Oil drops below $86 a barrel as rally cools

NEW YORK (AP) — A two-week rally in oil prices was put on hold Friday on concerns that China would take steps to cool off its economy.

China, the largest energy consumer in the world, is expected to increase oil consumption by 400,000 barrels per day in 2011 and drive world oil demand for years to come. But analysts say that appetite for crude could be reduced if Beijing moves to control economic growth after inflation hit a 25-month high in October.

Benchmark oil for December delivery dropped $2.28, or 2.6 percent, to $85.53 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

"You've seen a push all week to get this market moving higher, but we're kind of stalling right now," oil trader and analyst Stephen Schork said.

Schork said oil will continue to be heavily influenced by the U.S. dollar. Oil is priced in dollars, and it tends to move opposite the dollar in commodities markets. When the dollar falls, for example, investors look to park their money in safer investments like energy commodities, and this pushes the price of oil higher.

That's been the case as the Federal Reserve takes steps to stimulate the U.S. economy. The Fed is pumping $600 billion into a bond-buying program, effectively reducing already low interest rates. Oil prices jumped more than $14 per barrel, nearly 20 percent, since September, when the Fed first indicated that it would make such a move.

As oil prices increased, they pushed retail gasoline prices higher as well. Many East Coast cities are now seeing pump prices above $3 per gallon.

The national average for regular unleaded gas increased more than a penny overnight to $2.876 a gallon, according to auto club AAA. Wright Express and Oil Price Information Service. A gallon of regular unleaded is 5.6 cents more expensive than it was last month and 22.6 cents higher than it was last year.

AFTERNOON RUSH Victory could boost gas drilling

Hereford man killed in crash

MILFORD, Iowa (AP) - A Texas businessman has died after crashing a kit airplane near Milford in northwestern Iowa.

The Star Tribune of Minneapolis reports aviation officials identified the man as 67-year-old Geary Gearn of Hereford, Texas. The Iowa State Patrol tells KTIV-TV the single-engine plane crashed Wednesday afternoon in southern Dickinson County.

Gearn has had the cattle feed mill business Gearn Industries Inc. for about 40 years. Office manager Deena Richards says Gearn took a commercial flight to Minnesota to pick up the plane. It was there for maintenance.

Richards says Gearn intended to fly about 1,000 miles from Air Lake Airport in Lakeville, Minn., to Texas. The plane was a Swearingen SX300. Federal authorities are investigating the crash.

Crash shuts down I-30 in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) - Six people are hurt after a chain of collisions on the Interstate 30 bridge over the Trinity River west of downtown Dallas.

The sequence began when a tractor-trailer rig slammed into the rear of a cement truck. The impact flipped the cement truck over the center barrier and crashing into an oncoming 18-wheeler and four passenger vehicles.

Dallas County sheriff's spokeswoman Kim Leach says the Thursday afternoon crash shut down the vital Dallas freeway interstate in both directions. She didn't expect it to reopen till after rush hour.

Leach says the injured were in the passenger vehicles. Six were taken to Dallas hospitals, two in critical condition.

She said they are still investigating what caused the collision.

Porpoises rescued Dick Van Dyke

LONDON (AP) — On screen, Dick Van Dyke has been rescued from untimely death by flying cars and magical nannies.

Off screen, the longtime television and movie actor apparently had to rely on the help of a pod of porpoises after apparently dozing off aboard his surfboard.

"I'm not kidding," he said to reporters as he recounted the bizarre incident.

The ordeal, he according to the 84-year-old Van Dyke, occurred during a trip to his local beach.

"I woke up out of sight of land," Van Dyke said. "I started paddling with the swells and I started seeing fins swimming around me and I thought 'I'm dead!'"

"They turned out to be porpoises," he continued. "And they pushed me all the way to shore."

70 whooping cranes reach Texas

AUSTWELL (AP) - At least 70 endangered whooping cranes have flown from Canada to a refuge in Texas.

Tom Stehn with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Services says the ground survey was done at the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge. Stehn on Thursday also said that last week's cold snap apparently led more whooping cranes to head south.

The Victoria Advocate reports six of 10 birds fitted with radio transmitters, for tracking, have arrived in Texas.

Stehn says there were 263 birds in the flock when they migrated north last spring. Biologists expect 285 to 290 cranes this fall in Texas.

The flock summers in Wood Buffalo National Park in the Northwest Territories of Canada. Stehn says there was plenty of water this year at the breeding grounds, meaning improved conditions for survival.

UNT turbine plans proceed

DENTON (AP) -The Mean Green is going greener. University of North Texas regents on Thursday approved hiring an architect or engineer and the budget for a campus wind turbine project.

The turbines are planned at Mean Green Village, which is part of the school's football stadium project.

The Denton Record-Chronicle reports the plan is for three 125-foot-tall wind turbines. The devices will help provide electricity for the stadium, which is under construction and scheduled to be ready for next season.

The State Energy Conservation Office has offered a $2 million grant. UNT administrators say a feasibility study, done this year, produced positive results.

Vice Chancellor Richard Escalante says the project is expected to provide savings for the school.

Stadium short $5M payment

HOUSTON (AP) - The Harris County-Houston Sports Authority, for the first time, is turning to its $56 million reserve account to make a debt payment on Reliant Stadium.

The Houston Chronicle reported Friday that the authority is short $5 million on a payment due this week on the venue, which is home to the Houston Texans.

The debt payments surged in 2009 after the downgrade of its bond insurer and then a bank's demand that the authority pay off, in five years, debt that had been due by 2030.

Sports Authority chairman J. Kent Friedman says it's a short-term "cash-flow crunch" and he's not concerned. The authority must pay $12 million twice a year to cover payments on $125 million in variable rate bonds. This month's installment is the third of 10 inflated payments.

Man forced to eat own beard

LAWRENCEBURG, Ky. -- A central Kentucky man said he's waiting for justice to be served after two men shaved his beard, then made him eat it.

Harvey Westmoreland and his brother got into a fight with James Hill and Troy Holt in May. The dispute was over a tractor Westmoreland was trying to sell to one of the men.

Westmoreland said the men felt like they were being ripped off and that's when the fight started.

"Troy offered to buy it from me for $250 dollars. I paid twenty bucks for it. He thought I was trying to cheat him," Westmoreland told WLEX-TV. "One thing led to another, and before I knew it, there were knives and guns and everything just went haywire."

"(Then) they cut my beard and forced me to eat it," he said.

Hill and Holt pleaded guilty. It's expected they'll be fined and sentenced to supervised diversion.

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) - The Republicans' big election victories in Pennsylvania and on Capitol Hill could be Christmas-come-early for the drilling companies that are rushing to exploit the Marcellus Shale, the biggest known deposit of natural gas in the nation.

Republican Gov.-elect Tom Corbett is seen as a lot friendlier toward the industry than outgoing Democrat Ed Rendell, who has clashed with natural gas companies over both taxes and tougher new clean-water regulations.

Also, the GOP takeover of the U.S. House will almost surely doom efforts in Congress to impose federal regulation over gas drilling.

Among many Republicans, there is elation. GOP strategist Karl Rove told participants in an oil and gas industry conference in Pittsburgh last week that they can now expect "a period of sensible regulations."

"As a signal, is it good? Yes," said a more cautious-sounding William Garner, a Houston lawyer and former investment banker who specializes in the natural gas industry. "But will it make a difference? Time will tell."

Among other things, the incoming governor opposes any attempt to slap a gas-extraction tax on the industry. Pennsylvania is the largest gas-drilling state without such a tax, and Rendell tried and failed to persuade the Legislature to approve one. Corbett has also said he will lift Rendell's executive order preventing the issuing of any more drilling leases in state forests.

A drilling boom has been under way since 2008 in the Marcellus Shale, a vast underground geologic formation that extends from West Virginia and eastern Ohio through Pennsylvania into southern New York. Some geologists estimate it could yield enough natural gas to supply the entire East Coast for 50 years.

Its huge commercial potential was underscored earlier this week when oil giant Chevron struck a $4.3 billion deal to buy Atlas Energy, a major Marcellus Shale driller.

Combining a new process of horizontal drilling with a technique known as hydraulic fracturing, or fracking, drillers are unlocking vast deposits there and in other formations around the U.S. such as the Barnett Shale in Texas - a boom that could ensure cheap and plentiful natural gas for many years to come for homeowners, factories and power plants.

The drilling frenzy in the Marcellus Shale is also credited with enriching landowners and pumping new life into trucking companies, short-line railroads, quarries and steel-pipe makers, as well as the restaurants and hotels hosting out-of-state drilling crews. An industry-financed study by Penn State projected that the boom would generate tens of thousands of jobs and hundreds of millions of dollars in state and local taxes in the coming years.

However, the use of fracking - in which millions of gallons of water, sand and toxic chemicals are injected into each well to break apart the shale and release trapped gas - is raising pollution concerns across the Northeast.

While the industry maintains that fracking has been proved safe over the decades, homeowners are coming forward with tales of wells producing brown, foul-smelling water or water polluted with methane and chemicals.

In the northeastern Pennsylvania town of Dimock, a hotspot of Marcellus Shale exploration, some residents no longer use their polluted well water and can light their taps on fire because of methane they say seeped into their wells because of drilling.

The Rendell administration intends to bill Houston-based Cabot Oil & Gas Corp. the $12 million cost of installing a water line to serve 14 families in Dimock. Cabot denies the methane is connected to its drilling.

The gas drilling business got what it wanted in the election of Corbett, who received nearly $1 million in donations from the industry. Among his first actions this week was to name Christine Toretta, a national GOP committeewoman and owner of a Pennsylvania drilling company, as co-chair of his transition team.

Without giving specifics, Corbett on Wednesday promised a "reasonable" regulatory stand that protects the environment. He will be able to appoint a new head of the Department of Environmental Protection, which under Rendell has tried to aggressively deal with the problems brought by the gas rush.

"I look at this as an industry that's going to be here long after all of us in the room are gone," Corbett said. "It is going to be a great industry and we need to develop it properly. We need to develop it protecting the environment and growing jobs in Pennsylvania."

Congress exempted fracking from federal clean water regulations in 2005, but some lawmakers have been pushing to undo that.

Sen. Bob Casey, D-Pa., sponsor of a measure that would subject fracking to regulation by the Environmental Protection Agency, predicts a bleaker landscape now for his bill.

"If anything, there are more votes against it," he said Tuesday.

Whether events ultimately unfold to the industry's liking remains to be seen.

The election doesn't affect a web of state and federal regulatory bodies that could stand in the way of drilling, industry analysts said. The EPA, for example, could try to regulate fracking without congressional approval.

Rolf Hanson of the Associated Petroleum Industries of Pennsylvania, an industry lobbying group, said: "I for sure don't see this as, 'All of a sudden things are going to be rosy for the industry and we're going to get a free pass.'"

Ground broken on Xcel addition

AMARILLO - Xcel Energy has broken ground on a planned addition to the Jones Generating Station near Lubbock, to accommodate a growth in regional power demand.

In April, Xcel Energy's Amarillo-based subsidiary, Southwestern Public Service Company (SPS), sought permission from the Public Utility Commission of Texas to add a third unit to Jones Station that would be operational by the summer of 2012.

A rebounding regional economy, which will lead to greater demand for electricity in 2011, prompted Xcel Energy to move the expansion up by one year.

"Our regional oil and gas industries have expanded even as the national economy slumped, and we know that these and other industries are planning more development and more jobs over the next few years," said Riley Hill, president and CEO of Southwestern Public Service Company, an Xcel Energy company.

"We need to be prepared to meet this accelerated growth with an expedited construction schedule of our own."

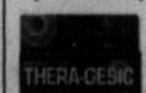

Jones Station, located southeast of Lubbock, is a natural gas-fueled, steam-electric generating station with two operating units - Jones Unit 1 completed in 1971 and Jones Unit 2 completed in 1974.

The plant currently has a generating capacity of 486 megawatts. The new unit will be a Siemens Energy gas combustion turbine with a summer capacity rating of approximately 168 megawatts - enough to power more than 126,000 typical homes in this region. Total project cost is approximately $107 million.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 12, 1942, the World War II naval Battle of Guadalcanal began. (The Allies ended up winning a major victory over the Japanese.)

On this date:

In 1815, American suffragist Elizabeth Cady Stanton was born in Johnstown, N.Y.

In 1908, Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun was born in Nashville, Ill.

Bush and Al Gore previewed their legal strategies, with Democrats justifying painstaking recounts and Republicans saying the practice could result in political "mischief" and human error.

Five years ago: A U.S.-backed summit in Bahrain meant to promote political freedom and economic change in the Middle East ended without agreement, a blow to President George W. Bush's goals for the troubled region.

One year ago: Army psychiatrist Maj. Nidal Malik Hasan was charged with 13 counts of premeditated murder in the Fort Hood, Texas massacre.

Thought for Today: "It's all right to have a train of thoughts, if you have a terminal." - Richard R. Bowker, American publisher (1848-1933)

"The librarian must be a liberal. She put President Bush's new book in Fiction."

Will the 'real' Pampa please stand up?

Will the REAL Pampa please stand up...

I was visiting with a friend—a "new" Pampian—this week and the conversation turned to the vandalism of the sets, tools, and props for the upcoming PHS Choir Musical, "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers."

"What's the deal with that?" she said. "I didn't think Pampa was like that."

I told her that Kelly McElwain, mother of Evan, who plays Gideon, the seventh of the seven brothers, had told me how the community had rallied for the cause, contributing money, materials, and time to see that the show would go on as scheduled.

"THAT'S the REAL Pampa!" I told her.

Many thanks to Kelly for letting me know of the situation. She was pretty down when she called me Monday morning to inform me of the destruction. There were no funds to buy more materials, and only ten days until the first performance. It looked like the only options were to postpone the show or cancel altogether. Neither prospect was very inviting. Production rights to performances are contracted for specific dates, and the MK Brown Building gets pretty booked during the holidays, so postponement was not simply picking other days. Besides, the performers begin rehearsal with a specific date in mind and if that changes, it can throw off the "energy."

I was pretty disheartened myself, but I agreed to send out an email blast to our mailing list and see what happened. I also sent one to our Sunday School Class, called a few folks, and mentioned it at Men's Breakfast the next day. Others were making calls, as well. Within a few hours the community had responded overwhelmingly and the show WILL go on next week as planned, Thursday and Saturday at 8:00 pm and a Sunday matinee at 2:30.

"Cast Mom Kelly" speaks...or rather, writes.

I got an email from Kelly later in the week, which stated, in part:

"Most of the main cast are in Show Choir and have the personalities and voices to put on a great show. Not demically, taking the most advanced classes offered.

"Our work is almost complete. Evan and Trevor (McVay) came up tonight when they got home from the volleyball game and were SO EXCITED. I think our kids have learned a valuable lesson in what can be done when you get a caring group of people together!"

One of the "problems" of Pampa is that we don't seem to know what we have here. I have seen lots of musicals performed by high schools, community colleges, universities, and professional groups and I was absolutely blown away last year when I attended "42nd Street". I looked around at the crowd and figured that almost all of those attending were relatives of the performers. That's a little frustrating, because I'll bet you won't see a finer presentation within 500 miles—especially for the price! Kudos to the kids, the parents, the supporters, and the community. And also director Fred Mays. That guy is so smart and talented he MUST have graduated from West Texas!

Good Eats

We were sad to hear that Peggy's Place on the Borger Hiway closed, but like a phoenix, in its place has risen "The Cast Iron Kitchen". The booths have been replaced with tables, there is tile on the floor, and smoking is not permitted. We stopped in for breakfast last Sunday. The service was good, the prices were reasonable, and the food was delicious!

Yum Yum (formerly Thai Noodle--between the Plaza and Hastings in the Coronado Center) is open under new ownership and management. Reports are that diners order off the menu—no buffet. I haven't had the chance to try it yet, but I plan to next week. Maybe I'll see you there.

I DID eat at Dyer's this week. They have a terrific light lunch menu which is perfect for the midday meal. (Of course, you can get the regular portions, as usual.)

What if...

...Patsy Pierce and Linda Lantz opened up an acupuncture clinic called "Pierce and Lantz"?

...Terry Gamblin and Jim Hall had a casino called "Gamblin-Hall"?

Joe Weaver is the Executive Director of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

G20 refuses to back U.S. push on China

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Leaders of 20 major economies on Friday refused to back a U.S. push to make China boost its currency's value, keeping alive a dispute that raises fears of a global trade war amid criticism that cheap Chinese exports are costing American jobs.

A joint statement issued by the leaders including President Barack Obama and China's Hu Jintao tried to recreate the unity that was evident when the Group of 20 rich and developing nations held its first summit two years ago during the global financial meltdown.

But deep divisions, especially over the U.S.-China currency dispute, left G-20 officials negotiating all night to draft a watered-down statement for the leaders to endorse.

"Instead of hitting home runs sometimes we're gonna hit singles. But they're really important singles," Obama told a news conference after the summit.

Other leaders also tried to portray the summit as a success, pointing to their pledges to fight protectionism and develop guidelines next year that will measure the imbalances between trade surplus and trade deficit countries.

The G-20's failure to adopt the U.S. stand has undermined Washington's reduced influence on the international stage, especially on economic matters. In another setback, Obama also failed to conclude a free trade agreement this week with South Korea.

Habitat

Price said that the monthly income a family spends on housing is also considered in determination of need.

"You will be required to openly and fully discuss your financial situation with Habitat personnel," she said.

Families with an annual income between 30 percent and 50 percent of the median income for Gray County will be considered for the program.

Habitat for Humanity International brings families and communities in need together with volunteers and resources to build affordable housing, she said.

The Pampa and Gray County Habitat for works with people of all faiths and races to develop communities for people in need by building and renovating houses and creating homeownership opportunities, Price said.

The Pampa organization is part of Habitat for Humanity International, a nonprofit, ecumenical Christian housing ministry that seeks to eliminate poverty housing and homelessness and make decent shelter a matter of conscience and action, she said.

For further information, Price can be reached at 898-2250.

Sets

would be an impossible task turned out to take just four evenings, thanks to a big helping hand from the community.

"How can we say 'thank you'?" said Kelly. "It's been great. We've had a lot of help. We've had several people come in and pitch in, and it looks beautiful. Tam Bailey (who has built and painted scenery for many years) came in and was a lot of help... It's incredible."

Tom estimated that the original sets took close to 300 man-hours to build. Now, he said, thanks to the help of everyone involved, the sets were not only built in a fraction of that time, but he's convinced that they are superior to the originals.

"Our final product now for the kids is better than what we had before," he said. "It's unbelievable."

"What's the right word to say? I'm humbled that everyone came together like this. I'm thrilled to see what the final product is. It's overwhelming, I think. That's probably the right word."

"It looks 10 times better than what we had begun with," added Kelly. "On Monday morning, we all sat down after all the shock and said, 'It's not going to be as good, but at least it will be something.'"

"Well, we were wrong. It's better, and that's because of everyone who pitched in. Some of the kids (in the show) came up yesterday and when they saw it, they were so excited. They felt that it was going to be a real play."

That's the most satisfying part of the whole thing, said Kelly.

"I grew up here. I love this town. To me, (everyone coming together) just says that this town is full of wonderful, caring, loving people who will do what needs to be done when someone needs help. For the kids to see that, that's great. That's a great lesson to learn. What better thing can you teach our teenagers?"

"Seven Brides for Seven Brothers" is directed by Brianna Bailey and Fred Mays. The show runs on Thursday at 8 p.m., Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

"(When) we started out, we didn't have a problem with volleyball," Eubank said. "We couldn't get along. We have come a long way. I just hope the girls learn from this loss."

Head coach Libby Garza said they improved a lot and is excited about the future.

"This feeling after a loss will help push them in the offseason," Garza said. "They are going to remember this. These girls don't forget. They overcame Canyon at the beginning of the year... We're definitely coming back with a lot and be a force to be reckoned with next year."

Garza said she and the team will miss Eubank's leadership but is looking forward to next year with junior Maddie Fatheree stepping into Eubank's shoes.

"She's a huge part of this program and this team," Garza said. "Maddie Fatheree is hopefully going to step up into this position and fill her own shoes and blossom into a good setter. She has the capability to do that and will have a team full of seniors to help lead her."

Junior McKinlee Stokes said she excited that everyone is returning and hopes they can build off this season.

"It's sad that we will lose Taryn," Stokes said. "It's nice that we will have so many seniors. This experience is definitely going to help us next year because we will be in the same position."

Garza has already set the goals for the 2011 season.

"Make your hotel reservation for San Marcos next year because we are going to be there," Garza said.

Add stained glass panel to an entry door

Dear Pat: Our raised panel wood front door is in good condition, but I would like to install a stained glass window in it for more light. Is it possible to add a large window in the door? — Lorna G.

Dear Lorna: Adding decorative glass to your front door can make a dramatic improvement to your home and provide additional natural light. If your door faces any direction other than north, the stained glass will be beautiful when the sun shines through it.

Installing glass in place of one or several panels in a wood door is not a difficult project. It just requires patience and a steady hand. Most of the cutting will be done with a circular saw (fine-toothed blade), but a small amount of hand sawing or use of a chisel will be required.

First, measure the size of the opening you plan to cut. Measure from the solid edge of the rail and stile where the taper for the panel begins. Have your glass sections made to dimensions one-quarter inch smaller than the opening to provide one-eighth-inch clearance all around.

For energy efficiency and security, it will probably be best to install a thin, clear double-pane insulated panel first with the stained glass indoors. This will also protect the stained glass from possible damage and the weather.

You should be able to find a glass fabricator in the Yellow Pages who can make both the stained glass and insulated glass panels for you.

Once the glass panels have arrived at your house, you can begin the panel removal process. The ideal removal method is to saw along the indoor edge of the rails and stile to a shallow depth, about three-fourths inch. You will have to use a wood chisel or hand saw to finish-cut the corners.

You want to saw just deep enough to remove the indoor tapered edge and the panel, but not the outdoor edge. The glass panels will rest against the outdoor edge so the trim around the glass will still match the other panels.

HOME HOW-TO

Brush some sealer or primer on the bare wood. When dry, lay a fine bead of silicon caulk along the edge of the opening and place the insulated glass panel into it. Place several small lumps of silicone caulk on the edge of the insulated panel and place the stained glass against it.

Don't place a continuous bead of caulk between the insulated glass and the stained glass panels. This would make it difficult to remove the stained glass panel at a later time and it may trap moisture in between them. In colder climates, this could result in fogging between the panes.

Purchase some screen-type trim molding to finish off the indoor side of the glass. You should be able to find some that resembles the other panel trim profiles. Use a miter box to cut 45-degree angles and nail the trim in place over the stained glass. Be careful when using the hammer near the stained glass.

Send your questions to Here's How, 6906 Royalgreen Dr., Cincinnati, OH 45244 or visit www.dulley.com.

HOME HOW-TO

Stained Glass

A stained glass entryway door can make a huge difference in your home's appearance. An existing wooden door with frame and panel construction can be customized by removing the panel and installing a glass insert.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Last year for Thanksgiving, I made a special effort to get the entire family together for the traditional meal. All 13 of us met at my mother's home and everyone was to bring a dish or two to share.

One of my brothers has two college-age daughters. Both are vegan, and he insisted that all the dishes we brought be vegan! I did it, but I resented it because I felt that two out of 13 people should not decide the menu. If they wanted vegan dishes, they should bring something for themselves, while the rest of us brought what we wanted.

My brother and nieces are now asking what we're doing this year for Thanksgiving. Frankly, I don't want to go through that again. Am I wrong in thinking everyone should not bend over backward for the vegan meal? I don't mind some of the menu accommodating them, but I don't think the whole dinner should be altered. — TURKEY EATER IN TEXAS

DEAR TURKEY EATER: Neither do I. And the response you should give your brother (and his daughters) is that you'll be serving a traditional Thanksgiving dinner this year, so they can either bring something they will enjoy or make other plans.

DEAR ABBY: I read your column every day and find it interesting and useful. Many of the writers have the same emotions and problems as I do. I'm always pleased to see that I am not too far off.

I am a woman who married for the second time after 54 years of marriage. I was 71 and had been a widow for only one year. I had married my late husband at 16, and thought I could not live alone.

Do you have any words of wisdom for someone such as myself? Older people are so set in their ways that blending is so very difficult. — HAVING TROUBLE IN FLORIDA

DEAR HAVING TROUBLE: If you remarried only because you were afraid of living alone, then you did it for the wrong reason. There are worse things than living alone -- and one of them is being married to a person who is unwilling to compromise. The keys to a successful union are affection, communication, respect and compromise. If both parties sincerely care about and respect each other, the union will be successful and lasting.

DEAR ABBY: My wife recently attended her 35th high school reunion alone. Her high school sweetheart was there, and they talked and exchanged e-mail addresses. As the night wore on, he started making advances and my wife rebuffed him somewhat rudely. Three days later, she e-mailed him an apology and they started an eight-week exchange.

I suspected something was wrong and checked her e-mails, where I discovered some pretty torrid messages and a dinner meeting being planned. When I confronted my wife, she denied everything -- until I gave her copies of the e-mails. She says they never met, but I say the intent was there. To me, this is the same as a physical affair. She disagrees. Who is right? — DECEIVED IN LOUISIANA

DEAR DECEIVED: You are. The only thing that prevented things from proceeding further was the fact that you intervened. And if your wife had been proud of what she was doing she wouldn't have lied to you.

Why do we give thanks to God?

On Thanksgiving Day, families all over America sit down to dinner at the same time — halftime.

"Thanksgiving has two good words," says Hollie, age 9. "They are 'thanks' and 'giving,' and that's what we need to do -- thank others and be giving. Those are two things my mom taught me."

Hollie, your mom has taught you well. Gratitude is one of the most important lessons parents can teach their children.

"Gratitude unlocks the fullness of life," writes Melody Beattie. "It turns what we have into enough and more. It can turn a meal into a feast, a house into a home, a stranger into a friend. Gratitude makes sense of our past, brings peace for today, and creates a vision for tomorrow."

Adrienne, 9, is fortunate to have a father who's not ashamed to offer thanks to God: "I like when my dad prays before we eat. I don't know why, but I just do."

Tori, 6, is already following the example of godly parents: "I like Thanksgiving because I get to eat chicken, and my mama is with me, and my daddy is with me. I get to see my cousins. I get to be with God because I say the blessings."

Tori, you might have the wrong bird, but you've definitely got the right spirit and company.

You have a kindred spirit in Ally, 11: "I like Thanksgiving because it is good to thank God. He gives us so many blessings that we don't even realize. It's the least we can do to give him one whole day of thanks, but we should be giving thanks daily."

Robert, 8, goes even further: "I can give thanks when I broke my finger and that it didn't get cut off. I can give thanks when my dad got shot four times and that he didn't die."

Wait a minute! How could anybody find a bright side to a broken finger or gunshot wounds?

This kind of worldview sees all circumstances as divine tapestry. Faith in God's sovereignty and goodness transports the believer into a realm where giving thanks in everything is as normal as breathing. This doesn't mean that everything we encounter is good, but rather that God's goodness and power will work it out for his purpose and our benefit.

CARY KINSOLVING

KIDS talk about GOD

Why, then, do we complain instead of giving thanks?

"Pride slays thanksgiving, but a humble mind is the soil out of which thanks naturally grow," wrote 19th-century minister Henry Ward Beecher. "A proud man is seldom a grateful man, for he never thinks he gets as much as he deserves."

Kimberly, 8, is an example of someone who is grateful even in the midst of great loss: "My grandmother died of a heart attack, and it was hard to thank the Lord for that. I was very close to my grandmother. I saw her almost every day. But now, she doesn't have any more pain, and she is in heaven."

Think about this: Even though we sorrow over the loss of loved ones, not even death can make spiritual Christians ungrateful. The Lord Jesus absorbed death's sting when he offered himself as the perfect sacrifice for our sins. Faith alone in Christ alone guarantees everlasting life.

Memorize this truth: "In everything give thanks; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus for you." (I Thessalonians 5:18)

Ask this question: Can you give thanks for everything?

FBC to hold 'thank you' service

ANDREW GLOVER
aglover@thepampanews.com

First Baptist Church invites the community to their Veterans Day "Thank You" service 11 a.m. Sunday.

Music pastor Barry Owens said there will be special recognition of World War II veterans and the service will have a patriotic theme.

"I will say a special thing about them," Owens said. "It will be a patriotic service, all the songs will be patriotic. We will recognize all veterans."

Owens said it was important to recognize the World War II veterans because they won't be around much longer.

"We've never said anything specific about them," Owens said. "Several have passed away recently. I've been here eight years. Felt like it would be good time to do that before anymore pass away. They are a real special group of men."

Owens said it's important to recognize them because so many paid a high price.

"We want to recognize them for what they did and it's an honor for us," Owens said. "We will never know everything they went through. It was difficult for them but they won us so many important freedoms."

First Baptist is located on the 200 block of West Street and Johnny Funderburg is the head pastor.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Nov. 13, 2010:

This year, you often will head home with a smile on your face. Your home has become your castle. You might opt to live in an area near water or find dream-come-true digs. Others will remodel their homes, making it the palace they always wanted. If you are single, you will enjoy much more downtime at home, hopefully with someone special. Take a year to decide if this person is the "one." If you are attached, the two of you will enjoy your domestic life together much more than you ever thought possible. AQUARIUS always presents a different idea.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★★ Remain reserved yet direct. Though you might not be comfortable with a friend's idea, go along with it. A fun gathering will ensue. Deal with a caring relative or loved one. You might be unusually harsh. Tonight: Where the action is.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★ Take a stand, knowing full well your limits. No matter what you do or where you are, others seek you out. You project a very special, caring aura, making others feel accepted. Tonight: Leader of the gang.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★★ Opt for the new and/or untried. Let your imagination make plans. Meet a friend at a distance halfway. The drive and the change of environment will refresh you. Others will opt to escape to a movie or concert. Tonight: Just don't stick with the here and now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★★ Confidently share news with a special friend. This person could provide a strong sense of direction if given the facts. Indulge a family member or roommate; he or she is always there for you. Tonight: Visit with a loved one over a lavish dinner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★★ Fortunately, you have an extremely personable style that is spontaneous. A loved one or special person in your life makes an effort to share more. You might not be ready for this type of closeness. Tonight: Be open to different options. Many invitations will appear.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★ Pace yourself, knowing that even you have limits to how much you can accomplish. Organization might seem to go to the wayside when dealing with a long-desired goal. Relax and, if you can, take a walk by water. Be aware of your limits. Know when to say "enough." Tonight: Make it easy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★★ Toss yourself into the moment. Stay sensitive to someone who really does care. This person can enchant you and at the same time be a friend. Share more of your feelings. Tonight: Let the wild thing out!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★ Stay close to home, where you might enjoy yourself more. Invite several key friends over. Your ability to get down the bottom line of a difficult situation could be hard for another person to hear. Tonight: Happy close to home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★★ Follow your sixth sense, and you'll draw extremely positive results. Reach out for a friend you haven't seen in a while and make plans, if not for today then for the near future. Listen to a female friend's suggestion. Tonight: Hang out where there is music or by water.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★ Express your more positive feelings. Understanding will evolve in a new direction once you start swapping ideas with a boss, parent or respected person. How you express your appreciation changes radically. Zero in on what is important. Tonight: Your treat.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ Express your caring and softer side. If possible, get last-minute tickets to a concert or play. You relax when you allow your imagination to wander and in a situation where your body can let go of tension. Tonight: Whatever knocks your socks off.

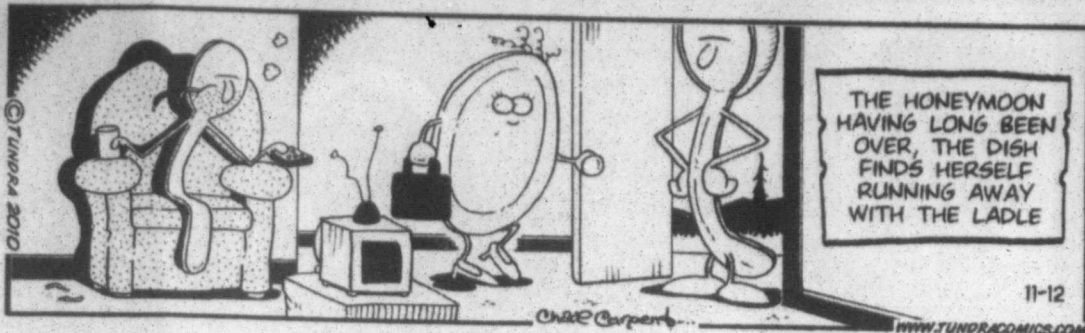

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★ Step back from a difficult and challenging situation. You don't have all the facts. A caring discussion with a loved one reveals much more. Make plans to be with this person today. Pursue a favorite hobby or pastime. Tonight: Vanish, and remember that you don't have to tell anyone where you were.

2010 start of new winning tradition for PHS volleyball

At the start of the 2010 volleyball season, it looked as if we were heading for the same finish and the story next season would again be how close we got to accomplishing our goals. Starting with a victory over former district rival Canyon, though, things turned around and Pampa crept into the Top Ten by the end of the year. Congratulations No. 10 Pampa Lady Harvesters.

Unfortunately Pampa didn't make it as far as they wanted to. When the playoffs are all said and done only one team will end the season celebrating a victory. The Lady Harvesters finished as one of the top eight teams in the region and so many other teams would have loved to be in that position. This year was the best volleyball team Pampa has had in over 11 years and that's not something to be ashamed of.

How Pampa got to this point was improved team chemistry. From the Canyon game on, this team played together. In that game, the Lady Harvesters regrouped after losing the second game and won the last two to win the match. That's something previous teams and this team struggled with before that game. This became very helpful when they started district. When they entered district, everyone was focused on one goal: Come out on top and unbeaten.

The Lady Harvesters started district strong with sweeping two of three of their opponents. The second round of district was tougher as Dalhart, Borger and Perryton won a set in their match. Pampa was still able to overcome those sets and win the match. This round would also be tough because two of those victories turned into losses when Pampa had to forfeit due to a UIL violation. Again, if this was the team from the last two years or the beginning of this season it probably would have folded. But this team rose to challenge and re-clinched everything in the third round. In the final home game against Perryton, you could tell the Lady Harvesters were on a mission, especially in the last game when they gave the Rangerettes no chance of delaying the district championship celebration.

In the playoffs against Andrews, the Lady Harvesters took on an unknown opponent and was successful. Pampa was able to make adjustments in the middle of the match, which is something that gave previous teams trouble. Tuesday against Borger, the Lady Harvesters fought hard the whole match and nearly forced a fifth set.

Sadly, Taryn Eubank departs the team after a very successful four years. Pampa will miss her leadership and her great sets. Eubank was one of the leaders of assists in the state and has great things ahead for her. I'm looking forward to see where she signs.

The good news is she's the only one the Lady Harvesters lose. Everyone else will be back. The team will have great senior leadership with Ramie Hutto, Kirsten Kuhn, Caitlin Sieck, McKinlee Stokes, Kailyn Troxell, Stephanie Allen, Delaney Clendening and Alanna Stephens. Hutto and Troxell should be the leaders offensively next season. Kuhn has gotten better as a libero and should be really strong next year. Sieck and Clendening should also contribute on the offense. Stephens was one of the leaders in serve aces and should lead in that category next season. Allen should have a bigger role next year.

Those on the district champion junior varsity will have a tough competition in the spring and summer to come up on varsity. One that will be there is sophomore Maddie Fatheree, who will be a junior next season. Fatheree will be stepping into the role that Eubank vacated and will have her own opportunity to make her own legacy. As coach told me before the season she believes in her players making their own shoes and not filling others. Those from the junior varsity that will remain, get another year to develop together and that will be crucial in 2012 when they are on varsity.

This season, the Lady Harvesters started a new tradition with volleyball. Hopefully for several years to come, we will see the Lady Harvesters play past the end of October and deep into November. Next year at this time, hopefully I'm talking with Arnie and Randy about paying to send me to San Marcos.
