AgriLife to offer food safety class

SPECIAL TO THE PAMPA NEWS

Texas AgriLife Extension Service in Gray County is offering a professional food manager certification training course called "Food Safety: It's Our Business," to help food establishments meet a Texas Department of State Health Services requirement, said Joan Gray-Soria, AgriLife Extension family and consumer sciences agent for Gray County.

The program will be offered, on November 16-17 at the Gray County Annex, located at 12125 E. Frederic Ave. in Pampa. The $110 fee covers training, materials and the state food manager certification examination, Gray-Soria said.

Under the Texas Department of State Health Services jurisdiction, each food establishment is required to have one certified food manager on site. Food manager certificates will be valid for five years, she said.

Statistics indicate food-borne illness continues to be a health issue in the U.S., causing one in four Americans to become sick, one in 1,000 to be hospitalized and 5,000 to die annually.

To help combat such illnesses, this program is designed to not only prepare food-service managers to pass the certification examination, it will provide valuable education regarding the safe handling of food, Gray-Soria said.

According to statistics, Gray-Soria said, almost 50 cents of every dollar Americans spend on food is spent on meals prepared away from home. Therefore, careful attention to food safety will help keep customers safe and CLASS cont. on page 6

SBA offers help to Texas counties

AUSTIN (AP) — The Small Business Administration is offering federal disaster help after more than a dozen Texas counties were impacted by September's Tropical Storm Hermine.

Gov. Rick Perry says the assistance is available to Bell, Tarrant and Williamson counties, where disaster loan outreach centers were open Thursday.

Perry says people in neighboring Bastrop, Burnet (BER-net), Coryell, Dallas, Denton, Ellis, Falls, Johnson, Lampasas, Lee, McLennan, Milam, Parker, Travis and Wise counties are also eligible to seek federal assistance.

The governor has estimated Texas suffered more than $13 billion in damage from the storm.

Perry's initial request for a federal disaster declaration was denied. Perry then asked for SBA assistance, which he announced was granted Wednesday.

Boy dead after dog mauling

HENDERSON (AP) — A 2-year-old boy is dead after his grandfather's pit bull dog fatally mauled him at the man's rural East Texas home.

Rusk County Sheriff Danny Pirtle says Kaden Muckleroy was died at East Texas Medical Center in Henderson after Wednesday morning's attack.

Pirtle says the boy's grandfather, Kelvin Muckleroy, had the dog chained to a tree in his yard when the attack happened. The sheriff told the Tyler Morning Telegram that Muckleroy has turned the dog over to deputies, along with about 29 others he kept in kennels.

No charges have been filed, but Pirtle says the investigation continues.

Henderson is 32 miles south of Tyler and 125 miles southeast of Dallas.

Wardens hurt in plane crash

EL PASO (AP) — Three Texas Parks and Wildlife Department wardens hunting for poachers suffered non-life-threatening injuries when their plane crashed in the Franklin Mountains, authorities said Thursday.

Emergency personnel had to pull 29-year-old Hallie Dacy from the wreckage after the accident Wednesday, while A.J. Smith, 43, and Kenneth Zuber, 48, were able to escape on their own, department spokesman Mike Cox said.

All three are in stable condition, University Medical Center of El Paso supervisor Debbie Harp.

The game wardens were searching for people illegally hunting mule deer and aoudad sheep when the twin-engine Partenavia P68 Observer crashed at around 11 a.m., Cox said.

"There's no indication of foul play, it's just an accident," said Cox, adding that the agency's internal affairs division was investigating the scene Thursday to determine the cause of the crash.

He said the plane landed just inside New Mexico, some 16 miles from El Paso.

Victorian chairs feature classic style

ANNE MCCOLLAM

Q: My mother and dad acquired the pictured chair. Part of a pair, it originally belonged to a widow who my parents became acquainted with after they bought a small farm next to her huckleberry patch. The chairs were supposedly handmade in the late 1800s to early 1900s by a local furniture maker.

Do they have any value? Do you advise having the cane seat replaced in one of the chairs?

A: Your side chairs are examples of the Victorian Eastlake period of design. The spindled back, demi arms, round caned seat, turned legs and two front stretchers are all characteristics of Eastlake furniture. These chairs were usually used in parlors or dining rooms. Having the original seat re-caned would not diminish its value.

Your chairs were made around 1875 and would probably be worth $200 to $250 each.

Q: The enclosed mark can be seen on the bottom of my inherited porcelain sugar bowl. It is decorated with baskets of pink roses and has a pedestal base.

What can you tell me about its age, history and manufacturer?

A: You have an American Belleek sugar bowl that was made around the turn of the 20th century. Willets Manufacturing Co. in Trenton, N.J., used this mark. They produced fine porcelain that rivaled Irish Belleek.

quality porcelain that rivaled Irish Belleek.

Your sugar bowl is circa 1900 and would probably be worth $175 to $200.

Q: I would appreciate your opinion of the value of my limited edition porcelain plate. Containing a scene of a Native American child holding a white dove, it is titled "The White Dove" by Ted DeGrazia. It is a limited edition plate and part of the DeGrazia Children Series.

A: Ted DeGrazia is famous for his paintings of the Southwest Native Americans. Your plate was made by Gorham China Manufacturing and would probably be worth $50 to $100.

Today in History

Today is Thursday, Nov. 11, the 315th day of 2010. There are 50 days left in the year. This is Veterans Day in the U.S., Remembrance Day in Canada.

Today's Highlight in History:

On this date:

In 1620, 41 Pilgrims aboard the Mayflower, anchored off Massachusetts, signed a compact calling for a "body politic."

In 1831, former slave Nat Turner, who'd led a violent insurrection, was executed in Jerusalem, Va.

In 1889, Washington became the 42nd state.

In 1966, Gemini 12 blasted off from Cape Kennedy with astronauts James A. Lovell and Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin Jr. aboard.

In 1983, President Ronald Reagan became the first U.S. chief executive to address the Diet, Japan's national legislature.

In 1990, Stormie Jones, the world's first heart-liver transplant recipient, died at a Pittsburgh hospital at age 13.

Ten years ago: Republicans went to court, seeking an order to block manual recounts from continuing in Florida's razor-thin presidential election.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush strongly rebuked congressional critics of his Iraq war policy, accusing them of being "deeply irresponsible." Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice, on a surprise

One year ago: For the first time since World War I, the leaders of Germany and France held a joint ceremony to commemorate the end of the conflict, saying it was time to celebrate their countries' reconciliation and friendship. Longtime CNN host Lou Dobbs announced he was leaving the network.

We can best thank veterans through our actions

As a reporter, I've had the privilege of interviewing dozens of veterans

I can't help but think of them on this day, because the fact is that most of them have gone to meet their maker.

Some of them I met when I was a young man in the Navy. Charlie Pennington was an old salt who took me under his wing. I will always remember his mentoring and the smell of his pipe tobacco.

Robert Laney, a fellow Missouri boy, and I struck up a friendship in the military that exists to this day. Over the years, we've managed to get our families together every so often, even though he now lives in California. Back then we had little money, but managed to have some of the best times of our lives hunting and fishing together.

I once interviewed three survivors of Pearl Harbor who lived in the same small town. It was fascinating to hear those men finally expressing their fears and their loss during World War II. The interviews, all of them, were punctuated by choked-back emotion. It was both uncomfortable and humbling all at once. Interviewing those men was like seeing the attack from three different vantage points.

My friend Joe Lundy, an old Marine sergeant who would always command the color guard on Memorial Day and Veteran's Day services, was a survivor of the Pacific theater.

Joe once talked to me about the horrors of Saipan and Tarawa.

Let me tell you, tough guys cry and there is no dishonor in it.

It was a great honor to have Joe invite me to go fishing. Nothing special about that, but it was very special to me.

I once talked with a small-statured farmer who was missing both thumbs. He had been a paratrooper/interpreter during the war. The man had five Bronze Stars and had been involved in every major battle in the European theater.

We sat at his kitchen table as he outlined his experiences in places like Sainte-Mère-Église. He was never injured, but in a jump over the Netherlands, a bullet nicked his boot and popped a hole in his chute.

He lost his thumbs in a farm machinery accident after the war.

He cried when he talked about his friends killed in the war and I felt inadequate in his presence.

I've talked with men who flew B-52s on bombing sorties into Germany.

I've talked with men who flew the gliders in advance of the invasion of Normandy and men who survived the beaches there. I've talked with men who ferried soldiers to those beaches.

I've talked with a man who was part of a POW camp rescue mission in the Philippines. Foot soldiers were sent 100 miles into Japanese territory to successfully raid the camp and bring home the prisoners. At the forefront of his memories was giving last rites to a fellow soldier in a drainage ditch as the battle raged.

I've listened to Missouri's WWII ace pilot

Randy Littge's brother talk about sitting on a London rooftop with Randy during the blitz and sharing a "bottle of hooch."

Randy Pribble

I've talked with Korean vets and Vietnam vets.

The common thread among them was a concern for the men around them and a sense of guilt that they survived. They all deeply loved their country, but most of them were drafted. They didn't want to go to war anymore than anyone else, but they did the best they could.

The word hero is much overused. Not every person who was ever in the military is a hero, but quite a few of them are.

These men are my heroes.

They are all unsung, except for the memories of family and friends and that one inadequate story in their hometown newspaper.

I think of them all on this day and say a prayer of thanks.

The trite "thank you for your service" is not appropriate for men like these.

More appropriate would be to thank them for the privileges we enjoy.

More appropriate would be to make sure that gratitude translates into political action.

The world would be a much different place without men and women like this.

Let us remember that fact when we see veterans' services on the budget-cutting agenda.

May we be constantly aware of what we are doing to young men and women whenever we commit them to yet another conflict.

And may we be equally committed to taking care of them when they come home.

Randy Pribble is the Publisher of The Pampa News.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Having just buried my dad...and dealing with death and dying for the last few days, you do a lot of thinking.

With (today) being Veterans Day, I was thinking of all the vets of World War II, the ones that made it and the ones who did not.

He and we were blessed with an extra 60 plus years that a lot of others were not. You think of what their lives would have been after we reflected on his.

I would like to thank all veterans but especially the families of those that never returned from World War II or any other war. They missed a heck of a ride.

Thanks dad and thanks to all veterans.

VETERANS DAY

NOVEMBER 11

Veterans Day

By Taylor Weinman

Representing the red white and blue
 The colors of our flag stand out proud and true.
 The white stars on blue background with red and white stripes
 Remind me of these veterans, who all risked their lives.
 Just so the people of the U.S. could all live in peace and be free
 These are the heroes that represent you and me.
 They stood up strongly, untied as one,
 And kept up the fighting until they were done.
 And although some have fallen, and lost their lives in war,
 We pray for each one of them.
 And now that their souls live on forever more,
 Above in God's hands.
 They watch over our nation,
 And give us strength to triumph over others with strong anticipation.
 So every year, when this day comes by,
 Think of all the veterans that while fighting, had to die.
 And remember that they were people
 With fire and passion embedded inside.
 They die for this country,
 So remember and honor them with pride

DeLay jury hears interview

HOUSTON (AP) — Jurors at the money laundering trial of ex-U.S. House Majority Leader Tom DeLay heard a recording Wednesday in which DeLay acknowledged he knew beforehand about a money swap authorities allege was actually a scheme to illegally funnel corporate donations to Texas GOP candidates.

But afterward, DeLay told reporters he misspoke to prosecutors during the August 2005 interview and actually didn't know about the transaction until after it had happened.

In the audio interview, DeLay repeatedly said the money swap was legal, common practice and done by both Republicans and Democrats.

Prosecutors allege DeLay and two associates — John Colyandro and Jim Ellis — illegally channeled $190,000 in corporate donations collected by DeLay's Texas political action committee through the Washington-based Republican National Committee. Under Texas law, corporate money can't go directly to political campaigns.

Prosecutors say the money helped Republicans take control of the Texas House in 2002. That majority allowed the GOP to push through a DeLay-engineered congressional redistricting plan that sent more Texas Republicans to Congress in 2004 and strengthened DeLay's political power, prosecutors said.

DeLay, who has denied wrongdoing, is charged with money laundering and conspiracy to commit money laundering. He faces up to life in prison if convicted.

In the 95-minute interview he gave to prosecutors with the Travis County District Attorney's Office before being indicted, DeLay said that Ellis told him "he was going to take $190,000" and exchange it for a similar amount with the Republican National Committee, or RNC. The corporate funds would be exchanged for money collected from individual donations, the only type of funds that can legally go to Texas candidates, and the RNC would then send this money to Texas candidates, DeLay said.

"Did (Ellis) indicate why he was telling you about that?" prosecutor Rick Reed asked.

"I think because it was — it's such a large amount of money, he wanted to make sure that — that I knew it was — that it was happening," DeLay said.

After the interview was played, DeLay said he failed to be clear when he talked to prosecutors.

"Or the way I like to put it, Texas vernacular ... inarticulate and clumsy," he said. "Even if I knew about the deal, the deal is legal. So what's the conspiracy?"

In the interview, DeLay said Ellis told him the transaction was legal. But DeLay said he didn't seek more legal advice on the matter because it was the PAC's decision. Throughout the trial, DeLay's attorneys have told jurors the ex-lawmaker didn't handle the day-to-day operations of the PAC.

In the interview, DeLay did not say when he talked with Ellis. Terry Nelson, a former RNC official, testified last week that Ellis approached him about the money swap in August or September 2002 and that Ellis wanted the funds to go to seven Texas candidates.

The trial resumes on Monday because of the Veteran's Day holiday on Thursday. The trial is also off on Fridays.

The taped interview was the most dramatic evidence prosecutors have so far presented in seven days of testimony in a case that's been mainly circumstantial.

Prosecutors have called nearly 30 witnesses and presented volumes of e-mails and other documents.

But before the taped interview, no witness or document had directly tied DeLay to the alleged scheme.

Prosecutors have implied DeLay was the driving force behind the PAC. DeLay's attorneys have stressed to jurors that DeLay was only a famous name the PAC used to raise money and the money swap conducted by the PAC was legal and didn't result in any corporate money going to Texas candidates. DeLay's attorneys have said the charges against him were politically motivated, which prosecutors deny.

The criminal charges in Texas, as well as a separate federal investigation of DeLay's ties to disgraced former lobbyist Jack Abramoff, ended his 22-year political career representing suburban Houston. The Justice Department probe into DeLay's ties to Abramoff ended without any charges filed against DeLay.

Curry was the guest speaker yesterday at the noon luncheon meeting of the Pampa Rotary Club.

"I am an animal lover," she said. "If you come to our house and stay for three days, you are neutered or spayed and you can stay longer." She added that her love for animals is reflected in the numerous dogs and cats at her home and her involvement with the PAWS group.

PAWS' mission is try to help people be aware of the community's animal problem and to help at the city-managed animal shelter.

Curry gave the Rotary a short history of developments with her group and the city shelter and gave a passionate plea to encourage responsibility among pet owners.

"The shelter staff is wonderful," she said. "They are rushed. They pick up 6-7 dogs a day and most are put down."

For that reason, the shelter itself is not a pleasant place. "The shelter is awful," she said. "There is a small group of (PAWS members) who work there everyday and I don't know how I do it. I don't know how those people do it. I don't do anything with the animals except play with them, walk them, try to find homes for them, clean cages, that kind of thing."

She added that the problem is not likely to be alleviated until people take the responsibility to spay or neuter their pets.

At times people bring baskets or crates of puppies to the shelter.

"I don't understand why people let their animals breed and then bring them to the shelter and say, 'Here, get rid of them,'" she said.

However, she added, good things happen there, too. "We had an old dog who was nine years old," she recalled. "He belonged to a woman who had lost her job. She finally found a job out of state, but she could not take the dog. His name was Amos."

"She gave Amos to a friend whose dogs beat him up. Eventually, they brought Amos to the shelter. Amos was a Lab/Shar Pei mix; funny looking dog. We looked and looked for a home for that dog. His time was way overdue, but we kept him because we felt he didn't deserve to die in a shelter."

"Finally, somebody called me with someone interested in the dog. They said the family did not have a lot of money but they are good people and they would be interested in it."

"It costs $85 for a cat at the shelter, $95 for a dog. They must be spayed or neutered. You cannot take an animal from the shelter unless it has already been spayed or neutered. We took collections and gathered up money and now Amos has a new family."

The group hopes to develop a low-income spay/neuter program for people who cannot afford it.

They plan to bring 6 or 7 dogs and a few cats to Adoption Day Saturday and continue the process of educating the public. Perhaps there will also be some new homes, as well. The animals will be on view from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Mustangs seeks to win rematch vs. improved Longhorns squad

aglover@thepampanews.com

The Wheeler Mustangs hope to repeat the results of their first game against the Vega Longhorns when they rematch in the bi-district round of playoffs 7:30 p.m. Friday at Amarillo Highland Park High School.

The Mustangs (6-4, 3-1) won the first meeting 34-0 Oct. 1 in Wheeler. Mustangs head coach Brandon Smith said they will face an improved team. "(Vega) moves the ball well," Smith said. "They are healthy. They had a couple of players out when we played them the first time. We've recovered well from our loss to Wellington. It will be a good one."

The Mustangs finished second in District 2-1A Division 2 and only lost to Wellington in district-play. The Longhorns (3-7, 1-2) finished third in District 1-1A Division 2. Vega beat Booker to qualify for the playoffs.

This is the third consecutive season the Mustangs have made playoffs. They lost in the area round last season. Vega is making their first appearance since 1989.

Smith said they will have to control the clock.

"We have to move the football and can't have any turnovers," Smith said. "We had a lot of turnovers in our last two games. We have to play good defense."

LUBBOCK COOPER
Pirates

Harvesters seek to advance eighth time in history

ANDREW GLOVER
aglover@thepampanews.com

The Pampa Harvesters enter Friday's bi-district playoff game against the Lubbock Cooper Pirates hoping to be the eighth team to advance in their school's history 7:30 p.m. at Kimbrough Memorial Stadium.

The Harvesters (3-6, 1-2) haven't advanced in the playoffs since 2004 when they beat Andrews (bi-district) and El Paso Parkland (area). That year was head coach Heath Parker's second year of his first stint with Pampa and coach said this year's team has a good opportunity.

"The thing I'm most pleased with right now is this group of kids want to do well," Parker said. "They're excited to play. We're excited for them to play. We've had a good preparation week. I believe we are going to put our best step forward Friday night."

Senior defensive back Olin Boyd said it's do or die time.

"We've had one of our better weeks in practice," Boyd said. "Everyone is motivated now that we are in the playoffs. We want to be the eighth team to advance. Everyone wants to do that very badly. We have a lot of energy and motivation to do that."

Senior linebacker and running back Trent Carter said they believe more than last year when they played Hereford.

"There's so many new components," Carter said. "We're down (3A) and playing a different team. Even though that team is still good, we're a new team that will love to give it their all."

The Pirates (7-3, 4-1) allow an average of 20 points per game but only allowed 13 points per game in district. The Harvesters allow an average of 38 points per game and allowed 33 points per game in district. Junior starting quarterback Reid Miller said Cooper's defensive lineman will be a challenge to keep blocked.

"They have a pretty good defense but they're not the best we've faced," Miller said.

Lubbock Cooper averages 34 points per game and averaged 42 points per game in district. Pampa averages 20 points per game and averaged 23 points in district. Parker said they have some good speed.

"Their running back is really fast," Parker said. "He's faster than anyone we got."

The Harvesters will have some added depth as they have called up some of their junior varsity and freshman players. Parker said it will be a big boost Friday.

"Some of them will get to see the field Friday," Parker said. "It will certainly add a shot in the arm for our team. More importantly the added number of bodies in practice and having more scout team reps against us and helping us prepare has been super for us."

Boyd said stopping the Pirates running game will be key.

"We are going to have to go out with a lot of energy

Trent Carter rushes through a hole in practice. The Harvesters start the playoffs 7:30 p.m. Friday against the Lubbock Cooper Pirates at Kimbrough Memorial Stadium. If Pampa wins this will be the eighth team to advance. The last team to advance was in 2004 in Heath Parker's first stint as coach.

and stay in the whole game," Boyd said. "Never back down and think we are going to win the game. We just got to finish strong."

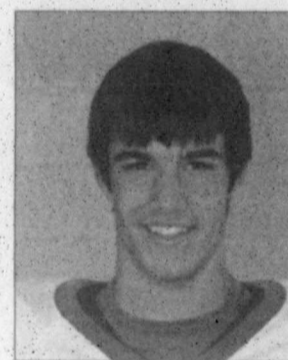

Miller said the offense needs to get in a rhythm. "We need to get the outside running game going and stretch the defense," Miller said.

Parker said it will be interesting how both teams handle the elements.

"They are forecasting the weather to be a blue-northern condition," Parker said. "Probably a strong north wind. That's something we will be excited about. As an underdog we will remain excited about that and handle it mentally and physically."

Keep an eye on: Reid Miller Jr., QB

Friday will be Miller's first start in a playoff game. Miller was successful in his start against Perryton that clinched a playoff spot. Let's see how the junior quarterback handles the playoff pressure.

Phone companies to stop printing White Pages books

MICHAEL FELBERBAUM
AP Business Writer

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — What's black and white and read all over? Not the white pages, which is why regulators have begun granting telecommunications companies the go-ahead to stop mass-printing residential phone books, a musty fixture of Americans' kitchen counters, refrigerator tops and junk drawers.

In the past month alone, New York, Florida and Pennsylvania approved Verizon Communications Inc.'s request to quit distributing residential white pages. Residents in Virginia have until Nov. 19 to provide comments on a similar request pending with state regulators.

Telephone companies argue that most consumers now check the Internet rather than flip through pages when they want to reach out and touch someone.

"Anybody who doesn't have access to some kind of online way to look things up now is probably too old to be able to read the print in the white pages anyway," joked Robert Thompson, a pop culture professor at Syracuse University.

Phone companies note that eliminating residential white pages would reduce environmental impact by using less paper and ink. It also can't hurt their bottom lines to cut out the cost of a service that rarely gets used and generates little beyond nostalgia.

The first telephone directory was issued in February 1878 — a single page that covered 50 customers in New Haven, Conn. That sheet grew into a book that became virtually a household appliance, listing numbers for neighbors, friends and colleagues, not to mention countless potential victims of prank calls.

Fewer people rely on paper directories for a variety of reasons: more people rely solely on cell phones, whose numbers typically aren't included in the listings; more listings are available online; and mobile phones and caller

ID systems on land lines can store a large number of frequently called numbers.

The number of traditional land lines has been declining for the better part of the decade, and now are being disconnected at a rate of nearly 10 percent each year, according to company financial reports.

And a survey conducted for SuperMedia Inc. by Gallup shows that between 2005 and 2008, the percentage of households relying on stand-alone residential white pages fell from 25 percent to 11 percent. Dallas-based SuperMedia, which publishes Verizon's telephone directories, has instead focused on its yellow pages and paid advertising listings, and their online equivalents.

Unlike the residential white pages, the business directories printed on yellow pages are doing fine, at least according to the Yellow Pages Association. The industry trade group claims more than half the people in the U.S. still let their fingers do the walking every month, and that 550 million residential and business directories are still printed every year.

As for the white pages, Steve Keschl can attest to the declining interest. As a doorman at an Upper East Side condo building since 1960, the 84-year-old has watched tenants' fading reaction to the annual delivery of New York City's white pages book FC6 which incidentally weighs in around 3 pounds, 9 ounces, or a little more than a dozen iPhones.

These days, the books "sit here pretty long," said Keschl, who added that even he rarely uses the directory anymore. "Sometimes they take them, sometimes they don't."

While New York and other cities still have stand-alone white pages, many of the thousands of phone directories across the country include residential white pages, yellow business listings and blue government pages. Where they no longer have to print the white pages, publishers will simply slim down their combined books.

Verizon and AT&T Inc. — the two largest land line players — and others have requested exemptions from state requirements to distribute residential phone books in paper form. The directories would be available on the Internet, printed upon request or provided on CD.

"You probably have a better chance of finding a name quicker if you can just search for it in a database than try to look it up in the white pages," said Link Hoewing, Verizon's vice president of Internet and technology policy.

Since 2007, states that have granted permission to quit printing residential listings or that have requests pending include: Alabama, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Texas, Virginia and Wisconsin.

New York-based Verizon's plan is to seek regulatory approval in all 12 states where it operates land line telephone service. In total, the savings could top 17,000 tons of paper annually throughout Verizon's service areas, the company said.

The company and its printer, which uses the Verizon brand name in lieu of payment for publishing the white pages, would not provide any estimates on the cost of printing the directories or how much money would be saved by discontinuing them.

Regulators in New York approved Verizon's request Oct. 14. There, the company estimates it will save about 3,575 tons of paper per year and conserve the energy associated with printing, binding and distributing the directories. The company's August request with Virginia regulators is estimated to save about 1,640 tons of paper annually.

Verizon plans to continue to deliver directories that contain business and governmental listings along with the consumer guide information provided in white pages directories, but the residential listings would only be available by request.

Dallas-based AT&T did not respond to repeated messages from The Associated Press seeking comment for this story.

According to filings with state regulators, AT&T said in places where it has been permitted to provide the white pages on demand, only about 2 percent of customers have requested a copy.

The residential phone book "no longer provides the same utility it once did," AT&T told Missouri regulators, who approved the company's petition for the state's larger metropolitan areas. "The vast majority of customers neither need nor use these often quite large, bound paper directories."

If the white pages are nearing their end, then Emily Goodmann hopes the directories would be archived for historical, genealogical or sociological purposes.

The telephone directory stands as the original sort of information network that not only worked as kind of a social network in a sense, but it served as one of the first information resources, said Goodmann, a doctoral student at Northwestern University who is writing her dissertation on the history of phone books as information technology. "It's sort of heartbreaking ... even though these books are essentially made to be destroyed."

Palin appears with Perry

DALLAS (AP) Sarah Palin attacked President Barack Obama on Wednesday for his support of abortion rights and for the federal health care overhaul as the former Alaska governor appeared in Texas with another tea party favorite, Gov. Rick Perry.

Palin described Obama as "the most pro-abortion president to occupy the White House" at the Dallas event, which was sponsored by a nonprofit organization that promotes an anti-abortion message. The 2008 Republican vice-presidential nominee also said the federal health care law is the "mother of all unfunded mandates" and means federal funding will go toward abortions.

The law walled off federal funds from being used for the procedure, and an executive order signed by Obama just before it passed reaffirmed existing prohibitions on government-financed abortion, but anti-abortion activists argue that neither would actually prevent tax money from being used.

The law is expected to expand coverage to 32 million Americans who now are uninsured. It asks states to build online insurance exchanges, when most U.S. residents will be required to carry health insurance. It also greatly expands the Medicaid program for the poor.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My adult son committed suicide. He was an alcoholic with many problems. Every year around the time of his death I become very depressed and emotional. Is this normal? Members of my family think I should "get over it." — EMOTIONAL MOM IN THE SOUTHWEST

DEAR EMOTIONAL MOM: The members of your family are mistaken. Your feelings are perfectly normal.

The problem of suicide in America is no secret. It has been in the headlines repeatedly, and more than 30,000 people take their lives annually. Because of the shame and stigma that are unfortunately still attached to suicide, many people are left to suffer in silence.

According to the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention (AFSP), more than 80 percent of us will lose someone to suicide at some point during our lives. This is why the organization sponsors National Survivors of Suicide Day every year on the Saturday before Thanksgiving. (This year it's November 20.) It's a day when surviving parents, children, siblings, spouses and friends gather at locations from Nashville to Nepal and take comfort in being with others who know what it means to lose a loved one to suicide.

Readers, to find out more information, visit the foundation's website at www.AFSP.org. It lists many excellent resources including a book I especially like titled, "Why Suicide?" by Eric Marcus. Published by Harper One, it's compassionate, informative, heartfelt and a must-read for anyone whose life has been touched by suicide.

DEAR ABBY: I relocated to live with "Zack," my boyfriend of one year. Now that I'm here I'm afraid that I adore him more than I am adored. I'm not the clingy type, but Zack never cuddles. Sex is not discussed — and never "my" way.

Most things are like that. He isn't abusive — just uncompromising, lazy and selfish. To make matters worse, we share the house with a family member of his who has the same spoiled teenager attitude.

I'm the one who cooks, cleans, shovels snow, takes care of the dog and has the guts to call the landlord about issues. I have asked Zack to help and to ask for help from his relative. He excuses his relative from responsibility and will help me with that one request — at that moment only. They have no regular chores. I have negotiated with the bathroom wastebasket — it overflowed for weeks because I didn't empty it.

I am growing resentful and angry. If I say anything, Zack rolls his eyes at me like I'm an idiot and asks me how I come up with all the "stuff" I gripe about. I feel like I'm the parent of two teenagers with overdeveloped ideas of entitlement, even though we all have an equal stake in this house.

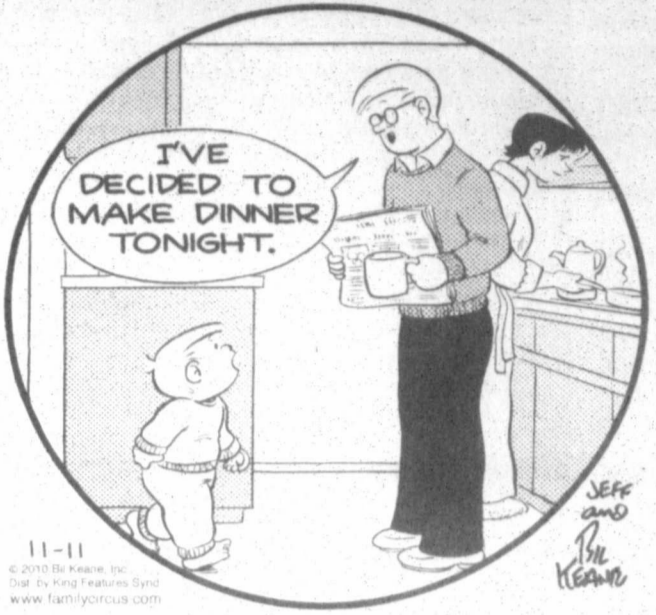

Is there a different approach I can use, or should I do what I have been considering for a while — throw in the towel and move out? — READY TO BAIL IN SIOUX FALLS, S.D.

DEAR READY TO BAIL: Go ahead and bail. Zack and his relative are treating you like an unpaid housemaid and no one's girlfriend. The longer you tolerate this situation, the longer it will continue. So start packing. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose.

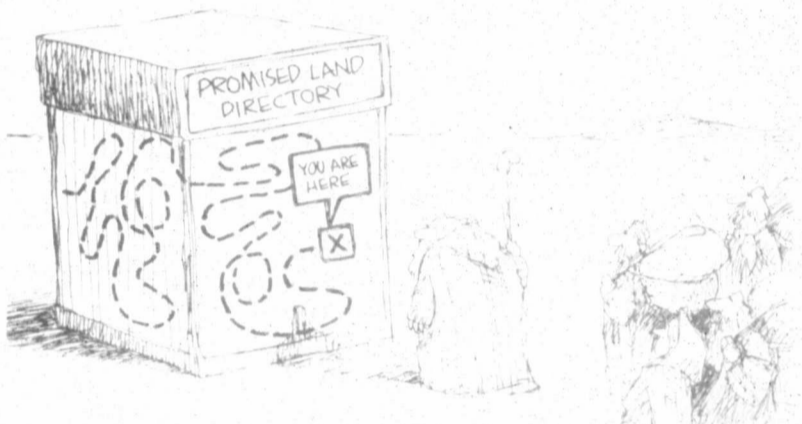

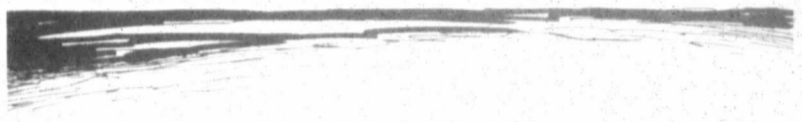

DEAR VETERANS: Today is Veteran's Day and your numbers are growing. Please allow me to take this opportunity to thank each and every one of you — as well as those men and women who are still on active duty — for your service to our nation. I salute you.

daily horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Nov. 12, 2010:
 This year, you often feel an innate tension between your personal and professional commitments. The situation isn't one of a juggling act but rather of incorporating different elements of your life. Note a tendency not to want to be left alone. Deal with your feelings in these various situations, and free yourself up. If you are single, you could meet someone who might be emotionally unavailable. Time is always an ally. Date and get to know a potential significant other for at least a year before making any decisions. If you are attached, the two of you might invest more time in your home. This downtime together seals the bond as you let stress go. AQUARIUS can try your patience.
The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
  Don't think it's just a string of ordinary meetings. Some will prove to be much more important. Mobilize support, make sure everyone with a common interest is on the same page. Get expert opinions if you feel you need them. Tonight: Get together with friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
  Your instincts tell you which way to go with a partner or close friend. The two of you become far more powerful as a couple, achieving a common goal. Relate directly with individuals. Someone might have reason to get angry. Tonight: Don't push too hard. Get some R and R.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
  You easily might feel the need to find an expert in order to get past a situation that could be bothersome. You might actually get too much advice for your taste. Put a situation on hold until you have a firmer grip on which path to follow. Tonight: Surround yourself with good music and people.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
  Listen to what is happening behind the scenes. How you deal with someone could change radically. You are coming from an anchored, grounded point of view. Open up to new opportunities that a key associate presents. Tonight: Stay centered.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
  Others keep presenting alternatives. You might feel overwhelmed and not sure which is the best way to go. A brainstorming session with friends could be one of many. A child does whatever he or she needs to in order to get your attention. Tonight: Listen to what others share.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
  Remain clear about your objectives, and you might want to take some time to ground yourself before deciding. With weekend tradewinds heading in your direction, postpone any landmark decisions. Tonight: Happily heading home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
  You always seem to have the right answers at the right time. Know what is too much and what you would like to do. Keep communication flowing. You could be delighted by an interesting tidbit. Tonight: Let the games begin.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
  Honor a family member or personal need. Know when to pull back and do some reflecting. You might not want to make a major purchase or accept an unexpected expense, but you see no way around it. Tonight: Mosey on home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
  No one doubts your intentions, and you certainly put your best foot forward. Greet the unusually hectic pace with a smile knowing it is Friday. Meetings could go quite long, and one could turn into a happening. Tonight: Out and about.

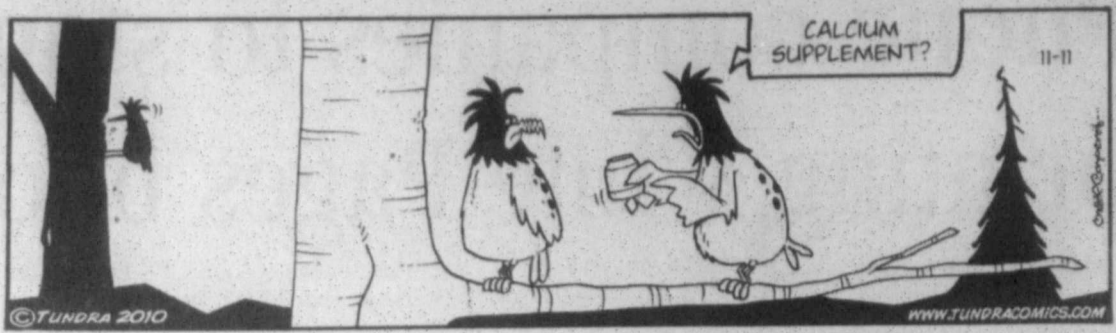

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
  Your instincts guide you well with a money matter. You know what you are doing and why. Don't suppress your anger if you can. Sometimes it comes out in an inappropriate manner. Stay on top of your game. Tonight: Your treat.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
  Your energy reminds everyone that the border between workweek and weekend is about to be crossed. Meetings might be intense with sharp words here and there, yet the letting go of ideas happens. Tonight: Blaze a trail into the night.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
  You might need to pull back a little more than usual. Slow down some, become more reflective and realize what you are dealing with. Your instincts guide you with a supervisor, boss or authority figure. Follow this person. Tonight: Say "yes."
