Honorable Man March starts at City Hall Tues.

ARNIE AURELLANO
editor@thepampanews.com

Pampa's ninth annual Honorable Man March, to be held in remembrance of the Texans who were killed by intimate partners in 2010, will begin at 6 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 18, on the north steps of Pampa City Hall.

The March is being held by the Tralee Crisis Center, which has been providing support to victims of domestic violence in the northeast Texas Panhandle for 27 years, along with its partners in the Pampa area. In conjunction with the event and joining many other communities nationwide,

Mayor Brad Pingel has declared the month of October as Domestic Violence Awareness Month in Pampa, encouraging "all citizens of Pampa to actively participate in the scheduled activities and programs to work toward improving victim safety and holding perpetrators of domestic violence accountable for their actions against individual victims and victimization of our society as a whole."

"We encourage everyone whose lives have been affected by domestic violence, who know someone who is a victim or who support the end of domestic violence to take part in this march," said Dee Dee HONORABLE cont. on page 12

Burn ban gets lifted until Friday

editor@thepampanews.com

The county burn ban has been temporarily lifted for a week, according to the office of Gray County Judge Richard Peet.

Gray County residents may legally have controlled burns from now until 5 p.m. Friday. The ban was lifted in part because of the moisture the area has received over the last few days; the wet weather may continue today with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms going into the evening.

County commissioners will vote at a meeting at 9 a.m. on Friday at the Gray County Courthouse on whether to continue the ban. The ban has been in effect since December of last year and has been persisted due to the ongoing threat of wildfires and the extremely dry weather that has continued throughout 2011.

Uncontrolled fires have been particularly destructive in Texas this year, with more than 2,800 homes destroyed during the state's wildfire season began in November. The latest, a 310-acre BAN cont. on page 12

Xcel Energy's SPS suing EPA over emission rule

ARNIE AURELLANO editor@thepampanews.com

Amarillo-based Southwestern Public Service, the Texas-based operating company of local electricity provider Xcel Energy, filed a federal lawsuit on Friday to overturn an Environmental Protection Agency emissions regulation known as the Cross-State Air Pollution Rule, or CSAPR.

The CSAPR, which was finalized on July 6, requires that utility companies reduce certain power plant emissions by the first day of 2012 in an effort to reduce year-round smog-producing emissions that drift across state lines. The final draft of the rule dropped the District of Columbia and five states, including Texas neighbors Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana, from its reached, but the EPA confirmed that Texas would be one of two states — Kansas is the other — that will be additions to the program.

"Like most other Texas utility companies, SPS and Xcel Energy had no prior knowledge that Texas would be included in the rule," according to a release from Xcel Energy media relations representative Wes Reeves.

Riley Hill, president and CEO of SPS, said that the rule in the short term forces SPS to reduce the output of its base load coal plants and instead depend more on its aging gas facilities.

"The imposition of CSAPR's new requirements on such an unreasonable schedule provides SPS with insufficient time to retrofit our generating units with the emissions-control technologies we already were planning to install over the next several years," he said. "A few months is not enough time to accomplish this."

The total estimated cost of switching primarily to more costly natural gas generation is expected to be $200 to $250 million in 2012 alone, Hill said — which translates to approximately $8 more per month for an Xcel CSAPR cont. on page 12

Oil prices above $85

NEW YORK (AP) - Oil prices jumped 3 percent Monday as fears of another recession retreated.

Prices rose Monday after France and Germany agreed to put more capital into European banks. The move by the eurozone's two biggest nations helped ease concerns that major banks in Europe and elsewhere would be brought down by the region's debt crisis.

Benchmark crude rose $2.43, or 3 percent, to end the day at $85.41 per barrel in New York. Brent crude, which is used to price many international kinds of oil, rose $3.07 to finish at $108.95 in London.

Economists had started to cut oil price and demand forecasts after the U.S. and European economies stalled in the third quarter. Now actions by European leaders to prop up ailing banks and encouraging economic news in the U.S. have brought oil prices back from 12-month

Analysts say they're more confident that there won't be another recession, and that means world oil demand should continue to grow.

"Everyone had priced in a recession, and now we're realizing that, while the economy won't be growing that fast, it's still growing," PFGBest analyst Phil Flynn said. Despite sluggish economic growth in the U.S. and Europe, world oil demand is still expected to hit a record of about 88 million barrels per day this year. Demand is growing as China, India and other developing nations continue to expand.

MORTGAGE LOANS. Here's another case of "damned if you do, and damned if you don't" for the banks. We want them to start making mortgage loans to "qualified" borrowers. SAN ANTONIO (AP) Gunpowder receipts and other Alamo-related battle preparation documents will be offered for sale online in November.

The items belonged to Robert E. Davis of Waco, a private collector who died in 2003, the San Antonio Express-News reported Sunday.

One note dated Feb. 21 is for $85.25, owed to Eugenio Navarro, for 50 beams of black walnut, for a structure to support at least one of the Alamo's 21 cannons.

"There is now in use in the Alamo six hundred and eighty two feet of walnut scantling as platforms for

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 11, the 284th day of 2011. There are 81 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 11, 1811, the first steam-powered ferryboat, the Juliana (built by John Stevens), was put into operation between New York City and Hoboken, N.J.

On this date:

in 1779, Polish nobleman Casimir Pulaski, fighting for American independence, died two days after being wounded during the Revolutionary War Battle of Savannah, Ga.

In 1890, the Daughters of the American Revolution was founded in Washington, D.C.

In 1910, Theodore Roosevelt became the first former U.S. president to fly in an airplane during a visit to St. Louis, Mo.

In 1932, the first American political telecast took place as the Democratic National Committee sponsored a program from a CBS television studio in New York.

In 1958, the lunar probe Pioneer 1 was launched; it failed to go as far out as planned, fell back to Earth, and burned up in the atmosphere. In 1968, Apollo 7, the first manned Apollo mission, was launched with astronauts Wally Schirra, Donn Fulton Eisele and R. Walter Cunningham aboard.

In 1984, space shuttle Challenger astronaut Kathryn Sullivan became the first American woman to walk in space.

In 1986, President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev opened two days of talks concerning arms control and human rights in Reykjavik, Iceland.

In 1991, testifying before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Anita Hill accused Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas of sexually harassing her; Thomas re-appeared before the panel to denounce what he called a "high-tech lynching."

Ten years ago: In his first prime-time news conference since taking office, President George W. Bush said "it may take a year or two" to track down Osama bin Laden and his terrorist network in Afghanistan, but asserted that after a five-day aerial bombardment, "we've got them on the run."

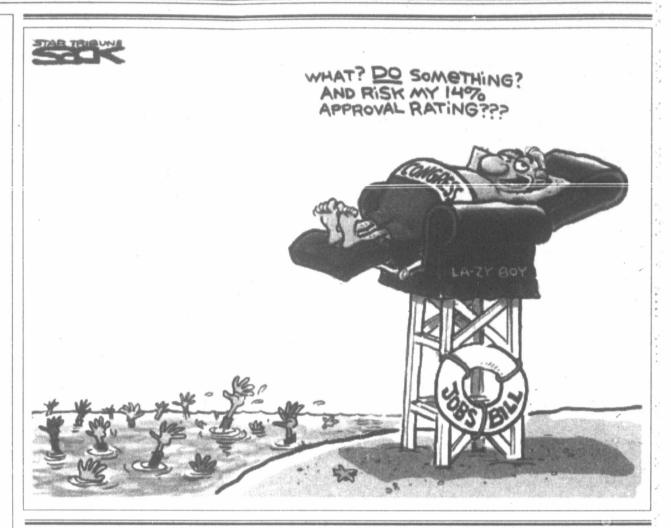

Five years ago: A plane carrying New York Yankees pitcher Cory Lidle and flight instructor Tyler Stanger crashed into a high-rise apartment building in New York City, killing both men.

One year ago: Rescuers in Chile finished reinforcing a hole drilled to bring 33 trapped miners to safety and sent a rescue capsule nearly all the way to where the men were trapped, proving the escape route worked.

Today's Birthdays: Author Elmore Leonard is 86. Actor Earle Hyman is 85. Actor Ron Leibman is 74. Actor Amitabh Bachchan is 69. Country singer Gene Watson is 68. Actress-director Catlin Adams is 61. Country singer Paulette Carlson is 60. Actor David Morse is 58. Actor Stephen Spinella is 55. Actress Joan Cusack is 49. Rock musician Scott Johnson (Gin Blossoms) is 49. Comedy writer and TV host Michael J. Nelson is 47. Actor Sean Patrick Flanery is 46. . Actor Luke Perry is 45. Actor-comedian Artie Lange is 44. Actress Jane Krakowski is 43. Singer NeeNa Lee is 36. Actress Emily Deschanel is 35. Actor Matt Bomer is 34. Actor Trevor Donovan is 33. Actress Michelle Trachtenberg is 26.

Thought for Today: "Modesty is the highest form of arrogance." - German saying.

Republicans just want to fall in love

To understand the 2012 Republican presidential contest in the fall of 2011, think of GOP voters as a young maiden writing for advice from a wise elder such as Ann Landers.

"What's wrong with me? He's handsome, an excellent provider, well-educated, and he comes from a good family. He neither drinks nor smokes and doesn't run around. While courting me relentlessly for several years now, he has always been well-mannered and unfailingly attentive to my changing moods. These are all huge pluses.

"But here's my problem: He just doesn't make my heart race. And he's not much fun. Should I stop looking for excitement, grow up and simply settle for ... Mitt?'

All of a sudden, for no apparent reason, Republicans have been behaving like Democrats who, we all know, too often let their emotions rule when picking a presidential nominee. As I've said before, when it comes to presidential nominations,

Republicans fall in line while Democrats fall in love. (See Barack Obama, 2008.)

The GOP prefers its standardbearers to be familiar, well-traveled. Ronald Reagan, now the party's consensus patron saint, first sought the nomination in 1968 and then again in 1976 before finally winning it in 1980. Bob Dole was the vice-presidential nominee in 1976 and ran unsuccessfully for the presidential nomination in 1980 and 1988 before finally winning the prize in 1996. Richard Nixon was one of only two Americans nominated five times by a major party for national office. George H.W. Bush had failed to win the 1980 presidential nomination and had twice been elected VP before becoming the 1988 nominee. His son had won two terms as governor of Texas. John McCain had finished second in 2000 to George W. Bush before winning the 2008 nomination.

MARK

I can still recall the Republican activist in Ottumwa, Iowa, before that state's 1996 Republican caucuses. He explained why that year he was supporting the Kansas senator: "It's Bob Dole's turn.'

I have never heard any Democrat say those words. Democrats are glandular types. They fall head-overheels for presidential candidates they hadn't known just weeks earlier. Remember first-time candidates George McGovern (1972), Jimmy Carter (1976), the comet-like Gary Hart (1984), the suddenly emerging Michael Dukakis (1988), the newcomer Bill Clinton (1992), John Kerry (2004) and Obama? Since 1968, the only real known quantities Democrats have picked were two men who had served as vice president: Walter Mondale and Al Gore.

While Republican voters value in their candidates the credential of having run previously and lost, environmentally minded Democrats never think of recycling their leaders. Any Democratic presidential candidate who loses immediately and unceremoniously is dropped like a bad habit.

Gov. Romney has run before. He has won a tough election in a heavily Democratic state. He is well-funded and has assembled a competent, professional campaign staff. He has been exceptionally sure-footed.

But to what end? Respected Republicans publicly behaved like Justin Bieber's teeny-boppers in their feverish pursuit of New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie. Normally sensible Republicans now want to have a crush, want to feel tingly all over. They're even flirting, according to latest polls, with pizza executive, radio talk-show host and motivational speaker Herman Cain, who has never run in a general election for any public office (obviously, to take political advantage of the "experience" issue against the incumbent in 2012).

Forget falling in love, Republicans. As Democrats can attest from listening tearfully to too many concession speeches, love in politics is overrated.

Smugglers turning to border states to buy ammunition

PHOENIX (AP) — Smugglers are turning to Arizona and other Southwest border states to buy ammunition that they then sneak across the border for use by Mexican drug cartels.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives told The Arizona Republic that (http://bit. ly/okmte1) most of the ammunition used by the cartels comes from the United States.

"Fifty rounds might cost you 15 bucks here," said Jose Wall, senior trafficking agent for the agency in Phoenix. "But sell them in Mexico, I'll bet you can make $45."

Hundreds of thousands of rounds of ammunition are purchased each year from online retailers, big-box stores and at gun shows in Arizona and other Southwest border states and then are smuggled across the border.

Over the past five years, seizures of ammunition at Arizona's six ports of entry along the Mexican border have risen steeply, from 760 rounds in fiscal 2007 to 95,416 in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

That reflects both a stepped-up effort by U.S. Customs and Border Protection to check southbound vehicles for guns and bullets and a rising demand for ammo by drug

One factor that enables the smuggling is the relative ease with which bullets can be bought in the United States. There are few restrictions on the number of rounds someone can buy.

In Mexico, ammunition is strictly regulated and possession of even a single illegal round can lead to prison. Laws in the U.S. that once treated ammunition sales as rigorously as gun sales were repealed in 1986 and haven't been re-enacted.

Under current federal law, buyers must be U.S. citizens and have no felony convictions. Anyone over 18 can buy rifle ammunition, and anyone over 21 can buy handgun ammo.

But the decision to sell 10, 100 or even 10,000 rounds of ammunition is left up to the individual retailer. Sellers don't have to record the transaction or report the buyer to authorities under federal law.

Gun dealers say there is no reason to implement new restrictions. They say most buyers have legitimate reasons for buying ammunition in bulk, including firearms instructors and sports enthusiasts taking advantage of discount prices.

"I don't see anything wrong with it," said Don Gallardo, manager of Shooter's World in Phoenix. Should we restrict someone from buying 10 cases of beer versus one case of beer?"

Federal authorities say the lack of restrictions has turned Arizona into an ammunition warehouse for Mexican drug lords, who only have to find ways to get it across the border.

Joe Agosttini, assistant port director in Nogales, said U.S. Customs and Border Protection agents began concentrating on guns and ammunition about two years ago, leading to a rise in the number of seizures.

He said before 2009, agents relied on a method called pulse and surge," which means they ran searches for a limited number of hours at various entry points.

Now, in Nogales, searches are done 24 hours a day, seven days a week at the Dennis DeConcini Port of Entry and 16 hours a day at the Mariposa Port of Entry.

Dallas-based Herson sisters hike Mt. Kilimanjaro for Save One Life

DALLAS (AP) - It wasn't until they had climbed 14,200 feet above sea level that Brittney and Kelly Herson realized something wasn't quite right with their dad.

The hike up Mount Kilimanjaro in Tanzania was supposed to be a father-daughter adventure for the Dallas family, but Neil Herson was struck with severe altitude sickness

The sisters watched as their dad shook uncontrollably as a result of a lack of oxygen to his brain. He made the decision to leave the hike after the second day.

"It was so scary," 16-yearold Kelly said. "Doctors said that if he had gone further, something terrible could have happened.

At first the girls didn't think they could continue without him. But after coming so far, they decided that with each other's help they could finish.

"I couldn't have done it without her," 20-year-old Brittney said. "Sometimes I was beyond frustrated with the situation, and Kelly was like, 'Just keep

They were filled with the spirit of "twende, twende," the Swahili phrase for "let's go." The girls call it "the phrase of the mountain."

"I was very proud of them," Neil Herson said. "Having each other made a big difference. It really helped them make it to the top.

Brittney and Kelly hiked to the top of Africa's highest peak this summer as part of a fundraising effort for Save One Life, a nonprofit that provides sponsorships for people with hemophilia in developing countries. The group helped raise more than $64,500 for the charity. The sisters have a unique connection to Save One Life. The girls' father is president of ASD Healthcare, and he donates his unused medications and materials to the charity. He also sponsors 51 kids with hemophilia through the program. It was their father's compassion for the organization that inspired Kelly and Brittney to take on this challenge, though they received mixed reactions from their friends and family.

"Most of my friends were pretty shocked," Brittney said. I am active and like to be outdoors, but I am not your typical mountain-climbing girl."

"Our family was scared for us," Kelly said. "People die every year during the climb."

More than 20,000 tourists attempt to climb Mount Kilimanjaro each year — but 60 percent of them never finish and around 10 people die annually during the climb, usually from high-altitude sickness.

The girls' hike up the mountain was a six-day trek: five days up, one day down. The group took the "Machame" route up the mountain. It has the highest success rate.

Six different ecosystems cover the mountain. The girls were taken through a rainforest filled with trees that looked as if they belonged in a Dr. Seuss book, a frightening path with closely packed rocks and a snowy mountain cap they felt they would never reach.

'You're just going up and up and up," Kelly said. "You stop for breaks, but they are never long enough."

On the fourth day, the girls began the final summit, leaving base camp at midnight. Temperatures were well below zero, so the girls wore eight layers of clothes, three layers of gloves and several warmers as they climbed for seven straight hours to the top.

"We were exhausted. Everything hurt. We had fevers," Kelly said. "Even though it takes a lot of physical strength, mental strength was so much a part of it.'

"The hike stripped you down to your raw emotions," Brittney said. "Just one foot in front of the other, that's what I told myself.'

But the intense climb didn't dampen the girls' spirits. As dawn broke, Brittney laughed at the sight of Kelly shaking her hips to the music on her iPod. Then the sisters saw each other for the first time in daylight and were shocked at their appearance.

"My hair was covered in icicles!" Brittney remembered. "Our evelashes and evebrows were white," Kelly

"I looked like a snow monster," Brittney joked.

The girls reached the top of the mountain a couple of hours later. In the course of 41/2 days, they had climbed more than 19,000 feet. "I almost started crying — it didn't seem possible," Brittney said. "But me doing that right in that moment made me feel like I could do anything in the rest of my life.'

Since returning to America, the sisters have been faced with new challenges. Kelly is in her junior year at Yavneh Academy and Brittney is tackling an internship in Washington D.C.

The phrase of the mountain still motivates them: "Twende, twende" - let's go, let's go.

Twister hits San Antonio homes

SAN ANTONIO (AP) A small tornado touched down in San Antonio early Sunday, damaging several homes and a post office.

The overnight storm dumped more than 3 inches of rain on the city and left thousands without power, the San Antonio Express-News (http:// bit.ly/puHppY) reported. It was not immediately clear whether the tornado caused any injuries.

The twister touched down about 1:20 a.m. Sunday and traveled about 1.5 miles with a path about 50 yards wide, according to the National Weather Service. Strength and wind-speed estimates have not been determined.

The storm tossed around postal trucks and bent lights in a parking lot before it dissipated.

The extent of the damage was unclear Sunday, but at least four families were displaced from their homes, according to the American Red Cross in San Antonio. Volunteers met with the families and made arrangements at a local hotel for 11 adults and eight children, Red Cross spokeswoman Luch Lashover said.

Lisa Campos, 35, said she was awakened by the strong winds shortly after "It sounded like a whistle, and then everything crashed," she said. "I didn't know what it was, but it was over fast - it just lasted about two minutes." Campos said she and her four sons between the ages of 2 and 14 stood in shock in the living room before realizing what happened. Shortly afterward, she heard sirens, and a San Antonio police officer later knocked on her door and told her a tornado may have struck.

She said trash was strewn across her backyard, and the roofing of a back patio had been bent in different

"It could have been much worse," she said.

Nearby, Daniel Martinez, 27, awoke to a loud bang. He said his younger brother pried open the front door, which was being held shut by the wind, and saw a mailbox flying through the air. After several minutes, the winds quieted, he said, and neighbors emerged from their homes to survey the damage.

The roof of his parent's house had been blown off, and a neighbor's tree had somehow become lodged in the windshield of a truck.

"It was very surprising," said Martinez, whose family chose to remain in the partially damaged home. We're not really known for our tornadoes here in San Antonio."

About 9,300 homes reported power outages overnight, CPS Energy spokesman Victor Robledo said. By midday, about 2,300 customers remained in the dark, he said.

Think we had a lot of mistakes," Allen ad. We got down on ourselves but we kept it together to sweep.

Pampa (24-8, 4-0) pulled out to a fouroint lead at 7-3 in Game One. Senior Sailyn Troxell scored three kills and enior Alanna Stephens scored two. The ady Bulldogs went on a run and cut the ad in half. Borger's Emma Wood and ellie Embers scored kills to cut Pampa's end to 10-8. The Lady Harvesters outscored Borger 7-3 to increase their lead. Borger made one more run and cut l'ampa's lead to two at 20-18. Pampa was able to close out the game with a kill by tephens.

Early in the second game, the Lady Bulldogs pulled out to a 9-5 lead. Kaylee and Allyson Burrow scored kills to help lead the offense. The Lady Harvesters regrouped and went on a 7-3 run to tie the game at 12. Troxell contributed three kills during the run. The teams exchanged points on the next four serves but Borger scored three straight to take a 17-14 lead. Head coach Libby Garza took a timeout and Pampa responded outscoring the Lady Bulldogs 6-2. Stephens scored to put Pampa ahead 20-19. Senior Ramie Hutto scored to put Pampa up 24-21. The Lady Harvesters won when Borger's serve went out of bounds.

Troxell said Garza told them that they weren't going to lose the game.

'She said we just had to up our intensity," Troxell said.

In the third game, Pampa jumped out to a 5-0 lead but the Lady Bulldogs came back and tied the game at nine. The teams exchanged points for a little while before Pampa started to pull away. Junior Maddie Fatheree scored a kill and Troxell scored two to increase Pampa's lead to 17-13. Borger took a timeout but wasn't able to get closer than three.

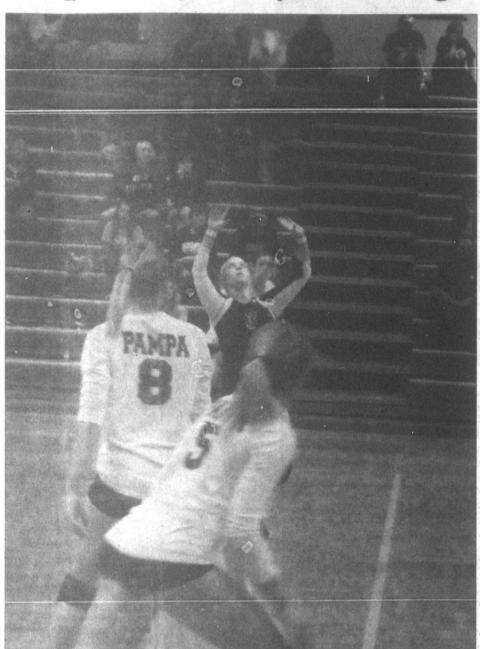

The Lady Harvesters host Perryton 6:30 p.m. today. On Saturday, Pampa visits Dalhart. If Dalhart lost Saturday against Perryton or loses to Borger on Tuesday, the Lady Harvesters can clinch district with a victory

PHS swim team nets seventh in Lubbock

ANDREW GLOVER aglover@thepampanews.com

The Pampa Harvesters' swim team finished seventh at the Lubbock Relays Saturday at the Pete Ragus Aquatic center.

Thirteen teams competed in a coed competition, instead of being separate male and female teams. Head coach Edward Garvin said it was a fun meet to start the season.

"We competed in a bunch of different relays," Garvin said.

Some of the relays included the use of fins and floats. Garvin said he was happy with his team's performance considering it was some of his swimmers first meet.

"My main goal was to have fun," Garvin said. "I wanted to see us get good times. Some of our swimmers it was their first meet and I saw some good performances."

The Harvesters and Lady Harvesters next meet is the Lubbock Duals on October 20. After that Pampa competes at the Abilene Invitational on October 22.

Garvin said both meets will be good tests for his teams. "We will be facing a pretty good Lubbock team," Garvin said. "We will get a good look at Caprock. In Abilene we will face some pretty tough teams. We didn't go to Abitene last year, so I'm not sure what to expect."

Tigers edge Longhorns for first win

ANDREW GLOVER aglover@thepampanews.com

Friday night in McLean started with the crowning of a new Homecoming King and Queen and ended with the Tigers securing their first victory of the season, 26-22 over the Darrouzett Longhorns.

Head coach David Jurado said the team came out and played well.

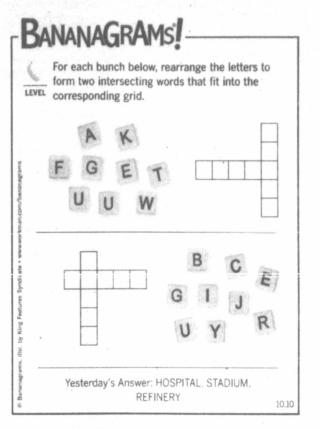

"We were really agressive," Jurado said. "We were the ones forcing the blows and come out with a win. It was good for our team morale."

The Tigers (1-5) lost their last four games by at least 28 points. Jurado said they were able to overcome their

"We had a couple of turnovers," Jurado said. "We fumbled the ball on our first possession. Then we scored on our second possession. Jordan (Herring) hit a receiver for a touchdown, but he was a half yard in front of the line, so it got called back and we didn't up scoring. Thank goodness it didn't cost us the game.

Friday's game concluded McLean's non-district schedule. The Tigers travel to Kress (3-3, 0-1) on October 14 to open district. Jurado said the win gives his team some momentum going into district.

"It was definitely good to get a win," Jurado said. "A lot of these guys are starting for the first time this season. It's tough when you are starting for the first time on Friday night and figuring out your assignments. They need to learn to win.

Harvesters make progress, still have work

This week the Pampa Harvesters enter their bye week. During the first seven weeks of the season, Pampa has accomplished a lot, meeting some of its goals. For the first time since 2008, the Harvesters were victorious in their season opener. For the first time since 2003, Pampa started the first half of its season with a winning record. If the Harvesters are going to accomplish the rest of their goals, there are some things they have to improve in the next three games.

Offensively, Pampa had a solid game against Wichita Falls Hirschi and good second halves against Randall and Snyder. The problem for the offense is finishing drives. In the games the Harvesters won, they could have put away their opponents much earlier than they did. In the losses, Pampa's lack of ability to finish drives allowed the opposition to continue to hold momentum and put the game out of reach by halftime. Part of the reason the Harvesters haven't finished drives, especially early in games, is the lack of a running game. This is either because the running backs aren't finding the holes or the offensive line can't hold its blocks long enough for the running backs to get through the holes. No matter the reason, this has made it easier for defenses to stop Pampa because they can go after Reid Miller knowing Pampa is going attack will allow the Harvesters to keep opponents off-balance, which should lead to more success earlier in games.

Glover

Furthermore, Pampa hasn't developed second or third receiver to support senior Latigo

Collins. Our district opponents are familiar with us and know that Collins is our leading receiver. Odds are, they are going to double him and try to limit his production. If that's the case, the Harvesters need someone else to step up and take away that attention.

A solid spread offense has multiple viable options. Collins has caught 55 percent of Miller's completions with 43. The next closest receiver is Trace Carter with 14. If you look at Texas Tech's spread offense, which is one of the best in the NCAA, its leading reciever, Darrin Moore has only caught 17 percent of Seth Doege's completions. They have six receivers with at least 10 catches. One of the ways for Pampa to create more options is get the running backs involved in the passing game, though that will only be productive if Miller is able to have good protection without them blocking. If the Harvesters have more options, it's going to be tougher for opponents to defend.

Defensively,

ANDREW GLOVER

Harvesters have improved significantly. Last year going into its bye week, Pampa was allowing an average of 41 points per game. This season, the Harvesters are only giving up 24 points per game, which is second to Dalhart in the district. For the first time since 2007, the Harvesters have recorded two shutouts. Some of the improvement is Pampa being able to limit the outside run. Against Iowa Park and Vernon, Pampa made their running backs non-factors thus making those teams one-dimensional.

Still, the nagging problem for Pampa's defense is the multi-threat quarterback. The Harvesters did well against Wichita Falls Hirschi but struggled against Lubbock Estacado, Randall and Snyder. Granted, some of these quarterbacks are super athletes and will get their fair share of yardage anyway. Still, the Harvesters have to limit that in district. They can do that by putting their opponents in more long yardage situations because the best defense against a multi-threat quarterback is taking away one of those threats

Now, the first season is over and the second one starts in two weeks, with the stakes higher. Every outcome could be the difference between having a game November 11 or turning in equipment November 7 (the Monday after the last game). In those games, the Harvesters might not score or get a stop on their first possession but they can't let that bother them. A football game isn't like a sitcom where the conflict is solved within five minutes. It's more like a twohour action movie, where the protagonist overcomes several struggles before succeeding in the final challenge.

Pampa needs to be able to not let a bad possession get them down and fight for the next possession. If they are able to do that, then in the fourth quarter we should have a chance to win. Who knows? When the clock reaches all zeroes on November 4 against Dalhart, maybe we will have a district championship to celebrate.

Laramore, executive director of the Tralee Crisis Center. "The march itself is a somber event with drums beating once every three seconds to represent how often domestic violence occurs across the United States.

"We also take this time to recognize the women in Texas who died at the hands of an intimate partner this past year," she continued. "In 2009, that included 111 women - just in Texas.'

Laramore thanked Pingel and the city for their support in promoting the March and domestic violence awareness.

They're wonderful," said Laramore. "Brad Pingel, this is his first year as mayor. He was a member of our board at one time. He and his wife have always been strong supporters."

Marchers during the event will proceed from City Hall west down Kingsmill Avenue to First Baptist Church, which will host a reception in the Fellowship Hall after the march. There, Tralee and march participants will celebrate men who exhibit non-violent qualities and character by reading selected 100-word essays about "honorable men" submitted by the public. The men recognized by these essays will be honored with a certificate naming each as a "2011 Honorable Man." Essays can be sent to e-mailed to Laramore at deedee.tralee@sbcglobal. net; submissions are being accepted until

For more information on the March or on Tralee in general, contact the center at 806-669-1131. Tralee's 24-hour hotline, 806-669-1788 or 1-800-658-2796, is available to anyone seeking more information about services for victims of domestic violence, sexual assault and violent crime.

Davis seeks Valero request info

FORT WORTH (AP) — A state senator said late Friday that she has filed a legislative inquiry into a tax refund request by a San Antonio-based refinery company.

Sen. Wendy Davis, D-Fort Worth, said she filed the legislative request for documents, emails and other evidence related to Valero Energy Corp.'s 2007 request for a tax exemption. Valero argues that it qualifies for a tax exemption under an amendment to the Texas Constitution that says industrial plants don't have to pay taxes on equipment purchased to reduce on-site pollution.

Valero's initial request was denied by the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality. The company appealed, and the panel's chairman said last April that the Legislature probably intended a broader interpretation of the law. He instructed his staff to research whether they could award partial exemptions to Valero. There is no timeline for a decision.

Valero is among the nation's largest oil refineries seeking huge tax refunds that could cause school districts and local governments across Texas to return tens of millions of dollars. The refineries want the tax breaks in exchange for buying pollution controlling equipment.

Schools alone could be forced to hand over $62.8 million, according to data compiled by The Associated Press.

"Our school districts have already been underfunded by more than $5 billion over the next two years while outdated corporate tax loopholes were protected by those in charge in the Legislature," Davis said. "We cannot afford political maneuvering that bleeds even more resources from our classrooms. Taking care of our schoolchildren should take priority over political cronyism."

The TCEQ, a three-member commission appointed by Republican Gov. Rick Perry, is evaluating 16 refund requests that could add up to more than $135 million, according to county tax data and application documents analyzed by the AP. If the commission grants the requests, at least 12 other refineries that have not sought a refund also could
