Warrant list a wake-up for many

by Rachel Stennett rstennett@thepampanews.com

olume 104 • No. 256

The list of outstandign warrants, which ran in The Pampa News last week, has already caused the "phones to ring off the walls," according to personnel at the municipal court, with people paying for warrants and debt owed to the city.

Since January 5, the Municipal Court has cleared 253 warrants from the list. Multiple people rant at a time and a total of 162 people have cleared warrants so far, amounting to a total of $28,478 dues paid to the city.

According to Sergeant Colby Brown, $11,000 of fees owed from warrants were cleared on Monday. Brown said that before the list was ran, many people didn't know they had existing warrants, including a man from Amarillo who had a warrant dating back

"People are calling and making arrangements everyday," Brown said. "It is working just great."

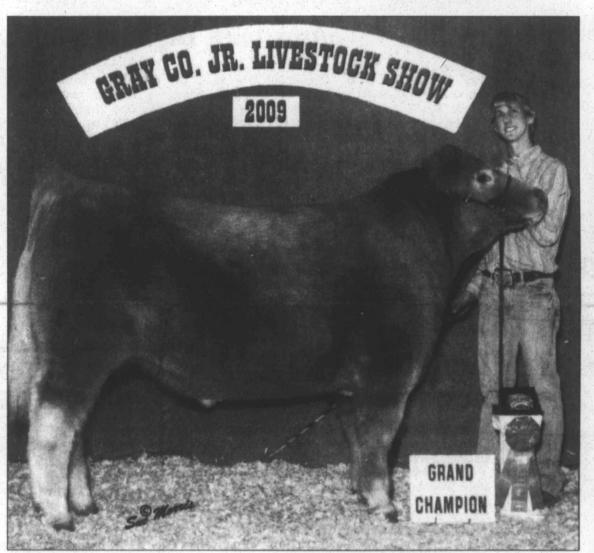

The Municipal Court continues issuing new warrants every Thursday, including 30 warrants issued this week. The warrant list of names with people ran in The Pampa News on Thursday, Jan. 22 (A-L), Friday, Jan. 23 (M-O) and Jan. 24 and 25 (P-cleared more than one war- to 1997 that he took care Z). The list of names included all people who had warrants as of Jan. 10. If warrants were settled after that date, it would not be reflected in the list. An official warrantround up will begin on March 3, with over 120 law enforcement agencies participating. At that time, if you have a warrant, you may be arrested. At the end of December, the residents of the city of Pampa owed almost $1 million in fines.

In order to null the warrant with Pampa Municipal Court and Pampa Police Department and Gray County, appear in person at the Municipal Court in Pampa Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. or mail payment to Pampa Municipal Court, P.O. ### County officials reconsider bids

by David Bowser dbowser@thepampanews.com

Vehicles will the major topic of concern at the Gray County Commission meeting Monday morning.

The commissioners court will meet beginning at 9 a.m. in the Gray County Courtroom at the court house. The commissioners court will reconsider bids for a pickup for the Sheriff's Office. The bid that was opened at the last commission meeting was deemed unacceptable because it didn't give enough value for the two cars the Sheriff plans on trading in.

The county commission will also consider going out for bids to replace a tank tractor truck for Precinct 2 and financing a motorgrader through Welsh State Bank.

The commission will consider declaring an old Ford tractor at Perry Lefors Airport surplus property.

They will also consider a request for water usage at the airport. Several new hangers are being built at Perry Lefors Airport and the tenants at the airport had requested a new well and water lines two weeks ago, but the commission tabled the request until they could gather information on the costs involved. The county owns the airport and leases space for hangers.

They will also hear the 2008 racial profile report from the Precinct 2 Constable. The County Clerk and District Clerk will be recognized for completing continuing education hours and several individuals will be recognized for completing academic requirements for emergency management. The commission will also consider one or two year

Crews worked to replace a broken water line Friday afternoon at the intersection of Cuyler and Francis streets. The break caused minor flooding on surrounding streets. The crews had to remove the brick paving of the streets and dig to access the pipe, then replace the brick stone by stone after completion.

newsman Gittings

WEATHERFORD, Okla. (AP) — Longtime newsman Larry Gittings, who worked at several newspapers in Oklahoma and north Texas, has died. He was 57.

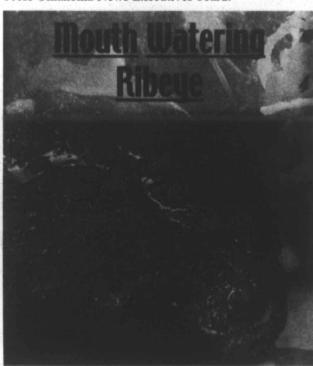

Gittings most recently worked as the managing editor of the Weatherford Daily News. Gittings was in the newspaper's office Thursday morning when he began to feel faint, publisher Phillip Reid said.

Gittings was taken to a hospital in Weatherford, where doctors thought they had him stabilized before he suffered a massive heart attack, Reid said. Gittings, from Grandfield in southwestern Oklahoma, graduated from Oklahoma State University in 1972. His career included stops at the Wichita Falls (Texas) Record News, the Frederick Daily Leader, the Graham (Texas) Leader and the Gainesville (Texas) Daily Register before he became the managing editor of the

Duncan Banner in August 1981. Gittings had been the managing editor at the Weatherford newspaper for eight years, Reid said. Gittings also was a former member of the Associated Press Oklahoma News Executives board.

Texas' Amber Alert policy too narrow, some say

DALLAS (AP) — A state agency's refusal to issue an Amber Alert for a missing 11-year-old girl believed to have run off with a convicted felon was questioned Friday by advocates for missing children and a Texas

They said the Department of Public Safety should reconsider its policy of issuing the alerts only when children are abducted by strangers or taken unwillingly.

"People who prey on children more often use seduction rather than ropes," said Rep. Garnett Coleman, a Houston legislator who has focused on children's issues. Police in Tyler, about 100 miles east of Dallas, requested the Amber Alert after the girl's mother reported her missing

Late Friday night, police said the girl's mother, Maira Macias, was at police headquarters when she received a call from her daughter. The girl told Macias she is in Mexico with 23-year-old Enrique Vasquez, who was convicted of burglary in 2006.

Police have issued an arrest warrant for Vasquez on charges of kidnapping and violating probation. There was no information on the girl's condition or whether she was in the custody of Mexican officials.

Police told Tyler TV station KLTV that they are working with the U.S. State Department and Mexican authorities to make sure the girl can be reunited with family members in Mexico.

DPS spokeswoman Tela Mange said the Amber Alert was created in response to the 1996 kidnapping and murder of 9-year-old Amber Hagerman in Arlington, and was primarily intended for use in stranger abduction cases.

If overused, the system could become less effective, Mange said, adding that about 7,000 people are reported missing in Texas each year, most of them runaways. "This guy is not a stranger," said Mange. "As horrible as it is, he's not a stranger." Although the Amber Alert program is coordinated by the U.S. Department of Justice, states are allowed to set their own procedures on how and when it should be used. Texas' Amber Alert criteria is similar to those recommended by the Justice Department, but adds a provision requiring that the child be "unwillingly taken from their guardian. But child advocates wonder if the state's policy is too environment without permission" of a parent or Marilyn Ward, executive director of Houston-based National Missing Children's Center, said the DPS should also allow alerts for runaways aged 14 and younger.

"In this case, even if she went willingly, she's 11 years," Ward said. "An 11-year-old can be coerced to do all kinds of things, especially with an older man like that. I'd like them not to adhere so tightly to the rules.'

Cathy Crabtree, executive director of the Children's Advocacy Centers of Texas, Inc. in Austin, agreed.

"There's no question the way the penal code is written, that a child 14 and under cannot give consent," Crabtree

"If they pick this guy up and find out he's had a sexual relationship with this child, regardless of whether she went with him willingly, there's no way they can't press charges," Crabtree said. "What harm can there be in running it versus the potential harm of not finding this child?"

Of the 236 requests to DPS for Amber Alerts since 2002, only 42 were activated -- or about 18 percent, according to agency records. Two alerts have been requested so far this year and both were denied.

Stimulus bill not all that stimulating

by ANDREW TAYLOR Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) -They call it "stimulus" legislation, but the economic measures racing through Congress would devote tens of billions of dollars to causes that have little to do with jolting the country out of recession.

There's $345 million for Agriculture Department computers, $650 million for TV converter boxes, $15 billion for college scholarships - worthy, perhaps, but not likely to put many Americans back to work quickly.

Yes, there are many billions of dollars in "readyto-go" job-creating projects in President Barack Obama's economic stimulus bill. But there are also plenty of items that are just unfinished business for Congress' old bulls.

An $800 billion-plus package, it turns out, gives lawmakers plenty of opportunities to rid themselves of nagging headaches left over from the days when running up the government's $10 trillion-plus debt was a bigger concern.

There's $1 billion to deal with Census problems and $88 million to help move the Public Health Service into a new building next year. The Senate would devote $2.1 billion to pay off a looming shortfall in public housing accounts,

News Analysis $870 million to combat the flu and $400 million to slow the spread of HIV and other sexually transmitted diseases such as chlamy-"I have communicated to the administration that there are parts of this package that don't meet the test that they themselves established of temporary, timely and targeted," said Senate Budget Committee Chairman Kent Conrad, D-N.D. He wants Obama to weigh in to knock out the clunkers during House-

Senate negotiations. But nothing is in the legislation by accident. By including in the Senate stimulus bill such far-ranging ideas as $40 million to convert the way health statistics are collected - from paper to an electronic system - lawmakers are able to thin out their in-boxes, even if they aren't doing much to create jobs.

There's also $380 million in the Senate bill for a rainy day fund for the Women, Infants and Children program that delivers healthful food to the poor. WIC got the equivalent of a $1 billion infusion last fall. At the same time, putting items in the stimulus bill that really should be handled in annual appropriations bills creates more room in the latter for pet projects and other programs.

It creates "headroom," a top Senate GOP budget aide said, for things senators didn't have room for in the regular process but still want to do.

Some lawmakers are sounding warnings.

"I suggested ... less spending and especially less spending for those items that are not stimulus and should be funded through the regular appropriations process," said Rep. Jerry Lewis of California, top Republican on the Appropriations Committee.

Part of the reason so much non-stimulus spending has made it into the stimulus bill is that there are only so many traditional jobs-heavy public works projects that can get started quickly. As it is, most of the money in the bill for road building, water projects and mass transit probably won't be spent until the economy has turned around and is back on a recovery path.

For example, just onethird of $30 billion proposed by the House for highway construction would reach the economy in the next year and a half, according to Congressional Budget

Office. Democrats are going ahead with Obama's $500 tax credit for most workers and $1,000 for couples even though there's wide agreement that last year's rebate checks weren't effective in sparking recovery.

Defenders of the package said that once experts determined it would take $800 billion to start to pull the country out of recession and emphasized the urgency, details took on less importance.

"If the house is burning, you're not going to worry about which hose you grab, so long as you get water on the fire," said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., one of the chief authors of the House package as chairman of its appropriations committee.

But some Democrats, like Sen. Ben Nelson of Nebraska, think the $3.5 billion in the stimulus package devoted to health research, or the $14 billion-$15 billion for boosting Pell Grant college scholarships by $400 to $500 would be better spent on additional brick and mortar infrastructure proj-

"You don't want to be against Pell Grants," Nelson said. "But the question is, how many people go to work on Pell Grants? Should it be in this legislation if it's about jobs?"

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor.

Lately I have noticed that the Texas Department of Education had another hot topic going. It seems that both creationists and evolutionsts are trying to prove by science, education, history and by what history seems to have been, whether there is a God who created man and the world.

Let me skip that point for a moment. The best evidence in the world is the fruit results. If you want freedom for everybody to do their own thing with no respect for father, mother, family, peace officer or preachers, then you have that and have had every since evolution has been strongly taught in our schools. They have no foundation for teaching be kind to one another. To teach children not to kill would meet with, "What if it is to my benefit?" or "Where does that requirement come from?"

Evolution has no foundation to teach that there is a 'right and wrong.'

When I was born (Sept. 1912) most of the loans where made over a hand-shake and most of our doors had no locks on

A greater percentage of people believed there was a God to give an account to, and they feared to face an angry God.

If a school teacher has taught that it was a normal thing for young people to have sex before marriage, that teacher would have been in danger of being hanged to a tree or some other serious sentence.

Being 96 years old, it tears me apart to hear lawmakers or peace, officer say, "We don't know what to do with crimes increasing so fast."

I weep and shake my head at such ignorance. It makes me sick to think about the better morals that we have lost since public prayers to Jesus were removed from our schools and the Ten Commandments were taken from the public school walls.

Think of the millions of taxpayer dollars aid to victims of "AIDs, etc." brought on by sex sins.

No other religion in the world has ever produced such high morals as are set in the Ten Commandments, that were given to God's people through Moses.

This nation was not founded on evolution, but it is being destroyed by it. I think American should demand that evolutionists encourage better morals, or get out of business.

Colton Adams - Boys Soccer

Colton Adams plays Right/Left back for the Boys Varsity Team. He has a high work rate and is a very physical player defensively. He has good instincts and never backs down from a tackle while providing a key piece to our defense. We are very inexperienced and Colton has great soccer intelligence, which we depend on frequently. He has a great future with PHS Soccer starting this year as a freshman!

April has been a stalwart on the Lady Harvester Soccer Team playing many positions due to injuries and her versatility a a player. April is very diminutive in stature, however she has a huge heart and drive to succeed.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Last year, my elderly father fell, suffering a head injury that caused his death. Dad had a chronic illness that kept him housebound during the last year of his life.

Prior to his death, my mother began corresponding with, and inviting, an old high school boyfriend to visit. (He lived six hours away.) This man, "Milton," moved in with Mother while my father was still alive.

Mom has been with Milton ever since, first at her home and now at his winter home down south. My siblings and I are aghast at her behavior. She phones and sends cheery e-mails as if she were on an extended holiday and having the time of her life. Meanwhile, we are still mourning our father's loss

We have tried to share our feelings with her, but she refuses to acknowledge them. She says she "understands," but we don't think she does. Otherwise, why would she

move away from her children at this sad time? --LOST OUR MOTHER,

100 DEAR LOST: Your mother may have done it because she went through much of the grieving process long before your father actually passed away. She does understand your feelings, but in an emotional -- and now physical -- sense she has moved on. I don't know the circumstances of your parents' marriage, but if she made your father happy while he was alive, then try to be happy for her now. DEAR ABBY: I am only 24, but consider myself an old-fashioned parent. My wife and I have three daughters who are the center of our lives. Everywhere we go, we are complimented on how well-behaved our children are. When asked for our "secret," we tell the truth -- we use the belt to keep our children in line. When I was a child, my mom did the same with me, and I know it's more help than harm.

The problem is, as soon as people hear it they assume we simply beat our kids into submission. How can I help people understand that discipline and abuse are two different things? -- JOHN IN SAVANNAH

DEAR JOHN: Abuse and discipline ARE two different things. Abuse is punishment. Discipline teaches -- and helps a child to eventually become selfdisciplined. Using a belt on your little girls shows them that violence is acceptable -- and that they can expect it from you, just as you learned it was acceptable from your parents.

There are more effective ways to communicate with children than by hitting them with belts. Grounding them, taking away toys, cell phone and television privileges are effective, nonviolent and preferable means of letting a child know that certain behaviors are unacceptable.

The really important Super Bowl stuff: Food, halftime and commercials

Lots of chicken to chow

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Buffalo's football team won't have a place in this year's Super Bowl hoopla, but don't worry, its chicken wings will.

Amid unnerving media reports that spread from here to New York City and even Seattle about a potential shortage of the Buffalo-born appetizer heading into the big game, authorities say yes, production is down and yes, prices are up.

"But there's plenty of wings," assured Richard Lobb, spokesman for the National Chicken Council in Washington.

For those scoring at home, that'll mean about 1 billion wings scarfed down over the Super Bowl weekend.

In the last week or so, some fretted that the spicy snack would be scarce for a number of reasons: the highest wholesale and retail prices in recent memory; an industrywide, economy-driven drop in production of 5 to 6 percent; a bankruptcy protection filing from the nation's largest chicken producer, Pittsburg, Texas-based Pilgrim's Pride, though it remains in business; and a push to sell wings by restaurant chains like Pizza Hut and KFC. Taken together, connoisseurs worried that demand would outstrip supply.

And chicken wings were indeed missing for a day from the kitchen of one Niagara Falls restaurateur, but that was by design. Owner Sam Musolino refused to serve wings at Sammy's Pizzeria Monday to protest the annual price increases that arrive every year just in time for the big football weekend.

"They're basically just taking advantage of the pizzerias," said Musolino, who said he was paying $46 per 40-pound box of wings before the price jumped to $78 for the same case.

Lobb said the price is up because feed prices have gone through the roof and chicken producers have had to cut production as consumers have cut spending at casual dining restaurants that favor chicken dishes.

There has also been an oversupply of meat on the market, due to slumping demand, which had been hurting pricing — further crimping margins. It all boiled down to production cuts.

Now that supply is smaller and prices are up, Musolino said he can't pass along the temporary spike to customers — not that they'd pay anyway. "Everyone's so tapped out these days, there's no way you can raise the prices."

It's no trivial thing in this city that gave the world Buffalo wings. Anchor Bar owner Teressa Bellissimo first deep fried the wings and dunked them in hot sauce on a Friday night in 1964 when her son Dominic's hungry friends dropped in while he was tending bar. Until then, the wings were usually used for the stock pot.

Wholesale prices for fresh wings are up to $1.51 a pound this week, compared to $1.24 last year. But as of Jan. 1, the poultry industry had 38.3 million pounds of chicken wings on hand, down slightly from about 40 million pounds a year earlier, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

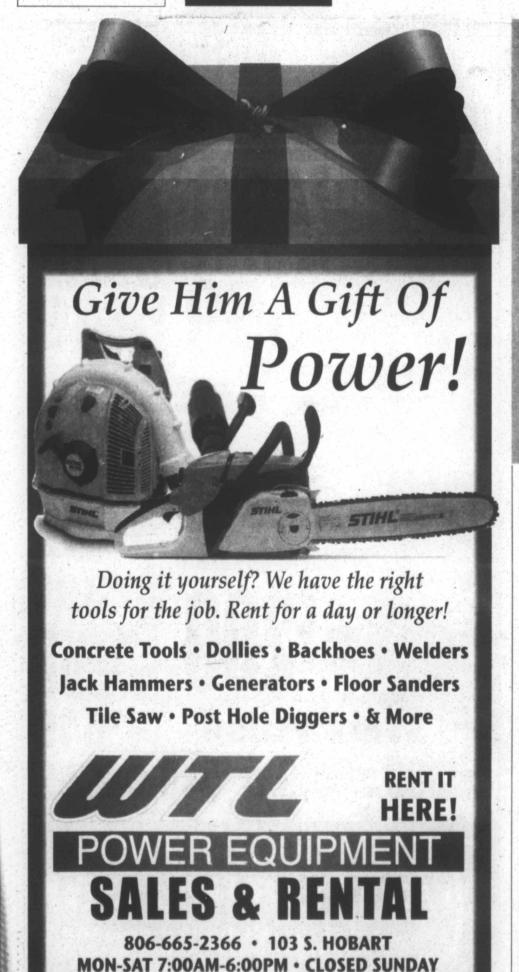

"It's America's number one appetizer," said Drew Cerza, founder of Buffalo's annual chicken wing festival, who, incidentally, won't be frying up any wings on Sunday.

"It's my day off," he said.

Super Bowl kick-off is 5:17 p.m.

Super Bowl ads promise glitz, guffaws, groans

by DEBORAH YAO AP Business Writer

It's time for that annual winter ritual where people gather before their TV screens to whoop and holler as they gobble down unhealthy treats.

Yes, it's Super Bowl time. And Sunday's NFL championship wouldn't be complete without a look at its uber-expensive advertising, which is priced at an alltime high.

On Friday, NBC, a unit of General Electric Co., said it was in talks to sell the last two of the 67 spots for the game, which have gone for between $2.4 million and $3 million per 30-second slot.

"Considering the state of the economy in the United States, we couldn't be any more thrilled," said Dick Ebersol, chairman of NBC Universal Sports & Olympics.

The Super Bowl remains the premier advertising event: It boasts a U.S. audience of 100 million, the biggest of any American telecast. It's also a marketer's dream: Viewers actually like watching the commercials.

This year, a few commercials will reflect the weak economy, but by and large, the ads aim to deliver glitz, guffaws and groans, Aî like they do every year.

There will be celebrity appearances in ads, including Conan O'Brien for Bud Light, John Turturro for Heineken USA Inc. and Jason Statham for Audi of America Inc.

Animals will figure prominently again, with Anheuser-Busch's Clydesdales expected to appear in three of seven commercials from the Budweiser brewer. One is a tearjerker about a horse that joins the Internet domain registrar The Go Daddy Group Inc., will air a somewhat risque spot, as it has done in the past. While its less-than-slick ads that the company made itself, featuring racer Danica Patrick, are bound to make viewers groan, Go Daddy doesn't care. At least Go Daddy got approved. People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals got steamed because NBC rejected its ad for vegetarianism that featured half-naked women playing with vegetables.

To be sure, such tempests are part of the marketing shenanigans surrounding the game. At the very least, it drives people online to watch the banned ad.

John Gerzema, chief insights officer at Y&R, a unit of advertising giant WPP Group PLC, said keeping the brand top of mind after the Super Bowl gets advertisers the most bang for the small fortune spent to buy air time.

A 30-second Super Bowl spot is about 20 times more expensive than the average commercial time on prime time network programs this time of year, according to TNS Media.

As such, "the Super Bowl is a colossal waste of money if you can't integrate your events around it," Gerzema said. The key is to "quickly move from the TV screen to the Internet."

Anheuser-Busch gets it. It created a social media Web site at AB-extras.com that features the stories behind its Super Bowl ads with pictures, videos and inter-

Monster Worldwide Inc., a job-search company, is linking with the NFL to hire a "Director of Fandemonium" from a base of regular fans. It has a signing bonus of $100,000 and the new hire has one year to appear in promotional events. Monster also started marketing through social networking sites and bought search engine keywords like "fandemonium" for the ad campaign. It bought two ad spots on the Super Bowl.

"At the end of the day, we want to drive traffic to the site," said Ted Gilvar, Monster's global marketing officer. "It's not just airing the spots and waiting."

-The old reliables:

Marquee names that return year after year include Anheuser-Busch. This year, the brewer's ads will play up its American identity. That's timely given that the company was bought last year by Belgium's InBev SA for $52 billion. In a Clydesdale ad, one of the horses looks back at its ancestry. The ad with O'Brien depicts the late-night host reluctantly signing up to star in a commercial touting Bud Light in Sweden, with hilarious results.

During the winter, trees and shrubs need watering at least once a month. There is a preferred way to do this, its called DEEP ROOT WATERING.

This does not mean watering with a probe forced down into the root zone. Hydraulic pressure from probe watering damages roots.

DEEP ROOT WATERING is a way to get the water to the tree roots below the grass roots. Using this method also saves water and keeps your water bill as low a possible while keeping your tree in good condition.

Illustrated below is the proper way to DEEP ROOT WATER

Turn the water on and fill hose, then remove hose from faucet and adjust flow until it is a little larger than a match stem.

Watch the flow for a minute or so to be sure it continues at this rate, if not readjust, when flow remains constant reattach hose and place end under tree.

Water each area until the ground is saturated from the tree trunk out to the drip line. Then move hose to the next area until the entire area to the drip line is watered. Watering time can take from one to four hours depending on the size of each area under the plant.

Halftime show: Its the Boss

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Anybody who thinks it's tough playing the halftime show at the Super Bowl with 150 million people watching should try serenading Barack Obama with the majestic granite visage of Abraham Lincoln staring over your shoulder.

Bruce Springsteen did. "It kind of was a good warm-up for this," joked Springsteen Thursday after arriving in Tampa with the E Street Band. "That takes some of the pressure off, you know.

In his first news conference in more than 20 years, The Boss was as cool as ever.

Wearing black jeans, a black crewneck sweater black boots, Springsteen and his band charmed a standing-roomonly crowd by joking about his lack of football knowledge, that the group is still together, and its members still alive, and the tremendous year he's having personally and professionally.

"Is there anybody from New Jersey? Don't give them the microphone!" the Garden State native called out before taking questions in his first large forum since a 1987 news conference for Amnesty International.

But Springsteen has reason to celebrate.

His song, "The Wrestler," from the movie of the same name, won a Golden Globe earlier this month, and he followed it with a performance at the National Mall to honor Obama two days before the inauguration. Springsteen was a huge Obama booster during the campaign.

His latest CD, "Working on a Dream," was released Tuesday, and he'll kick off a world tour in San Jose, Calif., on April 1.

"Good times," the 59year-old rocker smiled. 'You just have years where things happen, or years where it's quieter. But what's special for me right now is I really believe our band is going through sort of a golden age. We've and drill teams. made three of what I think records in a row, which is we're here. And the band, on the last tour, played the best it's ever played.

"We've been on the road awhile. We're some old soldiers. But the band is still really burning, and I really want people to know about the record. Good year, you know? It's been great."

So now the band plays Sunday's halftime show of the Super Bowl, which is enjoying a run of booking major talent for the roughly 15-minute slot before the largest television event in the nation. Acts have recently included Rolling Stones, U2, Paul McCartney, Prince and Tom Petty and Heartbreakers.

The NFL said last year's halftime show with Petty was watched by more than 148 million viewers in the Springsteen, for years, had turned down invitations to play the Super Bowl, unsure of the legitimacy of such a performance. After all, for many years the halftime show was made up of local and college marching bands

But Springsteen said the are some of our best opportunity to promote the album, and the upgraded really one of the reasons production team that has given the invitation a prestige factor, changed his mind.

"Initially, it was sort of a novelty and so it didn't quite feel right," he explained. "But it was just like, this is the year. ... Bands of our generation, you can sort of be seen on a stage like this or, like, not seen. There's not a lot of middle places. It is a tremendous venue." The performance is expected to be a teaser for the upcoming tour, and scores of Las Vegas sports books are taking bets on the set list. Asked who ultimately decides what songs will be played, Springsteen staked his claim as leader of the band.

"I'm the Boss! The Boss decides what we play!" he "Nobody else yelled. decides. People suggest. Hint. Beg. Cajole. But I decide.

Pittsburgh receiver Hines forward to the performance, and even had a song

"I love Bruce. I hope he plays 'Born in the USA.' He has a great voice when he says, 'Boorrrn,' " Ward said. "He has a lot of swagger about himself. He's very confident. When he's up there performing, it's all about him."

Springsteen only offered one slight teaser, vowing to pack the bands' usual emotion and energy into their brief performance.

We want it to be a 12minute party," he said. "The idea of the show is, you are going to the Meadowlands, you get lost on the way. You are watching your clock, 'Damn, the show is starting right now.' You stop at a bar to get some directions, and the bar gets held up while you are there. So that takes another 45 minutes to get out of there.

You come back and you miss your exit on the turnpike, and you are driving to get back around. And so you make it into the stadium 2 hours and 48 minutes into the show, that's what Ward said he was looking you are going to see: the last 12 minutes.'

Super Bowl commercials

PepsiCo Inc. is a longtime advertiser but this year it has a first for the Super Bowl. The company's SoBe Life Water division will have a 60-second commercial in 3-D, featuring its ultra-hip lizards. SoBe also is partnering DreamWorks Animation SKG Inc. to give away more than 125 million 3-D glasses for a 90-second sneak preview of "Monsters vs. Aliens," which hits theaters March 27. (Glasses are available at SoBe displays in retail stores.)

Coca-Cola Co. will put Troy Polamalu of the Pittsburgh Steelers in an ad touting Coke Zero called "Mean Troy," reprising a 1979 classic that starred another Steeler, "Mean" Joe Greene. The company's other spots include "Avatar," in which people morph to resemble their digital alter egos, and "Heist," in which insects steal a sleeping man's Coke.

-Economy-related advertisers:

Ads from job-listings companies CareerBuilder.com and Monster, which redesigned its Web site for the first time in more than a decade, are appropriate given the high unemployment rate. One Monster ad shows folks working in jobs for which they're not particularly suited. CareerBuilder.com's ad features a koala bear and a eo-worker in a Speedo.

"We know there are a lot of people out there who are feeling anxious about the job market," said Richard Castellini, CareerBuilder's chief marketing officer, in a statement.

-The Super Bowl new-

GE will air a 30-second ad about efficient and sustainable technologies for delivering electricity. The spot features a scarecrow and a modern adaptation of the "The Wizard of Oz" song "If I Only Had A Brain."

Denny's plans a spot called "Thugs" that makes fun of the breakfasts served at rival restaurants compared to its hefty Grand Slam.

Mars Inc.'s Pedigree pet foods unit will air an ad about pet adoption featuring some exotic pets. It's already available on YouTube.

H&R Block is returning to the Super Bowl after five years, and this time, it's got Abe Vigoda. The "Barney Miller" actor will play the character of Death, along the lines that nothing is certain except death and taxes.

Super Bowl kick-off is 5:17 p.m. Pampa time.

When it comes to at-home sports entertainment, what may have been a luxury just a few short years ago has now become a necessity. Take high-definition television (HDTV) for example. In the CEA-SVG Third Annual Sports & Research Study, 40% of HDTV owners said they purchased their HDTVs specifically because of sports -- and among HDTV owners, 71% rate themselves as sports fans.

But it's not just about the equipment. The way fans are consuming sports entertainment is evolving as well. People want to access games, news, stats and more whenever they want and however they want, whether on their television screens, on their computers or on the go

Fortunately fans don't have to reach too far to get what they want. Many of the must-have elements for the ultimate athome sports entertainment experience are available through Comcast, the nation's leading information, communication and entertainment service provider. High-Definition Is the Way to

If you can't be on the sidelines, nothing rivals watching a game in crystal-clear high-definition. HD offers the sharpest, most realistic picture and sound quality available, allowing sports enthusiasts to feel like they are right there in the midst of the action. Thanks to increased brand competition, the prices of HDTV plasma and LCD televisions are continuing to fall, says Consumer Reports, and industry experts project that 50% of American homes may own at least one HDTV by the end of the year.

But many consumers falsely think that just because they bought an HDTV they will automatically receive HD quality. Not so. Fans must first subscribe to an HD service such as the one Comcast provides, which offers dozens of HD channels and more than 500 HD programming include all of the major broadcast and sports networks with a host of sports matches, commentary, news, specials, and much more. In addition to ongoing programming and an array of pay-perview sporting events to choose from throughout the year, Comcast offers a comprehensive selection of out-of-market sports packages including the NBA League Pass, MLB Extra Innings, NHL Center Ice, NASCAR, and more, allowing fans to follow all their favorite teams, regardless of where they reside. And Comcast's Sports Entertainment Package includes a host of networks including NFL Network, NBA TV, The Tennis Channel, Fox College Sports and more, plus highlights, behind the scenes footage and a host of HD programming choicchoices. Comcast's HD offerings

family of Comcast SportsNet channels provides the most comprehensive and entertaining coverage of the sports teams that matter most to fans their home town teams. Serving leading markets across the nation, including seven of the ten largest cities in the country, Comcast SportsNet's channels provide game coverage live, in HD and ON DEMAND, along with lively, insightful local sports news and debate. Featuring game coverage of 18 professional teams and 2,400 live events each year, Comcast SportsNet has home town sports

Customers can also tune to CN8, The Comcast Network, to watch original award-winning sports shows and exclusive local, regional and national sports events including top collegiate teams in football, basketball, ice hockey and lacrosse and an unparalleled line-up of competitive regional high-school football and basketball match-ups and playoffs.

Enjoy the Game -- On Your Schedule For the ultimate sports fans it's not just a matter of catching "the game" -- they want to stay on top of all the games, and re-watch plays or highlights at their convenience. Comcast's signature On Demand service allows sports fans to watch the action they want, when and how they want it, whether they missed a match-up of want to relive spectacular moments. A variety of sports selections are available to Comcast Digital Cable customers via its On Demand service, giving sports enthusiasts games, highlights, sports news and more, on their schedules, and with the ability to fast-forward, pause or rewind any program.

Watch Now... or Later Few things are more annoying than interruptions during a game. But sports fans never have to miss a moment if they have a digital video recorder (DVR). DVRs allow fans to pause and rewind live programming, or to record an entire game or special to watch later. So now sports buffs can watch the game when and how they want -- and as often as they like -- and can even record two games at once that are airing during conflicting times. Comcast's DVR service allows customers to easily record up to 80 hours of standard definition programming and up to 20 hours of HDTV.

High-Speed Gratification For many, sports are about sharing the highs and lows of the game with others. They're about keeping in touch with buddies all around the country who are cheering with you or against you, checking scores and stats, or participating in online Fantasy Football games. Comcast High Speed Internet provides a platform for accomplishing all this and more. The company also offers a number of online resources to help fans find the sports videos and information they want, including a Sports Channel on Comcast.net that offers up-to-the minute news, scores, standings and top videos from around the world of sports. Fans can also visit The Fan(TM), Comcast's broadband media player on Comcast.net, to view current sports videos. Sports programming, news, movies and documentaries are also available on Fancast.com, a unique site launched earlier this year as an online destination enabling users to watch, manage and find entertainment content wherever it's available.

Comcast can help cover all the bases for sports fans looking to create the perfect at-home entertainment experience this season. To learn more about the products and services available, contact Comcast at 1-800-COMCAST or www.comcast.com.

Tips for Consumers Texas Realtors®: Working for you

You know that REALTORS® help you buy and sell real estate. But were you aware they also help after you've bought a home, piece of land, or commercial property?

Texas Realtons® work together to make sure home owners and other private-property holders are treated fairly by lawmakers and regulator groups. After all, no one knows the business of real estate better. Realtors can see where improvements should be made and can identify proposals that would adversely affect real estate. They then work on these issues, and property owners reap the rewards.

REALTORS® supported bills on homeowners insurance reform that establish state oversight of rates and bring relief from unfair practices by insurers. And Texas REALTORS® have repeatedly led the charge to thwart proposals that would have added thousands of dollars of
