

'Warmline' is helping new parents to cope

PITTSBURGH (AP) — From thumb-sucking to temper tantrums, the Bright Beginnings Warmline has the answers, and it's just a phone call away for mothers and fathers seeking help in the A-B-C's of child-rearing.

"Parenting is hard work," said Marie Ford Reilly, Warmline's coordinator. The telephone hotline is designed to ease the burden on parents while helping to prevent child abuse, she said.

All parents experience negative and ambivalent as well as positive feelings toward their children and about being a parent," she said. "That's normal."

The Parental Stress Center Inc. established Warmline in November with funding from local groups to encourage parents to call for help before resorting to taking their frustrations out on their children.

It is one of three or four hotlines in the country for parents, according to Ms. Reilly. And it's the only one that doesn't focus solely on child abuse or neglect, she said.

"Our program is prevention-oriented," said Ms. Reilly, 35, a mother of two who formerly worked as a pediatric nurse.

"The plan was to make this available to the broadest possible audience," she said in an interview Thursday.

"Most people do not classify themselves as child abusers. What we want to do is help these parents at an early point in their parenting careers."

Since November, the Warmline has received more than 700 calls from concerned parents and grandparents of children up to 6 years old from Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio.

About 20 volunteers staff the Warmline's four phones in a donated office at Magee-Women's Hospital every weekday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., all of them parents as well as professionals in nursing, child development, social work or psychology. They have undergone 25 hours of training.

The average call lasts 30 to 35 minutes, and the caller does not have to identify her- or himself, although most do.

"Most of the time we really just listen. We're not into giving a prescription about how to do something. There's no one way to be a parent. We just let them sort out the options," Ms. Reilly said.

The volunteers will not answer any medical queries, although they refer callers to someone who can.

Most calls involve crying babies, according to Ms. Reilly. Others range from thumb-sucking, toilet training and temper tantrums to sibling rivalry.

Cain muzzles press, keeps public in dark

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

A Pampa judge signed an order designed to keep the news media and general public from gaining information about a lawsuit filed in 223rd District Court.

Judge Don Cain signed a motion Thursday that forbids parties to a lawsuit against the local gas company from filing their documents in public with the district clerk.

James W. Boleman IV is suing Pioneer Corporation and its subsidiaries, Energas and Westar Transmission Companies, for injuries he and his family received in a fire in their Pampa mobile home last year.

Lubbock attorney Tom Milam asked Cain to sign the order and said press coverage was causing "irreparable damage to the rights of these defendants to a fair trial."

Boleman, 29, his wife, Anna, 22, and their infant daughter were seriously burned in an explosion and fire here August 27, 1982. One day earlier the Bolemans had moved into their newly-purchased home at 634 N. Roberta Hours before the fire, an Energas employee turned on gas service to the house. An investigator for the city fire marshal later said that an uncapped copper gas line inside the mobile home was wide open and leaking gas before the fire erupted.

The Bolemans claim the companies are negligent and therefore responsible for the fire. A specific damage amount has not yet been filed in the case.

The companies deny all charges.

Cain set the case for trial August 29.

The order Cain signed Thursday was part of a set of pre-trial motions filed by Milam, lawyer for Pioneer.

Attached to the original version of the motion, filed April 11, were two stories previously published about the fire and lawsuit in The Pampa News. Milam said the stories "discussed in detail various aspects of the case and even quoted portions of the documents furnished and depositions. And further, in the same article one of the counsel for the plaintiffs is quoted and was apparently interviewed."

The motion Cain signed requires lawyers in the case to serve all discovery materials on opposing counsel or parties, but orders them not to file the information in the district clerk's office.

The lawyers are not required to file any discovery materials with the district clerk until ordered to do so by Cain.

The order also commands lawyers for all parties in the case to "refrain from making any public statements regarding the case."

When asked why he signed the motion, Cain said he had no comment on the case or the signing of the motion. "I can't comment on a pending case," he said.

The original version of the motion also asked the court to order the present file closed to prevent anyone from having access to its information. But the revised motion Cain signed did not contain that order to seal the file.

Police power limited by court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today limited the power of police officers to arrest people regarded as suspicious merely because such people refuse to identify themselves.

In a 7-2 decision, the court handed civil libertarians a victory by declaring unconstitutional a California law that made it a crime for a person who "loiters or wanders" not to identify himself when stopped by a police officer.

The court said that the law was too vague. But the decision stopped short of saying any such law demanding identification from pedestrians and joggers would be invalid.

The court's majority, led by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, said that a more specifically worded law might be acceptable.

O'Connor said the California law, in effect, leaves it to "the whim of any police officer" to decide who may walk the public streets.

The law "as presently drafted and construed by the state courts, contains no standard for determining what a suspect has to do in order to satisfy the requirement to provide a 'credible and reliable' identification," she said.

"As such the statute vests virtually complete discretion in the hands of the police to determine whether the suspect has satisfied the statute and must be permitted to go on his way in the absence of probable cause to arrest."

wrote Dan Margalit of the daily Haaretz. "He looked as though he didn't belong to the occasion."

Margalit theorized that Begin was suffering "a heavy disappointment" over the Lebanon campaign.

Premier a wan, withdrawn figure

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Today's subdued, uninspiring Menachem Begin is hardly recognizable as the combative Israeli prime minister of the Lebanon war.

No one is sure what happened, but the change in him has provoked much speculation.

Some political analysts say the 60-year-old Begin has sharply limited his public appearances because he is despondent over the death of his wife last November. Others point to the complications of the Israeli invasion of Lebanon and the results of the inquiry of the Beirut refugee camp massacre.

Some suggest it is a cyclical phenomenon, possibly worsened by the medication he takes for his weak heart.

Few are willing to draw firm conclusions. Begin went through a similar period in 1980, only to bounce back with redoubled vigor. And all polls show him winning if elections were held now.

But Israel is so heavily dominated by the force of Begin's personality and oratory that when he withdraws, his absence is acutely felt.

The weekly magazine Koteret Rashtit published an opinion poll last week indicating the percentage of Israelis who rate him best equipped to be prime minister had fallen from 62 percent in August at the height of the Lebanon war, to 46 percent a month ago.

"For months, the prime minister has not been at his best," the magazine observed. "He is in a cut-off, introverted mood. His public appearances are pallid, anemic."

The change in Begin was underscored during the nation's 35th independence anniversary celebrated last month when he gave none of the customary Independence Day interviews.

His message to the people was a bland litany of standard policy lines. He looked pale and fatigued, his commanding gravelly voice replaced by a hoarse near-whisper, his eyes gazing blankly at the teleprompter.

At a medal ceremony for Lebanon war heroes, Begin sat aside and delivered no speech. "He looked disoriented, distant and tight-lipped,"

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission is being dragged into a debate about a "Free Phone Sex" telephone line in New York City that lets callers dial up a lot more than just heavy breathing.

The service offered by "High Society" magazine, has touched off lawsuits in New York and cries of outrage by members of Congress, who maintain such recordings shouldn't be available to children.

It has also spurred a complaint to the FCC from Peter F. Cohalan, the county executive of Suffolk County, N.Y., alleging that "minors residing within the country have been dialing the number" and that the service "is obscene and in violation of the Communications Act."

High Society, described by its vice president, Ira Kirschenbaum, as "strictly a girlie book," launched the service last Feb. 1 to bolster sales. The recorded phone messages feature women who refer callers to their pictures in the latest edition and then explicitly describe sexual activity.

John Quinn, a spokesman for the New York Telephone Co., estimates a whopping 30 million calls have been placed to the number over the past three months, each of which has generated two cents for High Society. That's an estimated $600,000 for the magazine.

The average local call in New York costs a customer seven cents, which would mean that New York Telephone would pocket a nickel on each local call to the number. The number of local calls out of the 30 million was not available.

The phone number is being used way beyond New York, however. The state of Virginia discovered earlier this month, for example, that state employees had boosted its March phone bill by an extra $1,000 calling the number.

Gary M. Epstein, chief of the FCC's common carrier bureau, told a congressional hearing last month that Cohalan's complaint would be addressed by the agency shortly. But Epstein disagreed with Rep. Thomas J. Bliley Jr., R-Va., who maintains that the agency has the authority to declare the service obscene.

Said Bliley: "I think parents believe you have a right and duty to protect children against this. Without action, this will spread and become even more explicit."

"If it is indeed obscene, it could be a violation and service could be revoked," Epstein responded. "But we would like judicial guidance on whether it's truly obscene."

Cohalan's complaint was filed against New York Telephone. The phone company, in a reply filed 12 days ago, claims its hands are tied and that Cohalan is misreading the Communications Act.

The statute makes it illegal for individuals "to make or place a telephone call to 'innocent victims' where the content of the call is obscene or otherwise harassing," the telephone company wrote. "The statute does not apply to the situation here, where the calling party subjects himself voluntarily to the message of the receiving party."

Skyjacked jetliner returns safely

MIAMI (AP) — A Capitol Air jet with 212 people aboard hijacked to Cuba by a man claiming to be carrying explosives returned to Miami today after being grounded overnight in Havana because the crew couldn't free the plane's jammed emergency doors, officials said.

weather

The forecast calls for a high in the mid 60s today with a chance of thunderstorms this afternoon and tonight. Winds will be out of the north at 10 to 20 mph today, decreasing to 5 to 10 mph tonight. Tonight's low should be near 40. Tuesday's forecast calls for clearing and warmer with a high near 70. Sunday's high was 78, and the overnight low was 38.

Capitol Air Flight 236, carrying 202 passengers and 10 crew members, had originated from Puerto Rico and was hijacked about 70 miles northwest of Grand Turk Island, said Roger Myers, spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Atlanta.

The DC-8 landed in Havana at 8:27 p.m. Sunday. Although Cuban officials authorized the plane to return to the United States, it couldn't leave Jose Marti International Airport before 5:28 a.m. today because crew members were unable to close the jet's two emergency doors. It finally arrived in Miami today at 6:16 a.m.

FBI spokesman Steve Torres said the man who hijacked the flight bound for Miami and Chicago had a weapon, but he didn't know what kind. The man also claimed to have "some type of explosive, some type of bomb."

U.S. officials know nothing about the hijacker's identity, according to Torres.

Cuban authorities issued no immediate statement on the incident, or the fate of the hijacker.

The job of resetting the emergency door usually is performed by mechanics, Chuck Oldenburg, Capitol Air operations control director, said from company headquarters in Smyrna, Tenn.

Capitol Air officials said a radio link was set up between technicians at the company's headquarters and some Havana-based mechanics from Iberia Airlines helping the crew of the grounded jet reset a complicated set of latches on the rear-mounted doors.

"Our maintenance personnel here talked with the flight engineer and they had the manuals open here and were taking them through it, step by step," Oldenburg said. "After the first one was in, the second one followed very easily."

The airline's chief of maintenance, Bud Andrews, said the company had received no word about why the doors had been opened in the first place. As crew members were puzzling over the doors, the passengers were "holed up in the terminal," Andrews said.

At Miami International Airport, 150 waiting relatives and ticketholders for the Miami-Chicago leg of the flight clustered in a red-carpeted terminal lounge, drinking coffee, killing time, joking and worrying.

"Until they get here, I won't be OK," said Monserrate Orana, 28, of Lauderhill, Fla.

Sometime between 7:15 and 8:30 p.m. on Friday, October 29, 1982 a someone broke into the home of Douglas Wayne ... The intruders entered by ... a window on the east side of the house, and exited through the back door.

Items taken included a full-length brown striped silver fox coat, a Sports Wear brand leather vest, and a brown shoulder strap purse containing several personal items.

Two sets of footprints outside the home indicate there were at least two suspects involved, police said. Crime Stoppers will pay $500 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for the crime.

Rewards are also available for information pertaining to other crimes. If you have information pertaining to a crime, please call Crime Stoppers at 669-2222. All persons offering information will be kept anonymous.

Job Hunter

Gabriel Mora has been out of work for seven months and hasn't been able to find steady work. His wife has just landed a job, but her salary won't support them and their two children.

Mora has worked in oilfield service for the four years he's been in Pampa, and he said most of his employers were sorry to let him go because he's such a good worker.

He has worked for area oilfield service firms, and worked on repairing valves at local gas plants as well. He said he catches on quick to new jobs, and is willing to learn anything new.

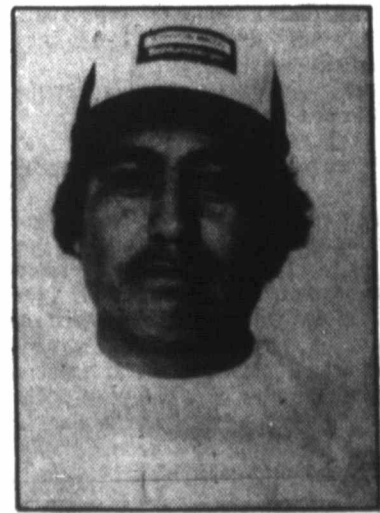

"I'd do anything to work," he said.

Mora has been working at odd jobs two or three days a week since he was laid off, and said he had applied for unemployment insurance but never collected, because he was working part-time. But since the gas in his house has been shut off, he will have to go back and reapply for benefits, he said.

He is more than willing to work at anything, he said. Because he catches on so fast, he can learn just about anything very quickly, he said. He will also relocate for a good job.

To interview Gabriel Mora, call 665-6102.

Tornadoes, heavy rain hit Midwest

By The Associated Press

A lethal swarm of thunderstorms carrying high winds, pelting rain and at least 36 tornadoes surged into the eastern Great Lakes today after cutting a soggy path of destruction that left three people dead or missing and scores injured in the Midwest.

Weekend storms unloaded up to 7 1/2 inches of rain, saturating farm fields and forcing hundreds of families to evacuate their flooded homes Sunday.

A police officer drowned in south Kansas City, Mo., while trying to rescue a man clinging to a tree after his canoe overturned in rain-swollen Little Blue River, authorities said. The canoeist later was rescued.

One person was killed and another injured when a mobile home was overturned during a storm that blew through the central Illinois town of Edgewood, state police said.

And divers planned to continue a search today for a 7-year-old boy who was swept away by flash flooding on the Great Miami River near Cleves, Ohio, authorities said.

"We've gotten reports of at least three dozen tornadoes touching down," Steve Corfidi, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today. "Most of the damage was in Missouri and Illinois."

The violent weather was headed across Wisconsin and the upper Ohio Valley early today but had lost some of its intensity, Corfidi said.

Tornadoes and winds gusting to 60 mph overturned trailers, sent roofs flying, uprooted trees, blew in windows and caused power outages in Missouri, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana, authorities said.

Twenty-two people were treated at a hospital early today in Jefferson, Ind., after a twister struck a mobile home park, destroying as many as 30 trailers, officials said.

In Edwardsville, Ill., near St. Louis, a wall was blown in at a swimming pool, rupturing a chlorine tank and forcing about 65 families to evacuate their homes for a short time until the leak was capped, Police Chief Bennett W. Dickmann said.

Chuck Jones, a spokesman for the Illinois Emergency Services and Disaster Agency, said 15 people were injured and as many as 50 homes damaged by a twister that plowed through the southwestern Illinois city of Greenfield.

In Granite City, Ill., 18 people were treated at a local hospital for storm-related injuries, authorities said.

A tornado knifed through the central business district of O'Fallon, Mo., Sunday evening, injuring at least four people, said Al Brock, the city's civil defense director.

Other tornadoes in Missouri injured two more people and caused an estimated $2 million damage to a printing plant at Linn in Osage County. Downed utility lines also caused scattered power outages.

Tornado-tossed debris injured two people slightly in Hamburg, Iowa, officials said.

Swollen streams also forced the evacuation of homes in western Kentucky, southwestern Ohio and in Missouri, authorities said.

Meanwhile in California a thunderstorm packing pea-sized hail north of Los Angeles was accompanied by a report of a funnel cloud over north Hollywood.

Amendments being pushed for bishop's controversial letter

CHICAGO (AP) - A newly formed front of 20 conservative Catholic groups pressed for softer language in a controversial pastoral letter condemning nuclear arms as the nation's Roman Catholic bishops met to adopt a final draft of the statement.

The bishops, spiritual leaders of the 51 million Roman Catholics in the United States, faced a wave of proposed amendments to the long-debated document which urges greater efforts for peace, condemns the arms race and challenges U.S. nuclear policies.

The conservative front, called the National Catholic Coalition, on Sunday called for shortening the letter or ditching it altogether at the meetings today and Tuesday of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Meanwhile, hundreds of other Catholics marched and prayed for peace Sunday outside the hotel where the bishops were meeting.

A spokesman for the bishops said they were being pressed by voices inside and outside their ranks to make changes.

"Almost anything is possible," the general secretary of the bishops' conference, Msgr. Daniel Hoye, told reporters at a news briefing late Sunday after the bishops held a preliminary closed session.

However, indications were they would push ahead to conclusive action on the 44,000-word pastoral letter, "The Challenge of Peace," their first comprehensive assessment of moral imperatives in a nuclear age.

It would provide a basis for teaching throughout the U.S. church and mark a growing shift in the stance of American Catholicism, which historically has condoned government military policy.

After two years of work on the document, pressured by contesting Catholic groups and the Reagan administration, the bishops have clung to their thesis - that the present U.S.-Soviet course "threatens mutual suicide."

The document challenges elements of current U.S. nuclear strategy, condemning current options for possible first nuclear strikes and severely questioning ideas of "limited" or "winnable" nuclear exchanges.

Kathleen Sullivan, who presided at a news conference by the conservative coalition, said the document "should not delve into the technical details of military hardware."

It also "does not show proper appreciation for the brave men who have given their lives" for freedom, and it might discourage others from similar service, said Phyllis Schlafly, an outspoken Catholic conservative.

Through downtown Chicago in a dreaching Sunday rain, about 1,500 Catholic peace advocates from many states marched and sang, "Peace is flowing like a river." They also began a round-the-clock prayer vigils outside the meeting site at the Palmer House in the city's Loop.

Among about 470 proposed amendments, much interest centered on a change backed by a drafting committee to call for a "halt" rather than merely a "curb" to the development of nuclear weapons.

President Reagan has strongly opposed such a freeze, as have administration appeals to the bishops. While the stiffened language doesn't use the word "freeze," a leading bishop said that was the meaning.

"That's right, totally right," Archbishop John R. Roach of St. Paul-Minneapolis, president of the bishops, said in response to a reporter's question.

The proposed letter recognizes pacifism and military service as legitimate moral choices for Catholics, and urges greater attention to the strength of non-violence in securing justice.

But the main thrust of the proposed letter is its all-out "no" to nuclear warfare, saying it threatens "the created order itself. ... We possess a power which should never be used, but which might be used if we do not reverse our direction."

Violence marks May Day observances

By The Associated Press

Violence erupted in Chile, the Philippines and Poland, where police fired tear gas, sprayed water cannons and beat demonstrators with clubs to disperse thousands who marched in support of independent labor union Solidarity.

"We want free unions. We want free Poland," marchers shouted at a demonstration of 40,000 in Gdansk, the birthplace of Solidarity.

An airplane flew over Vatican City with a red and white Solidarity banner, and Pope John Paul II gave a Sunday blessing praying labor as the source of human dignity.

In Chile, police clubbed demonstrators in Santiago who went to a May Day rally in defiance of the military regime of President Augusto Pinochet. Twenty-five of the 200 marchers were reported injured in the demonstration organized by the National Labor Coordinate, a predominantly Christian Democrat group.

A woman farmworker was shot in the leg by an unidentified gunman in an anti-government march of 800 people in Davao City, the Philippines. Police said the gunman was not an officer or a soldier.

Left-wing labor groups in El Salvador held their first May Day celebrations in two years and called for negotiations to end the war between leftist guerrillas and the U.S.-backed government. About 100 people took part in the indoor ceremony.

The biggest labor organization in the country, the Popular Democratic Unity, boycotted government-sponsored May Day activities, saying the government was denying "the fundamental rights of workers."

In Western Europe and Canada, demonstrations on the international labor holiday Sunday featured anti-nuclear themes. In Ottawa, 3,000 people formed a human chain, linking arms and chanting "Jobs, not bombs."

About 3,000 French workers shouted slogans against the government of Socialist President Francois Mitterrand.

Tens of thousands of leftist trade unionists marched in Paris, carrying banners calling for international labor solidarity. Across town on the Left Bank, about 3,000 members of independent unions and professional groups staged an anti-government march, shouting "Mitterrand, resign," and carrying banners protesting the Socialist government's economic austerity plan.

There were large, peaceful demonstrations in the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia and other Eastern European countries, as well as Japan.

Man found bound, gagged, stabbed

EASTLAND, Texas (AP) - Eastland County Sheriff Johnnie Morren said he was awaiting the results from an autopsy of a man found gagged and bound in a bedroom of his home Saturday with two pocket knives sticking from his chest.

The body of Gailly Johnson "G.J." Carter, 64, was found shortly after noon Saturday, authorities said. He was lying on a bed, shirtless and wearing clean pants, Morren said. His hands were tied behind his back, his ankles were bound and he was gagged.

Carter was a native of Eastland, but had lived in McKinney for several years. He retired last October from his job at a Veterans Administration hospital in Dallas and moved back to the family home in Eastland.

Morren said nothing appeared to have been disturbed in the house, but he "could not tell if anything was taken from Carter's billfold because I don't know what it was supposed to contain."

Several residents of the north central Texas town said Carter often carried large amounts of cash and seldom wrote checks.

Legislators begin final month of session

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislators returning from a weekend off had lengthy calendars today as they began the final four weeks of the 4½-month regular session.

Senators scheduled a morning session, and the House got started in the afternoon.

On the Senate agenda were bills that would ban open alcoholic beverage containers in motor vehicles, redistrict Congress, spell out state authority to inspect cattle for brucellosis and limit the height of buildings that might block remaining views of the Capitol.

House members are scheduled to debate a Senate-approved measure that would authorize the early release of low-risk inmates to avoid prison overcrowding and a House bill that the president of the Texas Consumer Association calls "anti-small business and anti-farmer legislation."

David Bragg said in a statement the bill would allow companies dealing with small businesses to write contracts that "would enable a wrongdoer to keep farmers and small businesses from suing under the Deceptive Trade Practices Act."

Tuesday is "Save a Child Day" in the Legislature with three lawmakers joining representatives of the Texas Medical Association at a news conference in a renewed effort to pass a bill that would require safety seats for young children riding in vehicles.

The House on Wednesday will debate its $30.8 billion version of a two-year state budget that could be financed without any new or increased taxes.

Senators voted 27-3 Thursday for a $30.9 billion budget but included an additional $2.1 billion for items they want funded if the Legislature should enact a major tax bill.

Texas has not had a general tax increase in 12 years, but declining state revenue has increased chances that one may be needed.

Rep. Al Edwards hoped to have an answer today on what to do about a bill that would legalize pari-mutuel betting on horses.

Edwards, D-Houston, is one of an eight-member majority in the House Urban Affairs Committee who is on record against the bill but said he might change his vote after he saw the results over the weekend of a survey of his district.

The Senate voted 18-13 to authorize betting on a local-option basis if a statewide referendum passes in November 1984.

A House-Senate conference committee had a hearing scheduled today to work out a compromise on separate proposals to create a fund for colleges outside the University of Texas and the Texas A&M University systems.

A proposed constitutional amendment approved by the Senate would dedicate $125 million to 25 institutions in 1985, with an "escalator clause" tied to the Consumer Price Index providing possibly even more money in subsequent years. The House measure would earmark $75 million the first year and has no cost-of-living increase.

The Texas Student Lobby was prepared today to oppose a bill before the House Higher Education Committee that the lobby claimed would increase state college tuition by 550 percent over the next seven years.

U.S. companies blamed for alien problem

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) — Some U.S. companies finance recruiting operations enticing illegal aliens to enter the United States in dramatically higher numbers, a U.S. Border Patrol spokesman told the San Angelo Standard-Times.

Jack Richardson, chief agent of the U.S. Border Patrol sector here, blames smugglers and American companies for the influx of undocumented workers that allowed his agents to make 78 percent more arrests in the first 28 days of April than in the same period of 1982.

"You have to understand that at the root of every immigration problem is avarice and greed," said Richardson, a 30-year veteran with the Border Patrol. "It's at the bottom of the new problem here and it's responsible for every immigration problem. The Yankee dollar is what these people are after, and to say the wets that are crossing are poor, scared and hungry just is not true."

He told the newspaper the aliens tell agents they pay from $300 to $1,000 to be smuggled into the United States and some say they paid as much as $2,500.

"Recruiters set up along the other side of the border and soak these wets of large amounts of money," said Richardson.

"Where do they get that kind of cash? We know most of it comes from American companies. They finance the recruiting operations."

The companies benefit by paying lower wages to the illegal aliens, while the aliens earn much more money than they could at home, he said.

Richardson pointed to several aliens being held in a common cell and others being processed by agents in a squad room.

"Look at these guys," he said pointing to aliens in a cell and others in a squad room. "They aren't skinny, they're not hungry. And look at those faces. There's no fear in them."

Del Rio Mayor Roger S. Cerny said smuggling "is the real danger and not the illegal aliens themselves."

Across the river in Ciudad Acuna, Mexico, Cerny's counterpart said the problem is Mexico's to solve.

"The problem was created here and the problem has to be solved here," said Mayor Jesus "Chuy" Ramon Valdez.

Ramon told the Standard-Times that Mexican officials should strive to revive the country's economy, which would help keep Mexico's young men productive and at home.

He said the United States and Mexico have launched a program to open industrial plants and expand existing plants on both sides of the border. The twin-shop program, under which pieces manufactured in Mexico are shipped to American plants for assembly, is expected to employ more than 900 workers.

For the first 28 days in April, Richardson said his agents returned 7,811 aliens to the International Bridge that spans the Rio Grande between Del Rio and Ciudad Acuna.

"In the Del Rio sector, we return 70 percent of the illegals that cross the river. Most we catch within five miles of the river; the rest we catch within 30 days," Richardson said. In the first quarter of 1983, that amounted to 26,239 returns. Through April 28, the figure totaled 30,050.

"They tell us they're going to keep coming. They say there's nothing we can do to stop them," he said.

Richardson concedes that he needs 495 more agents "to have a 100 percent apprehension rate" in the 41-county Del Rio sector. He now has 244 employees, 225 of them authorized to make arrests. "I'm the son of an illegal alien," said Richardson.

Beginning of new bank

New Perryton bank going up

By SHERILL McLEAREN

PERRYTON — The first spadeful of dirt in constructing a new Perryton National Bank building was turned Thursday morning. The bank's new headquarters should be ready for customers by the end of the year, bank officials announced.

Plans for a new Perryton National Bank building were announced in February, and bank officers and builders broke ground Thursday.

The bank building should be finished in about seven months, President Ed Garland said. He said builders will finish by December, and the bank will move into its new home shortly after the first of the year.

Projected cost of the new home for Perryton National is $1.5 million. Architect for the building is Chick Lee of Denver, Colo.

Contractors Reid and Gary Strickland of Amarillo are the builders.

The bank building will have about 13,000 square feet of space and four drive-up windows away from the main building. Off-street parking will be provided for both customers and employees.

The one-story brick building will be located at Ninth and Main Streets.

Perryton National Bank has been in business more than 60 years. The bank first moved to Perryton from Gray, Okla., as the First State Bank. The name was changed to Perryton National Bank when it received a state charter in 1922.

The bank's board of directors are J.D. Simms, chairman; Wilford Lance, G.R. LaMaster, Jack E. Tregellas, Jack Gramstorff, Garland, president; and Doug Hale, executive vice president.

Jury selection scheduled to begin

OZONA, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors succeeded 5½ months ago in getting a prison sentence for a West Texas roughneck in the stabbing death of an 8-year-old Kermit girl.

They began today their efforts to get a death penalty for Michael Eugene Sharp — this time for the rape and slaying of Brenda Kay Broadway, 31, of Kermit, who was killed with her daughter last summer.

State District Judge James H. Clack of Andrews, who granted a change of venue in the trial, is the presiding judge. Jury selection was scheduled for today.

Ozona is about 75 miles southwest of San Angelo. Sharp, 28, is charged with capital murder in connection with the June 11, 1982 rape and slaying of Mrs. Broadway.

He was convicted of murder in Lubbock on Nov. 17 in connection with the death of Mrs. Broadway's 8-year-old daughter, Christie Elms. The slain girl's sister, Selena Elms, testified against Sharp during that trial, and is expected to testify again here.

Sharp is accused of abducting Ms. Broadway and her daughters from a Kermit car wash shortly after midnight on June 11. The women were taken to a remote area about 200 yards inside the Ector County line, where Ms. Broadway and Christie Elms were stabbed to death, authorities said.

Selena Elms escaped during the stabbings, authorities said. Naked and with her arms bound, she ran five miles before finding help at an oil rig, she testified.

One killed, four injured

All quiet day after motorcycle gang fight

PORTER, Texas (AP) — Sheriff's deputies feared renewed violence and stood guard at a drag strip where all remained quiet a day after a fight between rival motorcycle gangs left one dead and four injured.

Six or seven officers from the Montgomery County sheriff's department kept watch Sunday over the race course 30 miles north of Houston, but saw no gang members and no evidence of trouble, spokesman Ed DeForrest said.

A 25-year-old Belle Chase, La., man was being held in the Saturday shooting death of John Keith Bachelor, 30, of Houston, DeForrest said, but no charges had been filed.

The fight broke out at an event billed as a national drag race for bikers. Jerry Bender, a detective sergeant from nearby Humble, said groups from throughout the nation attended.

Chief Deputy Steve Graeter said the fight began when members of the Bandidos ordered another group, the Banashes, to remove jacket insignia that looked like Bandidos "colors."

"These people carry all kinds of weapons," Bender said. "Any time two clubs get together there's going to be a fight. That's what happened."

DeForrest said Bachelor, who apparently belonged to the Bandidos, was dead on arrival at Northeast Medical Center in Houston. The affiliation of the man accused in the slaying was not clear.

"I don't know which tribe he belongs to," DeForrest said.

At least four people were injured, officials said. Others may have been wounded by stray bullets. Sheriff Joe Corley ordered the promoters to call off the drag races, which were to have continued a second day Sunday.

Authorities estimated about 2,500 people, most of them bikers, were on hand Saturday.

Officials confiscated two .25-caliber pistols, a .38-caliber revolver, a .38-caliber derringer and a .357-caliber Magnum revolver.

DeForrest said three people were charged with disorderly conduct. They were Thomas Verlik, 33, of Houston; Robert Eugene Davis, 24, of Splendora; and his wife, Pamela Carter Davis, 25. The Davises also were charged with public intoxication, he said.

Bush says he's not worried about nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush says he is not worried about whether he will be President Reagan's running mate in 1984 if the president seeks a second term, the Houston Post reported.

The paper's Sunday editions quoted Bush as saying he feels comfortable with party officials' judgment on the next campaign.

"They know I am here. They know what I am doing," he said. "If there is some better formula, they will figure it out."

Bush, who considers Houston his home, told the newspaper during an interview that was conducted Wednesday that he would not be upset if he is left off the ticket.

"I could take it or leave it," he said of the nomination. "Take it or leave it."

The newspaper reported in a copyright story Saturday that Reagan is firmly committed to keeping Bush as a running mate if he seeks a second term.

"You don't break up a combination that is working," the Post quoted the president as saying.

Shirley Green, Bush's acting press secretary, said Sunday evening that Bush said he was "gratified at the president's expression of support and said that if the president runs again, which we all hope he does, the vice president would be honored to be on the ticket."

Bush, who once referred to Reagan's financial strategy as "voodoo economics," said in the interview he and Reagan have overcome all feelings of rivalry that arose from the campaign. He said the tension eased because he and Reagan have similar backgrounds and attitudes.

"We like to relax and talk about sentimental things, as well as matters of state. And sometimes we like to do that best," Bush said. "The relationship is so that I don't feel, 'Listen, I'd better not waste the president's time on whether my kid is having another baby.' I would share that with him like a brother."

A special almanac for politicians

WASHINGTON (AP) — Which Texas congressional district has the most bathrooms? Which has the highest fertility rate among women? In which district do more people walk to work than any other?

If such miscellany is of interest to you, you might want to consider running for office.

For politicians pay an awful lot of attention to the population characteristics of the election districts they run in.

In fact, reference books are published regularly that provide analyses of the nation's congressional districts.

But nothing compares with the reports being released by the U.S. Census Bureau for such districts, based on the 1980 census.

The recently released 107-page report on Texas districts, for example, has statistics on everything from the number of homes with bathrooms in each district to the fertility rate and how many people walk or drive to work.

Of course, not all of this will interest the professional politician, who usually is concerned with more politically significant data — such as on a district's ethnic composition or its earning levels.

There's plenty of that in the census report. But for the bystander, the report also amounts to a kind of Poor Man's Texas Political Almanac, full of just plain trivia on the state's political makeup, the stuff of cocktail party chatter.

For example, more children under 5 years of age, 52,624, were to be found in the 15th District of South Texas than any other; the fewest, 31,259, were in the Dallas area's 3rd District.

None could vote, making this among the least interesting of statistics to the politician.

Other examples: —There were 140,511 homes with at least two bathrooms in the Houston area's 7th Congressional District, the most of any Texas district. But there were only 21,374 in the neighboring 18th District, the least of any.

—Fertility was highest in the 15th District of South Texas, with 1,743 children born per 1,000 women during their lifetime, and lowest in the Dallas area's 3rd District, with 991 born.

—More than 21,000 workers walked to work in central Texas' 11th District, most of any district, while only about 4,210 walked to work in the Houston area's 8th District, the fewest.

—There were more divorced men, 16,691, in the Dallas area's 5th District than any other, and more divorced women, 24,316, in the Dallas area's 3rd District. The 15th District of south Texas had both the fewest divorced men, 4,796, and women, 9,099.

—The district with the greatest number of native-born Texans was the 14th in southeast Texas, with 431,387; the district with the fewest was the Houston area's 7th, with 282,555.

—More children, 9,999, attended nursery school in the Houston area's 7th District than any other. The fewest attending, 4,057, were in the 1st District of northeast Texas.

—The 13th District in the Panhandle had the most homes with individual room air conditioning units, 95,050; the Houston area's 7th District had the fewest, 14,685.

—The Dallas area's 3rd District had the most salesmen and others involved in selling, 49,240, while Houston's 18th District had the fewest, 18,230.

Woman shouted orders in bar shootout

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The brother of two men who were critically injured in a weekend shooting in a west San Antonio bar says he thinks someone was trying to dissuade him from testifying next week against a man accused of stabbing him in the heart.

Frank Rodriguez, 36, was shot four times in the stomach and hand, and Richard Rodriguez, 31, was shot in the stomach, police said. They underwent surgery and were in critical condition Sunday.

About 15 people were in the bar at the time of the shooting. Witnesses say a young man, wearing a black patch over one eye, pulled a large-caliber handgun and began firing as a woman, believed to be about 45, shouted orders.

"It was a set-up. She was like Ma Barker. She was in charge," said Roy Rodriguez, 34, who said he was standing at the bar.

"I heard the shots and I looked around. Everybody was running around all over the place or lying on the floor," he said.

Ku Klux Klan marches peacefully in San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — About 50 heavily protected Ku Klux Klan members garbed in robes and fatigues marched chanting through downtown San Antonio, but a march by anti-Klan nudists never came off because of "six topless girls."

The Klansmen, guarded by about 400 police officers and eekled from behind barricades, marched briskly through a three-block stretch of downtown Sunday afternoon.

But the organizer of the nudists march called off his plans Sunday night, saying the city would not allow six topless women to accompany him.

"I wanted to be a clown flanked by six topless girls," an open-shirted Omar Kirk said after arriving on the hood of a battered station wagon. "I can march totally topless, but a girl can't."

Kirk described himself as "pro-nudity and anti-Klan." Policemen had blanketed downtown San Antonio earlier, barricading the Klan's march route to all but a handful of the news media.

Specially equipped police officers, sweating in the 92-degree heat, stood watch atop nearby buildings. There were no arrests.

The Klan was bused into town for the 10-minute march and a brief stop on the steps of City Hall, where the march ended.

Klansmen complained no one could hear them and began shouting "Gestapo!" at the policemen equipped with riot gear who were surrounding the group.

The white supremacist group, carrying flags representing the United States, Texas and the Confederacy, tore up a Mexican flag and chanted "White Power" before being whisked off to an undisclosed location.

Police Chief Robert Heuck estimated it cost San Antonio about $40,000 to bring in off-duty officers and cordon off the streets for the Klan's march.

"If no one got hurt, it is well worth the cost involved," Heuck said. "We were here to prevent any problems and to provide the Klan their Constitutional rights."

Twelve people were injured and six arrested when the Klan marched in Austin on Feb. 19. Six people were arrested during an April 2 march in Houston, but there were no injuries.

"We were trying to avoid an Austin situation," Heuck said. "Houston, too."

City officials all week had urged San Antonians to ignore the Klan.

Mayor Henry Cisneros, who called the group "inherently un-American" and murderers, stood on the steps of City Hall as Klansmen were bused away.

The Klan first had requested a permit for a march and vigil at the Alamo to protect the Texas shrine from "Communists." The city finally compromised on an alternate route through the heart of downtown.

Heuck said "four or five" people dressed in fatigues were questioned by police Sunday morning after being spotted at the Alamo, but were not arrested.

KKK-Grand Dragon Charles Lee of Pasadena had said the group planned an "anti-Communist" march, but Klansmen carried no signs to that effect Sunday.

Picard read "White Power. White Victory." "Register Jews, Not Guns" and "America: Love it or Leave it."

Jeans and boots showed under the robes of many Klansmen, while others wore camouflaged fatigues and several donned all-black ensembles and brandished black camouflaged shields.

An anti-Klan group called the All-People's Congress took over the steps of City Hall after the group left Sunday and blasted both the Klansmen for marching and city officials for allowing them.

The All-People's Congress representatives, mostly Hispanic, carried a huge banner reading "Reagan and Klan Work Hand in Hand."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS

Give business a happy hands-off

California's Governor Deukmejian believes that during the late and unlamented reign of former Governor Brown, the regulatory climate of the state was so hostile that business felt unwelcome. He has developed a package of proposals to cure that imbalance and, as Republicans often do, veered too far in the other direction.

The most cogent criticism of his regulatory reform proposals (which will undoubtedly draw fire for the wrong reasons) is that they don't go far enough. Shaving a little here, pruning a tad there and putting friendly Republicans in charge of regulatory agencies won't restore free enterprise. What is needed is the outright abolition of regulatory agencies (the Coastal Commission would be a good start, but we can suggest dozens more), the repeal of state laws that require local governments to indulge in unnecessary land-use regulation, and the elimination of occupational licensing provisions and the state agencies that administer them.

While Deukmejian is too timid in his proposals for regulatory relief, he goes overboard in suggesting ways that government can promote and encourage business. He wants a new state panel to intervene to cut red tape (which will undoubtedly end up producing more), a speedup in highway construction and public works projects, and more aggressive promotion of California to outside businesses and tourists. All these programs will mean more government spending and intrusion when today's imperative is to reduce such spending.

If the governor would promote and implement a mutual hands-off policy between government and business, he would have the satisfaction of watching an unprecedented burst of economic growth in California. He wouldn't be able to control it, but he could take a great deal of credit for creating the environment that made it possible.

We'll never run out of petroleum

By OSCAR COOLEY

Is man in danger of running out of a necessity, such as petroleum, his main source of energy?
Man will never run out of any commodity that is highly useful to him, the economist answers. The reasoning is simple.

We produce whatever the people as consumers want or need. The greater their want, the higher the price they will pay. The higher the price, the more of the commodity that will be produced.

Our forefathers had no petroleum. For energy, they depended on the burning of wood or coal; for light on tallow candles made of animal fat. The first oil well in the U.S. was drilled in 1859; drilling in earnest did not take place until the 1920's. The automobile's demand for gasoline did it.

For years the Jonahs have been warning us that our source of gasoline was most gone. In 1939 a government authority opined that U.S. oil supplies would last only about 13 years. In 1949, another bureaucrat warned that the end was almost in sight. That was 34 years ago. Oil is so plentiful today in this most motorized of nations that gasoline and heating oil are falling in price.

Why is this? The American Petroleum Institute says the consumers and the producers both have a hand in it. Between 1978 and 1982, consumption of oil in the U.S. shrank by 19 percent, one reason being increased efficiency as new technology reduces the amount of energy needed to do the same kind of work. At the same time, says the API, "new fields of oil and gas are discovered today by technical methods that did not exist in the past, and new recovery techniques squeeze more oil out of fields than was formerly possible."

So far, concludes the API, exploration has shown that America is in no more danger of running out of energy supplies than were the early voyagers in peril of falling off the edge of the world.

There is an abundance of oil. Recently, oil production in the U.S. has risen about 80,000 barrels a day largely due to new output from the Kubaruk field in Alaska.

The deeper they drill, the more oil they are likely to find. Deep drilling is costly, but the drill bits bore more deeply each year.

Demand calls forth its own supply.

Factory life with Mister Robots

By ART BUCHWALD

Widget was very excited and told me to come over to his sneaker factory right away. "I just hired my first robot system, and I want you to see it."

The gate to the factory was closed, but when I drove up to it a voice, almost human, said, "Can I help you?"

"I'm here to see Mr. Widget," and I gave my name.

In 10 seconds the voice responded, "You may drive to the main building and park in visitor's slot number two."

Widget was waiting at the door, all smiles. He put a plastic card into a slot, a door opened, and we walked into his factory. There wasn't a human being in sight, but sneakers were flying off the assembly line and being stuffed into boxes.

"IT'S PRETTY NOISY," I said.

"DOESN'T BOTHER THE ROBOTS," Widget yelled. "THEY DON'T KNOW THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN MACHINE NOISE AND MUZAK."

We went up some stairs to a glass-enclosed booth.

When Widget shut the door he said, "I want you to meet my Master Robot, Turnbill. He is programmed to program the robots on the floor."

Turnbill gave me a steely look and reluctantly put out his arm which I shook.

"How many sneakers did we make today, Turnbill?" Widget asked.

Turnbill's lights blinked, and a deep voice said, "12,890."

Widget rubbed his hands. "I used to make that many in a week. And I had to pay overtime for three shifts. Now I can manufacture the same number in a day, and I don't even have to worry about the robots taking coffee breaks. No social security, no health care payments, no pensions," Widget said, patting Turnbill's back. "And every one of my robots is tax-depreciable, which is more than I could say for my ex-workers."

Turnbill started spitting out a readout, "Glitch on shoelace hole maker, third robot malfunctioning on line one."

Widget said, "It would have taken me a month to find out who was screwing up my shoelace holes if I had a human being on the line. Now I know in matter of seconds."

"What will you do?"

"We'll dump him, and replace him with a robot who can do the job. The sneaker union would never allow me to fire anybody, no matter how bad the person was screwing up my shoes. Nice work, Turnbill. I'm going to make you a vice president."

"Thank you, sir," Turnbill's voice synthesizer said. "Any decision on an assistant microprocessor to help me in packaging?"

"I'm taking it up with the board next week, Turnbill. As I told you, the board has ordered me to put a freeze on buying new microprocessors."

"Why is that?" I asked.

"We're making more sneakers than we ever made before. But we can't seem to sell them."

"Maybe the reason is that robots don't wear sneakers."

"What does that mean?"

"Well, you've laid off your workers and now they don't have money to buy sneakers."

"There are lots of workers in other factories that need sneakers."

"Yes, but they're being replaced by robots as well. Robots are great for what they do, but they're lousy consumers."

Widget looked over at Turnbill nervously. "Don't talk so loud," he whispered to me.

"I don't care," I said.

"This country's success was based on the fact that people who made our products afford to buy them. You've replaced your workers with robots and you're saving a fortune in salaries, but you're now up to your ears in sneakers."

"But if I don't have robots making my sneakers, I can't afford to compete with the sneakers that are being imported from abroad," Widget said tearfully. "What should I do?"

"Why don't you ask Turnbill?"

Widget hit several buttons on Turnbill's head.

Turnbill blinked several times and then said, "I'm sorry. I'm in production - not sales."

Let's sell Arctic gas to Japan

By PAUL HARVEY

The North Slope of Alaska is pregnant with gas, also.

Along with all that oil under the tundra is 15 percent of all the gas reserves in our nation, 26 trillion cubic feet.

Mostly going to waste.

During the height of the Arab embargo there was talk of pipelining that gas 4,800 miles to markets in the lower 48, but when the embargo eased, Congress lost interest in any such $43 billion investment.

There is another way we could harvest that gas. Liquefy it - and sell it - to Japan.

Americans old enough to remember World War II recollect that some of the scrap iron we had shipped to Japan boomeranged, returned to hurt us.

For us now to sell them gas sounds similarly risky. Until you consider the options.

Japan has to buy gas from somebody. If not from us, they'll buy it from others - including the Soviets.

America could supply Japan five to seven million tons a year of liquefied gas; could supply Korea another two to three million tons.

It would take legislation permission plus a federal appropriation, but building a pipeline 850 miles from Prudhoe to Cook Inlet would cost less than half what it would cost to construct a trans-Canada pipeline to the Dakotas.

Besides, the U.S. does not now need more gas; the Far East does.

Advantages to us are several.

Anything we can sell abroad helps to minimize the red ink in our trade balance.

As is, we are having to compress a billion cubic feet of byproduct gas each day and inject it back into the frozen earth, an inefficient and costly process.

With a pipeline to the Kenai Peninsula, the liquefied gas could be sent by tanker anywhere in the world, including our own West Coast ports.

These considerations are similar to those which motivated NATO nations to help finance a Soviet pipeline from Siberia.

Some voices on the Hill, rooted in the past, protest "exhausting our resources to strengthen Japan."

We are presently dissipating those resources anyway.

And such "trade" is not without precedent.

We have been loading tankers at Kenai, Alaska and shipping gas to Japan - two tankers a month since 1969.

A trans-Alaska pipeline would expand that traffic. Japan, within 10 years, is going to need 43 million tons a year. Within 10 years we could supply much of it - if we start now.

An independent man is one who is not afraid to make mistakes. If he is independent he must of necessity strive to understand God's or Nature's laws or perish. If he is dependent on another person, he is inclined to believe that he need not understand these moral principles himself and that he can depend on the other person to enlighten him when he is obliged to make a decision.

An independent person if never afraid of answering questions. He wants to have his ideas tested. He knows that if he has to contradict himself or face a dilemma that he is out of harmony with natural law. He invites criticism because he believes that is the best way for him to learn. He wants to learn from the experience of others rather than trying to learn everything from his own experiences.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, May 2, the 122nd day of 1983. There are 243 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 2, 1945, Berlin surrendered to Soviet troops as World War II was nearing an end in Europe.

On this date:

In 1536, England's Queen Anne Boleyn was sent to the Tower of London and was eventually beheaded.

In 1863, Confederate Gen. Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson was fatally wounded by his own soldiers who mistook him for a Union scout during the Civil War Battle of Chancellorsville, Va.

In 1890, the Oklahoma Territory was organized.

And, in 1960, Caryl Chessman was put to death in California's San Quentin Prison after eight stays of execution.

Ten years ago: Former Texas governor and Treasury Secretary John Connally announced he was switching from the Democratic to the Republican Party.

Five years ago: Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda said in Washington that his government was trying to bring his country's imports more in line with its huge exports.

One year ago: British submarines torpedoed the Argentine cruiser General Belgrano while it was on patrol in the South Atlantic, inflicting severe damage.

Today's birthday: Pediatrician Benjamin Spock is 80 years old.

Thought for today: "Nothing is really work unless you would rather be doing something else." - James Barrie, Scottish writer (1860-1937.)

Grocery prices are up slightly

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
Associated Press Writer

Higher prices for pork chops and chopped chuck in a half dozen cities helped boost grocery prices a little last month, according to an Associated Press marketbasket survey.

However, for the first third of 1983, prices have risen less than 1 percent and were less than 3 percent higher than they were one year ago.

The marketbasket bill rose at the checklist store in seven cities during April, declined in five cities and was unchanged in one city. The average increase was 2.7 percent; the average decrease was 3.2 percent. Overall, the marketbasket bills rose an average of three-tenths of 1 percent in April.

Pork chops and chopped chuck were higher in six of the 13 cities surveyed; while sugar climbed in four cities. Eggs were down in eight cities.

Comparing prices today with those at the start of the year, the AP found that the marketbasket bill rose at the checklist store in five cities, up an average of 5.5 percent, and decreased in eight cities, down an average of 2.3 percent. Overall, the marketbasket bill rose by about seven-tenths of 1 percent during the first third of 1983.

During the year that ended April 30, the marketbasket bill rose at the checklist store in 11 cities and went down in two cities, for an overall average increase of 2.8 percent in 12 months.

A look at the overall number of items in the AP survey showed more increases during April than during March. Here are the percentages of increases and decreases:

	Mar.	Apr.
Up	21.4	23.1
Down	24.2	21.4
Unchanged	51.1	52.2
Unavailable	3.3	3.3

The AP survey is based on a list of 14 food and non-food items, priced at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973 and rechecked on or about the start of each month thereafter. A 15th item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped after the manufacturer discontinued the package size used for the survey.

The items were selected at random, and no attempt was made to weight the list according to what percentage of a family's actual grocery outlay each produce represents. Figures are not adjusted for seasonal variations.

The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease — saying a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar.

Teen-ager drowns in pit

DALLAS (AP) — An autopsy was planned for a 16-year-old boy who drowned as he attempted to swim across a southside gravel pit, authorities say.

James Monroe Franklin disappeared in the water of the Oak Cliff gravel pit at 4:19 p.m. Sunday, police said.

Fire department divers recovered his body five hours later in water nearly 15 feet deep.

Kidney disease - the problem and the program

EDITOR'S NOTE — About 70,000 Americans are being kept alive by kidney dialysis that is paid for by the federal government. Some bureaucrats believe it is a runaway program that must be cut back. Patients fear the proposed changes would seriously affect their lives. Many are poor and believe the government must pay the dialysis cost because, as one woman put it, "Otherwise, you die."

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — The old woman didn't even wince when the nurse slipped two large needles into her arm and started blood flowing through the blue metal machine dancing with flickering lights and dials.

It was just a routine "clinic Wednesday" for the elderly woman. She would come to the Gulf Coast Dialysis Center here again Friday and the following Monday. Three days a week, week after week, year after year, for the rest of her life, she would be there.

The woman is one of about 70,000 Americans receiving kidney dialysis at government expense under the End Stage Renal Disease program. Like no other federal program in history, it represents a government determination that no U.S. citizen with kidney disease will suffer from lack of treatment.

It is, said one doctor, "as if Congress legislated that no American shall die of kidney failure."

Governmental compassion, however, has collided with economic reality. Costs of the kidney patient care have soared far beyond expectation — last year, the government spent about $2 billion for kidney treatment. The ESRD program has laid bare, in stark, statistical terms, the basic conflict between the pricelessness of human life and the realistic limit of human resources.

Kidney disease is a catastrophic illness. The fist-sized kidneys filter wastes from and control the salt level in the blood. When they fail — due to high blood pressure, infection, trauma or genetic disorder — the body has no way to remove certain chemicals through the urine. Patients are poisoned by their own wastes. Thirty years ago, such patients simply died. There was little care to give.

When dialysis machines were developed, it became technically possible to filter the blood and keep kidney patients alive. At first, the machines were scarce. Doctors "played God," selecting by committee those who would receive dialysis and live.

As the machines became more common, cost alone became the major problem.

In 1972, Congress passed Public Law 92-603 creating the End Stage Renal Disease program. The law guaranteed that 80 percent of the costs of kidney dialysis and any other health care required by kidney patients would be paid by the government through supplemental Medicare funds. Everyone covered by Social Security is eligible. Rich, young, old or poor, the government pays.

In the first year of the program, about 19,000 patients benefitted at a total cost of $284 million. Since then, the cost has increased about 700 percent, to about $2 billion. Beyond inflation, the costs are up because people who would likely have died in the past are continuing in the program and new patients are being added at the rate of 7,000 to 8,000 a year.

By 1985, the Health Care Finance Administration, which runs the kidney disease payment program, estimates the costs will reach $4.5 billion.

Public Law 92-603, many feel, created a runaway program that is costing far more than expected, with costs likely only to keep climbing.

An industry has formed around the steady flow of Medicare dollars. Proprietary clinics, many organized by nephrologists, or kidney specialists, provide dialysis care all over the country. The arena is dominated by National Medical Care Corp., a Boston-based concern that serves more than 10,000 patients at 160 clinics.

Some experts have proposed changes in the regulations that would force more kidney patients to use self-dialysis at home.

Under current regulations, the government pays 80 percent of the typical $138 cost — about $110 — each time a patient receives dialysis in a clinic. Over a year, this amounts to about $17,160 per patient. The Health Care Finance Administration, looking for a way to control the rising expense, has proposed regulations designed to encourage the clinics to place more patients on cheaper at-home dialysis.

The new plan would cut the HCFA-approved cost of dialyzing from $138 to $128. The government would therefore pay dialysis clinics about $104 a head for patients treated at the clinics or supervised by clinics in at-home dialysis.

Since the costs of dialysis at home are lower, the clinic would keep more of the $104. The government hopes this will encourage clinics to send more patients home.

A kidney patient receiving dialysis at home would use a machine the family is trained to operate or a technique called Continuous Ambulatory Peritoneal Dialysis, in which fluid inserted into the body collects the wastes and is then drained through a tube in the abdomen.

Officials of the Health Care Finance Administration say the ESRD program would save $120 million in the next fiscal year alone, and more than $190 million the year after.

But at the Gulf Coast Dialysis Center, one of the largest in the nation, many patients are frightened that the proposed new rules would cut them off from the supervised dialysis of the clinic and force them to assume more responsibility for their own care. Many view such a change as a death sentence.

"I'm living by that machine," said Willmina Moore, 57, of Houston. "Otherwise, you die."

Miss Moore lives alone, but she tried peritoneal dialysis. With a tube surgically implanted in her side, she would inject fluid into her abdomen. The special solution would collect the wastes from her blood stream. Later, she would drain the fluid, removing the wastes.

"I didn't like that," said Miss Moore. "It just kept me sick. I got infections and had to go to the hospital."

Dear Abby

Adoptive Mom's letter brightens Mother's Day

By Abigail Van Buren

1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Because of a letter you ran two years ago signed "Mother of Two Plus One," my prayers were answered. I am enclosing a copy of it with the hope that you will run it again.

Thirteen years ago I, too, gave up a baby girl born out of wedlock. Last year, the day before Mother's Day, I received a beautiful letter from the woman who adopted my daughter when she was five days old. She not only told me a great deal about my birth child's personality and character and interests, she enclosed some pictures of her. (I had to pinch myself to make sure I wasn't dreaming!) I don't know this woman's name or where she lives and I will not try to locate her. (Her letter was forwarded to me from the adoption agency that placed my baby with her.)

Abby, never in my life did I expect to receive a gift so precious! Please run that letter every year before Mother's Day. It may inspire other mothers of adopted children to do what this generous, understanding woman did.

The letter that followed it, signed "Blessed in New Jersey," also deserves a rerun. I'm sure it would gladden the hearts of all women who bore children they could not keep. Sign me

MOTHER OF THREE PLUS ONE

DEAR MOTHER: With pleasure. Here they are:

DEAR ABBY: Ten years ago I gave birth to a daughter out of wedlock. I was very young and decided that my child was entitled to a better life than I could give her, so I gave her up for adoption.

Even though I subsequently married and have been blessed with two more daughters to love and raise, Mother's Day is the hardest day in the year for me. Not only was I unable to keep my firstborn, I know nothing about what kind of person she is; indeed I don't even know if she is alive.

Abby, you could do a tremendously important service if you would print this request to all mothers of adopted children:

Once a year, on Mother's Day (or on your child's birthday, Thanksgiving, New Year's or any day at all) write to the agency that placed your child with you and provide updated information about your child's development, interests, activities, and a little about your family life if you are willing. Request that your letter be forwarded to the child's natural mother. No identities need be revealed.

Believe me, Abby, for a mother who has had no word of her child for 10 years (or five or 15), there could be no greater Mother's Day gift.

MOTHER OF TWO PLUS ONE

DEAR MOTHER: Thank you for a wonderful suggestion. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I have a terrific marriage. It's the second time around for both of us, and we couldn't be happier. We've been married for five years.

There is only one problem. Dick still has "Amy Beth" tattooed on his arm. She is his ex-wife. It bothers me, and I have asked him to have it removed several times. He says he will, then it's forgotten until I mention it again.

When we are around Amy Beth and members of his family, I'm uneasy because the tattoo is very noticeable.

Why do you think Dick hasn't removed it? He says he never gives Amy Beth a thought. Any suggestions?

NO. 2

DEAR NO. 2: There could be several reasons: (1) He may not know where to go to have the tattoo removed. (A dermatologist could help him.) (2) He may think it's painful. (In some cases it is.) (3) He may think it's expensive. (See answer to No. 2.)

An alternate solution: There are two cosmetic products available to cover birthmarks, tattoos and skin discolorations: Dermablend and Covermark. Inquire where cosmetics are sold.

Since Dick no longer has Amy Beth on his mind, it's time he got her name from under his skin.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Kids! Whatcha gonna do this summer?

By DAVE BRUMMETT, MDiv

The presence of our youth will soon be upon us. School will terminate the latter part of next month, allowing educators a rest and putting responsibility of children where it belongs — in the home.

Some parents are looking forward to kids being home 24 hours a day. Plans are made for that three-month period of time to be meaningful and enjoyed. What is there to do that can be that beneficial?

Family vacations are something to look forward to. Everyone can be involved in the planning. Each can have a part in special assignments like locating camping, fishing or skiing items or anything else the trip calls for.

If vacations are postponed for awhile, other activities of interest are available for young people. Summer learning programs equip students to improve certain learning skills. Some young people look forward to special classes that work on certain subjects at a slower pace with less pressure. Reading classes are helpful. Math instruction can be useful. The library and public schools have helpful suggestions. Ask, you may be surprised at the summer programs offered.

"Forget school," you may say. Okay, more energetic interests are available. Sporting programs include most age groups — baseball, softball, golfing, bowling and swimming. Most of these are team sports. However, swimming lessons are taught all the way from beginners to life saving courses.

Summer is an excellent time to learn athletic skills. Special programs are going on in other cities which are developed to include large numbers of participants. The local Chamber of Commerce may be helpful in this case.

Still haven't hit your interest? Home projects are fun. Ever plant a garden? It's not only fun, but educational, too. Growing food and eating what you've grown can be a real treat. Tasting your labor is a reward some of us need. We feel important to ourselves and to others with whom we share our harvests. There is much to learn in growing a garden.

Jobs are a treat for some young people. Mowing grass, assisting small businesses, clerking in department stores, heavy labor outside can help youth to mature into healthier stores, heavy labor outside can help youth to mature into healthier adults. They learn certain job requirements, business ethics, ways to relate to people and how to follow the leader in such a way as to be productive and satisfying. A good boss can teach young employees basic skills which will benefit them throughout life. Summer employment is a good way to spend summer months. The income is nice, too.

Lazy, huh? Less work and more relaxation and free time? Summer camps are not tiring or filled with high expectations. Church camps are designed to teach a little religion and give more time for fun and socializing. Their curriculum is to be lenient on the mind and body, with special emphasis on the spiritual dimension. It's a good vocation for the total person.

Scouting activities are enjoyable. Other groups have planned programs which interest members and guests. There is plenty for us to do if we seek out what we want to enjoy.

Often family homes can be visited for a few days. Friends who have moved away often invite us for a visit. Grandparents like to have your company for awhile, too.

Mom and Dad find you a pleasure at home. The winter rules are loosened. Bedtime is later. Chores are quickly completed. More family time is available since school is out. Drives are fun.

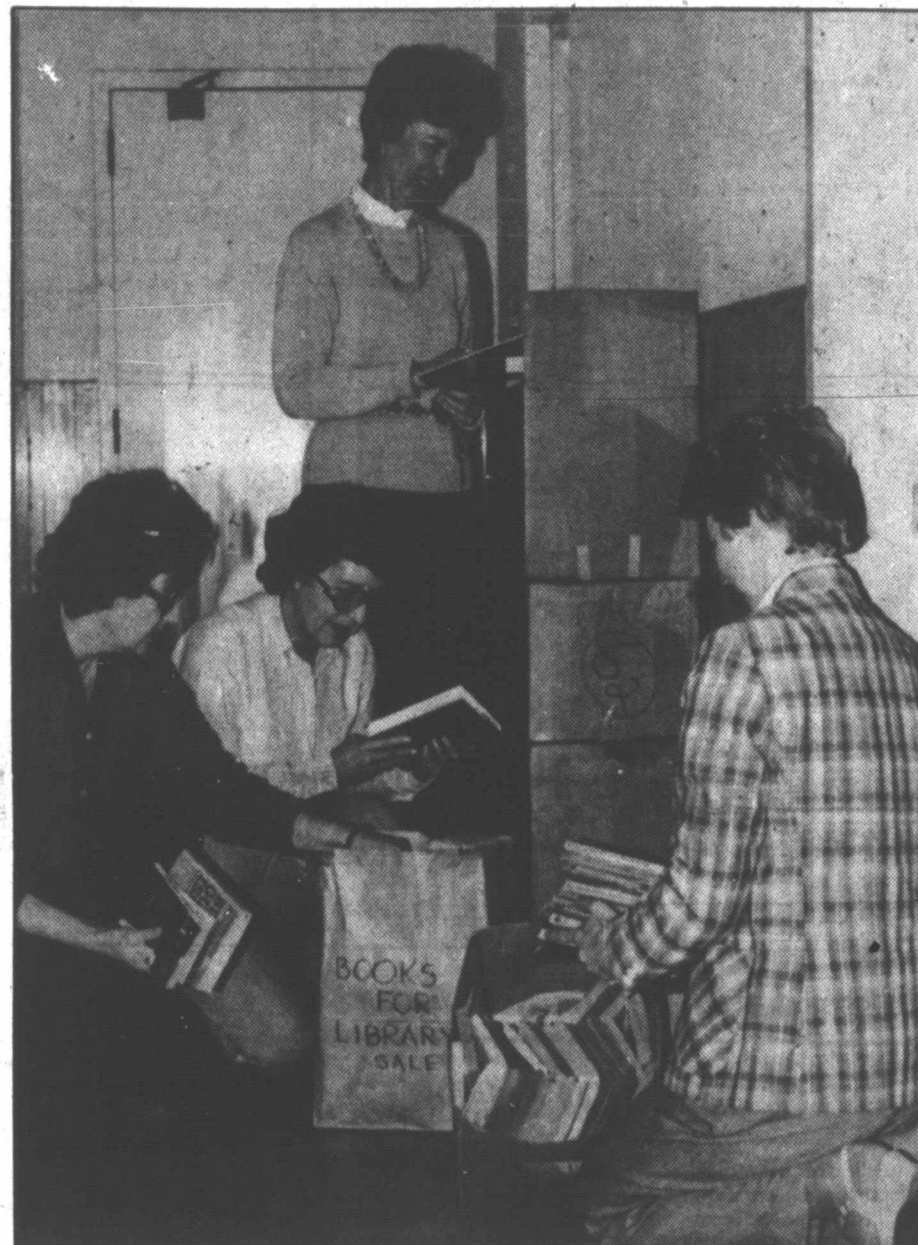

Spending time in the parks has its advantages when the family goes together. Playing together in the yard later at night is a blessing to family unity.

Summer offers us time out of doors in fresh open air where we can breathe deeply the aroma missed during winter's confinement. Jogging, walking, laying out to tan, sitting outside relaxing makes us stronger human beings. Summer can be fun for everyone.

What are you going to do with all the time this summer? Want something to do? It's available for each one of us. We have choices and we must choose. The opportunities will not come to us. It's our responsibility to seek them out.

Do nothing and become bored, lazy and miserable. Get involved and summer will be a flash of hope for tomorrow. Forget the summer blues. Be radiant with all that life has to offer and your mental health will be enriched.

Symptoms of stress

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently a woman wrote you about hypoglycemia. She listed symptoms that were similar to mine but I was diagnosed as being under stress. I have been seeing a psychologist intern for some time and not the slightest hope has been reached.

In addition to the symptoms of hypoglycemia, I also have sensations of crawling or tingling about the scalp area. I'm 26, weigh 136 pounds and am 5 feet 6 inches tall. I am not under any stress that I know of. I'm married with two sons, ages 7 and 1.

I've had a fasting blood test but not a long test where you are given sugar during testing.

Should I leave well enough alone and accept the stress diagnosis? I'm getting weak and have an appetite but it is not a healthy one. I try to exercise but my body fights back.

DEAR READER — Mental stress or emotional stress causes the body to produce adrenaline. The body's reaction to adrenaline causes nervousness, sweating, faintness, a fast heart and other symptoms we ascribe to anxiety.

When your blood glucose level falls it causes your body to produce adrenaline too because adrenaline causes your liver to pour out glucose and raise your blood glucose to more normal levels. In both situations adrenaline causes the same symptoms of sweating, faintness, a fast heart and others. So that is why stress and hypoglycemia produce many of the same symptoms.

Yes, you should have a glucose tolerance test long enough to see if you have hypoglycemia. Your psychologist does not know whether you have hypoglycemia or not without the test. Besides if you don't, removing the doubt will improve your response to therapy.

Everybody has stress in life. There are varying degrees of stress. Actually stress is important in your development and that doesn't stop when you become an adult but continues for everyone to understand stress and how to manage it in their life.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In a column you told the woman who had no uterus and wanted a child that if one of her ova was fertilized by her husband's sperm as in test tube babies and the fertilized ovum was implanted in another woman's uterus, she might be able to have a child. You added that while this was done in the cattle industry it had not yet been done in humans. In the same paper there was an article on surrogate mothers. Since this is being done, do you want to change your advice?

DEAR READER — No, you misread the news story you sent me. Surrogate mothers do not have a fertilized ovum from a test tube implanted in their uterus. At this date the procedure is done with artificial insemination.

Mixes found low in potassium

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS: Powdered breakfast drinks such as Tang and Borden have been advertised as supplying the daily requirement of vitamin C. Can you tell me if they also supply potassium? I couldn't find that information on the label.

DEAR READER: Extra potassium may be required by people with certain conditions (hypertensives using diuretics, chronic diarrhea sufferers, and heavy users of laxatives, many of whom excrete excessive amount of potassium). Fresh and processed orange juice are good sources of potassium. However, Consumer Reports food technologists say that imitations of orange juice, and especially the powdered variety, are less reliable.

The food technologists had the imitation breakfast drinks analyzed for potassium when they last tested orange drink mixes (Consumer Reports magazine, February 1977). The powdered beverage mixes — Start, Tang, Borden, Ann Page and Pantry Pride — were all found to be exceedingly low in potassium. The food technologists said that Tang, which contained the most potassium of the powders, would provide only 52 milligrams in its recommended four-ounce serving. On the other hand, a four-ounce glass of real or processed orange juice supplies about 245 mg of potassium on average.

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS: The siding on my house is of asbestos shingles and requires painting. However, the sides of the gable are high and hard to reach. I want to cover that high area with either vinyl siding or aluminum siding. Must I remove the asbestos shingles before putting on new siding or can I place the new siding on top of the asbestos shingles?

DEAR READER: Consumer Reports engineers see no reason why you can't put the new siding over the old shingles.

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS: I need to know how to get a strong musty smell out of some colored towels that were stored away for several years. I've tried numerous washings and several brands and types of both detergent and fabric softeners. None have worked. I cannot stand to use them as they are.

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS: We have a concrete block building that continues to mildew on one side. Is there any way to stop this. I have the building rented and need to repaint it as soon as possible.

DEAR READERS: To answer the second question first, Consumer Reports chemists suggest that you ask your paint supplier to add additional mildewicide to your paint. The chemists say that any well-equipped paint store/supplier should have such additives. Or check the August 1982 issue of Consumer Reports magazine (available at your library) for the report on the mildew resistance of more than 300 home paints.

In answer to the first reader, the chemists suspect that the musty odor in the towels is also mildew. To eliminate the odor, they suggest that you try washing the towels with bleach. That is an effective way to kill mildew. But make sure you follow the directions on the bleach package carefully so that you don't eliminate all of the color in the towels.

DIET FACTS & FALLACIES

DIETING

At last, it's spring! Thoughts turn to beaches and swimwear, tennis and shorts, and DIETING! As the warm weather approaches, people want to shed their winter clothes, and those extra bulges that were hidden, so they can look nice in their summer ones. Look for a weight-control program, not just a fad diet. A safe program will supply your body with all of the nutrients it needs to function properly, not just all liquids, or all fiber.

Do you realize that you can diet, become slim, and still not look and feel your best? This is because you have deprived your body of necessary vitamins and minerals. The Diet Center Program meets all RDA and the Seven U.S. Dietary Goals. Your Diet Center Counselor can provide a complete, safe, weight-reduction program for you and also teach you to keep weight off through good nutrition.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

Because your sights will be set higher this coming year, that which you hope to bring into being may take a little longer to achieve. Don't be discouraged, even if the pace is sluggish.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In striving for your objectives today, you must be very careful not to wound others in the process. Be a go-getter, but also be a nice guy. Order now. The NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet which reveals romantic combinations, compatibilities for all signs, tells how to get along with others, finds rising signs, hidden qualities, plus more. Mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Send an additional $1 for your Taurus Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead. Be sure to give your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Disengage yourself from unproductive procedures today once you see they'll not produce desirable results. Don't attempt to ride a dead horse.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Caution and prudence are required today in joint ventures, especially if they are a financial or commercial nature.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try to stay on top of terms with coworkers today. If relationships aren't affable each may cause unnecessary problems for the other.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your judgment in financial or career matters might not be up to its usual standards today. Stall for time so that you can study important decisions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't try to force issues today if others are not in accord with your ways of doing things. Reluctant supporters will prove of small value.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It may prove wiser today, not to do things for others which you resent doing. If your heart isn't in it, they'll be displeased and so will you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) To be independent is admirable, but today if you are too insistent upon having your own way it will awaken animosity in friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There's a possibility you could strive very hard for something today and, once you get it, discover it really wasn't worth the effort.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Timing is very important now, so don't try to push projects before they're ready. If you do, a venture with promising potential could fail.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Guard against tendencies today to compound mistakes. Errors should be promptly corrected instead of trying to make the most of a bad situation.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Take pains to instantly rectify matters if you have a disagreement today with someone with whom you usually get along well. Don't let it fester.

Boston downed; Sixers advance

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD

The Boston Celtics, on the verge of being swept in a best-of-7 series for the first time in their storied history, are still talking about making up a 3-0 deficit against the Milwaukee Bucks.

The Celtics, who won National Basketball Association titles in 1968 and 1981 after trailing 3-1 in the playoffs and took the 1969 championship after falling behind 2-0 in the finals, face a task that no team in league history has been able to accomplish.

"I've got 11 guys with a new slogan — 'You can count us down, but not out,'" Boston Coach Bill Fitch said after the Bucks beat the Celtics 107-99 Sunday. "If there is any team in sports that can come back from 3-0, I think I might be coaching it."

Elsewhere in the NBA playoffs, Philadelphia beat New York 105-102 for a four-game sweep of the other Eastern Conference semifinal. In the West, Portland cut its series deficit to 3-1 with a 108-95 triumph over Los Angeles, while San Antonio, leading 3-0, is at Denver tonight.

"I think if we can come back and win three in a row to tie, we'll win it," Fitch said.

But Larry Bird, who led Boston with 21 points after having missed Friday night's game with a 104-degree fever, said the Celtics will need more than slogans to come back.

"We're hurting ourselves," Bird said. "We used to be a great basketball team down the stretch, getting big spurts of points. Now we're struggling down the stretch. We'll have to play a lot better."

Sidney Moncrief scored 26 points for Milwaukee, while Marques Johnson added 22 and ignited a fourth-quarter surge with seven straight Bucks points.

With the score tied 87-87, Milwaukee started going to Johnson inside because he was being guarded by slower-moving forward Scott Wedman. Johnson scored on a three-point play and two jumpers to give Milwaukee a 94-89 lead with 6:46 left, and Boston never caught up.

"Scott is a good defensive player fundamentally, but I have certain advantages on him down low," Johnson said. "I think I can use my quickness and jumping ability to get the shot off."

The Bucks admit that behind ahead 3-0 is a surprise development because of Boston's tradition and its regular-season record that was five games better than Milwaukee's.

"I'm sure no one expected us to be up 3-0," Johnson said. "It's a new experience for us because the only series we ever won in my six years here was a mini-series with Phoenix. It's surprising, but we've played good enough that it's not a fluke thing."

"To be quite honest, I didn't think in terms of being anywhere after three games," Bucks Coach Don Nelson said. "We just approached each game as it came and tried to give it our best shot."

Moses Malone, who outscored New York centers Bill Cartwright and Marvin Webster 125-60 in the four-game series, rallied from a frustrating first half to score 23 of his 29 points after halftime.

Malone's heroics will allow the battered 76ers to rest at least until Sunday before meeting the Bucks-Celtics winner.

"I'm very pleased to win in four games," Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham said. "Our concern now is we have several injured players."

Guard Maurice Cheeks sprained his right ankle and Clemon Johnson suffered a slight hamstring pull to join Malone, flu-weakened Bobby Jones and Andrew Toney with health problems for the 76ers. Malone has two gimpy knees and Toney a bruised thigh that kept him out of action for most of the second half after he scored 14 points in the 24 minutes.

"Our depth was a big factor," Cunningham said. "I'm very pleased with what we achieved with having people injured."

Lions Club was shared by Andy Eck and Scott Stubbs, and the Lions' Fighting Tigerette was Maria Eck.

Senior Kevin Nicholson was recognized as the outstanding basketball player by coach Frank Purcell.

Speaker at the banquet was Dick Todd, who was a football star at Texas A & M and then played professionally for the Washington Redskins.

Lion Ted Simmons was master of ceremonies for the banquet, which also recognized outstanding members of the tennis, golf, track and field and basketball teams.

Crenshaw scores home-state win

IRVING, Texas (AP) — It was just about a year ago, on a Friday afternoon in a muddy parking in north Dallas, that Ben Crenshaw was loading his clubs in the trunk of his car, a victim of the cut in the Byron Nelson Classic.

He pulled a wedge out of his bag and peered at it with a puzzled expression.

"I don't know," he said with a pained expression. "I'm just so confused. I don't know where to turn. One person tells me one thing, another tells me something else. I don't know what to do."

He was, at that time, in the midst of a dismal, puzzling, exasperating slump, the worst of his life.

It ended Sunday when Crenshaw, cheered on by thousands of howling, yelling and stampeding fellow Texans, rode an eagle-birdie-birdie burst to a 5-under-par 66 and a one-stroke victory in the Nelson Classic that moved from its long-time home at Preston Trail to the new Las Colinas Sports Club course between Dallas and Fort Worth.

"I can't tell you what it is to win this tournament," Crenshaw said, his voice husky with emotion.

Veteran's bat dooms Astros

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Thanks to Tony Perez, the second century of Philadelphia Phillies baseball is off to a good start. Perez, who will be 41 on May 14, collected a single, double, home run and five RBIs Sunday as the Phillies beat the Houston Astros 11-3.

Perez, who was signed as a free agent during the off season to play the role of pinch hitter and utility first baseman, is leading the National League in hitting with a .391 average.

He's one percentage point ahead of San Diego catcher Terry Kennedy.

"I've got to get away from him (Kennedy)," said a confident Perez, who has driven in 17 runs this season.

Perez now has hit in 10 straight games, going 16-for-38 for a .421 average.

He was most proud of his first home run of the season, a two-run shot in the sixth.

"I had to get (teammates) Joe Morgan and Pete Rose off my back. They call me a singles hitter," said the native of Camaguey, Cuba.

Perez said he isn't surprised the way he's hitting. "I always could hit. I am surprised I am playing so much."

"Right now I feel nobody can get me out," he said. "Even when they jam me I swing and the ball falls in for me."

His playing time at first base is up because outfielder Von Hayes is hurt, and Rose, who usually plays first, is in Hayes' spot.

Phillies Manager Pat Corrales said even if Hayes was ready, Perez would still be at first base.

"Until he cools off everybody has to wait," said the manager. "We knew he (Perez) could hit — that's why we got him."

Corrales said Perez is "getting a break because they are going around Mike Schmidt," who bats ahead of Perez. "I'll let them pitch to Schmidt if they want to."

Schmidt also is on a tear. In the last 12 games, he is 16-for-42 for a .372 average, and is tied for the league lead in runs with 20.

The first five runs off the Astros' Bob Knepper (1-3) were unearned.

In the first inning with two out, Morgan walked and Schmidt got on base on an error. Perez singled home Morgan.

With one out in the third, Gary Matthews reached base on an error by shortstop Dickie Thon. Morgan walked, Schmidt doubled in one run, Perez hit a sacrifice fly for another. Garry Maddox ripped a run-scoring double, and Ozzie Virgil singled across Maddox, who has hit in nine straight games.

In the fourth Rose and Matthews singled, and Morgan drove home Rose with a single.

Native Texan helps whip Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)

— Maybe it was the meeting with owner George Steinbrenner before the game that inspired him. Maybe it was playing before his family, which traveled to the game from his home in Tyler, Texas, about 115 miles away.

But whatever it was, Jerry Mumphrey said he felt confident Sunday — confident enough to slug three hits, drive home two runs and lead the New York Yankees to an 8-4 victory over the Texas Rangers.

"I felt as confident as ever that I'd do well," said Mumphrey, who grew up in Tyler and still lives in the East Texas city. "This was the first big day I've had in a while down here. I've been pressing and trying to do too much. But today I was relaxed."

"I look forward to coming down here and playing in Texas," he said.

Steinbrenner crowded his players into a small office reserved for visiting managers and reminded them that he is paying them to win. The Yankees had fallen to 9-11 after two losses to the Rangers Friday and Saturday.

"Our big guns aren't coming through. Our pitching stinks," Steinbrenner said Saturday night.

Unless the Yankees' play improves, "there are going to be some trades. We'd better wake up pretty soon," he said.

"We won today and we hope it is the beginning of a winning streak. Whether the talk with the owner had any effect, it's too early to tell," said Mumphrey, whose three hits included an opposite-field home run on the game's first pitch.

"The scouting report on Mumphrey was that we could go after him with hard stuff," said Texas starter Mike Smithson, 3-1, who took the loss in 6 1-3 innings of work.

"The next time I face him I'll go after him the same way, though. I don't know how he hit the homerun because the pitch was by him," said Smithson, who gave up nine of New York's 15 hits.

The Yankees have lost the first game of all eight series they've played this year, and have won the last game of every series as well.

"What does it mean? It means that when they lose the first one, they'll turn around and win the last," said Manager Billy Martin. "It's not always going to stay that way. We'll start winning more."

Hall of Famer dies

Norm Van Brocklin dead at 56

MONROE, Ga. (AP) — Norm Van Brocklin, who led the Philadelphia Eagles to the National Football League title in 1960 and later coached the Minnesota Vikings and Atlanta Falcons, died early today, according to a spokeswoman at Walton County Hospital.

Van Brocklin, 56, showed no signs of life when an ambulance arrived at his home in Social Circle shortly before 1 a.m., said Anne Haymaker, a nursing supervisor at the hospital. She said he was pronounced dead at the hospital at 1:05 a.m. EDT.

Ms. Haymaker said she did not know the cause of death, but "there is no question it's nothing other than natural causes."

Van Brocklin starred for the Los Angeles Rams before being traded to Philadelphia where he led the Eagles to their last league crown in his final season as a player. He was a collegiate All-American at Oregon and was voted into the NFL Hall of Fame.
