Bill Lewis, left, and Marc Garza with Atmos Energy turn the gas back on at Pampa High School shortly after noon today. A build up of carbon monoxide necessitated evacuating the school and sending students home. School District Superintendent Barry Haenisch some vents had been closed during the construction phase of the school's renovation last summer and when the heaters were turned on today, there was an apparent build up of carbon monoxide. School offices this afternoon were investigating the source of the build up. Pampa Fire Chief Kim Powell commended the school's staff for noticing the problem and acting so quickly. The Pampa Fire Department responded with four units and 10 people while the Pampa Police Department cordoned off the area. Once the school was vented, Powell said, school officials began investigating the cause of the problem.

Levi King sentence: Life in prison

BY DAVID BOWSER dbowser@thepampanews.com

LUBBOCK - A Lubbock County jury has decided to spare the life confessed killer Levi King.

King, 27, pleaded guilty Sept. 3, to killing Brian Conrad, 31, his pregnant wife Michell, 35, and Michell's 14-year-old son Zach Doan on Sept. 30, 2005. He shot them in the predawn hours in their home 13 mile south of Pampa.

Only Michell Conrad's daughter, Robin Doan, 10-years-old at the time of the slayings, escaped death that morning.

Robin Doan, now 14, who had testified earlier in the trial, told King after Judge Emmert announced the verdict that she forgives him.

Sobbing, she said the wounds will take a long time to heal. "Why did God pick me to be here and not them?" she said of her family. Robin Doan said she felt it was her fault that she couldn't save them, but she did what God planned for her. "They're in heaven watching over me," she said of her family

King, dressed in a blue blazer and tan slacks and flanked by his lawyers Joe Mar Wilson and Maxwell Peck III, stood motionless when the verdict was read.

After the verdict was announced Mike Conrad, representing the family, told the court that King was evil.

"There are no winners or losers in this. We all lost."

> -Michael Conrad, representing the family

"We're all victims of this," he said. "There are no winners or losers in this. We all lost."

Michell Conrad's tearful step sister Kristy Powell, told the court that she felt her life had been ripped from her.

'My niece (Robin Doan) has to live with this," she said.

She said there is pain in her heart for Robin.

King will be returned to Missouri to serve two life sentences there.

King jury foreman speaks out on decision

BY BETSY PHILLIPS editor@thepampanews.com

After deliberating more than seven hours in the Levi King murder trail Tuesday, one female juror told her fellow jury members that she would never change her mind and vote for the death penalty.

Jury Foreman Tommy Jones said Wednesday morning he wants the fam, ily of the three victims to know what went on in the jury room on Tuesday.

Jones said he is disappointed in the outcome and that he was, "totally for the death penalty, but the way the instructions were written, the jury needed a unanimous decision and one person said she would never change her mind.

According to Jones, it came to a point where there was just no reason to deliberate any longer.

"I'm surprised we didn't get a vote for the death penalty," he added. " I feel like we owe it to the family to let them know what happened during deliberations."

Jones said he can't help but think of the 911 call, made by Robin Doan the day of the murders. "I know the community may be horrified that we didn't come to a death penalty conclusion" he said.

"For five long weeks I sat there and watched that trial. The prosecution did an excellent job. The district attorney made sure she covered the evidence and it took a long time, but it needed to be done."

Jones said Judge Em charged the jury to consider two issues. First would he continue to be a danger to society, both in prison and if he possibly escaped from incarceration.

The answer had to be yes, he said, or the jury was to go no further. Jones said the jurors spent about six hours on the issue and took a vote. The jury needed an unanimous yes vote to continue. The first vote was nine "yes" to three "no." He said three jurors wanted to go through evidence records, looking at different things, some were letters that King and his family members wrote during his incarceration. "Some of us thought those letters were very contrived," Jones said. Finally, the three jurors voted yes, that he would be a danger and they were able to move on steps to end Trans-Texas Corridor AUSTIN, Texas (AP)

The Texas Department of Transportation is taking formal steps to cancel its unpopular "Trans-Texas Corridor" project, which has already cost the state millions of dollars to gather up plans, hold public meetings and conduct environmental studies.

The $175 billion proposal to build a network of toll roads and rail lines, the brainchild of Gov. Rick Perry, ran into fierce opposition virtually since it was proposed in 2002. On Wednesday, state officials told reporters that it had notified federal highway authorities this week that TxDOT wants to halt what was to be the first leg of the project - along heavily congested Interstate 35.

TxDOT has already spent about $15 million on environmental studies and planning documents associated with the I-35 corridor, and the cost will go higher as the cancellation process grinds to a halt, officials

Feds, Texas officials to discuss air pollution

DALLAS (AP) — seeing with Texas state officials in an effort to bring the state's air-pollution rules into compliance with the Clean Air Act.

The Environmental Protection Agency is meeting Thursday in Austin with officials from the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality, as well as environmental and industry groups. It's their first meeting since the EPA on Sept. 8 proposed throwing out several key aspects of the state's air-pollution permitting programs.

Environmental groups have for years criticized the state's pollution permits as simply a formality for massive polluters and are calling for the EPA to order a massive overhaul of the TCEQ. The state disagrees, saying its permitting program complies with federal law.

Condemned inmate loses appeal

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)—A Texas death row inmate whose attorneys contend is mentally retarded and ineligible for execution has lost his appeal to the state's highest criminal appeals court.

By an 8-1 vote, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled Wednesday that evidence that Bobby Wayne Woods is mentally retarded is insufficient. Judge Charles Holcomb dissented without comment.

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that mentally retarded inmates may not be executed.

Woods was to die last Oct. 23 for cutting the throat and killing his exgirlfriend's 11-year-old daughter, Sarah Patterson. That was after she and her brother were abducted from their Granbury home in 1997.

Hours before Woods was to die, the appeals court halted the scheduled execution after his attorneys said they had new evidence to support their retardation claims.

Did they feel there were mitigating circumstances to the crime? They had the option of voting yes, no or no answer, Jones said. Seven jurors voted no. or to continue toward death penalty. At that point, about seven hours into the deliberation, Jones said one juror wanted to know before they continued if there was anyone in the room that, no matter what, would not vote for the death penalty. There was one juror who said she could not. They then took a poll to discover who, if anyone, would not change their mind and discard the death penalty. There were three—but at that point, Jones said they felt there was no reason to go on with deliberations if there was no hope of achieving a consensus on the death penalty, and they all agreed to not answer. King

King stood in her doorway after shooting Brian and Michell Conrad and their dog with an Ak-47 assault rifle and fired one round into Robin's bedroom, missing her.

Thinking he had killed her, King turned went across the hall to the room of her brother, Zach Doan, where he fired a volley into the sleeping body of the Pampa student.

After King drove away in the pickup he'd stolen in his hometown of Pineville, Mo., Robin Doan fled the house and called 911 from the bed of her stepfather's pickup truck in the driveway of the rural home.

District Attorney Lynn Switzer played the tape of that phone call during the first day of the punishment phase of the trial.

Monday, in her closing arguments, Switzer played it again, this time with a grizzly slide show for the jury showing the bodies of Brian and Michell Conrad and Zach Doan as they lay where they had been shot along with an autopsy photo of Michell's unborn baby. Six month pregnant, Michell Conrad had already named the baby boy Mickel but Robin Doan told the court that she still hadn't forgotten her mother's screams that September morning in 2005

On the fourth anniversary of the murders just a week ago, Robin Doan said she had slept only two nours.

"I don't expect the fear to go away for a long time," she said.

Robin Doan said that her mother, brother and stepfather were in a better place.

"That's all that matters," she said.

Fired up? The grass-roots health care battle

What, some in the group of 50 or so pro-Obama volunteers asked, are the specifics of the health care bills moving through Congress? Do they all include provisions for endof-life counseling, which led to the erroneous "death panel" accusations leveled by some Republicans? And will Obama stand firm on the federal insurance option to compete with private coverage?

'Where can we get the information to speak intelligently and cogently about it?" Queens resident David Dawson asked about the plan. Others complained that Obama had waffled on the federal "public option" and suggested they might not get involved in helping push for the overhaul as a result. Organizer Geoff Berman acknowledged the concerns but urged attendees to focus on other aspects of the plan, including the central provision to keep insurers from refusing coverage because of pre-existing conditions.

'There are other important parts of the health care legislation President Obama doesn't want to be lost on people by the entire dialogue being about the public option," Berman told the group. However, Howard Dean, the former Democratic National Committee chairman and 2004 presidential contender, said the public health care plan is essential to motivating the party's

"It has to be there. Without the public option, it's going to be very hard to organize Democrats," Dean said in an interview.

To be sure, not everything is harmonious on the anti-overhaul side either as mainstream Republicans and disaffected conservatives jostle for advantage. After electoral wipe-outs in 2006 and 2008, the Republican National Committee has used the health care debate to help build state parties and increase GOP membership. It's also proved an effective fundraising tool, with the RNC adding more than 2,400 donors a day in September, up from just under 400 per day in February.

But the most visible antirevamp organizing has been done by conservatives who say they are fed up with both political parties in Washington. Many stayed out of the 2008 presidential race because they'd grown disillusioned with George W. Bush and were never much excited about GOP nominee John

These people have been drawn to the tea party protests largely organized by FreedomWorks, founded by former GOP House Leader Dick Armey. FreedomWorks and affiliated groups such as the National Taxpayers Union have adapted organizing tactics pioneered by the political left, many of which were well executed by the Obama campaign last year.

Spokesman Adam Brandon said all staffers are given a copy of "Rules for Radicals," the famed community organizing manual penned by the late activist and author Saul Alinsky. Brandon said most of the group's agenda is dictated by the grass roots.

"We've done a fantastic job of organizing, and we want to have an influence on the political process - health care, cap and trade (energy) legislation and next year, a midterm election," Brandon said. He added that his group is largely disdainful of the RNC's efforts and blames Republicans and Democrats alike for excessive government spending and debt.

"RNC strategists don't know what's going on and wouldn't understand if they tried," Brandon said. "If Michael Steele were to come and say how much Republicans had promoted liberty in the last eight years, people would

Debbie Dooley, FreedomWorks volunteer in Georgia, said she got involved after last year's federal bank bailout and is now doing most of her organizing around local tax matters and opposition to health care reform.

"To build a grass-roots army and keep them energized, you have to address all the issues," Dooley said Such efforts been dismissed by many Democrats as fake grass roots, or "astroturfing." And pro-Obama organizers say that while their campaign may lack the intensity of the anti-Obama forces, it is more strategic and just as committed. No one would expect the exuberance of the president's "fired up" 2008 election

At a coffee shop out-Columbus, Ohio, recently, about 20 pro-Obama volunteers phoned through long lists of local Democratic voters, asking them to press members of Congress to support the president's plan.

"We realized that we need to have Obama's back," said Peter Kovarik, an adjunct biology professor at Ohio State University and OFA volunteer who said his job didn't provide health insurance.

Volunteers like Kovarik are giving voice to the "silent majority" that supports Obama's plan, said Ohio OFA director Greg Schultz.

Burnett, Martinez exchange vows

Mary Danielle Martinez and Jacob Paul Burnett of Lubbock celebrated their marriage on Saturday July 11, 2009 at St Vincent de Paul Catholic Church in Pampa at 7:30 o'clock in the evening.

They were accompanied by their parents Mr. and Mrs Joe Martinez of Pampa and Mr. and Mrs Dale Burnett and Mr. and Mrs. Monty Smith of Austin.

Assistant Pastor Danielle Dreher of St. Anthony Catholic Church in Hereford officiated the sacrament of matrimony with a mass.

Maid of Honor was Lacy Foster, college friend and sorority sister. Honorary Maid of Honor was Quila Martinez sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Jessica Hoskins, childhood best friend and Sarah Hoqi, college friend and Amy Burnett, sister in-law. Jr. Bridesmaid was Erin Smith, sister of the groom. Best man was Matthew Burnett groom's brother and Honorary Best Man was Joshua Burnett groom's younger brother. Groomsmen were Manzy Lowry, college friend of the groom, Justin Wolfe, childhood friend of the groom. Michael Martinez, brother of the bride and Mike Pentecost longtime friend of the groom. Flower girls were Madison Hoskins and Kaylee Pentecost. Ring Bearers were Adam Burnett and Billy Wade Burnett. Lectors were Autumn Burnett and Kyle Johnson. Altar servers were Brad Schniers and Vanessa Ontiverros. Jacob and Danielle chose a chocolate and turquoise with peacock feather accent for their wedding . Mrs. Kim Laycock, wedding coordinator helped design their theme. The bride's dress was a Yolanda Couture in ivory and her veil was a traditional mantilla edge in ivory lace. The bride's bouquet was designed by Mrs. Laycock with picaeso calla lilies and peacock feathers and a turquoise rosary given to her by her aunts. Her jewelry was designed by Gerald Johnson from Santa Fe made out of silver and turquoise stones. Music for the wedding mass was provided by Michael Martinez brother of the bride and Joe Martinez father of the bride accompanied by Rosemary Eakins and Dietta Pope. A reception and dance followed at the AmericInn in Pampa, Texas.

The bride is a 2002 Pampa graduate and Texas Tech University graduate with a Masters in Exercise Science. She is employed at the Plaza in Lubbock as Director of Wellness. Two PHS students commended in National Merit Scholarship Program men and women named Commended Students rep-

The principal, Tanya Larkin, of Pampa High school announced today that Alexander Clendening and Jonathan Murray have been named Commended Students in the 2010 National Merit Scholarship Program. A Letter of Commendation from the school and National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC), which conducts the program, will be presented by the principal to theses scholastically talented seniors.

About 34.000 commended Students throughout the nation are being recognized for their exceptional academic promise. Although they will not continue in the 2010 competition for National Merit scholarships, commended Students placed among the top five percent of more than 1.5 million students who entered the 2010 competition by taking the 2008 Preliminary SAT/ NMSQT).

"Recognition of highachieving students is essential to advancing educational excellence in our nation," commented a resent some of the most academically talented students in our country. We sincerely hope this recognition will enhance their educational opportunities and encourage them in their pursuit of academic

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

Dear Abby...

DEAR ABBY: During my visitations at my dad's, I share a room with my stepsisters. They have made it clear they resent having to share their room with me, even though I have no choice about it.

They play the choking game with some of their friends. When I refuse to participate, they put me down and call me chicken, but I'm not about to do something so dangerous.

They have told me I'd better "mind my own business" and not say anything to their mom about it. I'm afraid if I do -- and I get them into trouble -- they'll resent me more and make things even more difficult for me.

On the other hand, I'd feel really guilty if I stay silent and something terrible happened to one or both of them. Should I tell their mom, even if it causes problems for me? --SEATTLE STEPSISTER

DEAR STEPSISTER: I think you should tell your mother, and let her tell your father and his wife. The "choking game" isn't a game; it's extremely dangerous. It destroys brain cells and has been known to kill people. The practice can also be addictive, and when people do it alone and lose consciousness for the last time, the deaths are sometimes mistaken as suicides.

DEAR ABBY: My oldest sister has just married a very nice man. (It's her second marriage.) My only problem is that "Norman" is a taxidermist. Going to their home frightens my daughter and makes me feel, frankly, a bit nauseous. I have avoided going there since the first time, but have been getting questions from family about why I keep turning down invitations.

How do I answer these questions without hurting my sister's feelings? She's a great sister, and I really like Norman. But their house gives me and my animal-loving daughter nightmares. Please help. -- CREEPED OUT IN ARIZONA

DEAR CREEPED OUT: Be honest, but be gentle. Tell your sister that you love her and think her new husband is terrific, but the stuffed animals (etc.) make you uncomfortable. Make sure she knows that when she's having a barbecue or a swimming party (thank God you live in a state with a mild climate), you'd love to come over. But you're not up to another trip through the gallery of the living dead because it gave your daughter nightmares.

DEAR ABBY: I married a caring, thoughtful man who is also a loving father. My problem is my father-in-law, who constantly "reminds" me that I'm the best thing that ever happened to his son and that there is no way my husband would be successful if it weren't for my influence in his life.

While I'm happy to have my father-in-law's approval, it makes me uncomfortable, and it's hurtful to my husband. My husband was not a wild child in his youth, so I don't know why Dad feels my husband would be a failure if not for me. My husband is a wonderful man on his OWN merits, not mine, and the implication is insulting. How can I help my father-in-law see this? -- MARRIED TO A GREAT GUY

DEAR MARRIED: The next time your fatherin-law "compliments" you by insulting your husband, look him in the eye and nail him. One way to do that would be to say, "Exactly what do you mean by that, Dad, because I find the implication insulting." I predict he will squirm. And when he's done hemming and hawing, tell him his son is the ideal man for you, you feel lucky to have him, and you don't appreciate it when someone who is supposed to love him doesn't give him credit for all that he has accomplished.

vesters and Raiders battle for win number one

BY ANDREW GLOVER aglover@thepampanews.com

The Pampa Harvesters and the Randall Raiders enter Thursday's district opener at Kimbrough Stadium in Canyon in similar situations. Both teams have new coaches . and are seeking their first win of the season as they face each other 7:30 p.m.

Thursday. Pampa Head Coach Heath Parker said not just Pampa and Randall are in a similar situation this week but so is the rest of Pampa's district.

"Some teams may have more confidence then others as the season started." Parker said. "There's not a team out there thats got a winning record in district or a losing record." It's a five team tournament, six teams in District 3-4A."

Travis Hagerman said the team is more focused on winning now that district has started.

"Last week still wasn't quite district," Hagerman said. "We still wanted to win. Now we are focused on winning because it's district and we want to make playoffs and end the streak.

The Harvesters had a shorter week to prepare for the Raiders since their game is on Thursday. Nathan Smith said practice this week has been more intense.

"Practice today seemed to go a lot quicker," Smith said. "We have to prepare a lot faster now."

Trent Carter said they will have to stay focused during the week.

"We just have to practice and get our job down," Carter said. "That way we know it by the time Thursday gets here."

Parker said he actually perfers a Thursday game compared to a Saturday game.

"Saturday puts you behind preparation wise and recovery wise for the following week," Parker said. "Thursday's aren't really a big deal. People don't do that much on a Thursday workout anyway. You kind of let your kids legs recover and you kind of dressing things up on a Thursday practice.'

Hagerman said Randall has a good running back and fullback.

"They like to lead with the fullback coming because he's a big guy," Hagerman said. "We need to get someone to take him on and hopefully we can stop the run."

Smith said the Raiders have a good defensive line.

"They have a lot of defensive formations that we have to memorize,"

Fisher said the offense will have to block well to contain their defensive line.

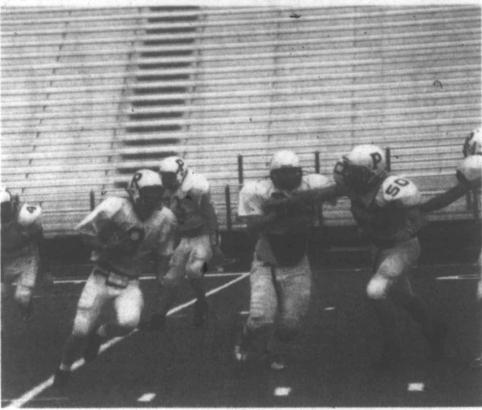

"It's going to affect us if we don't get our blocks because Alex (Clendening) won't have time to throw the ball," Fisher said. "We really need that in our offense.

Parker said the offense and defensive lines are Randall's strength.

"They got a really big bruising running back that's gotten over 150 vards in every game-he's played in," Parker said. 'So it will be a challenge for us to contain him. I'm sure he's going to make his yardage but we're going to try to put them behind the sticks so to speak and get them into a third and long situation and then that's something that we've made continuous improvement with our defense.

Parker said the key to the emotions of playing in the district opener.

"I think maintaing our composure and our focus throughout the game," Parker said. "I thought for the most part we played a pretty good game against Plainview up until the last five minutes of the game and it just fell apart... It's always how you respond to the next play and not worrying about the last one.'

Last time the Pampa Lady Harvesters volleyball Week against team played the number one ranked Randall Lady Raiders, head coach Libby Garza said they seemed a little intimidated. Tuesday night at the McNeely Fieldhouse the Lady Harvesters had a different attitude, despite being swept by the Raiders (14-25, 13-25, 11-25).

Garza said she was incredibly pleased with how her team handled the number one team in the state.

"We lost the overall match but we won so much more within it," Garza said. "I was very very happy with the way my girls played. They didn't stop."

In the first game both teams were streaky. The Lady Raiders opened with a 7-3 lead but Pampa went on a 5-1 run to tie the game at eight. Randall scored four points in a row to open a 12-8 lead. The Lady Harvesters stayed within four until the end of the game. With the Raiders leading 17-13, Randall outscored the Lady Harvesters 8-1 to finish the game with an eleven point win. The Lady Harvesters (15-11, 3-4) not only lost the first game but lost their middle blocker Kailyn Troxell to injury. Garza said she thinks she came down on someone's foot and twisted her ankle. Coach said it was hard on. the team when she went down.

"I was upset that we didn't respond to that better," Garza said. "But overall I think we played great."

Clendening Delaney replaced Troxell at middle blocker, Kristen Kuhn took Clendening's position as left outside hitter. To have 10 players suited up on the roster, Maddie Fatheree who played in the junior varsity game, put on a varsity uniform and set on the bench.

Cheyanne Collins was impressed with how Clendening played in a different position.

"She did an amazing job stepping up and playing middle for us," Collins

Kuhn said it was interesting playing a different position.

"I've never played left outside hitter in my life," Kuhn said. "I had to learn to block and drop back."

Garza was pleased with how Kuhn played. "I thought she did a good job up there," Garza said. That's what happens when you only have nine players on a team and two middles.

I thought she played great." The junior varsity was swept by Randall (22-25, 12-25). Coach Matt Embry said he was pleased with how his team played in the first game, but thought things could have gone better in the second game. "Game one they came out hungry (for a win)," Embry said. "After we gave that game away we got a little bit uncomfortable and kind of folded there. We've been working all week on keeping our confidence and stay positive and it worked in game one." In the first game, The Lady Raiders jumped out to a 9-2 lead prompting Embry to call a timeout. The Lady Harvesters started to rally going on a 7-3 run prompting Randall's coach to take a timeout. The timeout did not help the Lady Raiders as the Harvesters went on an 8-3 run to take a 17-15 lead and Randall again called timeout. After the timeout, the Lady Raiders finished off the Harvesters going on a 10-5 run to win the first game. Randall was in control the second game jumping out to a 10-3 lead and carrying that to a 13 point

The freshman were swept by Randall (13-25, 12-25). Coach Deanna Polasek said her team started good but couldn't finish.

"We were doing some really good things," Polasek said. "We were talking, we were moving our feet, we were having good passes, good sets, good hits, our serves looked good. Then they got up 12-15, then we made a couple of mistakes and they just took off on us."

The Lady Harvesters travel to Palo Duro, Saturday to rematch with the Lady Dons. Pampa swept Palo Duro at home in the second district game.

Good luck Harvesters!!! Take down the Randall Raiders!!
