes of crops grown. a 4 - H gardening project can be a most rewarding experience

Contact the county Extension office to get started in your 4 -H gardening project.

The Baker 4 - H Club is planning a club gardening project. The group plans to raise 100 rows. 100 feet long of produce.

The Baker 4 - H Club would appreciate any help in getting this project off the ground or should I say, in the ground. If you would like to provide seed, fertilizer, or assistance and knowledge, please call Robert Douglas at 669 - 7896 or the county Extension office.

Brad O'Leary, Tower's political consultant, said it was the most he had ever heard of a senator raising during the middle two years of a six-year term.

"I would say that in the history of American politics no one has ever done it." O'Leary said. Official records on such fund-raising aren't available to confirm O'Leary's statement.

During 1981 and 1982. Tower's campaign committee also spent more than $800.000, a good part of it clearly aimed at gearing up for his re-election quest, according to the reports filed with the Federal Election Commission.

This left the committee with about $644,000 as of Jan. 1, with the major fund-raising season still to begin. And that figure doesn't include about another $1.3 million in support that's been pledged, according to O'Leary.

Already Tower is "sitting on a war chest of about $2 million," O'Leary said. "And we haven't begun to do any serious fund-raising.

Will Ball. Tower's administrative assistant, estimated that any statewide candidacy in Texas in 1984 "is probably going to cost in excess of $6 million.

Ball termed Tower's fund-raising efforts an "excellent beginning" but said that "there's much yet to be done."

Of the total raised by Tower in 1981 and 1982, a little over 9 percent — or about $134,000 — came from political action committees (PACs) sponsored by special interests, with such contributions increasing sharply last year, the reports show.

The reports show that PACS affiliated with major defense contractors and banking institutions were among the largest contributors to Tower, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and a ranking Republican member of the Banking.

Housing and Urban Affairs Committee. O'Leary said "we actively seek contributions from PACs the same way as we seek contributions from everybody else," which he said was on the basis of "this is what he stands for and if you want to make a contribution, that's fine.

As for PACs with an interest in actions of the two committees, they contribute to Tower "because they're the ones that are concerned with seeing him returned to office because he's doing what they believe in," said O'Leary.

Despite speculation that Tower might retire from the Senate - speculation Tower aides say was fostered by Democrats his campaign committee was clearly preparing itself in 1981 and 1982 for a re-election bid, the reports indicate

Over the two years the committee paid more than $218,000 to Communication Specialists Inc. of Austin for direct mail fund-raising efforts, over $159,000 for services from O'Leary's political consulting firm and thousands more on other activities and services related to mounting a re-election

The little courtesies of political life did not go unattended either, as reflected in $252 spent for souvenir ashtrays and $684 for other glass memorabilia, which Ball said were for presentation to assorted Tower supporters and guests.

The committee also paid $12.30 to the Federal Election Commission in January 1982 for a list of PACs, which O'Leary said probably was to determine which PACs contributed to Tower in 1978 "and who would be the first targets you'd go for the next election."

Tower raised a far smaller proportion of his campaign contributions from PACs in the past two years than did Congress as a whole, which, according to recent Senate testimony, last year received about 27 percent of its campaign funding from such committees.

However, the reports filed by Tower's committee show a noticeable jump in PAC contributions last year, both in terms of dollars and the percentage of total contributions.

The committee raised about $517,000 in 1981, of which less than $26,000, or 5 percent, came from political action

Last year, the committee raised slightly over $900,000, of which more than $108,000, or 12 percent, was from political

Among his major contributors were PACS sponsored by banking institutions and by the nation's large defense contractors, a number of them outside Texas, the reports

Included were contributions from PACs sponsored by such major defense contractors as Texas Instruments Inc., Dallas, $3,000; E-Systems Inc., Dallas, $2,600; General Dynamics Corp., St. Louis, $5,000; Lockheed Aircraft Corp., Burbank, Calif., $2,000; Martin Marietta Corp., Bethesda, Md., $2,000; Rockwell International Corp., Pittsburgh, $3,333; Textron, Inc., Providence, R.I., $5,000, and Grumman Corp., Bethpage,

Also included were contributions from PACs sponsored by such banking companies as Republic of Texas Corp., Dallas, $6,500; Allied Bancshares Inc., Houston, $2,000; First International Bancshares Inc., Dallas, $5,000, and Mercantile Texas Corp., Dallas, $2,000.

To determine planting time for most transplants, figure back four to six weeks from the average last spring frost date in Gray County, which is around April 20.

Some transplants such as cabbage, broccoli, lettuce, green onions and spinach can be set in the garden four to six weeks before th last frost date.

When starting plants indoors, use a soilless or synthetic soil mix available at garden centers or nurseries

Seed can be started in almost any type container such as flower pots, milk cartons or cake pans. Be sure the container has holes for adequate drainage. Other popular containers are seed flats, peat pots and peat cubes or pellets.

Once you've got the needed materials and planting time is at hand, fill the containers with the synthetic mix, firm it in well and then water thoroughly. Space the seed evenly, cover lightly and water again.

To improve germination, slip the container into a plastic bag and placing it in an area at room temperature but out of direct sunlight. Remove the bag when the seed first sprouts and place the container in sunlight.

The New Testament, or convenant, is the one prophesied by Jeremiah in Jeremiah 31:31-34. It is the New Testament of Jesus Christ, rendered effective by His blood and His death (Matthew 26:28; Hebrews 9:15-18). The death of Christ made His will, or testament effective and His blood makes the sanctification of sinful men possible.

The church of the New Testament is the one we read about in the New Testament. Jesus prophesied of its establishment in Matthew 16:18. It was to be built upon the truth that He (Jesus) is the Son of God. It is easy to see why, then, that belief in Jesus as the Christ, the Son of God is basic to redemption (cf. Acts 8:37; Romans 10:9, 10; John 8:24). Those who so believed, because of the word preached to them, were baptized for the remission of their sins and were added to the New Testament church (Acts 2:22-47).

From the first Pentecost after the crucifixion of Christ until the last "amen" of Revelation, we read of the church of the New Testament being in existance, a reality. It still exists today. The pattern for making Christians is contained in the gospel of Christ. When people today obey the same gospel that people did in those early days, they become members of the same New Testament church that those people were added to back then.

The identity of the New Testament church is easily seen. All one has to do is read the New Testament. There the one, true church Epperson said a charter membership is for the entire family and the member, spouse, and single children living at home not over 23 years of age are considered in the membership.

In an earlier public meeting, over 100 Pampa residents donated $250 each for the proposed course. Golf course architect Bill Cantrell said during the meeting that the new course could be built in early 1984 if plans continue to progress.

SMU officials 'ponder' NCAA investigation

DALLAS (AP) - Southern Methodist University officials are still pondering the National Collegiate Athletic Association's decision to launch its second investigation in two years into the school's football program

Form letters were received Thursday by both SMU president Donald Shields and football coach Bobby Collins, informing them of a "preliminary inquiry" by the NCAA.

The letter from from William Hunt, assistant executive director of the NCAA, to Shields "doesn't imply or state any official charges," university public relations director Kathryn Costello said

"It's based on some allegation from some unnamed sources, and unknown sources to us," Ms. Costello said of the form letter. "...We have no indication of the source of the allegations.'

WFAA-TV reported Thursday night that "at least part of the inquiry centers on circumstances just prior to signing blue-chip wide receiver Ronald Morris of Cooper, a small town in Northeast Mustangs' football success the past two seasons.

The station quoted "reliable sources" as saying the inquiry also involves a prominent Dallas banker and a Dallas attorney, both of whom are members of the Mustang Club

The preliminary investigation was confirmed Friday by David Berst. NCAA director of

"We'll interview various individuals to find out whether possible violations of NCAA rules occurred or did not occur, and then we'll notify the school about whether there is reason for a full investigation," he said.

"Anyone can turn you in for any one of a number of things," Collins said. "But I honestly don't know what this is about."

SMU athletic director Bob Hitch and Southwest Conference commissioner Fred Jacoby denied knowledge of the probe

The WFAA-TV report said Hitch accused other SWC schools of "gunning" for SMU because of the Ms. Costello said the preliminary investigation is routine, and is ordered any time a complaint is made against a college.

If the probe shows a need for "further real investigation, then a formal inquiry would be instigated," she said.

The university has won or tied for the league football championship the past two seasons. capping last year with a Cotton Bowl triumph over Pittsburgh. Its recruiting season this year was considered one of its best ever.

The Mustang football program was placed on two years' probation in 1981 following an NCAA investigation into its recruitment practices. SMU won the 1981 SWC championship, but was barred from taking part in the 1982 Cotton Bowl because of the NCAA restriction.

SMU repeated as SWC champion in 1982 and played in the 1983 Cotton Bowl, since the second year of probation did not include any NCAA-imposed sanctions.

Cougars win SWC title

Houson held a slim 32-28 halftime lead thanks to the inspired play of Olajuwon, who had two blocked shots, a dunk and 11 points in the first 30 minutes.

The Cougars saw a 10-point lead melt away in the final two minutes of the game as they missed free throw after free throw. However, the Horned Frogs, who came from 11 points down to beat Arkansas, started their comeback surge too late. With the score 60-57, TCU had a chance but Dennis Nutt's 25-footer was off the back of the iron. Larry Micheaux was fouled getting the rebound and hit two free throws for the Cougars to ice the game.

High-scoring TCU guard Darrell Browder was held pretty well in check by the close guarding of Young. Browder finished with 13 points, most of them coming from long range

Brooks & Sonny

Two 'rookies' eye the Hall of Fame

WAIKALOA, Hawaii (NEA) - Brooks Calbert Robinson Jr. and Christian Adolph Jurgensen III are too healthy looking, too fit, too close to what they looked like in their prime as athletes to be identified as Hall of Fame choices. Yet here they are, both heading for enshrinement this summer in their respective pantheons of the baseball great and the football great.

And positively beaming about the whole process.

Brooks Robinson is 45. and Sonny Jurgensen is 48. Clustered with a field of current performers at the American Airlines Golf Classic - ranging from Gary Carter, who makes $2 million a year playing for the Montreal Astros, to young quarter-back Gifford Nielsen of the Houston Oilers - they didn't look out of place. Only their perspective was different. And neither conceded that he couldn't still fit in forget the time warp.

'I feel deep down," mused Robinson, "I can go out now and play third base as good

It was the decline in batting prowess that did him in and forced him to retire following the 1977 season, during which he had been supplanted at third base for the Baltimore Orioles by Doug DeCinces.

"When I got into my late 30s," analyzed Robinson, "I lacked strength at bat. That was the difference, and that was the reason I quit.' In his first year of eligibility, he was voted into the Hall of Fame. And it's no wonder. In 23 years, all with the Orioles, he set a majorleague record of playing 2,870 games at third base. He handled more chances (8,868) than any third baseman in history, and had the highest career fielding average ever at that position (.971). He also had 2,848 hits, with 268 home runs amon

The transition from star athlete to middle age was relatively smooth for him. He doesn't miss the game.

Living in splendid isolation on Michigan's Beaver Island

By MICHAEL McKESSON Associated Press Writer BEAVER ISLAND. Mich.

(AP) - With a stiff winter wind blowing off Lake Michigan, the lighthouse on Beaver Island can't be seen through the falling snow. But when it's cold, there aren't many people looking.

Separated from the nearest mainland by 32 miles of water, about 350 full-time islanders enjoy their isolation

"There's no place else as far as I'm concerned ... no robbery, no rape, no murders," says Bill McDonough. 21, who helps run the general store his grandfather opened in 1933. "We refer to this as our own place - the rest is the United States.

Even an underwater cable that carried power to the island for a decade wasn't missed after it was accidentally severed in December. An old generating system keeps the island's power alive.

They don't really need the cable, and the weather won't allow its repair until spring.

With 58 square miles of land, mainly forest. Beaver is the largest island on Lake Michigan. Its village, St. James, is its activity center.

The winter's snowfall has been light in northern Lower Michigan this year, but on the island the weather has been more severe, and the county plow has been working

"This is the time we like it best." says Archie LaFreniere, who has lived here all of his 70 years. "You got security and you don't have the pressure of people running over the top of you.

In the summer, campers, cottage owners and tourists ride a ferry from Charlevoix. But now, when the weather keeps boats off the water, the island is quiet. There's no one in sight during a midday walk down St. James' main street. which rings the frozen harbor

Between December and April, groceries, mail, medicine, machinery and anything else the island needs must be flown in. A charter air company makes the 15-minute trip twice on most physical isolation is a buffer 500. By 1960 it was down to against mainlanders with their city ideas," LaFreniere says

Isolation was what James Jesse Strang was seeking when he led his Mormon followers here in 1847 after a disagreement with Mormon leader Brigham Young. Strang's community, which crowned him king. displaced the Irish fisherman who had homes on Beaver.

By 1856, when the red-bearded. polygamous king was assassinated by two disgruntled followers, his flock had grown to 2,000

But Strang's followers were driven from the island shortly after his death, according to island historians. The Irish returned, and the community prospered from lumber and fishing operations.

By the turn of the century, the population climbed again to about 2,000. Protected from the Great Depression by an abundance of Lake Michigan whitefish, the settlement thrived until after World War II. when overfishing and the lamprey eel depleted the bounty.

Sons and daughters of third-generation islanders were forced to the mainland to find work, and by 1950 the population dwindled to about created a new economic base. Residents who earn a living from the tourists in the summer become jacks-of-all-trades when cold weather arrives. There is a little lumbering, a saw mill, some beaver trapping, some construction work and even fishing when the ice permits.

Only a handful of farms are still being worked in the warm weather. "They ran the soil pretty well out," says LaFreniere, recalling that the island had 40 active farms when he was a boy.

"This is our unemployment season, but it's our play time," says Barbara Rakowski, 35 superintendent, principal and one of five full-time teachers at the 65-student Beaver Island Community School.

Islanders describe their economy as "recession-proof." Officials at the Department of Social Services in Charlevoix say welfare statistics support the

Texas primary feud still unresolved

By GARTH JONES AP Political Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas voters can count on casting their votes for president in 1984 at the same time and in much the same way they did in 1980.

An effort by Texas Democrats to move back election dates, as they promised in 1980, has been called off for at least another two years.

As they did in 1980, Texas Republicans will hold a presidential poll in connection with the May 5, 1984. primary election to select national convention delegates, which in turn will name the presidential nominee.

As they did in 1980, Texas Democrats will elect their national convention delegates through a system of precinct, county and state conventions.

There is a slight chance Democrats may order a last-minute referendum on the active Democratic presidential candidates, but the results would not change the results of the convention process.

Otherwise, there are no indications of any major changes in state election law by the current

We just decided that this was not the year to mess around with our election process," State Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle said. Earlier, he had urged Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, and Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman, to introduce bills that would change Texas' primary election dates from May and June to July and August, as they were two

With at least six active candidates for the Democratic nomination, the bill could result in a split among Texas Democrats as the candidates. "took sides," Slagle said.

Actually the State Democratic Executive Committee endorsed changing the election dates two years ago, and put it in the party platform. The measure passed the Texas House but died in the Senate after former Gov. Bill Clements threatened

In contrast, Republicans would prefer an earlier presidential primary date, "but there is no need for the state to pay for more than one primary election," said State GOP Chairman Chet Upham.

The long-running feud over primary dates goes back to 1959 when the Legislature changed state law to suit Lyndon B. Johnson's presidential presidential primary process.

ambitions. He wanted a primary in May so he could be renominated for U.S. Senate before he went to the national Democratic convention seeking the presidential nomination. He lost the presidential nomination to John F. Kennedy but accepted the vice presidential nomination. Apparently there will be no legislative battle this year over proposals for statewide presidential primaries for both parties as early as the middle of March, when some other states start the presidential selection process. "We definitely will have a presidential poll on May 1 (1984) in our primary with each presidential candidate's name on the ballot," said Upham.

Slagle said Democrats "are not at all interested in a binding presidential primary. However, we will leave our options open and could decide later for a non-binding referendum as we did in 1980. That can be decided as late as March 1984.'

Slagle said he and other state Democratic leaders are convinced the method of selecting a presidential nominee through meetings beginning at the precinct level is just as "democratic" as the

While he insisted that "all Israel will be saved" and that Judaism was the indispensable, vital root of its new branch embracing Gentiles, he continually challenged Jews, and also Jesus' immediate apostles, to accept that broadened view.

Of the 27 books of the New Testament, one of them, Acts, is half about Paul, and 13 other books bear his name, his epistles, or letters. They are the oldest of all Christian literature. He usually whipped them off in hurried, spontaneous style to the widespread congregations he started, dictating to a scribe, an amanuensis. At times he added passages in his own bold scrawl.

"See with what large letters I am writing to you with my own hand," he notes in one emotionally upset letter to groups in Galatia where intervening critics had demeaned him. "I am astonished that you are so quickly deserting ... and turning to a different gospel - not that there is another gospel!"

A candid, headstrong man, Paul alternately showed irritation and affection, sarcasm and encouragement. humility and pride. "Let no one think me foolish; but even if you do, accept me as a fool, so that I too may boast a little," he writes.

"For I am not at all inferior to these superlative apostles. even though I am nothing...Let him who boasts. boast of the Lord."

In his 12.000 miles of travel by foot, muleback or ship, he endured all sorts of adversities imprisonments, lashings, stonings, shipwrecks, bandits, apparent battle with beasts in the arena and finally, like his Lord.

"We know that in

It was sometime in that period of his absorption in Jewish studies that the ecstasy about Jesus burst in Jerusalem, bringing the broken apostles out of despair and hiding, to flood the streets with excitement about the Resurrection.

The book of Acts describes that spiritual explosion on Pentecost, 50 days after the Crucifixion, and tells of adherents of Jesus swelling swiftly and phenomenally from a tiny few to 3,000, then 5,000. Sadducean authorities were alarmed at the upheaval, and repeatedly jailed the apostles and had them flogged, ordering them to stop their teaching. But they kept at it.

Paul had never met Jesus in the flesh and, like most of the city populace, had scarcely been aware of the Crucifixion, so hurriedly and surreptitiously was it arranged by the Roman governor Pilate and his Sadducean collaborators.

75 consultants to speak at Pampa's Career Clinic

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Lifestyles Editor

Pampa's 19th Career Clinic, featuring 75 consultants on more than 80 different careers, is scheduled Wednesday, March 23, at Pampa High School. This bi - yearly vocational and career guidance program is sponsored by three civic organizations, Altrusa Club of Pampa, Pampa Chamber of Commerce and Pampa Rotary Club.

Years ago, Pampa Altrusans wanted to develop a career conference program to help Pampa High School students choose careers best suited to their abilities, aptitudes and interests - a program that would let students know about job opportunities and required qualifications.

The first Career Clinic was held in 1959. Later the Rotary Club and Chamber of Commerce joined in sponsoring the Keynote speaker and consultants are carefully selected to assist and encourage students in selecting their life work.

Consultants volunteer their time to present detailed information on their respective fields. Professions, private schools, universities, special state schools, governmental departments, Armed Forces and homemakers are all represented in the clinic.

O. A. (Bud) Ham is scheduled to appear as keynote speaker for the 19th Career Clinic. Ham is president of Management -Communications Consultants for the Professions, Inc., of

He is currently publisher of "Alternatives," a monthly learning journal for health professionals on management, personal growth, communications and philosophy development. In addition, Ham is sponsor and director of Team Development Workshops for Self Management.

Previously Ham was management communications instructor for the University of Colorado's department of continuing education in Denver and served as manager, consultant and training director for Mountain Bell Telephone

A few of the more than 80 careers to be covered at the clinic include: aeronautics, presented by Bobby A. Jones of

Most 8-year-olds are interested in playing and going to school and such things, but one Pampa boy took a little time out to do something positive for his country.

Tommy Moen, son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Moen of Pampa, wrote President Ronald Reagan recently, just to let the President know what he thought about things. The text of Tommy's letter follows:

"Dear Mr. President Reagan, My name is Tommy Moen. I am an 8 year old boy and I am in 2nd grade at Austin Elementary School in Pampa, Texas. I am interested in helping to make America a better place to live and work. I want to thank you for trying so hard to correct the problems that are hurting the American people. I am proud of you. I want to offer my help to you, so just call on me when you need me.

Peak chic

To keep your working image professional and polished, yet pretty, here are five good tips. One: Soften a business suit with a feminine touch - a lacecollared blouse, for instance. Two: Wear a subtle fragrance; don't overwhelm colleagues with a too-powerful perfume. Three: Keep your posture perfect; you'll look more confident and attractive. Four: Keep your makeup balanced; too much looks unprofessional, too little makes you look washed out. Opt for soft, natural colors. Five: Wear your hair in a style that will stay neat all day. For long hair, pull it back or wear it up, but make sure to tame straggly ends to avoid an unkempt appearance.

High brow

To shape beautiful brows, a good pair of tweezers is essential. Here's how to find a good pair: check that the points meet. The inside surface should be roughened somewhat so you can get a good grip on tiny, slippery hairs. Hold the tweezers in your hand to check for balance. Wondering what's best - pointed, slanted or straight across? Each has advantages. Pointed ends provide the most precision, but can be hard to manipulate. Slanted ends are easier to handle, won't pinch skin. Straight ends are easiest to use, but be careful you don't pinch yourself!

Cold comfort

When the sniffle season hits, even the stars aren't immune. Television actress Madge Sinclair fights back with her own special pampering: "I brew a spe-cial Jamaican herb tea," she explained to Beauty Digest magazine. "and I add lots of honey, lemon and splash of rum. Then, while the tea steeps, I take a hot shower and let the steam clear up any congestion. After, I slip into bed, cover up, sip my tea, and sweat like crazy! My cold is usually gone in no

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A lot of people think that if you're in show business you stay married for about an hour and a

To make a marriage work, you have to have more going for you than just "love." You have to like and respect each other.

In our case, Jack and I are best friends; we have to be. We've been married for 28 years and haven't been apart for more than a few days.

In order to get along with your guy, you have to play his game. If he likes watching sports, start off the game by sitting on his lap. If he likes to eat, learn to be a good cook. If he gets sick, nurse him as only you can. Instructions and prescriptions are great, but he needs you.

For the past 16 years, I've performed in over 60 different cities, a real cross section of America, and let me tell you, the insecurities and uncertainties about marriage are the same in Chicago, Houston, New York and San Francisco.

The song says, "Woman needs man and man must have his mate" - well, girls, work at it! A lot of marriages break up because people get bored. I say, "Girls, get more interested in parlor, bedroom and bath!" Love, MITZI GAYNOR (BEAN)

DEAR MITZI: With all the letters I get from losers in the marriage game, how refreshing to hear from a winner! Your letter made my day.

DEAR ABBY: I have a neighbor who is very nosy when she comes over to my house. Right away she starts looking in my cupboards and closets. And even my drawers! I told her I didn't like it, but she doesn't listen to me Now I am thinking maybe I should tell her that if she doesn't stop inspecting my house she can't come over anymore, but she is one of my best friends and I feel that it would be hard for me to tell her this.

CONFUSED (AGE 10)

DEAR CONFUSED: You have a decision to make. You can tell your friend that if she wants to continue to come to your house, she will have to stop looking in your closets, cupboards and drawers. And if she does it anyway, stick to your word and end your friendship.

Or, let her do as she pleases and put up with it. If you learn at age 10 how to prevent people from pushing you around and taking advantage of you, you will have learned a valuable lesson that some people never learn. You are within your rights to demand privacy. Don't be a softie.

DEAR ABBY: To settle an argument, I am asking for your opinion. In the event of an evening wedding, which seems to be so popular these days, the groom is left with a full day to do as he pleases. So to pass the time, he has a few (maybe five) beers - two hours before the wedding is

HAWTHORNE, CALIF.

DEAR HAWTHORNE: If the wedding must be scheduled in the morning in order to ensure the sobriety of the groom, the marriage is in trouble from the first "I do."

DEAR ABBY: I was married for 28 years, then I got a divorce. He married again but I never did. He just passed away, and I was wondering if I'm a widow now, or am I

This is very important to me. My husband's wife is still living if that makes a difference.

Mark March 16 on your calendar now. That's the day Health Care Express, from the Knoxville, Tenn., World's Fair, will be at the mall. It's your chance to see, first hand, a walking. talking robot. There'll be health care computers to be punched for quizzing. You ask and the computer answers your health questions. Local coordinators are Walt Johnson, Coronado Community Hospita: Joe Zilmer, American Heart Association; Ed Sweet, Cancer Society; Linda Broadfoot, Kidney Foundation and Fred Parker, Lions Club for glaucoma testing. Take time to see it all.

Let me tell you why a lot of Rotarians may be planning a vacation to Bali. Brian Hanson planted the seed when he narrated his own slide presentation of a trip to Bali at a recent club meeting. The slides were breath - taking and Hanson's narration equally good.

If you will share pictures of last year's tornado, please get in touch with Rick Melanson evenings at 669 - 2228.

About 20 employees of the hospital met for a nonstructured dutch - treat "payday party" at a pizza place here last week. What a great way to have fun! After a recent skiing trip, they are now talking up a trip to Six Flags early next summer.

Chatter that matters is what we might call the vising done the table - hopping way at Pampa eateries. Lots of people visit that way with Frankie Jones, Doris and Houston Price. Add to the list Willie and Otto Mangold. Willie looked so spiffy the other night in navy spiked with a red posy at the neck. Ann and Roy Kay are always there, too.

Dorothy Jeffries is always neatly dressed and coiffed - that gorgeous white hair! A double trio - Ann and Jim Campbell. Donna and E. R. Sidwell, Ann and Hoby Fatheree - had a nothing special but lots of fun time a few nights ago. Their laughter was contagious. Nell and George Clark enjoyed being out. Nell looked especially nice in a beige pantsuit. Her accessories always match.

Saw three beautiful black - haired children - two boys and a girl, all look alikes - eating out Saturday night just outside town. Each competed for "Nanny" Billie Bruner's attention. Parents are Diana and Denver Bruner of Woodward, Okla.

Saw Betty (Mrs. Joe) Gordon in an unusual combination of color and texture - a tan (bronze, maybe) ultra suede jacket bound in black crepe to match the pleated skirt.

Congratulations to Drs. Teresita and Rene Grabato who

S-P-R-I-N-G - when the warm sun breaks the cold grip of celebrated their wedding anniversary last week. Their Virginia Taylor and Lisa Eastham have returned to the information desk at the hospital as volunteers. Mike Brent, health teacher at PHS played in a golf tournament, place unknown. Saw Earl Musgrave, a father, helping out with a soccer team at the Inez Carter Park.

Interest in long distance running is growing. Keep your eye on Brad Love, a freshman whose time was only seconds from the winning varsity runner in last week's Top O' Texas relays. Bruce Belcher and Tom Byrd run with some of the youthful runners like Steve Martin and Richard Farrah. Running is part of Tom's successful weight reduction plan. He's lost about 50 pounds. Organizational plans are in the making for encouraging groups in fun running and walking - like for those recovering from heart attacks.

Virginia and Jerry Teel are two transplanted Kansans who have had no trouble becoming Texanized.

Kunning safely

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) - Runners along roadways can reduce the potential for accidents with passing motorists by observing some common sense precautions, advises an expert on the popular American pastime.

Mickie Miller, L'Eggs race director, cautions runners to: run single file on public streets and roads: run against traffic; keep to the shoulder of the road, and at night, wear both front and back reflective gear. She offers these safeguards in light of an increasing frequency of mishaps involving runners and motor vehicles that has prompted at least one community, Mill Neck, N.Y., to enact an ordinance that sets rules for runners and punishment for violators, including fines and jail terms

During this March - National Nutrition Month - special emphasis is being given to children's nutrition. It is the parent's responsibilty to see that children are well nourished.

School years are nutritionally important for the child. Outwardly, the child between 6 and 12 is growing slowly. However, the child should be storing adequate nutrients for the period of rapid growth during adolescence.

An adequate diet is needed throughout the school years to provide building materials for growth and energy for vigorous physical activity. Nutrient needs are usually the same for boys and girls until the age of 9 years. Then boys usually need more food than girls because boys generally are more active and have greater muscle development.

Children probably omit breakfast more than any other meal. However, breakfast really means "breaking a fast" as the body has been without food for 12 hours or more.

Studies have been conducted on the effect of breakfast on school - age children. These studies indicate that children who eat breakfast made sharper decisions, became less tired and work and play longer than children who omit breakfast.

A good breakfast furnishes about one - four of the day's intake of calories and nutrients. Many breakfasts can be made the night before with only a few minutes of cooking or heating up required the next morning.

Breakfast doesn't have to be a world of cereal, pancakes, bacon and eggs. Try a little variety with foods such as leftover spaghetti, soup, pizza, hamburger, grilled cheese sandwich, or a peanut butter and jelly sandwich on whole wheat bread. Also, don't forget to add some fruit and a little milk!

Another trend in today's meal habits for children as well as adults is an increase in snacking. Frequent small meals are replacing the traditional three. If this is the trend in your family - don't fight it. Eat nutritious snacks. Snacks are an important source for daily nutrient and calorie intake.

Although habit influences food selection more than health, eating healthy snacks can be a choice, not a chance. Start now helping children select nutritious snacks.

Nutritious snacking doesn't require special foods. Snacks that are high in nutrients, but low in cost are the best values. You may select good snacks from meat and protein foods. These are good for body building and repair. Try peanut butter, nuts or sunflower seeds, hard cooked eggs, jerky, pizza, tacos, hamburgers, kabobs, hot dogs or sandwiches.

Fruits and vegetables are good snack choices because they are packed with vitamins A and C and provide some fiber as well. Some tasty choices are fresh fruits and vegetables, dried fruits, juices and soups.

Whole grain or enriched breads and cereals provide us with needed B vitamins, iron and some protein. Snacks you can try include nutri - cookies such as oatmeal, peanut butter and granola, cereal snack mix, crackers and popcorn.

Finally, don't forget the milk and cheese products as great snacks full of calcium, protein and riboflavin. Try yogurt plain or frozen, milk, cottage cheese and cheese wedges, slices

Apple pie with a French twist

Mom's apple pie has a different mode of preparation and appearance for the French Usually it appears in the form of an apple tart made in a flan pan. The flan pan or tin is a special round pan with a ring set on a metal base. This helps control the shape of the pastry, which usually is filled with a custard or cream.

This French apple tart takes a cue from the flan but can be made in a 9-inch pastry shell. Thin slices of tart apple top a base of applesauce

Serve hot or cold, with ice cream or whipped cream.

Russian and Greek dishes add to regional cooking

Sociologists now conclude that the great American melting pot has not really melted after all. Rather it has melded and merged.

This is particularly obvious in the regional cookery of our country which is a potpourri of infinite variety. In various regions where numerous different cultures have been more or less assimilated over the years there is still a strong sense of iultural heritage that results in a truly cosmopolitan cuisine.

Typical of the array of ethnic food indigenous to our regional cookery are these recipes from the Pepperidge Farm test kitchen. One. a savory cheese spread made with farmer cheese, seasoned with garlic and dill and dotted with finely chopped walnuts. is a derivation of Russian Zakuski, a word that translates into "appetizers" in the old country. The cheese spread is served on crackers and small rounds of pumpernickel and rye slices.

Another classic recipe is for Greek Shrimp with Feta Cheese. This dish is a marvelous melange of flavors: shallots and garlic. feta, lemon, parsley and basil. Cubes of codfish and shrimp swim in herb flavored tomato sauce while on top small pastry cutouts in the shape of little fish add an intriguing crown to the whole dish. These are made from marvelously convenient sheets of frozen puff pastry.

Ernie Barnes links art and athletics miserable.

NEW YORK (NEA) One thing kids do is make other kids miserable, and when Ernie Barnes, 44, was growing up in Durham, N.C. - a big, heavy, quiet black boy who loved art and the classical records handed down by the white family his mother worked for the other kids made him

In elementary school, they beat him up. In junior high, they taunted him for not trying out for football. Finally, in the ninth grade, encouraged by a teacher, he took action. He exercised, overcame his fear of pain, of failure, and made the damn football team. By the six years he battered his body, his hands, for the Baltimore Colts, the San Diego Chargers and the Denver Broncos.

Still, he says, "I never left art. When I was a player, I was always observing and that enhanced my perceptions as an artist.

In the end, that aesthetic eye won out and he can pinpoint the moment. "I was an offensive guard with the Broncos and we were play-ing Houston. I pulled out to lead a sweep and by the way the man I was assigned to relaxed, I knew something had happened. A fight had broken out, but I wasn't concerned about it. It had rained the night before and the sun was breaking died areas on the uniforms, and I said, damn, that's beautiful! I knew then it was all over being a player. I was more interested in art.

But his wife was pregnant with their third child and, he says, "How could I begin an art career and make money next week which was what we needed? It was frighten-Eventually, an idea materialized. "I went to the AFL and said I wanted to be their official artist. I saw myself as an ambassador who'd show future draft choices that, after football, they didn't have to become handshakers."

And the AFL said, fine; mostly, he says, because what I was talking about. Most of them were drinking beer in the back of the room." Sonny Werblin, room." Sonny Werblin, however, had listened and Barnes says, "After the deal fell through, he arranged for me to bring my work to an art gallery in New York. I had no idea why. When I got there, I met a sportswriter who said, don't you know there are art critics here evaluating your work? I damn near died. Finally, Sonny came out and said expressive painter since George Bellows, who paint-

the American sports

Sonny put me on salary at $14,500 a year, a thousand more than I had made as a player, just to paint. In Los Angeles, I immersed myself in my work. I did football paintings all from my head and I studied Michelangelo and all the Dutch masters. I was in ecstasy. I didn't care how good I was. I always figured what I liked, other people would like."

That was in 1966. Since then, Barnes has been painting all kinds of subjects: a comedian isolated on a littered stage; Simma, the old Jewish woman who and street scenes; the disc jockey: "It was raining in Atlanta one time and they were playing 'A Rainy Night in Georgia' on the radio, but the disc jockey's voice was all wrong. I imagined a kind of Pearl Bailey who'd make that night work out for everyone whose dates had been ruined by the weather." No matter the subject, they all have their eyes closed because, he says, "Insight is what I'm talking about

Mornings in Los Angeles, around 10:30, he enters his studio at home. "It's a dirty room and I love going in there," he says, laughing floor is dirty with cigar butts, some weights and magazines. I like the smell of it, the oil paints. The walls are covered with notes, sketches, art books.'

Though there are three windows, the light is poor and he works under a fluore scent lamp, often until two or three a.m. "When I get going, ideas just pour out of time he graduated from high school, he had 26 college football scholarships to choose from and football, which he had never even liked, had seduced him. "You love it because of the band, the girls, the beautiful design of the game. There's no difference between art and athletics. They make their effect through rhythm.

The kid the other kids never chose for their teams was now part of one and that meant everything. So, after graduating from North Carolina Central University where he majored in art, Barnes, 6 foot 2 1/2, 263 pounds, became a pro. For

Six is Conway's lucky number

By JERRY BUCK AP Television Writer LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I think this is my sixth TV series," Tim Conway is saying, "and I know it's going to succeed because six is my lucky number." He pauses. His cherubic face is a blank. "Then again, if it doesn't make it, seven is also my lucky number."

Conway stars in a new CBS comedy series called "Ace Crawford, private eye.' which makes its debut Tuesday. He's a detective of the trench-coat school who solves his cases in the accidental manner of Inspector Clouseau.

Conway starred for four years as Ensign Charles Parker on "McHale's Navy" and spent another four years

By JOE EDWARDS Associated Press Writer NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)

- David Clayton-Thomas. former lead singer for Blood, Sweat & Tears, has taken what he calls "a left turn" in his career by recording some mellow country music.

'I've wanted to do this kind of thing for years, but couldn't get the credibility to pull it off," says the 41-year-old Clayton-Thomas

The concentration has been on ballads. "Anything done in Nashville comes out with a certain country feel to it. It's contemporary country music. good country music.' Clayton-Thomas said

The nine-member Blood Sweat & Tears fused jazz and rock music in the late '60s and early '70s to become one of the most innovative and successful bands in history. Six albums sold more than a million copies and the group won five Grammy awards But the string of hits began to stop after the 1971 album, 'Blood, Sweat and Tears 4."

Still, before the group broke up two years ago, they left the music world with a legacy: 'Spinning Wheel," "You've Made Me So Very Happy,"

Investing through personality to be optimistic or pessimistic in our day - to day activities? Remember two people looking at a partially filled glass of water - one sees it half full. the other, half empty. The optimist sees a stock that has dropped some in its market value as just correcting itself for a giant move forward, another buying opportunity. The pessimist sees the drop in price as the first step toward a total loss. So you can see that one who is pessimistic might be uncomfortable on an aggressive growth stock which makes radical moves up and down. Thus, he should set goals on

Trinity River may cause flood in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) - A city official here says that the banks of the Trinity River that wends its way along the perimeter of downtown have been so weakened by earth slides that heavy rains could open up a hole and flood almost 10,000 acres of valuable commercial land.

Ron E. Shindoll, manager of the 12-mile levee system built to protect Dallas from floodwaters that spill over the banks of the Trinity River almost every spring and fall, made the assessment Friday.

Shindoll said that a heavy rain such as an October 1981 storm, which pushed floodwaters 12 feet up the sides of the 28-foot banks, could cause a portion of the damaged levees to collapse and flood downtown property worth billions of dollars.

Included in the threatened area, he said, is the Dallas Market Center complex and the nearby Loews Anatole Hotel
