City addresses reckless driving, rezones property

by Betsy phillips editor@thepampanews.com

Pampa The City Commission passed an ordinance at their regular meeting Tuesday night that tackles the issue of tire noise in the city.

After publishing the ordinance, officers may issue tickets for tire noise. The ordinance states: "It is unlawful to operate a motor vehicle in such a manner as to cause or allow to be emitted, squealing, screeching or any other excessive sound from the tires in contact with the ground because of rapid acceleration or or excessive speed around corners or other such reason; provided that sound from emergency braking to avoid imminent danger shall be exempt ...

The commission declared a list of city property to be surplus and approved it for sale at an upcoming auction.

The Pampa School District has invited the city to join them in their auction to be held June 6. All items available, from an old metal ballot box to a backhoe, will be listed in the auction's promotional material.

The commission voted to rezone property owned by Trinity Fellowship Church from Single Family 2 and Commercial to Office and Commercial.

The currently undeveloped property is behind Walmart (off Hobart) and north of 25th Avenue. The commission excused Mayor Lonny Robbins from two previous meetings where the rezoning issue was discussed because of his affiliation with Trinity Fellowship Church. Mayor Robbins abstained, with permission of the commission, from attending meetings that included discussion or a public hearing on the matter. He was excused from last night's meeting before

Girl Scouts together

By Rachel Stennett rstennett@thepampanews.com

Three best friends have Girl Scouts to thank for the past eight years of their friendship, and hopefully, many more.

Since entering Daisies together at five years old, Lacey, Nikki, and Ashlee have been earning badges and helping the community as a threesome best friend

Their Girl Scout experiences incude helpeing Meals on Wheels, picking up trash in the city, helping out at local elder care facilites, and have made and sent cookies to military troops overseas.

"It's fun to see what you do make a difference," Lacey explained of their community efforts. "You feel really good about it.'

The Girl Scouts is helping the girls with more than just community service, they are also learning how to evalute themselves and others through the right self

To earn the "Self Image" badge, Cadets (the current level of scouting the girls are in) held discussions about self worth.

Highlights from the Texas Legislature

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Joe Straus said Tuesday he's got a positive outlook heading into the House budget debate later this week and that he's hopeful the spending bill can be tackled in one day. "It might be a long day," he added.

The House takes up its version of the state budget on Friday and could meet into the weekend. Straus said he expects there will be lively debate on some issues, including use of billions of dollars in federeconomic stimulus money. He said he doesn't view the budget debate as a litmus test on his new leadership in the almost evenly divided chamber.

"It's a litmus test for the whole House, and I feel very good about where we are," he said.

House leaders decided against dipping into the Rainy Day Fund for the supplemental spending bill to cover the rest of the 2008-09 budget cycle, including the costs of Hurricane Ike. The decision against using the Rainy Day Fund seemed to please Gov. Rick Perry, Coalition in the state and any talk of the governor calling a special session on that issue dissipated, Straus said.

PLANNED PARENTHOOD

Some conservative members of the Texas House said Tuesday a controversy over Planned Parenthood clinics in San Antonio may lead them to try to cut state funding for the low-income health care provider.

The 10 members of the Texas Conservative

House of Representatives announced that four clinics had been ordered by the Department of State Health Services to stop providing unlicensed abortion services.

"That potentially carries criminal violation which should be investigated by the Bexar County Attorney's Office," said Rep. Phil King, R-Weathorford.

Planned Parenthood immediately responded, saying it had fully complied with the state cease and desist order. Officials also said a state licensing official told the San Antonio office in October 2004 that the clinics didn't need the license as long as they only offered the abortion pill.

"If they'd told us to do something else, we'd have done something else," said Jeffrey Hons, CEO of Planned Parenthood in San Antonio. "We had a question. We asked it. They gave an asnwer. We followed the answer."

Smoking ban debate heats up

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) Medical and anti-smoking groups butted heads with bar owners and civil libertarians Tuesday over whether to ban smoking in bars, restaurants and public places statewide.

It is not a new debate but one that has caught new fire as more cities and towns across Texas implement local smoking bans. A weakened version of a statewide smoking ban passed the House in 2007 but was never considered by the Senate

Public health experts say it's a matter of reducing lung cancer and other diseases. Bar owners and civil libertarians say a ban infringes on private property and the rights of adults to choose to work or play in places that allow smok-

Along with helping the community, the three girls are also creating memories and some of the best experiences of their lives so far.

Lacey loves horses riding with the scouts while Ashlee's favorite memory has been going to San Antionio and visitng Sea World, and Nikki is a more traditional scout and loves

"We get to do things we don't get to do at school," Lacey added.

Even though the girls won't likely be making cobblers in their seventh grade Pampa Junior High classes, they are learning other things that help them at school, like being respectful and not talking in class unless asked to, rules they have to observe during scout meetings. Nikki, who is home schooled with her brother, uses her scout knowledge to help her brother during Lacey and Ashlee are both helping the community outside of their scouting experiences too. They volunteer with the Lovett Memorial Library's summer reading program. Nikki volunteers with her family with Meals on Wheels once a month and helps deliver food with her parents and brother.

Through all the experiences, Lacey, Nikki, and Ashlee have all gained a friendship and valuable life lessons, Denise Dodson, troop coordinator, said.

"Several of these girls have been in since the first grade. They are there for each other through the good and bad. They take up for one another,' Dodson said.

Lacey, Nikki, and Ashlee are all best friends who have been in Girl Scouts together for eight years. They helped plant this garden outside the Girl Scout House.

during city meetings, the property will possibly be sold to a developer who has plans for an assisted living center on part of the land that could eventually employ 15-25 people. Future plans could include an apartment complex, but those plans are tentative at this time.

The city sent letters to all effected property owners and only a very few of them objected to the rezonspokesman for the Department of State Health Services, said there may have been a miscommunication and law requires all facilities that provide any form of abortion to be licensed.

David L. Lakey, commissioner of the state health department, said in an April 6 letter to the Conservative Coalition that the state is further investigating the four clinics. It is also investigating a licensed Planned Parenthood abortion clinic in San Antonio.

State law prevents the state from giving any abortion money to providers. The roughly $10 million Planned Parenthood gets from the state each year can only be used by clinics that do not provide any abortion serv-

The issue could come up on Friday when a House version of the state budget for the next two years is debated on the House floor.

"I can tell you from my perspective, this casts a great cloud over any fund-Planned for Parenthood," King said.

Planned Parenthood representatives said anti-abortion advocates were using the incident as an excuse to attack them and cut their funding.

"They always do this and I hope they fail, because if they win, it's not the Planned Parenthood that get's hurt. Individual Women who rely on these clinics for their birth control and their pap tests and their cervical cancer screenings — that's who gets hurt," Hons said.

SCHOOL FUNDING

A House committee took testimony Tuesday on legislation to update a 3-yearold school funding overhaul.

Lawmakers and school officials testified that the system adopted by lawmakers under court pressure in 2006 is quickly reaching capacity.

The overhaul was designed to shift the school tax burden away from local property taxpayers, replacing a portion with revenue from a revised business tax and higher cigarette taxes, among other things.

But school districts argue that the system has built inequities into the system and reached capac-

"The current school finance system no longer meets constitutional standards," said Rep. Diane Patrick, R-Arlington, who filed legislation to increase funding for schools and increases the way the state distributes money for schools.

"We can't afford to wait." Patrick said.

LIABILITY DISPUTE

The House Business and Industry Committee voted unanimously to approve a bill by Rep. Helen Giddings, D-DeSoto, on Tuesday that would change the language of the workers' compensation law to more clearly define who can be sued by injured workers. The proposal stems from a Texas Supreme Court decision that a "premises owner" cannot be sued by injured employees of a contractor. In the case, turbine mechanic John Summers was injured in a 2001 accident while repairing a generator leak at an Entergy Gulf States plant in Bridge City. Entergy covered his injury with a workers' compensation policy that protected the company from being sued. Some state legislators have said they never meant for the workers' comp law to apply to contractors.

Giddings has said most Texas House members believe the Texas Supreme Court overstepped its bounds and ignored legislative intent.

CLEAN AIR

The Texas Senate gave final approval to a sweeping clean-air bill Tuesday that would give Texans rebates when buying energy-efficient appliances and plug-in hybrid cars.

The legislation, which passed 22-8, also would set higher standards for efficiency in building codes and provide financial incentives for emissions-reducing technologies and the use of clean energy.

The bill, which now moves to the House, would use more than $300 million from the Texas Reduction Emissions Program, funded by vehicle title transfer fees, offi-

The legislation calls for providing $4,000 rebates for the purchase of plug-in hybrid vehicles. The appliance incentive would apply to used air conditioners and refrigerators, and consumers would have to retire their old equipment to get the rebates.

The bill contains $100 million for incentives that qualifying Texans could get to replace old, polluting vehicles.

TRANSPORTATION BILL

Voters in at least 19 Texas counties could impose taxes on themselves to build road, bridge and rail projects under a bill approved Tuesday by the state Senate.

The proposal, which could not take effect until statewide voters sign off on it, would allow county gasoline taxes and other assorted fees on parking, drivers' licenses and vehicle registrations. It also would allow for a "Texas new resident roadway impact fee" of up to $250 on vehicles that were previously registered out of

The bill, which passed the Senate on a 21-9 vote, now moves to the Texas House.

All the money-raising proposals and the transportation projects would have to be approved by voters. Harris County, where Houston is located, is exempted from the bill, which sparked heated discussions in the Bexar County, where San Antonio is located, would be included in the legislation but could only raise gasoline taxes to pay for projects.

Senate Wednesday night.

COLLEGE VISITS

High school students trying to make decisions about higher education could get up to two days of excused absences for making visits to colleges or universities under a measure tentatively approved in the House on Tuesday.

The proposal by Rep. R-The Eissler, Woodlands, leaves it up to school districts to adopt policies to determine how to verify the student's college visit.

> Fort Worth Telegram on TCU's decision to provide designated on-campus housing for gay, lesbian and transgender students:

A college campus should be a community that provides a true learning environment, not just in academics, but in human interaction and personal growth.

It can be, and most often is, a place where people of backgrounds codes, but this would bring racial, national, religious, economic, gender and otherwise can come together in a microcosm of the larger society and learn to understand the importance and the unique advantages of diversity, cooperation and

> In that context, TCUs recently announced decision to provide designated on-campus housing for gay, lesbian and transgender students (and their non-gay supporters) is both commendable and disturbing.

The decision is laudable because the university is showing sensitivity to the goes up". Good reason ??

Notably, the bill also and supportive "community." But it also is bothersome because it suggests that the larger university cannot provide that support without resorting to segregation as a solution.

> When any minority group fights hard for integration and acceptance, why would it then seek any institutionalized separateness?

> It was difficult to understand when black and Hispanic groups at several college campuses in the past demanded separate dorms and student unions.

While some gay and lesbian activists argue that certain all-gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender institutions like the new Harvey Milk would make needed the onus will be on the High School in New York can benefit students who rather than separation. sometimes suffer discrimination, we can't help but wonder if such arrangements are more crippling than helpful.

Certainly there are still segregated pockets of our society, and without a doubt there are bigots among us who will continue to discriminate against people who are different from them, but we must not give in to those backward ideas or the people who support

TCU offers a number of Living Learning Communities (LLCs) made up of students with common interests in particular topics.

Don Mills, vice chancellor for student affairs, noted in an e-mail to TCU supporters that last year those included Green House, Wellness, Health and Honors House, Language and International House Leadership Strengths.

"In addition to DiverCity O, other new LLCs proposed for next year include Patriotism, Marine Life, Creativity and the Arts, Christian Perspectives and students seeking a common Service and Teamwork," Mills said.

"LLCs provide an opportunity for students to examine, discuss, and share opinions about topics that they certainly will encounter once they leave TCU," he said. "To that end, these living learning communities ultimately prepare students to better understand our diverse, global world."

Coc

That can be advantageous when the communities center on academic subject matter or intellectual interests. But because non-heterosexuals have struggled for acceptance in the larger community, it would seem that sexual orientation is the kind of "special-interest" criteria that would warrant emphasis on inclusion

Perhaps what the university has done will prove to be a bold and encouraging move that's valuable to the students who volunteer for this housing community.

We hope so. But we also look forward to the day when our increasingly multifaceted society will no longer feel the need to continue categorizing (and segregating) people based on their differences, including sexual orientation. URL: http://www.startelegram.com CASA's 37 adult volunteers were recognized by Executive Director Janet Watts. Sponsors who contributed to the organization during the past year were also recognized.

Jane Adams presented gifts to each of the junior CASA volunteers, who raised $4,000 for the organization during the past 12 months through activities such as dances and a garage sale.

Judge Phil Vanderpool, who presides over child abuse and neglect cases in 21 Texas Panhandle counties, was guest speaker.

"CASA volunteers give the child choices, and that gives the child hope," Vanderpool said.

Dave Yirak, show director, and William V. Anderson, executive director, of the TEXAS musical drama held each summer at Palo Duro Canyon, spoke on the value of volunteering and presented a program on the musical drama.

"Volunteering is the greatest gift people can give because it comes from the heart," Anderson said. "It is probably the greatest thing we can do."

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am trying hard to rebuild my marriage. My husband and I have three young children. Four months ago, I met a man (I'll call him "Jack") who made me feel like I haven't felt in a long time. We have not slept together. We tried several times to stop seeing each other, but unfortunately, my attraction to him was too strong.

This week my husband and I separated. I saw Jack this morning. Before things went too far I told him that I had herpes. Abby, he practically had a heart attack -- and ended it on the spot!

The thing is, what I said wasn't true. I just could not think of another way to make him stop being available so I could concentrate on my marriage. I feel like such a coward, and I am heartbroken. Not only do I miss Jack terribly, I also can't bear the thought that someone who made me feel so happy would just turn his back on me.

Would there be any point in telling him that I lied, or did I do the right -- albeit cowardly -- thing? --WAVERING IN THE SOUTH

DEAR WAVERING: I can see absolutely nothing positive to be gained by approaching Jack again. While I would never recommend lying, yours exposed the man's truth. If he truly cared about you, he would have stuck by you instead of heading for the exit. Consider yourself lucky to have learned the truth while there was still time to save your marriage.

DEAR ABBY: I am concerned about my younger brother. I'll call him "Freddy." Freddy is 18 and very lazy. His girlfriend lives with him at my mother's house.

Our mom is always cleaning their room. She does all the cooking and sometimes even launders their clothes. Mom tells me everything, and she's bothered by this. I live with her, too, but I do my share. I pay half the rent.

How can we let them know we are not their housekeepers, but in a nice way? -- TOUCHY SUB-JECT, LAS VEGAS, N.M.

DEAR TOUCHY SUB-JECT: I, too, am concerned about your brother. It is time your mother realized that by allowing this arrangement, she has done her son no favors.

The girlfriend should not be living in his room rent-free. (Where the heck are her parents?) If she is a student, she should have a part-time job and contribute something -- and so should Freddy. If he is old enough to have a live-in companion, he should be mature enough to clean up and do a load of laundry.

Your mother should convene a "family council" meeting and start assigning chores. Until and unless she becomes assertive enough to draw the line, she will continue to be taken advantage of. It's not about being mean or nasty. It's about encouraging Freddy to grow up and lessen his dependence upon her.

DEAR ABBY: I am asking this question in all seriousness. While I am using a restroom in a public place, I'm not sure how to respond when someone knocks on the door to see if anyone is there. What's the appropriate answer? -- GOTTA GO IN WALDORF, MD.

DEAR GOTTA: The correct response is, "Occupied!"
