City to build four new water wells

By SASHA HELLER
 sheller@thepampanews.com

The City of Pampa is currently installing four new water wells that the City expects will improve its production capabilities. "We are completing two wells that have been under construction and are drilling two more as we speak," said Public Works Director Donny Hooper. "One is in our south well field about four miles south of the city and the other is at the Northcrest water tower site." Hooper added that the third and fourth new wells, which are nearing completion, are located at Hobart Street Park and Marcus Sanders Park. Installation of the new wells will replace older water facilities that have exhausted their utility. "The wells will replace some of our old wells that were built in the 1940s and '50s that are no longer in production," Hooper said. The City has been planning to replace its older wells for some time now, with the intent to better serve the City's water consumers. "This has been in the long-term planning process and is designed to increase our production capabilities to meet demand and to supplement our system which no longer has the convenience of water coming from Lake Meredith," Hooper said. "Our allocation from the Canadian River Municipal Authority has decreased with the loss of the lake, just as all the other member cities have, and we wanted to make sure that we had adequate supply for the future of Pampa."

Hooper does not expect Lake Meredith, which has suffered dramatic water loss, to fully return to its previous water levels. The installation of these new water wells should help the City avoid any negative impact from the situation at Lake Meredith. "I have my concerns about Lake Meredith ever making a comeback and feel that we have to plan accordingly so that our needs can be met and that our city can grow without concerns about having a good water supply," Hooper said. He added that the project should be completed by September. Hooper then shared about how having an adequate water supply is a valuable commodity.

Pampa Mall roof repairs wrapped up

Roofers with Crawford Exteriors on Friday put the finishing touches on repairing the roof at Pampa Mall, having completed the project in just five weeks. "To start with, we had to replace all of the bad steel decking — about 20,000 square feet," said Crawford representative Josh Crawford. "Then we installed a new TPO roof system which will have a 20-year warranty." A TPO roofing system combines plastic and rubber materials and utilizes polymer manufacturing technology. Roofing experts claim the TPO system is an ideal selection as it is reliable, cost-effective and safe for the environment.

The TPO system has quickly become a popular choice among roofers over the past few years. "It's actually the fastest-growing product in the roofing industry," Crawford said. Crawford added that all of the planned roofing improvements have been completed for the main section of the mall, but they may perform further work on other parts of the mall in the near future, per developer Jason Bagwell's request. Bagwell, of J&M Bagwell Properties, said that the completed roof work affords him the opportunity to offer all of the spaces in the mall to potential tenants. "It allows us to lease 100 percent of the space now," he said. "The floor anchors didn't need new roofing so now it makes the entire mall ready to be leased." Bagwell also discussed his overall vision for the revitalized Pampa Mall. "We're just ready to give the mall a new look," he said. "It's going to be a nice, fresh look."

BEALLS RINGING IN NEW LOCATION

Bealls department store is moving in early June to a new location within the Las Pampas Square, according to the Pampa Economic Development Corp. Bealls is now located on the north side of the center near Enbridge's office. That space is 16,000 square feet and the new one will be about 20,000 square feet. The new Bealls will face east and be near The Plaza Restaurant. A crew from Paisley's Sheet Metal and Roofing in Pampa was replacing the roof Friday, said David McGill, an estimator with the company. After that, Paisley's will install copper-colored sheet metal over the frame on the facade of the store. Along with the outside work, the inside of the new Bealls site is being remodeled and repainted.

For fire departments, more to state budget than numbers

By ROSS RAMSEY
 The Texas Tribune

This isn't about the town of West, but the devastating fire and explosion there underscore something you might not have known: the vast majority of fire departments in Texas are staffed by volunteers. Texas has 1,435 registered fire departments, according to the Federal Emergency Management Agency, and 85.6 percent of them are staffed either mostly or entirely by volunteer firefighters. West is one of those. So let's use the volunteer fire departments for a little thought experiment. Lawmakers decided more than a decade ago — and this is a tax- and fee-averse group of people — to assess property insurance companies $15 million a year to finance these departments. If they

Senator pitches Texas teacher retirement offer

AUSTIN (AP) — The latest proposal to shore up the pension fund for Texas' public school and university employees would apply a higher retirement age only to employees with less than five years on the job, but would also require all workers to contribute more.

The offer, pitched Thursday by Lubbock Republican Sen. Robert Duncan, would mean that workers would have to contribute 7.7 percent beginning in 2015, up from the current 6.4 percent.

And school districts for the first time would have to chip in 1.5 percent for their workers' retirement to supplement the state's 6.8 percent contribution.

The Austin American-Statesman reported about 20 percent of members in the Teacher Retirement System of Texas have less than five years on the job. They were hired under a different set of rules and already have a minimum retirement age of 60.

Last week, members of the system objected to a legislative proposal that would have required about half of current employees to work until age 62 to receive full retirement benefits. Currently, there is no minimum retirement age but employees must reach a point in which age and years of service equal 80.

Duncan, who chairs the State Affairs Committee and authored Senate Bill 1458, said his compromise addresses concerns that the state was changing the retirement rules in the middle of the game and provides long-term funding sources.

Fire at Formosa plant leaves 14 hurt

POINT COMFORT (AP) — A fire at a South Texas petrochemical plant has left 14 workers hurt — including two critically — and the ethylene purification area shut down.

A spokesman for Formosa Plastics Corporation, U.S.A. said Friday that the cause of the fire at the Port Comfort plant remains under investigation.

Steve Rice said plant firefighters extinguished the blaze Thursday afternoon before area fire departments could respond. He says the fire happened during maintenance at the ethylene purification site. Rice had no immediate details on the nature of injuries to the plant employees and contract workers but confirmed two are critically hurt.

Houston airport gunman intent on suicide

HOUSTON (AP) — A man appeared intent on suicide, or what's known as suicide by cop, when he opened fire with a pistol inside a busy terminal at Houston's largest airport and died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, police said Friday.

Carnell Marcus Moore, 29, of Beaumont shot himself in the temple with a 40-caliber semi-automatic pistol Thursday afternoon after shooting twice into the ceiling at a ticketing area at Bush Intercontinental Airport.

A Department of Homeland Security special agent who confronted him in the terminal also shot and wounded him in the shoulder when Moore refused to drop his weapon. Homicide Sgt. Brian Harris said Moore's head wound was the fatal gunshot.

"At this point we know what this was and what it wasn't," Harris' partner, investigator Fil Waters, said. "And what it was, was a desperate act committed by a confused young man who has apparently lost all hope."

Harris said Moore had a bag containing an AR-15 rifle with ammunition. That gun was not fired and not removed from the bag, which also contained a Gideon Bible and a suicide note that indicated Moore had no plans to hurt others, Harris said.

"Here in the last hour, I yield to mercy when this could have turned bad," Harris said, reading some of the contents of the note signed by Moore.

Police said events leading up to the airport shooting began Tuesday in Beaumont when Moore abducted the female manager of the apartment complex where he worked as a maintenance man and insisted at gunpoint she accompany him to Houston, about 85 miles to the west. Moore, who had no criminal record, apparently had become infatuated with her but Waters said she is engaged to another man and did not return his affections. She somehow convinced him to release her.

United Supermarkets delivers apples to Amarillo food bank

SUBMITTED

AMARILLO — United Supermarkets in Texas recently helped serve the hungry in local communities for the second year in a row by making a donation of 12,800 pounds of apples to the High Plains Food Bank in Amarillo. The food bank provides food to social service agencies in Pampa.

This donation is part of 40,000 pounds of apples United is giving to food banks in Abilene, Amarillo, Lubbock and Wichita Falls. The donation signals the company's committed participation in the Take a Bite Out of Hunger™ program sponsored by FirstFruits Marketing of Washington.

FirstFruits Marketing of Washington created the Take a Bite out of Hunger™ campaign to help feed the underserved while bringing attention to the problem of food insecurity in the United States. This is the second year United has partnered with FirstFruits. In 2012, United donated more than 44,000 pounds of fresh apples to area food banks.

"United Supermarkets wholeheartedly supports local food banks that work tirelessly each day to combat hunger in our communities," said Tommy Wilkins, director of procurement for United Supermarkets, LLC. "Our donation of 40,000 pounds of apples through the Take a Bite Out of Hunger™ program allows us to help those most in need and demonstrate our ongoing commitment to making a positive impact in the communities we serve."

Hunger is not just about being hungry. It is about food insecurity, or not having regular access to safe, affordable and nutritious foods. In 2011, 15 percent of all U.S. households were food-insecure. At 18.5 percent, Texas ranks third on the list with a higher than national average for food-insecurity.

"We appreciate the support we get from United Supermarkets during this promotion," noted Jeff Schroeder, marketing manager at FirstFruits Marketing. "This program is about more than just the donation; it is also about getting people engaged and educated about the issues surrounding hunger."

Now in its 97th year of operation, United Supermarkets, LLC, is a Texas-based, family-owned grocery chain with stores in 30 markets across north and west Texas. A self-distributing company with its headquarters in Lubbock and distribution centers in Lubbock and Roanoke, United currently operates 52 stores under four distinct formats: United Supermarkets, Market Street, Amigos and United Express.

Budget

hadn't been convinced of the need, they would never have created that fee.

Those same lawmakers, for a while, sent the money they collected to the fire departments that needed it. With no needs, they could have cut spending and lowered or repealed the assessment that brings in that revenue.

In 2007, lawmakers were convinced it would be a good idea to double the fire prevention assessment, raising the amount collected for support of volunteer fire departments to $30 million from $15 million. The money came in, but most of it never got near a fire truck, hose or helmet.

The state's collections increased, but in the budget rubble that followed an economic downturn, lawmakers in 2011 lowered the amount made available for grants without lowering the assessment. In fact, after having doubled the collections, lawmakers halved the allotments, cutting the grants to volunteer fire departments to $7 million per year.

The grant money is for anything from fire and rescue trucks to training supplies and courses to fire coats, hats and boots. The departments apply to the Texas A&M Forest Service, which considers the requests and pays for what it can afford to finance.

At the beginning of April, the list of legitimate requests totaled $77.5 million. The comptroller estimates the balance in the account financed by those insurance assessments will be $80.9 million at the end of August, when the budget period comes to an end.

The 10 lawmakers reconciling the differences between the House and Senate budgets have dozens and dozens of deals to cut over the next few days. A little item like the fire departments is "budget dust" — an amount so small in the overall scheme of things that lawmakers don't devote much attention to it. That said, they don't have enough money to wean themselves immediately off the $5 billion collected in taxes and fees that are diverted from their original purposes.

Lawmakers would like to get rid of the practice, but slowly. They have proposed higher financing for the fire programs, spending $18.5 million of the $30 million that comes in from insurance companies. It's an improvement from the 2011 cuts, if still short of the program's promise. And this week, the House approved legislation to limit those diversions to $4 billion, with the implicit promise to tighten the limit in future sessions.

That doesn't mean they will spend more money on the programs and services that are supposed to get the dedicated funds; one solution is to stop collecting the money that isn't being spent on those programs. The volunteer fire departments could use the money, and theirs is a generally sympathetic cause.

It's easy to pick any budget apart with a series of questions about spending money on this but not that, or raising money from this but not that. It is an endless argument about priorities that is the centerpiece of how a government operates.

The money for firefighting is a little bitty piece of that. But it is part of a bigger conversation about the $5 billion collected by the state for dedicated purposes that is diverted or held back in order to free funds for other things and to keep the budget in balance while doing so.

Account No. 5064 — the one for rural fire prevention — is one of 200 State of Texas accounts with pools of promised but unspent money. It isn't the biggest. This diversion might not be the most egregious. It is, however, a reminder that the debates over money are not really about the money.

Sometimes, they are really about life and death.

modity for a healthy community.

"Water conservation is extremely important and we encourage everyone to be water smart in the up-and-coming peak water usage months," he said. "Water is certainly a precious resource that we must take care of so that we have plenty to go around in the future."

The total cost of the project is around $1.4 million; the funding is drawn from a recent bond series.

US military plane carrying 3 crashes in Kyrgyzstan

CHALDOVAR, Kyrgyzstan (AP) — An American military refueling plane carrying three crew members crashed Friday in the rugged mountains of Kyrgyzstan, the Central Asian nation where the U.S. operates an air base key to the war in Afghanistan.

There was no immediate word on the fate of the KC-135 crew. Officials at the U.S. base said they had no information yet on the cause of the crash.

The plane crashed in the afternoon near Chaldovar, a village about 100 miles (160 kilometers) west of the U.S. Transit Center at Manas base, which is outside the Kyrgyz capital of Bishkek. Pieces of the plane, including its tail, lay in a grassy field bordered by mountains; the air was infused with the heavy stench of petrol.

The plane was on a refueling mission for Afghanistan war operations at the time of the crash, a U.S. defense official in Washington said, speaking anonymously because he was not authorized to discuss the details of an ongoing investigation.

Emergency officials said the front section of the plane has not yet been found, the Russian state news agency ITAR-Tass reported from Bishkek.

A resident of the agricultural and sheep-grazing area said the plane exploded in flight.

"I was working with my father in the field, and I heard an explosion. When I looked up at the sky I saw the fire. When it was falling, the plane split into three pieces," Sherikbek Turusbekov told an AP reporter at the site.

The U.S. base, which is adjacent to Manas International Airport outside Bishkek, was established in late 2001 to support the international military campaign in Afghanistan. It functions as an interim point for troops going into or out of Afghanistan and as a home for the tanker planes that refuel warplanes in flight.

The base has been the subject of a contentious dispute between the United States and its host nation.

In 2009, the U.S. reached an agreement with the Kyrgyz government to use it in return for $60 million a year. But the lease runs out in June 2014, and the U.S. wants to keep it longer to aid in the withdrawal of troops from Afghanistan.

Kyrgyzstan is reluctant to extend the lease.

On Monday, a Boeing 747 cargo plane crashed just after takeoff from the U.S. military base in Bagram, Afghanistan, killing all seven people aboard.

Mary Thom, thank you

Mary Thom, former editor of Ms. magazine and feminist visionary, died last week in a motorcycle accident. I met her back in the mid-1970s. She wouldn't have remembered me, but I remember her. At the time, she seemed much older than me. In truth, she was less than a decade older, but in terms of experience, so much more.

At the time, I was a law student. I'd been raped and had gone through hell, with the police asking me whether I was sure I wanted to file a complaint, my mother warning me not to tell anyone, and my classmates and professors pontificating about the problems of women lying about rape. At the time, I'd already gotten my first post-college job -- as a clerk for a vending company, because the employment agency insisted that I could only apply for jobs on the "secretarial, clerical" desk and not the "management, sales" side. At the time, I'd already been fired from two jobs: the clerical job, because the married boss wanted to replace me with his girlfriend, and a waitressing job, because I complained about over-staffing girls (including me) to dance in white halter tops for 99 cents an hour.

My friend Suzanne introduced me to her friend Mary. She heard my stories. Her response was not surprise and not despair. Her response was full of humor and determination. We can deal with that, she told me. We're going to deal with all those problems. How? Talk about it, she said. Write about it, she said. Do your politics, work with other women, make change happen.

I remember when the first woman was selected as a Rhodes scholar, after decades (centuries) of discrimination, and she told reporters that she was not a feminist, that she had never been a victim of discrimination. Not a word of thanks. As if she would have been selected without the courage and determination of other women. Not me.

I have stood on the shoulders of Mary Thom and the women she worked with, of a generation of feminists -- in retrospect, barely older than me -- who cracked the door open for me so I could crack it open a little bit more so that the next generation might keep pushing.

I became chair of the NOW Task Force on Employment Agency Discrimination. Don't get mad; get even. I talked and I wrote and I did politics. Suzanne and I and our other women friends founded a women's support group in law school, and that group supported me as I cracked the glass ceiling at the Harvard Law Review. In later years, I wrote and I wrote -- and I still do. I called myself Ms. I talked back to those who put me down.

I learned my tactics. But just as important, I learned to do it all with humor, with determination and also with delight, to see other women as my colleagues and my friends, to realize that together, we had power.

I pored over the pictures of Mary Thom that accompanied her obituary. And this is what struck me most. In every one that I saw, she is smiling. Fighting and smiling. Radiating joy. I don't know how many lives she touched, but mine was one. I never got to say thank you. This is the best I can do.

Letter to the Editor Patronizing Amarillo restaurants that serve mixed drinks is hypocritical

Back in December I wrote an editorial concerning the mixed drinks petition that was being circulated at the time. Well, enough signatures (mine included) were gathered to put the measure on the 2013 Pampa ballot. Election day is Saturday, May 11 at M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium.

Here is the wording of the proposition: The legal sale of mixed drinks in restaurants by food and beverage certificate holders only.

Personally, I will be voting FOR the proposition. So that I can have mixed drinks when Shari and I eat out? NO! Shari and I don't ever socially drink alcohol in any form, out in public or in our home. Then if it isn't so that we can drink, why vote for it? I'm glad you asked.

I'm voting FOR the proposition because I don't want to be a bigger hypocrite. When Shari and I go to Amarillo we enjoy eating out at places like Red Lobster, Chili's or Kabuki. All of those establishments serve mixed drinks as part of their business. Now, if I am willing to support restaurants in Amarillo that serve mixed drinks, but think that it would be wrong here in Pampa, then I would be a bigger HYPOCRITE.

And anyone who is planning to vote against this proposition needs to answer one question: Do you patronize restaurants in Amarillo that serve mixed drinks? If you do and yet you plan to vote against this proposition, then you are a hypocrite.

And if you know someone who says that they are going to vote against this proposition, then you need to ask them that question. Don't be mean, but ask them. And if they say that they do eat at restaurants in Amarillo that serve mixed drinks, then respectfully inform them that are acting hypocritically.

And those people making all of those wild claims about social decay and corruption and accidents need to answer these questions: So do you do business in Amarillo? Have you ever suffered social decay while visiting there? Aren't you too afraid of being run over by a mixed drinker to drive in Amarillo? If it's OK for you to drive/eat/do business in Amarillo without suffering any horrible ills from all those mixed drinkers, then why can't the same be true right here in Pampa?

In case you hadn't thought about it, people who drink mixed drinks in restaurants already drink at home. Making them available in eating establishments won't make someone a drinker who doesn't already drink at their house.

Bottom line: vote FOR this mixed drinks proposition.

FYI: My dad was an alcoholic; a 25-year recovered alcoholic when he died. So personally I HATE alcohol. If I were king, I would outlaw the social consumption of not only mixed drinks, but all alcoholic drinks, beer included. But since that isn't ever going to happen, then I just try to be as consistent as I can in a world where alcohol will exist. I find the greatest consistency for my life in voting FOR the mixed drink proposition. God bless.

Bouncin' Around Candle in the window for freedom

"Der er et yndtland" is Danish for "There is a lovely land," and it is the title of the Danish national anthem.

JUDITH SMITH

What is the first thing that you think of when you hear the word "Denmark?" Maybe Hans Christian Andersen or Hamlet? Danish pastry? Denmark is a tiny country with a population of 5.5 million people, most of whom live within 50 miles of the ocean. Denmark is made up of the Jutland peninsula, and the islands of Funen, Lolland and Zealand, the later where the capital, Copenhagen, is located. It is a very flat country, with the highest point, known as "Sky Mountain," at about 567 feet.

Denmark has for many years been awarded the status of "Happiest Country in the World." There are castles, parks, zoos, aquaria, museums, and, in Copenhagen, Tivoli Gardens — the second-oldest amusement park in Europe. (The oldest, Dyrehavs Bakken is also in Denmark.) Denmark is a monarchy, currently ruled by Queen Margrethe II. The country has one of the highest standards of living in the world. Like most of Western Europe, Denmark has not always enjoyed peace and serenity. On April 9, 1940, the Germans began their occupation of Denmark. At the time there were about 7,500 Jews living in Denmark, of whom 6,000 were Danish citizens. It was not until 1943, however, that their safety was seriously threatened. At that time, the Danish resistance worked diligently to safely move these Jews to safety. Many were smuggled in fishing boats across to Sweden, while others were hidden in private homes. When the Nazi officials attempted to round up Jewish citizens, they found and deported only about 400 — the rest had been moved to safety. Most of those who had been deported were returned safely to Denmark after the war.

The Danish King, Christian X, refused to allow his subjects and himself to be squashed by the Nazi terrorists. As the king took his daily horse rides, he was usually surrounded by his subjects ensuring his safety. Several years ago my husband and I spent a week in Copenhagen. We visited the Freedom Museum, which is located between the royal palace and the popular statue of The Little Mermaid. Outside the museum is a crudely-made tank that was fashioned from melted-down farm implements and everything else the Danish Resistance fighters could find. This tank cruised the countryside sniping at German soldiers. There are bullet holes visible in the tank. The museum itself is a tribute to the bravery of the Danish citizens, with many artifacts and letters left over from the occupation. Danish workers staged a strike, walking away from their jobs working for the German government.

Germany insisted that the workers be punished, but the Danish government refused, and the entire Danish government resigned. In February 1944, a group of hand-picked Danish saboteurs sneaked into the General Motors factory in Copenhagen one morning before dawn, planted time bombs, and vanished. The factory had been used for assembling and repairing trucks for the German army. A book entitled "Conquered — Not Defeated" by Peter H. Tveskov illustrates the indomitable spirit of the Danes.

On May 4, 1945 Germany surrendered, and on May 5, Denmark was declared officially free. When the announcement was made that the country was free, Danish citizens tore their blackout curtains from their windows and burned them in the streets. Every year since then, Danes have burned candles in their windows on May 4 and 5 in commemoration of their freedom.

On the evening of May 4, my Danish husband and I also have a candle burning in our window.

Darlene and Leland Lewis' retirement party

STAFF REPORT

There will be a retirement/going-away party at First Assembly of God Church at 500 S. Cuyler St. Everyone is welcome to come anytime between 2 and 4 p.m., Sunday, May 5. This is a party for Darlene and Leland Lewis, the pastors of the church, as it is their last Sunday service in Pampa.

It's prom week

SUBMITTED

Countdown to prom has begun. Prom will be held May 11 in the PHS commons with announcing beginning at 7 p.m.

This year's theme is "A Night under the Big Top" and features circus-themed decorations.

This theme has never been done before, so the atmosphere will reflect all aspects of the circus — from "vintage" circus of the past, to the modern day "cirque" style.

Another first this year is a live band.

This was made possible by donations from several senior parents.

Prizes will also be given away throughout the night and as always, PHS Student Council looks forward to providing a memorable fun filled night for the seniors of 2013.

The community is invited to view the decorations from 2 to 5 p.m., Saturday May 11.

Female Air Force trainer sentenced in sex scandal

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A female training instructor at a Texas Air Force base has been ordered to serve three months in jail after pleading guilty to having sex with a male student.

A military judge in San Antonio on Thursday also ordered Staff Sgt. Emily Allen to do 30 days of hard labor and reduced her rank to airman first class.

Allen was the first woman among more than 30 instructors at Joint Base San Antonio-Lackland charged in what has turned into the military branch's worst sex scandal.

She pleaded guilty Wednesday to having sex with a male airman in 2011, seeking to have a sexual relationship with another male trainee plus having unprofessional social relationships with two female students.

Giant rubber duck makes splash in Hong Kong harbor

HONG KONG (AP) — A six-story-high rubber duck is making a big splash in Hong Kong.

Crowds watched the inflatable duck being pulled by tugboat across Victoria Harbor in front of Hong Kong's signature skyscraper skyline.

Tourist Zhang Wenjin from Shanghai says it's a big surprise. "This is huge. My daughter liked it when she saw it just now. Because kids like cute stuff."

Yu Kwan Yee of Hong Kong was part of the crowd. "The duckie is swimming," the 2 1/2-year-old said.

Dutch artist Florentijn Hofman created the bright-yellow duck, and it was built of PVC material in New Zealand by a company specializing in large sails.

Hofman was on hand as the duck arrived and said it later had to be deflated because high winds and waves created a "big challenge."

The duck has been transported around the world since 2007, bringing a message of peace and harmony. It has previously been to Osaka, Japan, Sydney, Sao Paulo, Auckland, New Zealand, and Amsterdam.

It will be anchored at a Hong Kong terminal for display until June.

Drought across the West spurs resurgence of faith

BERNALILLO, N.M. (AP) — Along the irrigation canal that cuts through this centuries-old New Mexico town, a small group of churchgoers gathers to recite the rosary before tossing rose petals into the water.

Remnants of a tradition that stretches back to the days of Spanish explorers, the humble offerings are aimed at blessing this year's meager irrigation season and easing a relentless drought that continues to march across New Mexico and much of the western half of the U.S.

From the heart of New Mexico to West Texas and Oklahoma, the pressures of drought have resulted in a resurgence of faith — from Christian preachers and Catholic priests encouraging prayer processions to American Indian tribes using their closely guarded traditions in an effort to coax Mother Nature to deliver some much needed rain.

On Sunday, congregations across eastern New Mexico and West Texas are planning a day of prayer for moisture and rain.

"We're worried, but we're maintaining our traditional ways and cultural ways. Together we pray, and individually we pray," said Peter Pino, administrator of Zia Pueblo. "We haven't lost hope in the spiritual world, that they'll be able to provide us resources throughout the year."

"We're not giving up. That's pretty much all we can do at this point."

In its wake, the drought has left farmland idle, herds of cattle have been decimated, the threat of wildfire has intensified and cities are thinking twice about the sustainability of their water supplies.

In New Mexico, the renewed interest in the divine and the tension with Mother Nature stems from nearly three years of hot, dry weather. There are spots around the state that have fallen behind in rainfall by as much as 24 inches, causing rivers to run dry and reservoirs to dip to record low levels. In neighboring Texas and Oklahoma, the story is no different.

The faithful gathered Wednesday night in Oklahoma City to recite a collection of Christian, Muslim and Jewish prayers for the year's first worship service dedicated to rain.

The Catholic bishop in Lubbock is planning a special Mass at a local farm in two weeks so that farmers can have their seeds and soil blessed. The archbishop of New Mexico's largest diocese has turned to the Internet and social media to urge parishioners to pray.

The prayer is simple: "Look to our dry hills and fields, dear God, and bless them with the living blessing of soft rain. Then the land will rejoice and rivers will sing your praises, and the hearts of all will be made glad. Amen."

In Bernalillo, the parishioners from Our Lady of Sorrows church recited the rosary as they walked a few blocks from the church to the irrigation canal on a recent Friday evening. At the front of the procession, two men carried an effigy of San Isidro, the patron saint of farmers.

"I think people need to pray for rain," said Orlando Lucero, a school teacher and county commissioner who organized the procession. "We used to do it in every community and in every parish. It was a beautiful tradition that disappeared. Now I'm hoping that we can get other parishes involved."

In Clovis, hospital administrator and active church member Hoyt Skabelund hopes thousands join Sunday's prayer day.

"I don't know that moisture comes because we pray," he said. "You're going to have ebbs and flows and not all rainfall is because someone prayed and not all droughts are because someone didn't pray. But I do believe that prayers are answered and faith in God and a higher power unlocks the powers of heaven."

After all, praying can't hurt, he said. The simple act of digging a new post hole in eastern New Mexico tells the story of how dry it is. Moist dirt used to turn up several inches below the surface. Now, Skabelund said, someone can dig several feet and not run into any moisture.

In dry times, it's natural for farmers and others who depend on the land to turn to God, said Laura Lincoln, executive director of the Texas Conference of Churches. Still, she and others said praying doesn't take away the responsibility of people to do what they can to ease the effects of drought.

Church leaders are urging their parishioners to conserve water and use better land-management practices like rotating crops.

"We have to play our part," said The Rev. William Tabbernee, head of the Oklahoma Conference of Churches. "Prayer puts us in touch with God, but it also helps us to focus on the fact that it is a partnership that we're involved in. We need to cooperate with God and all of humanity to be responsible stewards of the gifts God has given us through nature."

"My nose and ears were always clogged and I had sinus infections several times a year. Since I started my allergy treatments, my ears have cleared. I no longer have sinus pressure, so I can now wear sunglasses again. Even being around hay doesn't give me any problems. I haven't had any sinus infections since starting the injections." -Trena Moore, LMT

"I have had nagging allergies almost my entire life. The kind where it isn't bad enough to take allergy medication often but still have a constant nasal drip, congestion on waking, occasional watery eyes and non-stop sneezing fits if I am around cotton. So I figured I would give allergy injections a shot. A month in, I now realize how much my allergies were affecting my life...because now have no problems. I wake up without the congestion, I don't have to have a tissue on me at all times and I can drive by the White Deer Gin without any problems!" -Samantha Ford, D.C.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, May 6, 2013:
This year you open up to new concepts. Know that you can't fight city hall, but you can let go of rigidity and choose to look at other ideas. If you are single, you are likely to attract someone quite unusual yet dynamic. Regardless of whether this bond is long-term, you will gain from the contact you have with this person. If you are attached, the two of you could benefit from taking an exciting trip that you have been discussing for a long time. ARIES tests your patience. The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ The unexpected happens, and it adds excitement to your week. You might want to try to gain more control. You also might want to learn to trust your own abilities instead of resisting change. Remain secure, and know where you are headed. Tonight: Accept what is.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★ Much that is happening around you is vague. You could feel as if someone is whispering in your ear. How you deal with a situation could change dramatically if you can get the hard facts. Pull back and listen more. Try to figure out what is really happening. Tonight: Not to be found.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ You have pushed hard to accomplish a lot. It is clear that you can't take a shortcut and still achieve the same outcome. A partnership often tests your commitment. You might want to come to terms with the fact that interaction is part of the bond. Tonight: Dinner for two.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You say the right words and charge your inner circle with ideas. Your perception could be off, in that you might see things only from your point of view. A discussion could become overwhelming. You find that a child or loved one could be sassy. Tonight: Kick back.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ You might want to rethink how you react to unexpected events. You'll be reminded that you have no control over anything but yourself. Situations like these center you, and they also allow you to see life from a different perspective. Tonight: Let your imagination roam.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Look at what is happening behind the scenes with a key associate. This person might choose not to reveal much at first. Be patient with him or her, and your understanding will grow. The two of you will become closer as a result. Tonight: Opt for togetherness.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Defer to others, and watch what happens as a result. You might seem incapable of clearing up a personal matter. Consider rethinking a choice you made if you feel pushed by a family member. Support yourself more often in what feels right to you. Tonight: Say "yes" to an offer.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You could feel out of sorts and unable to get a firm grasp on a situation that is impacting your daily life. What you can be sure of is that you are not getting the big picture. Lighten up when dealing with a controlling person. Tonight: Get some extra R and R.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ Your fiery side emerges with a change of plans. You know what you want, but you also might want to let go of a need to be completely in control. You can control your own actions, but you can't control the stock market and other random factors. Tonight: Choose with passion.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You could be surprised at what you have to deal with. Did you think you were on cruise control? You certainly find out otherwise. Your ability to move mountains might need to come through. Stay centered. Tonight: Happily head home -- you need a break.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Though you're likely to hit a bump or two along the way, you will skip right over them and continue on your present path. There might be a persistent, annoying thought in the back of your mind. Do check out its validity, so that you can let go of it. Tonight: Fun and games.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You might want to figure out what is necessary for you to make a change. Understand that you are dealing with others and their wishes, as well as your finances. Learn to say "no" when a request is not possible for you to meet. Start today. Tonight: Re-evaluate your spending.

CULBERSON'S Spotlight

Merkie & Matt Martinez

A unique duo at Culberson-Stowers is Merkie Martinez and son Matt. They are both experienced auto body professionals and between the two, have a combined 50 years of experience. Merkie attended PHS and married wife Virginia. They have 4 children, Charles, Chauntyl, Matt, and Maleesa (graduating this year from Clarendon College Nursing school). He is also blessed with several grandchildren, Tera, Strise, Jazlynn, Michael and Matt's twin boys that are on their way. Plus one for Malessa to arrive soon.

Merkie's father, Joe Lewis Martinez Sr., worked at Ford's Body Shop for many years. He would teach Merkie everything he knew after school and during the summer. Buffing and painting was a family art, not only carried on through Joe and Merkie but also brothers, Brig and Jerry as well. "This is all I know. This is what my family has done for years. I enjoy it and making customers happy," says Merkie.

Matt learned the same way that his father did. He went to Ford's Body Shop with his dad. At 10 years old he mowed lawns to earn money towards the repair of a '64 Impala. He helped repair the body and add wheels, tires, stereo etc. They just did it a little at a time. Then he moved onto painting a sunfire at the age of 15. He has sanded and painted many vehicles since then. Matt graduated from PHS in 2008 along with his wife Kambra. His daughter Jazlynn (3) and son Michael (2) plus twin boys soon to arrive have taken some attention away from his car projects. But it won't be long and they too will be along side dad learning how to craft a like new automobile out of a damaged metal. "This is what I enjoy and know how to do. It's something my family has done for years and we take pride in our work," says Matt

"This is the kind of experience any body shop would be lucky to have. It's a benefit from years of training. There is nothing they haven't seen or couldn't fix. Culberson-Stowers is proud to have them repairing our customers vehicles," says Richard Stowers

So, the next time you have a fender bender or maybe just repairing an old '64 Impala, be sure and ask for Martinez, father or son! They are sure to get you back on the road in no time!

Chicago Council member says Cubs threat a mistake

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago City Council member whose ward includes Wrigley Field doubts that Cubs chairman Tom Ricketts is seriously considering moving the team.

Ricketts threatened for the first time this week to do just that if he doesn't get his way in tough negotiations with the city and the alderman over plans to renovate the iconic ballpark.

But Alderman Tom Tunney says he thinks Ricketts was just speaking out of frustration and that he made a mistake.

Tunney tells the Chicago Sun-Times that he and the neighborhood he represents are still expecting the Cubs to compromise.

The most contentious part of Ricketts' proposal is a 6,000-square-foot video screen in the outfield.

The owners of private rooftop clubs that share revenue with the team worry it would obstruct their views.

Golf Thought of the Week

The Great Escape: Fairway bunkers

Few of us ever practice escaping fairway bunkers, but they come into play enough to demand our attention. They can be tricky problems, but with a few simple rules, this hazard doesn't have to cost you a good hole.

First, be honest about your prospects. If your ball is plugged behind a steep lip, you need to use your traditional bunker technique. Get the ball out, move on from there. But normally you'll have more to work with.

Pick the club that will get you out of the bunker and offer you the best distance. A No. 7 Iron is a likely candidate. Set up with the ball slightly back in your stance. Unlike with green-side bunkers, you want to connect the ball before the sand. You can also grip down slightly to help with this.

It also helps to focus on a smoother than usual tempo. Any rushing of the stroke can shift your footing and throw your balance. You want that lower body nice and 'quiet' for this stroke.

If you keep just one thing on your mind, make it this: connect with the ball BEFORE the sand. Get that right and you'll give yourself a great chance of saving the hole. In fact, saving par out of a bunker is one of the best feelings in golf.

If you'd like more help to refine your bunker technique, contact me and we'll help you find 'that feeling' more often.

Making improvements in the 'Red Zone'

Improvements to the short game. Easier said than done. Perhaps more than anywhere else, this area of the game is about math. Distance is vital. You know that. Having the correct clubs in the bag is not as simple as many golfers think. Then the technique, the control (and sometimes, restraint).

I want to make you more successful as you get into the "red zone." To help, have a look through my Short Game Zone. I've included some of my favorite short game tips, but you'll also find information on specialist Gap Wedges and some of the more technical "stuff" like bounce.

Rangers chilly again in 3-1 loss to White Sox

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Rangers are ready for Adrian Beltre's bat — and the weather — to warm up.

Hector Santiago allowed two hits in five-plus innings filling in for Jake Peavy on Thursday night, Tyler Flowers hit a three-run homer and the Chicago White Sox beat Texas 3-1, handing the Rangers their first series loss of the season.

Three weeks after the Rangers had the coldest day game at their home ballpark three weeks ago, they shivered through a slightly less-cold one that was still their coldest May game — 44 degrees.

Beltre accounted for the only Texas run — and the only hit in the first five innings off Santiago — with his sixth homer of the season in the second inning, but he stranded five runners late and is hitting .215.

"On one level it's kind of comforting for a guy like me to see even a guy like Adrian can struggle a little bit," said Texas designated hitter Lance Berkman, who was hitless with a pair walks. "But I don't expect that's going to be the case for very much longer."

The 25-year-old Santiago was supposed to replace Gavin Floyd on Friday night in Kansas City, where the forecast is for temperatures barely above freezing a day after the Royals were snowed out against Tampa Bay. Instead, Santiago replaced Peavy, sidelined by back spasms.

"Going into it as a starter you always say you know when you're going to throw, but I kind of had prepared for tomorrow," said Santiago, who had six strikeouts and two walks in his first start of the season and fifth of his career. "I felt fine and warming up I felt really good. Nothing was different than a regular day."

Flowers' drive just inside the foul pole in left field was the third straight hit after Texas right-hander Justin Grimm (2-1) retired 10 in a row on the day he was chosen AL rookie of the month.

Flowers did his part before the game, too, easing his batter's mind after Peavy's effort to loosen up his back failed.

"He was talking to me before the game, 'Hey do you want to go over the lineup?'" "Flowers said, "and I was like, 'Do you?' and he said, 'Not really.' And I was like 'Good, just throw what I put down and we'll go from there.' He's one of those guys that I think is more effective because he doesn't overthink things."

Addison Reed pitched around two of Chicago's seven walks, striking out the side in the ninth for his 10th save and second in two nights.

The game-time temperature was 37 degrees cooler than the previous night. It was a 40-degree difference on April 10, when the temperature at first pitch was 39 degrees for 2-0 loss to Tampa Bay in a day game after it had been 79 the night before.

"It's miserable," Berkman said. "I've been here a long time, and I can't remember a day this cold in May."

The Rangers were the last team in the majors without a series loss, but now they've gone two series without winning after splitting four games with Minnesota last weekend. The White Sox won two straight after Texas took the opener.

Grimm, who had a 1.59

12-year-old misses cut

TIANJIN, China (AP) — The youngest player to compete on the European Tour missed the cut, while Mikko Ilonen of Finland tied the course record with a 9-under 63 Friday for a three-shot lead at the China Open.

The 12-year-old amateur Ye Wocheng missed the cut at 14 over after a pair of 79s. But China's Dou Zecheng became the youngest at 16 to make the tournament cut with a 2-under total.

Ilonen birdied four of his last five holes to finish at 12 under and move ahead of Australia's Brett Rumford and Thailand's Kiradech Aphibarnrat, who had 67s.

Fourth-graders learn local history at museum

SUBMITTED

White Deer Land Museum recently hosted more than 300 fourth-grade students representing all four elementary schools in Pampa. As these students learn about Texas history in the fourth-grade, it is a great opportunity for teachers to show the students actual artifacts from our area.

Seven stations were set up in the museum and annex and the children heard historical stories about life on the Plains and the Red River War. Volunteers dressed in period costume at each station.

- John Curry (past president of the WDL Museum Board) "They Worked the Land" — dressed as a rancher.
- Joanne Jones (WDL board member), "They Built their Homes," dressed as homestead housewife.
- Jimmy Northcutt (from Miami), "Early Exploration," "German Sisters Rescue," "Military Conquests," dressed in period cavalry uniform.
- Ed Benz (Borger) dressed as a Southern Cheyenne Indian Scout from Ft. Elliot in 1885: "Prehistoric Adaptations," "A Brave's World."
- Chris Larson (Amarillo) dressed in period cavalry uniform, set up a firearms display and explained the weaponry used during the Red River Wars.

• James Orman (Sanford) Dressed in period cavalry uniform, set up U.S. Army Camp and explained life as a soldier. on the Plains of Texas.

• Kay Lard (assistant museum director) told the students about the history of the White Deer Land Company and the process homesteaders went through to obtain property.

• Charles Henry (president of the Board of the White Deer Land Museum) welcomed each group of children to the museum.

• Mike Price, Bob Williams and Della Moyer (all WDL board members) assisted in getting the children from station to station.

The White Deer Land Museum welcomes volunteers to help with activities planned for the remainder of the year. For more information, contact new museum director Courtney Oxley at 806-669-8041. Ed Benz, Chris Larson and James Orman are all members of the Frontier Regiment, a group of history reenactors, who tell the Red River War story throughout the area.

They meet every other month at the White Deer Land Museum and are always looking for new recruits.

sunday horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, May 5, 2013:

This year you focus on your long-term desires and goals. At times, you might want to verify that you really want what you are striving for. Remember that as we change, our wish list and goals also change. If you are single, you could meet someone you could nearly categorize as "a dream come true." Take off your rose-colored shades every once in a while. If you are attached, the two of you enjoy spending a lot of time together, even if it is just doing chores. ARIES can be contrary, and he or she brings out that trait in you. The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ You might feel insecure and not as sure of yourself as you would like to be. You could be difficult or moody as a result. This is just a phase, but keep in mind that others often live their day-to-day lives feeling as you do now. Tonight: Wait until the wee hours, then decide.

This Week: You feel great as Monday comes along.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★ Your sense of direction in a meeting will be important, especially as those around you might not want to share as they normally do. It's not that others want to make you feel left out; rather, it is more a result of their somber moods. Tonight: Go off and do your own thing.

This Week: Not until Wednesday do you feel up to snuff. From that point on, you'll feel great.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ Take charge and find out what is really going on with an older relative or friend. You are able to make quite the difference in this person's life. Know that your efforts will be greatly appreciated. Tonight: Out with friends.

This Week: Go for what is important the first two days of the week.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ You will want to do something different. Optimism surrounds the moment. Reach out to someone you have not been around much but who you share a lot of your life with. Know what you want from a situation. Tap into your creativity. Tonight: In the limelight.

This Week: You are the star wherever you are.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★ Spend some quality time with a friend or loved one. Have a long brunch together. You will enjoy catching up on each other's news. After getting a better perspective, you could decide to make a major change. Tonight: Wherever your friends are.

This Week: Research different theories for how to approach a certain goal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ Make sure that you hook up with some friends you really care about. You often find that you are most relaxed when you're with these people. Someone you meet today could be very intense and controlling. Proceed with care. Tonight: Dinner out with a special friend.

This Week: A partner or loved one whispers news in your ear.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ Be honest with yourself about the implications of deciding to change direction or alter plans. You could discover that a family member is irritated, as he or she has not had enough time with you. You can change this scenario as well. Tonight: Add more fun to a relationship.

This Week: Be ready to answer some provocative questions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Listen to news, and manage your personal situation with more ingenuity. You might want to take a risk, but at what cost? You will witness a sudden change of pace in the afternoon. Important information might be forthcoming. Tonight: Start thinking about your to-do list.

This Week: You will push hard every day to accomplish what you feel you must.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★ Pressure comes from a parent or loved one to head in a new direction.

You might decide to go along with this person's ideas, as it could be easier in the long run. Schedule a late lunch with a family member and catch up on his or her news. Tonight: You don't need to go far.

This Week: Use your wild imagination to create more of what you desire.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ Don't hold back; instead, clear up your feelings. Also, give others the opportunity to do the same. Listen to what is being shared with sensitivity. Think carefully before offering any feedback or advice. Tonight: Plan for a special meal.

This Week: You know what works, but you still need to go over a decision with a partner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ Your emotional nature homes in on what is happening with someone you care a lot about. You might decide to buy this person a gift or a token of your affection. You'll discover what his or her limitations are, as well as your own. Try not to push too hard. Tonight: Surf the Web.

This Week: Speak your mind, and others will listen.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ It is a very productive time for you right now, so put your high energy where you need to. You can clean up, work on a project or indulge a loved one. Recognize that you are in command of your own ship. Do what you want, and others will follow your lead. Tonight: Treat yourself.

This Week: You might want to revise your budget on Monday.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 60-year-old woman with grown children. My husband and I divorced after 30 years of marriage because he met someone at work. It was a quick process, and because I was in shock, I agreed to the terms of the divorce even though they weren't in my favor.

Two years ago I met a very nice man who treats me with respect and love. He wants a future for us, and so do I, but I can't get over one thing: He has two illegitimate children — one he didn't even know about — and although the son is an adult, he is still paying back support.

I hate to sound like a snob, but this situation isn't OK with me. I'm afraid I will always bring it up when I am angry. I'm thinking maybe if we wait until the support obligation has ended I might feel different, but who knows? I'd appreciate some advice. — CAN'T GET OVER IT IN GEORGIA

DEAR CAN'T GET OVER IT: I know very few people over 35 who don't carry some kind of baggage from past experiences. You don't have to approve of everything in his suitcase, but if you plan on having a long-term relationship with this "very nice man," you will have to accept that he is fulfilling his legal obligation.

Dragging the past into the present during an argument is an unhealthy expression of anger. It's guaranteed to drive a partner away. Until you can find a more constructive way to work out disagreements, you shouldn't marry anyone.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in our 30s and have been married 15 years. Over the past year we have been intimate only about once every three months. I tried to spice things up to see if I could get him interested, but he reacted by becoming upset, defensive and insinuating that I have an unnatural fixation on sex.

After some discussions, it turns out he's having erectile dysfunction problems. I was relieved to know it wasn't lack of interest, but now I'm even more confused by his unwillingness to see a doctor. It has been a couple of months since he confided his problem to me, but he has done nothing to try and correct it.

I offered to go to the doctor with him, have joint therapy — I even tried being a little extra kinky to see if it would help.

He still refuses to see a doctor or go to therapy. I'm completely stumped and unsure what else to do. Any advice will truly be appreciated. — NEEDS LOVIN' IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR NEEDS LOVIN': You have done everything you can do. Your husband may be embarrassed or afraid, which is why he's avoiding going to a doctor. Be supportive, but you need to ask him what he plans to do about this — if anything — because the absence of physical affection is unfair to you.

DEAR ABBY: My 14-year-old granddaughter "Lana" has unfriended me on Facebook twice during the last week. Her mother told me she has been unfriended, too, because Lana doesn't want adults seeing what she's doing on Facebook. How would you handle this? — NANA IN OHIO

DEAR NANA: I'd suggest that Lana's mother tell her daughter that if she wants to continue on Facebook, she had better KEEP Mom and Grandma as friends.
