No drugs in blood of man who crashed into Chicken Express

BY TIMOTHY P. HOWSARE

A toxicology report from the Department of Public Safety shows there were no narcotics present in Donald Shane White's blood when the car he was driving south on Perryton Parkway ran off the road and crashed into the Chicken Express restaurant on July 1.

An earlier blood test showed White was not under the influence of alcohol when he rammed through the glass windows on the east side of the building, injuring several customers.

White has been cited by the Pampa Police Department for failure to maintain a single lane and the case is now closed.

Though emergency workers had to use the "jaws of life" to remove White and two of his passengers from their Kia Optima, none was seriously injured.

PHS band brings home superior ratings

By TIMOTHY P. HOWSARE thowsare@thepampanews.com

The Pampa Harvesters marching band received superior ratings at a Class 3A competition Saturday at Dick Bivens Stadium in Amarillo. In total, four bands competed in the event.

"All three judges gave us highest rating, which is a Division 1," said Joe Barrow, head band director at PHS. "It feels great. The students performed really well. And, as I tell them, First Divisions are not made at the competition, First Divisions are made in rehearsals. They demonstrated their hard work and abilities."

Barrow said the bands were judged first and foremost on musicianship, followed by marching uniformity and the design of the show.

This year's theme was "Retro Rhapsody," he said.

The band performed "Karn Evil 9" by Emerson, Lake and Palmer, "Who Are You?" by The Who, "Bohemian Rhapsody" by Queen and "867-5309" by Tommy Two Tone.

Barrow said this is a "nonadvancing year" for 3A, meaning they will not go on to state.

State contests for the various divisions are now held on a rotating basis due to a lack of enough funding to hold a state contest for each division every year, Barrow said.

Next year there will be a state contest for 3A, he added.

Though the competition season has ended, Barrow said the band will continue to

Though the old Coca-Cola bottling plant on North Hobart St. is still standing at the time of this writing, the National Home Health Care building, pictured above, on the north side of the plant was demolished earlier this week for the construction of a new Toot'n Totum convenience store. The former laundromat on the south side of the Coca-Cola plant also has been demolished. Toot'n Totum spokeswoman Melinda Batchelor said a construction timetable for the new store is not definite yet. However, when finished the Pampa store will look similar to the newer Toot'n Totums in Amarillo.

The collision, however, caused extensive damage to the restaurant and drew much attention from passersby, many of whom volunteered to help with the cleanup.

Leslie Haynes, who with her husband Seth bought the store on July 1, 2012, exactly one year before the crash, said Wednesday all repairs to the restaurant have been.

The PPD collision report indicated White had no vehicle insurance at the time of the crash.

Haynes said they are currently working with insurance companies to recover the costs of the repairs.

The fifteen people appeared to be making a perilous journey that thousands try each year. Migrants from Haiti, Cuba and other Caribbean countries routinely attempt to illegally enter the U.S. by reaching Florida's coast in overloaded or unseaworthy vessels, often through established smuggling networks that include islands in the Bahamas and Turks and Caicos.

Early Wednesday, one of the survivors called 911 on a cellphone, alerting authorities to their location seven miles east of Miami.

"Being English, we don't eat frogs," he noted.

The toad finding has yet one expert - Bournemouth University archaeologist Tim Darvill — expressed skepticism over what he called "the frog story."

Still, he and other outside experts voiced excitement about the dig where the bone was found, with Darvill calling it "the most significant find in the Stonehenge landscape for many years.'

Andy Rhind-Tutt, a former mayor of Amesbury and the chairman of the Amesbury Museum and Heritage Trust, said the dig was turning up thousands of flint tools and animal bones, pointing to what he said may turn out to be a major prehistoric settlement just over a mile (about 2 kilometers) from the world-famous circle of standing stones.

Parfitt said the find suggests "that there's more to the site than just Stonehenge.

"There's a much deeper history to the specialness of that place," he said.

Obamacare.

In an NBC News/Wall Street Journal poll completed Oct. 9, 70 percent of respondents disapproved of congressional Republicans, whereas President Barack Obama's rating blipped up a couple of points. Fortunately for the GOP, the bad news for congressional Republicans led some D.C. Democrats to overplay their hand by allowing the partial shutdown Manchin, D-W.Va. But to appear more painful than it need be.

Message received: If the government cannot work for Democratic leaders, it need not work for citizens and taxpayers.

Senate Majority Leader

When Reid balked, Bash asked, "But if you can help one child who has cancer, why wouldn't you do it?'

Reid responded: "Why would we want to do that? I have 1,100 people at Nellis Air Force Base that are sitting home. They have a few problems of their own." Nasty.

Last weekend, as the drop-dead deadline to raise the debt ceiling loomed, Reid pooh-poohed a bipartisan compromise measure pushed by Sens. Susan Collins, R-Maine, and Joe then the Democrats' war on taxpayers presented a signal moment. The government had placed barriers around the National World War II Memorial. Enraged veterans and tea party protesters tore down the barriers. There's no public interest in closing off the monument. Indeed, it took manpower and money to erect the barriers. So there's no real saving. There's just a cheap headline. Now the story has boomeranged on Democrats. The NBC/Wall Street Journal poll also found that 51 percent of Americans think Obama "is putting his own political agenda ahead of what's good for the country." And that poll was taken before last weekend's protests and other similar stories played out. As I write this, Reid says he is "optimistic" that a deal can be reached. Why would the sage of Searchlight, Nev., want to do that? Maybe, now, it's in his interest.

This Land Is Our Land

Children deserve chance at American Dream

Finally, a part of my "American Dream" came true: my wife thinks I look like a movie star.

Well, to be frank that is not exactly what she said.

> "You look like some weird guy in a movie," she commented after I shaved part of my beard leaving only my mustache and a pair of very 1970sstyle mutton chops.

Weird guy or the star of the movie...potato, potahto.

The point is that someone thought my face was majestic enough to belong in cinematography, right next to Brad Pitt, Johnny Depp, Pierce Brosnan and Danny Trejo. Um, forget about Danny.

At 16 years of age, just like tens of thousands of kids all over Latin America, I became a war refugee. We were forced to either leave our homes or risk being forced into the war, disappearance or death at the hands of our own governments. Like lemmings we all headed north and, to quote U2, we ran "into the arms of America," the only place with relative security and political stability.

This was the mid '80s, Ronald Reagan was in office and the United States saw a large influx of refugees fleeing the wars in Central America. Most were denied the political asylum and placed on an immigration limbo that, for some, lasted a decade. Republicans abhor the idea of re-

I was lucky in a lot of ways. I learned English, finished high school and went straight into college which my family and I had to pay out of pocket since my immigration status was still undefined.

There are not too many things we know as political scientists, but one of them is that a college education is the surest path toward a better life. This brings me to the Dream Act.

Last week, Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott, considered the runaway favorite for the post of Lieutenant Governor, said he believes the goal of the Dream Act is laudable and needs revamping. He is right.

The Dream Act is not something to be feared but to be embraced, especially by Christians.

Most of the beneficiaries of the act were brought to the United States by their parents as young children like me, and thus played little to no role in knowingly breaking any law. Unless you believe in visiting the sins of the fathers on the sons (something that Jesus told us not to do in Romans 12:17-21), there's nothing for which to punish them.

They're members of what sociologists call "the 1.5 generation," raised as Americans with little connection to the country where they were born. They speak English, attend school, are Boy Scouts and play in Pop Warner leagues. And they're here illegally.

On the one hand, law and order warding what they view as breaking the law.

On the other hand, how can Christians forget that, if we live up to that name (Christians) we MUST abhor the Old Testament edict of "an eye for an eye?"

"You must therefore be all goodness, just as your heavenly father is all good," said Christ.

The Dream Act is worth passing and it is not a reward for lawlessness. It tells high school students who want to make something of themselves, for the good of the country, to go ahead, make this trash-can dream of yours come true.

That Christians reject this shows how far they have strayed from American ideals of assimilation and welcome written into the feet of Lady Liberty.

"Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free. The wretched refuse of your teeming shore. Send these, the homeless, tempest-tost to me. I lift my lamp beside the golden door!"

I am nothing special, except to my wife (I hope), but I was once like these children. Not fully legal, not fully illegal. A university education was my way forward. If I could make it, I bet they can as well.

A Pentagon official blamed "a loosely worded law" for the move, but if it is loosely worded, the administration could have chosen to make the payments.

Letter to the Editor Don't give up on student athletes

I would like to respond to the article about the football team (Dennis Palmitier's Tuesday column).

As a very proud aunt of a member of the varsity team I am going to be very careful to what and how I say things. Those boys work their behinds off every day in practice, during the athletic class time, in the film room and I see it I see my nephew come home battered, bruised and sometimes even bleeding.

Those young men fight on the field with what they have available to them, bashing them doesn't help them I have heard my nephew say he is sick of the losses and hearing that they are a bunch of lousy players. The problem with the team is not a lack of effort. I probably shouldn't say this, but I am any way. The problem is the politics of the team.

My nephew was a dual starter in junior high during freshman year and was even written about in articles pertaining to his performance during games at times. Junior varsity was tough; he sustained injuries that kept him out of several games.

He puts 110 percent in every time he steps onto that field!

The problem is that as a senior he is to be a leader and yet he, as well as numerous other players, have been made back ups to sophomores and juniors. Why? Well that is a great question considering for the wants to get a breather and freshmen and JV teams he played as a dual starter on both, had winning records and were district champs.

Now as a varsity player he rarely sees the field. To be fair, he did recently get injured during a game and he stayed in because he knew his chances to play were limited.

While I believe the article was unnecessary and clearly disheartening, there was truth in some of what was said. The entire coaching staff is not the problem.

The problem is certain coaches that keep players in and turn their headsets off when a position coach tells them to put another player in or a coach that refuses to let a winded player that the coach refuses because he wants "his players" in.

The problem with Pampa athletics has and always will be that unless you meet certain criteria, you will always be on the sidelines. It is sad but it is true.

I may regret making these remarks later, especially if costs my nieces and nephews in athletics their playing time, but that is simply how I see it. The athletes still deserve to be supported and cheered for whether they are 10-0 or 0-10, they work hard they play hard they don't give up and we as a community should not give up on them.

This year you often will have to decide between doing what you think will work and doing what you want to do. You will discover that your emotional voice has more power, as it reflects an inner depth and caring. If you are single, relating could be far from easy. You could experiment with being docile, verbal, noncombative, etc. If you are attached, as a couple, you often are on opposite ends of an issue. Try to reach a compromise so that each of you will have a chance to make a final decision. Respect your differences, and you will be on cruise control. ARIES is strong and domineering.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★ You will be full of getup-and-go today, but there seems to be a problem that is subconscious. Keep searching within yourself to see if there is an unaddressed issue. Take your time before making any statements or commitments now. Tonight: Get some extra R and R

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

 $\star \star \star$ You want to have more fun in your life. In pursuit of this goal, a friend could be distancing him- or herself more quickly than you realize. This person might not want to take part in this adventure. Be open to different types of entertainment with this person. Tonight: TGIF!

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★ Pressure keeps building between a personal matter and a financial or business issue. You do not need to make a choice right now; you simply need to prioritize and go with the flow. Nothing will be resolved today. Just hang in there or call it an early day. Tonight: A force to behold.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

 $\star \star \star \star$ An eclipse in your opposite sign could find you exhausted and tired. What might be best is not to get into the moment, and detach from it instead. Others are even more volatile than usual. Strap on your seat belt. Tonight: Say 'yes" to an innocuous invitation.

Emotionally, you might want to be contrary or controlling. Understand that you will not get anywhere with that type of behavior. Tonight: Be naughty and nice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

 $\star \star \star \star$ You could be slightly more challenging than you think. You are determined to have a domestic situation go a certain way. The other person involved is determined to have things his or her way. Let go of any must-haves for now. Tonight: Others need your time and attention.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

 $\star \star \star \star$ If you must take a money risk, make it small. That way, if you lose, there will be no lasting pain. You could encounter a difficulty with a friend or loved one about a financial situation. Why let it happen? Tonight: Play the role of peacekeeper. Keep your wallet hidden
