County dispatcher praised for noticing gunman

■ The dispatcher noticed would-be assailant acting strangely through the camera.

FROM REPORTS
editor@thepampanews.com

Call her the unknown hero. But definitely not unsung.
A dispatcher whose sharp wits alerted authorities to a probationer concealing a gun he was carrying into the Gray

County Courthouse is being hailed by public officials — although not identified in a story by Amarillo TV station KDFB.
At the time of the incident, the dispatcher as filling in for another dispatcher, authorities said. She noticed his odd behavior through a camera.

“The dispatcher observed a young man walk into the elevator of the courthouse, he was making some rather unusual movements, adjusting his pants, putting his hands down into his pants. She was concerned with this so she notified one of our deputies,” Chief Deputy Cary Rushing told the TV station.
As a result of her vigilance, probationer Christopher Turlington, 18, was captured and taken into custody, where he faces possible prison time.
In a statement released from the Gray County Sheriff’s Office, 31st District

Attorney Lynn Switzer said, “Thanks to a very sharp eyed dispatcher at the Gray County Sheriff’s Office, a potentially deadly situation was avoided.”
Rushing is also thankful they have cameras inside the courthouse.
“Had the cameras not been there and us having the capability of watching the cameras we would have never seen this.”
District Attorney Switzer has called for an increase in courthouse security in the wake of the incident.

NRA insult outrages readers

GAYDEN HAYS

An editorial cartoon in Monday’s Pampa News alleging the National Rifle Association’s relationship with Congress in the formation of gun laws played a role in the Aurora Colorado shooting massacre has provoked outrage among several Pampa readers.
One of the readers went as far as to cancel his subscription, although he later changed his mind.
The cartoon — created by Illinois editorial cartoonist Chris Britt and distributed by Creators Syndicate — showed the DC Comics super villain The Joker (with “NRA” written on his coat) holding a silver handgun to the head of a hostage. On jacket of the hostage was written the word, “Congress.”
The caption read, “The Joker and his hostage.”
The cartoon was deliberately evocative of the July 20, 2012 mass shooting at a Century movie theater in Aurora, Colorado during a midnight screening of the Batman film The Dark Knight Rises. Twelve people were killed and 58 others injured when a man in tactical clothing set off tear gas grenades and shot into the audience with numerous firearms.
Several Pampa residents say the cartoon is unfair to the American non-profit lobbying group, which advocates for the protection of the Second

Romantic crooner Tony Martin dies at 98

FROM REPORTS
editor@thepampanews.com

Pampa residents fond of the musical era of Bing Crosby and Frank Sinatra might be interested to know their contemporary, romantic singer Tony Martin, has died. He was 98.
Martin, the romantic singer who appeared in movie musicals from the 1930s to the 1950s and sustained a career in records, television and nightclubs from the Depression era into the 21st century, Martin died of natural causes Friday evening at his West Los Angeles home, his friend and accountant Beverly Scott said Monday.
A peer of Bing Crosby and Frank Sinatra, Martin sang full voice in a warm baritone that carried special appeal for his female audience. Among his hit recordings were “I Get Ideas,” “To Each His Own,” “Begin the Beguine” and “There’s No Tomorrow.”

“He’s the ultimate crooner who outlasted all is contemporaries,” musician and longtime friend Gabriel Guerrero said from his Oregon home. Martin recently sang to Guerrero over the telephone.
“He has truly remained the butterscotch baritone until he was 98,” Guerrero added.
Although he never became a full-fledged movie star, he was featured in 25 films, most of them made during the heyday of the Hollywood musicals. A husky 6 feet tall and dashing handsome, he was often cast as the romantic lead.
He also married two movie musical superstars, Alice Faye and Cyd Charisse, and the latter union lasted 60 years, until her death in 2008.
Martin found his escape through music while growing up in San Francisco and Oakland amid a poor, close-knit Russian Jewish family, enduring taunts and slights from gentile classmates.
“I always sang,” he wrote. “I always played some instrument or other, real or imagined. ... At first, of course, my music was just for my own fun. I didn’t recognize it right away as my passport away from poverty.”

Performing on radio led to his break into the film business. His first singing role came in the 1936 “Sing Baby Sing,” which starred future wife Faye and introduced the Ritz Brothers to the screen as a more frenetic version of the Marx Brothers.
As a contract player at Twentieth Century-Fox, Martin also appeared in “Pigskin Parade” (featuring young Judy Garland), “Banjo on My Knee” (Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea) “Sing and Be Happy,” “You Can’t Have Everything” (Faye, Don Ameche) “Ali Baba Goes to Town” (comedian Eddie Cantor) and “Sally, Irene and Mary.”
In 1940 he shifted to MGM and sang in such films as “The Ziegfeld Girl” (James Stewart, Lana Turner, Judy Garland), “The Big Store” (the Marx Brothers), and “Till the Clouds Roll By.”

Perry appoints two to key health posts

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Rick Perry appointed two men Monday to key posts in the Health and Human Services Commission following recent high-level departures.

Perry named former state lawmaker Dr. Kyle Janek as commissioner of the state's largest agency, which oversees the state's provision of health care for the poor, services for the disabled and the state health department.

Janek was elected to the Texas House in 1994 as a Houston Republican, and won election to the Texas Senate in 2003. He retired from elected office in 2008 and now lives in Austin, where he is an anesthesiologist and has lobbied on medical malpractice insurance issues and on behalf of the American Cancer Society.

Current Commissioner Tom Suehs announced last month that he was retiring after three years in the job. Janek takes over as state spending on Medicaid — the health insurance program for the poor and disabled — skyrockets, and Perry is demanding a cut in state spending.

In order to balance the budget last year, Perry signed a budget that underfunded Medicaid by $4.8 billion, an amount that must be made up next year.

State Medicaid Director Billy Millwee is also retiring this summer, and Perry promoted Chris Traylor to replace him. Traylor is currently the commissioner of the Department of Aging and Disability Services, a post he's held since 2010.

"Texas, like the rest of the country, is headed into a period of the most significant changes in health care in our history," Perry said in a written statement. "This new leadership team, with Kyle and Chris at the helm, combines unparalleled experience and expertise to ensure Texans continue to have access to the health care they need while implementing fiscal policies that are mindful that it's taxpayer money they are spending."

In May, Suehs told lawmakers that Medicaid alone could add $10 billion to the state budget when they meet again in January. Perry has said he will not sign a budget that increases state spending, and he asked all agency chiefs to submit budgets with a possible 10 percent reduction in spending.

Democrats have called on lawmakers to close tax loopholes to fund critical health and education needs. They have also called for Texas to expand Medicaid coverage under the federal Affordable Care Act to save money, a move that Perry has rejected.

Obama thinks election would be close

NEW YORK (AP) — President Barack Obama told campaign donors Monday that "if the election were held today, I think it'd be close, but I think we'd win."

He said his opponents were "spending like nobody's business" and that Democrats need substantial sums to counterpunch.

"We now have 99 days left, and if I can say that every day for the next 99 days then we will be able to embark on the next phase of this journey," Obama told an intimate crowd of well-heeled donors.

The president held court in the Parisian-style No-Mad hotel in Manhattan's Flatiron District with 60 people who contributed $40,000 each, raising more than $2 million for the 2012 elections.

Obama went through his administration's efforts to boost the struggling economy but allowed that "right now, the economy is still rough enough for enough people that this is going to be a close election. He said "continued headwinds" were likely, including the financial uncertainty in Europe.

"I don't think that ultimately that the Europeans will let the euro unravel, but they're going to have to take some decisive steps," Obama said. "And I've been spending an enormous amount of time trying to work with them."

Obama said big-spending super PACs "are engaging in an experiment that we have not seen in American democracy for quite some time. They are spending like nobody's business and focusing on negative ads."

Obama said the Democrats don't have to match that spending dollar-for-dollar, "but we do have to make sure that we can get our message out effectively."

While the president was raising millions in New York, Republican rival Mitt Romney trolled for cash overseas, working a fundraiser into his schedule in Israel. Both sides are in a pell-mell race for campaign dollar as polls show the two candidates running about even. June was the second consecutive month in which Romney brought in more money than Obama.

Vice President Joe Biden, in an email to supporters, wrote Monday:

"This isn't hyperbole or exaggeration: If we don't win this election, it will be because we didn't close the spending gap when we could."

In a separate email, Obama campaign chief operating office Ann Marie Habershaw wrote that, "to be frank, we've gotten our behinds handed to us the past two FEC deadlines by Mitt Romney and his crew."

Obama was in New York last month, too, raising cash from big-dollar fundraisers at the home of actors Sarah Jessica Parker and Matthew Broderick and at an event featuring a performance by singer Mariah Carey.

Border Patrol sued by family

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The family of a Mexican national allegedly shot and killed by an unidentified U.S. Border Patrol agent is suing the U.S. federal government. The family claims Juan Pablo Perez Santillan was standing on the Mexican side of the U.S.-Mexico border when he was shot the morning of July 7. Perez-Santillan was not armed, his family states. The incident happened near the Veterans International Bridge in Brownsville. The U.S. Border Patrol said a group of undocumented immigrants pelted rocks at the agents and one agent fired his weapon in self defense, but did not hit anyone. About the same time, just south of that location, an agent saw a man pointing a weapon at him and fired. The Mexican consul in Brownsville said the individual the Border Patrol claimed was holding a weapon was Perez Santillan, and they were trying to confirm whether he was armed. Named in the lawsuit are the unidentified. Border Patrol agent, the Department of Homeland Security, U.S. Customs and Border Protection, the U.S. Border Patrol, S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement and the U.S. Department of Justice.

Gas rate decision suspended

RUSK — The Rusk city council unanimously decided to suspend a decision on a gas rate increase for 90 days at a specially called meeting on Friday. CenterPoint Energy is proposing an increase its entire Beaumont/East Texas Division. At the city's July meeting John Gensley, a representative of CenterPoint Energy, requested a $3.39 increase for the residential base rate, from about $16.60 to $20. The change is a 19.7 percent increase for the service, according to the company's public notice. In Rusk the change would affect 923 residential customers, 106 small general service contractors and two large service contractors, according to the company's public notice. Gensley said in July the company has not had a rate increase since 2005, and has since been mandated by the Texas Railroad Commission to update the underground infrastructure, some of which has been in place since before World War II. He said plans are already underway to update infrastructure on Sixth and Ninth Streets by the end of the year. On Friday, City Attorney Larry Sinclair told council members a decision must be made before he next regularly scheduled council meeting because the city was legally required to make a decision on the matter 35 days after the paperwork was filed with the state. "The law is unless you act on it one way or another to pass or deny or to suspend for an additional 90 days, then it goes into effect (automatically)," he said. The city would be able to take action to approve or deny the rate increase from now until around Nov. 6. If the city denied the measure, the city has the option of joining a coalition who would appeal the rate increase to the Texas Railroad Commission. "You know some cities are going to deny it, so there is going to be an appeal before the railroad commission, so if you want to participate in that you could," Sinclair said.

Rules for invasive species?

HOUSTON — Texas wildlife officials said Monday they want to extend emergency rules designed to prevent a destructive mussel from continuing an invasive march through the state's waterways. The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department says the zebra mussel presents "an immediate danger" to wildlife. The mussel is a small non-native shellfish that has wreaked havoc in the Great Lakes and several rivers, including the Mississippi and Hudson. The TPWD says the mussels were found in mid-July in two waterways.

Long live Interstate 69

HOUSTON — The Texas Transportation Commission with little fanfare gave the green light last week to designating a 35-mile stretch of highway U.S. 59 from Houston northeast into Liberty County as Interstate 69. It becomes the longest stretch of the long-debated I-69 in the state and joins a six-mile portion near Corpus Christi as the only pieces of the newest interstate in Texas. Backers of the project for decades now have longed for a highway that traverses the state from the northeast, through the Houston area and then to South Texas.

Governor appoints two

AUSTIN — Gov. Rick Perry has appointed two men to hold key posts in the Health and Human Services Commission following recent high-level departures. Perry named former Republican state lawmaker Dr. Kyle Janek as commissioner of the agency, which oversees the state's provision of health care for the poor, services for the disabled and the state health department. Chris Traylor was promoted after serving two years as commissioner of the Texas Department of Aging and Disability Services.

Travel guide guru dies

DALLAS — Suzy Gershman, whose "Born to Shop" travel guides have helped readers find where to browse or buy in cities ranging from Paris to Hong Kong, has died. She was 64. Gershman died July 25 in San Antonio after being diagnosed less than a year ago with brain cancer, said Sarah Lahey, Gershman's co-author for the last eight years on the "Born to Shop" books. Since its launch in the mid-1980s, the "Born to Shop" series has been translated into a half dozen languages and has sold more than 4 million copies worldwide, Lahey said. By Jamie Stengle.

School not out for teen boaters; game wardens say education is needed

State Game Wardens say they are seeing a spate of mishaps on popular lakes this summer involving teen boat operators who have not taken mandatory boater education. While the new law became effective last year, Texas Parks and Wildlife law enforcement officials say many teens and their parents are still unaware of the required certification. A serious boating accident in Central Texas last weekend illustrates a tragic scenario game wardens are hoping can be avoided with proper education. The accident occurred on Inks Lake in Llano County on Saturday, July 21, and involved a collision between a pair of personal watercraft; one operated by a 14-year-old male and the other by a 16-year-old male with a 16-year-old female passenger. Witnesses responded to aid the injured and called 911. The 14-year-old was airlifted to Dell Children's Hospital in Austin. The operators did not know each other and all were wearing required personal flotation devices. However, neither operator had taken the mandatory boater ed course. The parent or guardians were not aware of the age restriction and need of a boater education course or needing to accompany the operators. The mandatory boater education law requires anyone born on or after Sept. 1, 1993 who operates a vessel with a motor of more than 15 horsepower er or a wind-blown vessel measuring more than 14 feet in length take the course or be accompanied by someone 18 or older who meets the boater education requirements or is exempt by age. "Accompany" means onboard the craft. While all boaters are encouraged to take boating safety education, those born before Sept. 1, 1993, are exempt from required certification. Texas' state-approved boater education courses are available as one-day classroom training or online. The classroom course takes about six hours to complete and the online course has a three hour time commitment. Boaters falling under the boater education requirement will be required to carry a valid ID and documentation of having taken and passed a boater education course. Failure to meet the requirements is a Class C misdemeanor, and violators have 90 days to complete a boater education course to have the charges dismissed. The 82nd Texas Legislature during its regular session also clarified the definition of a vessel to encompass such craft as standup paddle craft, kayaks and canoes. Costs start at $20 for both courses. Information about boater education, including schedules of upcoming classroom courses, is available at: http://www.tpwd.state.tx.us/learning/boater_education.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, July 31, the 213th day of 2012. There are 153 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 31, 1942, Oxfam International had its beginnings as the Oxford Committee for Famine Relief was founded in England.

On this date:

In 1777, the Marquis de Lafayette, a 19-year-old French nobleman, was made a major-general in the American Continental Army.

In 1875, the 17th president of the United States, Andrew Johnson, died in Carter County, Tenn., at age 66.

In 1912, Nobel Prize-winning American economist Milton Friedman was born in Brooklyn, N.Y.

In 1919, Germany's Weimar (VY'-mahr) Constitution was adopted by the republic's National Assembly.

In 1930, the radio character "The Shadow" made his debut as narrator of the "Detective Story Hour" on CBS Radio.

In 1957, the Distant Early Warning Line, a system of radar stations designed to detect Soviet bombers approaching North America, went into operation.

In 1964, the American space probe Ranger 7 reached the moon, transmitting pictures back to Earth before crashing onto the lunar surface.

In 1971, Apollo 15 crew members David Scott and James Irwin became the first astronauts to use a lunar rover on the surface of the moon.

In 1972, Democratic vice-presidential candidate Thomas Eagleton withdrew from the ticket with George McGovern following disclosures that Eagleton had once undergone psychiatric treatment.

In 1989, a pro-Iranian group in Lebanon released a grisly videotape showing the body of American hostage William R. Higgins, a Marine lieutenant-colonel, dangling from a rope.

In 1991, President George H.W. Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev signed the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty in Moscow.

In 1992, the former Soviet republic of Georgia was admitted to the United Nations as its 179th member. Thai Airways Flight 311, an Airbus A310, crashed while approaching Tribhuvan International Airport in Nepal; all 113 people aboard died.

Ten years ago: A bomb exploded inside a cafeteria at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, killing nine people, including five Americans. Pope John Paul II canonized Juan Diego, the first Indian saint in the Americas, in a Mexico City ceremony.

Five years ago: The Army censured retired three-star Lt. Gen. Philip Kensinger for a "perfect storm of mistakes, misjudgments and a failure of leadership" after the 2004 friendly-fire death in Afghanistan of Army Ranger Pat Tillman. The U.N. Security Council unanimously approved a 26,000-strong peacekeeping force for Sudan's Darfur region.

One year ago: Ending a perilous stalemate, President Barack Obama and congressional leaders announced a historic agreement on emergency legislation to avert the nation's first-ever financial default. Syrian security forces launched a ferocious assault on defiant cities and towns, killing at least 70 people and possibly many more. Yani Tseng won the Women's British Open for the second straight year, beating Brittany Lang by four strokes. Florida handed the Atlanta Braves their 10,000th loss in franchise history; with the 3-1 loss, the Braves became the second team in big league history with 10,000 losses (the Phillies reached that mark in 2007).

Texas Water Smart initiative drawing attention, funding

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — On a hot day in mid-July, Agriculture Commissioner Todd Staples visited a steamy chamber of a North Austin Home Depot teeming with plants to promote his newest initiative, Texas Water Smart, which encourages homeowners to conserve water.

Not a cent of tax money is being spent on the campaign, and in a budget crunch, no tax dollars spent seems like something to cheer about.

Meanwhile, the chief state-sponsored water conservation strategy is practically dormant, with a modest budget that leaves no room for advertising or outreach.

That dynamic has left water conservation messaging to companies that favor a mild conservation strategy.

The situation speaks to a larger issue, of officials seeing political benefit in talking about water conservation and water supply, but still far away from spending the needed money — estimated at $53 billion in coming decades — or political capital to seriously address the state's water problem.

In short, just as water has become important to politicians, water conservation itself has become political. In the drought of 2011, as watering restrictions grew more draconian, landscaping companies faced a grim future. Lawn watering became not only unfashionable but downright illicit.

Landscapers "were really afraid of being run out of business if outdoor watering were completely shut off," said C.E. Williams, general manager of the Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District and member of the state Water Conservation Advisory Council. "That was their fear that got them started down this road."

That fall, companies — led by Scotts Miracle-Gro and joined by Home Depot, Wal-Mart and the Texas Nursery and Landscape Association, among others — landed on the Water Smart campaign as a middle-road approach to conservation as the state grapples with long-term lawn watering.

After considering a host of spokespeople, they picked Staples as a trusted voice on water issues.

In September, Scotts Miracle-Gro contributed $1,250 to Texans for Todd Staples.

At the Home Depot presser, Scotts Miracle-Gro's southwest region president, Jim Bates, who gave $200 to the commissioner in December, stood next to Staples.

The Water Smart initiative currently has a budget of $500,000. No state dollars are used, said Bryan Black, a spokesman for Staples.

Texas already happens to have at least one water conservation program.

But by comparison, the Water IQ program has an annual budget of only about $100,000, and no funding for media outreach, advertising or program promotion, said Merry Klownower, a spokeswoman for Texas Water Development Board.

Water IQ's progress has been piecemeal. The Lower Colorado River Authority and the City of Austin are among the few major entities to have promoted the plan.

At a March meeting, many Texas Water Conservation Advisory Council members said they were concerned about duplicative efforts of Texas Water Smart and about possibly confusing audiences with multiple messages, according to meeting minutes.

"We're not trying to change messages local municipalities are using," said Brian Mayes, a spokesman for the Water Smart initiative.

The employees of the companies sponsoring the Water Smart initiative, which has a wide membership that includes some cities, "work and live here in Texas and in a crisis want to rally together," said Mayes.

Ken Kramer, director of the Lone Star chapter of the Sierra Club, who said he welcomes any water-saving promotion, had a different take: "They want to try to be seen and be out there promoting water use techniques so their business can continue existence and not be seen

U.S. Women Gold Again

LONDON, (AP) — There was backstroke dominance for the United States and another impressive French performance during another wild night at the Olympic pool.

American teenager Missy Franklin won the women's 100-meter backstroke before Matt Grevers led a 1-2 finish for the U.S. in the same men's race.

Franklin, a 17-year-old from Colorado and best hope for the U.S. program in the post-Michael Phelps era, had a brief 13-minute break after taking the final qualifying spot in the 200 freestyle semifinals before she had to get back into the water for the backstroke final.

No problem.

Australia's Emily Seebohm, the top qualifier, led at the turn and was under world-record pace, but Franklin showed a remarkable finishing kick. With her arms twirling, the 6-foot-1 swimmer passed the Aussie in the final 25 meters and lunged toward the wall for a winning time of 58.33 seconds.

Grevers then produced another rally in the men's 100 backstroke and Nick Thomas made it a 1-2 finish for the Americans, touching for silver in 52.92.

The twin backstroke victories made up for a disappointing performance by U.S. star Ryan Lochte, who faded to fourth in the loaded 200 freestyle — won by France's Yannick Agnel.

The towering Agnel was in front throughout in perhaps the most star-studded race of these games — even without Michael Phelps, who passed up a chance to defend his Olympic title.

Fifteen-year-old Ruta Meilutyte of Lithuania got the win in the 100 breaststroke, holding off a late charge from world champion Rebecca Soni of the United States.

Cowboys' sense of urgency

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — Jerry Jones liked the recurring theme for the Dallas Cowboys early in his ownership tenure, when they won three Super Bowls in a four-year span.

These days, the talk starting each camp seems to be about a sense of urgency, changes in the team and again getting a fresh start. There has been only one playoff victory the past 15 years, with a 120-120 regular-season record in that span that includes their 8-8 mark a year ago.

When the Cowboys landed in California for training camp this weekend, one of the first things veteran tight end Jason Witten said after getting off the plane was that this season "can't be the same old story."

And Jones talked this offseason about a shrinking window of opportunity for the Cowboys to contend for a championship with core players in their prime like Witten, Tony Romo and DeMarcus Ware.

"I want to officially close the window to closing the window. That was offseason talk," Jones said Sunday, the day before the team's first full-squad workout in the owner's annual "State of the Cowboys" address. "I do feel a sense of urgency, though. But more in the framework of we're nearer when we open up against the Giants. We've got to do better, we've got to be tougher."

Another disappointing Cowboys season ended on New Year's Day night at the New York Giants, who won the season finale to clinch the NFC East title at 9-7 and went on to win their second Super Bowl in five years.

Jones said the Cowboys have improved their talent level since last season.

They spent big money to get free agent cornerback Brandon Carr and traded up for the sixth overall pick in the draft to get All-American cornerback Morris Claiborne. They got a top fullback and gave multiyear deals to two potential starting guards.

So is all that enough to make a Super Bowl run in 2012?

"Well, if nine wins can win the Super Bowl, certainly I'm optimistic," said Jones, quickly pointing out that wasn't a prediction for the victory total. "But we see what we're dealing with. We do understand though the timing."

Dallas won at least 12 games during its Super Bowl-winning seasons (1992, 1993, 1995).

As for the comments by Witten, Jones believes it is good for young players to hear things like that from a veteran who has been so good but has not been able to be part of a Super Bowl championship.

Coach Jason Garrett believes Witten spoke "from the fact that as a leader on this football team over the last eight, nine, 10 years, he's a guy who understands we've been close at different times but haven't gotten the job done."

Jones said every player was signed and in camp Sunday.

That included third-year receiver Dez Bryant, who could face NFL or team discipline after his arrest two weeks ago for allegedly assaulting his mother during an argument. His mother, who made a 911 call, has since said that she doesn't want authorities to pursue family violence charges against her son, who is only 14 years younger than she is.

Garrett repeated what he said earlier this week about the Cowboys supporting Bryant, their first-round pick in 2010, and his family.

Jones said he was taking the situation "very serious" but had not yet spoken to Bryant about what happened. The team owner said it was premature to discuss possible punishment since the team and the league were still gathering information.

Without getting specific about for what or long how, Jones said Bryant has been involved in the team's counseling program. But Jones also pointed out that a lot of players take advantage of different kinds of counseling available.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My nephew "George" -- who dumped his wife and children for a barmaid -- died recently. He was dead broke, so my sister paid for his funeral. I didn't attend, but I was told that George's cremated remains were put in a whiskey bottle by the barmaid, and the bottle was going to be buried in my mother's grave.

Why my sister, his siblings and his kids went along with this idea I'll never know. None of us were raised that way. I found out about it only after the service and put a stop to it. As far as I'm concerned, they could have buried him in a condom, but NOT in my mother's grave! Was I wrong to put a stop to this travesty? -- DISGUSTED UNCLE mation with each other in loud voices. One of them talks nonstop with anyone she can get to engage with her.

By the way, these women are not exercising. They just stand in the pool socializing. Abby, I'm a captive audience! I can't escape from their chatter. I don't want to hear about their divorce, colonoscopy or aches and pains. I have mentioned this to the staff with no success.

Could you please address voice volume and appropriate sharing in confined spaces? -- FRUSTRATED IN FLORIDA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: The staff at the gym may be reluctant to speak to the women because they're afraid it will cause them to cancel their memberships. That's why the person who should address the voice volume issue is YOU. The women may be unaware that you can hear every word they say. If asking the magpies to pipe down doesn't work, then you'll have to swim at a time when they are not around.

DEAR ABBY: I was cleaning out my closets and I'm wondering if there is any advice you can give on donating household items to charity. Is there a right way or wrong way to pack them up? -- GAIL IN OSHKOSH, WIS.

DEAR GAIL: Any items you decide to donate should be clean and in good working order. If you are getting rid of china or glassware, toss anything that is chipped and wrap the rest individually in newspaper so it arrives at its destination without breaking. Clothing should be clean, neatly folded and free of stains. Before giving your things away, ask yourself if you were on the receiving end, would you want it?

BANANAGRAMS!

Each set of letters below is arranged alphabetically, and the ? is in the correct alphabetical position. Figure out what letter the ? represents and rearrange the letters to spell a six-letter word. For example, in A?ENTV the ? could be an A, B, C, D or E. Here it represents a D, which can be combined with the other letters to spell ADVENT. The first letter is placed to get you started.

daily horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, Aug. 1, 2012:

This year you have your hands full juggling your needs with others. You often wonder which voice you need to listen to: "I should," "I want" or "I feel." Only you can decide what works best for you. Your magnetism attracts many potential suitors. If you are single, you will meet people easily. You enjoy the company of others and often date someone just because you like the person, not because he or she tends to say the right thing. If you are attached, you do not always need to agree. In general, the two of you have a great time together.

AQUARIUS likes people as much as you do.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Focus on meetings and discussions in order to get a project moving. You have a way of saying the right thing. Your words are soothing, which helps someone open up more. As a result, you'll gain a lot of insight. Tonight: Where the gang is.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ You want to move in a certain direction, but because of the people around you, you might decide not to. You'll weigh the pros and cons of mixing your personal life with your outside or professional life. Tonight: Treat yourself to a new item you have been eyeing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Your ability to detach and take a broader view of a situation proves to be most helpful. Today's Full Moon might be overwhelming to many people, but you can handle all the different elements and changes. You tend to make the right moves at the right time. Tonight: Where there is music.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Deal with a partner directly. You could be overwhelmed by everything you are hearing. News or information that comes forward could shake up plans. Integrate what you are hearing. You could be unusually moody. Tonight: Enjoy a special friendship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Others want what they want, and there appears to be no give-and-take. Aren't you the same way sometimes? You might want to do something differently or move in a new direction. Let go of a need to control things, and go off on an adventure. Tonight: Take a tip from a free spirit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Be the efficient person you are -- the one whom others depend on. You could discover that you cannot be everywhere at once and therefore must make some choices. Talk to a respected or older friend, and you'll get great advice. Tonight: Know when to call it a night.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ Your ability to see past the obvious and work with others emerges. A new friendship could occupy your thoughts. Try to meet your obligations before you decide you are free. Good news heads in, possibly from a distance. Tonight: Out on the town.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ A boss, parent or higher-up has expectations that you know you must make an effort to meet. A loved one helps you by pitching in or simply by offering his or her suggestion. Don't be chatty when around an authority figure. Tonight: A late dinner.

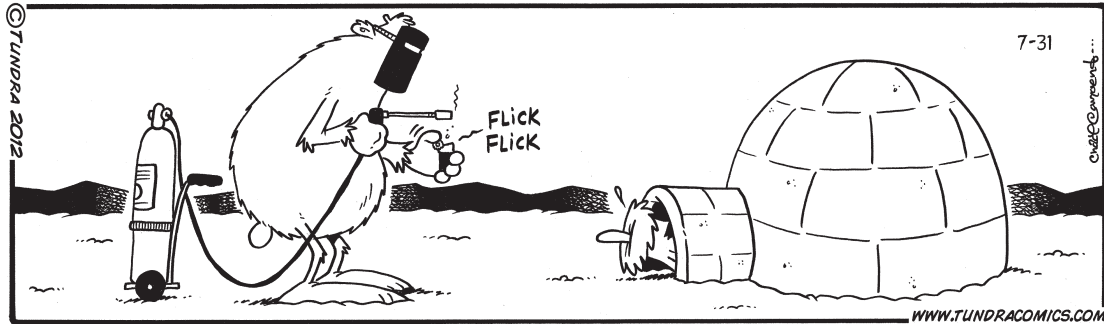

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ In general, you like the excitement of a Full Moon; however, an issue or surprise could occur with a loved one, child or creative endeavor. You'll be pulled into this scenario but will want to deal with some other matter instead. Tonight: Swing with change -- do not fight it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ You could be exhausted by a financial matter involving a key associate or partner. You'll juggle your interests and theirs today. Worry less, and keep your focus on maintaining some type of routine. Tonight: Your treat.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ You beam in much more of what you want, but this success could evoke a partner's jealousy or insecurity. What you see flare up today reminds you that this person does have some issues. You might want to tone down your reaction some and be considerate of his or her feelings. Tonight: Whatever suits you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Much is happening, and you seem to be the recipient of sudden insights. Know that you do not need to integrate all of them into your life right now. You also have some errands to do and obligations that must be met. Tonight: Not to be found.
