But for heroes, bloodbath could have been worse

ALLEN G. BREED
JEFF CARLTON,
FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) — Pfc. Marquest Smith, on his way to Afghanistan in January, was completing routine paperwork about a bee-sting allergy when the sounds erupted.

A loud, popping noise. Moans. The sudden, urgent shout of "Gun!"

Smith poked his head over the cubicle's partition and saw an extraordinary sight: An Army officer with two guns, firing into the crowded room.

The 21-year-old Fort Worth native quickly grabbed the civilian worker who'd been helping with his paperwork and forced her under the desk. He lay low for several minutes, waiting for the shooter to run out of ammunition and wishing he, too, had a gun.

After the shooter stopped to reload, Smith made a run for it. Pushing two other soldiers in front of him, he made it out of the Soldier Readiness Processing center — only to plunge into the building twice more to help the wounded.

Smith had survived the worst mass shooting on an American military base, a rampage that left 13 dead and 30 wounded, including the alleged shooter, Army psychiatrist Maj. Nidal Malik Hasan.

It could have been much worse, but for the heroics of Smith and others — like the 19-year-old private who ignored her own wounds, and the diminutive civilian police officer who single-handedly took down Hasan.

"Unfortunately over the past eight years, our Army has been no stranger to tragedy," said a somber Gen. George Casey, Army chief of staff. "But we are an Army that draws strength from adversity. And hearing the stories of courage and heroism that I heard today makes me proud to be the leader of this great Army."

to tragedy," said a somber Gen. George Casey, Army chief of staff. "But we are an Army that draws strength from adversity. And hearing the stories of courage and heroism that I heard today makes me proud to be the leader of this great Army."

Home of the 1st Cavalry and 1st Army Division West, Fort Hood has seen more than its share of deployments and casualties in the past eight years.

As a psychiatrist, Hasan, 39, had listened to soldiers' tales of heroism.

Panel votes to keep prepaid tuition formula

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An oversight board has voted to keep a generous refund formula for those who want to cancel their Texas prepaid college tuition plans.

The Texas Prepaid Higher Education Tuition Board on Thursday decided to cancel new rules that would have cut the value of refunds.

A final board vote is needed in December after a public comment period to reinstate the previous refund policy that reflects the value of tuition, not just the amount paid in.

The former Texas Tomorrow Fund, renamed the Texas Guaranteed Tuition Plan, had money trouble and was suspended for new participants after legislators in 2003 deregulated college tuition.

Texas families that left the plan, after learning of the refund policy change in May, would have until Dec. 31 to return, getting a year to get caught up on tuition installment payments and interest.

Texas car theft ring with drug cartel ties busted

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Police have broken up an El Paso car theft ring with ties to a Mexican drug cartel.

Thirteen people were arrested Thursday after local, state and federal authorities raided an El Paso warehouse being used to strip parts off stolen cars. Police said the car theft ring's leader answered to two fugitives in Ciudad Juarez, just across the Rio Grande from El Paso. Police said the two are members of La Linea, a cell of the Juarez drug cartel.

At least 10 people arrested Thursday also face federal drug charges for their roles in the theft ring thought to be responsible for millions of dollars in car thefts over at least the last year.

Heroes

ror. Now, the American-born Muslim was facing imminent deployment to Afghanistan. In recent days, Hasan had been saying goodbye to friends. He had given away many of his possessions, including copies of the Holy Quran.

Around 1:30 p.m., witnesses say a man later identified as Hasan jumped up on a desk and shouted the words "Allahu Akbar!" — Arabic for "God is great!" He was armed with two pistols, one a semiautomatic capable of firing up to 20 rounds without reloading.

Packed into cubicles with 5-foot-high dividers, the 300 unarmed soldiers were sitting ducks. Those who weren't hit by direct fire were struck by rounds ricocheting off the desks and tile floor.

When he decided that Hasan wasn't close to being out of ammo, Smith made a dash for the door. He'd made it outside when he heard cries from within. "I don't want to die."

"This really hurts." "Help me get out of here."

Smith rushed back inside and found two wounded. He grabbed them by their collars and dragged them outside.

His second time through the door, he ran into the shooter, whose back was to him. Smith turned and fled, bullets whizzing by his head and hitting the walls as he rushed outside.

Around this time, Fort Hood Police Sgt. Kimberly Munley got the call of "shots fired." The SRP isn't on Munley's beat; she was in the area because her vehicle was in the shop.

Munley, 34, was on the scene within three minutes.

Just over 5 feet tall, Munley is an advanced firearms instructor and civilian member of Fort Hood's special reaction team. She had trained on "active shooter" scenarios after the April 2007 mass shooting at Virginia Tech University. She didn't wait for backup.

As she approached the squat, rectangular building, a soldier emerged from a door with a gunman in pursuit. The officer fired, and the uniformed shooter wheeled and charged.

Munley was hit at least three times in the exchange — twice through the left leg and once in her right wrist. Hasan was hit four times.

From the first shots to the last, authorities say the whole incident lasted less than 10 minutes.

Pfc. Jeffrey Pearsall, 21, from Houston, was waiting outside in the parking lot for Smith. He was talking to his brother on a cell phone when a group of soldiers ran out the door and a window shattered.

It was only then that he heard the gunshots.

He pulled his pickup truck forward, then hopped out and helped the wounded into the bed. He loaded as many as he could and sped off to the base hospital.

Next door, at the Howze Theater, Spc. Elliot Valdez was filming a graduation ceremony for soldiers who'd completed correspondence courses. Several proud scholars were posing for a group shot when Valdez heard a pounding at the side door.

The door burst open and the theater filled with shouts of "Medic!" and "Stay in the building!" A combat videographer who returned from a 15-month Iraq tour in January, most of it in the notorious Sadr City slums, Valdez ran out into the sunlight.

Crouching as he continued to roll tape, Valdez could see windows broken by fleeing victims. A soldier in his Class A dress uniform lay on the grass, a gunshot wound in his back. Soldiers in flowing black graduation robes and purple sashes rushed to help.

Pfc. Amber Bahr, 19, of Random Lake, Wis., tore up her blouse and used it as a tourniquet on a wounded comrade. It was only later that she realized she'd been shot in the back, the bullet exiting her abdomen.

Sgt. Andrew Hagerman, a military police officer, was patrolling a housing area when word of shootings crackled over his radio.

As he arrived at the processing center, bloodied soldiers, some shirtless, were already treating each other on the grass outside, ripping pant legs off and tying off wounds. Munley — with whom Hagerman had exchanged small talk on patrols — was being loaded into an ambulance.

Hasan lay on the ground, his two handguns beside him, as medical personnel struggled to remove his handcuffs to treat his wounds.

Hagerman entered the building, took a deep breath and asked himself: "What do I need to do?"

He picked his way around the room's edges, careful not to step in pools of blood or to kick any spent shell casings. He had seen death during his two tours in Iraq, but nothing that compared with this.

Sgt. Howard Appleby, 31, was at the hospital for his regular meeting with a psychiatrist. Appleby, who was born in Jamaica and grew up in New York City, sustained a traumatic brain injury and has post-traumatic stress disorder from a roadside bomb blast during a tour in Iraq.

His appointment canceled, Appleby found himself pulling the dead and wounded from ambulances. In combat, he was used to one or two casualties a day. "This," he thought, "is crazy."

Lt. Col. Larry Masullo, an emergency room physician from Farmingdale, N.Y., was heading into a monthly meeting to review new doctors' credentials when he heard of the shootings. "Yeah, OK," he said. "Multiple gunshot wounds. Is this a drill?"

In the next hour and a half, he would treat nearly two dozen soldiers.

Hasan, hooked up to a ventilator, was moved Friday to a military hospital in San Antonio. The woman who stopped him, Munley, awaited surgery Friday to remove the bullets from her leg. Her husband was flying in from Fort Bragg, N.C.

Her boss, Chuck Medley, was thankful. "If an officer had to be close by to respond," he said, "Kim Munley is someone we'd want to be there."

Marquest Smith says some of the people he helped made it. But he knows others did not.

Afterward, Smith noticed a hole in heel of his right combat boot. A bullet had entered the boot, but he had somehow escaped injury — at least the physical kind.

After the adrenaline wore off, Smith was overwhelmed by a sense of betrayal, because this assailant who spilled so much blood was a soldier.

"We're supposed to be a family," he said.

Our actions should match our words

By BARRY HAENISCH
PISD
SUPERINTENDANT

My grandparents owned a small farm southeast of Dallas. It was a beautiful place, and I loved spending time there in the summer. I can remember walking the fence line of the farm with my grandmother and sister collecting berries for our breakfast. Our drinking water was drawn from the well just outside of the back door of the house by a bucket and rope. The day we were big enough to go get water from the well without help from an adult was a red letter day, indeed!

Both of my grandparents loved to smoke cigarettes. They "rolled their own" with Bugler tobacco. Just like the cowboys in movies, my grandfather would balance the paper in one hand and shake the tobacco from a pouch onto the paper. Then he would lick one side of the paper, skillfully roll it until the glue held, and light up.

Grandmother, on the other hand, used a fancy rolling machine. She would pull a handle on the machine until a pocket was formed, place a pinch of tobacco in the pocket, roll the handle forward about one-half way, put the paper in the seam, and then push the handle all of the way forward. Out would roll a finished cigarette except for clipping the excess tobacco from the ends. Clipping was my job!

My grandfather was in his eighties when he decided to quit smoking. Mind you, he had been smoking a good seventy years and he decided to quit cold turkey! Deciding that a little friendly competition would add interest to the project, he challenged my grandmother to join him. She declined his invitation. Each day he relished in giving her a hard time, spouting that his will power was stronger than hers. He was able to break the "nasty" habit and she wasn't.

One day, Grandmother walked out to the barn to talk to Grandfather something. She could not locate him anywhere; he was not responding to her calls.

As she was leaving the barn, she noticed a faint wisp of smoke rising over the front of the tractor.

Upon investigation, she discovered my grandfather crouched down behind the tractor smoking!

She informed him that if he wanted to smoke, he needed to quit sneaking around and own up to it like a man.

This story became an oft-repeated classic in my family.

There is a lesson in this story. It teaches that we are all accountable for the alignment of our words and our actions. What we say and what we do should act in concert with each other.

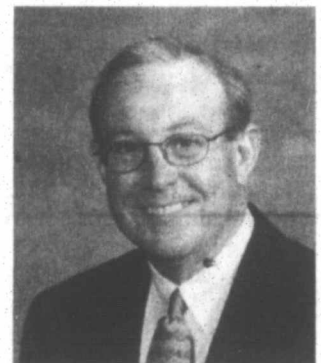

While we might try to say one thing and do something entirely the opposite, just like my grandfather, eventually we are found out. When the conflict is discovered, we find that our credibility is diminished.

It is so important for all of us to be sure that our actions and our words match.

Those of us who are employed by the Pampa ISD are working this year to ensure alignment of what we say and what we do. We value the good relationships that we have built with our students and their families, and we want to protect them.

My grandfather would have been wise to recall the words of Abraham Lincoln. "You can fool all of the people some of the time, and some of the Haenisch people all of the time, but you cannot fool all of the people all of the time!" Those of us in the Pampa ISD are trying to live those words this year!

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old guy in my sophomore year of high school. I am known as a friendly, outgoing guy who gets along with girls. My problem is, I used to be one of the biggest jerks who ever was. I was involved in fighting and other things I won't go into. But I turned my life around.

I was going out with an amazing girl, "Samantha." She always kept me in line, but was sweet about it. Recently, because I was ashamed of my past, I lied to her. She found out about it and, needless to say, she was very hurt. When I saw how hurt she was, I was sick to my stomach knowing how much pain I had caused such a trusting girl.

I want to make things right, but I don't know where to start. I have talked to her since then, but things aren't the same. Please help. -- LOVESICK IN KENNEWICK, WASH.

DEAR LOVESICK: Apologize again to Samantha for not being completely truthful with her, and explain that you lied because you were ashamed about your past behavior and only wanted someone as special as she is to see you in a good light. Promise never to do it again.

If she likes you as much as you like her, she'll give you another chance. But remember, from here on you will have to be honest because if she catches you in another lie, she won't believe another word that comes out of your mouth. Enough said?

DEAR ABBY: I am blessed with many wonderful friends. We exchange small gifts on birthdays and at Christmas. As much as I appreciate the gifts, I am running out of room in my closets because I have too much stuff. Sometimes the gifts are not to my taste or they don't fit in with my decor.

How long should I keep an item before I donate it to a thrift shop? Is it ungracious to give it away? Am I obligated to display or use something I don't like?

I don't want to hurt anyone's feelings. I have tried suggesting that at our ages (50s and 60s) we should cut out the gift-giving, donate the money to charity and celebrate by going out to lunch on our birthdays. It didn't go over very well. They all enjoy the exchange of presents. I am happy to give one, but I really don't need anything more. Thanks for your help. -- TOO BLESSED IN SANTA ANA, CALIF.

DEAR TOO BLESSED: It's not ungracious to give away something you can't use -- in fact, the practice is so common there is a name for it. It's called "regifting." It won't cause hurt feelings as long as you are careful not to give an item back to the person who give it to you.

Donating something to a thrift shop is also a practical way to get rid of it, and you can do it anytime you wish. One person's "castoff" can be another's treasure. Everybody wins and a worthwhile charity makes money.

Because you are "thighed out" and prefer divesting to accumulating, I recommend you stop "suggesting" and have a frank talk with your friends. Tell them you have everything you need, that their friendship -- which you already have -- is the most precious gift they could ever give you, and on birthdays from now on you'd much prefer meeting for your celebratory lunch, but please to donate whatever they'd spend on your gift to charity. After that, the ball's in their court.

Moms in Touch International celebrates 25 years with prayer event

San Diego— Moms In Touch International is celebrating 25 years of encouraging moms to pray for children and schools. What started as the cry of one mom's heart as her children went to public junior high school has expanded to include an estimated 175,000 moms throughout the United States and in 132 countries.

To celebrate the special anniversary, Moms In Touch International is hosting a historic prayer event Arise! Cry Out!, inviting Christian women from around the world to fast and pray for the generations.

Arise! Cry Out! Will be held at the Faith Bible Church in Pampa, Texas at 210 N. Cuyler, Saturday, November 14 from 9:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. Please contact Tonja Stowers at tonjastowers@hotmail.com or 806-66-9-7713 for more information.

Arise! Cry Out! will be an amazing time of passionate prayer led by Moms In Touch International Founder/President Fern Nichols, Pastor Miles McPherson (founder of Miles Ahead Ministries and pastor of the Rock Church in San Diego) and the worship team Crimson Bridge.

The live event took place October 9 and 10 at the 3,500-seat Rock Church in San Diego for a time of praise, inspiration and prayer for children and schools. The professionally recorded event will be used at host sites throughout the United States and in countries around the globe on November 14, to facilitate a time of extraordinary prayer for children and schools.

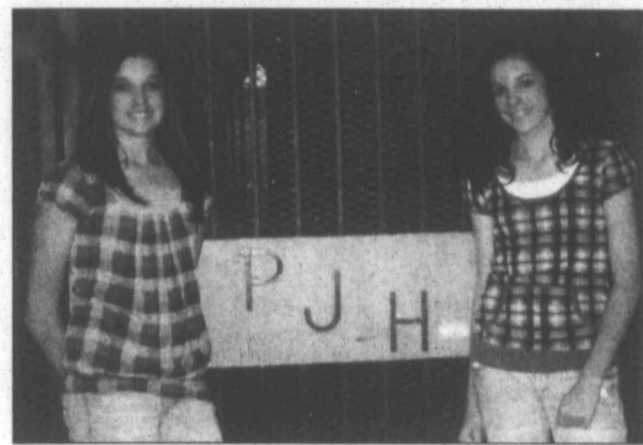

This October, Focus on the Family released MIT's book When Moms Pray Together: True Stories of God's Power to Transform Your Child, filled with 25 powerful testimonies of prayers answered in Moms In Touch groups. Moms share the agony of pouring out their hearts to God as their children deal with drug abuse, eating disorders, rape, physical abuse, learning disabilities and life-threatening medical traumas.

How God answers each concern will remind your readers about the amazing power of prayer. When Moms Pray Together also includes testimonies from Ethiopia, Korea and Central America, as well as from a mom praying in a prison Moms In Touch group.

For more information about Moms In Touch International and Arise! Cry Out!, visit www.MomsInTouch.org. The About Us section includes a Bio about Fern Nichols, a Fact Sheet about the non-profit ministry and the History of MIT. Visit the Arise! Cry Out! section for more information on this historic prayer event.

Austin, Lamar pilot security program

Austin Elementary and Lamar Elementary will pilot a new visitor check in system that will provide enhanced protection for our students and staff.

Beginning Monday, November 9, a valid driver license or state issued ID will be required to enter Lamar and Austin Elementary Schools. All visitors must scan this ID at the front desk. A visitor's pass will be printed upon successful scan of the ID. If the visitor does not have a valid ID, he or she must remain in the office area and will not be permitted access to the rest of the school.

This program will be implemented in all Pampa Schools in January.

Pampa falls to PD, still in playoffs

BY ANDREW GLOVER
aglover@thepampanews.com

The Pampa Harvesters (2-8, 2-3) home losing streak continues but still qualified for the playoffs in a 35-13 loss to the Palo Duro Dons (4-6, 3-2), Friday at Harvester Field.

The Harvesters home losing streak has reached nine games. Pampa hasn't won at Harvester Field since beating Lubbock Estacado 35-14 September 5, 2008. Pampa's Head Coach Heath Parker said the defense had issues with containment.

"We lost containment on backs that got to the outside," Parker said. "They have two special backs. So they're not going to pass. We're going to bring as many players as we can to the line. If we miss a tackle it's going to do the distance since you have so many guys committed to containing the back."

Palo Duro's Head Coach Steve Parr was proud of how his defense played and how his team played during the game.

"We played better defensively," Parr said. "We had all kinds of players come in and play well. We had some ups and downs during the season. We were urgent and had intensity to play well tonight. My players answered all the calls."

The Harvesters got the ball first to start the game and drove down the field. Pampa reached the Dons' two-yard line but that was where their drive stalled after an unsuccessful fourth down attempt.

Palo Duro would drive down field but their drive would end with points. After picking up several first downs and converting a couple of third downs, Ty Hicks scored on a 28-yard touchdown run. The extra point was good giving Palo Duro a 7-0 lead with 3:12 left in the first.

Braden Hunt heads towards the endzone on a 38-yard touchdown Friday against Palo Duro at Harvester Field. The Harvesters lost 35-13.

The Harvesters couldn't get anything going on their next possession as they were forced to punt. It only took the Dons one play to expand their lead as Denzel Everhart ran 80 yards for a touchdown. Palo Duro converted the two-point conversion to take a 15-0 lead.

Pampa got their only score of the first half, as Lattigo Collins dove into the end zone from two yards away. Colten Adams missed the extra point, cutting Palo Duro's lead to 15-6 with 5:21 left in the half.

The Dons quickly got the momentum back. In less than two minutes, Hicks scored his second rushing touchdown on a 60-yard run. The two point conversion failed but Palo Duro increased their lead to 21-6 with 3:41 left. Hicks scored his third rushing touchdown with three seconds left in the half on an 85-yard run. Following the extra point Palo Duro led 28-6 which would be the halftime score.

In the third quarter the Dons expanded their lead to 35-6 as Jaren Grayson completed a 25-yard pass to Chris Acosta. The Harvesters got the last score of the game as Braden Hunt scored on a 38-yard pass from Alex Clendening. Parker said he is glad his team is in the playoffs but he and his players are emotional about their loss to Palo Duro.

"It was our big goal for the season to be playing in Week 11 and not turning in our equipment," Parker said. "We're looking forward to it but we're still emotional about the Palo Duro game. The challenge is going to be for us to be excited about playing. My staff planning and creating a game plan for the Hereford Whitefaces 7:30 p.m. Friday at Dick Bivins Stadium."

Parker said while Pampa's won-loss record doesn't look like a won-loss record of a playoff team, his team won when it counted.

"We're not 2-8, we're 2-3 in district," Parker said. "We're a number two seed in division two (bracket). We're proud to be one of those four in our district to make playoffs. We would have liked to have won our non-district games but we won it counted most in October (district schedule). We should have won against Dumas and Palo Duro. Against Canyon we could have won. We are pleased to represent this community in the playoffs.

Pampa will join Canyon (8-2, 5-0), Dumas (4-6, 3-2) and Palo Duro in the playoffs as representatives of District 3-4A. The Harvesters will face a former District 3-4A opponent in the Hereford Whitefaces (9-1, 4-1) 7:30 p.m. Friday at Dick Bivins Stadium in Amarillo.

Freshman girls basketball open season Monday

BY ANDREW GLOVER
aglover@thepampanews.com

The Pampa Lady Harvesters freshmen basketball team kicks off the 2009-2010 season with a new coach.

Alan Segura will be coaching the freshmen this season. Segura said his team has looked good in the early practices.

"We've been alright the first few practices," Segura said. "I don't know what to expect." This is my first year here in working with these girls but what I've seen so far from these girls it's going to be alright.

Segura said his goals for the season is for the team to get better and be successful

"Right now I don't see any reason with the girls that I got that we can't be really successful," Segura said.

Segura said the team's strength so far has been his players height and their defense. The freshman scrimmaged Saturday at the McNeely Field House. The freshmen girls basketball coach said the scrimmage should answer some questions about his team.

"We're looking to see where we are going to be at against everyone else," Segura said. "Offensively

I'm going to see where we are at and who my scorers are."

The freshmen open the season 6:00 p.m. Monday at the Borger Lady Bulldogs.

JV Football blanked by Dons in season finale

BY ANDREW GLOVER
aglover@thepampanews.com

The Pampa Harvesters junior varsity team ends their season with a 21-0 loss to the Palo Duro Dons, Thursday in Amarillo. Coach Byron May said his team was shorthanded due to injuries but still could have played better.

"Palo Duro led at the half 14-0 after breaking two long runs, and had another long run in the 3rd quarter," May said.

The junior varsity coach said some of his players will get to suit up for the varsity's playoff game next week which is something May is excited about.

"A junior varsity season only has so many practices and games, and any chance to get these underclassmen extra experience only builds momentum throughout their careers," May said.

The junior varsity finished the season 4-5-1 and May looks forward to seeing his players continue in the football program.

"This class has a lot good qualities, and they have a great mix of talent," May said. "They make me really excited about the future of Harvester football."

Texas students challenge protest restrictions

DALLAS (AP) — Two community college students who favor carrying concealed weapons are challenging their school's restrictions on campus protests, their attorneys announced Thursday.

Clayton Smith and John Schwertz Jr. filed a federal lawsuit Tuesday against the Tarrant County College District. They contend the college system restricts their First Amendment rights by controlling the time, place and manner of protests.

The students plan to participate in a nationwide demonstration next week known as "empty holster protests," calling attention to police forbidding concealed weapons on campus.

School officials have limited the protest to the front porch of the student center and prohibited handing out fliers from anywhere but behind a table on the porch, according to the lawsuit. Administrators also told the men they could not wear empty holsters.

"TCC has no reason to believe that our action would cause any problems on campus," Smith said in a statement. "All we want to do is wear empty holsters to express our political views."

Attorney Angela Robinson, who represents the college system and interim Chancellor Erma Johnson Hadley, said the college's protest rules are "practical, enforceable and aligned with state and federal laws."

"The college believes it has established policies that respect the constitutional rights of both students and faculty while also providing for safety and security," Robinson said.

Tarrant County College prohibits concealed weapons on campus. Smith and Schwertz plan to express their opposition by wearing empty holsters on their hips and donning T-shirts.

Smith and Schwertz are being represented by the Foundation for Individual Rights in Education and the American Civil Liberties Union. Their lawsuit also challenges TCC's requirement that students submit a form requesting permission to use the free speech zone at least 24 hours in advance of a demonstration.

"TCC would like to portray the tiny spots on campus that they have designated for public forums as 'free speech zones,' but what they have really done is made their campuses into censorship zones," said Lisa Graybill, legal director of the ACLU of Texas. "Colleges and universities thrive on the free exchange of ideas and these students have a right to express their ideas in a non-disruptive way on the public areas of a campus."

Dynegy posts 3Q loss on sale of plants

MARK WILLIAMS
AP ENERGY WRITER

Power company Dynegy Inc. said Thursday that it posted a second straight big quarterly loss as it continues to write down the value of plants that it is selling as part of a deal to bolster finances.

The Houston company also said it expects its net loss for the full year to be bigger than previously forecast, and hinted that the company may be interested in other transactions with power companies after the deal with former development partner LS Power Associates closes before year end.

Dynegy said it lost $212 million, or 25 cents per share, for the quarter ended Sept. 30. A year ago, Dynegy made $605 million, or 72 cents per share, driven by a $542 million after tax gain that reflected an updated estimate of what investments are worth based on current market values.

The company said in August that it plans to sell about a quarter of its generation — eight plants plus another under development — to LS Power for about $1 billion in cash and $500 million in stock.

Dynegy has said the sale will help the company reduce its near-term debt maturities and simplify the company's structure.

Holli Nichols, Dynegy's executive vice president and chief financial officer, said in an interview that the company might be interested in more transactions once the cash from the LS Power deal is put to work.

"We are firm believers that consolidation makes sense in this industry," she said. "Certainly we will be open to and explore any opportunity out there to create value for our shareholders."

During the quarter,

Dynegy recorded a $234 million after-tax charge to write down the value of the eight plants. The company also recorded a $128 million loss on its forward contracts.

Dynegy reported adjusted earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization of $388 million, up from $269 million last year. Revenue fell by more than half, to $673 million, down from $1.76 billion last year.

The company's shares advanced 18 cents, or 9.6 percent, to close at $2.05.

The company credited the increase in adjusted EBITDA to the sale of a multiyear power-sales contract and higher realized prices for power that was sold before power prices fell in the Midwest.

The company said Midwest production fell 7 percent in the quarter because of the mild summer, the economy and increased off-peak wind generation.

In the Northeast, production was up 20 percent as low prices for natural gas boosted power sales from its natural-gas operations.

Bruce Williamson, Dynegy's chairman, president and CEO, told analysts on a conference that with weak power prices and volatile natural-gas prices, the company is focusing on operating its plants efficiently and cutting costs by $400 million to $450 million over the next four years.

When the deal with LS Power is done, Dynegy will have about 20 plants in seven states that will be more concentrated on its baseload coal and natural-gas plants and less on plants used only at times of peak demand for power.

New 'Call of Duty' could set entertainment record

NEW YORK (AP) — This holiday season's biggest entertainment blockbuster likely will be a sequel to a popular franchise, with jarring depictions of war and an intricate story of good versus evil. It could easily rake in more than last year's record $155 million opening weekend for "The Dark Knight."

But this blockbuster is not a movie.

It is "Call of Duty: Modern Warfare 2," a video game that Activision Blizzard Inc. is releasing Tuesday. Fans worldwide are expected to spend at least half a billion dollars on the game in the first week.

That would at least match last year's "Grand Theft Auto IV," which was the most successful video game release in history and might have been the top entertainment launch ever.

Justin Criswell, 31, plans to line up at a GameStop store in Brooklyn on Monday night so he can buy the new "Call of Duty" when it goes on sale after midnight, for $60. It's available for PCs, Microsoft's Xbox 360 and Sony's PlayStation 3.

"Ever since they announced it, me and most of the friends that I play with have been crazy excited about it," Criswell said. Once he gets a copy, he plans to stay up much of the night to play it online with friends and relatives scattered in Tennessee, California, Ohio and Florida.

"Those who have to work the next day have taken the day off," he said.

Like the previous five "Call of Duty" games, which are all rated "M" for mature (not for kids under 17), this one lets players shoot their way through a complex series of scenes. The game's developer, Infinity Ward, spent two years creating realistic graphics that are amplified in many players' homes by big-screen, high-definition TVs sets and powerful speakers. It's like stepping into a movie.

A big part of the game's appeal is in its multiplayer component — players can fight each other, whether they're at the same game console or in separate locations and connected online.

Or a player can dive in alone and get swept into the game's plot, which picks up where "Call of Duty 4: Modern Warfare" left off. That game ended with victory over a Russian terrorist, but he was just part of a larger conspiracy. This time, the target is an even more vicious leader of the Russian Ultranationalist movement. Settings include a snowbound Siberian base, a leafy American suburb and the burning streets of Washington, D.C. One trailer for the game shows a glimpse of action in outer space.

While video games are increasingly marketed to men and women of all ages as mainstream entertainment, the core demographic for "Call of Duty: Modern Warfare 2" is mainly guys.

For David Dague, 36, who lives in Chicago, the launch of "Modern Warfare 2" is like the beginning of football season for a sports fan. Because he can play the game with other people, joining up in "clans" or fighting against them, "Call of Duty" is like "paintball in a box," he said. Better yet, paintball on a couch.

"Playing against other living, thinking players becomes a competitive pastime," said Dague, who runs a Web community for adults who play multiplayer games on the Xbox 360. Dague said he plans to play "Modern Warfare 2" for about two hours at a time, two to three nights a week.

"I don't watch soap operas, I don't watch football. Multiplayer gaming is where my competitive spirit gets its outlet," he said.

Activision is working with retailers to plan more than 10,000 midnight openings in the United States, including most of the 4,300 GameStop Corp. stores around the country. It won't give numbers, but GameStop says pre-orders for "Modern Warfare 2" hit an all-time high.

In all, about 28 million "Call of Duty" games have been sold in the United States, with each installment doing better at launch than the previous one, said NPD Group analyst Anita Frazier. Optimism about the latest title led Activision on Thursday to reaffirm its outlook for 2009. It expects more than $2 billion in revenue for the current quarter — roughly half of the year's total.

Wedbush Morgan analyst Michael Pachter estimates Activision is spending as much as $50 million to market the game, including TV spots, billboards and ads on social-networking sites. Activision won't say how much the game cost to make, but most blockbusters require tens of millions of dollars.

'Fairy Godmother' is a big project on the Web, too

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — When Jan Bozarth landed her "Fairy Godmother Academy" book deal with Random House, she was told that the publisher had received 60 proposals like hers that incorporated multimedia or online components to expand on the printed word.

But none of the other proposals included a hand-picked staff ready to begin work on such a project.

In an open upstairs office that faces South Congress Avenue and was formerly occupied by Excite.com staffers, the FGA Media Inc. team has been building a multi-platform world. It begins with a Web site, but also includes online music, games, social media services and real-world events that complement and expand on Bozarth's books. The staff is made up of designers and artisans whom Bozarth has worked with for about 15 years the people she says she could trust to translate her detailed fantasy world into what Bozarth and the team call "Transmedia."

The ambitious project, which the team says will be rolled out over several years as the books are published, combines elements of massively multiplayer online games like "Club Penguin" with design tools, interactive music and video, and activities meant to get readers off the computer and into real-world activities with friends.

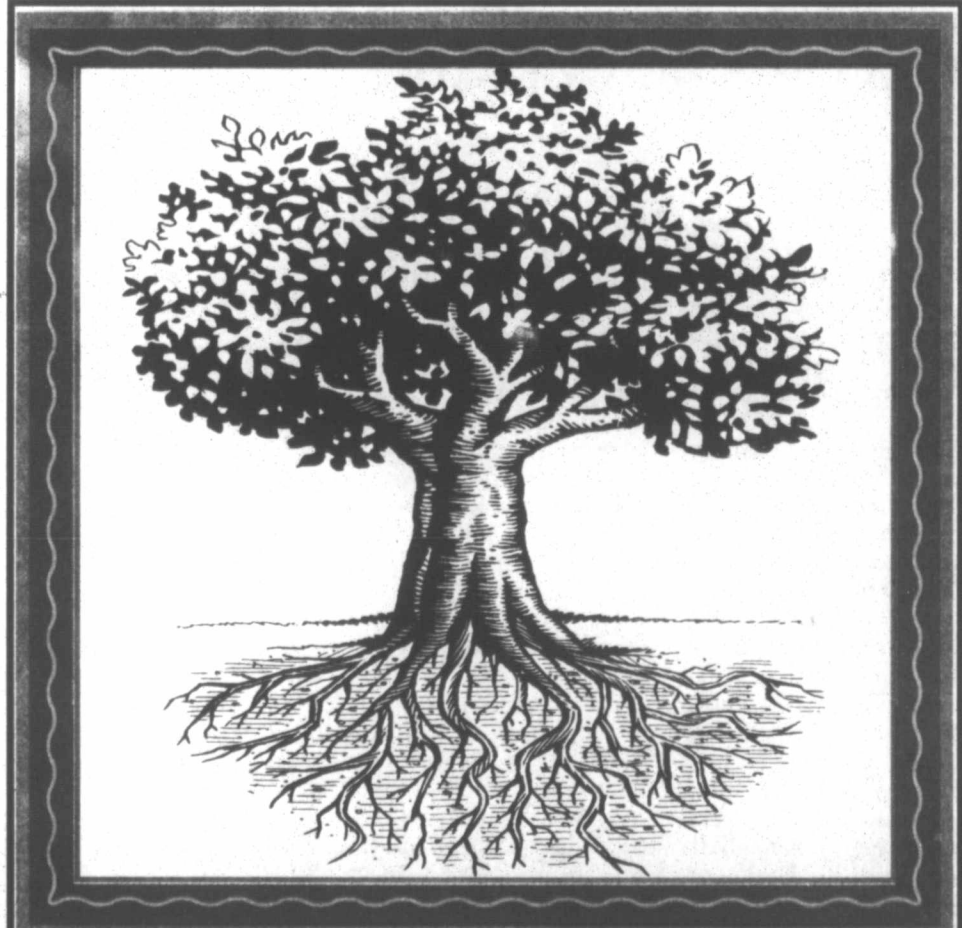

"It's very expensive to do and very complicated and untested," Bozarth said.

The 14-member FGA team includes design veterans who've worked on projects for Hasbro, Mattel, Disney, Nickelodeon, Maxis, Time Warner, Dell, 3M and Microsoft, among others. They're skilled in 3-D design, user-experience design, Web design, multimedia, sculpting and even blacksmithing.

"A lot of us came from a girl-game background, so we have a lot of experience with that," said Ann Woods, art director of the Web site. "We're aiming to create a place where the books are a jumping-off place into this world of play and discovery, and of girls finding their own wisdom."

"We're creating the things we wish we'd had when we were 10-year-old kids," Woods said.

'Clunker' data show pickup-for-pickup trades

WASHINGTON (AP) — Billed as a way for the government to put more fuel-efficient vehicles on highways, the popular $3 billion Cash for Clunkers program mostly involved swaps of old Ford or Chevrolet pickups for new ones that got only marginally better gas mileage, according to an analysis of new federal data by The Associated Press.

The single most common swap — which occurred more than 8,200 times — involved Ford F150 pickup owners who took advantage of a government rebate to trade their old trucks for new Ford F150s. They were 17 times more likely to buy a new F150 than, say, a Toyota Prius. The fuel economy for the new trucks ranged from 15 mpg to 17 mpg based on engine size and other factors, an improvement of just 1 mpg to 3 mpg over the clunkers.

Owners of thousands more large, old-Chevrolet and Dodge pickups bought new Silverado and Ram trucks, also with only barely improved mileage in the middle teens, according to AP's analysis of sales of $15.2 billion worth of vehicles at nearly 19,000 car dealerships in every state. Those deals helped the Ford F150 and Chevy Silverado — along with Ford's Escape midsize SUV — climb into the Top 10 most-popular vehicles purchased with the government rebates. The most common truck-for-truck and truck-for-SUV deals totaled at least $911 million.

In scores of deals, the government reported spending a total of $562,500 in rebates for new cars and trucks that got worse or the same mileage as the trade-ins — in apparent violation of the program's requirements. The government said it is investigating those reports and said in some cases they were probably entered incorrectly by dealers or based on outdated fuel economy figures.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration is still reviewing the reports, and any dealers that submitted invalid trade-ins will be directed to return the government rebate, spokesman Eric Bolton said.

The new data, obtained by the AP under the Freedom of Information Act, include details of 677,081 clunker trade-ins processed by the government through Oct. 16. More than 95,000 of the new vehicles purchased under the program — or about 1 in 7 — got less than 20 mpg, according to the data.

The new figures, requested four months ago by the AP, represent the first substantial outside accounting of the clunkers program, lauded by the White House and the Transportation Department for improving fuel economy, stimulating sales and taking the dirtiest vehicles off the road. The data show the average fuel economy was 15.8 mpg for the old vehicles and 24.9 for the new ones.

The overall mileage increases over the clunker fleet represent a decline of 1.87 million tons of carbon dioxide per year, based on families driving an average of 12,000 miles, a yearly savings equivalent to the amount of carbon dioxide spewed in the U.S. in just 2.5 hours.

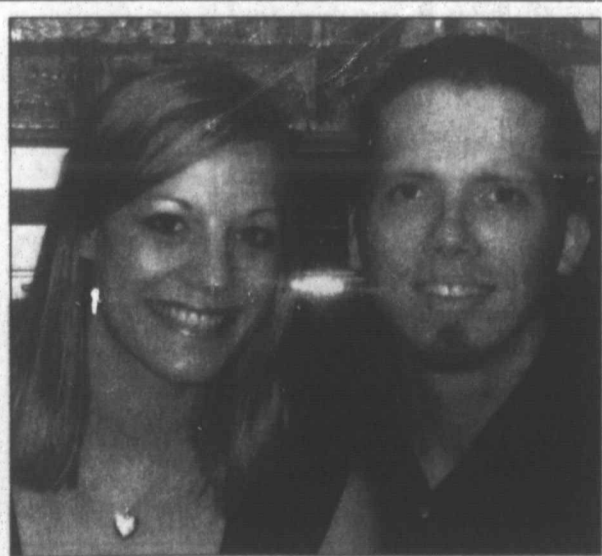

But plenty of consumers bought relatively low-mileage trucks and SUVs with the help of government checks.

"If we're looking for the environmental story here, we're going to be disappointed," said Jeremy Anwyl, chief executive at Edmunds.com, an analyst firm. "It might have started out from the perspective of improving the environment, but it got detoured as a way to stimulate the economy."

Popular high-mileage commuter cars, including the Toyota Corolla, Honda Civic, Toyota Camry and Ford Focus, also were among the Top 10 most popular new vehicles bought under the four-week program, with 105,280 of those models sold for a total of about $2 billion.

Bolton, the NHTSA spokesman, said the program "proved to be a win for the economy and the environment" because it helped financially struggling dealerships and auto manufacturers, and because, under the program's rules, clunkers necessarily were replaced with vehicles that got better mileage.

Chris Moss of Smithtown, N.Y., traded in his 1992 white Ford F150 pickup — "it had 5 million miles on it and needed $50,000 in repairs, if you know what I mean" — for a new Chevrolet Malibu hybrid for his wife. When he drove his old truck to the dealership's back lot with the rest of the clunkers, "90 percent of what you saw were old 150s and Explorers," he said. Moss posted a video on YouTube of his old truck's final day, called "Rust In Peace."

Daily Horoscope

BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Nov. 8, 2009:
This year, you will be visible and will make an impact. People will notice you. You could be overwhelmed by everything that drops on you. You often have many different opinions and many people who tap into your knowledge. If you are single, you will meet many people this year. But you will have better odds of meeting someone important in 2010. If you are attached, take up a new hobby together. Go out and about more often. LEO pushes you into the limelight.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have:
5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ You wake up full of energy. You want to know what makes certain things happen. Remain light and easy with others. You might be witness to a great example of too much information. Use your imagination when making plans. Tonight: Pretending you don't need to work tomorrow!

This Week: Tap into your creativity in order to enhance your finances.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★ You feel anchored and sure of yourself, yet someone has a way of turning everything topsy-turvy. Maintain a sense of humor, and you will be far more content. Remain easygoing. A friend is full of surprises. Tonight: Nestle in.

This Week: Move into a project slowly but surely. Ideas bubble up.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ Communication is always pivotal. Today you probably will be in your glory, though you might need to take notes in order to remember everything that you hear. An unexpected action or request could toss your plans into the air. Tonight: Hang with favorite people.

This Week: Return calls; schedule appointments for Monday. Demands call Tuesday on.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★ Curb a need to go overboard. Your ability to grow past a problem and resolve tension comes out. Many people could be turning up from out of nowhere. Even if someone only appears as a phone call, you tend to focus 100 percent on that person. Tonight: Your treat.

This Week: Keep communication flowing, despite a certain person.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ You are up for nearly anything and everything. People find you exciting. A partner could overwhelm you with conversations or ideas, or you just might receive too many calls right now. You have pushed hard. Tonight: As you like.

This Week: Use Monday to the max. You place a lot of attention on financial matters Tuesday on.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★ Know when you have had enough. Allow more creativity and excitement into your life. Use today for you. Think of recent events and internalize some.

Screen calls if need be. You'll come up with ideas after idea. Tonight: Take some personal time.

This Week: Tuesday on, you will feel energized.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ Listen to what is being shared. Friends clearly are pleading their case, knowing you won't stop or turn away. You know what they want. You might be open to visiting a new museum or restaurant. Be open to adventure. Tonight: Make as close to perfect plans as possible.

This Week: Use Monday for wish fulfillment. Plan on heavy work Tuesday on.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★ A must appearance makes a bigger difference than you think. You might be inspired by a child or loved one to do something unique or to try a new sport. Say yes to adventure and no to boredom. Tonight: Wherever you are, you are a force to behold.

This Week: A must-show appearance works. Success heads in your direction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Do what comes to you spontaneously, whether it is a drive in the country, off to pawn shops to find Aladdin's lamp or a call to a friend at a distance whom you'd love to catch up on news with. Perhaps it is time to plan a trip! Tonight: Let your imagination choose.

This Week: Do needed research before making a statement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ Listen to news with a bit of skepticism. You might not be sure of yourself or as direct as necessary. Ask a question but be careful before giving a yea or nay to an expenditure. Listen to your instincts. Tonight: Togetherness will be nice.

This Week: Try a different approach. Be open to something new.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ You seem to be spinning around a lot of activity and people. Others seek you out. You might need to screen your calls, as so many people are looking for you. Your popularity soars, but you might not like all the demands. Tonight: Out and about.

This Week: Others dominate, no matter how you cut it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ If you are tired or feeling like you might want to get into a hobby or join others in a card game, do it! You don't need to always put out that high physical energy. If you want, take a snooze or two. It is your Sunday, too. Tonight: Easy works.

This Week: Plan on networking a lot right now.
