Fire victim recalls tragedy

■ Fundraiser will be held tomorrow to help Bobby Darton with living expenses.

BY TIMOTHY P. HOWSARE
 thowsare@thepampanews.com

Despite a terrible family tragedy that happened a month ago, Bobby Darton was in good spirits Monday and said he is ready to go back to work.

Darton sustained second- and third-degree burns when his house on Prairie Drive was destroyed in a fire on July 12.

His 55-year-old mother Beatrice was killed in the blaze.

He said his mother was a caring woman who was full of life and loved attending church.

On Wednesday, Darton's former employer, Pampa Nursing Center, will hold a fundraiser to help Darton with his living expenses.

Donations for Darton will be accepted during a cookout from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., Aug. 14 in the parking lot of the Pampa Nursing Center, 1321 West Kentucky Ave. Hot dogs and hamburgers will be served.

Darton said he worked there for five years. He was the housekeeping and laundry supervisor and also did maintenance.

Darton said he loved his job but has not been working since the fire. Now that he's nearly healed, he wants to return.

"I love the people and the environment," he said. "It really makes your day when you can get a smile from one of the patients."

Nicole A. Satterwhite, rehab program manager at Pampa Nursing Center, said Darton always took time out of his day to make every resident of center feel special and loved.

The 34-year-old and his family lost everything in the fire, including clothes, vehicles and furniture.

Darton said the fire started around 10 a.m. in the front room of the house. He did not know his mother was sleeping in her bedroom, because for the three previous nights his mother had slept at her sister's house, who lives next door.

Darton said he attempted to put out the fire himself, but the flames grew too quickly.

He went to his aunt's house next door and asked her to call 911.

He asked his aunt about his mother's whereabouts and discovered she was inside the burning house. At that point, the entire house was in flames, Darton said.

"It took over the whole house and I couldn't go back in through the front or the back."

Mystery of Texas grave next to Oswald's solved

NEWYORK (AP)—For years, curiosity seekers visiting the Fort Worth, Texas, grave of Lee Harvey Oswald have wondered about the simple headstone next door, marked Nick Beef.

It turns out Nick Beef is alive and living in New York.

The New York Times reports that the 56-year-old man who uses that name purchased the cemetery plot next to Oswald's in 1975 and had the granite marker placed there in 1997.

Beef, born Patric Abedin, now lives in Manhattan and calls himself a nonperforming performance artist.

On Nov. 21, 1963, President John F. Kennedy and his wife, Jacqueline, landed at the former Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth as part of a two-day Texas tour.

Beef, then 6 years old, was sitting on the shoulders of a military police officer in the crowd when the first couple passed just a few feet away.

Oswald shot Kennedy the next day.

Young Patric used to sometimes visit Oswald's grave with his mother. He recalled that she told him: "Never forget that you got to see Kennedy the night before he died."

When he was 18, Beef read that the burial plot next to Oswald's was available. He bought it for $17.50 down and 16 monthly payments of $10.

Beef said he has often asked himself why he wanted it. "It meant something to me in life," is the only answer he can come up with.

All-boys club: Michigan couple welcomes 12th son

DETROIT (AP) — A western Michigan family welcomed their 12th child. And, shocker, it's a boy — just like the other 11.

Jay and Kateri Schwandt of Rockford believed the latest baby might break the gender streak, especially after Kateri, known as Teri, was nine days past her due date. That was unusual for her pregnancies. But as it turned out, it was hardly a game-changer as a nurse at a Grand Rapids hospital announced delivery of another boy.

Tucker was 7 pounds, 12 ounces.

"Of course. There was a chuckle in the whole room," Teri, 38, said told The Associated Press on Thursday.

Prairie Plains Perspective Alzheimer's sufferers need a good support team

DENNIS PALMITIER

Dewey Palmitier, were he still alive, would be 95 years old as of this past Aug. 6. He passed away one day shy of his 88th from the afflictions manifested by Alzheimer's. I had decided to give mother dearest a break from the every day to and fro drive between Pampa and Canadian where I had opted to place him for the proper care his condition demanded, and let me tell you, I don't think there is a better "place" for that particular care than the Edward Abraham Memorial Home down Canadian way. Has to do with "not for profit" versus "for profit," and I think most of you who have experienced or are experiencing a similar situation will understand my way of thinking, but I'm digressing, for my decision to give mother a rest that Saturday turned out to be the day dad left this world. He passed away by himself, his family not by his side, and to say the least, I'm haunted over that decision every year come the month of August. No family members should pass away without his or her kin at their bedside. Succinctly, for what it did to my father, I hate Alzheimer's, and no amount of a special month of awareness and dollars donated to that lost cause will erase my feeling. I choose, rather, to look back at the time I cared for my father before Alzheimer's forced me to institutionalize him, specifically, those trying times that all I could do, was laugh. "He's walking out the front door in his underwear, and I can't stop him!" were my mother's frantic words to me over the phone. Alzheimer's and its precursor, senility, tend to make folks a tad hard headed. The old ways are often the least forgotten. Upon arriving at their house, I noticed the front door open with mother grasping the door jamb, arms and legs splayed in her blocking attempt at keeping dad inside. Once in the house, he was indeed in his underwear, his skinny little legs emitting from his tidy whities and not one bit happy with my mother. "I just want to go to the Post Office!" he shouted as I took him by the hand and led him to his recliner. Sitting him down I explained to him how folks might be offended by his attire while walking downtown, that one must be properly clad. He looked himself over and replied, "I put socks on." Dad's Alzheimer's progressed to the point I was forced to move back into my childhood home to help my mother with his care. One night in the early a.m., I'm awakened by his car engine starting. Cobwebs and such, it took a moment for the synapse to close and the brain cells to register what I heard. I lepped out of bed, in my underwear, and tore out the front door to see he has already backed into the street. I'm able to dive through his open driver's window in order to jam the transmission lever into park, all the while dad beating me on the head and back for impeding his progress. Fortunately he hit the brakes, and I was able to put the car in park. Ex-

Dorothy Hamil's stunt double. She walked in announcing "Dewey Palmitier, I'm here to give you a bath! You have a problem with that idea?" Dad sprang out of that recliner leaving a trail of clothes to the restroom, and, while still at home, never missed a bath.

Alzheimer's has taken a goodly portion of we Boomers' parents. It has attacked our generation by afflicting some of us with what medicine calls "early onset." Odds are many of you are fretting, denying, crying, wondering what to do over a loved one or close friend suffering from Alzheimer's. What I'm trying to imply is if you let it, particularly if you are the caretaker, Alzheimer's will control you, it will get the best of you. You have to have a safety net, a release valve if you please, to take away the stress.

Caring for my father, I quickly learned Alzheimer's is not something to tackle by oneself. Get help, and I'm not talking another family member. For my father and I, help came from the Veterans Administration and through Medicare provided services from nursing agencies. Pampa has some excellent choices for home care services. For me, tremendous relief came in the form of writing a journal of those times with my father and his life ending experience. Even greater relief came with reviewing the up and down days Alzheimer's provided and discovering those times that made me laugh.

tracting myself with car keys in hand, I asked him where he was going. "To the Post Office!" were his angry words. The long term memory thing again. Taking his hand and walking back to the house I explained to him the Post Office is closed at two in the morning. He looked at me and uttered, "I was going to wait till they opened!" Modern vehicles come with two, sometimes three sets of keys. I gathered up all the keys for his car. Dad attempted to drive away three more times. Again, the long term memory thing was working along with, he had six sets(?) of keys for his car conveniently placed mind you, around the house!

With many an Alzheimer's sufferer hygiene goes out the door as fast as their brain cells shrink. Dad wasn't keeping himself properly bathed and shaved and was getting rather gamey. His proud abstinence prevented mother from helping him, prevented me as well. I opted for a nursing care company to send an aide to help with such. The first person through the door was a huge male nurse. Dad gave the gentleman the look and no amount of persuasion from mother, myself, or the aide would get him out of his recliner.

Next through the door was a built-like-a-fire-plug female aide ready to pick dad up out of his chair if need be in order to get him in the bath. Hell, she frightened me to the point I was ready to take another shower! To this day I think the world of Sissy Love, the third aide to walk through the door. Sissy, at the time, could have been

Did You Know?

You can search for library books from your computer

By MISTY GUY
Lovett Memorial Library

Did you know that you can search our card catalog from home by visiting our webpage at www.pampalovettmemorial.org? Patrons can search for items here in Pampa and at all of the libraries (more than 100) that belong to Harrington Library Consortium (HLC) 24/7. Just use the traditional searches by title, author, or subject to find the material you want.

Pampa patrons may put holds on Pampa material only. By putting an item on hold, library staff will pull it from the shelves and bring it to the circulation desk and give you a call that the item you requested is available for pick up. We give you 3 days to pick up the material at the circulation desk.

If you find an item(s) at another library, you may come in and request it through Interlibrary Loan (ILL) for $3 per request. One can also renew items online the day BE-FORE they are due by clicking on Search our Catalog on our homepage. In the top right hand corner are two bars: USERID (which is your library card number) and PIN (4 digit number that the staff will give to you in person at the library). If you forget to renew online, you can always call the library at 806-669-5780 and we will renew items for you.

Patrons will also find recommended reading lists and best sellers lists on this page. Here's an example of how this is helpful: Patrons may click on the New York Times Fiction best seller link and it will bring up the titles on their list. Click on the blue More Info on the left next to the title of which you are interested. This will let you know if we have the item and you can put a hold on it. This will also give you more titles by this author or more books on this subject/topic.

Misty Guy is head librarian. For more information, call 806-669-5780.

Pilot in deadly wreck survived earlier crash

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The plane accident that killed four people in a Connecticut neighborhood was not the first crash for the pilot, a former Microsoft executive who was taking his teenage son on a tour of East Coast colleges. The pilot, Bill Henningsgaard, was presumed killed along with his son, Maxwell, and two children who were inside a house struck by the small propeller-driven plane on Friday.

Four bodies were recovered from the wreckage and sent to the Connecticut medical examiner's office on Saturday for identification, officials said.

Henningsgaard, a highly regarded philanthropist, was flying a small plane to Seattle in 2009 with his mother when the engine quit. He crash-landed on Washington's Columbia River.

Homemakers and Social Security

TOM MARGENAU
Creator's Syndicate

Although most women today work and earn their own Social Security benefit, there still are quite a few women, especially those in their 50s and 60s, who have never worked outside the home. Or if they have, they either didn't work long enough to become "insured" for Social Security, or they worked just barely enough to earn a small retirement benefit on their own account. So they must rely on a husband's (or ex-husband's) Social Security record to qualify for full dependent's benefits, or partial benefits to supplement their own meager Social Security income. Today's questions concern such women.

Q: I am about to turn 62. I have been a homemaker all my life. My husband is 68 and took his Social Security at 66. I am considering applying for benefits on his record, but I have been told that if I take a wife's benefit at age 62 that it will reduce my future widow's benefits. Is this true?

A: No, it is not true. The fact that you might take a reduced dependent wife's benefit on your husband's Social Security account has no impact on the amount of any future widow's benefits you might be due.

The only thing that determines what percentage of your husband's Social Security benefit you will get as a widow is your age when you claim survivor benefits. If you are 66 or older, you will get 100 percent of your husband's rate. If you are under that age when you become a widow, you will get a reduced rate, the reduction depending on your age.

Q: I am trying to maximize my wife's potential widow's benefit. I am 66 and my wife is 62. She has never worked outside the home. I was planning to delay taking my Social Security benefits until age 70 in order to get my full retirement benefit plus a 32 percent delayed retirement bonus. I also understand that my wife's widow's rate will include that bonus. But someone at the Social Security office told me that if I die before age 70 without ever signing up for Social Security, that my wife will not get any bonus. She will simply get my age-66 rate. They told me the only way I can guarantee my wife gets the bonus is by filing for benefits at 66 and then immediately suspending those payments. Is this true?

A: Either you were misinformed, or you misunderstood what the Social Security representative was trying to tell you. You do not have to file and suspend in order to insure that your wife gets any delayed retirement credits added to her widow's rate if you die before you file at age 70. For example, if you die at age 69, she will get your full age 66 retirement benefit AND she will get about a 24 percent delayed retirement credit added to her widow's check. In other words, her widow's payment will be 124 percent of your full retirement rate.

There is one advantage to going the file and suspend route, however. It's the same advantage I've explained to retiree's many times in this column. It gives you an option if you change your mind before age 70. He would get his full age 66 rate, plus a delayed retirement bonus of about 16 percent. But had he filed and suspended at age 66, he would have had one more option. He could forego the 16 percent bonus and instead take 24 months worth of back pay benefits to age 66.

If you have a Social Security question, Tom Margenau has the answer. Contact him at thomas.margenau@comcast.net.

Kirsti Kasch, left, was crowned the Top O' Texas Rodeo Queen on Saturday. Kirsti is from Skellytown and was sponsored by The Victorian Rose. She won a $500 scholarship. Pictured with Kirsti is Courtney Oxley and Robert Douglas from the Rodeo Queen committee. Holland Poole of Pampa, right, was named first runner up in the Top O' Texas Rodeo Queen contest. Holland is from Pampa and was sponsored by West Texas Pest Control. She wins a $250 scholarship. Roses for both girls were donated by Brandon's Flower Shop and Kirsti received a diamond ring from Rheim's Diamond Shop. Douglas said Monday he wanted to thank all of the sponsors, who went the extra mile to support the girls. He added the competition was tough because there was a great group of girls vying for the title. "All girls were very pleasant and it's good to know there are such outstanding young ladies among the young generation."

Lansing zoo knocks down story of missing tiger

CHARLOTTE, Mich. (AP) — A tiger on the loose? A Lansing zoo says don't be fooled.

Potter Park Zoo says police have received about two dozen calls Friday, mostly from people in the Charlotte area concerned about reports of a tiger roaming free.

Authorities believe a prankster is making phone calls with a warning about a tiger breaking free while being transported outside the zoo. The caller's identification was blocked, preventing people from determining where the call originated. Potter Park Zoo director Sherrie Graham says tigers, lions, monkeys and camels are safe and secure.

Animal welfare group vandalizes Iowa butter cow

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — An animal welfare group intent on sending a message in support of veganism hid until closing time then poured red paint over the Iowa State Fair's butter cow. But the damage was quickly scraped away and visitors never knew the iconic sculpture had been damaged.

Iowans for Animal Liberation claimed responsibility for the attack in a news release emailed Sunday night, saying members hid in the cavernous Agriculture Building on Saturday night and emerged after the fair closed for the day.

They then broke into a refrigerated room where the sculpted cow and other butter sculptures are displayed and poured red paint over the cow.

Rodeo brings together fans from across the United States

■ Top O' Texas Rodeo was as successful as previous years.

While Thursday's atmospheric conditions may have thwarted some attendees from riding out the storm at the 67th Annual Top O' Texas Rodeo, by the time the sun went down on Friday and Saturday, fans at the rodeo were able to sing about stars over Texas like an old cowboy might have.

The rodeo saw people from across the nation, mostly from the Tri-State Region of Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma, come out and enjoy some good ol' fashioned calf roping, bronc bucking and bullriding. Cindy Kempf, the office manager for the Top O' Texas Rodeo, said that there were competitors from across the globe.

"[The farthest we have had riders from] so far it has been Australia," Kempf said. "[We have riders from] Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Kansas. Well it is actually an open rodeo. We still have professional cowboys here. So we are still drawing professional riders."

There were several Pampa competitors, including Keenan Hughes (who competed in the National High School Rodeo Association event in Rock Springs, Wyo. just last month), Austin Hendricks, Kory McCarn and many more.

The weather was nice the rest of the weekend, but Kempf said that the loyalty of the fans during Thursday's hectic weather is a true testament to Pampa's love for the rodeo.

Dr. Brad Morse and his wife, Dr. Gretchen Adams, after the rodeo, and Mutton Bustin' champs Hunter Atwood and Madison Baggett, both of Pampa, with their families.

"By looking at the attendance we are right with last year's. The weather has not affected it at all," Kempf said. "You know last night (Thursday) after that first storm people still stayed out. And even during the hail storm we had some people who stayed, we have the best fans in the world."

The Pampa Lady Harvesters were in action on Saturday in Bushland at a scrimmage meet. The Lady Harvesters played three consecutive 35-minute games, with only a 10-minute break between games to allow the incoming opposing team to warm up.

There was no score-keeping as it was an exhibition. While they did show struggles against Dumas and Bushland, much of that can be attributed to the hour and 45 minutes straight the team played.

"The first game against San Jacinto we played really well, kind of dominated," head coach Brooke Sanford said. "Then we hit Dumas. Dumas is a name we kind of cringe on, they have a very fast offense and don't let balls hit the floor, and we weren't totally prepared for that.

"Then we kind of let down and carried that into the next one. We talked about scrimmages are seeing what we need to work on, and things we did well on and we saw that and will go to work Monday."

The team did do a great job serving, and the ladies showed great fight when the ball would be volleyed from side to side. In most exchanges the Lady Harvesters came out on top when the ball was being heavily contested.

Where there was a lot of points scored was up front, as the ball squeaked past the front a few times, which is one of the things Coach Sanford said the team is going to work on.

"Just a matter of don't let the ball hit the floor and perfect some blocking stuff [is what we are working on this week]," Sanford said.

The girls showed tremendous hustle in every match, going after every ball as if it were the game-ending point.

"They are much more confident than they were last year," Sanford said. "They have been working very hard in the offseason. They have been here and done this. So their confidence will take them through."

The Lady Harvesters return to the court tonight in Plainview to take on Lubbock-Cooper and Tulia at 4:30 p.m.

"Well we are playing two matches on Tuesday," Sanford said. "We play one against Lubbock-Cooper which is the team we got beat out in the tournament last year. Then we play Tulia, we got a big game on Tuesday."

heard. Tonight: Nap and then decide.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ A discussion is inevitable. Communication flows if you don't respond to an angry comment. A friend means well; try to absorb the comment in the way it was meant as opposed to how it sounded. Keep communication flowing. Tonight: Don't make it heavy. Keep it light.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Tension builds, especially if you are reactive to a superior or boss. You also find a partner or several close associates reacting in an odd way. Your caring evolves to a new level as a loved one shares his or her support and caring. Have a discussion late in the day. Tonight: Talks and food.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You are in the right mood to handle a personal matter. You see the whole picture, and you are willing to do the gyrations needed to settle others in for a talk. A meeting with an associate or a friend helps you detach from an immediate hassle. Afterward, you successfully approach the transient problem. Tonight: Let go of your day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You might opt to say very little at the present moment. A partner pushes you hard in order to get the results he or she wants. The issue remains, what do you want? A respected authority figure or expert gives you his or her vote of confidence. Tonight: Finally, you choose.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You might want to follow in the direction others seem to be pointing to. On the other hand, you know what feels right. If you are in limbo, there is a limited amount of choices. Know which one suits you. Tonight: Do some serious deliberating.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ You handle responsibilities with decorum and honesty. Recognize what is possible within a certain situation as well as where your power lies. A partner cheers you on but might have a little too much confidence in your abilities. Listen to your inner voice. Tonight: Go for what you want.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Allow more feedback and speak less. Ask questions when you don't understand what is being said. Realize there are many ways and answers. Follow-through does count but doesn't have to happen immediately. Tonight: A must appearance.

daily horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, Aug. 14, 2013:

You often waver between deep reflection and spontaneous action. What encourages one behavior over the other might be an issue this year. You will learn to integrate these two elements or characteristics. Honor tradition but be open to vital changes. If you are single, you will make choices reflective of the state you are in. Later you might find out the suitor you chose is no longer appropriate. Date and relate, but make no commitments this year. If you are attached, your moodiness could toss a partner into confusion. Take the time to explain what you are experiencing. Unexpected developments often mark your year. SAGITTARIUS encourages your playfulness.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Build on a key relationship and/or partnership. A family member or domestic matter comes up and needs to be managed efficiently. You express his or her ability to mobilize energy to resolve a matter with a positive response. Unexpected words enlighten you about someone's motivation. Tonight: Be spontaneous.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Others certainly present quite the options. You might not be sure of yourself vis-a-vis a child or loved one. Through understanding your different options and how to relate to the person in question, you gain new insight. Tonight: Deal directly with a loved one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Opportunities come forward, allowing you to touch base with friends and associates. You normally don't have enough time to chat, yet a situation comes up that allows time to catch up on news. A decision comes forward; this decision will give you more freedom of action. Tonight: Go with a great suggestion.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Permit your creativity to flourish and help integrate a change. Listen to your instincts and follow through on examining what could be a risk financially. Check out all liabilities and options. Listen to feedback from someone you respect. Tonight: Get into a home-related project.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You might want to get past a restriction that easily could be self-imposed. You are eyeing a situation involving real estate or a personal matter. Don't suppress your anger, but avoid a moment of rage. Express yourself in a way that can be

Don’t give up.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have two wonderful sons who joined our family through adoption. While we don't broadcast that they are adopted, it sometimes comes up in conversation. When it does, people inevitably ask, "What happened to their 'real' parents?" or "Why were they given up?"

I know folks are curious, but these comments are hurtful. The details of my sons' lives are private, to be shared as they grow in age-appropriate ways. They know they are adopted, but are too young to know the details surrounding their lives prior to joining our family. I do not want to have an in-depth conversation with every person who asks a nosy question. These questions always seem to come up when the kids are around and I feel unprepared to answer them.

Do you have any suggestions for a witty and confident response that can shut down these questions? I don't want my boys to be ashamed that they were adopted, but I also don't want the details out there for public consumption. — ADOPTED MOM IN INDI

DEAR ADOPTED MOM: That someone would be so insensitive as to pose those questions in front of the children is disconcerting. While I can't think of a "witty" response that would deter the questioner, I can think of one that would be effective. Look the person in the eye, smile and say, "Oh, that's a long story, but look at what beautiful sons I have. I feel truly blessed."

DEAR ABBY: My parents died when I was a teenager. In the years since I have noticed strange things. While I don't find pennies, I do often see streetlights turn off right before I drive under them. I drive a lot at night and in the early morning because I work graveyard shifts, and it seems to happen almost every day when I go to work or come home.

I guess it could be coincidental. But a friend suggested years ago that it's my parents letting me know they're watching over me. I want to believe, yet I feel skeptical at the same time. Have you ever heard of anything like it? — LIGHTS OUT IN FEDERAL WAY, WASH.

DEAR LIGHTS OUT: The only time I have heard of anything like what you're experiencing has been when I happened to change channels and come upon a television show about the paranormal. More important than what I believe is what you choose to believe. If the reassurance that your parents are watching over you brings you comfort, then I am all for it.

DEAR ABBY: This idea may appeal to the parents of young children: Celebrate "half-birthdays." (The concept is derived from the "Half-Birthday Song" in "Alice in Wonderland.")

A year to a young child is a long time. In addition to recognizing the joy that he/she was born, it's a start to learning the structure of our calendar. It doesn't have to involve a big party or gifts, just a special activity day with a parent. Our family has observed half-birthdays for 45 years and have found it to be a worthwhile tradition. — FUN MOM

DEAR FUN MOM: The title of the song you mentioned is actually "The Unbirthday Song," but I'm in favor of anything that will bring parents and children closer. If the household is headed by a single working parent, then I'll bet a grandparent would be delighted for the chance to celebrate that special occasion.
