Lena Faye "Corkey" Stewart, 80

Lena Faye "Corkey" Stewart, longtime resident of Ponca City, passed Saturday, May 7, 2011. She was 80 years of age.

Corkey was born January 21, 1931, in Moran, the daughter of Bill Brewer and Mattie (Walker) Brewer. "Corkey" was a nickname given to her when she was very young and has been with her ever since. She had a good sense of humor that went along with her name. She grew up and attended the Albany schools. She was married to John Paul "Jay" Stewart on July 21, 1963, in Pampa. Mr. Stewart preceded her in death on April 4, 2011.

Corkey was a member of Northeast Baptist Church. Everyone at Northeast has been so special to her family and one of her big promises was to be sure and let people know how important God is in their lives and how wonderful her Christian friends are. She would say "see you wonderful people on the other side" and God bless. She found and accepted the Lord when she was 13 years of age and also kept her family active in the life of the church. Most of her family is on the other side and there will be a great rejoicing, probably a party that will have lots of talking and loving. She was best known for her gift of kindness and sharing with others. She loved her Lord, family and friends.

She is survived by one great-grandson, Colton Gaston of Canada; grandson Bryan Gaston; granddaughter, Stacy Wickersham; son-in-law Mel Gaston; one sister, Dorothy Smith. She was preceded in death by her parents; her husband; one daughter, Juanita Gaston; and one brother, Bob Brewer.

Graveside services will be held at 10 a.m. Wednesday, May 11, 2011, at Resthaven Memorial Park Cemetery with Dr. Larry Nigh, pastor of Northeast Baptist Church presiding. Arrangements are under the direction of Grace Memorial Chapel.

The family has asked that in lieu of flowers that memorial contributions be made to Hospice of North Central Oklahoma, 1904 North Union, Suite, 103, Ponca City, OK 74601 or to Northeast Baptist Church, 2200 North Pecan, Ponca City, OK 74604.

Mrs. Stewart's online guestbook may be signed at www.gracememorialchapel.net.

Evelyn Jane Haiduk Warner, 79

SANTA FE, N.M.—Evelyn Jane Haiduk Warner, 79, died May 9, 2011, in Santa Fe, N.M.

Services are pending with Carmichael-Whitley Funeral Directors of Pampa.

Evelyn was born April 15, 1932, in Westbrook, to Claude and Birdie Allen. She was married to Bert Haiduk from 1950 until 1995 and raised eight children on their farm outside White Deer. During the early years with Bert, Evelyn acquired a deep appreciation for artistic expression and began writing poetry. Her 20-year career in nursing began in 1978 as an LVN and concluded with eight years as a hospice nurse, which she considered the most rewarding. Evelyn was married to Carl Warner of Pampa from 1995 until his death in 2007. Her first book, "Come Walk With Me," was published in 2002. Five subsequent books of poetry have been published. In the loving company of her family, Evelyn died after a long battle with breast cancer in her home in Santa Fe where she had lived since March of 2010. She had previously resided in White Deer and Pampa, for over 60 years.

Evelyn is survived by her children Eric and Kay Haiduk, and Connie and Oscar Mungia, all of White Deer, Karen Haiduk and Dan Anthony of Santa Fe, N.M., Kris and Dennis Viers of San Ramon, Calif., Katrina and Mike Adams of Arlington, Kala and Scott Sigler of Edmond, Okla., Jon and Andi Haiduk of Overland Park, Kan., and Barbara Vest of Lake City, Fla.; her grandchildren include Lance and Brock Anderson, Alberic, Brendan and Therese Haiduk, Claire, Christian and Grace Sigler, Peyton, Hunter and Audrey Adams, and her great-grandchildren John Brock and Ellis Anderson. She is also survived by her brother Roy Brian Allen of San Antonio. Evelyn was preceded in death by her brothers Claude, Burt and Edd Allen, her mother Birdie Jane Turner and her father, Claude Allen.

Memorials may be made to BSA Hospice, 800 N.

Prisoner count wrong says case

AUSTIN (AP) - The state should count prisoners where they used to live and not where they are incarcerated, says a new lawsuit.

Democratic Rep. Harold Dutton of Houston filed the federal lawsuit against the state of Texas on Monday. Dutton says the state should count prisoners at their last address, not where they are serving their time. He said if the courts agree, Harris County could get 25 seats in the Texas House. Under a House redistricting proposal, the county would only get 24 seats.

Dutton said some rural counties are awarded more population than they deserve using current prisoner population counting methods. Urban counties, meanwhile, should be able to report higher population counts, he said. Dutton said the way the state counts prisoners violates rights guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

Senate votes to pack heat

AUSTIN (AP) - Whether they're praying or politicking, Texas senators want to be able to pack heat wherever they go.

The Senate voted 25-6 on Monday to let legislators, statewide elected officials and some other federal and state employees who are licensed to carry concealed handguns take their weapons into places the rest of the public cannot. Those places would include churches, bars and other places that serve alcohol, businesses and sporting events.

Sen. Dan Patrick, R-Houston, who is licensed to carry a concealed handgun, says lawmakers, judges and prosecutors are potential targets for assassins and should be allowed to carry lethal protection at all times.

A handful of senators said lawmakers should not create special privileges for themselves that they are not willing to give the public at large.

The bill is supported by the Texas Rifle Association and the National Rifle Association. It now goes to the House for consideration.

Bills cuts $30M over two years

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Senate has approved a measure that would save the state an estimated $30 million over the next two years.

The measure ends or restricts certain education-related stipends and tuition exemptions, such as Advanced Placement exam fee subsidies for economically disadvantaged students.

The Senate approved the measure Monday on a 19-12 vote. Several contentious amendments were added to the bill, including a provision to tap $100 million from the state's tobacco settlement fund to give to the state's 10 health science centers. Another amendment would attempt to replenish the fund by increasing the number of tobacco companies subject to the fee.

The legislation is part of a package of bills intended to help lawmakers overcome a multi-billion dollar state revenue shortfall.

College tips for high school seniors

TERRY SAVAGE
Creator's Syndicate

If your family includes a high school senior who is planning to attend college, the past four months have been a nightmare of paperwork — starting with FAFSA and right on through the application process. Then came the acceptance letters, followed by the financial aid offers from the schools.

And now you face the kitchen-table dilemma that one reader described to me, asking for help:

Our son has heard back from most of the colleges he applied to — with only one rejection. Fortunately, two of his three top choices accepted him. They've all sent some form of aid package, and each is different. Here's what four of the schools offered. How do we decide? This feels like the weight of the world!"

Attached was a list of the aid packages and a request for an analysis. Since most schools have a May 1 deadline for responding to acceptance letters with a non-refundable deposit, the moment of truth is here for many families. The joy of acceptance has been replaced with the reality of choice based on financial aid.

My first advice to his reader — though he didn't ask: Please let me say that you lost control of the process months ago! I know you're from the Chicago area. Why are all of your son's choices out-of-state schools — including two in California?

For sure, that has added to your family's tuition costs in a big way, as well as creating additional travel costs. I think it's important that every senior (too late now) apply to an in-state school — or even a community college for two years — in order to hold down costs and future loan repayments.

For example, taken from the spreadsheet you prepared for me for University of California at Berkeley: total costs — $54,464; total aid — $52,818. It seems as if there's not too much of a gap — but the issue is in the details of the offer.

Every school you listed had the same EFC — expected family contribution — as determined by the FAFSA form you filed in January. Yours is $20,385.

So when you pick a school that costs $54,000, you know that you will be taking on a lot of debt — or hoping for some free money in the form of grants, work-study programs or scholarships that do not have to be repaid. You received only about $4,000 in work-study and grants.

In this case, the gap is nearly $30,000 a year in loans — every year, assuming that the loans are renewed.

That means this education is going to cost you, and your son, nearly $120,000 — plus interest, until those loans are repaid. That's why it pays to start out with a lower-cost, in-state school on the application list.

When you compare a package of loans, you are basically comparing interest rates, and terms, such as when interest starts accruing. You are also deciding who will be responsible for the loans — parents or student. Each of your loan packages offers a combination of Perkins loans, federally subsidized Stafford loans, Federal Parent PLUS loans and unsubsidized Stafford loans.

And even though these loans fill the cost gap, they are far from a good deal when it comes to interest rates. The federal Stafford Loan has a fixed interest rate of 6.8 percent, and the Federal PLUS loan has a fixed rate of 7.9 percent. Perkins loans have a fixed interest rate of 5 percent. All that interest can add up as you repay after graduation.

There are several online tools to help you compare aid packages, and the cost of repayment. Start at CollegeBoard.org, by clicking on the "College Planning" tab. Then click on the green tab "Pay for College." On that page you'll find a link to the "Compare Aid Awards" tool.

You can compare up to four schools — and the types of awards included in this calculator cover all those you've listed. All you have to do is fill in the blanks for the offers from the four schools you're comparing.

Then go to Finaid.org and use their calculators to compute the monthly and total repayment costs of this loan package.

Want help? You don't have to simply accept the aid that is offered, according to Reecy Aresty of PayLessForCollege.com, who specializes in helping you gently negotiate a higher award of money that does not have to be repaid.

Aresty offers a free review of financial aid packages to my readers. If you hire him to negotiate on your behalf, the fee ranges from $195 to $395, depending on the number of schools involved. You can e-mail him at Reecy@PayLessforCollege.com.

Says Aresty: "Although May 1 is the deadline for non-refundable deposits at many schools, some families opt to make multiple deposits in order to keep the aid appeals process going beyond May 1." Aresty notes that if the aid offers are close, it may be worth losing a deposit at one school to gain more grants of money at another.

Signing on for a financial aid package is one of the largest financial decisions any family can make, so do your research and don't just look at the bottom line: Like your home mortgage, you expect to repay this loan over the years, while the value of the asset — your home or your education — grows over the years. As we've all learned, that's a good idea over the long run — but the payments can be a huge burden over the short run. And that's The Savage Truth.

Republicans in Texas Senate approve guns on campus

AUSTIN (AP) - Republicans in the Texas Senate on Monday approved allowing concealed handgun license holders to carry weapons into public college buildings and classrooms, moving forward on a measure that had stalled until supporters tacked it on to a universities spending bill.

Sen. Jeff Wentworth, R-San Antonio, had been unable to muster the votes he needed under Senate rules to pass the issue as its own bill after the measure met stiff resistance from higher education officials, notably from within the University of Texas system.

The measure seemed all but assured easy passage when the legislative session began in January. The Senate had passed a similar bill in 2009 and about 90 lawmakers in the 150-member House had signed on in support this year. But the bill stalled on its first three votes in the Senate and took some maneuvering by Wentworth to get it through.

Supporters hope Monday's vote will help shove the measure past a roadblock in the House, where a similar bill has been stuck without a vote in that chamber with just a few weeks left in the legislative session. "Campus carry has more momentum than a runaway freight train," said W. Scott Lewis of Students for Concealed Carry, a nationwide group backing the measure.

The Senate's 12 Democrats had mostly worked as a block to stop the measure but were powerless to stop it on Monday when all it took was a simple majority in the 31-member chamber to get it added to the spending bill as an amendment.

At that point, Wentworth even picked up an extra vote from Rep. Steve Ogden, R-Bryan, who had previously opposed the measure.

Even with large numbers in support, the campus guns measure quickly boiled into one of most controversial issues of the session.

Supporters call it a critical self-defense measure and guns rights issue. UT-System Chancellor Francisco Cigarroa wrote lawmakers and Gov. Rick Perry outlining worries from university officials that guns on campus will lead to more campus crime and suicides.

Hearings on the measure were dominated by powerful testimony from supporters who had been raped or assaulted on college campuses, and several people who had survived the 2007 mass shooting at Virginia Tech University when a gunman killed 32 people.

Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, who was a student at the University of Texas in 1966 when sniper Charles Whitman killed 12 people and wounded dozens of others, vigorously argued against the guns measure.

She predicted mass chaos if police respond to a call and find several people with guns drawn.

"I can't imagine the horrors if this passes," Zaffirini said.

Wentworth was unmoved. He recalled the shooting at Virginia Tech and said he wants to give students a chance to defend themselves.

"There was no one there to defend themselves in a gun-free zone that was a victim-rich zone," Wentworth said. "I'm trying to avoid that type of situation."

Ironically, it was an amendment by Zaffirini that opened the door for Wentworth's gun measure. Those two had battled in previous weeks when Wentworth tried to amend the guns measure to another universities spending bill she had authored.

She withdrew her bill but offered it up as an amendment on Monday. Minutes after hers was approved, Wentworth introduced his amendment and got the guns measure put on the bill.

After the vote, Wentworth exchanged a few imaginary shots with another lawmaker outside the Senators-only lounge behind the chamber.

Texas passed its concealed handgun license law in 1995. License holders must be at least 21 and pass a training course.

Guns on campus bills have been rejected in at least 23 states since 2007. The bill originally covered private universities as well, but was changed to cover only public institutions of higher education. The Senate also rejected attempts to allow the university boards of regents to decide gun policy on their campuses.

For supporters, Texas is the big prize. Early signs the bill would pass here captured the attention of international media which could not resist the state's larger-than-life reputation and frontier image.

Texas is where concealed handgun license holders are allowed to skip metal detectors in the state Capitol, and Perry made headlines for shooting a coyote on a morning jog last year. Earlier on Monday, senators voted to allow themselves to carry concealed handguns into places the rest of the public cannot, such as churches, restaurants and sporting events.

Perry has said he supports the campus guns measure and is expected to sign it into law if it reaches his desk.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, May 10, the 130th day of 2011. There are 235 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 10, 1941, Adolf Hitler's deputy, Rudolf Hess, parachuted into Scotland on what he claimed was a peace mission. (Hess ended up serving a life sentence at Spandau prison until 1987, when he apparently committed suicide.)

On this date:

In 1611, Sir Thomas Dale arrived in the Virginia Colony, where, as deputy governor, he instituted harsh disciplinary measures to restore order.

In 1774, Louis XVI acceded to the throne of France.

In 1775, Ethan Allen and his Green Mountain Boys, along with Col. Benedict Arnold, captured the British-held fortress at Ticonderoga, N.Y.

In 1865, Union forces captured Confederate President Jefferson Davis in Irwinville, Ga.

In 1869, a golden spike was driven in Promontory, Utah, marking the completion of the first transcontinental railroad in the United States.

In 1924, J. Edgar Hoover was given the job of FBI director.

In 1933, the Nazis staged massive public book burnings in Germany.

In 1940, during World War II, German forces began invading the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Belgium and France. The same day, British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain resigned, and Winston Churchill formed a new government.

In 1960, the nuclear-powered submarine USS Triton completed its submerged navigation of the globe.

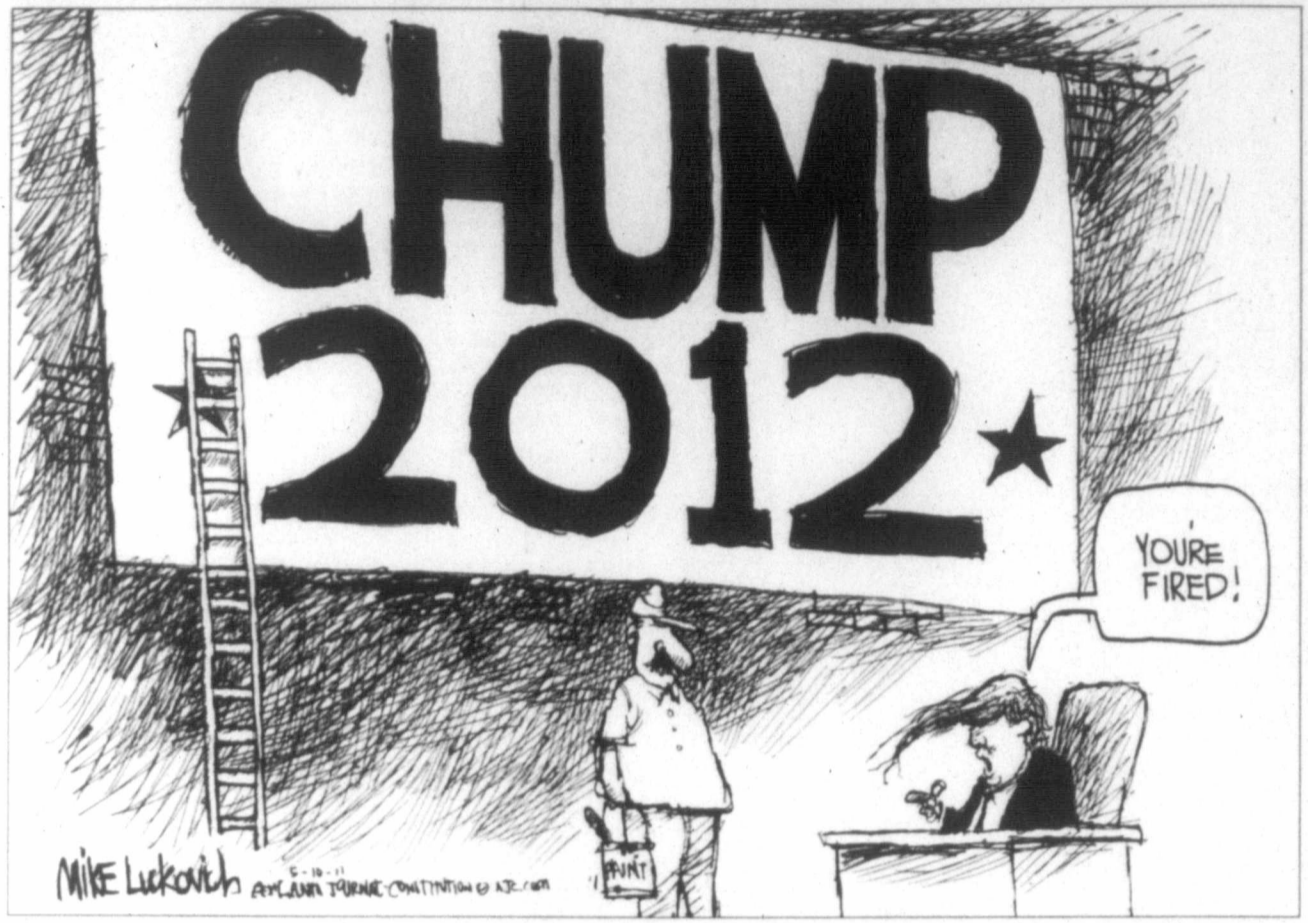

Ten years ago: The Justice Department handed over thousands of documents it said should have been provided to Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh's attorneys, because of the blunder, McVeigh's execution, set for May 16, 2001, was postponed for a month.

Five years ago: Daniel Biechele, a former rock-band manager whose pyrotechnics caused a 2003 Rhode Island nightclub fire that killed 100 people, was sentenced to four years in prison. (Biechele was paroled in March 2008.)

One year ago: President Barack Obama introduced Supreme Court nominee Elena Kagan, billing her as a unifying force for a fractured court.

Today's Birthdays: Author Bel Kaufman ("Up the Down Staircase") is 100. Sportscaster Pat Summerall is 81. Author Barbara Taylor Bradford is 78. Thought for Today: "What this country needs is a good five-cent cigar." Thomas R. Marshall, U.S. vice president (1884-1925). (To which American humorist Franklin P. Adams replied, "What this country really needs is a good five-cent nickel.")

Are we finally done in Afghanistan?

In the aftermath of the killing of Osama bin Laden, I found myself agreeing with Charles Krauthammer that this was a global game-changer for American greatness. It was a gutsy and courageous decision by President Obama, brilliantly executed by the Navy SEALs and all the intelligence and support behind them.

As Krauthammer put it, after the tough slogs in Iraq and Afghanistan, this amounts to the restoration of unquestioned U.S. military dominance. America has not slipped, nor has our military reach and power.

But now I want to ask a more difficult question. With the killing of Osama, is the Afghan mission complete? The original post-9/11 goal was to kill bin Laden and wipe out al-Qaida. Now that we've killed bin Laden and dismantled so much of al-Qaida, do we really need to trudge through an even longer war in Afghanistan?

Ayman Al-Zawahiri is in Pakistan. Perhaps the SEALs can dismantle him. Anwar Al-Awlaki is in Yemen, and perhaps al-Qaida can be dismantled there. But regarding the broader war in Afghanistan, I was taken by a quote from Rep. Peter King on National Review Online. He said, "The enemy is now more of a threat from within than it is from

I am no military or foreign-policy expert. But I do know the cost of supporting a corrupt regime like Hamid Karzai's in terms of blood and treasure. The cost is steep. I speak here as a hawk, not a dove.

In dollar terms, the cost of the Afghan war is roughly $450 billion today, and according to Congressional Budget Office projections, it is scheduled to rise by perhaps another $500 billion.

Meanwhile, the Congressional Research Service reports that we have doubled our average troop strength in Afghanistan from 44,000 to 84,000 as part of the surge. Troop strength there is expected to average 102,000 in FY2011. A slight 4,000 troop decline is projected for FY2012, but the longer-term commitment continues to the end of 2014.

Thus far, nearly 1,600 U.S. troops have been killed in action in Afghanistan. To me, this is the most tragic part. Of course, I wholeheartedly support our troops. But is this blood really necessary?

Are the projected future costs really necessary?

Again, I ask myself: All this to support Karzai? Isn't this the sort of nation-building that the late William F. Buckley Jr. opposed? Are American national-security interests really tied up in Afghanistan? Is now not the time to contemplate a much more rapid troop withdrawal from Afghanistan?

I am willing to concede that the U.S. needs to fight the expected Taliban spring surge. But after that, is it worth it to stay any longer? And does our mission really include wiping out the Taliban in Afghanistan, a seemingly impossible task?

Going forward, what exactly is (our real mission in Afghanistan? That's the basis of my concern. Are we as Americans and conservatives really convinced that the continued mission is worth the lost blood and treasure? Is now not the time to leave?

What exactly are we doing in Afghanistan? And how do we get out of it?

Obama looks to push immigration reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Barack Obama is making his first trip as president to the U.S.-Mexico border, using the setting to sharpen his call for a remake of the nation's immigration laws and try to cast the GOP as the obstacle standing in its way.

The president's speech in El Paso, Texas, on Tuesday, and his visit to a border crossing there, are the latest high-profile immigration events by Obama, who has also hosted meetings at the White House recently with Latino lawmakers, movie stars and others.

It all comes despite an unfavorable climate on Capitol Hill, where Republicans who control the House have shown no interest in legislation that offers a pathway to citizenship for the nation's 11 million illegal immigrants.

That's led to criticism that Obama's efforts are little more than politics in pursuit of the ever-growing Hispanic electorate ahead of the 2012 election. White House officials dispute that. They acknowledge the difficulties in getting a bill but say it's likelier to happen if the president creates public support for immigration legislation, leading to pressure on Republican lawmakers.

"We already know from the first two years, the last Congress, that there was political opposition to comprehensive immigration reform, including from some places where there used to be political support," said presidential spokesman Jay Carney. "We are endeavoring to change that dynamic by rallying public support, by raising public awareness about the need for comprehensive immigration reform."

At the same time, the strategy allows Obama to highlight that Republicans are standing in the way of an immigration bill — shifting responsibility away from himself at a time when many Latino activists say he never made good on his campaign promise of prioritizing immigration legislation early on.

Obama's spotty immigration record in the eyes of Latino voters makes it all the more politically imperative for him to shore up their support with his re-election campaign approaching. "What's different from 2008 is that there are more Hispanics and more millennials in the electorate overall. Latinos are even a bigger share than they were in 2008," said Simon Rosenberg, a former Clinton White House strategist who follows immigration policy as head of the left-of-center NDN think tank. "Millennials" is a term for people born after 1980.

More Latinos than ever voted in the 2010 mid-term elections, according to the Pew Hispanic Center, accounting for almost 7 percent of those voting.

Still, turnout among Hispanic voters is far lower than among other groups, giving Obama a reason to want to try to motivate them.

He's picked hostile political territory to make his pitch, visiting a state he lost by more than 10 percentage points in 2008. But the trip does have one overtly political upside: Obama plans a side trip to the relatively liberal bastion of Austin to raise money for the Democratic National Committee at two fundraisers Tuesday night.

At the same time, Obama is pitching his immigration argument to the larger public, and he's refining it in a way that goes to Americans' pocketbook concerns. White House officials say Obama will emphasize the economic value of reforming immigration laws, noting that immigrants account for a substantial share of business start-ups and patent applications, among other things — activities that create jobs for everyone.

It's a different approach than talking about immigration as a security issue or a moral one, and also provides a counter to the Republican argument that illegal immigrants drain U.S. resources.

The president will also argue that his administration has made great strides on border security. Administration officials boast of increasing the number of agents on the border, seizing more contraband and nearing completion of a border fence, and say they plan to extend the deployment of National Guard troops Obama sent to the border.

To Republicans who say that immigration overhaul legislation shouldn't happen until the border is secure, the White House now says it's as secure as it's ever been and the conversation on legislation needs to happen.

Republicans aren't buying it.

"It seems President Obama has once again put on his campaigner-in-chief hat. The president's push to legalize millions of illegal immigrants is purely political," said Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

"And even though administration officials like to pretend the border is secure, the reality is that it isn't." Brendan Buck, spokesman for House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, said that House Republicans had no plans to take up immigration legislation and argued that if Obama were serious about immigration reform he would have reached out to Boehner on the issue, which Buck said he hasn't.

The White House says Obama will push Tuesday for legislation and release a blueprint on his approach to reform, but without setting out any timeline.

Indeed, getting immigration reform done any time soon is not realistic. Obama wasn't even able to get legislation through Congress last year that would have provided a route to legal status for college students and others who were brought to the country as children. The so-called DREAM Act passed the House, then controlled by Democrats, but was blocked by Senate Republicans.

The Senate is now even more heavily Republican, and Republicans control the House. That means immigration reform can't happen unless they cooperate.

But for Obama, if the public's aware of that, it's a political win — even if Republicans don't budge.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: "Little Bit Lonely" (March 26) misses traveling since her husband's death. She wrote that she isn't "good at mingling with new people" and wondered if it would be appropriate to ask her son to include her on weekend trips with his family.

I want to urge "Lonely" to go to her local community college and take classes for seniors. Take any class she might have dreamed of as a young woman. Make friends. Expand her horizons!

I had breast cancer 18 months ago. The day after my surgery, I took stock of my life and decided if I was to follow my childhood dream, what better time than now? I am doing that, and have begun studying voice and theater arts. Do I aspire to be another Helen Reddy or Helen Mirren? No, but I intend to have fun while I take the journey of the rest of my life.

Let me say to her, "Don't be a 'little bit lonely.' Be a little bit too busy!" — NOT AT ALL LONELY, SANTA ROSA, CALIF.

DEAR NOT LONELY: Thank you for an inspiring letter. Other readers shared creative ideas for "Lonely" that might help her set her sails in new directions. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: "Lone-

ly" should organize a trip (even just a weekend jaunt) and invite her son and family along. That would give the son the opportunity to reciprocate her invitation, which could lead to a new family tradition. — GAYLE IN KANSAS CITY

DEAR ABBY: My dad passed away eight years ago, and Mom has been on her own ever since. She has become a savvy traveler and has made numerous friends along the way. "Lonely" should look into churches, travel agencies and cruise companies for trips for senior singles. "Lonely" does not need to be alone. My mom goes places with family and is close friends with my mother-in-law, too. One or two trips, and "Lonely" should be able to find a few good friends. — PROUD OF MY BROOKLYN MOM

DEAR ABBY: I, too, am a widow. I go on my own to football and soccer games as well as other activities that involve my grandchildren. It's my firm belief that it isn't up to my children to entertain me. They have their own busy lives and need their family time.

I have developed my own social life. I met one of my best friends in a choral group, and another when she sat next to me at church. The three of us go to movies, concerts, plays, etc., and they have introduced me to many new activities. Senior centers sponsor computer classes, bingo and day excursions, and community colleges offer classes in photography, writing, yoga for a nominal fee. Be willing to work through some discomfort and take some risks. — NOT A BIT LONELY

DEAR ABBY: Here's what I'd tell "Lonely": Take a course in self-development. Programs are available for developing skills and learning to live life from the perspective of "possibilities."

Do something for someone in a nursing home or visit Alzheimer's patients. Read to them or just hold a hand. When you get a smile from these patients, you'll know your presence really makes a difference. Join the Red Hat Society. Most of the members are alone and have a great time together.

Volunteer at church, teach Sunday school, work with the homeless in a shelter. Do something for someone who has less. Our world needs people with warm hearts and the time to contribute. You will be amazed at how great you'll feel. — LORRAINE IN ENCINITAS, CALIF.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, May 11, 2011.

This year, your psyche could work overtime. You pick up a lot just by observing. You also will enjoy your alone time far more than in the past. Your libido energies peak, and you will want to express yourself in some way — be it painting, writing or maybe even brainstorming. You are entering an especially lucky year. If you are single, romance abounds. With all the dating, be careful not to miss a special person. If you are attached, learn to be more direct with your sweetie. As a couple, you gain from taking some downtime together. VIRGO often makes you laugh.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★ How you manifest your frustration and anger seems to change. You might direct this energy toward a talent, taking a class in investing or, if you're not careful, overspending. Maintain a level of detachment. Tonight: Just feeling good.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★ Where traditional modes have failed, you open up to more dynamic ideas. Your instincts seem to inform you who is friend or foe. Confusion could surround an important friendship. Let time unravel the maze. Tonight: Take a mid-week break.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★ Curb a tendency to be self-destructive; work on expressing your anger more appropriately. Several friends come forward with ideas, invitations or just a hello. Make plans in the near future with these pals. Tonight: Downtime.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ A male friend drives a hard bargain. The art of diplomacy can make or break this situation. A boss or someone you look up to gives you quite a compliment. Tonight: Favorite places, favorite people.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★ Take stock of what you have to offer. You might want to invest in a talent or take a class, especially if this act can add to your job performance or desirability. Know what others ask of you, yet realize you have limits. Tonight: Off to the gym.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ You move into a new arena and attain a greater sense of self. Sometimes you hold yourself back. Keep building your self-confidence and express yourself more often. A partner or several associates make offers you hope to see happen. Tonight: Where the action is.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★ You sense a hidden agenda or that someone might not be revealing everything he or she is thinking. You might not be the only person to sense this vagueness. Sit back and watch when a partner takes a front-row seat. Tonight: Togetherness counts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Meetings in general help you home in on basics. You could be exhausted by everything you need to do. Ask for help. You might be surprised by how many people are ready and available. In fact, suddenly you, too, are energized. See what a little moral support can do? Tonight: Zero in on what is important.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★ Whether you are leading or following, work or a project demands a lot of attention. Stay on top of a project, and don't let anyone deter you from your goals. A child or loved one reaches out to you and seems irresistible. Tonight: Love the one you are with.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ Your style and manner of moving around could make a big difference. How you feel when handling a personal matter could change as a result of a conversation with a family member or loved one. Detach and see the big picture before making any decisions. Tonight: Follow the music.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ Visualize more of what you want from a situation. Be willing to honor another person's request. Everything that is happening allows greater give-and-take between you and a special friend. When you share on this level, you build confidence with others. Tonight: Meet a friend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ Understanding means more to you than to many others. You are willing to let someone else run with the ball, but you would like your outlook taken into account. Don't push others right now. They will notice the wisdom in your thoughts sooner rather than later. Tonight: Accept an invitation.

PHS Gage and Silva finish third at State Tournament

aglover@thepampanews.com

Pampa High School seniors Holly Gage and Aaron Silva had to win a three-set match to advance to state. Monday at the Lakeway World of Tennis in Austin, both of their matches went three sets as the pair finished third.

Gage and Silva beat Nathan Sandel and Kim Konecny from Bellville (2-6, 7-6 (7-2) and 7-5) to advance to the semifinals. In the semifinals, Gage and Silva lost to Laird Beaty and Courtney Johnson from Lindale (2-6, 6-4, 3-6). Head coach Sarah Corse said both matches were great.

"(Gage and Silva) played well but didn't get it in the end," Corse said.

Gage and Silva took home a third place medal. Corse said she wished they would have won, adding her players gave her all they had.

"I can't be disappointed with my players," Corse said. "They gave me all they had and left it all on the court."

Glo-Valve routs Claude 16-3

SPECIAL TO THE PAMPA NEWS

Glo-Valve Service banged out 11 hits en route to a 16-3 win over Claude Monday in Pampa Optimist 11-12 Cal Ripken action.

Tyler McCarn and Logan Martindale paced the Glo-Valve attack. McCarn was two for two, with a double, a run scored and two RBI. Martindale had two hits, including a double, three runs and two RBI.

Brendon Woelfle won his second game of the season allowing only one hit and no runs in three innings. He struck out seven, hit a batter but allowed no walks. Bryce Parker finished up for Glo-Valve allowing three runs on two hits. He struck out two and walked two in one inning of work.

Glo-Valve scored nine times in the first inning on three walks, two hit batters, three errors and a two-run double by McCarn. In the second inning Glo-Valve used singles by Bryce Parker, Clay Baten, Kade Parker and Garrett Ely and doubles by Martindale and Braydon Fry to send four more runners home.

In the bottom of the third inning Glo-Valve added three more runs on hits by McCarn, Thomas Costley, Martindale and Justin Beck.

Baten turned a quick double play in the first inning for Glo-Valve by catching a line drive at third base and throwing across the diamond to Fry at first to catch the runner who was off with the pitch for a defensive gem. Bryce Parker threw to Baten playing first in the fourth inning to pick off a runner to end the game for another outstanding defensive play. Martindale went to the screen to snag a pop foul for another fine defensive play.

Tuesday's game features Rotary against Duncan, Fraser & Bridges Insurance Agency in a battle for first place at 5:45 p.m. at Optimist Park. Glo-Valve will go to Panhandle for a 5:45 p.m. start Thursday while Cabot Corporation visits Claude at the same time.

The Pampa Optimist Youth Club is a Pampa United Way agency.

31 People In Pampa Needed for A Paid Research Study on Hearing Loss

Starkey, the world leader in advanced hearing technology, is conducting a paid research study on hearing aid performance in a variety of listening environments.

Participants must have their hearing tested at a local authorized research center, and in five listening environments including restaurant noise, quiet, television, telephone and with a familiar voice (spouse or family member preferred, but anyone whose voice is familiar will be accepted).

Participants must then fill out a short survey concerning their impressions on the performance of the new hearing instruments.

No purchase is necessary to participate in this study.

Research Participants will receive:

- $50 cash
- A free hearing check up
- A free video otoscope exam of your ear canal
- Savings up to $500 off a pair of Digital hearing aids
