Winners named in Panhandle 4-H District Roundup

Gray County represented in two categories.

SUBMITTED BY TEXAS A&M AGRILIFE

CANYON - Youth from 16 Panhandle counties qualified during the District I 4-H Roundup on April 24 to compete in the Texas 4-H Roundup June 8-12 at Texas A&M University in College Station, according to Shawnte Clawson, Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service specialist for 4-H youth development in Amarillo.

4-H Roundup is a public speaking and talent event providing 4-H members the opportunity to share their knowledge and skills learned through 4-H projects, Clawson said. 4-H is the youth program of AgriLife Extension.

The goals of the project are to: learn organizational skills for a speech or performance; be able to speak convincingly in public; be aware of one's relationship to others - family, peers, state, nation and world; learn life skills needed to be an active, responsible citizen; and learn about vocational choices, career opportunities and preparation related to the project.

Nearly 100 youth competed in the 21 activities, including speaking events, educational presentations and performing arts, Clawson said. Recognition awards were given in ceremonies at West Texas A&M University.

While 4-H youth can compete at the junior and senior levels, only the senior level advances to the state competition, Clawson said.

Tips, Tricks and Advice Thinking about taking a long distance hike?

If you are one of those people that was inspired by the movie "Wild," here are you should know before taking on long distance hikes. Every year hundreds of people migrate to Southern California to make the trek from Mexico to Canada on the Pacific Crest Trail (PCT). Once a year the PCT organization holds a zero day that is generally in April. Zero day is a great event to attend for anyone that may hike the PCT or any of the long distance trails of the U.S. such as the Continental Divide trail, the John Muir, & the Appalachian. Zero day consists mainly of people that have either hiked the PCT as through hikers or in sections and come together to help future hikers have an easier time.

Some of the legends I met while attending this vear zero day ranged from Jackie McDonnell (Yogi) the triple crown hiker and author of several hiking/ guide books. Yogi hiked more than 19,000 miles since 1999. You can find her books at yogisbooks. com. She told me the key to completely these long distance hikes is simply "being determined, if you make up your mind that you can do it you will." She also advised get in shape before you try to make the hike. You can't sit on the couch everyday then hop on a trail and think it's going to go well or smooth for that matter. So start out on shorter trails and get out there and get some miles under your belt!

Another legend of the PCT was Billygoat, who's real name we were not

by police. Videotape shows Gray being ELDER dragged into a police van. Within a less than half an hour, his spine was somehow severed and he died seven days later.

Did an officer or the officers intentionally or inadvertently cause the injury? Did the vehicle suddenly stop, causing a possibly untethered or poorly tethered suspect/passenger to break his neck? Why was Gray stopped in the first place? Given that he ran from the police, did this provide a basis for pursuit, search and arrest? Does this not underscore the importance of police body cams and car-dash cams?

These are, of course, legitimate questions. And, in addition to the Baltimore police investigation, the Department of Justice announced that it, too, would examine the circumstances surrounding Gray's death.

So, why riot? Unlike Ferguson, where riots also took place, black Baltimore residents do not lack political power and representation. The mayor is black. The police commissioner and deputy commissioner are black. The police department is approximately 40 percent black, in a city with a black population of 63 percent. Bereavement and Healing Suicide evokes domino effect

As I was paying for my purchases at a warehouse market. I noticed some friends waving to me from over in the deli. I walked over to them and engaged in catch-up conversation. It was so good to see them. She had endured shoulder surgery and spinal injections over this past year, and her husband had lovingly nursed her back to health. They shared stories of their family, and I was sad to hear that they had lost their son-in-law. It is always distressing when a young person dies, and I could hear in their voices that they were heartbroken.

Their daughter and grandchildren, who live some distance away, have suffered great financial and emotional hardships from their loss. Their eldest grandchild has had to postpone her wedding due to the loss of income in their family. Her younger sister has suffered severe depression so much so that she finds it difficult to exit her bed and thus, has dropped out of school. The child I worry most over. however, is their grandson. He is the youngest of their three grandchildren, and additional circumstances have put him into an extremely dangerous and risky category

When their son-in-law died, the father of their grandson's best friend also died. Unlike their son-in-law, who died of natural causes, this man committed suicide. Suicide is tragic for everyone who knows the victim, and it puts extreme emotional trauma on the immediate survivors. This trauma is so devastating that if not properly managed, it places other family members at risk of committing the same

My friend's grandson and his best friend have been inseparable this past year, each relying on the other for emotional support to make it through the trials of their father's respective deaths. Unfortunately, their grandson's best friend fell prey to his father's suicide, and last week killed himself.

This second suicide is beyond tragic and creates a very dangerous situation for his immediate survivors as well as for his best friend. Due to the unique situation of both boys losing their father's simultaneously while relying upon each other for support during their grief recovery, the suicide of this young boy puts my friend's grandson in a uniquely prone situation of committing suicide himself.

After a lengthy conversation with my friends, I suggested they consider professional counseling for their daughter and grandchildren. As it is apparent that she would benefit from their assistance, I also suggested that they leave the warehouse and immediately drive to their daughter's home. Their grandchildren are left to themselves all day while their mother is away trying to replace her husband's income, and it is highly probable that their grandson should be under suicidal watch.

According to my friends, their daughter and her children delayed their grief experience through extended denial and now find themselves in an extremely complicated grief experience. Their eldest granddaughter will probably recover with light intervention. She has suffered personal tragedy before, and she can draw upon the guidance of her professional counseling through her previous experience. She also has her fiancé and wedding plans to occupy her mind, as she has been fortunate enough to receive a generous gift of financial support to accomplish her wedding from a benevolent soul. Their granddaughter, who dropped out of school, is being placed in a particular program where she will be allowed to self-pace her studies, and will receive grief counseling support through this program's guidance system. The grandson, however, has just been knocked down to a completely new level of pain and anguish, and it is imperative that he not only receive familial support, but immediate professional intervention.

One should never take the possible risk of suicide lightly. If you know someone who might be at risk of suicide, do not take this responsibility upon yourself. A suicidal person needs immediate professional intervention

Suicidal melancholy

If one ever feels overly sad, considers harming, or killing oneself, immediately call 911 and ask for help.

Do not assume that these thoughts are fleeting or of little concern.

Grief exacerbates melancholy and abruptly overcomes one's ability to recover and survive.

I hope my friends are away this week with their daughter and grandchildren. I know that if they were to fall short of preventing further trauma and loss in their daughter's family, they would not be able to endure it.

The curse of suicide is that it often evokes a ripple effect upon the survivors.

Christians, who were 60 percent of Republican caucusgoers in 2008 and 2012, the Point of Grace Church event drew no fewer than nine Republican hopefuls. Ex-Gov. Mike Huckabee and ex-Sen. Rick Santorum, past winners of the Iowa caucuses, were there. So, too, were Sen. Ted Cruz and Gov. Scott Walter. Cruz and Walker are sons of Christian preachers

All nine GOP hopefuls espoused Judeo-Christian values, and all nine pledged unyielding opposition to same-sex marriage.

"At a forum before evangelical Christians," wrote The New York Times, "the Republican candidates told a cheering crowd that the fight over same-sex marriage would not end with a Supreme Court decision. 'Mr. Cruz said advocates of traditional marriage should 'fall to our knees and pray.' Sen. Marco Rubio declared that the "institution of marriage as one man and one woman existed long before our laws existed.'

Onward Christian soldiers! At the second event, however, there was not a lot of kneeling and praying, and not much talk of same-sex marriage. For it was held in Sin City at the Venetian hotelcasino and home of Sheldon Adelson.

Having amassed a fortune of $29 billion from gambling dens in Macau and Vegas, the 81-year-old Adelson is among the richest men on earth. The event was the annual conclave of the Republican Jewish Coalition.

In Vegas, The Washington Post reports, "a crop of White House aspirants sought to outdo each other in opposition" to the Iran nuclear deal. "Ted Cruz declared that he 'intends to do everything possible to stop a bad Iran deal.' ... Indiana Gov. Mike Pence pledged that 'Israel's enemies are our enemies. Israel's cause is our cause

What are candidates who profess Christian values doing in Sin City courting a casino mogul for millions in contributions, when that mogul compiled his immense fortune by exploiting the moral weakness of Christians and non-Christians alike?

Does not the Bible condemn gambling? Do Evangelical Christians not regard gambling as a vice, and a moral failing? Are not Christians supposed to practice what they preach?

Googling "Evangelicals" and "gambling" one comes across a compelling 2009 essay of Dr. R. Albert Mohler Jr., president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, flagship school of the Southern Baptist Convention.

"The nationwide explosion of legal gambling may well be the most underrated dimension of America's moral crisis," writes Mohler.

"The Bible is clear on this issue. The entire enterprise of gambling is opposed to the moral worldview revealed in God's word. The basic impulse behind gambling is greed — a basic sin that is the father of many other evils. Greed, covetousness, and avarice are repeatedly addressed by Scripture ... "Gambling is a direct attack on the work ethic presented by Scripture. ... Gambling corrupts the culture, polluting everything it touches. ... Why are Christians so silent on this issue? ... The silence and complacency of the Christian Church must end." In defense of their courtship of Adelson, Republicans say that gambling is now legal. Yet, so is prostitution and marijuana in some precincts, and abortion and homosexuality are constitutional rights.

Would Christian conservatives accept campaign contributions from men who grew rich running abortion mills, or bathhouses for homosexuals, or from selling pot, or from Planned Parenthood?

Reportedly, Adelson contributed $92 million in 2012. to the campaigns of Newt Gingrich, Mitt Romney and other Republicans. And he is poised to spend more for a Republican president in 2016

A tiny fraction of that $92 million, in attack ads, could break a candidate to whom Adelson is opposed. A large fraction could make cred-

Another good source for future hikers is Trail Logistics. Trail Logistics helps you plan out your hike, can setup up care packages, monitor your trek, and basically support you throughout the entire ordeal. They can also get you replacement gear while you are on your hike and have amazing meals that are way better than mountain house meals. There's every reason, therefore, to believe that the investigations will be full, complete and thorough. This does not mean that the results will please everyone, but that the examination will be fair and open. After all, if a wildly popular mayor who received 84 percent of the vote cannot be trusted,

This isn't Mississippi in 1955, where Emmett Till, a 14-year-old boy, was brutally murdered, only to have the obviously guilty killers acquitted by an all-white jury. This is not the 60s of white-run cities, with nearly all-white police departments policing all-black communities. In New York City, for example, most officers are people of color. Los Angeles had back-to-back black police chiefs, and as with New York City, the majority of L.A.'s street cops are people of color or women.

And it is not true, as some protestors claim, that "it doesn't happen the other way around." In Mobile, Alabama, in 2012, a black police officer shot and killed a white teenager. The white teen, high on drugs, was completely nude, and still the officer — fearing for his life — shot and killed the suspect. An investigation cleared the cop and — despite public pressure — a grand jury refused to indict him. No cameras. No CNN.

Just two days after Ferguson police officer Darren Wilson shot and killed Michael Brown in Ferguson, Missouri, a "not white" cop in Salt Lake City, Utah, shot and killed an unarmed 20-year-old man whose race has been described as Hispanic. The family of the dead man believes that the cop is a murderer. No cameras. No CNN

So, why riot in Baltimore? The answer is that for some people facts and reason don't matter. It's about anger, excitement, disruption. Some call it a "subculture." Others say these are "at-risk youth." Still others call it the "underclass." But the 800-pound elephant in the room is the absence of fathers — responsible, involved fathers. Obama has said that a child growing up without a father is 20 times more likely to end up in jail. Today over 70 percent of black children are born to 25 percent in the 1965.

To earn their nearmonolithic 95-percent black vote, the Democratic Party repeatedly tells blacks of their continued oppression. During the 2012 election, Democratic National Committee chair, Debbie Wasserman Schultz, accused Republicans of seeking to "literally drag us all the way back to Jim Crow laws.'

So, when a questionable white cop/black suspect takes place, some people, conditioned to react with anger and distrust, lash out. — it's "us against them" and "they are trying to oppress us.'

Come election time, Democrats fan and exploit this anger. Rep. Charlie Rangel, D-N.Y., for example, made this accusation in his last race: "Everything we believe in, everything we believe in (Republicans) hate. They don't disagree - they hate. ... Some of them believe that slavery isn't over and that they won the Civil War." This is how Democrats get 95 percent of blacks to vote one way -? by telling them the other side is evil, that "the system" is corrupt and racist. So when a Freddy Gray, in police custody, turns up dead under suspicious circumstances, unwed mothers compared to some will take to the streets to vent that "slavery isn't over."

Yes, Martin Luther King Jr. said, "A riot is the language of the unheard." When he said that, none of America's major cities had a black mayor. The country did not have back-to-back black attorneys general. The country did not have a black president elected — and reelected.? Baltimore's riot is the tragic language of modern welfare state.

Annual wheat field day set for May 21 at Bushland research facilities

New varieties, food quality and dual-purpose management highlight agenda.

AMARILLO - Wheat updates on ment. everything from new varieties to food quality to dual-purpose management will be highlighted at the annual Wheat Field Day on May 21 near Bushland.

The free event will begin with registration at 8:30 a.m. in the Porter Wheat Building at the Conservation and Production Laboratory, which is operated by Texas A&M AgriLife Research and the U.S. Department of Agriculture Agricultural Research Service.

Tours and indoor presentations will run from 9 a.m. to 2:15 p.m., and include a lunch sponsored by the Texas Wheat Producers Board. Drinks and donuts will be provided throughout the day by Attebury Grain.

Three Texas Department of Agriculture continuing education credits will be offered for private pesticide applicators – one general and two integrated pest management – and five certified crop advisor units will be offered in nutrient management, soil and water management, integrated pest management, crop management and manure manage-

Producers will be able to see historic, current and new varieties growing in the field, said Dr. Jackie Rudd, AgriLife Research wheat breeder in Amarillo. The two newest varieties that will be highlighted are TAM 114, released because of its exceptional baking quality, and TAM 204, released for grazing and dual purpose use also as grain.

"Variety selection is one of the most important decisions a producer can make," said Dr. Jourdan Bell, Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service agronomist in Amarillo. "Selecting a variety based on yield potential as well as the variety's disease and insect resistance and/or tolerance, lodging and drought tolerance can enhance yield and ultimately minimize risk.'

In addition to having the traditionally strong program on wheat breeding, this year more emphasis has been added on the relationship between wheat in the High Plains and the cattle industry, said Dr. Qingwu Xue, AgriLife Research crop physiologist in Amarillo.

While about 3 million acres of wheat are planted each year in this region on average, only about 1.6 million acres are harvested for grain, Bell said. Crop failure accounts for some loss, but the majority of the non-harvested acreage is directed toward annual grazing for stocker cattle.

Guest speakers for the indoor portion of the field day will be Dr. Steve Amosson, AgriLife Extension economist in Amarillo, discussing "The Grains to the Texas High Plains," and ife Extension entomologist; and genetic Dr. Joseph Awika, with Texas A&M's Cereal Quality Laboratory in College Station, discussing "Wheat Quality -Importance, Measurements and Progress.'

The tours have been divided up to look at irrigated and dryland variety trials and breeding nurseries, rotational practices on terraces, plant pathology plots and irrigation management, and management for dual-purpose grazing/ grain production.

Tour topics and speakers will be:

- Small grains forage trial, Dr. Clark Neely, AgriLife Extension state small grains and oilseeds specialist, College Rapid estimation of forage growth rate, Dr. Srirama Reddy, AgriLife Research assistant research scientist in wheat breeding, Amarillo.

Wheat variety trials in the High Plains, Bell.

said, "the time for the expedition teams can be extended to June if necessary. Most of the teams are still in the region and many are still undecided if they are going to abandon."

Several Sherpa guides are willing to go back to work if the expeditions resume.

Ang Tshering Sherpa, president of Nepal Mountaineering Association, the umbrella body of mountaineering agencies and climbers in Nepal, said some expeditions are still debating what to do.

It was not clear how many teams had decided to quit or stay back on the mountain. Tshering was more pessimistic than the tourism official about their prospects.

"It does look like it is going to be difficult for the expeditions that decide to continue. The route above the base camp has been destroyed by the avalanche," Tshering said.

"The future of the Everest climb this season is quite uncertain," he said, adding that Sherpas were worried the season may be over.

Despite the terrible dangers of their jobs — a year rarely passes without at least one death on Everest — the Sherpas, once among the poorest and most isolated people of Nepal, also now have schools, cellphones and their own middle class.

All that is the result of the economy of Mount Everest, which brings tens of millions of dollars to Nepal every year.

Obama aide, Baltimore native says worst may be over

President Barack Obama's initiative for minority males says it has been painful to Baltimore hometown, but he feels optimistic that the worst is over.

Broderick Johnson, an assistant to the president, commended the efforts of ordinary people who he said are rejecting violence and trying to help restore peace after protests left more than a dozen police officers injured as businesses were looted, pelted with rocks or set ablaze hours after the funeral for 25-year-old Freddie Gray, who died in police custody.

"That filled me with a lot of hope and it reminded me that there are a lot of wonderful things about the people who grow up in Baltimore," Johnson said in an in-

'So it was very painful to see all of that and to realize that in many respects a lot of the same issues are still there," he said.

Tensions across Baltimore seemed to ease after the city cleared its first two nights of a weeklong curfew without repeated widespread violence. Thousands of police and National Guard troops are policing city streets to keep the peace and prevent any new outbreaks of violence.

"Like everyone else who wasn't there, cause of the coverage it was starting to get," said Johnson, who is the secretary to Obama's Cabinet.

Johnson also attended the funeral for Michael Brown, the unarmed, black 18-year-old whose shooting death in Ferguson, Missouri, last year by a white police officer thrust the issue of law enforcement treatment of black males and the minority communities they protect to the forefront.

Johnson said it was emotional in both Obama sent Johnson to represent the cases to see all the young people filing

"This was a reminder of how far too often you've got young people attending funerals, something that's been happening, you know, not just in the past couple years, something that's been the case for far too long," he said. "But that's a jarring image. Very much so." Obama said the situation has been a "slow-rolling crisis" for a long time. "This is not new, and we shouldn't pretend that it's new," he said.

Besides his duties as the Cabinet secretary, Johnson also leads the My Brother's Keeper Task Force.

Obama, who grew up without his father and says he drifted as a young man, created the year-old initiative to help young men of color. Harvesters close out district with big 13-1 run-rule over Dalhart

■ Pampa will play Big Spring May 8-9 in Bi-District playoffs at Lubbock Christian HS.

By Zachary Green

zgreen@thepampanews.com

The Pampa Harvesters (3-5, 9-10-1) traveled to Stinnett to play the Dalhart Wolves (0-7, 1-11) in their final district game of the season on Wednesday. The game was moved to Wednesday due to torrential rains that fell in the area Monday. The game also had to be moved to West Texas High because they had a turf play-

Junior Nathan Furgason started the game on the mound for Pampa and went the distance. He picked up the win in his five innings of work. He held the Wolves to three hits, walked none, struck out six and allowed just one run.

"That was a big one. Nathan did a good job," head coach Kaleb Snelgrooes said. 'We needed him (Nathan) to get some exposure so that it's not game three of the playoffs and I say, 'hey go win us a series.' We needed to get him some innings because he hadn't pitched in a while. It was a good deal for him getting in. Woelfle, Brody and Zach have all pitched in district so I needed to get that fourth guy. So when it comes playoffs I don't say hey remember that time you pitched a month ago, let's go

Senior Ty Hooper started the game off by reaching base after getting hit by a pitch. Sophomore Brendon Woelfle then singled to short. Junior Cade Engle smashes a triple to center on a line drive to score both runners.

Junior Adam Zuniga followed with a big double to center to score engle.

Junior Rhett Harden singled to short on a ground ball. Jordan Jordan Green grounded out to short but Harden scored. Zuniga had already scored on an error in the at-bat before Green's. The scoring ended there for Pampa but the Harvesters put five on the board in the inning.

Dalhart went down in 1-2-3 order in the bottom of the first. Furgason struck out one batter, sandwiched between two groundouts.

After one, Pampa led 5-0.

second. That was followed by two quick fly outs. Junior Zack Gates then came in to run for Hooper. Zuniga singled to left to score Gates. Harden doubled to center and Zuniga advanced to home. Pampa added two more runs to their lead.

Furgason hit the first batter of the second. That runner was gunned down trying to steal second. The next batter struck out. The inning ended with a ground out. So it was an unconventional 1-2-3 inning for the Wolves.

After two, Pampa led 7-0.

Green singled to third to start the third for Pampa. Hooper walked after two outs were recorded. Gates courtesy ran for Hooper again. Green scored on a steal of to center to score Gates. Pampa added two more runs again.

Dalhart went down in 1-2-3 order again with a strikeout and two fly outs in the bottom of the third.

After three, Pampa led 9-0.

Pampa went down in 1-2-3 order in the

The first two batters grounded out for the Wolves in the fourth. The next batter struck out but still reached first on a dropped third strike. The inning ended with a fly out.

After four, Pampa led 9-0.

Junior Colton Thompson singled on Hooper reached on an error to begin the a bunt with one out in the fifth. Senior Braden Keown walked. Hooper sacrificed to score Thompson. Woelfle doubled to left to score Keown. Engle doubled to right to score Woelfle.

Zuniga singled to left to score Engle. Junior Zach Hill came in to courtesy run for Zuniga. The inning ended after Pampa put a four spot on the board.

Dalhart had a double and a single to start the bottom of the fifth. Furgason struck out the next batter. The next one singled to right to score one runner. Furgason struck out the next batter and the final out was recorded as Hooper threw to Zuniga to gun down a man trying to steal third.

Final/5: Pampa 13, Dalhart 1.

Ty Hooper was 0-1 with a walk, an RBI home as Dalhart made an error trying to and a run scored. Brendon Woelfle was get Gates out at first. Woelfle then singled 3-4 with two runs scored, an RBI and a double. Cade Engle was 2-4 with three RBIs, two runs scored, a double and a triple. Adam Zuniga was 3-4 with three RBIs, two runs scored and a double. Rhett Harden was 2-4 with a run scored and a double. Jordan Green was 1-3 with a run scored and an RBI. Colton Thompson was 1-1 with a run scored and a walk. Braden Keown was 0-2 with a run scored and a walk. Zack Gates scored two runs as a courtesy runner. Jordan Green, Colton Thompson, Rhett Harden, Ty Hooper and Zack Gates all had stolen bases.

Pampa plays Friona tonight at the Amarillo Thunderheads stadium.

"Friona is a good ball club. They made the playoffs in their district. I don't know anything about them. We get to play in the Thunderheads stadium in Amarillo. It will be like a minor league feel. We will kinda get these kids some exposure like the playoffs. We want to go into that game and play well. Then get ready for next week playing Big Spring," Snelgrooes said. "We're excited to get into the playoffs. I told these seniors to make it all four years. And five out of the six years I've been here. I told them that's a big deal. I played here and I only made it three of the four years.'

Snelgrooes said they were going to start preparing for Big Spring as soon as they got on the bus after the Dalhart game Wednesday.

Pampa will play Big Spring at 8 p.m on Friday, May 8. at Lubbock Christian High School. Game two of the series will be at 1 p.m. on Saturday, May 9, with an if necessary game three to follow.

Is Winston-Mariota really the next Manning-Leaf?

Every time the NFL draft rolls around, two quarterbacks become linked as if they are Peyton Manning and Ryan Leaf in the 1998 NFL year they are trying to link Florida State quarterback Jameis Winston and Oregon quarterback Marcus Mariota.

This

I hate to tell all those talking heads this, but it's not the same.

Yes, they are arguably the two best quarterbacks in this draft. And they may have gone 1-2 in the draft Thursday (this is written before the draft because of press time).

But here is why they aren't Manning-Leafesque.

Winston is without a doubt the best quarterback in the draft, physically anyways. If the Tampa Bay Buccaneers (if that's who he went to) can put a support group similar to what Dallas did with wide receiver Dez Bryant a few years ago, they can keep him out of trouble and keep him focused on football.

Winston played in a pro-style offense and has shown he can be a leader of men. He has all of the intangibles. But those off-the-field issues and maturity problems are the question.

Mariota is the exact opposite. Mariota's off-thefield resume is squeakyclean and can also lead a squad to victory.

But he is a system quarterback. The jury is still out on whether or not Mariota will be able to make reads and go through his progression. I find it hard to believe that he played in Oregon's system for so long and didn't master that aspect of an offense.

Some are comparing him to San Francisco quarterback Colin Kaepernick without the arm strength. I don't know about that, but if he gets in the right system I think Mariota can be successful.

But Winston-Mariota aren't the same as Manning-Leaf.

In 1998, everyone knew Peyton Manning and Ryan Leaf could play wherever they landed. Ryan Leaf didn't fail because he couldn't play. He failed because he had maturity issues and couldn't handle the pressures of the playing in the NFL.

I don't think Winston's maturity is the issue of handling the limelight of the NFL, he played primetime ball at Florida State all the time last season. His issue is that he is a 21-year-old college student who is about to make more money than some people make in a lifetime.

Mariota may have just entered the draft at the wrong time since really there are only three teams in need of a stable quarterback: Tampa

Mariota. Bay, Tennessee and New

The best thing that could happen to Mariota is if the San Diego Chargers do indeed trade quarterback Phillip Rivers and some draft picks to Tennessee to take him.

Chargers head coach Adam Gase is one of the best, young offensive minds in the NFL and could make Mariota work. Gase, who coached in Denver for several years, basically changed the engine of the offense with the motor running in 2011 when the Broncos switched to Tim Tebow at quarterback.

If Gase can make an offense run, and put up points, with the readoption, I have no doubt he can make a system for Winston playing in Tampa Bay under former Chicago Bears head coach Lovie Smith is also a good fit. Smith is definitely the leader of that team and Winston will hopefully be under his thumb.

There you have it. Today we know where these quarterbacks went and Winston is probably in Tampa Bay, but Mariota on the other hand, could be in San Diego, Tennessee or Cleveland, or he could have slipped to tonight's second round of the draft.

May 2, 2015:

This year you open up to a new set of needs and desires. You also are concerned with your emotional security. You have a tendency to dote on others. If you are single, you have a strong drive to be part of a pair. Make no commitments until after August; the period that follows could produce a person of significance. If you are attached, a partner who can be touchy and withdrawn will warm up. You are in the process of revitalizing your bond. The period after August could be quite fulfilling for you as a couple. CANCER (June 21-July 22)

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★ Though there could be an odd quality to your interactions, you seem content and won't mind. Keep reaching out to someone at distance. Once you connect, you will feel on top of the world. Make plans for the near future to get together. Tonight: Try not to go overboard.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
