Kids just don't get headaches

■ Run/walk next Saturday in Amarillo will raise money for Chiari, a rare brain malformation that affects Pampa boy.

BY TIMOTHY P. HOWSARE
 thowsare@thepampanews.com

Kerri Lake knew something had to be wrong when her son, Jared, started getting headaches at the end of second grade.
 "Kids just don't get headaches like that," she said.
 After multiple MRIs, CT scans and misdiagnoses, Jared finally got the correct diagnosis about a year later at BSA Health System in Amarillo.
 Jared, now 14 and a freshman at Pampa High School, has Chiari Malformation, a rare malformation in the cerebellum, a part of the brain.
 Normally the cerebellum and parts of the brain stem sit in an indented space at the lower rear of the skull, above the foramen magnum (a funnel-like opening to the spinal canal). When part of the cerebellum is located below the foramen magnum, it is called a Chiari Malformation.
 CM has several different causes. It can be caused by structural defects in the brain and spinal cord that occur during fetal development, whether caused by genetic mutations or

Pampa Health Fair to have flu vaccination booth

BY LINDSEY TOMASCHIK
 LKTomaschik@thepampanews.com
 United Supermarkets Pharmacy is one of the main vendors expected to be present at the Pampa Health Fair sponsored by Accolade Homecare and Hospice Health in October. Pharmacist Beth Bagwell and her team of registered pharmacists will be giving flu and pneumonia vaccines at the event from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. on Oct. 2.
 Everyone is welcome to attend the fair free of charge, which will be at the

Beth Bagwell

M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium.
 Vaccines will include flu shots, flu mist, flu shot/fluzone HD and a pneumonia vaccine. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommend getting vaccinated as early as possible as the flu tends to spread between the months of October and May. Bagwell said that in this area it is worst in the months of December, January and February, beginning around Christmas break.

 The flu shot being used at the health fair will be Fluvirin, which is a tivalent vaccine that is inactive, meaning it does not contain the virus. The flu shot is priced at $20 and is for anyone ages two and up.
 The flu mist is a live nasal vaccine in which the viruses have been weakened so that they cannot make the recipient sick. Flumist is priced at $25 and is for

Louis William Haydon

Louis William Haydon, age 86, was born at Galena Park, Texas to Robert L. Haydon and Ada H. Haydon. He passed away Wednesday, Sept. 11, 2013 in Amarillo. He was baptized at the age of twelve at First Baptist Church, Galena Park, Texas, and was a member of the Baptist churches of Arnett and Shattuck, Okla. He was also a member of Masonic lodges of Arnett, Shattuck and Pampa.

He graduated from Galena Park High School in June of 1943. At the age of 12, he became the Houston Chronicle's paper boy for the area now known as Jacinto City. As a paper boy, he won numerous awards, one of these for selling U.S. Savings Stamps to finance World War II. After graduating High School at the age of sixteen, he was too young to go into the services, so he went to work as a machinist's helper at Todd Houston Shipyards, building Liberty ships. He dreamed of being a pilot in the Air Corps, and took flying lessons. At the age of 17 he joined the U.S. Air Corps, and was placed in the Army Specialized Training Reserve Program at Texas Tech University. Later, the unit was moved to New Mexico A&M, Los Cruces. From there, he was placed on active duty at several posts, the last of which was Germany. On Sept. 24, 1945, he married Edna L. Watson. After being discharged, he returned to Houston for several months, prior to enrolling in Carver Chiropractic College, Oklahoma City. He obtained chiropractic licenses for Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas. Although his plans were to return to Houston, he opened his first office in Arnett, Okla. after a conference with community leaders. He promoted the building of a new school and several other projects. He conducted a Dale Carnegie course in Shattuck, which brought together the community leaders of the area.

Louis was a leader and community builder in the thirty years he was in Ellis County. He served as president of the Arnett and Shattuck Kiwanis clubs and several years as president of the Shattuck Chamber of Commerce, promoting projects such as the first residential paving district, improvements to water and sewer, and securing Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company to bring their Economic Development Education Program to Shattuck to train the Industrial Group of which he was a member. He worked in the building of the Shattuck Golf Course, brought the American Flag Program to Shattuck to display the flag on Main Street every holiday.

He was a leader in his profession of Chiropractic, was instrumental in creating the National Board of Chiropractic Examiners, and served on the Oklahoma Board of Chiropractic Examiners for nine years under Governors Bellmon and Bartlett.

He moved to Texas in 1980 and built the Haydon Chiropractic Clinic at Pampa. There, he was a member of the Downtown Kiwanis Club, Chamber of Commerce, and a member of Masonic Lodge #966. He was a member of Hidden Hills Golf Club, the American Legion, VFW, Oklahoma Chiropractic Association, Texas Chiropractic Association, and the American Chiropractic Association. In 1999, Dr. Mark W. Ford joined the practice, and Dr. Haydon retired Dec. 31, 1991.

Private family services will be held at a later date.

He is survived by his wife, Edna L. of the home, a daughter, Ann Isaacs of Canadian, a son, James of New Hampshire, grandchildren Trey and Leah Isaacs of Canadian, and Jeffrey M. Haydon of Kansas City, Mo.

DPS busts more than 2.7M in drugs

SUBMITTED BY DPS

AMARILLO — The Texas Department of Public Safety conducted a traffic stop Thursday on Interstate 40, yielding more than 45 pounds of methamphetamine valued at more than $1.6 million. Also seized during the traffic stop was over 37 pounds of cocaine valued at over 1.1 million dollars.

At approximately 8:19 p.m., a DPS trooper conducted a traffic stop on a 2013 Volkswagen traveling eastbound on IH-40, for a traffic violation, near Conway in Carson County.

The occupants of the Volkswagen were identified as Estela Maldonado Montijo, 57, and Miguel A Montijo-Martinez, 49, both of Livingston, Calif. During the traffic stop, the trooper discovered 11 bundles of methamphetamine and 17 bundles of cocaine in the trunk.

Both of the occupants were placed under arrest for possession of a controlled substance, a first-degree felony, and booked into the Carson County Jail. The illegal drugs were allegedly being transported from Livingston, Calif. to Atlanta.

3rd-generation farmer to run for ag commissioner

SUBMITTED

UVALDE — J Allen Carnes, who worked his way up to running his family's produce business before stepping into public service, announced his entry in the Republican primary for Texas Agriculture Commissioner. Carnes is the mayor of Uvalde.

Carnes said is the only candidate for Texas Agriculture Commissioner who is a farmer, a producer and mayor of a growing municipality who understands what must be done in rural, urban and suburban Texas to keep our state sustainable, to avoid Texas' dependence on foreign lands for our food, clothing and shelter.

J Allen Carnes

"We have a farm crisis in Texas today. Our population is booming, the demand for food production is exploding, our water resources are dwindling and fewer people are choosing farming and ranching as a profession," says Carnes. "I will work to protect agriculture, encourage a new generation of farmers and ranchers, promote healthy living, and conserve our natural resources," he adds.

In 2004, Carnes became active in policymaking, working alongside current Texas Commissioner of Agriculture Todd Staples on issues critical to the state's agriculture industry.

He has served as president of the Texas Vegetable Association and was board member and director of the Texas Produce Association.

lack of proper vitamins or nutrients in the maternal diet. This is called primary or congenital CM. It can also be caused later in life if spinal fluid is drained excessively from the lumbar or thoracic areas of the spine either due to injury, exposure to harmful substances, or infection. This is called acquired or secondary CM. Primary CM is much more common than secondary CM.

Now that Lake finally knew what was causing Jared's headaches, she thought the he'd be on his way to getting better.

"Finally we have a diagnosis so now we are going to get well, I thought," she said. "But doctors don't know a lot about it. The surgeon from Amarillo came in said, 'Your child has Chiari and I won't touch him.'"

They went to doctors in Dallas and Lubbock, but didn't have much luck.

The real help for Jared didn't come until they went to the Chiari Institute in Great Neck, N.Y.

"Once Jared was seen there we found out more in 15 minutes by with meeting with a neurosurgeon than we found out in the year before that," she said. "We knew Jared needed surgery. We found out the opening for his spinal cord was 80 percent blocked."

In August 2009, Jared had a surgery called posteria fasa decompression at the Chiari Institute. Lake said they flew home from New York eight days after Jared's surgery.

Lake said there is no cure for Chiari, but surgery can relieve the symptoms.

"He had the surgery right before fifth grade," Lake said. "There were lots of prayers and we had a wonderful, expert surgeon. The people in Pampa supported us with fundraising."

Lake said her son is doing wonderful now, but still gets headaches from air pressure changes.

He has the same restrictions now as before his surgery, including no contact sports.

However, Jared loves to play basketball and is hoping to play this year for the freshmen team.

On Saturday, Sept. 21, the first-ever run/walk in Amarillo will be held to raise money for Chiari awareness and research. All proceeds will fund research through Conquer Chiari.

In 2012, the Conquer Chiari Walk Across America raised more than $535,000 with 80 percent of the money going directly to fund research.

The Conquer Chiari Walk Across America is a series of coordinated awareness/fundraising walks being held across the country on the same day.

Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. The 5K run starts at 9 and the walk begins at 10.

The run/walk is being held at Thompson Park (Site 17), 2401 Dumas Drive in Amarillo.

A minimum donation of $25 is suggested. Participants can pre-register online at www.conquerchiari.org. For more information, contact Katie Klaehn at 806-236-4394 or katieklaehncwaa@yahoo.com.

anyone aged 2-49. The flu shot/fluzone HD is also offered for anyone ages 65 and up, and it is free of charge for Medicare recipients.

Recipients must present their Medicare card and prescription drug card. The pneumonia vaccinations are also provided and recommended for those over the age of 65. This shot is free of charge for Medicare recipients as long as it has been over five years since the last shot. Without any insurance or Medicare, the pneumonia vaccine is $88 and it lasts for five years.

United will be accepting all insurance to cover the costs of the shots, but will not be accepting Medicaid as the cost is prescription-based and Medicaid covers through medical.

Those under the age of seven must have a prescription in order to be vaccinated.

Flu season is unpredictable, so it is best to get vaccinated as soon as possible. Bagwell said the two factors that influence the pace of the spread of the virus are the weather and amount of traveling people in the area are doing around the time of year that the flu is most prevalent.

Those who should not get vaccinated include those who have life-threatening allergies, anyone who has ever had Guillain-Barre Syndrome or anyone who has received any other vaccines in the past four weeks or is not currently feeling well.

For more information on these and other vaccines, visit the CDC's website at www.cdc.gov/vaccines.

Bouncin' Around Remembering a tragic day as an American

We just passed the 12th anniversary of the tragic events that occurred on Sept. 11, 2001. Just like the television on in the living room while we ate breakfast.

The breaking news drew us in, and breakfast and birthday were both forgotten. We were living in Connersville, Indiana at the time, and I was working part time as secretary at our church. As I drove the short distance to work, it seemed like the streets were nearly deserted. The pastor decided that we should open the doors to the sanctuary so that anyone who wanted to could come in and pray.

I know I spent some time there in a pew, just wondering if this was real. When I came home that afternoon, that same eerie silence reigned. It reminded me of that awful November day in 1963 when I was a college student. After the news was broadcast that Kennedy had died, the entire college was hushed, even the normally-busy canteen. As I walked down the hall toward my class, I could hear only muted conversations and the occasional sob. I was only 17 at the time, and it felt like the world had collapsed. I was considerably older in 2001, but those same feelings returned. Ron and I walked out into our backyard, and the neighbor behind us walked over to her fence. None of us spoke. A military jet streaked overhead, and the neighbor said, "Is it ours or theirs?" The next night, a community service was held in the middle school auditorium. The auditorium was filled nearly to capacity. Everyone stood to sing the patriotic songs, and it seemed that we were standing unified in the desire to protect our country. Churches were filled for many months after that, and America's heroes, those who died and those who rescued others, were honored. People sang the National Anthem with enthusiasm. Since then we have lost some of that enthusiasm.

The last few baseball games we have watched on television began, as usual, with the singing of the National Anthem. As the camera panned around, I saw people chatting, laughing, drinking beer, and generally unaware of the words being sung and played. I wonder how many of our school children or young people even know the words. There have been discussions for many years between people who love "The Star Spangled Banner" and those who think it should be replaced by "God Bless America" or "America the Beautiful." Would it really make a difference? Would more people sing?

We've watched sporting events from other countries, and the audience usually sings their country's anthem with great enthusiasm. It seems that it takes a national disaster such as September 11 to bring people together and start a flurry of patriotism. Pride in our country has waned, but that pride has its roots in a more local pride. We need to take pride in how our homes and yards look; we need to take pride in our communities and not allow them to decay. Maybe then we can stand together and show that we are still proud to be Americans.

Rare moral courage

In life, you don't get to choose your relatives, but you do get to choose your friends. I consider it to be one of the great, unearned blessings of my life that Jack Gilligan chose me to be his friend. We were both Irish-Catholic males of the 20th century, and anyone familiar with our peculiar sub-group knows we were never comfortable speaking about emotions or feelings — especially not to each other.

I never told Jack Gilligan I loved him. But I'm confident he knew that I did, because when it came to people or politics or policy, Jack knew almost everything.

When he died last month, the obituaries recorded that he, a Democrat, had been a Cincinnati city councilman, a U.S. congressman and the governor who somehow was able in 1971 to persuade a Republican state legislature to enact Ohio's first personal and corporate income tax, all of which is accurate.

But to understand what was true about Jack Gilligan, we have to remember Mark Twain, who found it curious that physical courage was so much more common than moral courage, which Twain found quite rare. On the first week of April 1945, Navy lieutenant Jack Gilligan, having already seen combat as a gunnery officer, was on the deck of his destroyer during the invasion of Okinawa when the first of three Japanese kamikaze planes flew directly into his ship. Scores of U.S. sailors were killed, wounded or missing.

The ship's guns, radar and communications were all knocked out by the suicide plane, the crash of which started a fire that threatened the destroyer's own store of ammunition.

Acting immediately and at great personal risk, Gilligan managed personally to get all the stored ammunition safely away from the encroaching flames and secured the safety of shipmates and his destroyer.

For his bravery, Jack Gilligan was awarded the Silver Star. He more than passed the physical courage test.

By 1968, Gilligan was 47 and the surprise U.S. Senate nominee in Ohio after his upset Democratic victory over the previously invincible Frank Lausche who had won five terms as governor and two terms in the Senate. Gilligan was a strong opponent and vocal critic of the U.S. war in Vietnam, while most of the leaders of organized labor, which had backed Gilligan in the primary, were enthusiastic supporters of President Lyndon Johnson's war policy.

Inviting the fury of the AFL-CIO hierarchy and the censure of the White House, Jack Gilligan organized, wrote and championed the peace plank, calling for a negotiated end to the Vietnam War at the tumultuous 1968 Chicago Democratic convention.

Why? Because he believed the war was wrong and immoral and that the convention's adoption of the peace plank could constitute a declaration of independence for the party's nominee, Vice President Hubert Humphrey, from the war and from LBJ. Humphrey could then almost certainly have won the White House and spared the nation the Nixon-Agnew years.

For fighting the Democratic war policy, Jack Gilligan was punished. Major labor leaders cut off campaign funds. Badly outspent, he lost a close Senate race in November.

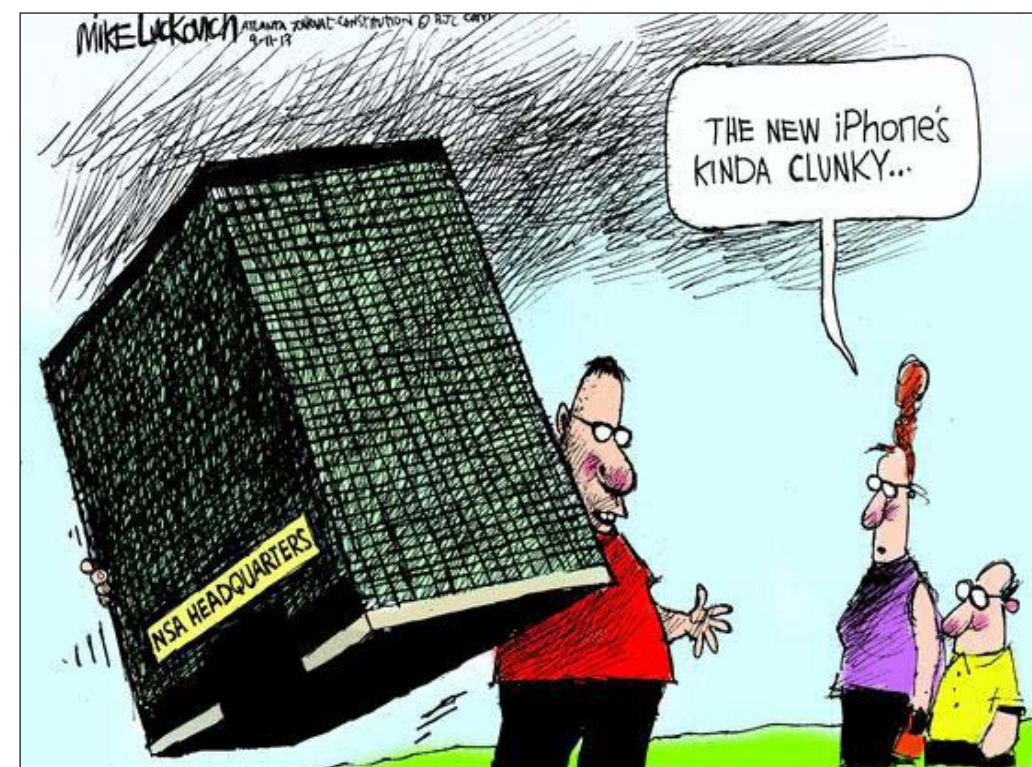

Let me assure you from painful personal experience, losing campaigns do not build character. But losing campaigns can reveal character. What Jack Gilligan showed in risking almost certain defeat on principle was indeed character — and moral courage.

As governor, he made the improving of the care and treatment of the ignored and the overlooked, the patients in Ohio's discredited state mental hospitals, his cause. And he succeeded. But as you can understand, there is no political pay-off in such an effort.

State mental hospital clients do not buy tickets, let alone tables, to campaign fund-raising dinners.

They mostly do not have a car on which to put your bumper sticker or a lawn on which to plant your yard sign. To make this your cause is an act of moral courage and one more reason why I loved Jack Gilligan.

Reaping the blessings of freedom

As a young lawyer, Wallace B. Jefferson appeared before the U.S.

LISA TATUM

Supreme Court to argue a case. That evening, he visited the Lincoln Memorial to reflect on the enduring strength of the Constitution. "Here I was, the descendant of a slave who was owned by a Texas judge, arguing before the nation's highest court," recalls Jefferson, now chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court.

Jefferson tells that story in an introduction to Oyez, Oyez, Oh Yay!, an interactive civics education project produced by the State Bar of Texas. His story remains relevant now as we observe Celebrate Freedom Week.

Years ago, the Texas Legislature passed a bill establishing a dedicated week for Texas public schools to focus on the intent, meaning, and importance of the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution, including the Bill of Rights, in their historical contexts. Local school districts generally observe Celebrate Freedom Week during the week in which Sept. 17, Constitution Day, falls.

Why? It's simple. As Thomas Paine once said, those who hope to reap the blessings of freedom must "undergo the fatigue of supporting it."

Our country's founders understood this truth well, and they established a system of government that is legitimate only through the consent of free people.

And consent implies that the people will be informed of their rights and responsibilities as citizens of this country.

Freedom in this context is important to me and has been for as long as I can remember. One reason I became an attorney is because I realized that getting involved with the law was the best way to effect change, and the Constitution is the bedrock upon which all of our laws rest.

So the question becomes: What can we do to make sure each generation understands our founding documents and the freedoms they protect?

How can we help them become informed and engaged citizens as they prepare to vote, serve on juries, and run for elected office?

The State Bar of Texas

offers resources designed to help achieve these goals. As president of the bar and the daughter of educators, I'm proud to introduce I was the First. Vote for Me!, a new multimedia program that will teach elementary school students the important "firsts" in U.S. and Texas history that are included as part of the Texas Essential Knowledge and Skills (TEKS) standards.

The program features animated historical figures such as Susan B. Anthony, Benjamin Franklin, and Thurgood Marshall in animated segments online and in book form, along with supplemental materials for teacher and students.

The program, which is available in both English and Spanish, allows for lessons in civics education, citizenship, reading, history, voting, and math. You can explore the program at texasbar.com/iwasthefirst.

I was the First. Vote for Me! is just one offering from the State Bar's Law Related Education Department, which provides resources to help teachers engage students in entertaining and thought-provoking ways and prepare them for the TEKS standards. Another is Oyez, Oyez, Oh Yay!, which focuses on landmark court decisions that Texas students must know to prepare for assessments in U.S. government and history. Students and teachers can search case summaries, watch short films, and find other helpful resources at texasbar.com/civics.

In the past year, the LRE department has trained more than 7,000 teachers, and it continues to look for new ways to fulfill its mission of supporting law-related education programs that prepare students for responsible citizenship. Learn about these programs and more at TexasLRE.org.

Students' success in society is the blessing we hope to reap from these educational efforts. This year, during Celebrate Freedom Week, take time to sow the educational seeds of our founding documents and the importance of being an informed citizen in our young people. The harvest will be an informed and engaged citizenry.

Lisa M. Tatum is president of the State Bar of Texas and the founder and owner of LM Tatum, PLLC (The Tatum Law Practice) in San Antonio with a practice that focuses on corporate, education, employment and public finance law. # Colo. flooding leads to more evacuations

LYONS, Colo. (AP) — With rain still falling and the flood threat still real, authorities called on thousands more people in the inundated city of Boulder and nearby towns to evacuate as rivers and creeks rose to dangerous levels.

The late-night reports from Boulder and the village of Eldorado Springs came as rescuers struggled to reach dozens of people cut off by flooding in Colorado mountain communities. Residents in the Denver area and other downstream communities were warned to stay off flooded streets.

The towns of Lyons, Jamestown and others in the Rocky Mountain foothills have been isolated by flooding and without power or telephone since rain hanging over the region all week intensified late Wednesday and early Thursday.

At least three people were killed and another was missing, and numerous people were forced to seek shelter up and down Colorado's populated Front Range.

Boulder County spokesman James Burrus said 17 people were unaccounted for Friday, and officials planned to publicly release the names later.

"Unaccounted for doesn't mean missing. It means we haven't heard back from them," he said.

Two backpackers who were hiking the 14,259-foot Longs Peak became stranded when the weather turned, the mother of one of the backpackers said Friday.

Suzanne Turell and Connie Yang of York, Maine, last sent a text message at 9 a.m. Thursday with their GPS coordinates, but their cellphones have since gone dead, said Barbara Turell of Federick, Md.

"They have a tent but do not have cold-weather gear, she said

"Those kids have been up there for two days now. They're not prepared for the cold weather," she said. "We're very concerned we may be in a long line of people needing assistance."

Late Thursday, warning sirens blared in Boulder and city officials sent notice to about 4,000 people living along Boulder Creek around the mouth of Boulder Canyon to head for higher ground, according to Boulder's Daily Camera newspaper.

The alert was prompted by rapidly rising creek levels caused by water backing up at the mouth of the canyon because of debris and mud coming off the mountainsides, the city Office of Emergency Management said.

The creek began to recede after midnight, but the conditions remained dangerous and a surprising amount of water was still flowing into the city's streets, Police Chief Mark Beckner told the Daily Camera after touring the damage.

The entire hamlet of Eldorado Springs, about 500 people, was urged to evacuate because of a flash flood and mudslide threat along South Boulder Creek, Burrus said.

Northwest of Boulder, the overflowing Vrain Creek cut the town of Longmont in half. Evacuation requests were issued for some neighborhoods, all major roads were closed, and several thousand homes and businesses were without power, he said.

Interstate 25 east of Loveland was closed in both directions Friday, state transportation officials said.

In Fort Collins, neighborhoods along the Cache La Poudre River were evacuated overnight, with the river expected to rise to nearly 2 feet above flood stage Friday morning, according to the National Weather Service.

City officials in Fort Collins closed bridges after water began topping Seaman Reservoir in the Poudre Canyon, The Denver Post reported. The city warned residents to stay clear of the river.

South of the historic Red Rocks Amphitheater, Jefferson County deputy sheriffs went door-to-door in Morrison and Kittridge, asking hundreds of residents to leave their homes as Bear Creek neared flood stage. The amphitheater was in no immediate danger.

In Lyons, residents took shelter on higher ground, including some at an elementary school. Although everyone was believed to be safe, the deluge was expected to continue into Friday.

"There's no way out of town. There's no way into town. So, basically, now we're just on an island," said Jason Stillman, 37, who was forced with his fiancée to evacuate their home in Lyons after a nearby river began to overflow into the street.

The Colorado National Guard began trucking people out of Lyons on Thursday evening.

To the north, residents along the Big Thompson Canyon in Larimer County, scene of the deadliest flash flood in state history, were also evacuated. The Big Thompson River flooded in 1976 after about a foot of rain fell in just four hours, killing 144 people.

Early Friday, the National Weather Service warned of more flash flooding in Loveland, according to the Post. NOAA reported that the Big Thompson River at Drake was more than 4 feet above its flood stage of 6 feet.

President Barack Obama signed an emergency declaration Thursday night, freeing federal aid and allowing the Federal Emergency Management Agency to coordinate disaster relief efforts.

Some of the flooding was exacerbated by wild-fire "burn scars" that have spawned flash floods all summer in the mountains. That was particularly true in an area scarred by fire in 2010 near the tiny community of Jamestown and another near Colorado Springs' Waldo Canyon that was hit in 2012.

The University of Colorado canceled classes at least through Friday after a quarter of its buildings were flooded. Students in family housing near Boulder Creek were also forced to leave.

One person was killed when a structure collapsed in the tiny town of Jamestown northwest of Boulder. Another man drowned in floodwaters north of Boulder early Thursday, and a woman who was with him was missing.

The woman was swept away after the vehicle she was riding in got stuck in water. The man died after getting out of the vehicle to help her, Commander Heidi Prentup of the Boulder Sheriff's Office said.

To the south, Colorado Springs police conducting flood patrols found the body of 54-year-old Danny Davis in Fountain Creek on the west side of the city.

At least one earthen dam gave way southeast of Estes Park, the gateway to Rocky Mountain National Park. Water levels could rise downstream as authorities release more water to ease pressure on dams. With debris piling up near bridges, downstream farming areas including Fort Lupton, Dacono and Plateville were also at risk.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Sept. 16, 2013:
This year your traditional choices no longer have the same appeal. An interest in healing encourages you to move in the direction of a New Age lifestyle -- perhaps you'll even decide to become a vegan. You might opt to add some zest to your work life, too. If you are single, you easily connect with members of the opposite sex, but they might have difficulty dealing with your vibrant personality. Be patient. If you are attached, note when you become irritated with your sweetie. You could see a pattern develop. AQUARIUS knows how to challenge you and make you smile.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You easily could be unnerved or irritated today. Funnel these feelings into a positive outlet. Getting some exercise will help, as will carrying a project or two to completion. A child or loved might be provocative. Know that this behavior is only temporary. Tonight: Lie low.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ You could become very stubborn when faced with unusual insights or behavior. Holding on to the status quo will not work. Face facts, and integrate them into your thinking. Others will admire the clarity that you are able to offer as a result. Tonight: Choose a stressbuster.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ When the unexpected occurs, detach rather than react. You could witness odd behavior from friends, loved ones or co-workers. You initially might be taken aback or concerned, but realize that what is happening will have a very good outcome. Tonight: Reach out to a friend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You could be worried about your finances, yet you still might overindulge since you don't want to deal with the obvious. Stop, take a deep breath and reverse course. You might have to disappoint someone, so let him or her down gently. Tonight: Time to design a new budget.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You might feel challenged by certain events, conversations or new information. You don't need to feel that way -- you have the capacity to integrate your knowledge of what goes on behind the scenes. Laughter surrounds you. Tonight: Refuse to get involved in a hassle.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ Throw yourself into your work or whatever your plans might be. Be flexible if a partner or associate starts adding an element of chaos, as this person makes your life more exciting. Do not push him or her away; instead, try to enjoy these moments. Tonight: Unwind. Let go of stress.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You could feel as if you are being pushed by an assertive friend. This person wants you to follow him or her on a certain path. You might not like his or her reaction after you indicate that you will make your own choices. This, too, will pass. Tonight: You need to have more fun.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ It will feel as if everyone has a different agenda from yours. Know that they might want you to follow theirs. Keeping the peace could be difficult, as people will react to the unexpected in strange ways. Take a walk in order to ease your stress. Tonight: Soak in a warm bubble bath.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You might want to move quickly with a great idea. There will be a reaction either way, so proceed as you'd like to. Your creativity will surge and enable you to adjust with ease to a changeable yet dynamic situation. Tonight: Show some concern for a friend or loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ A domestic or real-estate matter will consume your attention. You also might discover something unexpected. Don't allow your focus to wander far from your objectives in the future. Know that you might need to have someone play devil's advocate. Tonight: Pay your bills.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ You might be consumed by a sudden change of direction. The unexpected keeps forcing you to make adjustments. Know that what is happening is for the better. Others could be experiencing a similar situation, but not going with the flow. Tonight: Listen to an irate friend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ You might want to stay home or play it low-key. Make that OK. Be very decisive in how you handle your finances. Count your change and make sure your accounts are balanced. If you feel lucky, buy a lotto ticket. Tonight: Dive headfirst into a long-overdue household project.

sunday horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Sept. 15, 2013:

This year you will want to focus on your daily life, your work and your health. If one of these areas isn't working for you, make the necessary adjustments. Change schedules, try out a new exercise program or even go back to school. It is your life, and you don't need to be unhappy. If you are single, you'll meet someone when you least expect it. Perhaps it will happen in a brief conversation or even while you're getting a parking ticket. If you are attached, the two of you might want to develop a common interest into a hobby. AQUARIUS can be challenging because he or she is very independent.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ Tension might surround a friendship or a professional relationship. A partner will be very clear about his or her expectations. An older friend also might have an agenda. You could feel pulled in many different directions. Follow your instincts. Tonight: Only what you want.

This Week: Follow-through counts, especially right now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★ You might find yourself caught in a jam because of an ultimatum or because of insufficient understanding. You can justify your stance, but know that it will cause only more separation where you do not want to experience it. Be smart. Tonight: Walk in someone else's shoes.

This Week: You like having it your way. Focus on achievement and effectiveness.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ A need for a more expansive experience marks the day. Hop in your car and go for a drive. Visit a favorite flea market or art gallery. You might be physically exhausted by the end of the day, but you will be mentally re-energized. Tonight: Be entertained.

This Week: Look at a situation through new eyes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★ A close friend or roommate might reach out to you today. You will want to participate in his or her plans. As a result, you'll come to a mutual understanding with greater give-and-take. A relative might continue to shake up the status quo. Tonight: Follow through on plans.

This week: Cover your bases before taking a strong action.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★ Clear up a hassle revolving around your domestic or personal life. Someone seems to be holding on tight to a grievance. This person might need to be persuaded to discuss his or her feelings. Tonight: Just don't be alone.

This Week: Others want control, so give as much of it to them as you can.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★ No wonder you want to stay close to home. It is normal to be tired and withdrawn. You have been pushing yourself very hard, and while you have enjoyed the activity, it's time to slow down a little and relax. Everyone needs some downtime. Tonight: Think "tomorrow."

This Week: Get as much done as possible Monday.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ Listen to a loved one, roommate or new friend. Act on a romantic impulse, and you might like what comes up for you as a result. Be realistic about your finances, and determine how far you realistically can stretch your budget. Know when to say "no." Tonight: Ever playful.

This Week: Romance entwines with work. Is this really what you want?

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★ Stay anchored but not negative. You might want to have a discussion with a trusted family member who obviously cares. You could feel a little too vulnerable for your liking, but perhaps it is necessary to live with the discomfort for now. Tonight: Order a pizza.

This Week: Your creative juices flow, and they could bring stunning results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ You'll enjoy visiting with a friend today. You have had many great times together in the past, and now you'll be enjoying even more. You could be redefining your limits, and others might sense this change. Know that this is only temporary. Tonight: Till the wee hours.

This Week: Say what you are thinking, but be aware of the ramifications.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★ How you deal with your finances could change radically after having a discussion with someone who knows a lot about money and budgets. You honestly might be surprised at an option that you did not know existed. Tonight: Balance your checkbook and pay your bills.

This Week: Continue

being frugal with your time and energy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ You will witness the gamut of unusual behavior among others today. Maintain a sense of humor and stay centered. Don't allow someone to throw you off your game. Keep a tight hand on your wallet and on your spending. Tonight: Swap news and jokes with a friend.

This Week: Clearly, you are on a roll. Enjoy your self.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★ Kick back and let yourself fall into some daydreaming. If you feel like escaping for the day, there is no time like the present. Someone at a distance might be too stern when dealing with you. Do not take this individual's comments personally. Tonight: Keep it low-key.

This Week: You are a force to be dealt with.

Would you board flight 666 to HEL?

HELSINKI (AP) — Would you board flight 666 to HEL on Friday the 13th?

For superstitious travelers, that might be tempting fate. But Finnair passengers on AY666 to Helsinki — which has the 3 letter designation HEL — don't seem too bothered. Friday's flight is almost full.

"It has been quite a joke among the pilots" said veteran Finnair pilot Juha-Pekka Keidasto, who will fly the Airbus A320 from Copenhagen to Helsinki. "I'm not a superstitious man. It's only a coincidence for me."

The daily flight AY666 from Copenhagen to Helsinki falls on Friday the 13th twice in 2013. Friday the 13th is considered bad luck in many countries and the number 666 also has strong negative biblical associations.

Some airlines, like Scandinavian Airlines, take these fears seriously and don't have a row 13 on board. However, the negative connotations are a relatively new phenomenon for northern Europeans, and Finnair and other regional carriers like Norwegian and Estonian Air keep row 13.

"Less than 100 years ago, the number 13 did not have this sinister meaning; it's quite recent in the north," said Ulo Valk, professor of comparative folklore at the University of Tartu in Estonia.

"There are 12 hours, 12 months and in Christianity 12 apostles and this is a divine number. Add one more and it brings in a certain element of chaos," he said.

But passengers on flight 666 to HEL should have a calm flight over the Baltic at this time of year.

"It's hopefully smooth skies" says Keidasto. "And if there's some passenger who is anxious about this 666 our cabin crew is always happy to help them."

Mop-up underway at NJ boardwalk fire

SEASIDE PARK, N.J. (AP) — Firefighters poured thousands of gallons of water Friday on the smoldering remnants of a massive fire that destroyed part of an iconic Jersey shore boardwalk as officials began counting the cost of once again rebuilding a walkway that had been wrecked less than a year ago by Superstorm Sandy.

About a quarter of the 400 firefighters who battled the six-alarm blaze Thursday remained on the scene Friday morning, and heavy equipment was poised to move in and start poking through the rubble once firefighters extinguished the last burning pockets.

Authorities said Friday the fire that raged for eight hours had destroyed about five blocks of boardwalk in Seaside Park and Seaside Heights; they had estimated Thursday night that eight blocks had burned.

"There's not much left" in the affected areas, said Brian Gabriel, Ocean County's fire coordinator. "It looks like a couple of bombs went off. It's pretty much complete devastation."

Authorities began making tentative plans to rebuild the boardwalk, most of which had just been redone in time for Memorial Day weekend, the unofficial start of summer. Boardwalk merchants were numb as they pondered the second major disaster to befall them in 11 months.

"We just reopened June 1, went through the whole summer trying to stay open, and now this happens," said Daniel Shauger, manager of Funtown Arcade, which was one of 32 Seaside Park boardwalk businesses damaged in the fire.

"We're wiped out again. It's just unimaginable."

He said business was down by two-thirds this summer because of the fallout from Sandy, which filled his arcade with water and sand and ruined inventory, game machines and computers.

"It was just enough to survive," Shauger said. "We were really looking forward to next year. And we're still looking forward to next year."

Seaside Park officials began plans Friday morning to rebuild their part of the boardwalk, at the southern end where the fire began Thursday afternoon near a frozen custard stand. Bob Martucci, the borough administrator, said it will cost $600,000 to rebuild the borough-owned boardwalk; individual businesses are privately owned and would not be included in that cost, he said.

Arson investigators began looking into the cause of the fire Thursday night and continued Friday morning, which is routine with a fire of this size. Al Della Fave, a spokesman for the Ocean County Prosecutor's Office, said there was no indication Friday that the fire appeared suspicious, though a cause had not been determined.

It could have been much worse. On Thursday, as the fire pushed northward despite the frantic efforts of firefighters to contain it, Seaside Heights officials tried a Hail Mary: They ripped out a 25-foot swath of the boardwalk they had just finished rebuilding five months earlier. And they filled the void with giant sand piles — make-shift dunes designed to halt the spreads of flames and save the northern portion of the boardwalk upon which the community relied for its financial survival.

It worked. In much the same way as forest fire crews rip out vegetation to deprive an advancing fire of fuel, the boardwalk gambit succeeded in halting the fire's extension any farther into Seaside Heights.

"That appears to have done the trick," Seaside Park Mayor Robert Matthies said.

Seaside Park Councilwoman Nancy Koury said the fire caused several million dollars' worth of damage.

Hawaii can't fit woman's last name on license

HONOLULU (AP) — A Hawaii woman's last name is a real mouthful, containing 36 letters and 19 syllables in all. And it's so long that she couldn't get a driver's license with her correct name.

Janice "Lokelani" Keihanaikukauakahihuliheekahaunaele is in the midst of a fight with state and local officials to ensure that her full name gets listed on a license or ID card. The documents only have room for 35 characters, so Hawaii County instead issued her driver's license and her state ID with the last letter of her name chopped off. And it omitted her first name.

The 54-year-old Big Island resident wrote her mayor and city councilwoman for help, but the county said the state of Hawaii computer system they used wouldn't allow names longer than 35 characters.

Keihanaikukauakahihuliheekahaunaele got the name when she married her Hawaiian husband in 1992.

Lightning causes late start for Harvesters-Demons

■ Harvesters fall in penalty-filled game 52-21.

By JOHN LEE

jlee@thepampanews.com

After a thunderstorm rolled through Pampa dropping some much-needed, and to some much-appreciated, rain, the Pampa Harvesters finally got to host the Dumas Demons. It was a contest to be expected after a heavy downpour, lots of slippery footballs and running plays.

Dumas got the ball to start the game out, and on the third passing play of the game, a defensive lineman tipped the ball and it was intercepted by senior defensive back Tim Smith, he took it 30 yards for a touchdown. After a couple of three-and-outs, the Dumas Demons drove down the field and scored a touchdown. Tying the game at 7-7.

The following Pampa drive, senior running back Adrian Elam ran the ball for a 10-yard gash, setting the Harvesters up at about midfield. Following the scamper, junior quarterback Ty Hooper threw the ball on a screen pass to his reliable running back, Elam, and Elam took it for another 15 or so yards. It was junior Brycen McClendon's turn, as he ran it up the middle for gains for four yards on multiple plays.

After catching a pass from Hooper, junior wide receiver Zach Gates was on his way to the end zone until a Dumas defender took him down on a rough horse-collar tackle. This gave the Harvesters a fresh set of downs and a very short distance to a touchdown.

On third down, Hooper found his man, McClendon, for a touchdown over the middle, for McClendon's second touchdown in two weeks. This time a pass-catching touchdown. The score gave Pampa the 14-7 lead and took 4:17 off the clock.

After a stout defense held the Dumas Demons to a field goal, making the score 14-10, Pampa received the ball again.

But the Dumas defense stopped the Harvesters at midfield, and the Demons took possession back.

The Pampa defense proved rough once again for the Demons, but a questionable roughing-the-passer call gave the Demons half the distance and a fresh set of downs to work with. Senior Bilbrey Benton, who is making the switch from wide receiver, kept the ball on a 15-yard touchdown run. Giving the Demons the lead at 17-14.

It was time for Ty Hooper and the Harvester offense to give their two-minute drill a shot.

Right from the get-go, senior defensive back Daymon Flores ran the ball out to almost mid field on the kick return. Runs by McClendon and Elam gave the Harvesters a first down and opened up the play-action for the Harvesters.

This allowed the Hooper to hook-up with Gates on a 10-yard pass to give the Harvesters a fresh set of downs. Hooper then found Elam for a 25-yard pass down the near sideline, setting up the first and goal.

After being stopped by the Demons for three downs, Hooper finally found gates at the front-near corner of the end zone, who got one foot down, which is enough in high school for a touchdown. Giving the Harvesters the lead at halftime 21-17.

After trading scoreless series in the third quarter, it was Dumas who would visit the opposing end zone first, off of a pass from Benton to sophomore Cortez Austin.

After punting from within their own end-zone, it seemed bad for the Harvesters that the Demons would get a short field to work with. But several penalties and defensive plays forced the Demons into a fourth and 42, forcing them to punt and give the Harvesters a short field.

Above, The Pampa Harvester riot did not let a little rain keep them from coming out and cheering on the Pampa Harvesters. Kickoff didn't occur until just after 9 p.m.

The Harvesters couldn't muster any offense on the drive and gave the ball back to Dumas, who after a bizarre set of plays involving a quarter-ending and penalties, drove down the field and scored on a running play from Cristain Landeros.

On the ensuing Pampa drive, the Harvesters were only able to bring together a 20-yard drive, punting after stalling at midfield. The drive was followed by another scoring drive by the Demons, taking the lead at 38-21.

The Demons were too much for the Harvesters late in the game, however, as the rushing attack kept putting points on the board. Dumas won the game 52-21.

Harvester fans should not get discouraged. This was by far the Harvesters best performance, up until the fourth quarter.

The Harvesters moved the ball very well and put up more points in this game than the previous two combined.

The Harvesters take the field next Friday in Bushland. Kickoff is set for 7:30, barring any weather setbacks.

Above left, the rain soaked much of the main entrance to Harvester field. Many vendors closed up shop during the many lightning delays. Above right, (80) Tim Smith had an interception returned for a touchdown.

Vizcaino, Salazar, Santos and defense shine in shutout of Dumas for JV

■ Penalties and missing pieces sputter freshmen offense.

BY JOHN LEE
jlee@thepampanews.com

Freshmen fall to Dumas

The game between the freshmen squads of Pampa and Dumas was actually closer than the scoreboard lets on. The final score of the game was 41-18, but there were three failed two-point attempts by the Harvesters that would have made it a 17-point game. It was very clear that the Harvesters were missing backup-quarterback, wide receiver and running back Jayson Thomas, who didn't play. Even though he was missing his favorite weapon, quarterback Bryce Parker completed throws to wide receivers Cy Wood and Ryan Roden.

It is said that all football comes down to is blocking and tackling, and there was plenty of the former on runs by Bryce Parker that went for touchdowns. Parker also had an interception returned for a touchdown.

JV proves running the ball is still in style

The junior varsity earned the first win for all three squads Thursday night, and they did it the old-fashioned way, ground and pound.

There were many things going right for the junior varsity team.

The JV stopped the Dumas offense every time, pitching the 14-0 shutout.

"You've always got to enjoy the wins when you get 'em," junior varsity head coach Bret Bethke said.

In their first scoring drive, sophomore quarterback Erick Vizcaino had multiple runs before handing it off to sophomore running back Sergio Santos for more multiple first-down scampers.

On the same drive, Vizcaino also hooked up with sophomore Aaron Arreola for a pickup of about 20 yards. Vizcaino eventually ran the ball multiple directions on one carry and got into the end zone for a touchdown.

In their second scoring drive it was very similar. Vizcaino ran for a couple of first downs, then he handed it off multiple times to Salazar and junior Derrick Maxwell, with Salazar eventually punctuating the drive.

"We started emptying the box with spread and they would leave one linebacker in the box," Bethke said.

"We started running at them with some queue counters and some things like that with Erick Vizcaino, Francisco Salazar and Derrick Massey. I love seeing the run game working."

Special teams were functioning efficiently, fielding every punt and giving the offense a short field to work with. When the offense has a short field, it is much simpler to score, which builds confidence.

"One of the important things we did was getting the punts fielded," Bethke said. "We got them caught and didn't let the ball roll and didn't make our offense work more and get more first downs, so that was great getting the punts caught. Kickoffs were good and holding to good field position and our returns were good. Coming out of the half Sergio (Santos) had the huge return and sets the tone right off the bat."

Operating efficiently in all three phases of the game, the defense also performed admirably. Sophomore Ryan Lee and junior Ashjen Payne each had a sack in the game, putting just some of the pressure that the Dumas line struggled with.

"The pressure (on the quarterback) was awesome, they couldn't stop our guys," Bethke said.

"We were sending more than they had to block. We just kept getting after it."

From the Press Box

Discipline and the teams that do it well.

One of the underrated factors in sports that is not flashy by any means is the discipline for a team and program. It is important at all levels of sports and it starts from the very basics. I remember when I was in math class and I had to learn about matrices. If you don't remember them

JOHN LEE

I might say lucky you. But they were the numbers in a grid-like problem and your job as the student was to get them down to what seemed like to me a tic-tac-toe formation of ones and zeroes, with the ones making up the diagonal line. I despised those, and I despised my teacher more because after a week of learning about these and mastering them, she showed the class the easy way of doing it. I don't remember her name, as it was my college algebra instructor back in my Amarillo College days, but I owe her a thank you.

Something math does is it teaches a student logic, problem-solving and discipline. The reason my instructor did not introduce the easy way of doing it was because I would miss out on the discipline of doing it the hard way. But the repetition of doing it the hard way taught me the discipline I needed to solve bigger problems. In sports, the discipline is not the home-run hits, the wins, the slam dunks, etc. It is the repetition of doing the small things, which build into the more difficult things to do.

In the Denver Broncos' season-opener against the Baltimore Ravens, Broncos linebacker Danny Trevathon intercepted a pass from Joe Flacco and ran it back for what seemed to be a touchdown to make the score 48-17, except he dropped it a yard before crossing the white line that means "touchdown." A week later on Thursday, Texas Tech's DeAndre Washington did the same thing.

These are careless mistakes that if a player would simply be disciplined enough to hold on to the ball all the way into the end zone it wouldn't happen. For the record Broncos defensive coordinator Jack Del Rio tore into Trevathon, even though the Broncos were dominating the game despite the careless error.

So who are the teams that do this well? I definitely feel like Alabama does it well. It is clear how I feel about Johnny Manziel and Texas A&M. Last year I rooted for the Aggies to usurp the Crimson Tide from their BCS throne, but I think this year I will pull for the Tide to wash away those College Station heathens (my apologies to the area Aggie fans). It will be interesting to see if discipline alone can stop Johnny Football from running rampant on the consecutive BCS champs.

In the pros, I strongly believe in New England as one of the most disciplined teams in the NFL. Between them, San Francisco and Green Bay, it doesn't get any stricter than that. You know Tim Tebow spent the whole summer on the Patriots roster? I almost forgot myself.

It is because Bill Belichick doesn't believe in the circus that followed Tebow from Florida to Denver and ended in New York. Let's look at the win-loss records of the Patriots compared to the Jets since Rex Ryan took over. New England is 51-15, the Jets are 35-30. Only once have the Jets had a season with 10 or more wins.

To Rex Ryan's defense, the poor play from former starter Mark Sanchez and injuries have helped to cause some of those losses. But his early Super Bowl proclamations, egging on Belichick and sometime immature actions, have spread down to his players. A player got ejected Thursday with 38 seconds left to play. What does that say about the culture in the locker room?

Cowboys' fans, here is an example for you. Look at the Cowboys now compared to the Cowboys under Jimmy Johnson, totally different cultures. They had some extremely diva attitudes during the Super Bowl championship years on top of that.

Discipline doesn't start with the big plays, it starts with the basics of your craft. If you have discipline from the very beginning, the big things will come, in both your craft, and life.

NASCAR adds Gordon to Chase field amid controversy

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — NASCAR added Jeff Gordon to the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship field Friday, a stunning and unprecedented step in the fallout from at least two attempts to manipulate the results at the season-ending race at Richmond last weekend.

Jeff Gordon

NASCAR Chairman Brian France expanded the field to 13 drivers for the first time since the format was implemented 10 years ago. Front Row Motorsports asked for a deal from Penske Racing at Richmond and then helped make sure Penske's Joey Logano made the Chase field by having one of its drivers, David Gilliland, slow down, according to an Associated Press review of radio communications. France said NASCAR could not determine a deal was made, but still believed the move was necessary and he placed both teams on probation the rest of the season.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorced woman with three children ages 24, 22 and 16. I live on my own with my girls. I have been dating a man, "Reed," for three years. We are very much in love and have been working to blend our families. (He has two children.)

We have decided to move in together at the end of October. My lease will be up then, and Reed has sold his condo. We will be moving into the house he shared with the ex-wife while they were married. I'm comfortable with the move, and our kids are very excited about it.

Everything is fine except for one thing: His ex-wife has not yet found a new home to move into. With little time to go, he's now suggesting that we move in and live with his ex-wife until she finds a new place. Reed believes this will be very short-term — a month or so.

The house is big enough for all of us, so that's not an issue. His ex-wife and I are friendly, so that's not an issue either. But I'm not comfortable with this plan.

Am I being irrational? Should I just act like a grown-up and make the move, or should I refuse? — SECOND THOUGHTS IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR SECOND THOUGHTS: You are neither immature nor irrational. You are thinking ahead — and that is what grown-ups do. What if Reed's ex CAN'T find a place that suits her in a month or so? What if it takes six months or even a year? While you may like the woman, do you really want to share your dwelling with the "Ghost of Marriage Past"?

If I were you, I'd talk to my landlord and ask if you can work out a month-to-month extension of your lease. If that's agreeable, Reed can move in with YOU for the "short term." I'm sure you'd both be happier.

DEAR ABBY: My mother is in her mid-50s. She's a wonderful woman, but she makes us late for everything. My husband and children, my siblings and I often attend family functions and other events as a group. When we go to pick up Mom, she announces she has "just a few" chores she wants to do first, and they take forever.

We are not "a few" minutes late; we're significantly late, and sometimes miss events altogether. These have included weddings and funerals, and we have wasted hundreds of dollars on tickets to missed events. She'll often make a show of apologizing, but her behavior never changes.

We have stopped inviting Mom to some events, but she makes us feel guilty if we don't take her to a family event. We have tried helping her do her chores the day before and lied about starting times. Nothing works, and Mom finds more to do.

We have asked her friends about this behavior. They say she never pulls these stunts when they pick her up for things. When we talk to Mom about it, she insists she needs to get things done ahead of time. Her house isn't messy, nor is it known for being overly tidy.

She's in good mental and physical health. We're fresh out of ideas on how to deal with this. Help! — LATE FOR A VERY IMPORTANT DATE

DEAR LATE: It's interesting that your mother doesn't behave this way with her friends. That tells me her behavior is controlling — although it's hard to understand what perverse pleasure she gets out of it.

I would handle it this way: Tell Mama you will pick her up at a certain time and that you will wait no longer than five minutes for her. If she's not out by then, you will leave. And then DO it.

Man using cluster balloons lands in Newfoundland

YORK HARBOR, Newfoundland (AP) — A balloonist who was trying to cross the Atlantic Ocean using hundreds of helium-filled balloons landed short of his goal in Newfoundland.

Jonathan Trappe reported that he was having trouble controlling his balloons before landing Thursday evening just south of York Harbor, according to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

He touched down safely and required no medical attention.

Instead of using a conventional hot-air balloon, Trappe was using more than 300 helium-filled balloons, like those used in the animated movie "Up."

He lifted off Thursday morning from Maine and had hoped to be the first person to cross the Atlantic using a cluster of helium balloons.

But he ran into trouble as he approached Newfoundland and was in communication with a search and rescue center in Halifax, Nova Scotia, said Lt. Steve Henley of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in Stephenville.

The balloonist's movements were tracked by radar by Canadian officials, he said.

Trappe told local officials that on Friday he planned to hike out of the remote area where he landed and make arrangements to remove his equipment.

The U.S. man launched earlier Thursday from Caribou, Maine.

"The Atlantic Ocean has been crossed many times, and in many ways, but never quite like this," the North Carolina native said on his website before his departure.

Trappe, who couldn't immediately be reached for comment, is no stranger to cluster balloons.

He's used them to lift a faux house, as in the Disney-Pixar movie.

In 2010, he crossed the English Channel using a cluster of balloons.

For his trans-Atlantic crossing, the basket in which he was riding was actually a lifeboat that could have been used if he ditches in the ocean.

Trappe said he'd worked on the trans-Atlantic crossing for two years.

By Thursday evening, he was well on his way, headed toward Newfoundland.

But a couple of hours later, he posted that he'd landed.

"This doesn't look like France," he posted on Facebook.

Spotlight on birthplace of night football

MANSFIELD, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania's Mansfield University hosted the first-ever night football game in 1892, a contest that ended at halftime when the ref declared it "inconvenient to continue."

Why? Because the lighting was so poor.

This weekend, the spotlight will shine far more brightly on Mansfield as it plays a home game under the lights for the first time since that shortened contest more than a century ago. Saturday night's opponent, Princeton, took part in the first-ever college football game in 1869.

Mansfield is heavily promoting its long-delayed return to night football — and poking a little fun at itself in the process.

"We got a little bit burned by technology, and we weren't ready to jump back on again until we were sure that all the bugs had gotten worked out," joked Steve McCloskey, the school's director of athletic operations. "After 121 years, we're pretty sure this night football thing is going to catch on, and we want to be right there at the forefront."

The first night game, against visiting Wyoming Seminary, drew thousands of spectators to the Great Mansfield Fair on Sept. 28, 1892. Part of a barnstorming effort by General Electric to sell rural America on newfangled electric lighting, the game was illuminated — barely — by strings of lights powered by a dynamo. It was so hard to see that confused players tackled their own teammates and even the referee. Ball-carriers had trouble avoiding the makeshift lamppost in the middle of the field.

The game, such as it was, ended in a scoreless tie. And that was that.

The town of Mansfield wouldn't be electrified for another five years, while Mansfield University never saw a need for lights at its athletic stadium because the football team traditionally played on Saturday afternoons.

But the 20th century finally won out. In went the lights, along with an artificial playing surface that'll be shared by the football, field hockey and soccer teams.

"Every kid at every school in this county knows that Mansfield was the birthplace of night football," McCloskey said. "So when we got lights this summer, it was a no-brainer for us to celebrate that history."

Throwing the ceremonial switch on Saturday's season opener will be 101-year-old Chester Bailey, a Mansfield historian and longtime newspaper owner who helped gain recognition of Mansfield's role. Bailey stumbled on a newspaper account of the 1892 game when he was a 15-year-old printer's apprentice, and, decades later, pursued it with the pro and college football halls of fame.

"It was history that I knew, and a lot of people didn't know about," he recalled.

The Mountaineers play in the eight-team Collegiate Sprint Football League, in which players can weigh no more than 172 pounds. Mansfield joined the league after its traditional, and far more expensive, football program fell victim to budget cuts in 2006.

After practice this week, players at the 3,400-student, state-owned university in northern Pennsylvania spoke in well-rehearsed tones about ignoring the hoopla and staying focused on Princeton. But, with thousands of fans expected in the seats, they know it's a special game.

"It's a very long time since the lights have gone on here, and it's going to be a pretty historic night for us," said Jeremy Estremera, a slotback from Allentown.
