House impeaches Texas judge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Friday impeached a federal judge imprisoned for lying about sexual assaults of two women in the first such vote since impeaching former President Bill Clinton a decade ago.

The impeachment of U.S. District Judge Samuel Kent of Texas sets up a trial in the Senate. Kent is the first federal judge impeached in 20 years.

The House approved four articles of impeachment against Kent accusing him of sexually assaulting two female employees and lying to judicial investigators and Justice Department officials. All four articles passed unanimously.

"The conduct at issue here is both shocking and shameful," Michigan Democratic Rep. John Conyers, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said at the start of the debate.

Kent, 59, entered a federal prison in Massachusetts on Monday to serve a 33-month sentence. He pleaded guilty last month to lying to judicial investigators about sexual assaults of two female employees.

Kent is refusing to resign until next year so he can continue to draw his $174,000 a year salary. If he is convicted of the impeachment charges in the Senate, he will be forced off the bench.

Kent was nominated to the bench by President George H.W. Bush and has served since 1990.

at the high school three years ago, there had been eight students in the club. Today, there were 84, and the Drama Club was the biggest club on campus. Reasor said that because of the growing interest in drama at the high school, the school had added an extra class last year and was planning on an additional class next year. She said that the club included an array of talent ranging from acting to building stage sets, and those areas were included in the workshops that would be available to the students. "I'm not worried about finding the next Sandra Bullock or Matthew McConaughey," she told the board. "I want them to work in the workshops." Reasor said the estimated cost of the trip is $1,115 per person, and the club is planning a series of fundraising projects to defray costs. She said that cost might go down as planning continues. Reasor said that more than 50 students had signed up to date for the trip.

"Sure," Winton replied. The two kids got on and looked around shyly before one asked, "Did Zack Thomas ride on this bus?" "He sure did," Winton replied. "Where did he sit?" the other boy asked. "The third seat from the back," Winton said, motioning to the rear of the bus. Winton grinned and said he wasn't sure which seat Thomas sat in, but he knew it was somewhere toward the back. After taking turns sitting the bus seat that Winton had designated, the two boys thank Winton profusely, got off the bus and went on their way with stories to tell for a generation to come. Each vehicle seemed to have a story here, as Winton walked among them. The 1952 Power Wagon still has chains on the tires from when it was used as a snow plow on bus routes. "I pulled the snow plow off," Winton said. It's still being used although on a different vehicle. While some of the vehicles are sans engine, Winton said the Power Wagon still ran when it was parked at the edge of the yard three years ago. "I pulled a lot of buses out the mud with that," Winton said. He added that he got pulled out by the Power Wagon several times as well. Bob McGinnis, who has

Second Time Furniture Store on South Cuyler, stopped by the bus yard to examine the Chrysler convertible and a fork lift sitting next to it. He looked around the yard and said that he, too, had collected a lot of stuff at his place. "But I got a good deal on all of it," he added with a sly grin.

Water

to win the lawsuit based on what we passed," said Bengé, R-Tulsa. "We don't want to give the water away. We do not and will not allow our water to be given away." The lawsuit is set for trial in U.S. District Court in Oklahoma City on Dec. 7. Oliver said the Tarrant water district is willing to pay between $15 million and $60 million a year to transport water in southern and southeastern Oklahoma to North Texas, depending upon the volume of water taken. But he said the district may owe nothing if it wins the lawsuit it filed in 2007 that challenges a moratorium adopted by the Legislature that bars the sale of water out-of-state until a study of Oklahoma's long-term needs is complete. Currently, Oklahoma City transports water for free from southern Oklahoma. North Texas officials believe their lawsuit could force the state to treat out-of-state customers the same way. The Tarrant water district would have free access to the water it seeks but would have to pay for pipelines and pumping stations, which will cost between $500 million and $4 billion and take five years to build, Oliver said. "If we get a permit, we have a permanent right to that water for free," Oliver said. "If we win the lawsuit, there's no reason to negotiate. The cards will be in our favor." "We've made a fair offer. It's their call." Bengé indicated there are no plans to negotiate with North Texas officials. He said the new state law, similar to one in New Mexico, was drafted to protect the state's legal interests in the case. Among other things, the law says no out-of-state water permit can prevent the state from meeting its obligations under interstate compacts with other states. The Oklahoma Water Resources Board must consider in-state water shortages or needs when considering applications for water sales to out-of-state entities. The law allows conditional permits to entities outside Oklahoma and is to be applied to pending and future water permit applications. The Tarrant water district is seeking 460,000 acre feet of water, or 150 billion gallons annually. An acre foot is a measurement of about 325,000 gallons, or roughly enough water to take care of a household's needs for a year. Oliver said it is estimated that North Texas will have a critical need for new water supplies by 2030. The district's service area is expected to grow from about 1.7 million people today to 3.5 million in 50 years, he said.

THE RICHEST MEN IN THE WORLD

Happy Father's Day

BY MARTHA RANDOLPH CARR

This is the holiday where we celebrate the men in our lives that have guided and mentored us through all of the ups and downs life has to offer. Some of them we actually call Dad but many have been good men who stepped in to fill the wingtips of an absent or lost father. They're all heroes.

Mostly it's because they keep looking for work after a year of layoffs, or getting up in the middle of the night to comfort a small, worried child or give in and read a third story even though they're bone tired. These icons of what is really the definition of hot-mess may have a little too much belly hanging over the top of their pants or a lot less hair on their head but that's really not the point.

These are the men who have a way of looking at any of the women in their lives, whether it's their wife or their daughters, as if they're the luckiest man on earth. It's as if they see all the potential wrapped up inside the women that they love. The real magic is that somehow the women come to believe it as well.

Their sons are raised as a reflection of an integrity that's defined by what is done when no one is around to keep tabs on you. Their boys are also able to take on responsibility without appearing pushy and can meet someone at a party without immediately calculating in their head what the connection will do for them.

Great Dads like these can be found most anywhere such as driving a bus, teaching at the front of a class, working in a bank or running for local office. They're an integral part of the fabric of their neighborhoods and are often part of the reason the communities we live in run as well as they do.

So, here's our opportunity to let each of them know we've noticed their quiet sacrifices but this time not with a colorful necktie. Let's try something from the heart.

Everyone's greatest wish is really to know that they're appreciated and in a year that's had a lot of economic bumps, maybe the great male mentors in our lives need it even more.

Start with a handwritten letter, no E-mails, texts or tweets will do, and give him something that he can fold up and put in his wallet to read again and again.

Take a couple of minutes to write down why you're grateful to have this man in your life. Be specific and get out all of those things you've been telling everyone else but never actually got around to saying to your father or father figure. If there's more than one person in your life who fills that role, first consider yourself blessed and then get out more stationery.

Connect the dots for each important male role model in your life and explain how they've enriched you how they've become by the steady example they keep setting. Don't be surprised if this turns out to be the best present they ever get and if you don't suddenly see a few blessings in there for yourself.

If you're like me, and your dad is now gone but you'd like to include him, take the time to tell someone else about his exploits. Like the time my father was trying to fix one of our old cars and lost a vital part somewhere in the garage. He searched in vain for hours until my mother walked in and picked it up, asking if this was what he was looking for. It was an amazing show of restraint that he was able to not only say, yes but thanked her as well. Now, that's a good man. Happy Father's Day everyone

An End to Buffoonish Fathers

Ah, Father's Day is upon us. I can't think of a better time for dads and men to remember how to be dads and men.

Flip on the tube any time during the day and you'll see fathers portrayed as hapless buffoons - saved from themselves by their wives and all-knowing children. The real life of the modern dad isn't much prettier.

To be sure, the state of the American male is in a shambles - though I'm not fully sure how we got here.

I remember the '60s. The women's movement was beginning to gain traction, but in our neighborhood the moms tended to cook and watch the children, whereas the men earned the money and tended to the yard, then shot the bull over a few Pabst Blue Ribbons.

I remember the '70s. The evening news featured equal-rights protests at which women burned their bras. Still, in our neighborhood, most of the moms stayed home and the dads worked and drank Pabst Blue Ribbon.

During the '80s, the economy exploded. Everyone was so busy working and getting ahead that few noticed - or took the time to celebrate - the tremendous strides women were making.

I got my first job out of college in 1984 and began working with many female professionals - they excelled in a range of jobs they wouldn't have been offered 20 years prior.

The '90s came and went quickly. Women kept blossoming and growing and doing well.

And in 2009, women are doing very well. They're doing better than men at all levels of education. They're gaining rapidly on men as small-business entrepreneurs. In the large metros, they're out-earning us by thousands of dollars.

As females excel, males are faltering. We're dropping out of school at a far greater rate than women. We're seeing our income stall or decline - even men with college degrees are falling behind.

Somewhere along the way, women weren't content with mere equality. They decided they wanted to remake us in their own image.

Boy, have we responded. Sensitive new-age men now spend hours fretting over their looks and style - we spend thousands getting our hair primped, our skin moisturized, our eyebrows waxed.

Modern dads are unsure of themselves, too. Fathers can be found misting up at baby showers and clapping enthusiastically the first time junior uses the commode.

And with every concession men have made we have lost status - we have lost respect. Well, nuts to that.

Look, men, we need to whip ourselves back into shape - we need to remember how men and fathers should be.

We must retake control over the naming process of our children. We must give our boys names such as Tom, Mike, Jim and Joe - not let our wives name them Gilad, Jeremy and Michelle.

We need to stop seeking the approval of our sons and daughters. We are the adults and they are the children. Our role is to focus on the unpleasant job of fathering - to do the often unpopular work that will prepare them for a competitive world.

We must regain our backbone. We must earn respect by being good husbands and fathers - and we must demand that we be respected.

There's nothing wrong with being more attentive to our children than the father's of old were. There's nothing wrong with changing the diapers and having long conversations and showing emotion.

But somewhere along the way we've tossed the baby out with the bathwater - we've let ourselves become wimps and buffoons - and that isn't good for our wives, our kids or ourselves.

It's up to us now. We must restore some needed balance and equilibrium to the American family.

If we do, fathers, after a long productive day of fathering, will be able to enjoy an occasional Pabst Blue Ribbon on the back porch.

To Those I Love

-Isla Paschal Richardson

If I should ever leave you whom I love
To go along the Silent Way,
Grieve not, Nor speak of me with tears,
But laugh and talk of me as if I were beside you there.

(I'd come - I'd come, could I but find a way!
But would not tears and grief be barriers?)
And when you hear a song or see a bird I loved,
Please do not let the thought of me be sad...
For I am loving you just as I always have...
You were so good to me!

There are so many things I wanted still to do -
So many things to say to you...
Remember that I did not fear...
It was Just leaving you that was so hard to face...
We cannot see Beyond...
But this I know:
I love you so - 'twas heaven here with you!

"When someone you love becomes a Memory, that Memory becomes a Treasure."

Homeland security—Gray County style

There are great advantages to living in a small town.

Gray County Commissioner James Hefley tells the story of two men who recently flew into McLean and were looking for the car rental counter at the airport.

When they found out they couldn't rent a car, they asked if there was a courtesy car available.

Since they were friends of people he knew, Hefley finally lent them his car, but as they drove around town, they were stopped twice.

Local law enforcement officials knew it was Hefley's car, and Hefley wasn't driving, and they didn't have to do a computer check to know it.

That's homeland security.—David Bowser

Rivera exhibit explores his cubist portraits

DALLAS (AP) — A new exhibit on Mexican artist Diego Rivera looks at his portraits from the several years in Paris when he focused on cubism.

"Diego Rivera: The Cubist Portraits, 1913-1917" opens Sunday at Southern Methodist University's Meadows Museum. The exhibit, which runs through Sept. 20, features 31 of Rivera's works, with several being exhibited publicly for the first time.

The exhibit explores Rivera's experimentation with the style of art that uses geometric forms while he was in Europe, before he became much more famous for his signature murals and his marriage to Mexican artist Frida Kahlo.

"Almost all of the cubist portraits that he did are together here," said Mark Roglan, director of the Meadows Museum.

Rivera, born in Mexico in 1886, worked in Europe from 1907 to 1921, mostly in Spain and France. Abandoning cubism in 1917 after physically assaulting an art critic who disparaged the style, Rivera returned to Mexico in 1921 and began his work on murals by the mid-20s. Rivera died at the age of 70 in 1957.

The cubist portraits Rivera started painting in his late 20s reveal his loved ones and friends at the time. Those featured include artist Angelina Beloff and the child she had with Rivera, Russian novelist Ilya Ehrenburg and Mexican writer Martin Luis Guzman.

Many of the portraits reflect Rivera's friendships with those in the Russian emigre community during that time, said Sylvia Navarrette, the independent Mexican scholar who curated the exhibit organized by the Meadows Museum.

"It's like a visual diary of the community of refugees," Navarrette said.

The exhibit, which includes text describing the works in both English and Spanish, also shows viewers how Rivera's cubist works progressed.

"He was exploring cubism and almost goes to abstraction," Roglan said.

The exhibit also showcases works from friends of Rivera along with commentary on them from Rivera's autobiography. Rivera, who came somewhat late to cubism, said he accepted Pablo Picasso's mastery. "I readily proclaimed myself Picasso's disciple," he wrote.

"I have always been proud that Picasso was not only my teacher, but my very dear and close friend," he said.

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston man serving a federal prison sentence for a weapons conviction is charged in the disappearance of his 3-year-old son.

Houston police say they've suspected Roderick Terrell Fountain in the 2006 disappearance of Kendrick Jackson from the beginning. A Harris County grand jury returned a murder indictment Thursday against the 34-year-old convict. Harris County District Attorney's spokeswoman Donna Hawkins says the case was taken before the grand jury with new evidence.

If convicted, Fountain could be sentenced to life in prison. He's now serving a 10-year sentence after police found a shotgun in his closet days after his son disappeared.

Gov. Perry vetoes 37 bills

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)—Gov. Rick Perry vetoed 37 pieces of legislation Friday from the recently concluded legislative session, including bills allowing for the early release of rehabilitated prisoners and an expansion of full-day pre-kindergarten.

Though no more vetoes were expected, Perry has until Sunday to sign or veto legislation passed during the session, which concluded June 1.

"I am proud of the accomplishments lawmakers made this session and thankful for their solid leadership," Perry said in a statement. "However, there was some legislation that, in its final form, would have done more harm than good to our citizens." Also Friday, Perry signed a slightly scaled-back state budget after making $289 million in line-item veto cuts. Most of the cuts were aimed at spending for legislation that was not adopted, including an expansion of the Children's Health Insurance Program.

He said lawmakers did a "commendable job" of crafting a two-year budget that reduces state spending for the second time since World War II. Lawmakers were able to address a budget shortfall with the help of more than $12 billion in aid from the federal economic stimulus package.

In an online statement, Perry said he vetoed the plan to help schools offer full-day pre-kindergarten because it would have limited eligibility to districts where third-grade students have scored above the state average on the reading portion of the Texas Assessment of Knowledge and Skills for the past three years.

"With limited state resources dedicated to pre-kindergarten, grant money should be directed to districts with the greatest academic need. State funding should also be directed to programs demonstrating the most efficiency, thereby benefiting the largest number of Texas students," the statement said.

He directed that the $25 million set aside for expanding pre-kindergarten be used to expand the number of students served by the existing grant program.

Perry has used a lighter hand with his veto pen this year. Shortly after his first session as governor in 2001, he set the known record for vetoes by a Texas governor with 83.

Among the vetoes, Perry also slashed:

- a proposal to require that drivers give bikes, motorcyclists and pedestrians at least a 3-foot space when passing;
- a bill that would have granted new power to Child

Protective Services to search and seize children and their medical records;

• a resolution that would have requested Perry appoint a task force on horse and greyhound racing;

• so-called "Romeo and Juliet" legislation that would have exempted certain young sex offenders from registering in the state database if the offense was consensual;

• a measure that specifies what types of marketing and public opinion campaigns the Texas Department of Transportation can spend money on.

Berry farmers help people lose the blues

BRIAN PEARSON
TYLER MORNING
TELEGRAPH

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Emi Applequist had blue lips, blue fingers and seeds on her chin as she doggedly toddled among the blueberry bushes in search of the low-hanging fat, ripe fruit.

The consumption of a fallen dirt-level berry brought a light scolding from the 2-year-old girl's grandmother, Sandra Adair, 59, a Tyler native now living in Arlington.

The berry scavenging for the family and other basket-toting pickers marked a typical late-spring morning recently for the Tyler Berry Farm just northwest of Tyler off a pastoral county road.

Former aerospace engineer Larry Reynolds and his wife, Felicitas, bought the farm, 9628 County Road 429, nine years ago after retiring from Bell Helicopter in Fort Worth.

Reynolds, who grew up in Massachusetts, said a romantic notion planted in his berry-picking childhood inspired him to take up farming in his golden years.

The previous owner launched Tyler Berry Farm in 1980, he said. The farm sits on 26 acres, with 3 1/2 acres of it for blueberries and 2 acres dedicated to blackberries.

"I thought I'd find something nice to do," Reynolds, 75, said while sitting in the shade of his farm shed while his wife, working nearby, packed blueberries into wicker baskets. "I remember going up to Maine and picking berries with my dad.

"But I work harder now than I ever did. It's very challenging."

He cited proper management of the three W's as the key foundations to farming: weeds, water and weather.

Reynolds said he can control two out of three, but weather this year has been problematic for fruit ripening, for both blueberries and blackberries.

Unseasonably cool weather has pushed back ripening for weeks, while warmer annual temperatures have also had an effect, he said.

"It's getting warmer and warmer and warmer every year," Reynolds said. "That makes for mediocre fruit."

Prime blueberry-picking season runs from late May to early August, with blackberries lagging about two weeks behind, he said, adding that blackberries as of last week weren't quite ready for plucking.

Tyler Berry Farm also produces figs and pecans, he said.

While the farm primarily is "a you-pick operation," blueberries are sold in bulk to retailers such as Brookshire's grocers, Reynolds said.

He prides himself on the operation's simplicity.

"We do everything by hand," he said. "There are no machines here."

Machines — can damage fruit, deteriorate freshness and minimize yield, he said. Reynolds works the plants while his wife, 59, handles packaging operations.

"I'm here to fill in the blanks and take care of the field stuff," he said.

Felicitas Reynolds laughed when asked about the transition from wife of an aerospace engineer to blueberry farmer.

She serves as the operation's front line.

"I like meeting the people," she said about what she enjoys most about the work.

Like many of her customers, Felicitas Reynolds spends much of her day being blue. She uses her blue fingers to pop berries past her blue teeth throughout the day at her packaging station.

Charles and Elsie Barnes of Neches visited the blueberry patch recently.

"I haven't picked any in a couple of years, but we were determined to come up here today," said Elsie Barnes, 70, a retired teacher.

She recalled a family tradition of grabbing a bag full of McDonald's sausage biscuits and taking her two granddaughters out to Tyler Berry Farm.

"They'd have breakfast in the sand and pick blueberries," she said.

The granddaughters are grown and have their own children, and Elsie Barnes plans to take the great-grandchildren to the farm — sausage biscuits and all.

For Sandra Adair, a first-grade teacher, last week marked her granddaughter Emi's first blueberry-picking experience, although the girl has picked fruit near her home city.

Emi and her family were visiting from Washington, D.C., and Adair's parents are longtime Tyler residents.

"This is my first time, but my mommy and daddy have been coming for many years," she said.

Meet Jerry Daniels,
 He is my dad

He makes me happy
 Even when I am sad

He took me to school, A different car everyday,
 After all, that is the salesman's way!

Spoiled me rotten, some would say...
 It worked for me, always got my way!

He made it through my terrible teens,
 Cars, boys and a few broken dreams.

"Never give up" he always said,
 "You're a Daniels my dear... forge ahead!"

Forge, I did, and a life I made
 I am who I am because of the path he laid

He is my dad, you could say a best friend,
 There isn't a problem that he can't mend.

A hero of sorts, at least to me,
 For he is my dad, my strong oak tree.

So today I honor this wonderful man,
 The very best dad in "Pampa Land!"

Though we're apart this special day,
 My love and thoughts are sent your way.

I love you so much, thank you for being
 My dad.

Texas Crop Report

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M Agrilife Extension regional crop reports for June 17:

CENTRAL: Soil moisture was short to very short. High temperatures and wind quickly dried out soils. Hay baling continued. Some sudan hay was baled early out of fears the hot, dry weather would lessen quality. The wheat harvest was nearly complete.

COASTAL BEND: Hot, dry weather continued and the drought worsened. Temperatures were above normal, adding to the stress on plants and animals. Some failed crop fields were deep-plowed so that when rain does come they will trap rainwater. Livestock were given supplemental feed or sold.

EAST: Significant hay harvests were under way in all counties except in Henderson where heavy rains fell. In most areas warm-season grass pastures made good growth, but most counties could use more rain to maintain that progress. Cattle were in good condition. Producers worked calves and began re-breeding programs for spring-calving cows. Vegetable harvests were ongoing with some reports of disease problems on tomatoes. Blueberries and watermelon harvests began in some areas. Nacogdoches County reported that peach crops failed due to the late frost in April.

FAR WEST: Widely scattered showers were reported. Hot, dry conditions stressed crops, livestock and pecan trees. Fall-planted onions finished bulbing and should be ready for harvest in early July. Though it's late in the season, area farmers continued to try to plant cotton. There were reports of cotton seedling disease issues where there was rain, and problems getting cotton to emerge where it was dry.

NORTH: Soil moisture was adequate. The temperatures were well into the 90s with high humidity. Some areas had scattered thunderstorms. High winds were more of a problem than the rain for some. Corn was in fair to good condition and tasseling.

Some corn fields were in standing water for part of May and probably won't produce. Fields with good drainage looked better. The wheat harvest began, though late because of the storms. About 40 percent of the wheat was damaged by late freezes and rains. Some producers had about average yields, but most reported far-below average yields. Soybeans and sorghum were in fair to good condition. Cotton and rice were in fair condition. The oat harvest was nearly complete. Rangeland and pastures were in fair to good condition. Hay harvesting was ongoing. Livestock were in good condition.

PANHANDLE: Warmer temperatures and some rain allowed the planting of most crops to be completed. Corn and cotton looked good with irrigation in full swing. Thrips were found in cotton in some areas. The wheat harvest began. Although the first wheat yield reports were initially low, higher ones were expected as the harvest continues. Some areas received hail, but damage assessments were not complete. Cattle were in good condition.

ROLLING PLAINS: Rain improved pastures across the region and enabled cotton growers to establish good stands. Sudan was expected to respond well to the rain too. The wheat harvest was as bad as expected with low yields and poor test weights. Local wheat seed will be scarce. AgriLife Extension county agents reported that with the improvement in pasture conditions, some producers were already considering buying back into the cow business. The rain also helped raise stock-water tank levels but most were still low.

SOUTH: Windy, hot and humid days dried out top soils. Moisture levels were rated short to very short. Rangeland and pastures that greened up from early June rains were already dry. However, in the eastern and western parts of the region, the hot, humid weather was favorable for warm-season grass growth. Hay grazer fields were established but were subsequently hurt by drier conditions. The only crops that were doing well in the northern and southern parts of the region were those under irrigation. Grain sorghum under irrigation was turning color. Livestock producers continued to provide supplemental feed, but stock tanks and ponds were running low or drying up. Hay supplies were short.

SOUTH PLAINS: From 0.5 to 3 inches of rain fell. Spotty hail was reported, but damage appeared to be minimal. Soil moisture was short to adequate. Corn was in good condition thanks to the hot, humid weather. Sorghum was in fair to good condition. The wheat harvest was ongoing. Cotton was in fair to good condition. Most of the dry-planted cotton was yet to emerge. Pastures and rangeland were in fair condition. Cattle were in good condition as producers continue to supply supplemental feed.

SOUTHEAST: The region was extremely hot and dry; the drought continued to worsen. Producers were feeding hay, but supplies were short. Many hay growers quickly sold all their first cutting. Conditions continue to worsen for most crops with the exception of rice. There were no reports of crop insects or disease.

Livestock were doing fair. Pond levels dropped.

SOUTHWEST: Dry southerly winds and temperatures above 100 aggravated the drought and plagued agricultural production. The region missed the spring growing season and entered summer with only about one-third of the long-term cumulative average rainfall of the last nine months. The heat stressed livestock and wildlife. The soil profile remained very dry. Forage availability was in short supply. Pastures, rangeland and dryland crops made nearly no progress. Crops under heavy irrigation made excellent progress. Growers continued to harvest cabbage, onions, green beans, sweet corn, cantaloupes and watermelons. Irrigated corn was in the soft-dough stage, but producers expected below-average yields. Irrigated sorghum headed.

WEST CENTRAL: Scattered showers were reported in many areas, improving rangeland and pastures, but others were hot and dry. Storm damage to crops and structures was reported. Some wheat was harvested for grain. The hay harvest was in full swing. Many stock tanks and ponds remained very low. Livestock were in fair to good condition.

Prep deaths prompt new heat policies

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The nation's athletic trainers are calling on high school football teams to eliminate two-a-day practices in August.

The new report from the National Association of Athletic Trainers was released Thursday in San Antonio. In some states, the grueling two-a-days are an annual rite of passage for thousands of high school teams.

Authors of the report say their policies largely follow what's being done at the college level. They also point to a 15-year-old in Kentucky who collapsed last August and later died. Prosecutors charged his coach with reckless homicide.

Scientists forecast a large dead zone in Gulf of Mexico

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Based on the amount of nutrients flowing down the Mississippi River, scientists predict this year's area of low oxygen in the Gulf of Mexico will reach a size roughly the same as New Jersey.

Researchers say the area of low oxygen, known as the dead zone, will likely measure between 7,450 and 8,456 square miles. At that size, this year's dead zone could be one of the largest on record. The largest on record was in 2002 at 8,848 square miles.

Urban and Midwest farmland nutrient-rich runoff is blamed for feeding the dead zone every summer. The nutrients from the heartland flow down the Mississippi and spark algae blooms in the Gulf that consume the oxygen in waters off Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My 17-year-old son, "Seth," is set to go off to college. He is going to a state university about 20 minutes from our home.

When filling out the paperwork for school, I did not sign him up to live on campus. His behavior during his senior year was less than stellar. I felt he needed to prove himself a little before I spent the money for him to live on campus. He's furious with me, and I admit I am second-guessing my decision as I talk to other parents whose kids are all living on campus.

I want my son to be independent. I told him if he did well the first semester he could live there the second semester. Did I do the right thing? -- PERPLEXED MOM IN NEW YORK

DEAR MOM: I know you want your son to be independent, but for him to become independent means he needs to accept responsibility for himself -- and that includes filling out his own paperwork for school. Dormitory living would have provided an atmosphere with some supervision and structure, but dorm rooms are usually assigned at the beginning of the school year -- not the middle.

I know you meant well, but I would have done things differently and told my son that if he did poorly in his first semester, he would be living at home during the second one.

DEAR ABBY: We desperately need your help on how to say "no thanks," without hurting our friends' feelings. A lovely couple at church regularly invite us to their home for dinner. "Judy" is an avid reader and enjoys clipping recipes from newspapers and magazines.

When we arrive, the conversation usually starts with, "I got a new recipe." We have been served half-cooked bean soup that felt like we were chewing on little pebbles from the river, casseroles with cheese topping so hard it could be used as roadway asphalt, and cakes as heavy as lead. Thank God for lemonade to wash down the taste.

We feel like their guinea pigs. We like their company, but we're afraid our medical bill could be higher this year if we venture into the wrong meal. These people are great friends and fun to be around. How do we say no without hurting their feelings? -- QUEASY IN KENTUCKY

DEAR QUEASY: The next time Judy invites you to dinner, accept on the condition that YOU bring the main course. And when you do, be sure to bring the recipe with you. Then, during dinner or after, explain to Judy exactly how it was prepared. You'll be doing not only your hostess, but also yourselves, a big favor.

DEAR ABBY: My father was recently widowed at the age of 77. I know he's lonely because he has never lived by himself, but I'm concerned about his social behavior. He makes sexual remarks around women of all ages -- from 21 to 101. If he sees that I'm shocked or embarrassed, he says he likes a good laugh and "this is nothing they haven't heard before."

I have tried telling Dad that his comments are offensive and degrading. I love him and want him to be happy, but I'm afraid he's making a fool of himself and will end up with a poor reputation in our small retirement town.

Am I wrong? How can I help him see the error of his ways? -- DISCONCERTED DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: You are not wrong. But you have already told your father that his remarks are offensive. He can see the effect that they have on you. Unless he is becoming demented, which you should be able to determine if there have been other changes in his behavior, he may be one of those hard-headed people who have to learn things the hard way.

DEAR ABBY: Please print my letter on Father's Day because I'd like to say something. I was raised by my father, no mother in sight. He took on the job of two parents and didn't bat an eyelash. I was 6 when Dad changed jobs, bought a house and got my siblings and me out of foster care where our mother had left us.

At the time, I barely knew my dad, but as the years passed I got to know him. He was a tough, hard-working, kind, loving man who taught me those qualities by example, as well as how to laugh at life.

We lost Dad unexpectedly to a heart attack last January. He wasn't even 60 years old. If anyone deserves an accolade on Father's Day, it's him because he was the best. He is sorely missed. He was my hero, and I am flattered to be compared to him. -- LOVING DAUGHTER IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR LOVING DAUGHTER: You are lucky to have had such a positive father figure in your life -- and I'm printing your letter in tribute not only to your own dear father, but also to other devoted and caring men who nurture and mentor children.

In honor of fathers everywhere, I would like to share a poem that last appeared in my column in 2001. It was penned by a talented writer and retired schoolteacher named Hilda Bigelow:

I HAD A FATHER WHO TALKED WITH ME
I had a father who talked with me.

Allowed me the right to disagree,

To question -- and always answered me,

As well as he could -- and truthfully.

He talked of adventures; horrors of war;

Of life, its meaning; what love was for;

How each would always need to strive

To improve the world to keep it alive.

Stressed the duty we owe one another

To be aware each man is a brother.

Words for laughter he also spoke,

A silly song or happy joke.

Time runs along, some say I'm wise,

That I look at life with seeing eyes.

My heart is happy, my mind is free,

I had a father who talked with me.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance wants a prenuptial agreement. I am willing to sign one, even though it's not my idea. This is to protect his finances.

According to our research, we are both supposed to hire our own attorneys. My question: Is it my responsibility to pay for my attorney even though we are doing the prenup only to protect my fiance's assets and inheritance? -- JUST WONDERING IN WISCONSIN

DEAR JUST WONDERING: A prenuptial agreement is supposed to protect the interests of both parties. At the same time that it protects your fiance's assets, it should lay out what provisions will be made for you in the event that the marriage doesn't work out. Because your attorney will be representing only you, you should be the person compensating him (or her) for services rendered. And honey, this is not the time to cheap out.

DAILY HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, June 21, 2009:

This year, open up to new ideas without so much resistance. Friends play a bigger role in your life than before. Add more spunk to your daily life, allow yourself to be more colorful. Keep your own counsel, with the exception of a trusted friend. Sometimes your mind exaggerates a problem. A sounding board might be necessary. If you are single, you meet people with ease, but perhaps don't choose someone with equal ease. If you are attached, make special time for your significant other. A weekend retreat will help you bond even more. GEMINI understands what motivates you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

**** Catch up on others' news. Communication is rather intense. You can be far more direct -- and probably will be -- with a loved one. The problem doesn't really involve caring, but other issues. If he or she claims up, don't push. Tonight: Return calls and catch up on e-mail.

This Week: It's no surprise you'll be dragging through mid-Wednesday. What you have put off, you will accomplish then.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

*** Weigh the pros and cons of an expenditure. How you deal with someone and your subsequent choices could change radically. A child or loved one might attempt to give you the cold shoulder in order to draw a response. Don't get pulled into this game. Tonight: Go over your budget.

This Week: Opting for something new? Car? Computer? You need to update your communication in some way.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

***** Rarely are you on a roll like this one. Tap into diplomacy when expressing your feelings and clearing the air. Passion runs high. Do be careful with someone you meet today. This person might not be all he or she seems to be.

Tonight: What you want

This Week: Understand your finances before you enact a decision. Communicate your thoughts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

*** Use extra time to bolster your energy. You might want to continue a project or get together with a friend for brunch and a chat. Curb your socializing for the moment, and stay one-on-one. Recharge rather than act. Tonight: Get a good night's sleep.

This Week: Resolutions made this week stick, at least if you don't fight them later!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

***** Join friends and enjoy! You might be mulling over a problem. You have time to work through it. Listen to others, and let go of a personal issue. You will be smiling soon enough. Tonight: Stick to your budget.

This Week: Take a back seat until Wednesday. You will know what is right.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

***** You are more focused than you have been in quite a while. Understand what someone's message is, whether you agree or not. Don't avoid a must appearance or a responsibility. Tonight: Honor how you feel. Tired? Stay home.

This Week: Quickly zero in on a goal. Your energy starts diminishing early on.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

***** Let your mind wander. If possible, take off for a drive or explore a new spot. Walk through a flea market. The change of scenery helps you distance yourself from concerns. Relax in a different setting. Tonight: Breathe, relax and continue to be adventurous.

This Week: Your attention and focus are on career and parents. Network Wednesday on.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

***** Respond to someone's efforts. You might be hard on this person, more so than you intended. A little caring will help nurture wounds. Plans might change when a friend opts for a new direction. Tonight: Follow a loved one's lead.

This Week: Reach for unusual concepts. Schedule vacation time too.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

***** You might want to defer to others right now, as you actually have other fish to fry and need to get a project done. Others come up with fun plans where you can join them at your own pace. Tonight: Be responsive to an inquiring friend.

This Week: A partner's wishes need to dominate. Understand his or her perspective.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

*** Pace yourself. You can only get so much done, and you need to relax. Don't push too hard, and enjoy the spontaneous happenings. A child or a new friend is unusually caring. Reach out for someone at a distance. Tonight: Think "tomorrow."

This Week: Others carry the weight right now. Why not take off?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

***** Containing your humor and fun ways can be close to impossible. Children particularly love when you tune in to your inner child. Whatever you do, others enjoy being around you. Be careful with a partner who could become jealous. Tonight: Forget Monday, live now.

This Week: Emphasize health and diet. Make that resolution.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

***** Invite an older relative or friend to join with family and friends. You'll see how much your efforts are appreciated. Intense communication surrounds a romantic relationship. Don't worry so much if someone rains on your parade. You cannot make everyone happy all the time. Tonight: Pulling it together, thinking of tomorrow.

This Week: Your creativity flourishes. Find the right slot for change.

BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, June 22, 2009.
This year, you open doors and see new vistas because you want to. Reflecting before taking action is a great habit, and one you will cultivate this year. What you are doing is significant. New beginnings become possible that could last a lifetime. What would you like to change or do? Decide, and blow out your candles, never forgetting your wish list. If you are single, you could develop the type of relationship you want. If you are attached, a better relationship is possible. Don't engage in power struggles. Another CANCER tunes in to you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have:
5-Dynamic, 4-Positive, 3-Average, 2-So-so, 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
*** Handle personal communication in the morning. In the afternoon, pull back and, if possible, check out a domestic investment and your budget. Most certainly, your mind drifts to home and family. Why not take off early or bring your work home? Tonight: Order in.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
*** Study the budget. It might not be your personal budget, but your skills are requested. New beginnings become possible this afternoon. The key will be to verbalize what is going on and what you desire. Words seal an agreement. Tonight: Meet up with a friend.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
*** You want to dodge unexpected problems. As surprising as they are, they might pop up, but they also could vanish just as easily. Listen to news with an eye to reorganizing and solution-finding. A power play is just that. Be smart — don't play into it. Tonight: Gather your bills.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
*** Your mind could be working overtime trying to process everything that is occurring. It would be wise to slow down and think rather than act. Insights could be startling and somewhat difficult. This afternoon, put issues on the back burner. Tonight: Only what would make you smile.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
*** Focus on your goals. The unexpected occurs out of the blue. A partner might wash his or her hands of a situation, seeing it as potentially difficult. Clearly, others will support you. Listen to news and check out information this afternoon. Do all the research you need to do. Tonight: New beginnings become possible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
*** Your hands remain full. You might wonder what needs to happen first. Despite all the pressure, unpredictable people and responsibilities piling up, stop. Take a deep breath, prioritize and get moving. Success will come with this approach. Tonight: Where the gang is.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
*** Check out what is going on behind the scenes. Listen to news and eye what is happening with detachment. Soon enough, others start looking to you for leadership. Take a stand if need be. You'll possibly get another chance with an authority figure. Tonight: A must appearance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
*** New beginnings are always possible if you are looking beyond the obvious. Find experts and get new opinions this afternoon. A one-on-one conversation is very important in directing you. Listen and prioritize. Tonight: Detach. Relax.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
*** Others give you an earful. You might feel overwhelmed. Take a deep breath and consider the energy an associate has when dealing with these same issues. If you can, let this person run the show! Tonight: Togetherness works.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
*** Before you get entrenched in personal matters, clear your desk, return calls and make sure your schedule is open. A discussion could become more animated or balloon into more. It is good to listen and be open, yet somehow you are swept up by a tidal wave. Tonight: Defer to others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
*** Creativity opens more doors than you realize. However, don't get involved in details. Look at the big picture. Openly investigate possibilities. A new beginning comes from out of left field if you are open. Tonight: Work as late as possible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
*** Stay anchored despite the wave of events around your personal life or a family member. New beginnings become possible — you choose the area of your life where you want more vitality. Pressure builds. Take a walk to let off some of the steam. Tonight: Easy does it.

Lake Fork trophy bass survey

ATHENS, Texas--In May, the Lake Fork Trophy Bass Survey continued its run as the most successful program of its kind. Since the survey began in March 2003, anglers have reported catching more than 10,000 trophy largemouth bass from the 27,000 acre reservoir. The latest milestone for the Trophy Bass Survey confirms Lake Fork's legacy as one of the finest trophy largemouth bass fisheries in the world. The Lake Fork Trophy

Bass Survey, a voluntary program in which anglers report their catches of trophy largemouth bass on Lake Fork, has been collecting valuable information for Texas Parks and Wildlife Department fisheries managers for more than six years. This survey, which is a cooperative project of the Lake Fork Chamber of Commerce, the Lake Fork Sportsman's Association and TPWD, provides invaluable details on Lake Fork's world-renowned trophy bass fishery; information which cannot be obtained through standard fisheries surveys.

The Lake Fork Trophy Bass Survey gives anglers an opportunity to record their catches of fish 7 pounds and greater. Anglers are asked to provide information at participating marinas on weights and lengths of these trophy fish. Each month, TPWD personnel collect the survey ledgers and produce a summary of the results. Not only does the survey generate good publicity for the lake, but it also allows fisheries managers and stakeholders a chance to cooperate in a successful project.

During its history, the Lake Fork Trophy Bass Survey has recorded 10,127 fish over 7 pounds. Fisheries managers have estimated through their angler creel surveys that through May 2009, 8.1% of trophy fish reportedly caught by interviewed anglers were reported to the Trophy Bass Survey. If the numbers are expanded, that would indicate a catch of in excess of 125,025 fish over 7 pounds since March 2003!

Think Texas: Best cities for Jobs — June

By TODD STAPLES

We've all heard the grim news about hard times, recession and high unemployment across the nation, but the news is much better here in the Lone Star State. According to a recent Forbes Magazine article, eight of the top 20 cities for jobs are located right here in Texas.

San Antonio, the Austin-Round Rock area, Houston-Sugar Land-Baytown area, the Fort Worth-Arlington area and Dallas-Plano-Irving area are the country's top five large areas for job growth. The McAllen-Edinburg-Mission area and Corpus Christi are ranked as two of the best mid-sized areas for jobs and have seen great growth. In fact, the education and health sector jobs in the McAllen-Edinburg-Mission area have increased by nearly 50 percent since 2003, and Corpus Christi has seen an almost 28 percent increase in the natural resources, mining and construction sectors over the last five years.

But it's not just large and medium-sized Texas cities that lead the nation in employment opportunities. Odessa, Longview, the Killeen-Temple-Fort Hood area, Laredo and the College Station-Bryan area all made the Top 10 on Forbes' "Best Small Cities for Jobs" list.

This is confirmation that Texas is a great state in which to do business, work and retire. We're proud that our larger cities offer so many opportunities, but we know rural Texas offers its share of opportunities. That's why the Texas Department of Agriculture is a strong development partner for our rural communities.

TDA has a long history of supporting rural Texas. Our Texas Capital Fund program has assisted in creating more than 1,200 jobs since 2007, and the GO TEXAN Certified Retirement Community Program helps rural cities make their communities attractive to retirees. Texas estimates that each retiree household contributes about $43,000 to the economy.

You can learn more about TDA's rural economic development programs by visiting <http://www.TexasAgriculture.gov>.
