2013 enrollment up at Pampa ISD

BY TIMOTHY P. HOWSARE
 thowsare@thepampanews.com

Total enrollment in Pampa public schools has increased by 80 students over last year's enrollment at the start of the school year, superintendent David Young announced at Monday's regular school board meeting.

In a report included in the board members' packets and emailed to The Pampa News, as of Sept. 17 there were 3,770 students enrolled in the Pampa Independent School District. At this time last year, the district had 3,690 students on its rosters.

The schools with enrollment increases are Wilson Elementary, Austin Elementary and Pampa Junior High. Wilson added 43 students to its rolls, with a 2013 total of 479. Austin added 24 students to boost its enrollment to 465. PJHS now has 780 students, an increase of 27 over last year.

The remaining schools saw slight decreases. At 941 students, Pampa High School has eight students less than last year.

David Young

Lamar lost two students and now has 657 enrolled, while Travis Elementary lost one for a 2013 total of 411.

The Pampa Learning Center saw a three-student decrease to 37 students.

In other action, the board considered or approved:

- Nominating four of the five current board members for the Gray County Appraisal Board. The board members serve two-year terms that are not staggered. One current board member said he does not wish to serve another term. As the largest taxing agency in Gray County, PISD can nominate up to six board members.
- A construction update regarding the new PISD Building at 1233 N. Hobart St. that was formerly Albertson's supermarket. Builder James Hicks said the construction is making progress, but the installation of wiring is behind because of issues with the building's design, not the particular contractor.

- Awarded a bid to Culbertson-Stowers car deal-

Pampa resident needs surgery for rare, aggressive cancer

BY TIMOTHY P. HOWSARE
 thowsare@thepampanews.com

A Pampa resident with a rare and aggressive form of jaw cancer may have seen her last hope for the surgery she needs vanish into thin air unless she is able to raise the tens or thousands of dollars needed for surgery and treatments.

Angela Rivera

Angela Rivera was diagnosed with pleomorphic clear cell carcinoma after she went to a dentist to have a wisdom tooth pulled and the X-rays revealed a cyst on her jaw.

The cyst was removed but an autopsy determined it was cancerous.

The Pampa News wrote an article about Rivera in late July to let readers know about her plight and also let readers know donations to an account for Rivera could be made at FirstBank Southwest.

The Pampa Harvesters varsity football team held a fundraiser during their scrimmage game in late August.

A friend of Rivera's from South Texas, Christina Dalum, recently emailed The Pampa News to say that Rivera was turned down for charity assistance at Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas, where she hoped to have the surgery.

Dalum said Rivera was advised by her doctor to quit her job at Pampa Independent School District because of the pain and complications

Remade higher ed board reaching out to universities

BY REEVE HAMILTON
 Texas Tribune

At all levels, Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board officials are reaching out to their counterparts at public university systems in an effort to salvage those relationships after the airing of dirty laundry during the regular session.

The coordinating board knew it would be critiqued as the organization underwent the legislative sunset process, which calls for the evaluation and reform of state agencies, during the regular session. But the extent of the changes, culminating in the removal of a significant chunk of the coordinating board's authority, went further than some expected.

Major quake in southwestern Pakistan kills 39

QUETTA, Pakistan (AP) — A major earthquake struck a remote area in southwestern Pakistan on Tuesday, killing at least 39 people and wounding dozens as houses collapsed on top of people inside while others fled into the streets and prayed for their lives.

The Pakistani military said it was rushing troops and helicopters to Baluchistan province's Awaran district, where the quake was centered, as well as the nearby area of Khuzdar.

Most people were killed when their houses collapsed before they could rush outside, according to the chief spokesman for the country's National Disaster Management Authority, Mirza Kamran Zia, who gave the casualty toll.

He warned that the death toll might rise and said they were still trying to get information from officials in the district.

"We all ran out for safety in the open field in front of our house. Many other neighbors were also there. Thank God no one was hurt in our area but the walls of four or five house collapsed," said Khair Mohammed Baluch, who lives in the town of Awaran, roughly 50 kilometers (30 miles) south of the epicenter.

Pakistan's chief meteorologist, Mohammed Riaz, put the magnitude of the quake at 7.7, while the U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo. Said it was magnitude 7.8.

Baluchistan is Pakistan's largest province but also the least populated. The head of Pakistan's Earthquake Center, Zahid Rafi, warned of possible aftershocks.

The area where the quake struck is at the center of an insurgency that Baluch separatists have been waging against the Pakistani government for years.

The separatists regularly attack Pakistani troops trying to suppress the uprising as well as symbols of the Pakistani state, such as infrastructure projects.

Baluchistan is also poorly developed with little economic development.

University of Pennsylvania graduates class of dogs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An animal training center inspired by canine rescue work on 9/11 is graduating its first class of working dogs.

The University of Pennsylvania's Working Dog Center held a commencement ceremony Tuesday for a Labrador retriever named Socks.

The canine is going to work for the campus police force performing duties including bomb detection.

Other animals in the class will be working as medical alert dogs or on urban search-and-rescue teams.

The Working Dog Center began training puppies in Philadelphia on Sept. 11, 2012. They are named after canine handlers who worked at ground zero during the terrorist attacks in 2001.

Anti-social Dallas Zoo gorilla being moved

DALLAS (AP) — There will be no rose ceremony for a 430-pound bachelor gorilla that failed to form any meaningful relationships with fellow apes during an 18-year stay at the Dallas Zoo.

Patrick, the 23-year-old Western lowland gorilla known for being gregarious with zoo staff and the public, while being ambivalent toward his female counterparts, has been handed his walking papers. The silverback will be transferred to the Riverbanks Zoo and Garden in Columbia, S.C. where he'll be allowed more solitude, according to a statement issued Monday by the Dallas Zoo.

the higher education board during the regular session were informed by the experiences of the state's public universities — and they were not positive.

State Sen. Brian Birdwell, R-Granbury, noted that the board's approach to decision-making was "isolated." State Rep. Jimmie Don Aycock, R-Killeen, bemoaned that it was "now regulating more than it is coordinating." State Rep. Rafael Anchia, D-Dallas, said he had repeatedly heard one concern: "We do not trust the coordinating board."

Senate Bill 215 went into effect at the beginning of September and the board is significantly changed as a result. "The Legislature has redefined the coordinating board's role from an agency that authorizes and regulates to one that advises and recommends — a more strategic partnership with our boards of regents that we embrace," Fred Heldenfels, the former chairman of the board, said in a statement.

And they've set out to get to know these partners a little better.

"We've been sitting down and having pretty frank conversations about how we move forward," said Dominic Chavez, senior director of external relations at the coordinating board. "We're obviously all pointed in the same direction in terms of what we're trying to achieve for our state. It's just on policy issues, how do we work more collaboratively and get away from the conflicts of the past?"

University representatives who have had initial meetings with the board to begin the healing process have indicated that the interactions have been positive. That is promising, since they will be working much more closely as many major decisions that previously rested with the coordinating board are now left to boards of regents and others require more university input.

The agency no longer has the authority to approve capital projects on university campuses. It will no longer be called upon to approve the mission statements of higher education institutions. If a university has a degree program that is only producing a very small number of graduates, the coordinating board cannot shut it down. The list does not stop there.

Using the particularly contentious issue of shuttering of low-performing degree programs as an example, Chavez noted that legislators' move to hand decision-making to regents does not necessarily mean the coordinating board was on the wrong track. The board is still required to notify institutions when their programs are not performing up to state standards; it just can't decide what to do with that information.

"They accepted the rationale," Chavez said of lawmakers. "They accepted the practice. They accepted that this is an important thing for Texas to do. But they decided it should be more localized."

In order to make rule or policy changes regarding admission policies, allocation or distribution of funds, institutional data requests, or other key areas, the coordinating board now must engage institutions in "negotiated rule-making," a more collaborative process that begins long before a proposed rule is approved or rejected.

Chavez said the board is also making internal changes to foster a "more rich communication environment," including meeting with university officials prior to board meetings to explain the agency's thought processes and establish a feedback loop that previously did not exist.

The sunset review was not solely negative, and the board continues to be a major factor in state higher education policy.

The approval of SB 215 allows the agency to continue for at least another 12 years without another review, the maximum allowed by law. And it will continue to collect and analyze massive amounts of data, administer financial aid programs, and develop and monitor the state's long-range master plan.

"We're going to support the boards of regents with good data and good analysis, because that's what we do best," Chavez said.

In fact, the board is currently working on the state's next 15-year plan, since its Closing the Gaps plan, launched in 2000 in an effort to bring Texas' higher education outcomes up to par with those in other large states, is in its final year. Coordinating board officials were hopeful that the heightened levels of transparency and interactivity poised to become their new normal could yield positive results as the state's higher education community transitions into this next phase.

Lest there be any confusion, Heldenfels noted: "The high expectations for excellence, productivity, and affordability in higher education are stronger now than ever. I am confident that our regents will execute these responsibilities with the very best interests of tuition-payers and taxpayers in mind as we continue to improve student access and success."

ership for purchase of a pickup truck for the Agriculture Department, a pickup for Maintenance Department and a Suburban for the district. Bid notices were sent out to all local dealerships, but Culberson-Stowers was the only company to submit a bid.

The total price for the three vehicles is $101,500. The new trucks will be added to the district's fleet.

• Consider and possibly take action to approve a maximum class size waiver for some classrooms at Wilson and Lamar Elementary schools. The maximum class size in grades K-4 without a waiver is 22. There are 24 in third-grade bilingual at Lamar and 23 in third-grade bilingual at Wilson. There are no bilingual certified teachers available so the district is requesting a waiver.

• The superintendent to enter into a contract with an energy service corporation. Young explained that an energy service corporations does audits to determine ways to save electricity for entities with lots of infrastructure, such as school districts. They check out lighting, AC units and other electrical equipment. Two companies, Trane and NextEra made proposals to the district, and Young said NextEra's would best meet the district's needs.

Young said a preliminary audit determined the district actually had fairly high efficiency considering the age of much of its equipment.

• PISD board operating procedures.

• The sale of delinquent tax property.

• Action regarding real property in the vicinity of Pampa High School. Young said Tuesday the exact locations of the properties could not be disclosed to the public because that could artificially inflate the prices at the sheriff's auction. Knowing that PISD was interested could make the prices go up, he said. Texas law provides for real estate discussions to be held in closed session, he said.

Before the meeting, 43 PISD students who exited the English as a second language (ESL) program were recognized.

With parents and family attending, the students were presented certificates and congratulated by school board members.

Program director Carmelita Gage said the students scored much better than the state averages.

Students were required to pass a language proficiency test, pass a state test and demonstrate proficiency in reading, writing and speaking.

99-year-old woman in Iowa receives high school diploma after 80 years

WATERLOO, Iowa (AP) — A 99-year-old Iowa woman who dropped out of a high school more than 80 years ago despite needing only one credit to graduate has finally received her diploma.

Audrey Crabtree, of Cedar Falls, smiled Monday as she received an honorary diploma for her time at Waterloo East High School.

“And I feel so much smarter,” Crabtree quipped. Crabtree, who began her education at a one-room school house in northeast Iowa, left high school in 1932 due to a swimming and diving accident that forced her to miss several school days. She also had to care for her sick grandmother.

A story in Tuesday's newspaper about a new dental practice called Smile Zone should have stated the practice accepts Medicaid.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I'm 21, and my 16-year-old sister is out of control. She told me she smokes marijuana, drinks alcohol, abuses painkillers and recently mentioned she does coke. Abby, she is beautiful, and I don't want to see her do this to herself. She's living with me about an hour away from my parents because Dad is an alcoholic and he abuses our mother. I brought my sister here to get her away from all that because I know what it was like growing up there. I'm having trouble giving her advice to stay away from those things because I did them, and I feel like a hypocrite. My parents can't get through to her, either. Please help. — TRYING TO BE A BIG SIS

DEAR TRYING: You're lucky you were able to straighten out without becoming addicted to any of the substances you experimented with, but your sister may not be so lucky.

Because she's out of control, you MUST step in and put a stop to it for her sake. Your sister needs counseling, and if she is going to remain your responsibility, it is imperative that you assert control. Talk to her school counselor about getting her the help she needs. You may have to drug-test your sister on a random basis as a condition of her continuing to live with you. Kits are available at your pharmacy. Stop feeling guilty, stay strong, and you may be able to steer your sister back on the right path.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 23-year-old soldier in the Army, currently deployed overseas. I'm less than a month away from returning home to my husband. However, I have not been faithful to him during my tour. I have had sex with several people over here, and if that's not complicated enough, I appear to be pregnant. I don't know what to tell my husband.

I actually still kind of love him. Advice? — DEPLOYED AND PREGNANT

DEAR DEPLOYED: You need to make certain you are pregnant and that this is not a false alarm. Whether you are or not, you have some difficult decisions to make. While it won't be pleasant, you and your husband are due for an honest conversation upon your return. If you both "still kind of" love each other, forgiveness is possible, and couples have been known to get beyond this and have successful marriages.

Fall has always been prime time for football

Fall is here which means the Harvesters' football season is in full swing. Not many things go hand in hand like fall weather and football games.

COURTNEY OXLEY

Football has been an important part of Texas Panhandle history for many decades. Pictured here are two Pampa Harvesters from the 1940-1941 season, Jack Durham and Randall Clay. As you can see from the picture, a lot has changed for the game including equipment, uniforms, stadium and the field itself.

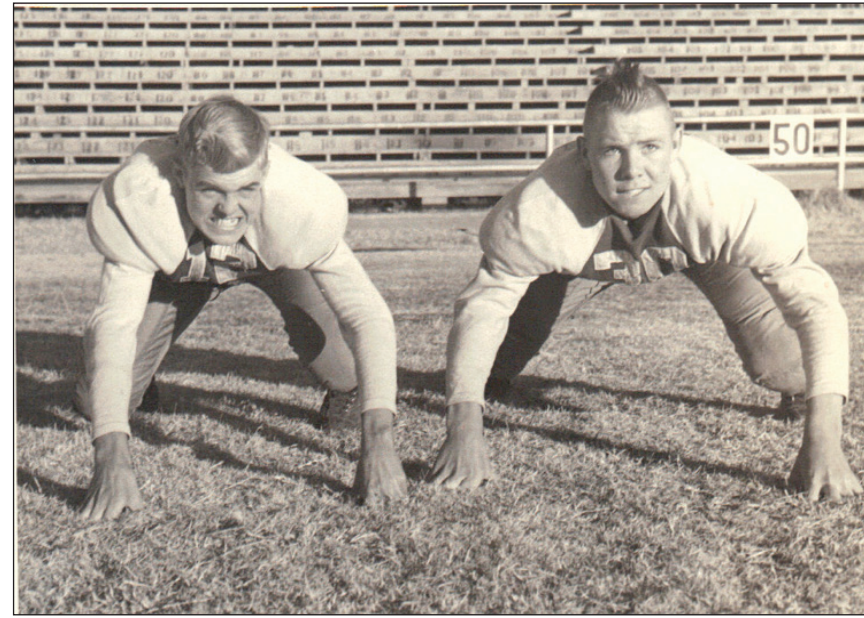

If you'd like to see more Pampa Harvesters' photos from the past, visit the White Deer Land Museum.

Don't forget the museum is hosting the Fairview Cemetery tours on Saturday, Sept. 28. If you would like to learn about Pampa in a new unique way, please RSVP to the museum. For more information, please feel free to call us at 806-669-8041.

Visit the White Deer Land Museum in downtown Pampa. Regular tours are offered Tuesday through Saturday from 1-4 p.m. If you would like to schedule a special or group tour, please call or email the museum at 806-669-8041 or courtney.oxley@graycch.com.

Child's play

If the House Republicans were children, they'd surely be getting a "timeout."

SUSAN ESTRICH

Are they really going to close down the government in a futile attempt to undo Obamacare? Are they really willing to risk the full faith and credit of the United States to score political points?

Symbolic votes to repeal Obamacare — and the House has had plenty of them — are, at worst, a waste of time that might be better spent addressing the real problems Americans face. But what House Republicans are now planning goes beyond symbolism. Now, it's not just the failure to address real problems that is at issue. If they have their way and close down the government to make a point, they will actually be hurting people. Shame on them.

I'll be OK. I don't depend on Social Security and Medicare. I'm not supporting my family with a paycheck from the government. As a Democrat, I suppose I could just sit back and watch Speaker John Boehner lead a kamikaze mission that will, in the end, give Democrats a better chance to take back the House in the midterm elections.

But too many people will pay for this too dearly to consider this solely from a political perspective.

Hurting people who are already hurting is not just bad politics. It's wrong.

If House Republicans hate Obamacare that much, then they should get out there and elect more Republicans — and a Republican president. In the meantime, they should stop playing games and throwing temper tantrums. You don't play "chicken" with people's lives.

The speaker is, apparently, not the one who came up with this stupid plan.

Maybe he's just smart enough to remember what happened to Newt Gingrich when he shut down the government. Boehner, as far as I know, is not looking for a job on CNN.

Or maybe he understands that closing down the government and threatening default on our obligations could undermine the economy and cause real hardship for people.

Boehner's problem is not that he came up with a bad idea, but that he has decided to go along with the ideological extremists in his own party who did. The extremists who are leading the charge down the rabbit hole come from overwhelmingly Republican districts. Safe seats. The way district lines are drawn, most incumbents have more to fear from primary challenges than from general elections. On the Democratic side, it's less of an issue because we don't have an organized, ideologically motivated extreme ready to fund primary challenges. On the Republican side, it's an issue.

Is Boehner really such a cowardly lion? Will enough Republicans who know better go along with this dangerous strategy in order to stave off primary challenges from their own party?

In every politician's life, there are moments when you have to decide what is worth risking your seat over.

This is such a moment for the speaker and his colleagues. Standing up to your opponents is easy. Standing up to powerful people in your own party is risky. It could cost Boehner his job.

Boehner isn't just the speaker of the tea party — but that's precisely what he's acting like. In the short run, it may win him points on the right. But they will come at the expense of the most vulnerable people in our country.

If you wonder why so many people think so little of Congress, why decent and honorable people don't want to hold elective office, this is why.

When children throw temper tantrums, books on childrearing tell you to call a "timeout."

When politicians behave like out-of-control children, the man who is supposed to be their leader needs to step up and lead, not dive head-first into the sandbox.

Newtown amnesia in Hollywood

After the Newtown school shooting, commentators on the Left expressed outrage that gun-rights groups were exploiting the attack to build membership in the wake of all the liberal demands for a federal crackdown on gun owners. Nine months later, they're curiously silent as Rupert Murdoch's cable network FX milks a fictional Catholic-school shooting for commercial gain.

The Sept. 10 premiere of the violent motorcycle gang drama "Sons of Anarchy" featured the school shooting, as well as two rapes and a man drowning in a bathtub of urine. Then the show's creator Kurt Sutter made a complete fool of himself, claiming "We didn't do it for shock."

Clearly this man thinks everyone he meets is an idiot or a mouth-breathing fan of the show, or both. Sutter touted that the ratings were epic — 5.9 million viewers, and 8 million once "encore episodes" were counted. That's a record for his show, if not exactly the record numbers recently scored by A&E's "Duck Dynasty."

Sutter thought the evil, stupid people in this controversy were those who objected to this "entertaining" tub of urine and the blood of children. In a podcast, Sutter attacked the watchdogs at the Parents Television Council. "I would imagine these are not evil people," Sutter said with what appears to be great charity. "But they are just not very intuitive or intelligent individuals. It's such a small and simple view of process. The fact that people want to be monitoring what my children watch is terrifying. There is no awareness of what is the bigger objective of that episode is, the bigger point of the narrative."

Sutter wants people to believe that the larger plot point was how the biker gang in this series is going to (slowly, over many episodes) reap the consequences of their gun-running. But we know what the "bigger objective of the episode" is: "Ka-ching." You load as much sensationalistic sludge in your debut episode to build some ratings momentum. The "narrative arc" that follows may try to make some sense of that avalanche, but it doesn't justify it.

When criticized, Hollywood sees the foul threat of censorship, especially if a show's criticized based on how it might warp a child's mind. Predictably, Sutter pushed that panic button. "Whenever that stuff crosses the line into censorship, it's just scary.

... I'm not a social guru; I'm not a guy with an agenda politically, socially or morally. I'm a f—ing storyteller."

Of course he has an agenda. He has no morals and believes that should be accepted. That is his agenda.

Sutter's claims to be devoid of a moral agenda only underline what FX is selling: degrading content on a TV show surrounded by advertisements, and the network and the "creative team" are getting paid millions to offend as aggressively as they can possibly imagine. Like the rest of the Hollywood liberals, Sutter said he wanted to start a debate, but he isn't really interested. They have nothing to discuss but their own "intelligent and intuitive" work and how outrageous hip they are. Sutter the alleged debate-starter proclaimed he refuses to read reviews or social-media critiques.

Back in Newtown, Conn., school superintendent John Reed sent an email to parents and staff members prior to the episode being aired on FX to warn that the episode would feature the mass shooting. "While you don't see the visual impact of this, you will hear the shots and cries from the victims," he wrote.

So where are the Newtown-exploiting politicians on violent entertainment now? Where is the outrage at FX on behalf of the children watching? Don't think that a splashy season premiere that draws 8 million viewers doesn't have thousands and thousands of children watching someone their own age blow away his schoolmates.

Meanwhile, Michelle Obama preferred to attack the people who promote unhealthy snack food to children. Kurt Sutter is fine, but the marketers of Froot Loops and Twinkies are the Evil Empire. See if her tone doesn't apply to the marketers of extreme TV violence: "Whatever we all might believe about personal responsibility and self-determination, I think we can all agree that it doesn't apply to children," the First Lady said. "Through the magic of marketing and advertising you all have the power to shape our kids' tastes."

Doesn't anyone in Washington worry about Hollywood shaping children's tastes with ultra-violent television, movies, music and video games?

Mrs. Obama ought to broaden her attack to the marketers who are lining up to exploit dramatized school shootings, rapes, and urine drownings. You can't shame the makers of the video game "Grand Theft Auto V" or the movie "Machete Kills." But there were also Michelle's usual marketing targets: Burger King and Taco Bell. This White House hasn't been a profile of courage for children when it comes to their major donors in Hollywood.

daily horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Thursday, Sept. 26, 2013:
This year you will break precedent and open up to an unusual opportunity. At first you could be reticent, but eventually you will decide to go for it. If you are single, in this process, you will meet someone quite different and spectacular. Take your time and get to know this person. If you are attached, the two of you will enjoy getting involved with a public commitment of some kind. Having outside interests together will bond the relationship further. CANCER can be pushy. The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Use the daytime hours to the max. You could be surprised by everything you can accomplish. Listen to your sixth sense when dealing with a neighbor. An idea might trigger your imagination and keep you distracted most of the late afternoon. Tonight: Happily head home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Be aware of your checkbook balance, and catch a change quickly. Your ability to move past the obvious while looking for deeper reasons and more information will help. Remain responsive to others, even if you feel a bit overwhelmed. Tonight: Accept an invitation to go out.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ You are full of spunk in the morning. The cost of enabling a situation to move forward could be higher than you'd anticipated. Don't be so cocky about having enough funds dedicated to this project. Tonight: Follow a suggestion from someone who has had more experience than you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ You might be slow to take action, but once you do, it could be difficult to stop you. You still will want to weigh the pros and cons before making a decision. Know what you desire in the long term. If someone does not make the grade, you will know soon. Tonight: A force to behold.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Use the morning to the max. Meetings will be more successful as a result. You have a lot to think about this afternoon, and you might feel pressured by others to come to a conclusion. Listen to their feedback. Debate an option with a trusted friend. Tonight: Keep evaluating.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Others will continue to pressure you until you decide to become unavailable. Some might say that your attitude is selfish, but that is not the case. You usually give a lot to others, so taking some time for yourself is smart. Tonight: Make plans with a favorite person or two.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You are willing to walk in someone else's shoes. Do it more often in order to prevent a problem from developing. Respect and honor your differences, rather than judging them. Your ability to take the lead in a trying situation will emerge. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ A partner seems much more fun-loving than in the past. Be ready to switch gears, as you might need to make a long-distance call. You know what is going on with this person. Trust your instincts, despite what you might be hearing. Tonight: Opt for a movie or other fun happening.

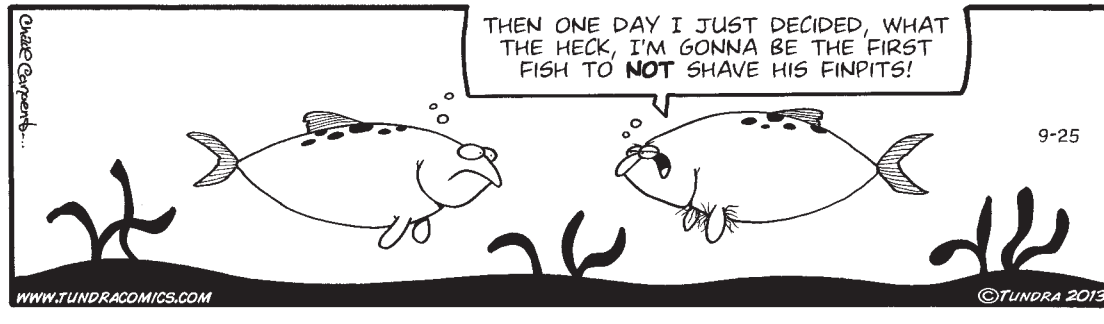

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ You are able to digest a lot of information and then quickly share it in a clear manner. However, when people drop a lot of information on you, it takes time to sort it all out. Ask a key friend for help in separating the viable facts from fiction. Tonight: With a favorite person.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Get as much done in the morning as you can. By afternoon, meetings and people in general will occupy your time. You are correct in thinking that you need to establish what is too much, yet you might find it difficult to say "no" to others. Tonight: Make exciting weekend plans.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Your playfulness will be hard to resist, but you might need to tame it a bit in the afternoon. You have a lot on your plate, and you have the ability to handle it. Start taking care of business. Make time to discuss an important idea. Tonight: Take a walk or go to the gym.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You might be slow to start in the morning, but by afternoon, you will be full of ideas, enthusiasm and energy. See what a couple of hours can do? If an idea or thought keeps haunting you, make a point to do something about it. Tonight: Put up your feet and relax.

Johnson's recovery key for Texans

HOUSTON (AP) — For the second straight week, all eyes will be on the recovery of Andre Johnson. The Texans' star receiver recovered from a concussion suffered against the Titans to play in Sunday 30-9 loss to the Ravens, only to be forced out of the game with a shin bruise in the first half. Johnson was examined Monday and is "OK," according to Texans coach Gary Kubiak, but Johnson will be day to day as the Texans prepare for the unbeaten Seahawks. "He did come out OK," Kubiak said Monday. "All the X-rays are fine so it's just a matter of working him back through it. It's just the matter of a day-to-day process." Having Johnson back would help Houston address some of issues that led to Sunday's sobering loss. The Texans were their own worst enemy as they set a franchise record for penalties (14 for 113), and allowed two non-offense touchdowns. In the first half, Ravens linebacker Daryl Smith intercepted Matt Schaub and cashed in on a 37-yard touchdown return for a 10-6 lead. Less than two minutes later, Baltimore's Tandon Doss broke through Houston's special teams for an 82-yard punt return TD. Fixing the mistakes and putting up big plays are points Kubiak is looking to work on. Eliminating penalties comes down to preparation and concentration. "Somehow we've got to get some consistency, get rid of those mistakes and play the type of football game we want to play," Kubiak said. "We've got to find a way to make some bigger plays than what we're making." Creating more big plays is a more complex task. To do that, Kubiak pointed to giving Schaub more time. Against the Ravens, Houston was without Pro Bowl left tackle Duane Brown. With Derek Newton and Ryan Harris manning the edges, the Texans were under siege from Baltimore's defense throughout the game. Kubiak said Brown was back on the field Monday, but is still day to day, meaning Harris and Newton could have to carry the load once again against the strong Seattle defense. "They battled. They battled some good players there. We could help them," Kubiak said. "I think Ryan came in and battled his tail off. Ryan can play better. I know Newton can play better." The issues were not all on the offensive line. The Texans' execution in the play-action passing game and the ability to be more balanced between run and pass also factor into the big-play equation. All of this, however, leads to a tough reality. Three games into the season the Texans are working on the same issues heading into a tough portion of their schedule. "I don't think we've played a good team game from start to finish," Kubiak said. "We've been inconsistent. We've turned the ball over. It's about consistency and finding a way to make plays. "The biggest thing is if we're going to put ourselves in those situations, we're going to struggle."

Astros drop 10th straight as Rangers roll 12-0

ARLINGTON, (AP) — Bo Porter's view isn't changing as the losses pile up for his Houston Astros. Even after a season-high 10 straight defeats. Alex Rios hit for the cycle, Derek Holland struck out nine in his second shutout of the season and the Rangers started their final push for a playoff spot with a 12-0 victory over the Astros on Monday night. "This was definitely not the result we wanted," Porter said. "But motivation can go both ways. This lets us know how good we have to be. We've got to come back out and fight even harder." The Astros pushed their season strikeout total to 1,477 — more than 100 ahead of No. 2 Minnesota. Houston locked up its third straight season of at least 106 losses and needs one more to match last year's franchise record. The current losing streak — which included four to wild-card contender Cleveland over the weekend — is second-longest in this miserable three-season stretch for Houston. The Astros lost 12 straight last year. "They looked like the team fighting for a playoff spot," Houston's Trevor Crowe said. "Our guys are mentally and physically ready to play, but teams in the race have a little extra motivation." The Rangers pulled within a game of the idle Indians for the second AL wild-card berth with six games remaining. If they want to celebrate a fourth straight season in the playoffs, the Rangers will have to keep it up in the final two games against the Astros and a four-game finishing series against the Los Angeles Angels — all at home. "We have to focus on the things that we have to do to win a game at a time," said Rios, who completed the cycle in his only four at-bats and drove in four runs. "It doesn't do any good for us to look at what's happening around us." Rios finished the cycle with a triple to right-center field in the sixth inning, pulling into third standing up without a throw and later scoring to put Texas up 11-0. He doubled in the first inning, had an infield single in the third and hit his 18th homer for a 9-0 lead in the fourth.

Murray, Romo lead Cowboys to 31-7 rout of Rams

ARLINGTON, (AP) — DeMarco Murray strolled around left end for 14 yards on his first carry. There wasn't a St. Louis defender near him until the end of a much longer run a few plays later. The Rams almost looked like they didn't remember what the Dallas running back did to them in their last meeting. Murray rushed for 175 yards and a touchdown two years after setting a franchise record against St. Louis as a rookie, and Tony Romo threw for three scores in a 31-7 victory Sunday. The third-year back had 96 yards rushing to 18 for the entire the St. Louis offense at halftime. His 41-yard run two plays into the third quarter gave him his first 100-yard game in more than a year and set up a touchdown for a 24-0 lead. Murray probably could have threatened the 253 yards he set against the Rams in 2011, but he was soaking up cheers from the crowd when the huge video board at the Cowboys' $1.2 billion show-place showed him relaxing on the sideline in the fourth quarter. "When you get a runner like that going, you can feed on him," Cowboys coach Jason Garrett said. "He gets a little contagious for everybody. Everybody starts feeling it." Sam Bradford, Murray's old college teammate at Oklahoma, was only feeling pressure. The Cowboys (2-1) struck him four times in the first half and had six in total after St. Louis (1-2) hadn't allowed a sack in four games dating to last season. It was the longest streak for the Rams since John Hadl was under center for a division champion in 1973. DeMarcus Ware had two sacks and broke Harvey Martin's 30-year-old franchise record of 114. Then-coach Bill Parcells and owner Jerry Jones used to have fun throwing around bets how many sacks 2005 first-round pick Ware would get. "I think of it every time I think of his number of sacks," Jones said. "I can't say that it is unexpected because of how hard he works, and his talent level, and his competitiveness." Romo, who had 210 yards passing, went 2 yards to Dez Bryant for the first Dallas score. He had a pair of 24-yarders in the second half to rookie tight end Gavin Escobar and Dwayne Harris. When the Rams finally started getting defenders around Murray at the line of scrimmage, Romo found him on the outside for a pair of catches on a drive that ended with a 2-yard run by Murray for a 17-0 lead. Murray went around left end before extending the ball over the goal line right on the pylon, and there was no review. His last 100-yard game was the 2012 opener, and he was coming off a 25-yard performance in a loss at Kansas City. "I don't know that there was anything that stood out to me, other than it was just the same commitment and drive and work ethic he's shown all year in the offseason and the first two games," Romo said of Murray, who declined to talk to reporters.
