Heritage Room prepares for new displays

By LINDSEY TOMASCHIK
 LKTomaschik@thepampanews.com

The Pampa ISD Heritage Room has some new exhibits coming during the months of April and May.

When the room opened, the committee noted that their goal is to have exhibits and displays rotating so the room is always changing. The room has been popular with the community thus far, especially with class reunions that are able to come in, see their class pictures and scan the yearbooks from their respective high school years.

For the month of April, The large display case outside the Heritage Room in the administration building lobby will feature the state championship Lady Harvester track teams from the years of 1986 and 1988.

The committee in charge of the room has collected donations and loaned items such as trophies and plaques from the state championships. Coaches from those championship teams have also donated pictures. Coach Gary Cornelsen put together photo albums that he donated to be used for the display as well.

Committee member Dick Dunham said the committee has been approached a few times with people who either have items they can loan or donate or people who know someone who has items that would be great for displays.

From 3 to 6 p.m. on Tuesday, April 7, the committee in charge of the room will be at the administration building for those interested in loaning or donating items to be put on display in the room.

About a month ago the Pampa Soccer Association had one of their sheds robbed.

Michael Erickson is the referee coordinator and vice president of the non-profit organization and he said it was mainly little stuff that was stolen.

"They didn't take our mowers, which we are very grateful for, but they took little stuff we need to line the fields, take care of the fields and be able to let the kids play," Erickson said. "About one-thousand dollars worth of items were stolen. That makes our work tougher to do our job and provide the

Troop 5500 collects donations for Sgt. Gass

Girl Scout Troop 5500 held a meeting on Tuesday evening, and donated $1,000 from their cookie sales and additional donations to Sgt. Houston Gass, his wife Jessica and his three children, Emma, Austin and Harrison. The Troop, led by Patty Davis and Pamela LaBombard, are pictured in no particular order: Regina Davis, Veronica Davis, Piper LaBombard, Eliana Stokes, Hannah Phelps, Jessica Arter, Lella McPherson and Kate Orr.

Girl Scout Troop 5500 worked hard selling cookies this year with the additional goal of raising money to benefit Sgt. Houston Gass. They collected donations for their cause while selling cookies, and just from donations alone, they were able to collect $420.

This year, Troop 5500 sold more than $2,600 in cookies, and they receive a portion of these sales to go toward their troop. The decision was made to take part of their profits and add it to the $420 in donations to give Sgt. Gass and his family $1,000.

The Troop, led by Patty Davis and Pamela LaBombard, held a meeting on Tuesday evening and invited Sgt. Gass and his family to attend. When they arrived to the meeting, the girls greeted the Gass family with a giant get well card and presented him with the check for $1,000.

A grateful Sgt. Gass thanked the Troop for their generous donation and explained what the funds go toward. He told them that his trips to Lubbock for treatment, doctor's appointments and additional procedures come out of pocket, and donations help him pay for hotel rooms, food, gas for the trip and other out of pocket expenses.

Troop 5500 also gave the Gass family two large boxes filled with boxes of Girl Scout cookies to come home.

who are interested in donating or loaning items to be put on display. This could be anything from an old letterman jacket to photos, medals, awards and other memorabilia. Donation and loan items are not limited to athletics. The room has displays set up for academics and other extracurriculars as well.

In May, The display case outside the room will be switched out to feature academics. Dunham said they are still working out the specifics of what will be on display, but the committee has collected some items to be featured, including a Pampa High School diploma from the 1920s. They also plan to have old teacher contracts, Eugene Anderson scholarship recipient photos and more on display for the month.

As for the room itself, Dunham said the committee has been working diligently to get the film from the five boys' PHS state championship winning games. After all the films have been acquired, Dunham said they plan to have them converted into digital form to be played on the big screens in the room. They have three of the five right now, and are excited about the progress thus far.

The Pampa ISD Heritage Room will continue to rotate displays to feature class reunions that will take place throughout the summer as well.

Dunham said so far there are four reunions scheduled:

- The PHS class of 1955 will hold a reunion on June

5 and 6 and will visit the heritage room from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. on June 5.

- The class of 1985 will hold its reunion from June 12-13.

- The class of 1975 will hold a reunion from June 19-20.

- The class of 1960 will hold its reunion homecoming weekend, Sept. 9-12.

The games for the league start on Saturday, March 28. They are looking to community members and businesses for help.

"Any business or people that donate to recoup any of our losses would be wonderful," Erickson said. "They can also donate cash, they don't have to donate items. It's just up-setting when people take things from an organization that is trying to help kids out."

Anyone interested in helping out the association can go to their Facebook page: Pampa Soccer Association or their website: Pampasoccer.org. Erickson said the treasurer Marisol Lacher would be the best person to contact. Her information can be found on either site.

The following are a list of items stolen should anyone wish to donate specific items to the association.

- A gas powered weed eater.
- Two to five gallon plastic gas containers.
- A battery powered weed eater.
- The weed eater battery and charger.
- A 30-gallon trash container.
- 200-ft. field tape measure.
- Many miscellaneous tools, wrenches, screwdrivers, etc.
- A small sledge hammer.
- Some new Nelson sprinkler heads and parts.
- A battery charger.
- A small air compressor.
- Zipties.
- One paint striper to mark fields.

Benefits from historians' account of Caprock Country to benefit PCC

SUBMITTED

MIAMI — The recently renovated Miami Community Center will receive proceeds from the sale of Caprock Country: Last Frontier of Texas, "a collection of stories" account of Roberts County and the eastern Texas Panhandle written by Miami historian Carl Williamson and his son, Jon.

Legendary energy entrepreneur T. Boone Pickens, who owns the 68,000-acre Mesa Vista Ranch in Roberts County, underwrote the rich historical account. The sale proceeds will be donated to the Miami Community Center to support operation of the facility.

The authors are fifth and fourth generation Texans, both of whom lived in the Texas Panhandle during their formative years. Carl's parents moved to the Panhandle around 1900 from Henrieta, to help pioneer dry land wheat farming in Roberts County, east of the Panhandle. Carl and Jon share a keen interest in the regions' history. The Miami-born Carl Williamson is retired from a 40-year career in the aerospace industry, and Jon is Associate Dean at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School in Dallas.

The book, published by Amarillo-based Whitney Russell Printers (December 2014), is the first comprehensive history of the population-sparse Eastern Texas Panhandle (it has a population density of less than one person per square mile), full of grassroot tales of the land, its early explorers, cross-country travelers, hard-working settlers, and their modern counterparts collected during a 20-year period.

"We spent the time recovering stories about Indians, explorers, military men, buffalo hunters and early pioneers," Carl Williamson says. "We sought to fill in the history of this sparsely settled and little documented section of the Panhandle, truly the last frontier of Texas."

Important historical figures aren't always people. The Williamsons explore both human and geological forces in the Panhandle's history. For example, Teepee City Tree near present day Matador, Texas, was a crucial landmark during the region's buffalo hunting heyday between 1874 and 1879. The giant cottonwood tree, on the buffalo north-south migration route, provided shade from the summer sun and the spring-fed pools around it offered water for hunters and waters. The hunters it drew provided safety in numbers from the still-marauding Plains Indians. At one point, its shade even was home to a tent saloon.

The Williamsons have collaborated on seven other Texas Panhandle-related books.

AgriLife Extension hires new family and consumer sciences agent in Ochiltree County

SUBMITTED

PERRYTON — Amy Griffin has been hired as the new Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service family and consumer sciences agent for Ochiltree County, according to Brandon Dukes, AgriLife Extension district administrator in Amarillo.

Amy Griffin has been hired as the new Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service family and consumer sciences agent for Ochiltree County. (Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service photo by Kay Ledbetter)

Griffin, of Cedar Lane, began March 23 and will spend the first month in the First Step training program in Hemphill County, Dukes said.

"Amy brings a tremendous amount of enthusiasm to Ochiltree County," he said. "I am excited to see her begin working with youth and adults to build a strong, well-rounded AgriLife Extension program there."

Griffin earned her bachelor's degree in family and consumer sciences from Sam Houston State University.

She previously worked for the City of Huntsville Main Street Program as an intern and at the Huntsville Family YMCA, which is where she said she made the decision to become an AgriLife Extension agent.

"Growing up, I didn't really know my county agent, but while I was working at the YMCA, we had the local FCS agent come out and talk and teach some programs," Griffin said. "I knew then that is what I wanted to do, so I changed my major."

She said she wants to be out in public, teaching youth and adults, and providing them well-rounded programs.

"I'm especially excited to try to build the adult education program in Ochiltree County," Griffin said.

Tales from the Final Frontier

■ The art of creating an awesome man-cave.

So up until the middle of last year, when our two-bedroom house was able to be advertised with no vacancy due to the arrival of my first-born, I had a man-cave. It wasn't much, it had an old boxed-TV with some vintage consoles hooked up and posters and sports and nerdy knick-knacks. So the question must be asked, what is there to making an awesome man-cave?

several cards I really like that can go up there. Unfortunately most rooms are only four walls, so it would be very difficult to fit all this stuff on the wall. You have to have a shelf for action figures right? I recommend getting a medium-sized shelf so you don't cover all that stuff you just threw on the wall. Plus medium-sized shelves are easier to manage in a room, regardless of room space, rather than a large book shelf that becomes a three-dimension section of your wall. Also for a man-cave a TV is important. Now if you can fit, and afford a large 100-plus-inch TV to fit in your space that's great. But it doesn't hurt to be modest and have a 32-inch TV. If you are going to hook it up to video games, I recommend a skinny entertainment center, if just for sports, mount that sucker on the wall. Now many guys would say having a separate mini-fridge for beverages is key to establishing the man-cave. I disagree, how many beverages does a mini-fridge really hold? If you are having your core group of probably four guys over, you need more space for all of the beverages. So keep it in the main refrigerator of the house. Besides you have to come out and let your wife know you're alive once in a while. Having epic fun in an awesome man-cave can also make a wife resentful, so give your wife a kiss on the way back in. Some also say another man-cave "essential" is a table. This also comes down to the interests of you and your blood brothers. My friends and I really enjoy creating rivalries on "Mario Kart" and beating each other up on "Super Smash Brothers." Now it probably wouldn't hurt to store a fold out table and folding chairs somewhere, just in case you and the guys want to play cards. What kind of furniture should you put in this awesome lounge you created? I would say a bro-seat (that's a two seated loveseat when placed in a man-cave). I only say that because depending on your space in the room, a bro-seat may be the best option. But if you frequently have more than two guests, a couch may actually be best. So let's recap. On the wall, depending on interests, game posters or sports-related stuff may be the best for the wall. A mounted TV is great only if you aren't going to attach game consoles to it (nobody likes wires). Shelves are your best friends for the books you read and all of your nerdy/sporty knick-knacks. No need for a fridge of any size, and tables only if you're the board/card game type. And finally, use a bro-seat unless your crew is over often. Send me what you think makes the ultimate man-cave. Who knows? We may feature it in the paper.

Gentrify!

No matter what you do, modern liberals will tell you you're wrong. For decades, liberals complained that American society is segregated because rich, white people don't want to live in ethnically mixed neighborhoods. Sometimes, liberals had a point. From the 1930s to 1960s, as rich white people moved into New York City, urban planner Robert Moses got city bureaucrats to condemn and destroy busy black neighborhoods. The city called the neighborhoods "blighted" and moved many of the poor into rent-subsidized apartment complexes called "projects." Many quickly became slums. Now times have changed. Some rich, white people want to move into poorer, non-white neighborhoods because they like diversity (and cheaper real estate). So today the newcomers are attacked by liberals because they cause "gentrification."

JOHN STOSSEL

the culture. What the left calls "gentrification" is often called "improvement" by people who live there. Another Columbia urban planning professor, Lance Freeman, found to his surprise that gentrification didn't even mean significant displacement of the previous population. In his book "There Goes the 'Hood," Freeman writes, "poor residents and those without a college education were actually less likely to move if they resided in gentrifying neighborhoods."

That's because gentrification often means the neighborhood gets safer and more interesting. That's something the old residents enjoy as much as new ones. The Economist reports that a 2008 study of census data found "no evidence of displacement of low-income non-white households in gentrifying neighborhoods" and found that black incomes "soared" in gentrifying neighborhoods. That doesn't stop some people — often rich, white liberals — from complaining that gentrification destroys the quaintness of the neighborhood. They sound almost like the people who think that the developing world should never be sullied by modern technology. Actually, sometimes the same people make both arguments. In San Francisco, some longtime residents got so angry about Google employees moving in that they surrounded Google employee shuttle buses, waving protest signs. It's a fight between hippies and tech geeks, with the hippies calling for regulations to prevent change. Such regulations have perverse effects, however. They lead to long waits for building permits and subsidies for housing that end up getting used by the well-connected and rich. When regulation makes it harder to build or to alter old buildings, the effect is higher costs and reduced choices, which only makes things harder for the poor. Regulation saves some old things people like, but those people will never even know what new things they missed out on. If nothing like gentrification ever happened in the world, we all still would be living in the same caves our ancestors lived in thousands of years ago. I say, let free people keep transforming the neighborhood.

Movie director Spike Lee, who lives in Brooklyn, said gentrifiers behave almost like "Columbus and kill off the Native Americans." Of course, the new gentrifiers don't actually kill anyone, but because their arrival often leads to rising real estate values, critics complain that they drive poor people out of the neighborhood. Two women in Brooklyn got so angry about it, they pulled out a gun, forced two white people out of an apartment and moved in (they were later arrested). Columbia urban planning professor Stacey Sutton calls gentrification a "manifestation of inequality" that may "fundamentally alter the culture and character of the neighborhood" in ways that hurt the poor. Yet her own school did something worse. Columbia colluded with politicians to use eminent domain law to take pieces of the Harlem neighborhood that surrounds Columbia. In court, the school argued that it had the right to take neighbors' land because it would "benefit West Harlem." Who owns the land is something that ought to be decided not by government but by free people making their own decisions about where they wish to live. When gentrification happens that way, spontaneously, price rises are often accompanied by drops in crime, new job opportunities and better connections to the rest of

If your desire is to make a nerdy one, that's easy. Nerddiness is such a broad interest because there are people who love Dr. Who, Star Wars, Star Trek, comic books, etc. I personally tend to lean toward video games, Star Trek and Star Wars as my big three for nerdy interests. So obviously a vintage video game console, or one that can play old video games has to be in there. Throw a couple of posters up on the wall and you have added the video game flavor. My next primary interest is sports, specifically NFL football and the Denver Broncos. I have a large John Elway motivational poster framed that can go on the wall, as well as

The Washington Post's Obama deniers

It's as if they were waiting, breathlessly. The moment Ted Cruz announced his presidential campaign, the national media proclaimed their horror. He was "brash," a "hardliner," an "uncompromising conservative," they warned. ABC anchor David Muir announced his agenda was the usual No list: "Promising no abortion, no gay marriage, no gun control, no IRS." Apparently, there's no room for hope and change — if you're a conservative. Barack Obama owned the most left-wing voting record during his short tenure in the Senate. But when he announced his presidential campaign in Springfield, Illinois, on Feb. 10, 2007 — arrogantly comparing himself to Abe Lincoln — the networks warmly repeated that he pledged to be a "uniter" that was "promising a more hopeful America." They said he declared it was "time for his generation to end the cynical partisan politics of the baby boomers." How does that look in 2015? National Review's

BRENT BOZELL

Jim Geraghty points out that Obama "the Uniter" nudged Vice President Biden and 58 congressional Democrats into boycotting an address from the Israeli prime minister, and now insists on secret deals with Iran with no congressional intervention. His team just announced plans to withhold federal emergency funds from governors who are "climate deniers." They put up barricades around open-air monuments during government shutdowns. Obama mocked his opponents as "tea baggers." The examples of class, gender and race warfare are endless. But Ted Cruz is unacceptable because he won't compromise. An unsigned staff editorial in The Washington Post is steeped in denial, if not intellectual obfuscation, ignoring the governing reality of Obama, the uncompromising wacko bird. They acknowledged some similarities — short tenure in the Senate, cute daughters, charisma and alleged constitutional expertise. And then they launched into Cruz by projecting untruths about Obama. "Here's one way to tell Mr. Cruz from the winning constitutional scholar of 2008: Sen. Barack Obama promised to unite the country. Mr. Cruz — not so much. In fact, the most notable characteristic of Mr. Cruz's brief time in elected politics has been his aversion to values that are essential to democracy's functioning: practicality, modesty and compromise." That's the President Obama of 2015: Compromise? Modesty? Pragmatism? Or consider candidate Obama, who dropped his pal Reverend Wright from praying at his campaign kickoff at the last minute. He dropped wearing a flag pin for a while in 2007. In 2008, Obama mocked the "bitter clingers" who reverse gun rights and religion. The Post writers plowed ahead shamelessly. Check out this flagrant display of denial about Obama's betrayal of his promises to be uniter in chief. "It has been more than a decade since Mr. Obama derided 'the pundits' who 'like to slice and dice our country into red states and blue states.' If those divisions have proven less mutable than he predicted, the answer is not to give up on progress," the Post proclaimed. We need "leaders who understand that progress and principle can go hand in hand, and who have the pragmatic skills to make that happen." But the Post wasn't done insulting the senator from Texas. "Mr. Cruz's unique contribution — if one can call it that — has been his confrontational, ideology-driven style and tactics, marked by a refusal to compromise even when that leads to national dysfunction and embarrassment." The Posties actually choked on Cruz saying, "We demand our liberty." They insisted the country "needs to take its political disagreements down a notch." This is where the Post agenda becomes clear. Liberals (including journalists) don't want compromise. They want conservative surrender. They certainly don't want embarrassing "extremists" demanding "liberty," as if that was some sort of antiquated notion rejected by the enlightened. It was The Washington Post that years ago gave us the "poor, uneducated and easy to command types" descriptor for conservatives. Years later, nothing's changed. *L. DAILY Horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, March 27, 2015:
This year you and others often have many discussions, yet you might fully understand each other's ideas. Some of you could be signing up for workshops with an eye to better self-expression. You have a tendency to daydream at times. You find these short escapes relaxing and stimulating to your imagination. If you are single, fall could bring an intriguing suitor. Get ready! You will remember this person for a long time. If you are attached, the two of you will experience a relationship pinnacle as the weather becomes colder. Plan a special, long-discussed vacation during this period. CANCER can be emotionally draining.
The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult
ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You'll want to look at the big picture and consider your options. A sense of discomfort might be slowing you down. It would be wise to take your time before making a decision. Your instincts are right-on with an emotional domestic matter. Tonight: Get carried away!
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ At first, an idea might not seem realistic, but the more you discuss it, the more plausible it will seem. Work as a team, and you'll increase your chances for success. Someone at a distance might be controlling. Let this person take the reins for now. Tonight: Try a new spot with a friend.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Your ability to tap into your intellect will make you appear more grounded. The unexpected could cause a change in your plans. Take a moderate risk. A partner or associate will be maintaining his or her control over a situation. Tonight: Make it your treat.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You beam and bring others toward you. Try to work through some controlling issues that you seem to manifest. The only way to win a power play is not to play. Consider changing your schedule if you find that your daily life needs a little more excitement. Tonight: Early to bed.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Assume a low profile. A partner or loved one might be very idealistic and could share a long-term desire with you. Have a discussion about how to make this goal a reality. Mull over this issue for several days, and you'll find a solution. Tonight: Happiest at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ A meeting could prove to be instrumental in determining the path to a long-desired goal. Confirm that there are several ways to get there, and then take the one you are most comfortable with. A friend or loved one seems to be very idealistic about you. Tonight: TGIF! LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ You might feel unusually tense and need to reduce the stress. Make sure to schedule a little extra free time. Get some exercise or schedule a massage. Be sensitive to a partner, even if you and this person have very different ideas about how to have fun. Tonight: Let your hair down.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Understand someone's expectations, but realize that you might not want to meet them. How you tell this person that you don't want to get involved could make all the difference in your approach. Tonight: Listen to the other side of the issue.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Make time to relate directly to someone who makes a difference in your life. You might not be comfortable moving forward and clearing the air right now. In any case, stay on a one-on-one level with friends and loved ones. Tonight: Dinner with a favorite person.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Others can't seem to get enough of you. You'll want to consider canceling plans for the sole purpose of being able to let your hair down. A conversation could be uncomfortable at first, but you might be surprised by how good you feel afterward. Tonight: An intense discussion.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ You might want to make plans for several months ahead, but you could feel uncomfortable with a situation and the other parties involved. Go off and schedule a massage or some other type of stress-reducing activity, then address the issue. Tonight: Make it cozy.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Deal with others who want things to go their way. This attitude could cause a problem, especially if you are in the midst of a negotiation. Try to find some common ground. Let go of a need to be right. Tonight: Start the weekend with flair.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am a full-time working woman, part-time student and new wife to an incredible husband. We're in our mid-20s and have been living together for a year, but I have a problem that I'm still unsure about.

Growing up I never learned to cook. The first meal I ever made was spaghetti when my husband (then fiance) and I moved into our home. My issue is, I HATE cooking. I don't have the patience for it and neither does my husband.

Should I be ashamed that I indulge in "box" dinners that take little time to prepare? Naturally, I cook meat and vegetables to go along with them, but is it shameful when a wife doesn't cook everything from scratch? My husband doesn't mind, but I worry. Shouldn't a wife cook real meals for her husband? — NEW WIFE IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR NEW WIFE: Because many couples both work, many husbands and wives take turns cooking or prepare dinner together. ("Honey, I'll do the salad and vegetables; you fix the chicken/fish/chops on the grill.") The problem with prepackaged meals is that many of them contain more sodium and/or other additives that nutritionists say are bad for one's health when consumed on a regular basis, so I think you do have cause for concern. The most important ingredient in a lasting marriage is a partner who lasts, so if you want yours to last, be vigilant about what you put in your stomachs.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 29-year-old woman and I have been with my fiance, "Gary," for three years. We became engaged six months ago.

When I brought up wedding ideas recently, Gary responded with, "There are things that have to be resolved before I can even think about getting married." In the discussion that followed, he said I need to get a better-paying job so I can contribute to the renovations on the house, buy my own personal items and have a shorter commute.

I'm hurt because I believe marriage is about committing to the person you love. I also realize you can't live on love alone. Am I overly sensitive about this? Is Gary's request reasonable, or do you think he's just looking for an excuse not to get married? — LOVE ABOVE ALL IN NEW YORK

DEAR LOVE ABOVE ALL: Pay attention to what your fiance said because it appears he has unilaterally mapped out your future for you. This sounds less like a request to me than a demand. Open your eyes and keep talking with him.

Did he specify whether your name will be on the deed to the house you will contribute to renovating? (I hope so.) I also hope you will be lucky enough to find a higher-paying job with a shorter commute, because not everyone is able to do that.

Because I believe in both love and practicality, I think it's important you and Gary have premarital counseling together to clarify whether you're on the same page regarding finances.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Hoping for a better 2015 season.

The Rangers are getting closer to starting the 2015 season and they are hoping to stay healthier and have better results than 2014.

A positive note to look at during Spring Training is that Nick Tepesch is making strides in improving all of his pitches, but more importantly his breaking ball.

Even though the record has no meaning whatsoever, the Rangers are 8-10 so far this season in Spring Training.

So far I have been really impressed with Ryan Rua. He is hitting for .300 average and has eight RBIs.

Jake Smolinski also has a .343 average.

Rougned Odor is batting .448 and Carlos Peguero is swinging for a .414.

These are guys that the Rangers will have to have step up during the season since Ian Kinsler is no longer around and Jurickson Profar will be out for the season.

What I am concerned about is Adrian Beltre. He is batting .143 with just three RBIs. Shin-Soo Choo is batting .222 with just two RBIs.

These guys are not playing to their level of pay or talent that we have come to know they are capable of. Hopefully they are just veterans slacking off in the Spring Training as opposed to younger players fighting with everything they have to win a roster spot.

The pitching has been terrible stat wise, but I am not even going to discuss it. Why? Because the leading pitcher in innings pitched has only pitched 13 and two-thirds innings. That is way too small of a sample size to determine an accurate report.

Elvis Andrus needs to pick it up on the defensive end. He has committed four errors in just 52 innings. That is one every other game.

According to MLB.com, The No. 5 starter, left field and fourth outfielder positions remain up for grabs.

The No. 4 starter is still available, but they believe Ross Detwiler confirmed the position last night with his start against the Cincinnati Reds.

The Rangers kick off their season on Monday April 6 in Oakland against the Athletics.

There probably won't be much to report next week, but if the Rangers announce their opening day lineup I will have an article for you. Otherwise just expect the weekly articles to begin on April 9.
