"I wanted to have my own business," Arreola said.

In 2006, he bought out Tidwell, who left the business to pursue other career options, and today A & T is run by Pedro, his wife Linda and his son David.

When asked what he likes most about working in Pampa, Arreola said that he likes working with people.

Davis wants $10 minimum wage amid 'Texas Miracle'

AUSTIN (AP) — National protests over higher wages for fast-food workers spilled into the Texas governor's race Friday when Democrat Wendy Davis maintained support of raising the minimum wage to $10.

That's less than the $15 an hour that labor organizers are demanding for workers at restaurants like McDonald's and Burger King, but Davis' defense set off a predictable backlash from her Republican opponent and conservatives.

Republican Gov. Rick Perry anchored his failed 2012 presidential run on the "Texas Miracle" — what he called a low-regulation, predictable business climate that he said kept the state's economy afloat during the recession. In June, the Texas Republican Party approved a platform that calls for abolishing minimum wage laws altogether.

But Davis' backing of a minimum-wage hike gave new visibility to economic policy in a campaign that has largely focused on education and vows to change what she calls a culture of insider politics.

"I'll fight to raise the minimum wage from $7.25 to $10 because this is a family issue," Davis said Thursday. Democrats across the country and President Barack Obama have called on Congress to raise the federal minimum wage from $7.25 an hour. A person who works 40 hours a week on the federal minimum wage makes about $15,000 a year.

Republican Attorney General Greg Abbott, Davis' opponent, called the idea of raising the state minimum wage a job-killer. The influential Texas Association of Business also panned the effort.

"Texas has come too far to be pulled back by Sen. Davis' Obama-style big government mandates," Abbott spokesman Matt Hirsch said.

A major criticism of the so-called "Texas Miracle" is that a higher-than-usual percentage of workers making minimum wage in Texas prop up unemployment numbers that are lower compared to other states. The Texas unemployment rate in July was 5.1 percent, below the national average of 6.2 percent.

Fast-food workers, retail employees and others making minimum wage or less accounted for 6.4 percent of Texas' hourly wage earners in 2013 — the fifth-highest percentage in the nation, according to the federal Bureau of Labor Statistics. That number peaked at 9.5 percent in 2010, which at the time was the highest of any state and when Perry and other Republicans began seizing on the "Texas Miracle" narrative.

On Thursday, police handcuffed protesters who blocked traffic in dozens of cities across the country on in their latest attempt to escalate efforts to get fast-food companies to pay employees at least $15 an hour. Protests were more muted in Texas than in other places, where numerous people were handcuffed.

White House asks for $58M for Ebola drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is asking Congress for $58 million above current levels to speed the production of promising drugs to fight Ebola and additional flexibility for the Department of Homeland Security to cope with the thousands of unaccompanied Central American children still arriving at the southern border.

The administration also tells lawmakers that it wants to include extending the charter of the Export-Import Bank in a must-do temporary spending bill that's required to prevent a government shutdown at the end of the month. The bank helps foreign buyers purchase U.S. exports.

The requests are contained in a White House budget office document sent to Capitol Hill's Appropriations committees as they prepare the temporary funding measure slated for votes the next two weeks. The measure would freeze government agency budgets at current levels into December. The roster of so-called anomalies was requested to deal with urgent cases a budget freeze could not accommodate.

For instance, the $58 million request for the Centers for Disease Control would help the agency ramp up production and testing of the experimental drug called ZMapp, which has shown promise in fighting the Ebola epidemic in western Africa. It would also help keep the development and manufacturing of two Ebola vaccines on track. The White House request also seeks to use $10 million in unused balances at the Department of Health and Human Services to help with the Ebola outbreak in Africa.

The administration also is requesting flexibility for Customs and Border Protection to spend more money dealing with the influx of unaccompanied Central American children. Congress failed to pass President Barack Obama's July request for $3.7 billion to address the crisis, though the House adopted a significantly scaled-back version.

The request also seeks permission for the Department of Health and Human Service to maintain higher spending rates to house and care for unaccompanied immigrant children but added that that's just a stop-gap solution until supplemental funding is approved later in the year.

The request to keep the Export-Import Bank alive comes as House GOP leaders seek to smooth over divisions between tea party lawmakers opposed to renewing the bank's charter and more establishment, pro-business Republicans who support it. Critics say the bank benefits big corporations like Boeing because its foreign customers get to purchase exports at lower interest rates than they would otherwise pay. Supporters say boosting exports creates jobs.

GOP aides have privately signaled that some sort of extension of the bank's charter is likely to be attached to the temporary funding bill.

The document also contains a request by the Pentagon to devote $250 million of its budget for overseas military operations to remove unexploded shells and other ordnance from training ranges in Afghanistan as U.S. ground troops withdraw. Otherwise, Afghan civilians could be at risk.

It seems no detail is too small. For instance, the request asks for authority to use unspent Centers for Disease Control and Prevention money to keep a freezer construction project on its Fort Collins, Colorado, campus on track.

Bouncin' Around How school has changed

The kids have finished their first two weeks of school already, and my husband and I were remembering our first days of school as children. The first thing that came to mind was school supplies. These days, the schools publish lists of required items which can set parents back quite a bundle, depending on how many children they have. I was so excited to actually get a new box of Crayons and even more so if I got the "Big" box of 64 different colors. I remember having a wooden pencil box, a ruler and some blunt scissors. At school, the teachers supplied things like paste, mucilage (a clear glue in a bottle with a rubber applicator) and paper.

The paper was sort of off-white, and I recall folding it into small squares where we were to write our arithmetic problems. The last time I bought school supplies for our grandchildren, the supplies filled the kids' backpacks (something neither of us ever owned) to overflowing—markers, pencils, colored pencils, crayons, glue sticks, white glue, erasers, ruler, scissors, spiral notebooks, folders, hand sanitizers and many more items. Now that we are officially in the electronic age, the kids are often given a notebook or laptop computer to use. Another thing that kids of today will never experience is mimeographed sheets. Walking into the classroom first thing in the morning and smelling the distinctive smell of mimeographed sheets might strike fear into a student's heart, because that often meant there was going to be a test.

At other times, the sheets were pictures that needed to be colored, or puzzles to solve. In California, we started school on the day after Labor Day every year. No matter what kind of summer we had been having, those first few weeks in September were often the hottest. In my freshman year of high school, several of my classes were in temporary canvas classrooms, and they were like ovens.

Girls had to wear dresses that fell below the knees, and boys wore long pants, belted, with the shirts tucked in. When our daughter was in grade school, girls could wear shorts only under dresses, and they could only wear dresses if they had shorts under them. When my husband was in grade school, the school was only a few blocks from his house, and he walked home (unaccompanied) for lunch every day. When he was sick, the school nurse sent him home.

On one occasion, he was sent home sick and passed out in his driveway, where the lady next door saw him and carried him inside to his mother. School bus rules have changed quite a bit, too. I only rode the bus to one school, along with my older brother. As I recall, it was a nine-mile trip one way to the school. One morning, some of the boys were being too rowdy, and the bus driver warned them they would have to walk if it continued. The boys ended up walking part way to school, and got into double trouble for being tardy. That, of course, would not happen today. We had two days off for Thanksgiving, some time for Christmas vacation and Easter vacation (as they were called in the old politically-incorrect days) and two days for Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays.

There were no teacher's in-service days (or whatever they are called here in Texas). The school day began about 8 a.m. and ended at 3 p.m., unless you had to stay after school for a special reason. At one school I attended, there was no cafeteria, so everyone brought their lunches and kept them in our desks until lunch-

Newspapers and the Freedom of Press

Recently, I was reading a newspaper Facebook page (not ours) and a person made the comment that they thought the newspaper should be free. She asked, "What about Freedom of the Press?" Her comment made me grin and then I got to thinking. Freedom of the Press is a privilege we sometimes take for granted.

Freedom of the Press means we have the right to publish a newspaper, magazine and other material without the government restricting the content. Of course, this first amendment right goes a little further, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances (actual wording from www.archives.gov)." This was adopted Dec. 15, 1791 as the first amendment to the Bill of Rights.

This is a very important right we have for someone to blurt it out on Facebook and implying that they should get a free newspaper. It's a freedom that some countries do not have. We have the right to read opinions of people even if we don't agree with them. We have the right to read facts and information with out the government telling us they don't want us to read it. It also means you have the right to go to what ever church you choose. We don't always think about that right on Sunday morning.

I can't even imagine living in a country where the government controls the newspaper, radio and television stations. The news that readers receive is telling them how to think or how to feel about religion or politics. Of course we have become accustomed to this freedom and don't think about it on a daily basis. So, when you read your local paper or listen to a radio or television station, you might take a minute to think how lucky we are! Yes, we might pay $9.50 per month but that sure is a small price to pay for uncensored freedom.

NBC says 'Morning Joe' host has role expanded

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC News says "Morning Joe" host Joe Scarborough will be a senior political analyst for the network with regular roles on "Meet the Press" and the "Today" show.

Scarborough co-hosts the political talk show on MSNBC with Mika Brzezinski (breh-ZHIN'-skay). Generally, over the past year, NBC News has sought to distance itself from MSNBC, where a politically liberal viewpoint dominates, but that isn't the case with Scarborough, a former Republican congressman. He'll continue on "Morning Joe."

NBC said Friday that Scarborough will be a regular contributor to round-table discussions on "Meet the Press," where new moderator Chuck Todd replaces David Gregory on Sunday.

Scarborough will offer analysis on other NBC News broadcasts and work as part of the network's election team.

Roswell Daily Record editor confesses sordid tale of driving beater cars Hell finally did freeze over. After 14 years and nearly 180,000 miles on my black Chevy S10, I replaced it a little more than a week ago with a new car.

I am now the proud owner of an "alien green" 2013 Hyundai Accent with a hatchback and a sunroof.

Though the car was put on the road in July 2012, it had just under 2,200 miles when I bought it, so it is practically like new.

The engine and five-speed transmission still work great in the S10, but it has a myriad of problems, like the driver's side door not closing tight, the "Check Engine Light" staying on all the time, the brake light and ABS lights coming on intermittently and worn shocks and bushings. The front brake pad linings look thin, not to mention the AC no longer works and the tires are nearly bald.

I have to confess I have severely neglected routine maintenance on the truck. It's been at least a year since I've had the oil changed and I can't remember the last time I replaced the fuel and air filters.

Despite my neglect in its twilight years, the truck has never broken down and always starts. The only expensive part under the hood I've had to replace was the alternator.

I have had a pattern throughout my living of buying a car and then driving it into the ground. Maybe it has to do with being a musician. We tend to be bohemians and not think like normal people who buy a car, drive it for three or four years and then trade it in on a new one.

I have never made car payments in my life. If I ever did have to finance a car, I'm sure I'd have to pay 37 percent interest because I don't exist in the databases of the finance companies.

I won't go as far back to high school to tell you my history of driving beater cars. Otherwise, this column would be three pages long. I'll just go back to 1991, when I bought the 1973 Chrysler New Yorker, aka the Bluesmobile — named in homage to the 1974 Dodge Monaco driven in the Blues Brothers movie.

As I recall, the car had around 72,000 miles and I paid $1,100 or $1,200 for it.

This was a great car for a working musician. Unless I was using a real drummer instead of a drum machine, I could get my entire band and all of our equipment in that thing.

The Bluesmobile was a 6,600-pound beast with a 440-cubic-inch engine fed by a Holley four-barrel carburetor.

A mechanic told me that as a "fuel-saving feature," most of the time the engine ran on only two barrels. The other two would only kick in when you punched it or were climbing a hill. Fuel economy with a 440? That car got 12 mpg on the highway on a good day.

Its model year, 1973, was the very first for Chrysler Corporation's electronic ignition. It was actually the first year for the entire automotive industry, with other manufacturers following in the subsequent years.

Apparently, because the electronic systems in the '73s were so new, they were riddled with bugs. Big, nasty bugs.

I probably burned up 10 voltage regulators and a few alternators and coils to boot.

After taking it to several "real" shops to remedy the problem with no success, I finally heard about this gonzo mechanic in the Tucson barrio who had a knack for fixing problems that befuddled mechanics at the dealerships of high-end European luxury cars. And he charged a whole heck of a lot less.

It took him five minutes to come up with a solution: Replace the original distributor with a rebuilt distributor from a 1972 Plymouth Fury, which had standard ignition.

Yes, doing engine tune ups with points and condensers is a big hassle, but it was a relief to not have to worry when the car would die and I'd have to call AAA — again.

The Bluesmobile ran great for two or three years after that and — unlike the movie car that fell apart as soon as Jake and Elwood accomplished their "mission from God" — died a slow death.

I sold it for $200 to a guy who wanted to replace the engine in his Dodge Ram work truck. With a million miles on the truck, he said the 383 block was "tired" and was excited to replace it with a more-powerful 440 block.

Just as the Bluesmobile was fading into the sunset, my current boss offered to sell me one of his three cars, a 1987 SAAB 900SE, for what he owed on it — $2,300.

Though I immediately had to replace the brakes and shocks, this car, made in Sweden several years before GM bought the company, was a steal at $2,300.

time. Milk was supplied by the school, and it is where I was introduced to goat's milk. The teacher often passed out snacks either mid-morning or before we left for home.

The principal was a person of mystery, and being sent to the principal's office was cause for fear. I think today's principals are more kid-friendly. Of course, living in California we didn't have snow days, but we still went to school until mid-June. One thing kids of yesterday have in common with kids of today is the excitement of that first day of school. New supplies, new clothes, new teachers and new things to learn take the place of swimsuits, summer camp and sleeping late in the morning. Here's wishing all the students and teachers a good 2014-2015 school year!

Back in those days SAABs had funny, wedged-shaped bodies as the company also manufactured aircraft and would build the passenger compartments of their cars as if they were small airplane fuselages.

Mine was silver and had a funny-shaped body, but since it was part of a limited-edition aero-package, it had fins, spoilers and air dams that made it look like some sort of European stock car. It was a head turner.

Everything on it was high performance with the exception of a turbo charger.

It had a 2-liter, 16-valve, dual-overhead cam motor that put out 125 horsepower.

It had a sports suspension with anti-sway bars front and back. For lack of a better term, it had "positrack" front-wheel drive. While other front-wheel drive cars would slip and slide around on snow and mud, the SAAB would stick to the road like a fly to the ceiling.

It had a five-speed manual transmission that was meant more for Grand Prix racing than casual driving customary of nabby-pamby American drivers.

There was very little travel in the shifter from one gear to the other, and the clutch was super-toughy. If you didn't shift in just the right spot, you stalled out.

The advantage, of course, is once you tamed this wild bronco you could shift through all five gears like a jackrabbit on a date.

More than any car I've ever owned, the SAAB brought out my "inner motorhead."

Once, from a stoplight in Scottsdale, I drag raced a Porsche Carrera.

The SAAB, with its ferocious low-end torque, was bumper-to-bumper with the Porsche until third gear, when the jumbo horsepower of the Porsche finally left me in the dust.

One night starting at 3 a.m., I drove from the Phoenix valley to Pinetop-Lakeside, Ariz. Normally, this trip would take three-and-a-half hours.

But without any traffic to contend with, I made the drive in two-and-a-half hours. I thought something was wrong with my watch.

I bought the SAAB in 1996 with 157,000 miles on it, but the engine had been rebuilt at 150,000. By 2000 the car had 250,000 miles and although the engine was still running great, everything else was falling apart around it. Broken speedometer. Broken odometer. Dash lights didn't work. Stereo died.

This is pretty much what has happened to my S10, although everything still works on the dash and the stereo still sounds great.

So how did I find the green Hyundai Accent, the car worthy enough to follow such a prestigious lineage of premier motor vehicles?

I attend St. Mark's Lutheran Church in Roswell, and on the second Sunday in July I saw it in the parking lot when I arrived at church.

New cars usually don't catch my eye because they all look the same to me. Toyota Corolla? Honda Civic? Ford Focus? Same difference. I only stop and look if it's a '68 Mustang or a '72 Barracuda with a 383 hemi and a Hurst four-on-the-floor.

But when I saw the Hyundai, my reaction was, "Wow! What a cute little car!"

After the service, I went into the fellowship hall for coffee and snacks with the rest of the congregation, and there was an ad to sell the car posted on the bulletin board.

I didn't think much about it at the time. I saw the ad the next Sunday and didn't give it much thought that day, either.

I missed services two Sundays in a row (attended a different church on Sunday and a slacker on another). But on the fifth Sunday, the ad was still up.

After church, as I was driving to the newspaper office with no AC in the 1 p.m. heat, I started to think what it would cost to replace my tires, fix the front end, replace the shocks, get the AC to work, etc., etc. I realized it wasn't worth spending the money.

After I finished my work at the newspaper, I drove back to the church and took a picture of the ad with my smartphone.

I called the number. The sellers were members of my church who manage a mobile home park for retirees not far from the paper. They were selling it on behalf of the family of a woman who owned the car and lived in the park. She had passed away on July 2.

With only 2,150 miles, it was a "little old lady who only drives it to Walmart on Friday mornings to go shopping" car.

With the sunroof, rear spoiler, 16-inch alloy wheels and four-wheel disc brakes, I was surprised at how sporty it is for an "old lady car." I suppose there are women of a "certain age" who drive Dodge Vipers and Lamborghinis. Who am I to judge.

Since I truly believe that God brought me to this car for a very good price of $15,500 and I have been blessed since moving to Roswell, I decided to give back to God.

I have donated the $10 to a church, whose "shade tree mechanics" will fix it up for the cost of parts and donate it to a worthy member.

I hope and pray that its new owner will find the truck, with its faded jet-black cap, as useful as I did. It's been like "The Little Engine That Could."

I even brought a new pair of black fuzzy dice and hung them on the rear-view mirror to christen it in its new life.

Texas Komodo dragon gets acupuncture therapy

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Texas veterinarians have turned to acupuncture to treat the aching joints of a Komodo dragon at the San Antonio Zoo.

The San Antonio Express News reports the 20-year-old reptile named Bubba has received the treatment the past several weeks to treat degenerative bone disease in both knees. The zoo's senior veterinarian says the dragon is receiving acupuncture in addition to traditional medicine to ease his movement.

Bubba's treatments are weekly and last about 15-20 minutes. The vets use both traditional acupuncture as well as electroacupuncture, which sends electric pulses through the needles. The treatments are designed to stimulate nerves, muscles and connective tissue.

It's unclear how long the zoo will continue the sessions.

“When the Game Stands Tall” teaches more than football

By LINDSEY TOMASCHIK
LKTomaschik@thepampanews.com

“When the Game Stands Tall” came to Pampa’s Cinema 4 on Friday, and it is the true story of the De La Salle High School football team and the longest winning streak in history.

The Spartans won 151 games straight over the course of 12 years before a loss that comes in the first game of a new season.

The plot

Head coach Bob Ladouceur, played by Jim Caviezel, aims to instill in his players’ minds that the team is a brotherhood, and he cares far more about the character of his players than the winning streak that most people know him for having.

The movie begins with the Spartans winning another state championship and extending the streak to 151, as the senior players pass the team down to the junior players, who have yet to embrace all that the brotherhood of the team embodies. The younger players seem to care more about keeping the streak alive than building character.

The movie then follows the backgrounds of two players in particular, T.K. Kelly, played by Stephan James, Cam Colvin, played by Ser’Darius Blain. Kelly is offered a full-scholarship to play football at Oregon but says he is not going without his close friend, who he considers a brother, Cam Colvin, who was also offered a full-scholarship, but never accepted it. Kelly then talks Colvin, who at this point had recently lost both of his parents, into going to Oregon with him.

The night before the pair are supposed to move into their Oregon dorms, Kelly is killed. This is the first obstacle the team faces.

Shortly after Kelly’s death, Ladouceur suffers from seizures, and is informed by his doctors that he cannot return to coaching until he has made a full recovery, much to the dismay of the team.

Ladouceur is able to return to coaching shortly before the first game of the new season, which is when the team experiences its first loss. For the remainder of the movie, viewers follow the team as they seek to bounce back and embrace the brotherhood of the team in the process.

Fun Facts

Imdb.com had these fun facts about the movie:

- De La Salle is a private high school and costs more than $16,000 a year to attend.

- Sadarias Harrell was originally cast as Trainer for a team opposing the De La Salle Spartans, but producers agreed to re-cast him as Fan in order to address his athletic brand concerns.

- The film shows Bellevue High’s quarterback completing several passes in the win over De La Salle. In the real game Bellevue did not attempt a single pass the entire game.

Parents’ guide

Being an inspirational sports movie, there is not much at all to worry about in this film. It is well-deserving of its PG rating. In football, there are hits, but none too grueling in this movie. There are also a couple of scenes where kissing is shown, but nothing too extravagant.

What do I think?

In general, I am a sucker for inspirational sports movies, and I felt this one had more to offer than most. Going into it, I didn’t think there would be a way to sympathize with a team that lost a game after 151 wins, but I’ll openly admit to being wrong about this after seeing the film.

At 115 minutes in length, the movie covers a lot of material, and I think it was done well and was not terribly drawn out like it could have been. IMDB gave the flick a 7 out of 10 rating, and I would say that it’s worth the cost of a movie ticket to see.

Comedian Joan Rivers dead at 81

Joan Rivers, the raucous, acid-tongued comedian who crashed the male-dominated realm of late-night talk shows and turned Hollywood red carpets into danger zones for badly dressed celebrities, died Thursday. She was 81.

Rivers died at Mount Sinai Hospital in New York, surrounded by family and close friends, daughter Melissa Rivers said. She was hospitalized Aug. 28 after going into cardiac arrest in a doctor’s office following a routine procedure. The New York state health department is investigating the circumstances.

“My mother’s greatest joy in life was to make people laugh,” Melissa Rivers said. “Although that is difficult to do right now, I know her final wish would be that we return to laughing soon.”

Upon hearing of her death, reaction poured out from dozens of notables, ranging from Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to Rivers’ peer-in-comedy Don Rickles. “Knowing her, working with her and enjoying the fun times of life with her was special. She will always be in our hearts,” Rickles said in a statement.

Under the immobile, plastic surgery-crafted veneer that became Joan Rivers’ unapologetic trademark as she aged, her wit remained as vibrantly raw and unruly as when she first broke her way into a comedy world belonging largely to men.

In a 2010 “Late Show” interview, David Letterman broached the plastic surgery issue: “You don’t look exactly like the Joan Rivers I used to know.” Rivers didn’t flinch.

“Our business is so youthful. ... You do little tweaks, and I think if a woman wants to look good, or a man, do it,” she said. “It’s not about anybody else.”

Fashion and acting were the early dreams of the woman who grew up as a self-described “fatty,” but it was humor that paid the bills and ultimately made Rivers a star. She refused to cede the spotlight as the decades passed, working vigorously until her death.

“I have never wanted to be a day less than I am,” she said in a 2013 interview with The Associated Press. “People say, ‘I wish I were 30 again.’ Nahhh! I’m very happy HERE. It’s great. It gets better and better. And then, of course, we die,” she quipped.

Rivers was a scrapper, rebuilding her career and life after a failed attempt to make it as a late-night host was followed closely by her husband’s suicide.

Rivers’ style was hard-driving from the start and her material only got sharper. She was ready to slam anyone. A favored target was Elizabeth Taylor’s weight (“her favorite food is seconds”), but the comedian kept current with verbal assaults on Miley Cyrus and other newcomers.

With her raspy voice and brash New York accent, Rivers turned the red carpet of the Oscars, Emmys and Golden Globes into a stalking ground for E! Entertainment, where she first began working in 1994. Her familiar query — “Who are you wearing?” — would quickly give way to such snarky commentary as her assessment of Adele’s Grammy outfit: The singer looked like she was sitting on a teapot.

The barbs could turn inward as well, with Rivers mocking everything from her proclaimed lack of sex appeal (“my best birth control now is just to leave the lights on”) to her own mortality.

In 2007, Rivers and her partner-in-slime, daughter Melissa, were dropped by their new employer, the TV Guide Channel, and replaced by actress Lisa Rinna. But the Rivers’ women returned to E! and found new success with “Fashion Police,” which Rivers hosted and her daughter produced.

Joan Rivers never relaxed, always looking for the next and better punchline.

“The trouble with me is, I make jokes too often,” she told the AP in 2013, just days after the death of her older sister. “I was making jokes yesterday at the funeral home. That’s how I get through life. Life is SO difficult — everybody’s been through something! But you laugh at it, it becomes smaller.”

When someone dies—different rules for different programs

TOM MARGENAU
Creator's Syndicate

Q: My mother died on July 25. When we looked into her checking account a few weeks later, we found out her Social Security check for July had been returned. We called Social Security to explain to them that my mother was alive almost the whole month of July, but to no avail. They said she wasn't due the money. I had a hard time accepting that, but got really upset when talking to a friend. Her mother died a week before my mom did, and she was also getting SSI — and her money for July was not returned. Can you explain what is going on here?

A: Yes I can explain — if what you wrote about your friend's mom getting "SSI" is true.

Almost everybody confuses Social Security with the Supplemental Security Income, or SSI program. But they are two entirely different federal programs with different objectives and different clientele and different rules and regulations. They just both happen to be managed by the same federal agency: the Social Security Administration.

Most people know what Social Security is. You work, you pay taxes, and someday you collect retirement or disability benefits, or someday you die and your spouse and/or children might qualify for survivor benefits. People of all income levels — rich, poor and in between — can get Social Security benefits.

But SSI is completely different. SSI is welfare. You qualify for monthly benefits if you are over 65 and poor; or if you are under 65 and disabled and poor. Rich and middle-class people will never get SSI checks.

Every single day, I get dozens of emails from readers who tell me they are "getting SSI" or they want to "apply for SSI" when they really mean they are getting Social Security or want to apply for Social Security. When I point out this error to these folks, they usually write back to say something like, "Oh, I thought SSI stood for Social Security Income."

I can't repeat often enough to my readers: Social Security and SSI are entirely different programs. And it's not just a matter of semantics. Mixing up the names and programs can lead to problems and misunderstandings — as it did with the lady who sent me the question that started this column. Her mother was getting Social Security. And she said her friend's mother was getting SSI. And based on what happened to their respective payments after death, I'm pretty sure the latter mother was indeed getting SSI.

As I've pointed out hundreds of times in this column, Social Security benefits are always paid a month in arrears. In other words, the July check is paid in August, the August check in September, and so on. One of the reasons it works that way is the law says you must be alive for the entire month to be due the check for that month. Because the letter-writer's mother died on July 25, she was not due the July Social Security benefit. That's why the check that came in August (the July payment) was returned.

I know lots of folks get upset with the fact that Social Security checks are not pro-rated. But I point out to them that although you end up losing out on the tail end of your Social Security lifetime (i.e. when you die), you generally have already made up for that on the front end (i.e., when you first retire.) In other words, if you turned 66 on the last day of the month, you will get a check for the entire month, even though you met the age requirement for only one day of the month.

Anyway, let's get back to our Social Security and SSI story. Unlike Social Security checks, SSI checks are payable for the month they are received. For example, the July SSI payment is sent to you in July. That's primarily because of the nature of the program. Again, SSI is welfare. So the law assumes you need money every month to meet basic food and shelter needs. And unlike Social Security checks that are sent out on a staggered basis throughout the month, all SSI checks are sent out at the beginning of the month.

The law further says that the SSI recipient who dies is due the check that came for the month of death, unless she dies before the check was paid (see below). Also, any subsequent payments would have to be returned by family members.

That's another difference between Social Security and SSI payments. Social Security checks have some bit of inheritance rights. SSI checks do not. For example, let's say Social Security beneficiary Mary Smith dies on September 1, nine days before her Social Security check (for August) would have been paid on September 10. Many times, the check is stopped even before it's sent. Or if it is sent, the bank is required to return it. However, because Mary was alive the whole month of August, her spouse or other family members are entitled to the proceeds of the check. They have to file a claim with SSA to get the proceeds of that August payment reissued in their names.

But had Mary Smith been getting SSI and not Social Security, and had she died on September 1, before her SSI check was issued, no one would be due the proceeds of the check. And that's because of the nature of SSI. Again, SSI is welfare. Mary died before her SSI check came out, so obviously she no longer has any need for the government to cover her day-to-day needs. So in that case, her last SSI payment would have to be returned.

☀️ sunday horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Sept. 7, 2014:

This year you add a unique quality of endless creativity and dynamic energy. This could catch many people around you off guard. Learn to integrate this liveliness into various facets of your life. If you are single, the person you pick to date now might not be who you want to be with a year from now. Enjoy your time together, but don't make any commitments. If you are attached, don't be surprised if you suddenly view your sweetie in a new light. For some of you, your significant other will delight in your new, energetic personality. PISCES can be challenging.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★ Pressure builds, and it might add a volatile quality to the day. On the other hand, a theme of friendship seems to permeate your interactions. People will be reactive, which could add some confusion. Avoid sending mixed messages at all costs. Tonight: Opt for togetherness.

This Week: Read between the lines.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ You could be triggered more than you would like to be. If you're smart, you will detach from the situation completely. Friendship is likely to play a big role in your plans. You might feel as if you need to give more of your support to a loved one. Tonight: Play the night away.

This Week: Move quickly to achieve a goal.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ You might want to rethink a situation involving someone you care about. You are much more visible than you usually are. Be aware of that fact, and choose your words with care. Your mood could change in the blink of an eye. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

This Week: You'll pick up where others drop the ball.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ See what is going on with someone you care about. If you can detach from your immediate hassles, you will be able to develop some new patterns. A partner or close loved one might decide to be more thoughtful and reflective. Tonight: Go for exotic food.

This Week: Don't act until you are ready.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★ You could be exhausted by your repeated attempts to pacify a roommate or family member. You have seen this same situation build and explode in the past, so be careful. Indulge a loved one, but maintain certain guidelines. Tonight: Make peace, not war.

This Week: Take another look at a personal interaction in a few days.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Venus in your sign allows greater give-and-take. Your ability to help calm down others is likely to come into play. Understand that you might need to move in a new direction and handle a personal matter differently. Tonight: Be gracious in the face of confusion.

This Week: Help others relax.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ You'll move in a new direction and see a loved one in a unique light. An element of confusion that surrounds you might prevent you from expressing yourself and acting as you might like. Stay nurturing despite a need to vanish. Tonight: In sync with the moment.

This Week: Teach a friend how to be more optimistic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★ Your temper, strength and determination might be working against you. Tap into your creativity. Understand that someone cares about you, even if he or she seems to be totally irritated. You might want to go for a drive before meeting up. Tonight: Out late.

This Week: Allow others to express their ideas and feelings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★ Sit on a matter that comes across to you as unusually irritating, explosive and unmanageable. If you can take off for the day, do. As a result, you'll be able to recharge your batteries, and it also will help you when you decide to resolve the problem.

Tonight: Order in. This Week: You are anchored. Resist being rigid.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Start the day with optimism. A friend could be quite difficult, and you might want to distance yourself. Realize that you are one of the few people who can hear this person and understand his or her real needs. Calm down an explosive situation. Tonight: Say "yes."

This Week: You understand what is happening, whereas many people don't.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★ No matter which way you turn or what you do, you could see a child or loved one as demanding and unreasonable. Handle a parent with diplomacy, unless you want to see more anger directed at you. Some of you also might opt to take off for the day. Tonight: All smiles.

This Week: Beam in what you want.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ You might not know what to do with news that heads your way. You could witness a friend's temper rise. Try to help this person neutralize his or her feelings. Plan a calm activity for the two of you to do together. Tonight: Refuse to get deeply involved.

This Week: Expect challenges, and you won't be surprised.

Obama lays out immigration goals, not timing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaving his timing uncertain, President Barack Obama laid out ambitious objectives Friday for immigration steps he intends to take on his own and said he had already received some recommendations from the Homeland Security and Justice departments for executive action he could implement without Congress.

Facing competing pressures from immigration advocacy groups and from Democrats nervous about November's midterm election, Obama made no commitment about whether he would act in the coming weeks as he had earlier pledged.

"My expectation is that fairly soon, I'll be considering what the next steps are," he said during a news conference in Wales at the end of a two-day NATO summit.

Still, Obama spelled out his goals with a degree of specificity that he had previously not detailed.

He said that without congressional action to overhaul the immigration system, he would take steps to increase border security, to upgrade the processing of border crossers, to encourage legal immigration and to give immigrants who have been illegally in the United States for some time a path to become legal residents, pay taxes, pay a fine and learn English.

"I want to be very clear: My intention is, in the absence of...action by Congress, I'm going to do what I can do within the legal constraints of my office, because it's the right thing to do for the country," he said.

On June 30, Obama said he had directed Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson and Attorney General Eric Holder to give him recommendations for executive action by the end of summer and pledged to "adopt those recommendations without further delay."

Legal experts and lawmakers have debated the extent of Obama's authority, and Holder's and Johnson's recommendations remain closely held. It's also unclear how far Obama could go without congressional approval in meeting the goals he delineated Friday.

In 2012, Obama authorized the Homeland Security Department to consider applications to defer deportations for immigrants who had entered the country illegally as children. Since then, the program has deferred the deportation of more than 580,000 immigrants.

Immigrant advocates say Obama has the authority to allow similar deferrals to potentially millions of other immigrants, beginning with the parents of those young immigrants whose deportations have already been deferred.

But the White House has been under pressure from some Democrats to delay any action until after the elections out of fear that taking steps now would energize Republican opposition against vulnerable Senate Democrats. Some have voiced misgivings about Obama acting on his own at all.

National Grandparents' Day

SEPTEMBER 7th

Bond between grandparents and grandkids benefits both!

What used to be the "golden years" of life for seniors is now turning into any opportunity to spend even more time with their youngest family members. Nowadays, a growing number of grandparents are called on to provide child care for their grandkids, many of whom are growing up in two-income households. Others are helping to raise grandkids while providing financial assistance for adult children who may not be able to live on their own.

This trend has been corroborated in a few recent studies. Information from the Pew Research Center showed 7.7 million children in the United States were living in the same household as one of their grandparents in 2011. A University of Chicago analysis of a decade of data based on interviews with 13,614 grandparents, ages 50 and older, found that 61 percent of grandparents provided at least 50 hours of care for their grandchildren during any given year between 1998 and 2008. And an April 2012 study for the MetLife Mature Market Institute and the nonprofit Generations United, an intergenerational policy group, found that 74 percent of respondents provided weekly child care or babysitting service for grandkids.

Grandparents often cite helping their own children financially as well as staying in touch with grandchildren as motivating factors behind providing care. According to Generations United, staying in touch with grandkids can give seniors a feeling of self-worth and improve their overall health.

When spending so much time together, grandparents may develop special relationships with their grandchildren, who may benefit from the knowledge and wisdom offered by their elders. The following are some lessons grandparents can share with youngsters.

- * Empathy: By sharing stories of how things were when they were younger, when opportunities may have been more scarce, grandparents can help teach grandchildren empathy. Grandchildren may learn to be grateful for the things they have and the people around them, rather than taking what they have for granted.
- * Family history: Grandparents can tell grandchildren about family members, including youngsters' own parents, and shed light on the generations that came before them. Looking through photos or watching old movies can provide the avenue by which to start conversations about family history and give children opportunities to ask questions.
- * Interests: Children may be excited about learning new skills or hobbies taught to them by their grandparents. Anything from gardening to woodworking can be shared.
- * Respect: Children who grow up respecting their grandparents may have an increased tendency to respect authority figures outside their homes, which may help kids grow up to be more courteous and kind.

Grandchildren also offer benefits to their grandparents. Companionship, new experiences and conversation can help keep grandparents' minds sharp and bodies active well into their golden years.

fgrimes@thepampanews.com

The Pampa Harvesters played their second game of the season Friday night versus Elk City.

Elk City scored first but missed the extra point to make the score 6-0.

Aaron Arreola returned the ensuing kickoff to the 50-yard-line, but the Harvesters were unable to do anything with the good field position, going three and out.

Elk City moved the ball to the Pampa 4-yard-line, but the Harvester defense held them, and the Elks were forced to kick a field goal to make the score 9-0.

The Pampa offense was finally able to get something going. A screen pass to Derek Norris gave the Harvesters a first down, then Ty Hooper connected with Jayson Thomas a for a 33-yard touchdown pass. Trevor Turner's extra point made the score 9-7.

Elk City drove back into the redzone, but were again held to a field goal, making the score 12-7.

Pampa's offense went three and out, then Elk City drove down the field to score another touchdown. A two-point-conversion made the score 20-7 in favor of Elk City.

The Harvester offense responded. Ty Hooper completed a 32-yard pass to Zack Gates to move to midfield. A 23-yard completion to Bryce Parker and a pass interference penalty moved the ball to the three-yard-line. Norris finished off the drive with a touchdown run, and Turner's extra point cut Elk City's lead to 20-14.

The Elks responded by returning the ensuing kick off for a touchdown and go into halftime with a 27-14 lead.

In the third quarter Pampa forced three turnovers. Ashjen Payne and John Doyle each had a fumble recovery and Erik Vizcaino had an interception. However, neither team scored, and it remained 27-14.

Pampa began to stage a comeback. Hooper connected with Gates on a screen pass, and Gates took it 74-yards for a touchdown. Pampa then took the 28-27 lead on a touchdown pass to Sergio Santos and the extra point from Turner.

The Pampa defense came up with another stop, and Pampa immediately extended their lead when Hooper hit Gates for another 74-yard touchdown pass. The extra point made the score 35-27.

The offense was able to run the clock down to 1:28. However, Elk City blocked the punt. A few plays later the Elks scored a touchdown. They needed a two-point conversion but a couple of penalties set them back to the 24-yard-line. Even then they were still able to convert and tie the game.

Pampa still had a chance to score before time expired. Arreola returned the kickoff to midfield. Several Elk City penalties help moved the ball inside the 30-yard line, but Elk City came up with an interception to send the game to overtime.

Elk City scored a touchdown, but Pampa responded with a touchdown run by Jessie Hernandez to send it to a second overtime.

Pampa scored in second overtime when Hooper connected with Gates for their third touchdown of the night. Pampa decided to kick the extra point. Elk City scored a touchdown in response and decided to go for the win. The Elks' quarterback threw a short pass to the left side of the field and the receiver ran into the endzone to give Elk City a 50-49 win.

Coach Poynor said the offense played well, but they had some struggles on defense.

"We did some good things, I mean we put 49 points on the board," he said. "I was proud of our offense, but we didn't play very good defensively. We didn't tackle very well."

Ty Hooper threw for 488 yards, five touchdowns and two interceptions, while Zack Gates had seven catches for 264 yards and three touchdowns.

The Harvesters play at Hereford at 7:30 p.m. next Friday night.

49ers open with first visit to Cowboys' showplace

ARLINGTON (AP)—After weeks of talk about players who won't be on the field for San Francisco's first regular-season visit to the $1.2 billion home of the Dallas Cowboys, the time has come to focus on those who will.

There's Tony Romo taking his first meaningful snap since throwing a touchdown pass with a herniated disk to set up a winner-take-all finale that he had to miss because of back surgery.

And the Dallas quarterback will oppose Colin Kaepernick, who was an unknown rookie on the sideline three years ago when Romo beat the 49ers while playing with a punctured lung.

Or how about the San Francisco quartet of linebackers Dan Skuta, Michael Wilhoite, Corey Lemonier and rookie Chris Borland being among those filling in Sunday for the suspended Aldon Smith and the injured NaVorro Bowman.

Dallas also has many questions on defense, but one of the answers won't be Michael Sam.

The league's first openly gay player made news again this week by signing with the Cowboys' practice squad after his release in St. Louis — still a step shy of appearing in a regular-season game.

"There are certainly some things you feel good about going into the opener," Cowboys coach Jason Garrett said.

"There are some other things there are some questions about as we go forward. That's the exciting part about Week 1."

Even without Smith, Bowman and possibly defensive tackle Ray McDonald after his arrest in a domestic violence case, the 49ers have the proof of three straight trips to the NFC championship game behind one of the league's best defenses.

The Cowboys had the NFL's worst a year ago, and have been scrambling all offseason to settle on a front seven. It certainly doesn't help that cornerback Orlando Scandrick will miss the first four games on a drug suspension.

Dallas will use a rotation on the defensive line, hoping free agent pickup Henry Melton will be a key even though he missed all the pre-season games with a groin injury.

End George Selvie, grabbed off the scrap heap at training camp last year, is the only Dallas lineman who had more than two sacks a year ago.

And his status is in doubt because of a shoulder injury.

"They're a fast team," 49ers coach Jim Harbaugh said. "I'm sure they'll have things for us in the first game that you don't expect, that they've been preparing for."

Here are some things to watch in a game that will break a 16-16-1 tie in a series that includes six NFC championship games:

Romo's rollout

Romo took it easy in the off-season and got frequent days off during training camp following December surgery. He had already injured his back when he led a drive to beat Washington, only to watch from his house when a third straight season ended with a loss to an NFC East rival that left the Cowboys at 8-8 and out of the postseason. "I feel very comfortable going into the season and I feel as well as I could possibly hope for at this point," Romo said.

San Fran's front
The 49ers' offensive line had problems protecting Kaepernick during the preseason, though the tight-knit unit has hardly had any continuity so far. Right guard Alex Boone ended his holdout just in time for Week 1, though it was unclear whether he or right tackle Anthony Davis — dealing with a minor hamstring injury — would start and play. Jonathan Martin, who got a fresh start under Harbaugh, his coach at Stanford, after a bullying scandal in Miami, could be called upon.

McClain back on field

Dallas linebacker Rolando McClain will play his first game since 2012, the last of his three seasons with Oakland after the Raiders picked him eighth overall in 2010.

He walked away from the game twice with Baltimore after the Ravens acquired his rights. The Cowboys got him in a trade before training camp after a season-ending knee injury to Sean Lee, and now it looks as if McClain will start at Lee's spot in the middle.

Crabtree homecoming

San Francisco receiver Michael Crabtree, who played for a Dallas high school and Texas Tech, worked concessions at old Texas Stadium with his youth football teammates. He walked to his locker in a Texas Tech T-shirt on Thursday before pulling on a 49ers hoodie. Now, he has purchased 70 tickets for family members to attend Sunday's game. "It's going to be fun, and it's going to be challenging going back home seeing my family," he said.

In this corner

Scandrick's absence gives former top 10 pick Morris Claiborne a chance to prove his worth as a starting cornerback after an injury-filled 2013. Claiborne is battling a shoulder sprain this time, but should play. Tramaine Brock is back after leading the 49ers with five interceptions last season.

Broncos built to weather absence like Wes Welker's

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — Wes Welker's suspension didn't exactly send the Denver Broncos into a scramble. Their adaptable offense is built to weather such setbacks.

Sure, they were miffed at the timing of the NFL's punishment, five days before their opener against Indianapolis. And Peyton Manning acknowledged it won't be easy to replace the game's pre-eminent slot receiver over a brutal first month, especially on third downs.

They've been preparing for this eventuality, however.

With Welker's history of head injuries — he had two last season — they'd have been remiss not to have other solutions available in the slot.

Welker sustained his third concussion in 10 months on Aug. 23. He returned to practice this week. But 24 hours later, the league banned him from the Broncos' facilities for a month for violating the NFL's performance enhancing drug policy.

Receivers are interchangeable in offensive coordinator Adam Gase's scheme.

"The thing is, even when Wes was here, we were all playing everywhere," Emmanuel Sanders said. "The outside guys were playing the inside. The inside guys were playing the outside. This isn't one of those systems where you have an outside receiver and you have an inside receiver. Everyone is moving around."

"And I've told you guys before, this is one of the toughest offenses I've been a part of and why is that? Because you have to know every single position on the field, because you never know where Adam Gase is going to stick you."

Even star receiver De-maryius Thomas and tight end Jacob Tamme, both of whom are 6-foot-3 and 230 pounds, can run routes over the middle in place of Welker, who's 5-9.

It's all about being on the same wavelength as Manning and making the right decisions to get open while getting jostled by defenders.

"It's kind of the way that we've developed our system. One of the ways I describe it is that X, Y, Z, F, it's irrelevant," Gase said of the NFL's nomenclature for the different receiver positions. "I can put blank circles here, and we should understand who should do what just by our play calls."

"So, that's why (Welker's suspension) wasn't really a big shell shock for anyone in that room."

With flexibility at such a premium in Denver, GM John Elway made the versatile Sanders his top target in free agency and signed him to a three-year, $15 million deal in March.

Sanders missed much of camp with a strained thigh but put on a show against Houston with five catches for 128 yards and TDs covering 67 and 29 yards.

Sanders said he's "really comfortable in the slot," where he played almost exclusively his first three years in the league before moving outside almost full-time his final year in Pittsburgh last season.

About the only receiver who's not comfortable inside yet is second-round draft pick Cody Latimer, who nonetheless figures to get plenty of snaps on the outside with Welker out.

So does Bubba Caldwell, who stepped in during Welker's absence last season and caught two TD passes against San Diego in a December game.

Welker caught 73 passes for 778 yards and a career-high 10 TDs last year despite missing the final month of the season. He caught 18 passes for 160 yards and a TD in the playoffs.

Welker practiced Monday for the first time since his latest head injury, a result of Houston safety D.J. Swearinger's hit Aug. 23. And he was expected to be available for their opener before he was suspended.

It's not like the Broncos had to crumple their game plan and start from scratch, though.

"Every receiver, every tight end knows what's going on at every position, so you can always put somebody in a different spot," Thomas said.

"I'm not going to say everybody can do it like Wes. But everybody knows what to do. So, as long as you got people in that know what to do, I feel like Peyton will be comfortable with that."

daily horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Sept. 8, 2014:
This year you have a strong sense of what you want. You often will find that you are in black-and-white types of situations. You might wonder whether you should listen to your intellectual voice or your emotional voice. Try them out in different situations and see what works best for you. Look at what is not working in your life, then either fix it or let it go by next summer. If you are single, get to know someone very well before you decide to pursue the relationship further. If you are attached, the two of you benefit from spending quality one-on-one time together. PISCES has the same issues as you, but he or she has a different approach to handling them. The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Waking up might be difficult, as your mind seems foggy. Fortunately, this status will change, but perhaps not as fast as you'd like. Revamp your schedule to make it more workable. The impending Full Moon could be more volatile than normal. Tonight: Vanish while you can.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Creativity seems to emanate from you. Others will appreciate your energy. You have the ability to explain how to turn a seemingly impossible idea into a reality. Your vision and resourcefulness will be unbeatable. Tonight: Act as if you don't have a care in the world.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Take charge of a situation by getting down to the basics. Pressure is likely to build as the day goes on. An associate might want to discuss an intense issue, or a boss or someone you look up to could need some feedback. Tonight: Juggle many different concerns.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ While others are likely to react defensively to a volatile situation, you will roll with the punches and try to see life from a different perspective. People will find your new attitude intriguing, yet they might have a hard time adjusting to it. Tonight: Howl at the Full Moon.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Use caution with financial agreements and involvements. A deal that seems too good to be true probably is. Do your research. Use caution when counting your change or paying your bills, as there could be an unidentified problem. Tonight: Go along with someone else's suggestion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Defer to those around you, as they seem determined to have their way. Do not interfere with the process. Allow your creative energy to emerge, and it will bring you many possible ideas. Tonight: Go along with a difficult loved one's wishes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ You might feel as if you are being pressured. You'll be coming from a grounded place, but you could be wondering about others. Focus on one task at a time. You will be able to make it through any emotional storm that heads your way. Tonight: Consider heading home early.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Your playful attitude will create a lot of positive changes. Above all, it will make you more approachable. Fun plans could emerge as a result. If you are single, a romantic interest suddenly might appear. Tonight: Act as if it were the weekend.

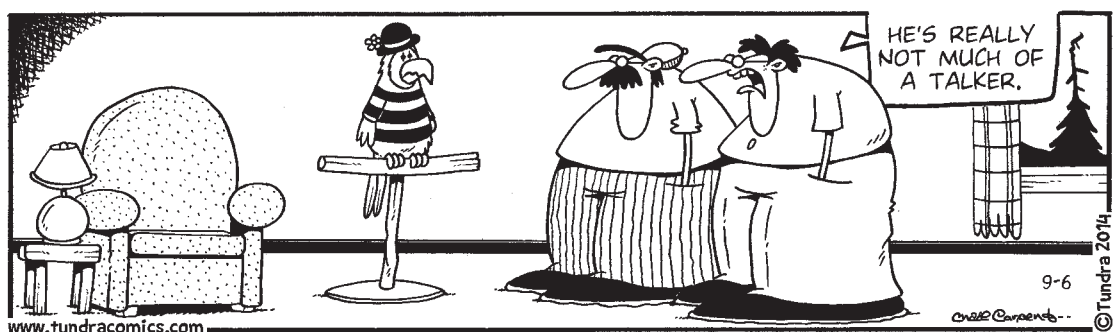

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You might want to rethink a personal matter that comes to the forefront. A discussion with a friend will help you bypass a stressful situation and zero in on a solution. Be careful with monetary commitments, as everything is subject to change. Tonight: Mosey on home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ If what you say is not getting through to someone, use your logic and try a different approach. You might need to speak in simpler terms. Adapt to last-minute changes that pop up from out of the blue. Screen calls if you find yourself feeling overloaded. Tonight: Make it easy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Your ideas might fall flat right now. Be concerned about a money matter, but try not to make any decisions or commitments right now, as the results might not be as beneficial as you would like. Refuse to take any risks. Tonight: Make it your treat.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ The Full Moon in your sign points to your energy. Many people could be stressed out and asking for your help. Listen to feedback from a friend or loved one. Be willing to pitch in. A little extra effort will make all the difference. Tonight: All eyes turn to you.

Notice of Public Hearing
The Gray County Commissioners Court will conduct a regular meeting on September 16, 2014 to consider and take action on (1) the application of Pampa Energy Center LLC for designation of certain property located in Gray County as a Reinvestment Zone eligible for property tax abatement under Chapter 312 of the Texas Tax Code.

Legals / Public Notice

The real property designated by Pampa Energy Center LLC is intended for use as an industrial park, manufacturing facilities, research facilities, distribution centers, regional service facilities, regional entertainment facilities, renewable energy resources and other basic industrial uses, and consists of the following: Sections 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 177, 178, 179 and 180, Block 3, I&GN RR Co. Survey, Gray County, Texas; and that part of Sections 181, 182, 183 and 184, Block 3, I&GN RR Co. Survey, located in Gray County, Texas.

In determining whether to designate the Reinvestment Zone, the Commissioners Court will consider whether such designation would contribute to the retention or expansion of primary employment or would attract major investment in the Zone that would benefit the land to be included in the Zone and would contribute to the economic development of the County.

If created, the real property would become "Pampa Energy Center Reinvestment Zone." The public hearing will take place at 9:00 am on September 16, 2014, at the Commissioners' Courtroom of Gray County, Texas, 205 N. Russell, Pampa, Texas 79065.

All interested persons may appear and present testimony regarding designation of the Reinvestment Zone. If further information is needed, please contact the office of the County Judge, Gray County, Texas, 205 N. Russell, Pampa, Texas 79065: (806) 669-8007. G-63 Spt. 6, 2014

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I'm in desperate need of help. I have been with my girlfriend for four years. With every long-term relationship, there are bound to be issues. I haven't felt loved by her in a long time, and I think I have fallen out of love with her. I can't even tell her that I love her anymore because I don't want to lie.

When we make love, it's dull and boring. I want to feel the way I used to about her. When I was near her, my hairs used to stand up, my heart would race, my body would quiver and I would never want to let her go. How can I feel that way about her again? — WANTS THAT OLD FEELING

DEAR WANTS: The problem with relationships is that they can only be brand-new once. With the passage of time, to some extent the excitement fades. That's where the "work" comes in.

Longtime couples must make an effort to keep their relationship fresh and exciting. This means introducing spontaneity and new experiences to each other.

You say you haven't felt loved by her in a long time. My advice would be to talk to her about it. Because you can't bring yourself to tell her you love her, has it occurred to you that she might feel as though she has been emotionally abandoned by you?

If you want that old feeling back, you and your lady will need to resume communication on a meaningful level. It's not always easy, but honesty can revive a relationship that's wilting.

DEAR ABBY: I live with my longtime boyfriend in a house he owns. We're five hours away from my parents and siblings and the town in which I grew up. It's a beautiful house with lots of land, and I can imagine raising a family here. However, I always thought that if I had children, I'd live close to the rest of my family. I would want my parents nearby so they could lend a hand, and I want my kids to have a close relationship with their grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins.

My boyfriend is open to the idea of selling the house, but I'm not sure I would want him to. What should I do? I love this house, but how can I start a family so far from my own? — LOOKING AHEAD IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR LOOKING AHEAD: Before you make any decisions, discuss this with your parents and see if their vision of grandpar-enthood is similar to your fantasy. Take into consideration how close they are to your siblings and how involved they are in each other's lives. Be sure that the kind of extended family relationship you envision is realistic.

If everyone is on board, then you and your boyfriend should talk about what relocating will mean in terms of not only selling this house, but also the impact it might have on your ability to earn a living. This property may be terrific, but if it cannot offer you the lifestyle you wish for, then you would be better served to move. But only you can decide that.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.
