Larry Hannah, garden consultant for the Pampa Independent School District, smiled as a sharp gust of wind nearly knocked off his hat.

"We're going to need some extra sturdy tomato cages," he laughed.

Hannah and a small group of volunteers from West Texas Landscape were at Pampa Junior High School on Tuesday, armed with rakes and shovels, installing what will soon be the campus' very own garden. Located south of the school building adjacent to the new Hannah's classroom.

"The kids always liked the little pinto beans that we grew in my class (for a project)," said Hannah, a retired educator who taught seventh grade science in Pampa for 26 years. "I just thought, since they had room out here, I always had gardens growing up and the kids were so excited about their little pinto beans back when I was teaching. I thought the kids now might like to actually plant things and tend to them in school."

The garden project has been in the works for about two years, Hannah said, thanks to $15,000

City gives first OK to rezoning lots

During the Pampa City Commission meeting yesterday at 4 p.m. at City Hall, the city held two public hearings on rezoning two properties at 801 and 821 East Campbell from single family dwellings to commercial properties. The city approved rezoning both properties on a preliminary vote.

"One of them is the Apodaca Brothers, Inc. property, and the other is Reyna Castillo property," said Donny Hooper, Director of Public Works. "Both of those properties are zoned residential currently. They requested to zone those commercial, starting with the Apodaca Brothers property. In order to make that happen and not be spot zoning, the other property had to be included in that."

Hooper said that the city found no issues with the request and no potential negative effects to surrounding areas.

"All the proper notices were sent out as required by law, and yesterday the Planning and Zoning Commission met, and they did recommend approval for this resolution," he said.

The commission also voted to amend its adult business ordinance.

"It was passed originally in 2008," said Richard Morris, City Manager of Pampa. "We found that we'd left several pages of definitions out.' CITY cont. on page 8A

One arrested for drug possession

A traffic stop late Monday night led to an arrest of an individual for possession of drugs.

At 11:45 p.m., officers with the Pampa Police Department stopped a vehicle for a traffic violation on the 1100 block of Campanella. After the two passengers showed signs of nervousness, the officers gained consent to search the vehicle.

Police found a substance believed to be cocaine after a field test was performed. Around midnight, they arrested the driver, Dustin Spear, 18, of Pampa, and charged him with possession of a controlled substance, in an amount greater than four grams but less than 200 grams.

Spear was released on a $2,500 bond.

Harmonicas Across America, folk center sponsor contest

Harmonicas Across America and the Woody Guthrie Folk Music Center are sponsoring an art and writing contest for kids from preschool to fifth grade, with a deadline of Tuesday, April 3.

Kids can write a one-page story or draw a picture in response to one of eight songs in a contest that will be judged by the Pampa Fine Arts Association. The contest, according to Patrick Stewart of Harmonicas Across America, was inspired by the many talents of legendary folk musician Guthrie, a former Pampa resident.

"Woody Guthrie wrote, he drew and he did music, so the contest really comes from (that)," said Stewart. "Kids will draw the picture of the songs or write a one-page story. It can be about anything.'

Stewart said kids were welcome to submit work for different categories or different songs. The songs include "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star," "Red River Valley," "Amazing Grace," "I'm a Little Teapot," "Happy Birthday to You," "Jingle Bells," "Silent Night" and "This Land is Your Land." The contest is not restricted by the children's residency; any kids within the contest's age limits from within or outside Pampa can enter.

Winners of the contest will receive a gift certificate, and their work will go into an online harmonica song book on the Harmonicas Across America site, as well as the screen savers on the Lovett Memorial Library computers.

"Kids are going to draw some really neat stuff, and you can look at something and say, This kid's got some talent," said Stewart. "And that's what it's about, to encourage the kids in the three things I think Woody Guthrie excelled in: Music, writing and drawing."

To participate, kids can give their submissions to their principals, music teachers and art teachers and Harmonicas Across America will pick them up. They can also send submissions to the folk center at 320 South Cuyler in Pampa. For more information, call Stewart at 806-663-2407.

Natalie Reeve, 56

Natalie Reeve, 56, died Sunday, March 11, 2012, in Pampa

Memorial services will be at 1:30 p.m. Friday, March 16, 2012, at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, with the Rev. Ed Nettleton, rector of St. James Episcopal Church in Lake City, Colorado, and the Rev. Linda Kelly, rector of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, officiating. Cremation and arrangements are under the direction of Carmichael-Whatley Funeral Directors.

Reeve

Natalie was born June 7, 1955, in Tulsa, Okla. She died at home last Sunday at 1:20 p.m. after a 4-week illness diagnosed as gastroparesis. Natalie lived at home with her parents, Jack and Katherine Reeve of Pampa. She was a 1973 graduate of Pampa High School and completed two years of college at West Texas State University in Canyon.

Natalie was a talented artist by trade and her love for the mountains of southwestern Colorado was central to many of her paintings. In 1980, she was recognized as Artist of the Year by the Pampa Fine Arts Association. Natalie enjoyed a variety of art mediums, but was perhaps best known for her delicate water colors. Not only did she sell her original paintings and prints at local art shows and to friends, she enjoyed donating her art to charitable organizations whose causes she supported.

Natalie had a true heart for children. She had been involved with St. Matthew's Day School in numerous capacities. For 19 years, she worked as assistant to the administrator and served on the board of St. Matthew's Day School for several years. Until her recent illness, she continued reading to the school children every Thursday. Clearly, Natalie's priorities were in serving God and His church. She performed in numerous volunteer roles at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church in Pampa and at St. James Episcopal Church in Lake City, Colorado.

She was peaceful, patient, and had a great sense of humor. A small sampling of comments from her many friends and acquaintances capture Natalie's spirit:

"I treasure your friendship and you are such an inspiration. Every day, I walk by two of your pieces of art and it gives me a smile."

"You have always been such an inspiration to me. You have such a loving, giving sweet spirit.'

"My earliest memories of knowing you are when you and I were students at St. Matt's. You have always been the most caring and selfless person, always smiling and happy! I am very thankful that each of my children are blessed by knowing you."

'You have touched so many people.'

"I always valued your opinion and admired how much you gave to St. Matt's.

"You are like a gift that keeps on giving."

"May God hold you in the palm of His hands." Natalie left us in peace. Those who knew her have described her as caring, creative, talented, funny, imaginative, thoughtful, patient, beautiful, persever-

Condemned man loses appeal

HOUSTON (AP) - A Dallas man condemned for a shooting spree that left five people dead during a robbery at a car wash has lost a federal court appeal.

Robert Wayne Harris was convicted of two of the five slayings at the Mi-T-Fine Car Wash in Irving in March offs last year when drought 2000. Harris had been fired from his job at the complex a few days earlier for exposing himself to a female customer.

Attorneys for the 40-year-old Harris told the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans that he was mentally impaired, making him ineligible for execution under Supreme Court guidelines. The appeals court ruling, which was posted late Monday, says there's no evidence to support his claim.

Remains identified as soldier

PETROLIA (AP) - The human remains found last month in a shallow grave in rural North Texas have been identified as those of a missing U.S. Army soldier.

The Clay County Sheriff's Office says Spc. Jose Ramirez is the person found near a house south of Petrolia, near the Texas-Oklahoma border. Ramirez went missing from Fort Sill, Okla., in 2005.

Sheriff Kenny Lemons says Ramirez likely died sometime in summer 2007.

According to a criminal complaint, 30-year-old Justin Green told relatives he shot Ramirez "because Ramirez did not believe in God" and had reached for a gun. Green was arrested last month and faces first-degree murder charges. He remains in jail, where officials did not have attorney information for him.

Mink-freeing attempt ends in jail

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) - A 22-year-old Texas woman has been given 60 days in jail for trying to release minks from a Sioux City farm.

Kellie Marshall had pleaded guilty in Woodbury County District Court to releasing an animal from an animal facility and attempted third-degree burglary.

The Sioux City Journal says Judge Steven Andreasen suspended a five-year prison sentence and 305 days of jail time for Marshall. Marshall was given five years of probation as well.

Marshall and 24-year-old Victor Vanorden, also of Austin, were found in a soybean field in October before they could release the animals. Officers found fences nearby that had been cut.

Vanorden was sentenced to five years in prison.

Marshall and Vanorden must pay nearly $8,800 in restitution for the fence damage.

Beehive stolen from restaurant

HOUSTON (AP) - Some thieves might truly have sticky fingers after a 500-pound beehive was swiped from a garden outside a Houston restaurant.

Houston police spokesman Victor Senties said Tuesday that nobody has been arrested.

Surveillance security video shows a truck pulling up before dawn Saturday near the Haven Restaurant. Authorities believe at least two people loaded the boxstyle hive into the vehicle and drove away.

Chef Randy Evans says the thieves apparently knew zen." what they were doing by taking the hive during rainy, chilly weather. He says bees are usually inactive during such conditions.

Officials to talk about herd rebuilding

LUBBOCK (AP) Agriculture officials plan to travel Texas in the coming months to help ranchers who want to rebuild their herds after heavy sellparched grazing lands and sent hay prices skyrocket-

The Texas AgriLife Extension Service said Tuesday it will provide information on lending policies, animal health, balancing forage recovery with growing herds and issues involved in generational turnover.

One goal is to encourage young people to get into ranching after many cattle producers got out of the business because of the historic drought.

Ron Gill, a livestock specialist with the extension service in College Station, said in a news release that some discussion will center around obstacles to younger Texans getting into ranching. Those include a lack of startup money and experience.

"Developing partnerships with family members or others in the community will allow a new generation of ranchers to emerge during this recovery process,' Gill said.

Texas is the nation's leader in beef production, and ranching and affiliated trade and service companies are the second largest economic driver in the state, worth billions of dollars, Gill said.

January U.S. A Department of Agriculture report showed Texas had 11.9 million head of cattle and calves, 11 percent fewer than a year before. The worst drought in Texas' history led to the largest one-year decline in the state's cow herd, with numbers dropping by 12 percent, or about 600,000.

If they don't rebound soon, the state could start to lose infrastructure, such as feedlots and meat packing plants, Gill said.

The educational programs begin in April. The first few will be held in Abilene, Alice, Athens, Graham, Midland and Yoakum.

South Padre rocks as spring break party peaks

CHRISTOPHER SHERMAN Associated Press

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (AP) - When guests at the party next door number about 10,000 and the sound system is rock-concert quality, older visitors and residents say their options during spring break are to flee, adjust or enjoy the spectacle.

At least a few chose each path as Texas week the apex of South Padre Island's nearly monthlong festivities - bounced back from a chilly opening weekend and packed the barrier island with students freed from their studies.

Residents and guests at the staid Isla del Sol condominium complex - a Frisbee toss away from the main stage of the beach party - marveled Monday at the size of the gyrating, tangled mass just beyond their property, taking in the scene with binoculars, cell phones and video cameras. R.G. Ketchum, a state park ranger from Oklahoma staying for two months at the Isla del Sol, found the high-spirited explosion of youth entertaining. "It's OK. They quit at 5 o'clock. They don't bother us here," Ketchum said. "They're real polite to you if you walk out there. They know you're a senior citi-should just pack up and leave for the month," he said last week.

One day before Coca Cola Beach's official kickoff last week, the bass was already thudding as Gregory LaVelle, 72, prepared to escape back to Minnesota. The music from the 50,000-watt sound system next door made his condo walls vibrate. "It's horrible," he said with a laugh.

The party behind the Isla Grand Beach Resort next door started in 1994. LaVelle, who's been coming down for seven years, said he usually leaves before the college hordes descend.

In general, Isla del Sol does not allow its condos to be rented to spring breakers. But there's an exception for owners' children and grandchildren.

Clayton Serafy, a 22-year-old student at Southern Methodist University, rinsed off a beach chair under an outdoor tap after returning from the party with several friends. A Brownsville native, Serafy said his parents have two units at Isla del Sol. Before moving on to the complex's pristine and uninhabited pool, he said the location offers the best of both worlds: access to the party and a refuge from it.

"We know that there are a lot of older people staying here too, so we try to be respectful," Serafy said.

Only one unit was giving Pito Cantu, the complex's on-site overseer, fits on a recent afternoon. His most time-consuming duty during spring break becomes blocking spring breakers who try to follow guests through the complex's locked gate. One young partier who appeared to be going to a unit rented in violation of condo policies actually hopped the wall after being denied entry at the gate and slipped around a corner with a beer funnel hanging out of his backpack.

But Cantu said most of the kids don't cause trouble. As proof, a passel of bikini-clad girls arrived at the gate, slapped high-fives with the security guard and warmly greeted Cantu by name.

'Homeless Hotspot' draws ire

AUSTIN (AP) - A marketing stunt that paid homeless people to carry Wi-Fi signals during the South By Southwest Conference in Austin is drawing widespread criticism.

BBH Labs, a unit of the global marketing agency BBH, gave 14 people from a homeless shelter mobile Wi-Fi devices and T-shirts that announced "I am a 4G Hotspot."

BBH New York chairwoman Emma Cookson says the company paid them a minimum of $50 a day. She called the experiment a modernized version of homeless selling street newspapers.

But many have called the program exploitative. Wired. com wrote that it "sounds like something out of a darkly satirical science-fiction dystopia." ReadWriteWeb called it a "blunt display of unself-conscious gall."

The experiment was meant to begin last Friday but rain delayed its implementation until Sunday. It stopped Monday.

LCRA water plan submitted

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas regulators have up to a year to review a water management plan from the Lower Colorado River Authority to better deal with drought.

The LCRA on Monday submitted the plan to the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality. The proposal offers methods to manage water downstream from lakes Travis and Buchanan during dry conditions.

The lakes provide water for more than a million people in Central Texas, as well as serving industrial and farm needs.

The measure would eliminate the so-called "open supply," which makes unlimited water available for downstream agriculture use when the lakes are above a defined trigger point. Restrictions would apply.

The proposal was adopted by the LCRA board on Feb. 22 crowd control measures closely too, noting when paramedics hauled an incapacitated party-goer out of the crowd in the bed of a small four-wheel drive vehicle.

Still, the party has an undeniable impact. Ketchum said he and his wife rarely go out this week.

Driving on the island is not an attractive option.

Matt Smith, who along with his 90-year-old father are the only year-round residents at the 44-unit Isla del Sol, runs errands in the mornings while spring breakers sleep off the previous night's excesses. By afternoon, the main street splitting the sliver of land is gridlocked. Smith, 45, tells his dad there won't be any trips to McDonald's this week.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, March 14, the 74th day of 2012. There are 292 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 14, 1962, Democrat Edward M. Kennedy officially launched in Boston his successful candidacy for the U.S. Senate seat from Massachusetts once held by his brother, President John F. Kennedy. (Edward Kennedy served in the Senate for nearly 47 years.)

On this date:

In 1743, a memorial service was held at Faneuil Hall in Boston honoring Peter Faneuil, who had donated the building bearing his name.

In 1794, Eli Whitney received a patent for his cotton gin, an invention that revolutionized America's cotton industry.

In 1885, the Gilbert and Sullivan comic opera "The Mikado" premiered at the Savoy Theatre in London

In 1900, Congress ratified the Gold Standard Act.

In 1923, President Warren G. Harding became the first chief executive to file an income tax report.

In 1932, photography pioneer George Eastman, founder of Eastman Kodak Co., died by his own hand at age 77 in Rochester, N.Y.

In 1939, the republic of Czechoslovakia was dissolved, opening the way for Nazi occupation of Czech areas and the separation of Slovakia.

In 1951, during the Korean War, United Nations forces recaptured Seoul.

In 1964, a jury in Dallas found Jack Ruby guilty of murdering Lee Harvey Oswald, the accused assassin of President John F. Kennedy, and sentenced him to death. (Both the conviction and death sentence were later overturned, but Ruby died before he could be retried.)

In 1967, the body of President John F. Kennedy was moved from a temporary grave to a permanent memorial site at Arlington National Cemetery

In 1980, a LOT Polish Airlines jet crashed while attempting to land in Warsaw, killing all 87 people aboard, including 22 members of a U.S. amateur boxing team.

In 1991, a British court overturned the wrongful convictions of the "Birmingham Six," who had spent 16 years in prison for a 1974 Irish Republican Army bombing, and ordered them released.

Ten years ago: The government charged the Arthur Andersen accounting firm with obstruction of justice, securing its first indictment in the collapse of Enron. (Although Arthur Andersen was later found guilty, its conviction was overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court; however, the damage to the firm's reputation was enough to put it out of business.) Serbia and Montenegro signed a historic accord to radically restructure their federation, dropping the name "Yugoslavia" and granting greater autonomy to prevent the country's final

In the cold, gray numbers of election returns and exit poll percentages, a reader with some imagination can find clues to people's deep feelings, their hopes and fears, their self-images and moral values.

This is especially true in presidential primaries. In most general elections, 80 percent of voters vote for candidates of the party they prefer. In primaries, voters choose between specific individuals with greater differences in experience, background and character than on issues.

So it has been in this year's contests, featuring candidates most voters didn't know much about and about whom their judgment has often shifted. The lead in national polls has changed 11 times since August.

One constant factor in the 14 contests with exit polls is that Mitt Romney has tended to run best among high-income and high-education voters. His leading opponents -- Newt Gingrich in South Carolina and Georgia, Ron Paul in Iowa, New Hampshire and Virginia, and Rick Santorum everywhere else --have run best among low-income and low-education voters. It is in the nature of political journalism that much attention is devoted to downscale voters. A question often asked is whether Republicans generally and Romney in particular can run well among blue-collar whites. Actually, Republicans have done pretty well with this group. In the dreadful Republican year of 2008, exit polls showed John McCain carrying non-college whites by 58 to 40 percent over Barack Obama. George W. Bush did even better in 2004. This year, Obama campaign strategists have signaled that they're not targeting the folks that Obama, speaking to rich liberals at a San Francisco Bay area fundraiser, characterized as bitterly clinging to guns and God. They're targeting the college-educated, the young and Latinos instead. There is little or no evidence that downscale whites have more positive feelings about Obama than they did then. They dislike Obamacare and the stimulus package. The president gives them little sense that he is in sympathy with their values.

The affluent are another matter. Republicans have been losing ground with them since the 1990s. Non-Southern suburban counties whose big majorities delivered electoral votes to George H.W. Bush in 1988 have been trending to Democrats, as affluent suburbanites, especially women, were repelled by Republicans' stands on cultural issues like abortion and by the

He carried affluent Oakland County northwest of Detroit, where he grew up, by 31,565 votes. He carried the rest of Michigan by 413. In Ohio, he carried the mostly affluent vote in the counties containing Cleveland and Cincinnati by 31,682 votes -- three times his statewide margin.

I sense that affluent voters find Romney a kindred spirit -- articulate but politically awkward, self-disciplined and successful, able to make a sharp argument but polite. He's conservative on cultural issues, but in a way that reminds me of the 18th century Englishwoman's gravestone noting approvingly that "she was religious without enthusiasm."

Barack Obama's appeal to higheducation and young voters in the Virginia, North Carolina and Indiana primaries carried over into the general election. He carried all three in November, though none was a target state in 2000 or 2004.

increasing Southern and evangelical tone of the party.

The four suburban counties outside Philadelphia, for example, voted 61 percent for Bush in 1988, and he carried Pennsylvania. In 2008, they voted 57 percent for Barack Obama, and he carried the state.

Those latter figures are not, as some analysts seem to think, etched in stone. The financial crisis and recession have switched voters' focus from cultural issues to the economy. The gap between Obama's proposed top tax rate of over 40 percent and the Republicans' 28 percent is wider than any since the 1980s.

The cold gray numbers tell us that Romney has an affirmative appeal to this constituency. He has run 4 to 12 points ahead of his statewide average

Will Romney's appeal to high-education and high-income voters carry over to the general election, too? That's not clear.

But the Pew poll tells us that Republican party identification has risen 9 points from 2008 among Jewish voters -- a small but important part of this constituency. And exit polls show that Catholics, another important part, have gone for Romney in all but two Southern states.

The cold gray numbers don't tell us for sure. But they suggest that affluent oters may be up for grabs this year.

Catalogs are the novels of optimistic lives

The garden catalogs start coming when the snow is too deep to even find dirt. But we don't care.

This is a catalog time of year, a time for making plans and figuring out how to do something even better than we did last year.

There in the fishing catalog is that new fly-tying vise. I know I'll be able to tie flies faster and better with that, which will give me more time to cruise up and down Lewis Creek with the fly rod. Well ... at least that's the plan.

And the housewares catalog has all kinds of things in it to help us peel potatoes, boil things, slice things, and clean things. A few well-spent dollars on their 800 phone line and before you know it, our lives will be easier and our food tastier.

With the truck catalogs, we can get a little coffee maker that plugs right in to the cigarette lighter. Or we can get a little oven that plugs right in to the cigarette lighter, or a fan that plugs right in to the cigarette lighter.

Let's hope the car makers continue to make cigarette lighters even after cigarettes themselves disappear. We'd miss out on a lot of fun without that plug-in.

The mule needs his catalog, too. I'll do the reading for him, and the order-

The land catalogs are the most fun In these, there are always lakes with wooded margins, begging for a little cabin. A small place where a guy car hole up and think literary thoughts and type quietly. Well, it's a thought. anyway. And that's what catalogs do. stimulate our thinking.

Spring catalogs are the novels of optimistic lives.

"It's OK to get angry in certain situations," says Nicole, age 9. "For example, when your baby sister sits on your new cowboy shirt."

Being from Texas, I understand. A new cowboy shirt is a precious thing - new boots are even better.

We smile at Daniel's honesty, but we all have this monster called revenge living inside. Most of us don't hit with fists. We're too sophisticated for that. Gossip and slander are often the weapons of choice.

If you have to punch something, Daniel, take a tip from Chaz, 10: "When I lose my temper, I beat up my pillow and then pray."

Punch and pray. This sounds like a winning combination --- as long as you're punching a pillow and not someone's nose.

Anger can make you do crazy things such as "losing your temper when someone is trying to be boss of your football," says Cade, 5. Of course, some who get really angry about being boss of the football sign contracts worth millions and play for the NFL.

Anger can also make you "rip up a failing paper before you get home and tell your mom you didn't get that test," says Chelsea, 9.

As every teacher knows, dogs have ravenous appetites for school papers, especially on the day they are due.

Lying about a failing paper or making up a dog story because you didn't do your homework, could make your mom and your teacher justifiably angry.

Anger is fine, says Brittani, 5: "Because when two friends get together, it is hard to play good every minute." Colton, 5, disagrees, "Even though this makes Jesus sad, some people just love to fight."

Sometimes, it's small things that anger us, says another Colton, 5: "My mom and dad get angry when they can't decide what they want for dinner." Sounds like a recipe for indigestion. Landon, 11, and others provide us with digestive aids by giving us tips on when it is and isn't wrong to be angry. "It is not wrong to get angry as long as it is righteous anger.

Righteous anger? "Jesus got angry when people used the temple as a trading post," says Courtney, 10. "He knocked over tables, threw everything on the floor," says Bryant, 10. "I mean he got real mad.

CARY

KINSOLVING

The Apostle John writes that he made a "whip of chords" and drove the moneychangers out of the temple. You usually won't find this picture in children's storybook Bibles. Jesus was gentle, but he was also fierce.

Don't try to justify selfish anger by rationalizing it into righteous anger. When the disciples saw Jesus clearing the temple, they remembered Psalm 69:9: "Zeal for your house has eaten me un."

Jesus was consumed with the reputation of his Father. Instead of a house of prayer, merchants had turned the temple into a house of thieves. When we become angry, we're usually consumed with our rights and reputation, not God's.

Brent, 11, also approaches anger management in a biblical way when he quotes James 1:19-20: "Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to anger; for the wrath of man does not produce the righteousness of God."

Think about this: Jesus could have been angry over the injustice he suffered, but he forgave. Remember this truth: "Do not let the sun go down on your wrath" (Ephesians 4:26). Ask this question: Have you ever been angry because someone blasphemed God's name or character?

CHURCH SPOTLIGHT FUMC makes progress on church building upgrades

ANDREW GLOVER aglover@thepampanews.com

If you've driven by First United Methodist lately, you probably have noticed some activity with all the construction equipment. The church is undergoing upgrades.

Co-pastor Nick Matthews said the church is excited about it. Inside, the church recently added projection screens and cameras.

"(They are) neat," Matthews said. "It's a great aid to worship."

Matthews said the purpose of the building project is to make the church more accessible.

"We are adding elevators to help the handicapped or people that need a little help," Matthews said. "We're adding a gathering space for people to meet, and not just on Sundays. We are making our bathrooms and kitchen handicapped accessible so everyone can use it."

The church is also having work done on the outside to increase parking.

The estimated completion date is September 14.

Golden maize dish is amazing

Q: I have sent you a photo of a dish with a matching silver metal tray. I'm hoping you can explain the mark on the back and also tell me its value. I am in the midst of sorting out things that I have held onto for a long time. The dish is decorated with yellow, blue and red flowers against a yellow background, and it is sitting in a silver metal tray. The words marked on the back of the dish are blurry and appear to say, "Golden Maire Made for Farberware — by the Sebring Pottery Co. —Sebring, Ohio — Reg. U.S. Pat. Off. No. 230447." It measures 11 inches in diameter and is in perfect condition. I am 72 and have always remembered it from my mother's home.

A: The mark should say "Golden Maize" rather than "Golden Maire." Sebring Pottery Co. made semi-vitreous pottery in Sebring and East Liverpool, Ohio, from 1887 to 1948. The Farber Brothers were located in New York City and known for their Farberware. Sebring made dishes in several floral designs and sizes for Farberware metal holders. The "U. S. Patent No. 230447" shows that the design was registered with the government around 1940.

Your dish with metal tray would probably be worth $25 to $50.

Elijah Cotton made Lord Nelson Ware from 1920 to 1940.

Sebring Pottery Co. was located in Ohio from 1887 to 1948.

Q: This is the manufacturer's mark on the back of a plate that I have. I bought it at a flea market at least 30 years ago, just because I loved the pattern. I am now cleaning out our attic and cannot part with it until I learn some of its history and value. The plate is approximately 8 inches by 8 inches and has scalloped edges. On the right side is a woman in an 18th century style purple gown sitting near a table with a teapot on it and there is a tree with an English style cottage in the background. The plate is decorated with gold flowers against a white background.

Thank you for any information that you might provide.

A: You have an example of chintz ware pottery. "Lord Nelson Ware" was made by Elijah Cotton in Staffordshire, England, from 1920 to 1940. "Pompadour" is the name of a chintz warestyle pattern and was inspired by Madame Pompadour, a favorite of the French King Louis XV. Chintz was a type of cotton that was imported to France from India in the late 18th century. Madame Pompadour used the fabrics for clothing and decorating.

Your circa 1920 dish would probably sell in the range of $25 to $50.

Inmate barred from Muslim services loses court appeal

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal appeals court on Tuesday rejected a Texas inmate's claim that he was unconstitutionally barred from Muslim religious services for six months as discipline for causing a prison ruckus.

The court also rejected his claims that Christian symbols hung in the chapel where Muslim services were held created a "hostile" environment and that prison officials improperly monitored services.

"Prison officials have broad discretion in balancing prisoner rights with prison security," the decision from the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said. It added that "monitoring alone does not prevent the free exercise of religion."

Jesse James Copeland, 56, is serving life for aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon in Gregg County in 1987. His record includes another aggravated robbery conviction, along with burglary and aggravated assault on a corrections officer.

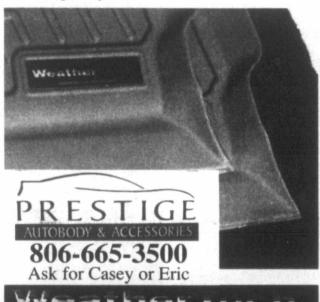

The ruckus started when he refused orders to leave the chapel at the Texas Department of Criminal Justice Eastham Unit about 80 miles north of Houston.

"A host of correctional officers and ranking officials abruptly burst into the chapel, and insolently disrupted the service ... having no respect for the Muslim offenders who were making their individual prayers," Copeland said in his lawsuit.

About 30 officers responded to the disturbance, and Copeland was subsequently was barred from attending religious meetings for six months, confined to his cell for 45 days and lost good-behavior credits. Copeland said the punishment violated his free exercise of religion.

He appealed after a lower court rejected his lawsuit as frivolous.

The appeals court said even if Copeland's constitutional rights were violated, his lawsuit was moot because the six months had passed and the defendants he named, including nearly a dozen prison administrators, chaplains and officers, were entitled to immunity because they were doing their jobs.

Alleged cartel man indicted for conspiracy

EL PASO (AP) — An alleged lieutenant of the Sinaloa of one of these. The indictment says that Torres-Marrufo cartel has been indicted in the U.S. for conspiracy in the kidnappings and deaths of a West Texas man and three New Mexico men.

Jose Antonio Torres-Marrufo, who allegedly ran the cartel's operation in Juarez, Mexico, was also indicted on drug trafficking and money laundering counts.

Torres-Marrufo was arrested in February in Leon, Guatnajuato, Mexico, and awaits extradition. Attorney information was not immediately available.

The indictment unsealed last week accuses Torres-Marrufo of conspiring to kill a man in 2009 with the initials S.S. That coincides with Sergio Saucedo, abducted from his home and killed in Mexico.

Two men were found guilty and one more pleaded guilty of the kidnapping of Saucedo. He was taken at gunpoint from his house in Horizon City, Texas, while his wife and child watched. He was found dead with his hands chopped off several days later in an unpaved street in neighboring Juarez, Mexico.

Upon his arrest, Mexican authorities said that Marrufo is believed to be the mastermind behind a Sept. 2009 massacre in Casa Aliviane drug rehab center in Juarez where 18 people were shot to death.

Torres-Marrufo is also accused in the indictment of conspiring in the 2010 deaths of three men whose initials coincide with three New Mexico men abducted from a wedding in Juarez and killed.

The bodies Rafael Morales Valencia, 29, his brother Jaime Morales Valencia, 25, and their uncle Guadalupe Morales Arriola, 47 were found in May 2010 in the back of a pickup truck after being snatched from the wedding

The indictment says Torres-Marrufo was a "regional lieutenant" for the Sinaloa Cartel and as such was responsible of overseeing drug-smuggling operations, money laundering and directing criminal groups such as Gente Nueva (New People), and the gang known as Artistas Asesinos (Murderous Artists) who act as enforcers in the war that cartel wages against local criminal organization, the Juarez cartel and its armed branch known as La Linea.

The Sinaloa Cartel is run by Joaquin Guzman, known as El Chapo.

Feds unveil reform-minded immigration facility in Texas

KARNES CITY, (AP) With free Internet access, cheap overseas phone calls, private bathrooms and no lights-out policy, the new immigration detention center in this isolated corner of South Texas would hardly seem like a prison if not for the electronically locking doors and reinforced-glass windows.

Following civil-liberties lawsuits filed on behalf of families at a crowded central Texas facility where children were held behind razor barbed-wire, the Obama administration promised three years ago to rethink the nation's much-maligned system for jailing immigration offenders.

The 608-bed lockup in Karnes City, about 60 miles southeast of San Antonio, was intended to be more humane to detainees - though some activists argue they shouldn't be locked up at all.

"We needed to do better. We needed to improve our detainee treatment," said Gary Mead, executive associate director for removal operations with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement.

Some conservatives, however, fear the $32 million civil detention center unveiled Tuesday is coddling criminals.

Guards don't carry handcuffs, and they're not even referred to as guards, but rather, "assistance staff." There's no wall around the facility, and the exterior is painted a crisp royal-blue and burgundy. The dormstyle rooms have four bunk beds, a private bath, television and phone, which inmates can use to make international calls at just 15 cents a minute a rate mostly unheard of outside. Detainees can stay up all night if they want, or even wander into common areas while evervone else sleeps.

Most of the inmates held here will be those arrested after sneaking across the border in the Rio Grande Valley and other parts of Texas.

Officials are retrofitting centers for low-risk detainees California, Virginia and New Jersey to make them more like this one. They're also building new, morerestrictive immigration detention facility in Florida and Illinois for medium- and high-risk detainees.

The facility will hold only adult males. They won't begin arriving for about three weeks, but ICE invited reporters and representatives from the American Civil Liberties Union and other groups to tour it Tuesday.

The Karnes facility's gym has weight-lifting equipment, a soccer field, indoor and outdoor basketball courts and sand and nets for beach volleyball. There are 117 pay phones, a law library, microwaves, board games and washers and dryers so inmates can do their own laundry. Lisa Graybill, legal director of the ACLU of Texas, said, "this is their new model civil deten- eral government about tion facility, but it's still going to involve detaining people who don't need to be detained."

"It sounds good but our concern is it's not actually going to be good,' said Graybill, who said her group is troubled that profit margins maybe more important than detainee welfare.

She said that the Obama administration should scrap U.S. policy adopted in 2005 of detaining nearly all immigration offenders, and instead only lock up only those considered most-dangerous, including any with past criminal records. Others could be given electronic ankle bracelets to ensure they appear for future court dates, she said.

Mead said ICE had increased its use of ankle bracelets and other alternatives to detention, and now has about 23,000 people in such programs compared to about 18,000 last year. He said it costs the fed$122 per day per immigration detainee and that those outside detention are cheaper - but their cases are processed more slowly.

The ACLU sued in 2007 over incarcerating families at the T. Don Hutto detention center just northeast of Austin, alleging inhumane con-Authorities ditions. removed all families and sent them to a facility in Pennsylvania, and Hutto now only houses females.

The detention system has grown from 7,500 beds in 1995 to more than 33,000 today - as have reported abuses such as medical neglect of detainees and denial of due process. ICE removes nearly 400,000 illegal immigrants per year, and has reduced the average length of stay to about 30 days.

Not all detainees are illegal immigrants. Some entered the country legally and committed a crime, making them deportable, but many people in detention have not been convicted. Others are seeking asylum.

The Obama administration recently released more than 400 pages of guidelines for illegal immigrants held in federal custody, and Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, called them "more like a hospitality guideline for illegal immigrants."

Mead said Tuesday that inmates at Karnes, aren't "living in the lap of luxury."

"They are not free to leave," he said.

perimeter of the garden, embellished by marigolds. The whole thing will be nourished by a drip irrigation center designed by the Agriculture Extension Agency that will be installed next week.

There are already big plans for the garden within the school district and the junior high, according to Hannah.

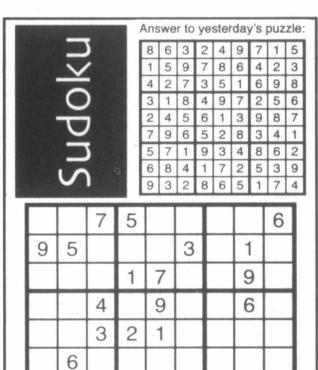

"The schools are really interested in it now,' he said. "Originally, this was going to be a seventh grade outside science lab area. That's what the grants were under

"Now, it's also going to turn into, for the cafeteria, part of their nutrition program. For some reason, they can't get cantaloupe delivered, so they an grow their own. The cafeteria's really interested in the cantaloupe, the asparagus, the raspberries, some squash. The community is getting into the project, too, with contributions coming from all over Pampa and Gray County. The West Texas Landscape volunteers on Tuesday worked with a tractor from B&G Electric to dig what will soon be the garden's pond. Many local residents and retailers have either given Hannah a discount or donated supplies outright.

The ordinance now contains full descriptions for an adult business license, sexual activities, relevant anatomical areas and viewing booths. Businesses that do not comply with city ordinances could have their licenses revoked.

In other business, the commission approved the minutes from its previous meeting.

Hannah said that it was a joy to see so how much Pampa wanted to help.

"It's real rewarding to see so many people excited about it," Hannah said. "I told Rusty (Stevens of West Texas Landscape) what we were doing out here, and his boy has Type 2 diabetes. He said, 'Man, if you can get some more vegetables in the cafeteria there, you can have anything you want. Just ask for it and it's vours.

"The County Extension Agency helped us out," he continued. "Bartlett's gave us a really good deal on some wood out here. Kay gave us some of her old wood. Everybody's helping some. It's great."

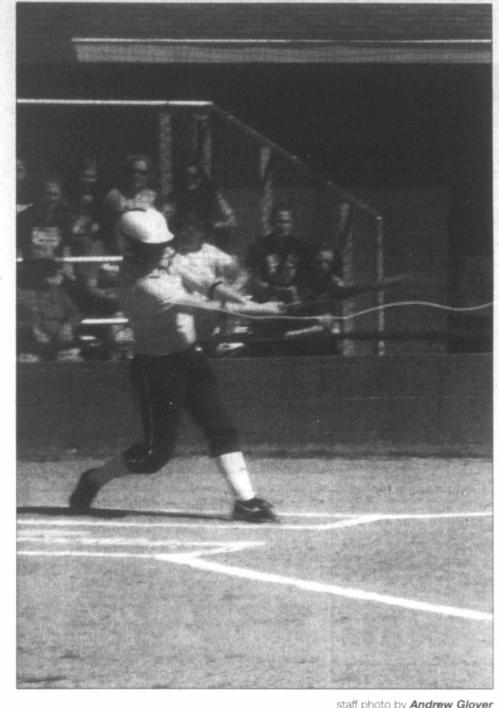

He added that he has hopes of making additions to the garden and working towards installing a greenhouse.

"With further grants, that would be the next step," he said. "Right now, I'm just happy to get this going. I was really looking forward to getting the seventh graders out here to see if they were as enthusiastic about real plants as they were about bean seeds.'

Junior Bailey Beck hits a line drive against San Jacinto. Beck drove in three runs off of three hits in Pampa's second game against Sanford-Fritch.

After spending three days in Fort Worth sitting around and waiting to play games, the Pampa Lady Harvesters took advantage of two first inning leads and beat the Amarillo San Jacinto Lady Patriots 8-1 and the Sanford-Fritch Lady Eagles 15-2 Tuesday at Lady Harvester Field.

"I think they were excited to play," head coach Bobbi Gill said. "Offensively they hit really well and defensively did pretty good.'

The Lady Harvesters (10-6) scored five runs in the first inning against San Jacinto. Junior Claire Hopkins led off with a single and advanced to third on a sacrifice bunt. Senior Nakayla Hardman brought her home on a double. An RBI double by senior Kaylene Wyant increased Pampa's lead to 5-0.

March 14, 20

Pampa was very aggressive running the bases as it recorded six infield singles and stole three bases. Seniors McKinlee Stokes and Heather Coffee and sophomore Bailey Wichert each had one.

"These girls are really smart," Gill said. "They take advantage of everything they can get. That's one of the reasons they score as much as they do: Their aggressiveness and putting themselves in scoring position.'

Wyant made her varsity pitching debut earning her first victory. She pitched two innings and allowed one run, walked two and struck out five. Wyant said she had a PAMPA cont. on page 4B range of emotions.

"It was nerve-wracking and awesome," Wyant said.

Wyant credited the defense for its strong play.

"When the other team hit the ball, we had a good defense behind me," Wyant said. "It was a really good game."

Stokes led the team in hitting with three hits, two runs and one RBI.

Sophomore Bailey Wichert pitched the last three innings and only gave up one hit. In the bottom of the second inning, Gill subbed out some of her starters.

"We got everyone in," Gill said. "Everyone got to bat and play the field. It's a really good day when you can do that."

The Lady Harvesters got off to a shaky start against Sanford-Fritch. Sophomore Alexa O'Brien started and struggled tc find the strike zone, walking four. O'Brien also threw three wild pitches and two passed balls, resulting in Fritch's two runs.

Pampa quickly took control scoring five runs before Fritch could record an out. Senior Alanna Stephens hit a RBItriple and RBI-double. Juniors Martecia Alexander and Baily Beck and Coffee hit RBI singles. Beck said it was a good day for them.

"It's good when we can get on a roll like that and hit off a slow pitcher," Beck said.

The Lady Harvesters scored most of its runs off of the Lady Eagles' mistakes. Hopkins scored on a throwing error by first baseman Jaylea Leatherman. Beck scored when catcher Hailey Wells overthrew third baseman Kasidy Fields. Stephens scored on a wild pitch. The Lady Harvesters led 12-2 after the first.

After a rough first, O'Brien settled down, only walking two and striking out four in her final two innings. It only took O'Brien 29 pitches to get out of the second and third, after using 33 to end the first.

Britton pitched the last two innings and gave up two hits, one walk and struck out one.

Pampa returns to Lady Harvester Field Friday to close out non-district against in a doubleheader with the Vernon Lady Lions. Gill said it will be a good test for her team.

"Vernon has traditionally been good," Gill said. "It's a great game for us to pick up and I'm excited that they are coming here."

Baylor women finishes first in final regular season poll

Princeton coach Courtney Banghart couldn't wait to tell her players.

The Tigers became the first Ivy League team to enter The Associated Press women's college basketball poll, coming in at No. 24 on Monday.

"It's so special to know what these kids have done," she said. "To earn this very prestigious opportunity is remarkable. It's a testament to their work ethic, goals. It's all the things that are right about college athletics."

In the season's final poll, than just academics." Banghart has known of the Ivy League's basketball talent for years. She starred at Dartmouth as a player before taking over the Tigers five seasons ago.

"Until the Ivy League wins more games outside conference, the league won't get the respect you hope it would," Banghart said. "We've had some nice wins the last two years with Harvard beating St. John's and Yale beating Florida State. It shows the growth of Ivy basketball."

Princeton has a chance

NCAA tournament teams," Banghart said. "I hope we use this to continue to get some good momentum headed to the tournament."

Princeton has won the Ivy League three straight years and gone 41-1 in the conference during that run. The Tigers fell in the first round the past two seasons, losing to St. John's and Georgetown.

Baylor was the unanimous No. 1 choice again. The Lady Bears received all the first-place votes Monday for the 15th straight week after easily winning the Big 12 tournament. There were ballots from 39 of 40 voters. One voter was absent.

Baylor (34-0) was the No. 1 team in the poll all season long and will enter the NCAA tournament as the top seed when the field is announced Monday night.

In all, only eight teams have run through the poll from start to finish at No. 1. UConn has done it four times.

"I'm flattered and honored to join those other teams that are all in the history books of women's basketball," Baylor coach Kim Mulkey said. "We feel humbled to join that special group."

It's the first time the Lady Bears have finished the season as the top team.

Stanford, Connecticut, Notre Dame and Maryland followed Baylor. Duke, Delaware, Miami, Tennessee and Wisconsin-Green Bay rounded out the first 10.

With Princeton's appearance, there are only six conferences that have never had a team in the Top 25: the Atlantic Sun, Big South, MEAC, NEC, Patriot and SWAC.

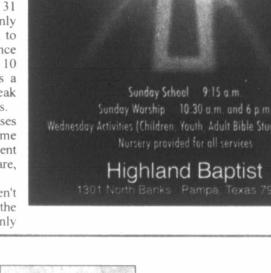

It's been a banner year for the Ivy League in basketball. The Harvard men's team earned its first ranking in early December and Crimson alum Jeremy Lin has been one of the top stories of the NBA this season.

"It's really a great time to be an Ivy athlete," Princeton star Niveen Rasheed said. "People are finally learning that there is more to the conference

Monday night to earn the highest seed for an Ivy League school. No team has been seeded better than No. 11. The Tigers have an impressive NCAA resume. They won their Ivy League games by an average of 31 points and were the only men's or women's team to win all their conference matchups by at least 10 points. Princeton boasts a 17-game winning streak heading into the NCAAs. The Tigers' four losses this season have come against NCAA tournament teams: Stanford, Delaware, DePaul and Navy.
