Recycling center moving to landfill

BY DAVID BOWSER dbowser@thepampanews.com

Pampa's recycling center is moving to the landfill.

City officials said this week that the residential voluntary drop off point for recyclable items will be moved in January from the Hobart Street Park to the city landfill on the east side of town.

Donny Hooper, Pampa's Director of Public Works, said the move should save the city's taxpayers some money. The city will also be able to extend the hours of operation, he said.

"We realize that the change might cause some inconvenience at first,"

Hooper said, "but I feel open 20 hours a week. The like this will be more of a benefit for the public in the long run and will increase the amount of recyclables that are being diverted from the landfill itself which in turn saves landfill

United way still short of goal, allocations being made for 2010

As of today, Wednesday Pampa United Way has raised a total of $305,900. This total includes the overage from last year's campaign of $39,844.10. This means they still need only $9,100 to reach their goal. They have received 97.1% of our goal of Katrina Bigham, of United Way said, "We were hoping that when the people of Pampa found out we were so close to reaching our goal, they would pitch in and help us with the $9,100 still needed to reach our goal and pay all the agencies their allocations.

Firefighters raise almost $13k for charity

Members of the Pampa Fire Fighters Association, Local 2393, in conjunction with the Pampa Fire Department, were busy this year raising money for local charities.

Their annual MDA Fill the Boot campaign collected more than $8,000. "That money stays here," explained local president Craig Harkom. Harkom said most of those funds will be used to send local children to a camp in Happy

The firefighters' sale of football tickets raised another $3,600. Most of that money was used to purchase vouchers for warm winter shoes and socks for local children. They raised enough to have almost $1,000 left over to spend on ten children from the Angel tree. They selected five boys and five girls, and bought everything on each list. The members also sold pink firefighter T-shirts, which was so successful they may do it again next year, raising $1,100 for Relay of Life in Pampa. They presented the check to Pam Dalton 2009 Pampa Relay for Life Chair, just a few days before Christmas.

Texas troops to ring in the new year at home

BY SGT. WILL HILL, CAMP ATTERBURY PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Soldiers from the Texas Agribusiness Development Team flew half-way around the world on Christmas day, but not on Santa's sleigh. They did, however, bring gifts for their family and friends from Afghanistan after completing a year-long deployment.

The 65-member team arrived at Camp Atterbury Joint Maneuver Training Center on Christmas day for their demobilization process. They are scheduled to head home just before the New Year.

Col. Michael Lt. Rockwell, deputy commander of the Texas ADT, said he was glad he was back in the United States and mentioned how proud he was of the success of the mission.

Their mission included teaching the Afghanistan people better farming techniques in the field and teaching the business aspect of farming distribution while furthering agriculture development.

"We built a slaughter facility to help change the health and sanitation of the meat," said Rockwell. "Now health inspectors check the quality of the meat and control the slaughter point, because before they slaughtered the animals in the street and had the blood just run down into ditches.

The Texas ADT also surveyed a key location for a fish farm.

"The fish farm will give them a new crop [rainbow trout], and the farm will help them have multiple crops of fish a year and an aquaculture building will allow them to raise their own fish," said Sgt. Marty Conricote, a hydrologist for the Texas ADT.

"This fish farm will affect the local community and add a new agricultural crop to the area and by adding fish to their diet it will help improve their nutrition," he said.

After Soldiers check off their demobilizing check list, they pack their bags filled with gifts and wait patiently to head home.

"It feels great to be back in the states. If I can't be home at least I am on my way home," said Conricote with high spirits.

The key to good politics? Good communication

BY LEE H. HAMILTON Not long ago, I was speaking to a group of high-speaking to a group of highschool students when one raised his hand, declared that he wanted to run for Congress, and asked what he should study in order to prepare. I suspect my answer surprised him. I told him to study English.

What I had in mind were writing, reading, and public speaking. Members of Congress need to be good at a lot of things if they want to be effective, but chief among them is the ability to communicate. Politics - both getting elected and making a meaningful contribution to public life — is largely about interaction with other people. You won't succeed if you can't make yourself understood, don't know how to pay attention to what others think, and don't care about the dialogue that underlies our democracy.

When I say "communication" I mean it in the broadest sense: formal and informal; one-on-one and before a mass audience; in writing, in speeches and in discussion; with small, friendly groups of admirers and in front of larger, notalways-friendly crowds; on television, on the radio, on the Web, and in print; in the formal setting of the House or Senate floor and sitting at a formica-topped luncheonette table over coffee and doughnuts.

Sometimes politicians have a chance to spend time choosing their words, but more often they have to speak off the cuff, weighing the import of their words even as they say them. Some people are born with this ability, but for lots of us it's a skill we learn with practice, and it's invaluable to a politician.

When you accept an invitation to speak, you never know what the environment is going to be — not just in terms of the venue, which could be anything from an old VFW hall to someone's living room, but in terms of the political moment. More than a few times, I've prepared for a public appearance only to have my speech become irrelevant when some national issue became the only topic people were interested in discussing.

And the truth is, most audiences are less interested in hearing a speech read than in having it delivered in a way that seems fresh and spur-of-the-moment. They prefer dialogue with their elected representative rather than a set speech.

It also helps to remember that in public life, presentation matters. You have to be able to write clearly and, even more important, speak clearly: don't slur your words, don't let your voice fade — you'd be amazed how many people have difficulty hearing.

Be enthusiastic and energetic, and speak with conviction: if you don't believe what you're saying, your audience won't, either.

Learn how to calibrate what you say to the medium you're using: you'll be much more convincing on television if you speak conversationally than if you come across as angry or impassioned; but before a crowd, speaking conversationally will just put the audience to sleep.

These are things you can practice, though only experience will teach you how to relax in front of an audience, put them at ease, and, most important, enjoy your time in front of them.

All of these things are helped enormously by preparation. You may not have to know your exact words ahead of time, but you most certainly want to master your subject. When you're not sure of the facts or even of your own position, you have to tread extremely carefully: that's when politicians make mistakes, and in politics a bad slip can be devastating, especially in the age of mini digital recorders, camcorders and YouTube.

At the same time, the best politicians know that a crucial part of good communications is the ability to listen to constituents, to members of an audience, and to political opponents. The importance of paying attention to the first two should be obvious. You want to be able to address the concerns of listeners and to be ready to learn from them: not only do you not want to come across as an arrogant know-it-all, but also you'd be surprised and humbled to discover how much a crowd of average Americans can teach even the best-versed politician. The same is true of your colleagues and opponents. Any public policy debate of consequence will have good points on both sides, and learning to welcome multiple perspectives is vital.

Because in the end, politics is a discussion among many interested parties lawmakers, lobbyists, policy analysts, journalists and ordinary Americans. Being a good politician means being a good conversationalist, not simply scoring a few rhetorical points and then going home. Our system depends on give and take, not on drawing lines in the sand, and the more budding politicians there are who understand that, the better off we'll all be.

Lee Hamilton is Director of the Center on Congress at Indiana University. He was a member of the U.S. House of Representatives for 34 years.

Harvesters fall to Plainsmen in tournament opener

BY ANDREW GLOVER aglover@thepampanews.com

Pampa Both the Harvesters and the Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen had five days off over Christmas Break. Nevertheless, the break affected the Harvesters more as they lost 62-38 in the first round of the

Head Coach Dustin Miller said it looked like his team had a break.

"We couldn't make a shot," Miller said. "Definitely everything was out of sync.'

Pampa (7-7) trailed early as the Plainsmen took an early 11-4 lead in the first quarter. Lubbock Monterey outscored Pampa the rest of the quarter 7-5 to lead 18-9 after the first quarter. In the second quarter things didn't get much better for the Harvesters. The Plainsmen opened the quarter with an 8-2 run to expand their lead to 26-10.

The closest the Harvesters

would get was 12. Lubbock

Monterey led 33-14 at halftime.

The Plainsmen maintained their lead in the third quarter. Pampa outscored Lubbock Monterey 15-14 in the third but still trailed 47-29 after three quarters. In the fourth quarter, the Plainsmen didn't allow the Harvesters to rally. The closest Pampa would get was 16 points as they made the first shot of the fourth quarter. Lubbock Monterey outscored Pampa 15-9 in the final quarter. Miller said poor shooting was part of Pampa's problem in this game.

"Defense wasn't very good either," Miller said. "We missed 14 free throws

Latigo Collins led the Harvesters in scoring with 13 points. Alex Clendening scored 10, Ryan Jimenez had eight and Garrett Ericson had four. Pampa will start play in the consolation bracket today at noon against Glen Rose at Lubbock High School.

Judge to hear Leach's restraining order motion

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Who will coach Texas Tech in the Alamo Bowl may be decided in a Lubbock court Wednesday

Mike Leach, suspended this week by the university, is asking for a temporary restraining order that would allow him to coach the Red Raiders against Michigan State on Saturday.

In an affidavit included in the court filing Tuesday, Leach said he "would never intentionally harm or endanger a player" and that he has been "forced into this situation without being afforded any process." He also said "absolutely" no evidence had been given to him that showed he had violated any university rules or standards.

University officials suspended Leach on Monday while the school investigates a complaint from receiver Adam James and his family regarding a concussion. James is the son of former NFL player Craig James, now an analyst for ESPN

A person close to James with direct knowledge of the situation alleges the player was twice forced to stand in a small, dark place while the team practiced. The person spoke to to an equipment shed near The Associated Press on the practice field, where the condition on anonym- a member of the athletic ity because of the sensitive staff checked on James to nature of the complaint.

An in-chambers hearing in Lubbock on the restraining order motion will be in the 99th District Court. If the court rules against Leach, defensive coordinator Ruffin McNeill will lead the Red Raiders in their 10th-straight bowl appearance.

The attorney for Leach says the suspended Texas Tech coach did nothing wrong in how he treated a player with a "mild" concussion.

Leach was "begged to work something out to avoid a confrontation," said a person familiar with the inquiry who spoke to the AP on condition of anonymity. That person also said Leach late last week postponed a meeting related to the inquiry and refused to sign a letter saying "no one injured would be returned to work out without doctors' permission."

The school's attorney left a voice mail message with Leach's attorney that the university needed a letter of apology by noon Monday, the person said. It did not arrive.

"That's when they made the decision to suspend (Leach), thinking that would bring him to his senses," the person said.

Jerry Turner, vice chairman of the university system's board of regents, declined to comment on whether, if true, the incidents might lead to Leach's departure.

"We haven't gotten to that point, of course," Turner said. "This is an ongoing inquiry, and I certainly do not want to prejudice the results of the Leach led Texas Tech to the best season in program history last year, going 11-2 and garnering him Big 12 Coach of the Year honors. But he and the university were at odds for months over negotiations for a contract extension. In February, Leach and the school agreed to a fiveyear, $12.7 million deal that could keep him there through 2013.

The clock is ticking on a portion of that contract. If Leach is the coach as of Thursday, the school owes him an $800,000 bonus.

Texas Tech is the second Big 12 school to launch an internal investigation into a coach's treatment of his players.

On Nov. 16, Kansas investigated Mark Mangino, who was the national coach of the year and got a big raise when he went 12-1 in 2007. Players said Mangino was insensitive, though others defended him. Mangino resigned Dec. 3 after reaching a settlement with the school that was later disclosed as a $3 million buyout.

James was injured Dec. 16 and the next day was diagnosed with a concussion by team doctors, the person close to James said.

The person alleged James was sequestered at two consecutive practices:

On Dec. 17, James said Leach told trainers to put him "the darkest place you can find." James was sent make sure he did not lean against anything or sit on the floor. James said Leach told him that if he came out he would be kicked off the team.

When the team returned to practice two days later, on Dec. 19, James said Leach told trainers to "find the tightest, darkest place" for the player. James, in street clothes, was put in an electrical closet inside the football stadium for hours, again monitored by a member of the athletic staff.

The person close to the inquiry said James spent two hours on Dec. 17 in a shed the size of a onecar garage that was filled with coolers and that the player was "caught" sitting down on one. All the coolers were removed, the person said, and James was shut inside.

On Dec. 19, James was taken to an electrical room but the buzz was too loud, so he was taken to a press room where the furniture was removed, the person said.

Craig James called to report the allegations on Dec. 19; a university attorney interviewed him and his son Dec. 20; Leach was questioned Dec. 20 or 21; and trainers, student trainers and the doctor who examined Adam James also were interviewed, the person close to the inquiry

Liggett said he has a letter from the doctor who examined James supporting Leach's actions.

"He was not hurt by what happened in the equipment room," the lawyer said. "And Mike did not do anything to worsen the situation, in fact he put him in a safer environment by being inside.'

Liggett said Leach did not postpone or blow off a meeting about the inquiry.

"Nope, didn't happen," the Lubbock attorney said. "I've been denying that all

He said Leach learned about the specific allegations against him when he talked with the school he broke.' Liggett also denied a voice mail message was left for him demanding an attorney Dec. 20 or 21, but he was not told of "any rule apology by Monday. "Nobody did that," Liggett said.

Turner said the investigation is being handled by the school president's office, with the assistance of its general counsel and athletic director Gerald Myers.

The NCAA is letting Texas Tech conduct its investigation and has not gotten involved, NCAA Cameron spokesman Schuh said. The Big 12 has no authority to investigate what the conference labeled an "institutional matter," Big 12 spokesman Bob Burda said.

Texas Tech players, speaking to reporters Tuesday for the first time since Leach was suspended, declined to discuss the incident. Cornerback LaRon Moore called Leach "different" but said the coach only wants the best from his players.

"He goes about it an unconventional way," Moore said. "But all he wants to do is push us, and we've talked about it with the coaches. That's just his way of doing it. He tries to push us, tries to make us better and tries to make us men and get the best of our ability out of us.

Celebrate the new year responsibly, don't drink and drive.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am 80, and "Doreen" is 72. When we started dating seven years ago, I "simply wanted to be her friend." Now the tables have turned, and she just wants to be MY friend.

Doreen has a male friend in Florida with whom she communicates through letters and phone calls. Although she tells me she loves me, she also says that if this "friend" comes back and asks her out, she wants to be free to date him.

I told her that most 72-year-olds would be happy to have one man to date, but if she plans on dating someone else, I should be free to do the same. Her last remark was for me to "be gentle with her." We are affectionate, loving friends, and I care about her a great deal.

Your observations, please. -- EDDIE IN MAINE DEAR EDDIE:

Your statement that if Doreen plans to date someone else, you should be free to do the same seems logical to me. Continue to have an affectionate, loving friendship with her -- and by all means "be gentle" -- but keep your options open and date others in the knowledge that if her snowbird flies home, she'll be billing and cooing with him, and you'll be flying solo.

DEAR ABBY: I have a big problem -- my fatherin-law, "Hal." He has lived with us more than eight years and has never contributed anything toward his keep. I asked him once to pay some rent, but he refused. This not only caused a rift between my wife and me, but her two siblings -- who are well off -- said Hal was "living on the poverty line," so we should keep him for noth-

I wouldn't mind so much, but my wife has to clean up after him, do his laundry and take him to his medical appointments. More than that, having Hal underfoot all the time has completely destroyed our privacy.

Hal spends most of his pension buying presents for his other children who never even come to see him. All we get from him are complaints.

What do you suggest? --RESENTFUL IN IDAHO DEAR RESENTFUL:

Enough is enough. You and your wife are long overdue for a meeting with her siblings to discuss this problem. They should have started chipping in to pay for their father's care eight years ago and also seen to it that you have some respite. Unless and until this is brought out into the open, nothing will change.

DEAR ABBY: My wife, "Audrey," was molested by her step-grandfather when she was a little girl.

She told her mother about it, but because of her age she wasn't taken seriously.

Audrey and I are now talking about starting a family. Abby, I am uncomfortable about bringing children into this family unless everyone understands the reason I will not allow this man to touch our children. The problem is, the information will be devastating to Audrey's grandmother. A child's innocence is worth whatever hard feelings I might create, but how do we handle this without destroying a family? -- TAKING CARE OF MY OWN IN HUNTSVILLE, ALA.

DEAR TAKING CARE: Was your wife the only child in the family her step-grandfather had access to? Will the baby you're planning be the first in the family -- or has this man had unsupervised contact with others? Keep in mind that if he would molest Audrey, he may also have done it to others

-- neighbors, etc. Not only should the family be informed about what happened by you and Audrey now that she is "old enough to be believed," but also ask if anyone else may have been victimized because other children may have been afraid to speak
