Panhandle area to see more snow this week

By LINDSEY TOMASCHIK LKTomaschik@thepampanews.com

The Texas Panhandle is keeping its inhabitants on their toes this week.

After experiencing temperatures Monday afternoon that reached 70 degrees, a chance of snow appeared on the forecast for the middle of the week.

Nicholas Fenner with the National Weather Service said that as of Monday morning, Pampa had a 30 percent chance of precipitation starting after noon on Wednesday. This percentage will jump to about 50 percent going into Wednesday evening.

Some snowfall could continue Thursday morning, but Fenner said that Thursday will mainly be the system clearing up.

As far as the type of precipitation we may see, he said that Wednesday afternoon could be a wintry mix, but once the weather cools

Texas' organ, tissue donor program tops 7M registrants

SUBMITTED BY TEXAS DPS

AUSTIN - In 2014 the Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) recorded approximately 1.4 million new registrants to the Glenda P. Dawson Donate Life Texas Registry, boosting the total registry to more than seven million individuals. The registry is the state database of individuals who have officially indicated their decisions to donate organs and tissue to benefit thousands of people currently awaiting transplants. "Since the program's inception, the DPS driver license system has played a critical role in the registry process, and DPS is proud to have helped millions of Texans join the Donate Life registry," said DPS Director Steven McCraw. "Every person who selflessly elects to register as a donor has the potential to save another individual's life." "The Texas Department of Public Safety staff are essential to the Donate Life Texas organ, eye and tissue donor registry. Of the seven million Texans now registered, 98 percent of them joined the registry by saying yes to donation while applying for a state ID or driver license," said Patricia Niles, Donate Life Texas Board Chair. "Those who register give the precious gift of hope to the thousands who await lifesaving transplants. I commend the DPS for helping to make donor registration in Texas convenient as well as heroic." The 79th Texas Legislature created the registry in 2005, and in recent years, legislation has helped streamline the registration process, and additional DPS training has helped increase participation. Since the creation of the registry, more than 6.8 million DPS customers have chosen to become possible donors during the driver license and identification card application, renewal and duplicate processes. Residents can register at their local DPS office when applying for or renewing a driver license or identification card, or they can enroll online at www.donatelifetexas.org or www.donevidatexas.org. Two state agencies - DPS and the Texas Department of Motor Vehicles - and three organ and tissue recovery agencies - LifeGift,

ONE YEAR

By JOHN LEE jclee@thepampanews.com

Big changes are coming for drivers, auto-repair businesses and the State of Texas alike.

As of March 1, drivers will not able to register their vehicle without getting it inspected first.

While this sounds routine already, for drivers whose registration and inspection stickers expire in different months, it may sound confusing.

But it's actually very simple, if both required tags expire after March 1.

Let's say your inspection sticker expires on April 1 and your registration expires on May 1. Once you get your vehicle inspected and receive a certificate. Take the certificate to renew your registration and you will receive one tag that is both your inspection and your registration.

"It kind of makes everyone get their inspection sticker and their car registered," Jessalyn Abad of Robert's Quality Auto Service said. "So no one is driving without registration or inspection stickers."

Drivers will only be charged $7 at the shop, but will be charged the other $7.50 when they pick up their tags. This is meant to save the State of Texas the cost of producing the inspection stickers and shop owners the cost of ordering the stickers.

"There won't be no sticker in their window, they are combined now. It saves us money is right now if we buy books of inspection stickers it costs us money," Robert Chavarria of Robert's Quality

Auto Service said.

"But we don't have to do that anymore, cause we don't have to buy the stickers in advance anymore. We don't get our money until we sell that inspection sticker."

Where it creates a dilemma are the drivers whose inspection stickers expire before March 1, but their registration expires after the date.

"It's really a waste right now cause none of the inspections are going to be any good," Chavarria said. "If they did that inspection in January and February and in March their tags expired, they can't get their registration until they come back over here and get the certificate from the inspection of their vehicle."

It may create an inconvenience for drivers now, but after the first year, it will be a lot easier.

Drivers are urged to keep their certificate when they get their vehicles inspected after March 1, because that certificate is the key to getting their registration stickers.

The State of Texas offers this guide for drivers:

"Step 1: From March 1, 2015 through February 29, 2016. You may renew your registration if your vehicle has a current, passing inspection. However, if your inspection and registration stickers both expire in the same month your vehicle will need to pass inspection prior to registration renewal. To find your nearest inspection station, please visit the Texas Department of Public Safety's (DPS)

Prairie Plains Perspective Take your pick; a convict, or a conscript

In 1974, at the close of the Vietnam War, was the last year the United States had through such, coming of draftable age the summer of 1967. Enrolled in college, it wasn't two seconds after my 19th birthday I received a letter from the Selective Service System. With a chill up my spine and hackles rising I read 'You are hereby ordered to present yourself for preliminary armed forces physical examination blah, blah, blah. Failure to do so is a federal crime punishable by blah, blah, blah.'

Having never liked Greyhound Bus Company since...ahem...I passed that preliminary armed forces physical exam and was declared 1A fit for armed services duty. Next step on learning how to salute would be the "Greetings" letter, but drafted I was not. Participating in the first armed forces draft lottery, I was luckily blessed with No. 324. Ask me what happened to my grade point average... Oh, just so you know... In case of a national emergency young men turning 18 today still must register with the Selective Service. Failure to do so can bring about a fine of up to $250,000!

There are thirty countries around the world that age 18; 30 percent of in lieu of drafts have military conscription laws. Conscription occurs when a young man or woman turns 18, they must report per the law for an automatic stint, usually a minimum of two years, in their particular country's armed forces. Mexico, Norway, Philippines, Israel, Russia, Sweden, Brazil and Syria, just to name a few, have mandatory conscription laws.

My former wife's section chief at M.D. Anderson is a native Syrian, actually a Syrian Christian. Her son was born here in America and holds dual Syrian and American citizenship. When he turned 18, his mother and father would not let him travel back to Syria with them to see relatives because if they had, once his passport was presented Syrian authorities would have snatched him for conscription.

Friends of mine from Mexico City, when their twin sons turned 18 they moved the young men (dual citizenships as well) to San Antonio to live with a relative in order to escape Mexico's conscription service. Rather unpatriotic, yes, but who in their right mind wants their son or daughter to die fighting drug cartels, especially so when the soldier next to you has a very high probability of being a drug cartel member. Syria and Mexico, mind you, are experiencing exceptional problems.

Where you wonder am I going with this Selective Service, draft and military conscription business? America is malaised with wayward teenage men and women who for whatever reasoning or circumstance fail to become contributing members of society, winding up in stead on the wrong side of the law.

Courtesy a recent article in HuffPost: By Black males, 26 percent of Hispanic males and 22 percent of White males have been arrested. By age 23; 49 percent of Black males, 44 percent of Hispanic males and 38 percent of White males have been arrested. The prevalence of arrests increased for females as well, representing in or around half the percentages of three ethnicities of men, but never the less, still a problem.

The other morn a friend and I were commiserating over our respective cups of coffee, two old farts curing the world's ills, when he uttered words that made perfect sense. With the above crime statistics in mind, why not petition Congress to reinstitute the Draft for 18-25 year olds? Why sure, there is always the possibility a war could break out, if so, that national emergency thing would kick in. Besides, 9/11 was not cause enough to bring back the Draft, so the term 'war' is up for definition...

Mandatory armed forces conscription or a draft would give young men and women the direction their lives need. Accountability, discipline and respect for their fellow humankind would be gleaned. A trade would be learned, or a career started. Their housing and healthcare needs would be met. What about pacifists, anti-war types or those with religious convictions preventing military service among the 18-25 the age group? Not a problem. Congress can also institute another Works Progress Administration or Civilian Conservation Corps with mandatory participation. Worked during the Great Depression, it could work again. Succinctly, 18-25 year olds like those highlighted in the HuffPost would be off the streets and on their way as contributing members of society, rather than on their way as a crime statistic.

Texas prison program aims to produce business-savvy inmates

CLEVELAND, (AP)chow hall, Richard Chavez tences and creating incentive Jr. outlines his past: violent felon, former gang member, the fourth member of his family to go to prison. Then his future: owner of a mobile counseling youth service that goes where the troubled kids in 2004, the program has are.

Arching a tattooed eyebrow, Chavez credits an innovative program run out of the Cleveland Correctional Facility, about 50 miles northeast of Houston, with helping him develop the skills needed to run a business - from character-building and how to carry himself to writing a business plan and finding financing.

"Man, my life was just selfishness," says Chavez, who is serving an eight-year sentence for aggravated assault. "That's all my life was. I had a daughter, a beautiful little girl, and I couldn't do it. I wasn't the father I needed to be. I joined a gang. And, vou know, it hurts my heart, to say that. But that was comfortable for me. That was life.'

The Prison Entrepreneurship Program (PEP) is based on a philosophy that making inmates such as Chavez business savvy will reduce the likelihood that they will end up back in prison. It emphasizes reforming behavior while also working on a broader goal of reducing the prison population.

With 1.5 million inmates, the U.S. has the world's largest prison population. Costs are soaring at the federal and state levels.

In Texas, it costs about $18,200 a year for each of the 150,000 inmates in a state prison

Texas prison costs, including trim-- Standing in a prison ming mandatory federal senprograms for model inmates. PEP tackles the problem from a different perspective: What happens when inmates are released? Since it began operating graduated more than 1,100 students. About 165 have opened businesses, and at least two are grossing more than $1 million. Within 90 days of their release, nearly all the ex-inmates had found jobs. This year, the program is looking to expand to a prison near Dallas.

But that's not the only way to measure success. PEP's graduates have a recidivism rate of less than 7 percent, compared with 23 percent of the overall prison population in Texas

The cost to the state: nothing. Operating on about $2 million from private donations, PEP uses a mix of permanent staff and volunteers, including Texas business leaders.

In Washington, the Senate's No. 2 Republican, John Cornyn of Texas, has introduced legislation, sponsored with Sen. Sheldon Whitehouse, D-R.I., that would require the federal Bureau of Prisons to offer more such programs to inmates. After a visit last year to PEP's Houston office, Cornyn called it as a model worth replicating.

All inmates within the Texas state prison system who have less than four years to serve and were not convicted of a sex crime are eligible for the program. Those who apply face a rigorous interview process. If selected, the inmates are transferred to the Cleveland facility.

In time, inmates essentially will become full-time business students. They will go through course work that is sufficiently demanding that, last year, Baylor University's Hankamer School of Business began awarding a certificate of entrepreneurship to each graduate. Inmates learn how to finance a business, how to market products and how to sell themselves and their stories.

how to get along, and, in one another. some cases, learn how to use a computer. With participants from a few years to more than 20, tech skills vary greatly.

To break down prison focusing on business skills. cliques and lingering negativity, the program co-opts the culture. The class gives itself a nickname — "The Transcendent 22," for example. They, the staff, and the regular volunteers also get "sweet names." Bert Smith, CEO of the Houston-based program, is "Chocolate Truffles." Some of the classmates are "Humpty Dumpty," "Pringles" and "Instant Potatoes.'

Arturo Martinez Jr. sweet name "Selena Gomez"- was convicted of aggravated assault and escape charges. He got his GED while in prison, and "I thought I was set," the 27-year-old said.

was admitted to PEP.

The classes forced him to look internally and focus on the flaws in his personality. This was nothing like memorizing for the GED.

He was critiqued by his peers. Classmates told him they liked him, but they also said they found him manipulative and self-centered. "You start finding things out about yourself you didn't know,' he said.

There are also exercises designed to help inmates put their life in perspective.

On a day when volunteers visit the program, inmates in dark blue jumpsuits and business leaders dressed for work stand on one side of the room, behind a blue line. Smith or another PEP leader reads out a series of personal characteristics such as, "you were raised by a single parent" or "you did drugs."

For each one that applies, participants step toward the line. By the end of the exercise, inmates and business leaders may stand shoulder to shoulder, close to the line. The idea is to dissuade them of the idea that who they are can prevent them from succeeding in business.

Not everything is quite this serious.

There are musical interludes. One day, a DJ plays the "The Chicken Dance" and Smith playfully orders inmates to find a business volunteer to dance with. They do, locking arms and twirling But not before they learn in a circle while clucking at "Heyyyy," inmates shout. After a comfort level is esserving sentences that range tablished and computer skills are locked in, the program intensifies to 40 hours a week, Paired with a volunteer, inmates work to develop a business idea, determine pricing, financing and realistic growth rates. There are lessons on business jargon, how to sell, the importance of a five-vear projection and so on. The process culminates with a two-day business plan contest, where inmates pitch their ideas to volunteer judges. One inmate is selected the class winner.

This is how Chavez, "Sweet Sugar," decided to become a youth counseling entrepreneur.

PEP volunteers encouraged him to make his own story part of his pitch. They But he wanted more and helped him find research that showed youth counseling was a potential growth industry in the Houston area. (None of the inmates can use the Internet, so volunteers often provide market data.) Making himself mobile, going to wherever the kids need counseling, was Chavez's tweak

"Off the Streets Youth Counseling" was born.

A charismatic speaker, Chavez also has a distinct look. In a Texas prison system filled with tattoos, his ink stands out because it stretches across the hairline of his shaved head and all the way down his neck and shoulders. There are tattoos over each eyebrow and all over his arms.

He joined a gang in prison, which gave him friends and protection. Eventually, he said, he thought about his young daughter and pushed himself to change.

The decision wasn't easy. Quitting, he said, meant enduring a brutal beating by former gang members. The threat only eased after he was put in solitary.

After time in a lockup, Chavez saw one of PEP's postcards. He decided to apply. Once he got in and transferred to the Cleveland prison, the structure and the course work made sense to him right away. The mix of discipline and humor was something he had lacked.

His story, he thought, could be an asset. "I've realized I have to give that away," he said. "It's not meant for me to keep. It's meant for me to tell."

Now Chavez has a business plan. His final proposal seeks about $50,000 in funding. He wants to open in 2020, perhaps sooner if he is paroled.

Entrepreneurship programs such as PEP are especially useful because they equip inmates with a range of skills, said Lois Davis a senior researcher at the RAND Corporation who has studied prison education programs and recidivism. "It's teaching them not only hard concrete skills on the business side of things, but also soft skills that are important."

On graduation day, Cedric Hornbuckle, who completed the PEP program while finishing a term for drug trafficking, tells the current class, "Business is good. This program gave me discipline I absolutely needed."

His business, Moved by Love Moving, based in Houston, is now transitioning into trucking. It also employs a handful of program graduates.

Another PEP alumnus, Charles Hearne, who now works for the organization, reminds the graduates that they will have a network to rely on, including transitional housing in Houston and Dallas, and post-release courses to continue their business education.

Family members watch from rows of folding chairs inside the cavernous prison gymnasium. Small children crawl up and down on chairs, giggling and crying. At the back of the room, there are buffet tables of gourmet cupcakes, high-end snacks and sandwiches.

Super matchup: Seahawks face Patriots for NFL championship

(AP) — For Russell Wilson's Seattle Seahawks to become the first team in a decade to win consecutive Super Bowls, they'll have to beat the most recent group to do it, Tom Brady's New England Patriots.

In an enticing matchup pitting the defending champions against the dominant NFL franchise of the 2000s, the NFC's Seahawks (14-4) will face the AFC's Patriots (14-4) in the title game at Glendale, Arizona, in two weeks.

New England reached its eighth Super Bowl, equaling the Dallas Cowboys and Pittsburgh Steelers for most in league history. It's the sixth time quarterback Brady and coach Bill Belichick made it in the past 14 years; they won trophies after the 2001, 2003 and 2004 seasons.

But they lost in their past two appearances, after the 2007 and 2011 seasons, both times against Eli Manning and the New York Giants.

Some Las Vegas sports books had the Seahawks — heading to the franchise's third Super Bowl — as 1-point favorites, while others made the game a pick 'em.

A year ago, Seattle beat Peyton Manning and the Denver Broncos 43-8 in the big game. In nearly a half-century of Super Bowls — this will be the 49th — there's never been so long a stretch without a repeat champion.

But with coach Pete Carroll, Belichick's predecessor with the Patriots, and general manager John Schneider in charge, Seattle has the makings of a dynasty, thanks to cool-as-can-be Wilson, cornerback Richard Sherman and the first defense since the 1985-86 Chicago Bears to give up the fewest points and fewest yards two seasons in a row.

Among the on-field story lines that will be discussed and dissected from now until Feb. 1:

— how Seattle's defense will try to control Brady, impossible-to-tackle tight end Rob Gronkowski and the rest of New England's versatile offense;

— whether Sherman, who has an interception in both of Seattle's playoff games this season, is OK after injuring his left elbow late Sunday;

— whether Wilson and his unheralded receivers, shut down for most of Sunday, will be able to bounce back against noted defensive mind Belichick and New England's own shutdown cornerback, Darrelle Revis, and former Seahawks defensive back Brandon Browner;

— what wrinkles might Belichick and Carroll and their staffs dream up.

Wilson set aside four interceptions and a 16-point deficit to lead the Seahawks past the Green Bay Packers 28-22 in overtime in the NFC championship game Sunday, Seattle's eighth straight victory.

No team had ever won a conference title game after trailing by more than 15 points until Wilson helped produce two touchdowns in a 44-second span late in the fourth quarter, then threw a 35-yard TD pass to Jermaine Kearse on the first drive of OT.

There were all sorts of key moments in the topsyturvy game, including punter Jon Ryan's touchdown pass on a fake field goal for Seattle's first points, and a successful onside kick for the Seahawks after Green Bay's Brandon Bostick failed to hold onto the football. "Everybody thought we were out of this game," said Wilson, a third-year quarterback who also was drafted by a Major League Baseball team.

"You just trust the experience. You trust the guys you have around you."

A week ago, the Patriots became the first team to erase two holes of at least 14 points in a postseason game, but they needed no such comeback Sunday night, completely outclassing the Indianapolis Colts 45-7 for the AFC title.

Brady threw a trio of TD passes — including one to left tackle Nate Solder, in the latest bit of trickery from Belichick — and burly running back LeGarrette Blount gained 148 yards on 30 carries and scored three times.

Brady and Belichick are the first QB and first coach with six Super Bowl berths; Belichick's 21 postseason victories are the most for a coach.

"It's hard to compare, year to year. I think every situation's different. We've had a lot of good teams in the past," the 37-year-old Brady said.

"This one is going to have to win a very important game to kind of leave our legacy."

IRVING (AP) — The question of DeMarco Murray and Dez Bryant staying in Dallas could end up a tough choice between the NFL rushing leader or the league's highest-scoring receiver. Cowboys owner Jerry Jones seems to be leaning the fiscally responsible way. "Let me put it like this: It's going to be a challenge," Jones said of re-signing both of Dallas' biggest potential free agents. "But is it — you use the word 'financially reasonable' — no. Is it possible? Yes.' There was a time in Jones' quarter century of owning the Cowboys that anything was possible with his biggest stars, even in the salary-cap era. This isn't the same Jones, who showed it last year by releasing franchise sacks leader DeMarcus Ware to clear cap space even though the Cowboys didn't have anyone close to such a dynamic pass rusher. "If you just look at it from the standpoint of dollars and cents, it probably doesn't look reasonable," Jones said Thursday when he announced new contracts for coach Jason Garrett, defensive coordinator Rod Marinelli and newly promoted offensive coordinator Scott Linehan. "At the end of the day, you do realize it's going to be costly to have both those players." Bryant led the NFL with 16 touchdowns receiving, and has the most in the league going back to 2011. His touchdown total has increased every season. Murray was the league's runaway leader with 1,845 yards rushing and broke alltime NFL rushing leader Emmitt Smith's franchise record from 1995. He played with a broken hand to complete a full season for the first time in his four-year career.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, Jan. 21, 2015:

This year your playfulness might need to subside a bit, as unexpected events and potential misunderstandings become a possibility. Be willing to go the extra mile. Try to let go of angry words based on false premises. If you are single, you'll offer your friendship to many different people. However, your gestures sometimes might be taken as meaning more. You easily could ger so. A discussion is inevitable. meet someone who knocks your Be direct in your dealings with a socks off in the next 12 months. If child or new friend. Coy games will you are attached, the two of you might want to open up to a new beginning together. Use caution with joint finances. AQUARIUS is loyal but critical.

★★★ Clearly, you could be out of sync with your ruler, Mercury, going retrograde today. A question seems to surround a matter involving your day-to-day life, so try to be clear about what your expectations are. Trust your instincts. Tonight: Swap ideas with a good friend. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ You might be upset to discover that something you had considered to be a given is no lonfall apart, as they won't be tolerated. Tonight: Make the most out of the evening.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ You could feel focused, but you quickly will discover how off communication seems to be. Be careful, as a misunderstanding is likely to take place. Stay on track, and understand that others simply might not be getting the message. Tonight: Where the action is.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★ You might feel as if you are doing the right thing by assuming the lead. However, you quickly could find out otherwise. Try to avoid getting stuck in the position of feeling as if you are the only one who is right. Let others have a say. Tonight: Paint the town red.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★ Do your best to stay centered. How you deal with others could change if you would just relax. You will see that there is a difference between what your words mean to you and how they are interpreted by others. Try to bridge this gap. Tonight: Near good mu-SiC

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

 $\star \star \star \star$ A partner could be touchy right now. Your words might ruffle this person's feathers if you are not careful. Discuss what you need to do in order to advance a key project. Be willing to reiterate the same statement several times, if need be. Tonight: A talk could be lengthy

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

 $\star\star\star\star$ Your tone and expression will define how your words are taken. Being authentic will be the key to effectively conveying your message. A friend might redefine what he or she thinks your friendship is about. You might need to clarify. Tonight: Go along with a suggestion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Stay centered when The Stars Show the Kind of Day dealing with others, especially family members. You simply might not be on the same page as someone else. Do your best to clarify and explain exactly what you are thinking. Know that misunderstandings run rampant today. Tonight: Happy to be home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You could be somewhat aggravated with a close neighbor, friend or family member. This person has the ability to turn your life upside down. Try to look at the situation from his or her point of view. Walk in someone else's shoes for once. Tonight: Treat a pal to munchies.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Deal with a financial matter immediately. Know what you want, and have your best interests in mind. Do not undermine yourself by letting a comment get the best of you. Misunderstandings just seem to happen. Tonight: Be receptive to someone else's request. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★★ You are full of confidence, and you know what you need to do. Opportunities seem to come from a partner or someone close to you. Use caution when dealing with risks and children. Allow your creativity to color plans. Tonight: Whatever knocks your socks off.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★ Know when to pull back and say little. Misunderstandings could start appearing around a domestic matter and/or partnership. Be willing to explain yourself more than once, and try using different words; clearly someone is not hearing you. Tonight: Get a good night's sleep.
