Plenty of laughs, memories at Carver School reunion

ARNIE AURELLANO editor@thepampanews.com

The Carver School may have closed its doors decades ago, but its memory lives on in the hearts of its alumni.

Several ex-students of the city's former African American educational facility came together to reminisce and reconnect with old friends and classmates at the third semi-annual Carver School reunion, held Saturday afternoon at Recreation Park. There was plenty of food, plenty of music, plenty of laughter and, of course, plenty of memories.

"Everybody's just getting together and talking about the times we had at Carver," said Carole Shelvin, organizer of the reunion. "We all went there different times, different years, but we all have the same happy memories." CARVER cont. on page 10

Trio of accidents sends six people to hospital

ARNIE AURELLANO editor@thepampanews.com

A busy Friday for the Pampa Police Department ended with six people being sent to the Pampa Regional Medical Center as a result of three separate accidents around the city, according to Crime Prevention Officer Stormy McCullar.

The first one occurred at 3:23 p.m. at intersection of Hobart and Gwendolyn. According to the official police report, the 2006 Nissan Altima driven by Erin Richman, 28, of Pampa, was stopped at the stop sign on Gwendolyn headed eastbound when it attempted to make a left turn and was struck by the 1999 Chevrolet Tahoe of Theron McDougall, 36, of Canadian, which was traveling south on Hobart.

Richman and two other passengers in the Altima were taken to PRMC. Everyone involved was wearing a safety belt, according to the report.

The second accident occurred just over an hour later, when, at 4:35 p.m., the 2006 Dodge pickup of Cruz Wayne Robertson, 23, of Amarillo, collided with the 2002 Chevrolet Tahoe of Steven Esparza, 25, of Amarillo.

McCullar said that Robertson's Dodge was stopped at the stop sign on Kentucky when Robertson attempted to turn left. Robertson didn't see the oncoming northbound vehicle of Esparza on Price and the two struck each other in the intersection, McCullar said.

Both drivers were wearing their safety[°] belts and were taken to PRMC for injuries.

Friday's third accident happened at 7:20 p.m. at the corner of N. Hobart and Randy Matson. According to the police report, Christopher Perez, 39, of Pampa, was behind the wheel of a 1988 Ford Ranger at a solid green light. He attempted to make a left turn and was struck by the 2008 Nissan Altima of Katherine Thomas, 37, of Pampa.

Sometimes it takes a catastrophe to make you aware of just how vulnerable you are. One big lesson: The midst of a hurricane, whether financial or weather-related, is not the time to begin preparations. You need to recognize potential risk well in advance of the disaster — and be as prepared as possible.

It's scary to look at our own vulnerabilities. While you don't want to obsess over things you can't control, you do want to be as prepared as possible. But while preparation can mitigate the impact of the weather, it can't turn back the forces of nature.

We live in a modern society, which is possible because

It is that delusion that is most costly — because it leads us to believe that someone else is responsible for our economic misery, and, even worse, the belief that someone can "cure" our economic malady.

Millions of people today are still living without power as a result of the weather. They are not casting blame, for they recognize that the real challenge is to deal with the immediate necessities.

Similarly, millions of Americans have been out of work for two years or more. Our political process almost guarantees that blame will be cast and fingers will be pointed. But it is as fruitless to waste our time on economic blame as it is to shout at the heavens. The inevitability of risk We do risky things. We build a portion of New York City on landfill that is barely above sea level - and it works for a long time. Until it doesn't. (We barely missed seeing what happens when it doesn't work, as Irene created only a wading pool in lower Manhattan, not a horror movie.) We built levees in New Orleans that were designed to weather only a Category 3 hurricane, knowing full well that a Category 5 hurricane could occur. They built nuclear plants in Japan, not taking into account the very long-shot possibility of a tsunami sweeping inland. When we do risky things, we take calculated risks. You do that when you get in a car to drive to work or get on a plane to go on vacation. Life is not without risks - and we accept that.

forever, so we did not save for the tough times. Then, when the bad times come, we learn our lesson.

Sadly, it seems that this lesson of economic cycles must be relearned by every generation that has not felt the impact of the cycle. At least, that's what the Russian economist Nikolai Kondratieff theorized when he recognized a series of economic boom-and-bust cycles lasting approximately 57 years. The good news is that every major downturn creates the seeds of future economic growth in the next up-cycle. Debts are erased, liquidity increases — and new and creative inventions are spurred, ready to take hold in the coming upturn. But just like the tides of wind and water, you can't stop these natural phenomena. You can only learn from history — and be as prepared as possible for the future. And that's the Savage Truth.

things "work." In fact, our infrastructure works so well that we tend to take it for granted. We assume that the basic necessities of life will be provided for us — clean air to breathe, good water to drink, heat (or air conditioning) to make our homes comfortable. And above all, we rely on electricity to facilitate all of those necessities and communication.

It's only when we're temporarily without these basics that we give them much thought. And then we realize that we don't have as much control as we think we have. We aren't in control

Even while CNN can cover a natural disaster with reporters standing against the wind, we are forced to grudgingly accept that despite all our technology, we can't control the weather. No government agency, no media coverage, no united protest will give us the power to change this inexorable force of nature.

Why, then, are we so confident that we can control the forces of economics? Why do we believe that as mere mortals, we can control economic cycles, which are natural forces arising out of human emotions and desires?

Over the past few hundred years of modern civilization, many have tried to control economic cycles. And all have failed. The old USSR tested the concept of Marxist government control to death. Each year brought a new five-year plan — and more shortages of food and consumer basics.

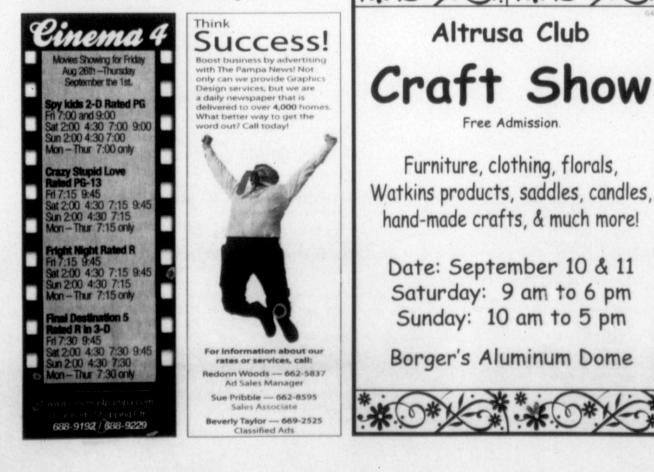

The belief that there is a way to control - or end - economic cycles is the ultimate hubris. Yet, after a period of good economic times, there is always the mistaken belief that the cycle is "under control," along with the irrational belief that the good times are destined to last forever, because "this time things are different."

Yet, when it comes to our economy, we blindly believe that risk can be limited by either smart people in charge or government bureaucrats (they are not the same) — or by our own good luck.

We ignore risk. Or worse, we think that we are invulnerable because someone else will free us from the consequences of economic risks, which are as inherent as weather risks — and perhaps even more predictable.

And because we ignore economic risk in this belief that it can be controlled, we are all the more devastated when the consequences arise, because we have not prepared for the risk. We believed that good times would go on Terry Savage is a registered investment adviser and is on the board of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Today in History

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 6, the 249th day of 2011. There are 116 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 6, 1901, President William McKinley was shot and mortally wounded by anarchist Leon Czolgosz at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, N.Y. (McKinley died eight days later; he was succeeded by Vice President Theodore Roosevelt. Czolgosz was executed in October 1901.)

On this date:

In 1861, Union forces led by Gen. Ulysses S. Grant occupied Paducah, Ky., during the Civil War.

In 1916, the first self-service grocery store, Piggly Wiggly, was opened in Memphis, Tenn., by Clarence Saunders.

In 1939, the Union of South Africa declared war on Germany.

In 1948, Princess Juliana of the Netherlands was inaugurated as queen, two days after the abdication of her mother, Queen Wilhelmina.

In 1966, South African Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd was stabbed to death by an apparently deranged page during a parliamentary session in Cape Town.

In 1970, Palestinian guerrillas seized control of three U.S.-bound jetliners. (Two were later blown up on the ground in Jordan, along with a Londonbound plane hijacked on Sept. 9; the fourth plane was destroyed on the ground in Egypt. No hostages were harmed.)

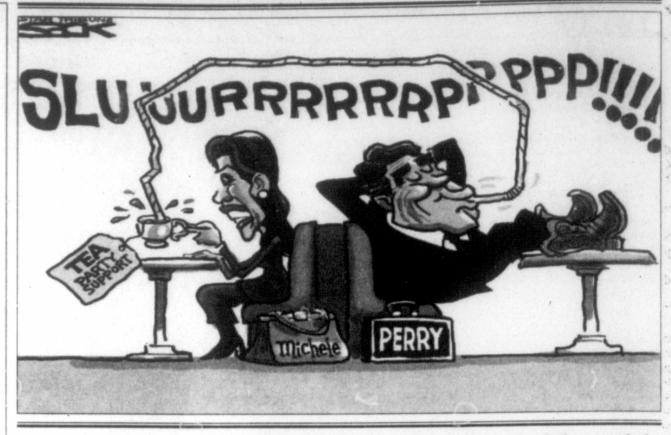

In 1991, the Soviet Union recognized the independence of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia. Russian lawmakers upheld a decision by residents of Leningrad to restore the city's pre-revolutionary name, St. Petersburg.

Ten years ago: Mexican President Vicente Fox addressed a joint session of the U.S. Congress, urging greater trust between the neighboring countries as the basis for "a new partnership in North America."

Five years ago: President George W. Bush acknowledged for the first time that the CIA was running secret prisons overseas and said tough interrogation had forced terrorist leaders to reveal plots to attack the United States and its allies.

One year ago: President Barack Obama rolled out a long-term jobs program that would exceed $50 billion to rebuild roads, railways and runways, and coupled it with a blunt campaign-season assault accusing Republicans of causing Americans' hard economic times.

Post-9/11 'new normal' looks much like old

CALVIN WOODWARD Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) - In the crucible of Sept. 11, no one could imagine things would ever be the same again. Seems they pretty much are.

The attacks that spawned two wars and will shout forever from history books are well receded from daily life for most Americans.

Not so for the soldiers who have fought or for those in government who know there will be hell to pay if the nation is ever caught so off guard again.

For the rest?

The "new normalcy," as life under threat was called 10 years ago and many times since, is resembling the old one. Airport security shakedowns excepted.

This, after an epoch shaped by fear and fighting, the onset of the Patriot Act and all its new powers and the cobbling together of a homeland security superstructure meant to see over everything and is itself overseen by more than 100 committees in Congress.

In the aftermath of the terrorist attacks, the United States was host to all sorts of un-American activities.

Handing off the wars and the swollen anti-terrorism apparatus to his successor, President George W. Bush said in his final White House address in 2009 that "most Americans were able to return to life much as it had been before 9/11." He quickly added: "I never did."

He waged a war thrust upon him, in Afghanistan, and one of his own choosing, in Iraq. Both started fading from public attention even before President Barack Obama inherited them, upped the effort in Afghanistan, then began winding both down. Economic woes came roaring in as the public's chief concern.

With respect to the 9/11 tragedy, Ken Kreitner, 64, a Vietnam veteran from St. Louis, said, "I do think of it very often. Oh, yes. Almost every day."

But now, he added, "I do feel safe." Lee Hamilton, a leader of the Sept 11 commission that exposed preattack intelligence flaws, never stops believing the government can't be too careful and that people might be letting their guard down a bit too much.

"We better not be complacent," he told the AP. "That's what worries me. "I've always felt in the homeland after Sept. 11 settled into a more normal love of country and exasperation with its direction.

Abnormal valentines from abroad eventually vanished. After the attacks. Iranians waved candles on the streets for America. They were back to "death to America" after Bush labeled their government evil and prepared to invade Iraq.

Le Monde newspaper in Paris asserted "We are all Americans today" after 9/11, then declared Europeans "have a different truth to proclaim" as unity frayed.

The killing of Osama bin Laden on May 1 was a celebratory moment across the country but just that, a moment. Ten years from now, most are not likely to remember where they were and what they were doing on 5/1. Ten years after 9/11, everyone old enough remembers almost everything. "Everything came to a halt, whole store, everybody was in shock" recalls Candice Parker; 39, meat manager of a retail store in Anchorage, Alaska.

She couldn't help then but to think "Muslims are out to get us" and was nervous taking taxis because the driver might be one of them.

Now, she says, "I feel very safe."

Thought for Today: "The lesson of history is rarely learned by the actors themselves." - James A Garfield. 20th president of the United States (1831-1881)

Unemployed competing against each other

AP Business Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The job market is even worse than the 9.1 percent unemployment rate suggests.

America's 14 million unemployed aren't competing just with each other. They must also contend with 8.8 million other people not counted as unemployed - part-timers 'who want fulltime work.

When consumer demand picks up, companies will likely boost the hours of their part-timers before they add jobs, economists say. It means they have room to expand without hiring.

And the unemployed will face another source of competition once the economy improves: Roughly 2.6 million people who aren't counted as unemployed because they've stopped looking for work. Once they start looking again, they'll be classified as unemployed. And the unemployment rate could rise.

Intensified competition for jobs means unemployment could exceed its historic norm of 5 percent to 6 percent for several more years. The nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office expects the rate to exceed 8 percent until 2014. The White House predicts it will average 9 percent next year, when President Barack Obama runs for re-election.

The jobs crisis has led Obama to schedule a major speech Thursday night to propose steps to stimulate hiring. Republican presidential candidates will likely confront the issue in a debate the night before.

The back-to-back events will come days after the government said employers added zero net jobs in August. The monthly jobs report, arriving three days before Labor Day, was the weakest since September 2010.

Combined, the 14 million officially unemployed; the "underemployed" part-timers who want full-time work; and "discouraged" people who have stopped looking make up 16.2 percent of working-age Americans.

The Labor Department compiles the figure to assess how many people want full-time work and can't find it - a number the unemployment rate alone doesn't capture.

In a healthy economy, this broader measure of unemployment stays below 10 percent. Since the Great Recession officially ended more than two years ago, the rate has been 15 percent or more.

The proportion of the work force made up of the frustrated part-timers has risen faster than unemployment has since the recession began in December 2007.

That's because many companies slashed workers' hours after the recession hit. If they restored all those lost hours to their existing staff, they'd add enough hours to equal about 950,000 full-time jobs, according to calculations by Heidi Shierholz, an economist at the Economic Policy Institute.

That's without having to hire a single employee.

No one expects every company to delay hiring until every part-timer is working full time. But economists expect job growth to stay weak for two or three more years in part because of how many frustrated part-timers want to work full time.

And because employers are still reluctant to increase hours for parttimers, "hiring is really a long way off," says Christine Riordan, a policy analyst at the National Employment, Law Project. In August, employees of private companies worked fewer hours than in July.

Some groups are disproportionately represented among the broader category of unemployment that includes underemployed and discouraged workers. More than 26 percent of African Americans, for example, and nearly 22 percent of Hispanics are in: this category. The figure for whites is less than 15 percent. Women are more likely than men to be in this group.

Nationally, 4.5 unemployed people, on average, are competing for each job opening. In a healthy economy, the average is about two per opening. Facing rejection, millions give up and stop looking for jobs. Emma Draper, 23, lost her public relations job this summer. To pay the rent on her Washington apartment, she's working part time at the ment, she's working part time at the retailer South Moon Under. She's selling $120 Ralph Lauren swimsuits and other trendy clothes.

Her search for full-time work has been discouraging. Employers don't call back for months, if ever.

"You're basically on their timeline," Draper says. "It's really hard to find a job unless you know somebody who can give you an inside edge."

Retailers, in particular, favor parttimers. They value the flexibility of being able to tap extra workers during peak sales times without being overstaffed during lulls. Some use software to precisely match their staffing levels with customer traffic. It holds down their expenses. Max Heat Clay Fran Dani Orva Davi

Over hundred people descended upon the Pampa Country Club for the 76th Top O'Texas Tournament Saturday through Monday

Golf pro Tim Stadler said the turnout was great.

"We had a lot of people show up," Stadler said. "A lot of really good people.'

Stadler said he thought for the most part the tournament had good weather.

"(Sunday) wasn't good," Stadler said. "They should get great scores (Monday)."

At the start of the tournament, the country club had Patriot Golf Day. Golfers could donate to the Folds of Honor, which provides scholarships to families who have lost loved ones or had ones that were severely injured. Peggy McGuire, who was taking donations, said she received several.

"Just about everyone participated," McGuire said. "We raised over a thousand. Several were interested in knowing more about it.'

The last thing McLean junior Zach Sargent remembers about last Friday's game against Motley County is waking up on the helicopter and having the paramedic telling him they were three to four minutes from Amarillo. Sargent is recovering from a severe concussion that could put him out two to three weeks. Sargent was injured on an onside kick when he was hit by a Motley County player. He was airlifted to Northwest Hospital in Amarillo and was released Saturday night. X-Rays and MRI were negative for spinal breaks, fractures and swelling near the brain. The junior said he is still Sargent

"I'm sore and have a headache," Sargent said. "I've had back spasms." Head coach David Jurado said he was glad it wasn't as seri-staff) were concerned that he suffered some bruising in the spine," Jurado said. "They did an MRI and it turned out negative. So we got good news on the result.

Sargent said he felt bad for delaying the game.

"He was asking what the score was," Jurado said.

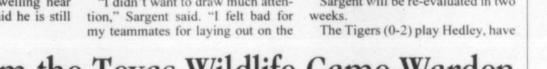

Sargent said he was told to just rest and deal with the pain.

"Right now they have me on bedrest and just bare the pain," Sargent said. "I'll take Ibuprofen on my bad davs.

Jurado said the team will play it by ear and hopes his junior will get to play.

'Concussions are nothing to play with," Jurado said. "We will follow doctors orders and play it safe and hold him out."

Sargent will be re-evaluated in two feeling the effects.

Nothing like a cheery campfire in a heat wave: Val Verde County Game Wardens Mike Durand and Dustin Barrett and Val Verde County sheriff's deputies responded on Aug. 19 to a report of trespassers on the Nature Conservancy property on the Devils River. They found five kayakers enjoying a campfire despite a drought-related county burn ban and cited them. Trespass cases also were filed.

Not just backpackers out for a hike: Game Wardens assisted Border Patrol agents in apprehending a group of drug smug glers south of Marfa on Aug. 24. Seven men were arrested and each had a backpack of drugs, which were seized. Charges pending.

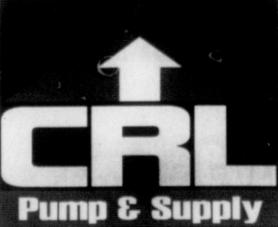

Suspected road hunter just a lady needing help: Near dark on Aug. 22, Grayson County Game Warden Dale Moses was returning home from working on a background investigation when he saw a vehicle's brake lights come on. The vehicle then pulled over to the shoulder about 150 yards down from his gate. Thinking the driver might be looking at deer, Moses went to investigate. As he approached the vehicle, a woman emerged with a stunned look on her face. At this point Moses noticed that the entire window of the vehicle had been shattered. The woman said she had hit something but didn't know what. Moses solved the mystery when he located a dead doe about 50 yards behind the vehicle. Luckily, the woman suffered only minor cuts. Moses waited with the woman until family members and a tow truck arrived. Man and dog drown: Dallas County Game Warden Tom Carbone was notified on Aug. 22 of a drowning on Lake Ray Hubbard. Two men and a dog had been on a boat near Wind Surfer Beach when all three reportedly went swimming, but only one man made it back to the boat. The next day, Carbone, Dallas County Game Warden Sergio Bazaldua and Lt. Jennifer Kemp searched the area with the aid of Dennis Watters, a pro tournament angler who specializes in underwater recoveries. Watters was conducting a search on Lake Ray Hubbard for the Dallas Police Department on another case and contacted Lt. Kemp to assist with the victim recovery on Tuesday. When the search began that morning, the dog was found near the shoreline in some cattails. Watters located the victim within three hours, and the recovery was made by a Dallas Fire Department diver

Both drivers were wearing seatbelts at the time of the accident. Perez was unhurt, but Thomas was taken to PRMC for evaluation of her injuries.

With all three collisions involving failure to yield at it turns, McCullar said that it's always important to bserve caution before proceeding into an intersection.

'When you're driving, it's always very, very important pay attention to what you're doing," McCullar said.

CICERO, IN WHO SAID YOU MEAN THAT SOME ROME.IN CONGRESS SENATOR

The Pampa News — Tuesday, September 6, 2011 — 9

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, Sept. 6,2011:

Express a newfound sense of dynamic thinking and acting more often. You are in a period of tremendous change and growth. Often, the unexpected occurs within situations you consider stable. Flex and recognize that you can choose an alternative. If you are single, you exude a certain unique attractiveness that draws suitors. Keep a new relationship light, and let it develop slowly. If you are attached, move through issues as a team, not individually. Your mate sparks your creativity. CAPRICORN enjoys you more than most signs.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

* You could be stressed out and not realize it. Stop and take a look at what you need in order to relax. If you can let go of tension, you will transform your reactions. Given a break, optimism and centering will return. Now act. Tonight: A must appearance

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

* You are opening up to different procedures and ideas. Your ability to understand depends on your detachment skills, especially with personal triggers. Cnce clear, you will make solid decisions; actions will follow in the same vein. Tonight: Let your imagination rock and roll.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

* Relate on a one-on-one level, making for greater clarity. Unexpected developments come forward that allow greater give-and-take. Listen to news with an open mind. Sort through what you feel is reality-based. Tonight: Togetherness is the theme.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

* Investigate new possibilities with an open eye. Be willing to toss away what no longer works. Insulate yourself from a problem person, and you will be much happier. Evaluate a matter with greater perspective and knowledge. Tonight: Dote on a friend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

* You might not like taking the plunge in order to move forward. Unexpected news could force a revamping of your thinking, if not your plans. You could be overly tired and withdrawn. Opportunities come through a high profile and an optimistic attitude. Tonight: A must appearance. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

* Tap into your creativity when someone you counted on lets you down. Remember to flex, reframe and see the situation in a different light. You might be amazed by what comes up if you are willing and open. Start thinking about an offer, which could involve travel. Tonight: So what if it is Tuesday?

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

 You are learning that you are your own best friend. Don't underestimate that fact. Sometimes you don't support yourself. This issue might come up with a real estate or partnership matter. Tonight: Bring extra work home, if possible

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) * You could be in touch with your friends and might want to see a situation in a much different light. Others react in an unanticipated manner. Stay open to the unexpected, which could bring a new option to your daily life. Tonight: Catch up on email, calls, etc.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

 You are all about money -- making it, investing it and spending it - at least for now. Your perceptions are changing, but you will be able to adapt to each bend in the road. Trust your judgment. Be willing to let go of what no longer works. Tonight: Treat yourself later, too!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

* Count on your energy and ability to handle a change. A transformation in your perspective keeps you invigorated. Let your creativity open up the full dimension of what you can conjure up. The unexpected plays a role. Tonight: Whatever pleases you. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

 Stand back and allow others to run the show. On some level, they need the experience in order to work through their judgments. You might want to consider pulling back more often. A change on the home front will be positive. Tonight: Not to be found. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

* How you say what you think and how you share your ideas seem to open up a meeting. Others see you as a sure-bet winner. What you think you want surprisingly might not be connected to the presentday you. Take a hard look at your desires. Tonight: Visit with a friend over a meal.

Carver

This year's event was the third Carver reunion semi-annually since the 2000s, Shelvin said. There were a pair of Carver reunions during the 80s, though a regular event was not established until 2007.

"We usually have at least 300 people come," said Shelvin, who attended Carver in the 1950s. "This year, we just have a hundred, but everyone's still having a great time."

Many of the event's attendees, including Shelvin, no longer live in Pampa but came back for the celebration. Shelvin left for Phoenix with her family in the 1960s and now resides in Houston. Lois Roland Manning, who went to Carver from 1958 to 1960, now lives in San Diego and hadn't been back to Pampa in 40 years until the Carver reunions restarted.

Asked what brought her back, Manning said the answer was simple.

"Pampa itself," she said. "This is my original home. I now live in California, but this is always my home, and I came back to see all my relatives, my friends, my schoolmates, the whole town. Just to see my old schoolmates smiling together again, sitting together again, it is a wonderful thing. Now I'm 62 and this'll just make me live longer.

Stanley Mathis, who went to Carver in 1966, said that this reunion meant more than just seeing some old faces and comparing stories.

raise a child," Mathis said. "We all were like family growing up, so we were all very close and we still are. We learned to take care of one another and be close with one another, so to have an opportunity to come together as a community like this once again is something that we all appreciate, something we all care about very much. A lot of the people here, we gave each other inspiration to go on and carry on, so to see all those people again, it's welcome to our hearts.

gathered for a worship service at Macedonia Baptist Church on Saturday evening, followed by a dance at the M.K. Brown Civic Center. And before getting together at Rec Park, several reunion-goers got to return to the old Carver building to see their old stomping grounds.

"On Thursday and Friday, they let us into the board room at the old Carver School," Shelvin said. "We go in the board look at the auditorium, we look at our old principal's office. The board room that we now enjoy was the industrial arts room. The room across the hall where the offices are was the home economics room. We remember a lot of things about Carver.

"The women's bathroom still looks the same as it did when we went," said Shelvin with a hearty laugh. "The only thing that changed was the radiator. They took out that radiator and put in a heater. It still has the chicken wire floors. I haven't seen chicken wire floors in a long time."

Many reunion-goers wore shirts commemorating Allen "Butterbean" Thompson, the first black man to come to Pampa in 1926, and Billie Phea, the longtime African American Pampa resident who died this past January at 103.

Still, despite the African reunion's American roots, Shelvin said that she wanted the event to grow into a celebration that crosses racial boundaries.

"This is a Pampa community reunion," Shelvin said. "It's inclusive of everyone who ever lived here. It's not only for blacks, it's for everybody... This is not just a cultural celebration, not at * all. This is a community celebration, and I want it to get bigger and bigger and get inclusive of everyone who ever lived in Pampa. It's all about just humanity. It's only _ about each other and loving each other."
