County says CTT may begin test holes

BY DAVID BOWSER
 dbowser@thepampanews.com
 The Gray County Commission will allow Cross Texas Transmission drill test holes at three different places along county roads as part of the process that will culminate with the building power lines through the area. Cross Texas Transmission will drill holes on the county right of way at Country Road 13 and U.S. Highway 273, County Road S and RR 291 and Haiduk Road and RR 293 as part of their plan to build power lines across the panhandle to move electricity down state. They also heard a presentation by Joseph Anstey of Emergency Services Foundation of Texas about an alternative ambulance service.

Anstey told the commission that he would like to provide the emergency ambulance service for Gray County and the City of Pampa. The ambulance service, a not-profit ambulance service. In other business, the commission awarded Ysmaldo Salinas two tracts. For $600, Salinas got 529 and 533 Ballard. The commission also approved COBRA rates for health care insurance. The county commission approved a five dollar filing fee for each county and district court effective Sept. 1. The fee will go to the Seventh Court of Appeals in Amarillo. The county commissioners court also approved the county adult COUNTY cont. on page 3

Glover joins Pampa News

Andrew Glover has joined the editorial staff of The Pampa News. Glover, 23, has moved to Pampa from Katy, Texas. He is a May graduate of Texas Tech University at Lubbock, where he majored in Journalism. "I knew I wanted to do something with sports when I grew up," he said, "and I chose Journalism because of that interest." Although football is his favorite sport, he didn't play football in high school, opting instead for basketball, track and cross-country. Pampa surprised him a little, he said, because it has a higher elevation than he expected and it was "greener" than he expected. "Lubbock is flat," he laughed. "Driving here it was greener than I thought it would be. I thought it was going to look like Lubbock." In college, he was a staff writer on the school newspaper, The Daily Toreador, covering student government and general news. During the summer of 2007, he was an intern at the Katy Times, a twice weekly newspaper, where he covered sports and general news. GLOVER cont. on page 3

Local church helps fill stomachs and wallets

BY ANDREW GLOVER
 aglover@thepampanews.com
 Highland Baptist Church on the 1300 block of N. Banks, is working through Angel Food Ministries to provide Pampa residents with affordable meals. Angel Food Ministries, according to their web site, is a non-profit, non-denominational organization providing food relief and financial support in communities across the United States. Pastor Paul Nachtigall said his Highland Baptist got involved with the ministry a couple of years ago. "We found out it was available, and it was something we could do to assist people with limited income," Nachtigall said. According to the Angel Food web site, Anyone can order food through Angel Food ministries regardless of their income. People can get the food by filling out an order with the church and paying for that order. A couple of weeks after they order, people can pick up their order on a distribution day. Nachtigall says the number of people who order each month varies. "Some months we've had as low as 24, but we get between 24-32, and one month we had as high as 48," Nachtigall said. Highland Baptist gets their food shipped to Amarillo and have volunteers pick it up. The volunteers put it together at the church. Nachtigall said volunteers

- Orders are due at Highland Baptist on at 10 a.m. Monday, August 17
 - Highland Baptist will distribute orders on August 29 at 10:30 a.m.
 - Angel Food Ministries was founded in 1994 in Monroe, GA
 - Angel Food puts their food to fit in the medium-sized box
 - Angel Food's menu is different each month
 - 35 of 50 states have Angel Food Ministry host sites
- vary from four to eight people, depending on what's going on. The Baptist pastor said the food is high quality for a good price. "People who order this food aren't going to say 'Ah man, I could have got this at Dollar General,'" Nachtigall said. "The food they get will be the quality they FOOD cont. on page 3

Popularity, Web snafus nearly broke 'clunkers'

NEW YORK (AP) — This was one government stimulus plan that yielded quick results. Maybe too quick. Far more drivers signed up for the "cash for clunkers" program than anyone thought, overwhelming showrooms, blowing through the initial $1 billion set aside by Congress and leaving dealers panicked over when or if the government would make good on the hefty rebates.

Confusion reigned, even as dollars flowed into dealerships starved for business for months. The government Web site set up to process rebates of up to $4,500 per new car could not keep up with demand. Washington scrambled to come up with more cash and sent mixed signals about how the program would unfold. "A borderline train wreck," said Charlie Swenson, general manager at Walsler Toyota in Bloomington, Minn. in Glen Burnie, Md., Bob Bell, who owns Ford, Kia and Hyundai dealerships, said his employees were overwhelmed filing for reimbursement from the government's clunky system. He compared the program to a military operation: "It is a disaster," Bell said. "We met our objective, but the losses were terrible."

The House voted Friday to replenish the program with $2 billion, setting up likely Senate action next week. Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said the administration assured lawmakers that "deals will be honored until otherwise noted by the White House." The Car Allowance Rebate System offers owners of old cars and trucks $3,500 or $4,500 toward a new, more fuel-efficient vehicle, in exchange for scrapping their old vehicle. Congress last month approved the plan to boost auto sales and remove some inefficient cars and trucks from the roads. It was unclear how many cars had been sold under the program on Friday, but the number was far higher than anyone had expected. About 40,000 vehicle sales were done through the program but dealers estimated they were trying to complete transactions on an additional 200,000 vehicles, said Sen. Debbie Stabenow, D-Mich.

Texas college tuition fund going broke

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The program offered a deal to Texas parents with young children: prepay when Junior is small and you won't have to worry about the cost of tuition at a Texas university, even as rates climb. But with the rapidly rising cost of college, the Texas Guaranteed Tuition Plan is going broke.

Comptroller Susan Combs, whose office administers the fund, said the plans are guaranteed by the state, so parents who enrolled in the program will get their children's tuition bills paid. But the fund, covering tuition and fees for about 119,000 children, is going broke and will require as much as $2.1 billion in taxpayer money to stay solvent.

The tuition plan was offered between 1996 and 2003. In 1997, voters approved a plan to guarantee the fund with the state's credit.

The fund was suspended when the state Legislature allowed universities to set their own tuition rates, making it hard to predict what it would cost to fund a future education. Since 2003, tuition costs have jumped dramatically and the fund will run out of money between 2015 and 2017.

A newer — much costlier — prepaid tuition plan created in 2007 is administered by an investment firm, not the state.

Combs said regardless of the costs, the state will have to cover the shortfall in the tuition fund, which was called the Texas Tomorrow Fund when it was created.

"The taxpayers of Texas voted this in, and the taxpayers of Texas have obligated themselves to pay this out over time," Combs said. "You can't pull a California and send (parents) an IOU. You have a hole, and you must get a shovel and start filling in."

The state will have to completely pay tuition and fees of children who have contracts with the fund for the next 15 to 20 years, Combs said.

Mark Hurley, a Dallas accountant who advises Combs on the plan, said the fund could run out of money sooner than 2015 if inflation or another stock market plummet plunders the fund.

John Sharp, the comptroller in 1995 when the fund was created, said there was no problem with plan at the time. Actuaries set the price based on costs and investment earnings. Sharp, now a Democratic candidate for U.S. Senate, said the price could have been adjusted over time as tuition costs rose and the stock market fluctuated.

The cost of a four-year college plan for a newborn in 1996 was about $10,500. It rose to about $17,500 in 2003.

By comparison, the cost of the new program created in 2007 is much higher, about $39,400 for an infant, and the investments are not guaranteed by the state.

Most-ever districts "academically unacceptable"

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The number of Texas school districts rate by the state as "academically unacceptable" has increased to its highest level ever.

"Academically unacceptable" is the lowest ranking in the state accountability system implemented in 1994. The accounting released Friday by Texas Education Commissioner Robert Scott attributes the increase to dropout rates.

However, new standards also led to an increase in the number of schools ranked as "exemplary," the top rating in the accountability system.

Schools are rated based on student performance on the Texas Assessment of Knowledge and Skills and a standardized test for special education students along with dropout and completion rates.

Nachtigall said one of the things they are working for is better advertising.

"I had a woman tell me it was the first time she heard about this," Nachtigall said. "There is a lot of people who could benefit from this, if they know about it."

Nachtigall said if people are interested they can visit the church office and look at the menu for the month.

"If they want more groceries for their buck this is something that they should consider," Nachtigall said.

"It was great," he said. "When August came I didn't want to leave. The experience reassured me that this was something I wanted to do."

"Andrew has hit the ground running," said Pampa News Publisher Randy Pribble. "He has met with the Pampa High School Athletic Director and some of the coaches already. I think his enthusiasm will translate into some great coverage for local students.

"Although he will concentrate primarily on local sports, he will also be responsible for some general news reporting, too, so you will see him out and about the community soon."

House approves $2B more for 'cash for clunkers'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted overwhelmingly Friday to rush $2 billion into the popular but financially strapped "cash for clunkers" car purchase program, heeding calls from consumers eager to keep taking advantage of thousands of dollars in trade-in incentives.

House members approved the measure 316-109 within hours of learning from Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood that the program was running out of money.

President Barack Obama said he was encouraged by the House action to keep alive a program that had "succeeded well beyond our expectations." Senate action is likely next week, ensuring the program won't be affected by the sudden shortage of cash.

Report: Texas still lags in Hispanics in higher ed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Hispanic enrollment in Texas colleges and universities would need to almost double in the next six years to meet the state's goals by 2015, according to a new state report.

The staff report approved by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board on Thursday looked a progress toward goals adopted by the state in 2000. The board has long considered lagging Hispanic enrollment and graduation rates a major problem.

"Texas is not one of the highest-achieving states in terms of overall education attainment," Higher Education Commissioner Raymund Paredes said. "And Hispanics are the lowest-achieving of the three major ethnic groups in Texas."

The Austin American-Statesman reported Friday that the review found Hispanic enrollment had grown faster than that of blacks or whites but not fast enough to meet the state's goals. Nearly 129,500 more Hispanic students have enrolled in higher education since 2000, but another 309,000 would need to do so by 2015 to meet the state's goal of 5.7 percent of Hispanics enrolled.

Texas had about 367,000 Latino college students last year.

One problem is that too few Hispanic students graduate from high school, the report said. Only 54.2 percent of Hispanic seventh-graders in 1995 graduated from a Texas public high school, compared with 61.3 percent of all students, it said.

"Latino youth begin kindergarten far behind their peers," said Patricia Gandara, a UCLA professor of education. "Latino students require more investment by the state."

Officials pledged to address Hispanic achievement, as well as shortfalls in technology-related degrees, research funding and other benchmarks.

Texas has a goal of having 5.7 percent of each major ethnic and racial group in the state enroll in college by 2015. Last year, 5.4 percent of Texans were enrolled in public and private colleges and universities, up from 5 percent in 2000.

The proportion of blacks was the highest, at 5.6 percent, the report said.

RRC production statistics and allowables for August

AUSTIN — The Texas average rig count as of July 17, 2009 was 340, representing about 39 percent of all active land rigs in the United States. In the last 12 months, total Texas reported production was 348 million barrels of oil and 7.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas. Texas natural gas production represents approximately 29 percent of total U.S. natural gas demand.

Commission used historical production figures from previous months, producers' demand forecasts for the coming month, and adjusted the figures based on well capability. These initial allowables will be adjusted after actual production for August 2009 is reported.

New GI Bill sending veterans to school this fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spc. Marco Reininger started the year on the dusty streets of Afghanistan. He'll end it on the campus of Columbia University with the government picking up a large chunk of the $100,000 tab for tuition.

The Post-9/11 GI Bill rolls out on Saturday, just in time for the fall semester for veterans of the recent wars. Reminiscent of the GI education benefits signed into law by President Franklin D. Roosevelt two weeks after D-Day in 1944, the measure is aimed at transforming the lives of a new generation of veterans.

President Barack Obama on Monday will attend a rally at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va., in celebration.

In the next decade, $78 billion is expected to be paid out under the new GI Bill, which is the most comprehensive education benefit offered since World War II.

Many veterans who served after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks are eligible for full tuition and fees for four years at a state university, a monthly housing stipend and up to $1,000 annually for books. Among those covered are members of the Guard and Reserve who spent three months or more activated for war service, giving them vastly improved benefits.

If they opt to attend a private institution or graduate program, they can receive aid up to the cost of a public college in the state. About 1,100 schools and colleges are offering additional scholarships for veterans that the VA is matching under a Yellow Ribbon program.

Many veterans say they can't help but be thankful. "It definitely makes it more valuable," Reininger, 25, a member of the New York Army National Guard, said of his combat experience. "Without that deployment, I couldn't be eligible for anything."

By 1947, nearly half of all college students in America were veterans. The program cost $14.5 billion, and more than half of the nation's 15 million World War II veterans participated in some sort of educational program.

One of them was Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., 85, the child of immigrants from hard-scrabble Paterson, N.J., who fought in Europe at age 18. The GI Bill paid for him to go to Columbia University.

"In a way, I'm not even sure I would've gone to college," Lautenberg said. "The horizon was so limited. I couldn't think in terms of the future."

Lautenberg signed on early to the new GI Bill legislation, which was authored by Sen. Jim Webb, D-Va., 63, a Vietnam veteran whose Marine son fought in Iraq.

Webb attended the U.S. Naval Academy before his war service and Georgetown University's law school afterward. He said paying for education sends a signal about the value of military service and helps veterans with readjustment issues.

"There's a tremendous downstream effect on the emotional well-being on the people who have served if you treat them right," he said.

Aubrey Arcangel, 27, an Iraq veteran who attends City College of New York, recalls chatting with some of his Army buddies in Iraq worried about finding a job in the recession, and telling them about the new benefit.

"They were worried about getting out and looking for a job, and I said, 'Listen, this new GI Bill will do good for you,'" Arcangel said.

The legislation didn't pass without a fight. Some lawmakers complained about the cost, and the Pentagon expressed concerns that many troops would leave the military to attend college. A popular benefit was added that allowed members of the military to transfer the benefit to spouses or children if they agree to serve an additional four years.

It's anticipated that 485,000 veterans or their family members could participate in the first year. About 112,000 claims have been processed so far, and more than 1 million callers have flooded a VA call center this year with questions. About 25,000 service members have applied to use the transfer benefit.

There are concerns that universities and the VA could be overwhelmed, in part, because the benefit is complex. And, there are complaints that veterans attending private schools in states like California that kept their public tuition low face a major disparity in what they receive.

Veterans from the non-profit Iraq and Afghanistan Veterans of America, which aggressively lobbied for the bill, are back on Capitol Hill pushing for what they call a GI Bill fix. Among other changes, it would seek to solve the disparity in tuition amounts covered and grant new benefits for vocational programs. It would also provide a living allowance for those who live too far from a university and take classes online.

"The benefit is fantastic, it's transformative, it's historic, but we also have serious concerns about where it stands right now," said Paul Rieckhoff, the group's executive director and founder.

Cleanup of tar balls on beaches almost done

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Officials overseeing the cleanup of gooey oil blobs on South Texas beaches said the work was expected to be completed Friday and the muck is believed to have come from the same unknown source.

Tar-like blobs as big as basketballs were first reported washing up more than a week ago. Jim Suydam, a spokesman for the Texas General Land Office, said more weathered blobs were washing up as late as Thursday.

The blobs were scattered along about 155 miles of coast, from Matagorda Island to the mouth of the Rio Grande, Suydam said. The Land Office worked with the U.S. Coast Guard on the cleanup.

The last of the cleanup is on a portion of the Padre Island National Seashore, Suydam said.

The responsible party might be forced to pay for the cleanup, Suydam said.

One bird was killed by the oil, he said.

Landowners win explanation of border fence access

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has ordered the U.S. government to clearly tell property owners affected by the border fence how they'll be able to access their land.

It's taken weeks for the government to hammer out such an explanation for five landowners east of Brownsville who have been fighting for specifics and clearer language in court.

On Friday, U.S. District Judge Andrew Hanen of Brownsville told Justice Department lawyers that they need to do the same for about 255 other South Texas landowners who haven't settled their cases.

First lady receives high marks from Laura Bush

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — Michelle Obama's performance as first lady is getting high marks from her predecessor, Laura Bush.

Speaking to The Associated Press after a change-of-command ceremony for the USS Texas submarine at the Naval submarine base, Bush said Friday she's watched the current first lady from afar and is impressed.

"I think she's doing a terrific job," she said. "It's like a club; very few people have been in that position. I sympathize with her, and I also know what it's like."

Bush was known as a traditional first lady, but was the first to record one of the president's Saturday radio messages. She also held a news conference in the White House briefing room, rare for a first lady, to accuse Myanmar's military rulers of ineptness after a killer cyclone struck.

Bush said she and former President George W. Bush are both enjoying private life since leaving the White House in January.

She said she has been working on a book and is busy helping put together her husband's presidential library on the Southern Methodist University campus near downtown Dallas.

"We're having a good time," said.

The former first lady has a special relationship with the USS Texas. She was asked to be the boat's sponsor when her husband was the state's governor. She had her initials welded on the ship's keel, and christened the submarine in 2004.

Friday's ceremony was held to turn command of the Texas over to Cmdr. Robert Roncska. Roncska, dubbed "Navy Bob" by President Bush, was the naval aide to the former president from 2006 to 2008. He also accompanied the first lady on a trip to Afghanistan. In his speech Friday, he called the Bushes "the greatest friend," she said. "He came down to the ranch, in fact, just three weeks ago to ride on our trails that we have there. ... I know he's full of energy and he'll be a really great leader."

Roncska, a native of Dunkirk, N.Y., took command from the USS Texas from Cmdr. James Gray, from Dover, Del., is moving to the executive panel of the chief of naval operations.

An avid bicyclist, Roncska would often ride with the president around Washington, D.C., Laura Bush said.

"Bob got to be a good friend," she said. "He came down to the ranch, in fact, just three weeks ago to ride on our trails that we have there. ... I know he's full of energy and he'll be a really great leader."

Roncska, a native of Dunkirk, N.Y., took command from the USS Texas from Cmdr. James Gray, from Dover, Del., is moving to the executive panel of the chief of naval operations.

State to hold historical marker workshops

AUSTIN, Texas — Throughout August and September, the marker program staff of the Texas Historical Commission (THC) will offer free workshops designed to assist in the application process for Official Texas Historical Markers. Workshops will provide an overview of important historical research fundamentals and are intended to aid both potential marker sponsors and county historical commissions (CHC). Topics discussed will include historical and architectural significance and integrity, how to conduct research, and the roles of the THC and CHCs in the marker application process.

August and September workshops will occur in Deaf Smith, Austin, Van Zandt, Palo Pinto and Victoria counties. These workshops precede the deadline for 2010 marker applications, which will be accepted from Sept. 1–Nov. 20, 2009. The THC's marker staff also encourages applicants to take advantage of the online support materials in an effort to help save the real stories and designate the historic places throughout Texas.

To learn more about the marker workshops and the Official Texas Historical Marker application process visit www.thc.state.tx.us.

Accolade Home Care to offer community presentation

(Pampa, TX) — In an effort to raise awareness about Parkinson's disease, Accolade Home Care is offering a Parkinson's presentation and various informative pieces. These will include a risk quiz assessment, caregiver's guide and a timed up and go test, which is used to indicate a person's functional independence and is a predictor of an individual's risk for falling. This will be offered to Pampa and surrounding area residents at Pampa Senior Citizen Center, 500 W. Francis Pampa, TX 79065 on August 14 from 11 a.m.-1 p.m.

Accolade, a Texas-based home healthcare and hospice provider, observes Parkinson's disease, in hopes of driving awareness of Parkinson's disease. Accolade's innovative LSVT BIG® program enables people living with the disease to live life to the fullest while remaining independent.

According to the National Parkinson Foundation, 1.5 million Americans currently have Parkinson's disease and another 60,000 new cases are diagnosed in the United States each year. Parkinson's disease, a neurodegenerative disease, affects the brain's 'control system,' making everyday activities and habitual movements difficult.

Galleries at Sunset Center to host August Lights Festival

Amarillo, Texas — The Galleries at Sunset Center will host their fifth annual August Lights Festival from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Aug. 8 and from 1 to 5 p.m. Aug. 9 at 3701 Plains Boulevard. Local and guest artists will demonstrate and exhibit various art media centered on a "Fish" theme. The festival is open to the public free of charge.

"This is an opportunity for our community to see incredibly talented artists at work creating amazing art," said B.J. Smith, festival coordinator. "It's also a chance to enjoy art, to shop for art and to buy art in Amarillo."

The Galleries at Sunset Center, which feature more than 50 artists, will be open during the festival. Artist demonstrations will include pastels, pottery and clay, oils, woodcarving, pine needle weaving, glass blowing, watercolor and papier-mâché. For additional information, contact Smith at (806) 670-1988.

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My father was murdered. I am dealing with it the best I can. I appreciate that people want to extend their condolences, but I have started letting my phone go directly to voice mail because I just can't handle hearing, "You're in my prayers," or, "This is all part of some plan." I want to be left alone!

I am angry, Abby, and I don't want to take it out on people who care about me. One of my in-laws has been telling me I need to "suck it up" and allow others the privilege of trying to make me feel better. I think I have the right to grieve in the manner I choose. Who is correct? — GRIEF-STRICKEN IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR GRIEF-STRICKEN: YOU are! Your in-law's comment was incredibly insensitive. Under the circumstances, your feelings are normal, part of the grieving process, and nobody has the right to tell you how to work through it.

DEAR ABBY: Over the past two years my daughter and son-in-law have lost a lot of weight. They, as well as my grandsons, eat very little and don't like being put in the position of having to order food.

My problem is not knowing how to celebrate without food. When I think of holidays, I think of a family meal. I'm usually imaginative, but this stumps me. Any ideas? — STUMPED IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR STUMPED: You're not alone in associating food with socializing. Eating is so ingrained in our culture it seems to have become our national pastime. However, it doesn't have to be that way.

Rather than plan a meal, invite your daughter and her family to a movie, sporting event — even a short hike, if you're up to it. And if you feel you must serve something, offer to bring along a healthy snack, such as fruit or veggies, that they can enjoy if they get the munchies.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a wonderful man with many interests and activities. We have an active social life and friends of all ages. My problem is he constantly tells everyone about his ailments, medications and medical issues no matter how big or small.

I am uncomfortable with this topic because I don't feel these are things you bring up with people other than your family or your doctor — and certainly not in casual conversations with anyone who will listen. Am I wrong? — MARY IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

DEAR MARY: You are correct. For the most part, casual acquaintances are not interested in hearing an "organ recital" when they ask the casual, "How are you?" In fact, sooner or later they avoid people who constantly complain and talk only about themselves. The popular person is the one who shows an interest in others.

DEAR ABBY: I have always heard that if something seems to be too good to be true then it must be. Several of my relationships ended with very hurt feelings on both sides. In one case, I relocated to another state to escape the drama.

Now I finally seem to have found my dream girl. It has been more than a year now, and it still feels like it's the first time whenever we see each other. We have more in common than I ever thought possible. We rarely disagree — except when we argue about who loves the other more.

Do you believe there is truth in that old adage, or could love this empowering and refreshing be for real? — SMITTEN IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR SMITTEN: Most of the old adages have some truth to them, but people don't live their lives according to the old adages. And yes, love this empowering and refreshing could, indeed, be for real. So to quote another adage, "Only time will tell." Write me in another year and tell me how it's going.

Rushing Wind Emmaus to meet August 8

Rushing Wind Emmaus community will meet on Saturday, August 8, at the Waka Christian Center. A potluck meal will be served at 6 p.m., followed by a praise and worship service. Families and friends are invited to attend, a nursery will be provided, and there will be a training for sponsors.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Aug. 3, 2009.

This year, you can and will make a difference, no matter what you do or what you think might work. Open up to new possibilities, and you'll discover the power of a group. Learn to ask for advice and integrate it. What you deem easy could be more complicated, time and time again. Learn to delegate and accept different styles of processing. Always opt for the best, waving goodbye to your ego. If you are single, take your time getting to know someone of interest. Be willing to dump someone who is too possessive. If you are attached, learn to lean on each other more, especially with the practical details of life, not just the romantic tie. CAPRICORN understands more than you would like!

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic, 4-Positive, 3-Average, 2-So-so, 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

 Keep your priorities in sight. By maintaining clarity, others trust you more, allowing your capacity as a leader to grow. Others want to hear your opinions. You come from a place of quiet and centering. Tonight: Working late?

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

 Open up to new ideas, especially as you hit a problem out of the blue. Understand what needs to happen in order to resolve an issue. Are you willing to let go of your ego and having to be right? Isn't the relationship more important? Tonight: Find someone with unusual ideas.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

 Relate to each individual as if he or she is the only person in your world at that time. Listen to news that comes

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Aug. 2, 2009.

This year, focus on the quality of your life. Even if you go to work every day, think of ways to make yourself more content. A change in fields wouldn't be surprising. Be smart with money. Take better care of your health, understanding everyone has limits. If you are single, you easily could meet that special someone in your day-to-day travels. If you are attached, your life gets more interesting if you allow a great ebb and flow of feelings. Choose restful activities for the two of you that allow you to hang together. CAPRICORN can be pushy!

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic, 4-Positive, 3-Average, 2-So-so, 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

 Intent and reality conflict. You wind up holding the bag for someone else. Others might balk, causing another problem. Though you might be somewhat irritated by what occurs, deal with it. Ask an associate or friend to pitch in. Tonight: Think "tomorrow."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

 Your ability to take in the big picture is a wonderful asset. Others are unquestionably headstrong. Be willing to revamp your thinking, not once, not twice, but whenever necessary. Tonight: Let your imagination choose.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

 Tune in to your ability to grow and get past problems. But understand your limits. Let others dominate sometimes. Allow a key person to feel important. You don't have all the answers. Tonight: Dinner for two.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

 You might want to challenge another person or talk about what is bothering you. You don't have as receptive of an audience as you might like. You might stun others with your spending. Could you be going overboard or overindulging? Tonight: So many suggestions...

This Week: Work with another person directly. Your relationship could change. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

 Get an important project done, and make your workweek easier. Someone might stop you dead in your tracks with a suggestion. Be aware of your finances. Tonight: Your treat.

This Week: Others play a strong role, yet are flexible at the last moment. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

 Creativity mixes well with fun. You manifest this combo. Others want to be part of what is happening. Weigh the pros and cons of changing directions out of the blue, especially with a relationship. Slow down, stop and think. Extremes occur. Tonight: Avoid a power play.

This Week: If you are tired, take a day off. Don't push too hard. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

 Accept changes rather than fight them. For some, this transformation might be internal, whereas for others it could be external. Check out the heating and plumbing systems in your house soon too! Tonight: Listen to your instincts with a family member.

This Week: Creativity spins from necessity. Use care with a child or new friend. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

 Sometimes you accomplish more by doing nothing. Avoid a control game. Let the other person deal with his or her energy. Catch a tendency to overindulge. Let your imagination determine your plans. Tonight: Dial up a loved one.

This Week: You come from an anchored place, but then suddenly discover it is quicksand. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

 Listen to what you are hearing, and be observant. If you decide to take a certain risk, be sure you can handle the damages of an error. You can indulge yourself or a loved one without breaking the bank. Some of you cannot resist a risk, be it a lottery ticket or a trip to the casinos! Tonight: Tally up your expenses first.

This Week: Deal with your finances Monday. Communication could be too intense and exhausting. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

 You are distinctly in your element. Even if you choose a pastime or activity that you loved several years ago, you might not be as happy with the choice today. Remember to continually update your friends, ideas and choices in periods in which there are changes. Tonight: Anything that puts a smile on your face!

This Week: Check your spending and budget. Continue to keep an eye on investments. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

 Listen to your inner voice as it sends important messages forward. By all means, do what works for you. A partner will become more verbal given time, so try not to judge a situation that involves this person. Tonight: Get some much needed rest.

This Week: You could dodge a bullet. The cost could be more than you think, as it symbolically hits a friend! PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

 Either what you want is changing rapidly or a friend could be mucking up the works. Rather than accuse anyone, regroup, center and decide what you want. Someone might be more into control than intimacy. Tonight: Where the action is.

This Week: Tuesday on, keep your own counsel, but refuse to make judgments. BORN TODAY
