WOLF CREEK - The sun was an orange ball on the horizon as a stream of cars, trucks and SUVs caravanned out of the Lake Fryer campgrounds headed west toward almost a dozen archeological sites spread over two

Cost of King trial higher than anticipated

BY DAVID BOWSER dbowser@thepampanews.com

The Gray County Commissioners Court took steps this week to start paying some of the bills for the Levi King capital murder case.

King is accused of murdering a family in their rural Gray County home in the predawn hours of Sept. 30, 2005. Jury selection in his trial is scheduled to begin June 30, in Lubbock on a change of venue.

Gray County Judge Richard Peet said he is grateful to the presiding judge in the case, 31st District Judge Steven R. Emmert, for keeping the costs of the trial as low as possible, still many of the costs are beyond the judge's control.

Still, Peet told the court that Lubbock County has been gracious enough to provide a courtroom and offices at no cost to Gray County, although there would be some charges for jury selection. There is some state money, however, that can be used to defray those costs

Judge Emmert estimated that jury selection will take six weeks and the trial will taken another two or three weeks.

signs eminent domain bil Perry JOV.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Texas Gov. Rick Perry signed a bill Monday that asks voters to amend the state constitution to limit the ability of government entities to take private property using their eminent domain authority.

In a ceremony in front of the Alamo, Perry said land ownership has long been essential to the state's way of life. He noted that many fighters of the famed 1836 battle thought they'd be rewarded with land for their service to the Republic of Texas.

"That commitment to land ownership in Texas remains pretty strong," he said.

If approved in November, the constitutional amendment would prohibit government officials from taking property and giving it to a private developer to boost the tax base. The government has long been allowed to force landowners to sell for public purposes, like streets or water treatment facilities, but a 2005 U.S. Supreme Court ruling gave governments to power to condemn property for redevelopment.

Texas lawmakers passed a law designed to provide more protections in 2005, but critics have said it left too many loopholes. A second law passed in 2007 was vetoed by Perry, who objected partially because of increased damages that landowners could recover for diminished access to property. The current proposal would prevent local governments from using eminent domain to hand the property over to a developer.

Gray County Auditor Elaine Morris told commissioners that the county had already spent about $350,000, the amount the commission had budgeted. in the case. She estimated that the county would still need to come up with an additional $175,000.

The. commission approved an application drawn up by 31st District Attorney Lynn Switzer for a $154,056 grant from the state to help defray the cost of prosecuting the case.

"We are as cognizant as everybody else as to the expense of trying a capital case," Switzer said.

She said her office found a grant available through the governor's office and she is applying for that grant, but as part of that application process, she needed a resolution by the county commission.

"If we can get that $150,000," Morris said, "it will help a lot."

Switzer said she thinks there is another grant that may be available from the governor's office that would help defray some of the defense expenses.

The commission also approved renewal of the district attorney's Victim Identification Notification Everyday service agreement. The VINE agreement gives the victim of a crime the ability to track the location of the perpetrator on a daily basis and find out if the perpetrator is being transferred to a different facility or is released, Switzer explained.

commission The approved using a State of Texas procurement card rather than credit cards. Morris said the procurement card will do everything the county's credit cards will do, but it gives the county more control. She indicated that the procurement cards might be acquired in time to help control some of the costs in the King case.

The commission approved a per diem system to pay court officials on a weekly basis.

In other business, the commission approved signatures for various county bank accounts at Happy State Bank, the county's new bank.

Gray County Treasurer Scott Hahn said he's been pleased with the new bank, saying it has a hometown atmosphere. He also said there appears to be a possibility of gaining more in interest from the bank than what TexPool is now paying on county deposits. He told the commission he would investigate that possibility.

Presently, Hahn told the commission, the county has $110,135.53, or 1.6 percent of its money in a checking account. About $2.5 million, or 36.5 percent of the county's money, is in two certificates of deposits. The remainder, $4.2 million, or about 61.67 percent is in TexPool.

Ron Greiner, vice presifor Government dent Capital Securities, gave

the commission an update on the process of issuing $4 million in revenue bonds to benefit Clarendon College. The county will use the money to finance new facilities at the college's Pampa Center, then lease the facilities back to the college. The bonds will be paid off by a nickel tax approved by voters last November.

Greiner said a statement by the county indicating that they intend to issue the bonds should be complete and he plans to start circulating that among potential buyers next week.

By the time the court meets in Mid-July, Greiner said they should have their pricing nailed down, and the court could consider the bond order. Greiner estimated the bonds would be in the 5.05 to 5.10 percent interest range.

Peet also told the commission that early indications are that the value of taxable property in the county this year will be down about $6.5 million. Part of that is due to Celanese shutting down, he said.

When settlers came into the area, they renamed it Pat's Creek, he said.

Ultimately, Brosowske and Witt had to use a helicopter to find it. Once they located what they thought was a likely location, they were able to confirm it with a cursory investigation that yielded military artifacts

Glo-Valve beats Cabot 16-1 in no-hitter

The Pampa News — Tuesday, June 16, 2009 — 3

Glo-Valve Service used a quartet of pitchers to no-hit Cabot Corporation 16-1 Monday in the first game of the Pampa Optimist 11-12 Cal Ripken City Tournament.

Ryan Powell used six pitches to get Cabot out in order in the first inning. Brody Gaines struck out three in a row in the second inning. Colton Thompson gave up a walk and a fielder's choice, but struck out the next three in the third stranding both runners. Aaron Allen issued a oneout walk to Brett West in the fourth. West stole two bases and came home on a wild pitch. Allen retired the next two batters on a popup to first and a strikeout.

Glo-Valve started in the first inning with walks to Allen, Powell and Gaines. Casey Martindale reached base by an error. Chance Douglas and Zach Hill followed with singles. All scored giving Glo-Valve a 6-0 lead.

The lead became a baker's dozen in the second. Walks to Jason Velasquez and Allen and a run-scoring single by Powell set the stage for a booming three-run homer by Gaines. Martindale kept the rally going with a single and two steals. He scored on a wild pitch. A walk to Hill and singles by Thompson and J. T. Skinner completed the scoring.

In the third inning Powell doubled, Gaines was safe on a throwing error scoring Powell, and Martindale followed with his second home run of the season to give Glo-Valve a 16-0 lead.

Martindale went deep into the hole at shortstop to backhand a ball and make a strong throw to first for an outstanding defensive play for Glo-Valve.

Thompson made a diving catch of a soft pop fly at second base for another defensive gem.

Martindale was the leading hitter for Glo-Valve. He had two hits, including a home run, three runs scored and three Powell made two RBI. hits, including a double, three runs and one RBI. Douglas also had two hits, including a double, on the night. He scored once and had one RBI.

Cabot will be back in action today facing Duncan, Fraser & Bridges Insurance Agency, which lost to Rotary Club 10-0, at 5:45 p.m. in a losers' bracket game. Rotary will face Glo-Valve at 7:45 p.m. in the winners' bracket.

The winner of the first game will play the loser of the second game at 7 p.m. Thursday.

The championship game or games in the doubleelimination end-of-the-season tournament are scheduled for Friday beginning at 5:45 p.m.

Those are the sites that interest Mackie and many in his crew. Most of those sites date from the Red River Indian Wars of the 1870s, recent history in archeological terms, but interesting nonetheless.

Making their way east from Lake Fryer, many of Mackie's crew are from the Pampa area and are armed with metal detectors that are adept at finding metal arrow heads used in trade and buttons and buckles left behind by cavalry soldiers who rode through here in their efforts to move the Indians on to reservations in Oklahoma.

"I call them mv

the ground beneath his feet while others explored the flood plain below.

A veteran at this sort of work, Wright said he always tries to imagine where the Indians or cavalry or buffalo hunters would set up camp.

This time his hunch paid off. Atop the rise with a grand view of the winding creek and meadow, he found evidence of flint and bones and mussel shell that was traditionally used for decoration.

Somebody at some time in the distance past sat there, enjoying the view, and knapped flint. "There was an Indian campment in here, the Canadian River, other groups are working on sites that also include recent history. Witt said that they have located over 380 potential archeological sites along that section of the river.

While many of the archeological dig sites are in areas where they expect to find signs of human habitation dating to the Archaic Period and Woodlands Period, there is an Historic site that Courson has searched for over several years.

It's a military depot that was established to support troops in the field here about 1868.

draw draining down to

Pot Hunters," Witt laughs, "but they're very professional. They're fun.

Witt said that exploring these sites is addictive.

"If you ever hit any-thing," he said, "you're stuck on it."

Looking out across the field of grass and wildflowers, Witt said Mackie's crew is one of the best he's ever seen.

He recounts how last year they went up to a Kansas Archeological dig and within 20 minutes Mackie had located what they were looking for.

"If it's out there," Witt said, "they'll find it." Steve Thorne of Dallas was working with Kelly Baker of Pampa Sunday morning mapping finds made by the others. Thorne has become known at Spur Man because of the cavalry spur he found here during last year's field school.

Pampa lawyer Ken Fields stopped only a few feet from the parked cars and trucks to turn the earth with his spade after his metal detector gave off a scream. Others swept down the slope and a cross a flood plain, their metal detectors giving off occasional beeps and low wails as the walked.

A couple of hundred yards away, Gerald Wright carefully ran his metal detector along the edge of a rise, carefully studying Wright said, his eyes closely perusing the ground.

In the meadow below, James Coverdale of Perryton, a member of the Kiowa tribe, was digging where his metal detector had gone off like a siren. He found the remains of an old food can.

Back toward Wolf Creek, below Ben's Knoll, Fields expanded his search.

He said he had abandoned his search of the ridge where the cars were parked. All he found there were bits of wire and modern day ranching debris.

"I found some vintage barbed wire," he grinned. Looking around with the early morning light filter-ing through the cottonwoods and a breeze ruffling the thick grass, Fields said he now understands why the Indians camped here.

"But they weren't the only one to picnic here,' he laughed as his metal detector found a pull-tab.

Nearby was an old cottonwood tree, taller than the others. Coverdale had found a photograph from the 1930s showing Indians in full regalia dancing beneath the old cottonwood.

"There was a tipi set up," Coverdale said of the photo. "I looked like they were having a Pow Wow down here.

North of Pampa, along

dig. "It looks like an ant colthe Canadian was fenced off to hold the army's horsony," Witt chuckled. "It's cool." es and dugouts were dug to house supplies.

The problem with finding the site is that many creeks across the panhandle had three or more names. Often the Plains Indians would have one name for them. The Spanish would have another, and the Anglos the cavalry or buffalo hunters - would have a third.

The maps of the day, too, were less than ideal. There were no Global Positioning Satellites.

But the problem with the military depot site, Witt said, is that it didn't appear on any map.

"We knew it was on Monument Creek," Witt said, "but where was Monument Creek. There were none on our maps."

Four Rotary pitchers combined for a no-hitter Monday night as Rotary defeated DFB by a score of 10-0 in 4 innings. Ethan Hunt pitched the first inning, striking out 3, Blayne Troxell pitched the 2nd inning 3 and Rance Tipps pitched the 3rd and 4th inning, striking out 4 hitters.

At the plate for Rotary,

2 doubles and scored 3 runs, Troxell went 2-3 with 3 runs scored, Hunt went 2-3 with 2 runs scored and 2 RBI's. Luis Chavez went 2-3, and narrowly missed a home run as he hit a double off the center field fence. Andreas Losoya added a single for Rotary.

Cade Engle went 2-3 with

DEAR ABBY: I'm in my early 20s and have worked for this company for a few years. One of my coworkers is my age and has always been very

didn't want to be there and who honestly didn't consider herself my friend. Is there an appropriate way to get out of this and not hurt her feelings' sweet. DISTRESSED IN SAN DIEGO DEAR DISTRESSED: It is not necessary to tell your co-worker that you do not consider her a friend. But do tell her that, while you are flattered that she asked you to be a bridesmaid, you responded impulsively without thinking it through and that it would create a financial hardship for you -- which is why you must decline. DEAR ABBY: I am the middle child in a family of seven children. Somewhere along the way I was assigned the role of peacemaker. I have always been the person everyone goes to for help -- mostly financial -- but also for other reasons. This has caused a strain on my relationship with my significant other, "Jake.'

close, and we depend on each other too much. Jake accuses me of "always jumping on my white horse and riding off to save the world" and says I neglect him. He wants me to have nothing to do with my family and complains that they call too often. I do not neglect him. He is the one turning this into a big issue. How can I stay true to who I am and what I believe is right and still maintain this relationship, which I have been in for more than 17 years? -- CAUGHT IN THE MIDDLE DEAR CAUGHT IN THE MIDDLE: You and Jake need to reach a compromise. It is unrealistic of him to expect you to have nothing to do with your family My advice to you is to "be there" for your family when mediation is necessary, but tighten your purse strings. If you do, I'll bet there will be fewer phone calls, less rescuing and more peace in your household.

We talk occasionally about casual events in our lives, but I have never socialized with her outside of work and don't consider her more than a "work friend."

When she became engaged, I told her I was happy for her and admired her ring. Out of the blue she asked me to be a bridesmaid! I was taken by surprise, but she looked so hopeful that I agreed. I realize now it was a huge mistake.

She is a nice girl, but we talk only at work, maybe three times a month. She has also asked two other girls from work to be a bridesmaid and maid of honor. They are in the same boat as I am, and both were also shocked to have been asked. The wedding is a year and a half away. I am worried that it will cost me money

I would never want someone in my wedding who Jake's family is not close, and he did not have a pleasant childhood. My family is sometimes too

Barbara Britten and Ronna Smith

Owners Ernie and Suzie Wilkinson, both Pampa natives, have been in business for 20 years. They are members and ministers of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church in Pampa.

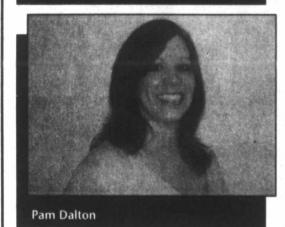

Suzie and Ernie have a BA in business and

LaGayla Wheat and Matthew Kirkpatrick

a Masters in Health Management. They both have extensive background and training in federal and state regulations, and have served on many state and national boards and committees representing Home Health.

"Our nurses are board certified in home health, pediatrics and wound care," Suzie said.

The agency currently employees 75 skilled workers including licensed RNs and LVNs, a Licensed Occupational Therapist, a Licensed Physical Therapist, a Licensed Speech Therapist, a Physical Therapy Assistant and a number of Texas Certified Home Health Aides.

Michael Kirkpatrick acts as administrator and director of nursing. Teresa Henson is office operations manager. Both have been with Shepard's Crook since its inception.

Shepard's Crook currently serves all counties in the Texas Panhandle and has offices in Pampa, Amarillo, Borger, Clarendon and Shamrock.

Dedicated to meeting the needs of their individual clients, the Wilkinsons believe a successful business should give back to the community.

Don't trust your in-home health care to just any agency. Give Shepard's Crook a try. The number for the Pampa office is 806-665-0356.
