Pampa: a research hub last week

BY ZACHARY GREEN
zgreen@thepampanews.com

You may have wondered what in the world all those vehicles with funky instruments on them were doing in Pampa on Wednesday and Thursday of last week. They were part of a multi-million dollar research project called Plains Elevated Convection at Night. In laymen's terms, they were researching nighttime thunderstorms and how they develop, specifically in the Midwest and Plains regions.

The Pampa News had the chance to speak with Dr. Robert Palmer, the executive director of Advanced Radar Research at the University of Oklahoma, as well as Jim Kurdzo, one of his PhD students that was actually out in the field with the project.

"It is difficult for us to predict nighttime thunderstorms. It was a six-week project that we spent driving across the Plains and stayed up until five or six in the morning each night," Kurdzo said. "We had 10 radar trucks and a number of other vehicles ourselves. Some of those included mobile mesonets and mobile sounding units (basically instruments that collect data such as temperature, dew point, wind speed, etc.)."

Kurdzo said after leaving Pampa, the group spent two days in Minnesota. He started to list off all of the states they spent time in before settling with "we went to almost every state in the Midwest and the Plains to study these thunderstorms."

Many organizations and universities have small projects every summer on their own but Kurdzo said this was a major project that happens once every decade or two.

"It was funded by the National Science

Foundation and this was a big joint project with many other organizations and universities. The last time we did something this big was five to seven years ago," Kurdzo said. "We spent two days in Pampa. That was the only time we spent in Texas the entire six-weeks. There were some pretty bad thunderstorms that night and we spent until four in the morning collecting data on them. It was one of the better data sets we recorded during the project." How are these storms different? Well, supercells are low to the ground and surface based. Many times they form along the cold fronts and dry lines. Elevated storms form from a completely different aspect and Kurdzo said quite frankly they have no idea how they form. "It is very hard for our forecast models to predict when and where these things will

81st Tri-State Senior Golf Tournament begins Sunday

■ The legendary tournament and its 'love affair' with Pampa Country Club.

BY JOHN LEE AND ZACHARY GREEN
jlee@thepampanews.com

The Tri-State Senior Golf Tournament has been around for 81 years Sunday and has become a staple in the event calendar for the Pampa Country Club. We will provide a history of the tournament after giving you the schedule of events for this year's tournament. All events will take place at Pampa Country Club, unless otherwise noted.

men on Tuesday and Wednesday.

An awards banquet will be held at 7 p.m., Wednesday.

There is another scramble on Thursday, beginning at 9:30 a.m.

Right now there are about 75-100 players signed up for the tournament. You may still sign up by calling Pat Montoya at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, 806-669-3241.

The tournament has evolved from the small tournament that was held in 1935.

Registration is Sunday, July 19, from noon to 5 p.m.

Evening Hospitality Reception at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce. This will take place on Sunday from 5 to 7 p.m.

A four person scramble will begin at 10 a.m., Monday.

Stroke Play begins at 7:30 a.m. for the ladies and 8 a.m. for the

In 1935, dues were $1 and the tournament entry fees were $2. By 1946, the Championship Flight had expanded to 32 teams instead of the previous 16 and the entry fee had increased to $5. The tournament was meant more as a fun event for the play-

Texas' unemployment falls to 4.2 percent in June

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' unemployment rate fell slightly in June to 4.2 percent, down from 4.3 percent in May, a state agency reported Friday.

The Texas Workforce Commission said this marks the third month this year that the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate dipped to 4.2 percent, the lowest rate of unemployment for the state since July 2007. Texas continued to be below the national unemployment rate, which was at 5.3 percent.

The state added 16,700 non-agricultural jobs in June, marking Texas' third straight month of seasonally adjusted job growth. Texas has added jobs in 56 of the last 57 months, including a total of 53,600 positions in the first half of 2015.

"Texas employers continue to create employment opportunities, which is great news for the state and its workforce," Texas Workforce Commission Chairman Andres Alcantar said.

The Amarillo area had the lowest unemployment rate in June, at 3.2 percent. The McAllen-Edinburg-Mission area had the highest rate last month, with 7.8 percent.

June's job gains in the service-providing industries were led by the education and health services industry, which added 10,100 positions. Professional and business services added 8,300 jobs in June. Gains in the goods-producing industries were centered in mining and logging, which saw an increase of 2,700 jobs during the month.

Brenda Guess of Pampa Named Among Farmers® Top Agents in the Country

SUBMITTED

Brenda Guess, of Pampa, Texas, has been named a Championship agent by Farmers Insurance for her outstanding achievement and customer focused efforts by the Los Angeles-based, multi-line insurer.

Brenda Guess

"I want to congratulate Brenda for her achievement. On behalf of Farmers, we are proud to bestow the honor of being a Championship agent to her," said Roy Smith, president of personal lines for Farmers Insurance. "To be recognized as among Farmers top agents is a great honor and we sincerely appreciate all that Brenda does for our customers and our organization."

Guess was selected on the basis of a number of criteria, including her distinction in providing exceptional service to customers and a commitment to furthering the goals and standards of Farmers Insurance.

"This honor is a business career highlight and I feel fortunate to represent such a fine organization, which is committed to helping make customers smarter about their insurance choices," said Guess. "I share this recognition with my entire office team who focus on helping every customer each and every day."

ers, rather than a competition in which performance was judged. The tournament founder and president through 1943, Mr. O.T. Nicholson, was determined to ensure that the "fun" aspect of the tournament was elevated.

He was quoted telling a reporter, "Why, it's going to be a regular festival and these young upstarts cannot spoil our fun, on the golf course or off. It's going to be our time to howl. We may shoot 110 but who cares? Those gangling kids are all right, but we can't get any kick out of being lambasted by some kid who lives on the golf course and practice tees."

Nicholson wanted the rules to be made for comfort, convenience and the pleasure of the contestants. Pleasure wasn't hard to find as there was free beer, hard liquor and a Calcutta pool in the early tournaments. Of course the free beer and liquor made for a financial bind, which is why there is currently a "CASHBAR."

In 1940, wives and women guests became a part of the gatherings and have activities and events to make their stay in the tournament an enjoyable one. Since 2005, the ladies have even been permitted to play in the tournament.

The first 32 tournaments were held in Amarillo, from 1935 to 1966, hitting its peak in 1960, when there were 257 entries. The next three years it went to Borger and was played at Huber Country Club. In 1970, the tournament came to the Pampa Country Club and has been held there every year since, except in 1981 when it returned to the Amarillo Country Club.

The tournament has been changed around some over time. It holds practice rounds on the first day, a four-person scramble, then Tuesday and Wednesday it holds the stroke play. The tournament banquet is held on Wednesday evening, where they give out the awards.

OBITUARIES

Jerry Fulton

Jerry Fulton passed from this life the afternoon of July 7, 2015, at his home in Cottonwood, Calif. Jerry was born in Clarendon and spent the formative years of his life throughout Texas and many areas of the Southwest. He was a Pampa High School graduate from the class of 1962. Jerry received two Bachelor Degrees in Agriculture from West Texas State University and from New Mexico State University. Wherever Jerry went, he left a lasting positive impact and touched the lives of many individuals. Jerry always made sure to take time to actively participate in his community and mentor the youth of the area. He was extremely passionate about agriculture and teaching and imparted his knowledge to youth throughout his life. In 1990, Jerry came to Hayfork, Calif., with his wife and four children to be the Chief Executive Officer and manager of the Trinity County fair. He was employed in that position for twenty-four years. Jerry devoted his time, energy, and talents to the betterment of Trinity County through various community organizations and activities. He retired eleven months ago to Cottonwood, CA with his wife, Dorothy.

Jerry is survived by his loving wife Dorothy and seven children (and spouses): JLee (Donna), Marianne Jones (Audy), John, April, Chris, Lee, and K.C. Fallon (T.J.). In addition to eleven grandchildren: Ryan Fulton, Stephanie Owen, Matthew Jones, Kaylee, Logan, and Wyatt Fulton. Dante, Reese, and Joci Bertain, Amia George, and Sienna Fulton. Great grandson, Kreed Owen. Jerry is also survived by his older brother, Neil.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Claude and Lillie Fulton, and his sister, Sue Steinbridge.

A viewing service was held on July 9, 2015, at Allen and Dahl. 2030 Howard St. Anderson, Calif. A grave site service was held on July 10, 2015, at the Cottonwood Cemetery.

It is respectfully requested that flowers be sent to the Cottonwood Cemetery.

Mary 'Earnestine' Cade

Mary "Earnestine" Cade, 88, died July 16, 2015, in Pampa.

Memorial services will at 2 p.m. Sunday, July 19, 2015, at Harvest Fellowship Baptist Church, with Rev. C. W. Parker, pastor, officiating. Cremation and arrangements are under the direction of Carmichael-Whatley Funeral Directors.

Mary was born in Lubbock on June 12, 1927, and was the youngest of the family. At a young age she learned to cook, do needlework, played with horned toads and loved to watch things grow. She graduated from Lubbock High School in 1944, and while in high school, she met her husband, Gene Cade, on a blind date set up by her cousin. They were married two years later on May 12, 1946. They farmed in Lubbock, Olton and Morton before retiring and moving to Pampa in 1982. She and Gene were very avid Texas Tech fans, so now heaven will be rejoicing for Texas Tech! In 2011, they celebrated their 65 wedding anniversary before he passed away in August.

Mary Earnestine Cade

There were not many plants that she had a hard time helping them thrive and she loved to share vegetables and flowers with whomever would take them. For several years she helped with young children's programs and as a nursery worker. She wanted them to be loved and cared for but usually she thought she was right - she would let you know it too. For the past few years she had experienced bad health and the flowers really helped her overcome situations of difficulty. She was a super cook and trained three generations to follow in her footsteps. Usually during the day she could be found humming a tune, and most of the time, it would be an old Gospel hymn although she loved music in general. Her alto voice was beautiful.

Mary holds a special place in many family members and friends heart. She was loved and cherished greatly and will be missed by many. There was one thing you could say about her when you walked into her room; she had some precious pictures to show off of the family members.

She is survived by a son, Danny Cade and wife Donna of Lubbock; a daughter, Marilyn Shelton and husband Lonnie of Pampa; five grandchildren, Brian Cade and wife Sandy of Bozeman, Mt., Brad Cade of Amarillo, Kilyn Shelton James and husband Curtis of Nacogdoches, Audra Shelton Tibboel and husband Kevin of Campbell, and Traci Shelton Baize and husband Todd of Telluride, Colo., Some of her enjoyment came from her 12 great-grandchildren, Levi Cade, Madison Cade, Hayden Cade, Kason Cade, Konner Cade, Brock James, Mason James, Brady Tibboel, Avery Tibboel, Paige Tibboel, Savannah Baize and Scarlett Baize.

She was preceded in death by her husband, A.E. "Gene" Cade; a daughter, Christy Cade; a sister Anna Lee Johnson; her mother, Mary Oshea Snider; and her father, Marion Earnest Snider.

As a minister said just recently quoting a scripture, "He who began a good work in you is able to complete it;" this she has done and is rejoicing with her Lord and loved ones. We thank everyone for the prayers and calls of encouragement during her prolonged illnesses. The family offers a special thanks to all the hospice personnel who so lovingly cared for her and the special ladies at the Meredith Place of whom each know who you are.

Family requests memorials to go to Sky Camp c/o Gentiva Hospice, 3232 Hobbs Road, Amarillo, Texas 79109.

Blue Bell: $125M investment necessary to remain operational BRENHAM, Texas (AP) — Blue Bell's chief executive told shareholders this week that Texas billionaire Sid Bass will lend the company up to $125 million, and that the investment is essential for the popular ice-cream maker to remain in business, according to a published report.

Under the terms, the Bass family would get a one-third stake in the company, struggling to recover after listeria contamination forced a crippling national recall in April, according to The Wall Street Journal, which reviewed the letter.

CEO and President Paul Kruse sent the letter to investors Monday saying Blue Bell Creameries was unable to raise enough capital from existing shareholders to remain operational. So the company's board of directors opted to "work with a single source" who was able to provide the necessary financing, the newspaper reported.

Texas-based Blue Bell on Tuesday announced that Bass would become an investor, but no terms were revealed.

Bass, whose family has deep ties to Fort Worth, is an investor and philanthropist whose father and uncle built an oil fortune. Forbes last year ranked Bass as the 324th wealthiest person in the U.S.

He has not responded to phone messages this week from The Associated Press seeking comment.

In an email Friday, Blue Bell spokesman Joe Robertson declined to elaborate on The Wall Street Journal's report.

"As a privately held company, we do not discuss financial matters or the ownership interests of individual shareholders," he said.

Kruse said in the letter that Bass' financing will allow Blue Bell, one of the top ice cream producers in the country, "to move forward to restart our production and sales effort."

In a separate letter to shareholders in May, Kruse had sought additional financing from them to avoid recruiting an outside investor who he said could dilute existing shares, the WSJ reported. Kruse said the company faced "a financial crisis."

That same month Blue Bell announced it was laying off 37 percent of its work force.

After issuing the recall because of concerns about listeria, the company stopped production at its facilities in Brenham, Texas; Broken Arrow, Oklahoma; and Sylacauga, Arkansas. Its ice cream was linked to 10 listeria illnesses in four states, including three deaths in Kansas.

No date has been given for when Blue Bell products could be back in stores. Blue Bell last week announced plans to test production runs at its Alabama plant. After a trial period, the company plans to begin building inventory to resume commercial sales.

PrivCo, a data provider on privately held companies, estimates revenue for Blue Bell this year could fall as low as $500 million. The company in 2014 was estimated to have had $680 million in revenue, up from nearly $621 million the year before.

Police: 2 dead, 3 wounded in shootings in northern Maine

LEE, Maine (AP) — State police say a former convict shot five people, two of them fatally, during a rampage across several northern Maine towns before being captured. They say a man was assaulted and guns were stolen before the shootings began in three different communities. Police also believe the suspect set fire to a barn. Investigators say 35-year-old Anthony Lord was arrested without incident Friday at a family member's home in Houlton. They say a woman who was with him wasn't harmed. Police say Lord faces murder charges. They are searching for a motive for the overnight shootings that left two men dead and two men and a woman injured. They didn't identify the victims. Lord has a criminal record that includes convictions for a sex crime, domestic assault, criminal threatening and assault

Bouncin' Around I'm married to the 'Tie Guy'

My husband has quite a wardrobe of neckties. You'd think for a retired guy he wouldn't want to wear ties, but he has enjoyed the attention his ties get on Sunday mornings at church.

When we were married I think Ron had about six ties. He actually bought a new one for our wedding. Then the big shopping mall near our home in Illinois opened a necktie kiosk, with a large number of really different ties to choose from.

I think the first few Ron bought were a series of antique airplanes (which he no longer has, darn it). He began buying some bright "J. Garcia" and Ralph Marlin ties. On a trip to California, he picked up a tie with the Smith Tartan from a Scottish shop. Somewhere along the line, I actually made him a tie on which I had embroidered various ducks.

During a visit to a museum in Georgia, he bought a tie with "The General"—the locomotive featured more picturing fried chicken. Two visits to family in Las Vegas have added two M&M ties to the collection. I finally talked Ron into buying a shamrock tie for St. Patrick's Day, in honor of my Irish background. He has an Easter tie, and one for Valentine's Day featuring Bugs Bunny. Bugs isn't the only Looney Tunes tie—there are several others, including Taz, and Daffy Duck saying, "You're Despicable!" and Marvin the Martian on a Chicago Cubs tie.

Ron has more Peanuts character ties than any other, topping the list at five. There is the Peanuts gang, Snoopy with different sports, The Red Baron, Snoopy playing golf and Snoopy amid a field of red polka dots. A favorite of kids is the Sesame Street tie, along with Tigger, Bugs Bunny, Garfield, smiley faces, and one with just lots of creepy-crawly bugs. Kids also like his "SpongeBob Squaretie."

On one tie Taz (the Tasmanian Devil) is playing golf, and another golf-themed tie is a wild Jerry Garcia tie.

Choosing dishonor

The president has said that the United States will be safer because of the nuclear deal his administration and five other nations fashioned with Iran. "Without a deal, we risk even more war in the Middle East,"

he said in an hour-long press conference on Wednesday. It was an unfortunate historical reminder, one the president would rather we all ignore.

In 1938, British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain signed a four-party pact with Adolf Hitler allowing Nazi Germany to seize a portion of Czechoslovakia. Chamberlain returned from the Munich Conference, claiming "peace with honor. I believe it is peace for our time." But his Conservative Party rival Winston Churchill's words turned out to be more prophetic: "You were given the choice between war and dishonor. You chose dishonor, and you will have war." In less than a year, the Nazis invaded Poland, and the British declared war on Germany.

It is too soon to know exactly how events will unfold in the Middle East, but certain things are clear. There will be more nuclear weapons in the region because of this deal, not fewer. It isn't a matter of whether there will be war — there are already several wars ongoing in the region, wars in which Iran participates directly or through its proxies. The Iranian Revolutionary Guard's Quds Force is already on the ground in Iraq, our erstwhile ally in the fight against ISIS but, in the long run, a great threat to our interests. Iran is supporting the Assad regime in Syria and the rebels in Yemen and is the major sponsor of terrorism in the world. With the estimated $100 billion in unfrozen assets soon to be available as Iran sanctions are lifted, more money will flow into wars where Iran hopes to expand its influence and ultimately create hegemony in the Muslim world.

But don't expect Saudi Arabia or other Sunni countries to sit idly by. The Saudis, rightly, do not trust Iran to keep its promises — and nothing in the agreement should increase their comfort. Saudi Arabia has little choice but to pursue its own nuclear program in the face of the likelihood that Iran will build a bomb, if not secretly during the term of the agreement, then soon after it lapses.

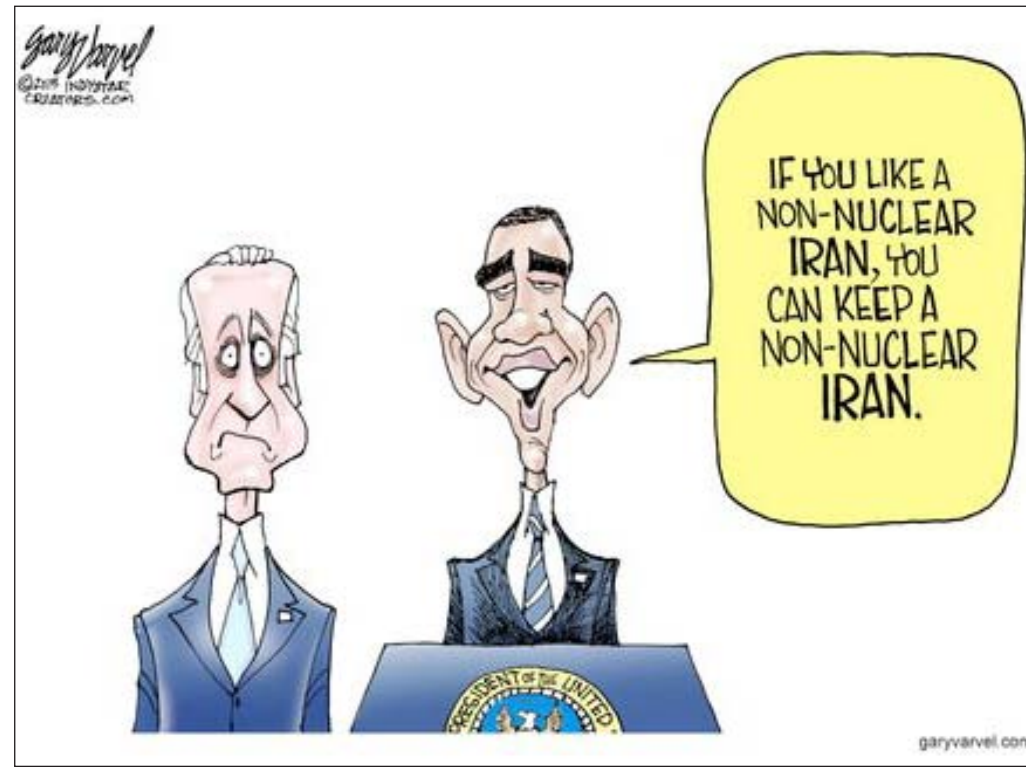

The Iranians aren't dismantling their nuclear program; they are simply putting on hold some elements — and even that cannot be assured. The verification regimen put in place by the agreement gives Iranians ample time to stall in order to move, hide or repurpose their weapons-creating capacity once notified that inspectors want to visit a site. The president promised 24/7 access to Iran's nuclear facilities in any deal his administration negotiated — he accepted in its place a plan that will give Iran 24 days before it allows inspectors in and a bureaucratic maze to get there.

Of course, the country that is most endangered by this agreement is Israel. Our ally and the only democratic country in the region, Israel is small but powerful, with perhaps the best military in the world. Its people have already survived a Holocaust that destroyed one-third of the Jewish population, which ultimately led to the creation of the Jewish state. It has successfully defeated its neighbors' aggression and survived near constant threat of terrorism on its soil and against its co-religionists around the world. Does anyone really expect that Israel will stand by while Iran builds bombs and acquires missile systems that threaten its very existence?

The president has consistently maintained that he had only two choices: forge a deal with Iran or face war. It is a Hobson's choice, and the president knows it. Sanctions brought Iran to the bargaining table, but the administration's eagerness to reach a deal erases what leverage we had.

Letter to the editor

Everything will be all right tomorrow

When PAWS was just beginning, I got a call from Faustina Curry, President of PAWS, wanting to know if I would come to the shelter, and pick up a cat. I said that I would be there in 15 minutes.

I arrived at the shelter to find a large black and white cat sitting on the counter. She acted as if she was waiting for me. So,

I gathered her up and away we went to my house. When I got home, I looked at the information that I had gotten from Faustina, and layed it to the side.

A couple of days later, I picked up the information, and decided that I would call the lady that had left the cat with PAWS.

I called her, and this is what I found.

The lady begin to tell me that she had traveled to Louisiana after Hurricane Katrina to see about some property that she had there. She said that when she realized that there was nothing left, she turned to walk away, and there sat this tiny dirty kitten. She said that she looked around, and saw nothing for the kitten to have been living in, so, she picked up the baby, and went to her vehicle.

As they were driving away, she looked again at nothing, and said, "everything will be all right tomorrow."

So, guess what the kitten's name is. TOMORROW! I still have Tomorrow, and she is a survivor!

The GOP's Iran Dilemma

From first reactions, it appears that Hill Republicans will be near unanimous in voting a resolution of rejection of the Iran nuclear deal. They will then vote to override President Obama's veto of their resolution. And if the GOP fails there, Gov. Scott Walker says his first act as president would be to kill the deal.

But before the party commits to abrogating the Iran deal in 2017, the GOP should consider whether it would be committing suicide in 2016.

For even if Congress votes to deny Obama authority to lift U.S. sanctions on Iran, the U.S. will vote to lift sanctions in the U.N. Security Council. And Britain, France, Germany, Russia and China, all parties to the deal, will also lift sanctions.

A Congressional vote to kill the Iran deal would thus leave the U.S. isolated, its government humiliated, unable to comply with the pledges its own secretary of state negotiated. Would Americans cheer the GOP for leaving the United States with egg all over its face?

And if Congress refuses to honor the agreement, but Iran complies with all its terms, who among our friends and allies would stand with an obdurate America then?

Israel would applaud, the Saudis perhaps, but who else?

And as foreign companies raced to Iran, and U.S. companies were told to stay out, what would GOP presidential candidates tell the business community?

Would the party campaign in 2016 on a pledge to get tough and impose new sanctions? "Coercive diplomacy," The Wall Street Journal calls it.

If so, what more would they demand that Iran do? And what would they threaten Iran with, if she replied: We signed a deal. We will honor it. But we will make no new concessions under U.S. threat.

Would we bomb Iran? Would we go to war? Not only would Americans divide on any such action, the world would unite — against us.

And would a Republican president really bomb an Iran that was scrupulously honoring the terms of the John Kerry deal? What would we bomb? All the known Iran nuclear facilities will be crawling with U.N. inspectors.

"Either the issue of Iran obtaining a nuclear weapons is resolved diplomatically through negotiation or it's resolved through force," said the president, "Those are the options."

Is that not pretty much where we are at, even if the GOP does not like it? Republicans seem to be unable to grasp the changes that have taken place in this century.

With the Arab Spring, the fall of half a dozen regimes, the rise of al-Qaida and ISIS, civil wars in Libya, Syria, Yemen and Iraq, we have a new Middle East.

Our principal enemies are now al-Qaida and ISIS. And while both have been aided by our old allies, Turkey, Qatar, and Saudi Arabia, both are being resisted by Iran.

But, we are reminded, Iran's regime is founded upon ideological hatred of America. But, so, too, were Mao's China and Stalin's USSR. Yet Nixon forged a detente with Mao and FDR partnered with Stalin. And Ronald Reagan negotiated a strategic arms deal with the "evil empire" of his time.

Bibi Netanyahu and AIPAC, the Saudis and Gulf Arabs, will demand that Congress kill the Iran deal that Lindsey Graham says is a "death sentence for the State of Israel." But one trusts that, this time, the GOP will add a dose of salt to what the hysterics are bellowing.

After all, it was Bibi's rants — Iran is hellbent on getting a bomb, is only months away, and military action is needed now to smash the whirling centrifuges — that teed up the talks for Tehran.

All Iran had to do was prove it had no bomb program, which was not difficult, as U.S. intelligence had repeatedly said Iran had no bomb program.

Then the Iranians proved it. They agreed to cut their centrifuges by two-thirds, to eliminate 98 percent of their uranium, to halt production of 20 percent uranium at Fordow, to convert the heavy-water reactor at Arak that produces plutonium to a light water reactor that produces one kilogram a year, and to let cameras in and give U.N. inspectors the run of their nuclear facilities.

And how is Israel, with hundreds of atom bombs, mortally imperiled by a deal that leaves Iran with not a single ounce of bomb-grade uranium? What does Iran get? What Iran always wanted. Not a bomb which would make Iran a pariah like North Korea and could bring down upon her the same firestorm America delivered to Iraq, but a path to become again the hegemon of the Persian Gulf.

Remarkable. Iran agrees not to build a bomb it had already decided not to build, and we agree to lift all sanctions. And they pulled it off.

What is one or two atom bombs you can't use, without committing national suicide, compared to $100 billion in freed assets and a welcome mat back to the community of nations.

Nor did the president even consider other options. The administration has never been willing to promote regime change in Iran, choosing to turn its back on protesters who took to the streets in 2009 against the regime. It has demonized the pro-democratic National Council of Resistance of Iran, which has tens of thousands of supporters both inside and outside Iran.

In the past, American foreign policy entailed working behind the scenes to promote democratic alternatives to totalitarian regimes. Not so in Obama's administration. The administration's goal has been to reassure the mullahs in Tehran, not to encourage freedom for the Iranian people.

In falsely portraying his options, the president brings us closer to a Middle East conflagration. It is not "peace in our time," but a near guarantee of more bloodshed.

cia pattern. There are butterflies and sunflowers, and from the animal kingdom, Pandas, leopards, parrots, and one tie bought in Sweden which has colorful ducks on it. One special tie belonged to the late husband of a dear friend—she wanted Ron to have one of Tom's ties.

Oh, and there is one with just plain stripes. We were fortunate enough to buy a house here in Pampa that had built-in tie carousels in one of the master closets, and since there is no more space on those carousels, which now hold a grand total of 45 ties, no new ties are planned.

Of course, we are planning a vacation in the fall, so he may have to double up. Ron has sent a few to our friend D.d.'s son, Brent, and has promised to upgrade our pastor's ties with a "fun" tie. Ron is pictured here with one of his Christmas ties, and the red holly-trimmed hat he wears during the holidays. It's nice being married to "Tie Dude!"

South African rhino orphanage cares for victims of poachers

ENTABENI SAFARI CONSERVANCY, South Africa (AP) — They are the most vulnerable victims of South Africa's rhino poaching scourge, the baby rhinos that survive the shooting deaths of their mothers.

Many probably die of dehydration or other perils in the wild, but some lucky ones end up at The Rhino Orphanage, where workers become mothers to the traumatized young ones, feeding, walking and comforting them until they are ready to return to the bush.

They learn to recognize voices, sleep in a stable, feed on a milk substitute, roll in the mud and play with each other and their human minders, who try not to get knocked over by these big, rambunctious babies.

The orphanage takes extreme measures to protect its rhinos from poachers, barring all but selected visitors and not advertising its exact location. Managers say only that it is near a golf and safari resort at the Entabeni wildlife park in Limpopo province, about a three-hour drive north of Johannesburg.

"These rhinos would be dead if there weren't a place to send them," Gabriela Benavides, a Mexican veterinarian at the orphanage, told The Associated Press.

Benavides spoke at an enclosure where three rhinos named Faith, Lunga and Matthew, all less than one year old, lounged, trotted and slurped water from containers. The rhinos approached visitors behind a low wooden barrier, allowing themselves to be touched and stroked on the rough skin of their heads.

South Africa, home to most of the world's rhinos, has been under heavy pressure from poachers who killed more than 1,200 of the country's rhinos in 2014 and are killing them at a high rate this year to meet rising demand for their horns in parts of Asia.

Consumers believe rhino horn, which is ground into powder, has medicinal benefits, but there is no scientific evidence to support that. The horn is made of keratin, a protein also found in human fingernails.

South Africa's national parks service rescued 16 rhino orphans in 2014; a dozen were put in specialist care and four were placed with surrogate mothers in state-run enclosures, Edna Molewa, minister of environmental affairs, said in May.

"The ultimate aim is for the orphans to be integrated back into a normally functioning breeding population," Molewa said.

The mothers of most rhinos at the orphanage were shot, though one young rhino's mother died in a fight with another rhino.

Poachers with machetes hacked another baby rhino more than two-dozen times as it stayed near the body of its mother, but it recovered at the orphanage.

Founded in 2012, The Rhino Orphanage says it has successfully raised and released nine rhinos back into the wild. Because of security concerns, the staff do not say how many rhinos are at the facility, which has no identifying signs at the entrance.

Poachers will "go for any little bit" of horn, even from a baby rhino whose horns are emerging, said Dex Kotze, a board director of the non-profit orphanage. He said it can cost roughly $32,000 a month to maintain the orphanage, and that several similar centers have started operating elsewhere in South Africa.

On one occasion, poachers were on their way to the orphanage but their gang had been infiltrated by an undercover agent from South African intelligence and the suspects were arrested, according to Benavides, the vet.

International interns who have assisted with the rhinos turned off phone and camera location settings and did not post photographs or video onto social media websites while at the orphanage for fear of giving away its whereabouts, said Fortunata Phaka, project leader of the group called Youth 4 African Wildlife.

form. We are hoping by this research we can predict them better in the future,” Kurdzo said. “Many times these storms happen at night while people are sleeping. We are hoping in the future we can warn of storms with 100 mph that will hit during the night, before someone goes to bed.”

Kurdzo added these storms can be even more dangerous than tornadoes sometimes.

“They happen at night so people don’t really think much about them. They can be very severe, cause a lot of damage and travel hundreds of miles,” Kurdzo said. “We got all the universities together with one common goal; to get the warnings out sooner to save lives and property. We had 12 different organizations and a lot of logistics went into it. There were at least 30 different instruments on at least 30 vehicles. We had 25-30 investigators. These both the operational forecasting and in climate models.

Why is it important to study nighttime storms?

PECAN is driven in large part by poor prediction of these large-scale, severe and hazardous thunderstorms, known as Mesoscale Convective Systems (MCSs) that often occur at night. There is a considerable gap in our knowledge about the dynamical mechanisms that initiate, organize and maintain this convection. These storms have significant impact on the region’s hydrology, energy, agriculture and public safety. PECAN research will positively influence the nation’s forecasting and weather prediction capabilities through collaborative efforts between researchers and NOAA’s National Severe Storms Laboratory.

The effort is highly relevant to National Weather Service’s goal to assess the increasing dependence of storm-scale prediction on numerical modeling, as in the Warn on Forecast Initiative. This initiative has a goal to increase the lead-time of ac-conference presentations, publications and through PI memberships on international committees.

What kind of platforms and instruments were used?

The PECAN campaign calls for a wide range of more than 100 platforms and instruments to profile the atmosphere and make detailed observations of temperature, pressure, humidity, wind speed and direction.

A unique aspect of the experimental design is the integration of a wide variety of profiling systems into a fixed and mobile PECAN Integrated Sounding Array (PISA) including water vapor Differ-NEXRAD network and for its vertical scanning capabilities.

Three research aircraft will also be deployed to make higher altitude observations, including the NSF/University of Wyoming King Air, the NASA DC-8 that will probe the pre-convective environment, and the NOAA P-3 that will observe the dynamical and microphysical characteristics of MCSs.

Is data only collected at night?

Much of the fixed instrumentation of PECAN can operate autonomously and will therefore be collecting data continuously day and night. The mobile instrumentation requires experienced personnel were the main mission scientists. All of us were working together as colleagues for one common goal.”

It was a very interesting sight to see in Pampa those two days last week. Hopefully, this research will lead to a better handle and forecast of these nighttime thunderstorms.

More about PECAN

All information following here, came from the Earth Observing Laboratory website.

The Plains Elevated Convection at Night (PECAN) campaign is designed to increase the understanding of severe thunderstorms at night over the continental United States and involves eight research laboratories and 14 universities, both national and international. PECAN will be conducted across northern Oklahoma, central Kansas and into south-central Nebraska from June to July and is funded by the National Science Foundation (NSF), the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and the Department of Energy (DOE).

PECAN will focus on nighttime convection in conditions with strong low-level winds and a stable layer near the surface with the largest instability located aloft. The findings should be applicable to other continental regions with strong nighttime thunderstorms.

PECAN has four research objectives:

To better explain the environmental characteristics and processes that lead to nocturnal convection initiation and the early phases of large-scale storm clusters;

To better understand the internal structure and microphysics of the large-scale nocturnal storm clusters;

To advance the knowledge of wave-like disturbances caused by convective storms; and

To improve prediction of nocturnal convection that will be useful to improving curate tornado, severe thunderstorm and flash flood warnings to reduce the loss of life, injury and damage to the economy. Nocturnal convection, in particular, endangers public safety as significant flash floods in the eastern two-thirds of the U.S. usually occur at night. The data from this project will also assist in developing and applying space-based remote sensing, weather prediction and climate modeling.

While PECAN will initially focus on observational analyses, idealized modeling, and high-resolution simulations, we are confident that the advances in knowledge about the initiation, organization, maintenance and evolution will benefit both weather forecast models and climate models.

What are nighttime thunderstorms?

Nocturnal convection is nighttime thunderstorms. The prediction skill for nocturnal convective storms is lacking. Not only is it difficult to forecast the location and timing of nighttime storm formation, it is also difficult to forecast the evolution of the storms into mesoscale convective system (MCS). An MCS is a series or cluster of thunderstorms that organize into a large-scale system that typically persists for several hours or more. MCSs may become severe and can produce injuries or fatalities through torrential rains, flash floods, high winds, hail, intense electrical storms and even tornadoes.

Does this benefit other areas in the world?

While the study is aimed at the Great Plains of the U.S., the long-term implications of PECAN are that the findings will have important relevance for other regions with similarities in the behavior of convection. Relevant regions include southern Canada, the Sahel/Savanna belt of northern Africa, Asia, Africa, Europe, S. America and Australia.

Efforts will be made to draw international attention to PECAN findings through ential Absorption Lidars (DIAL), Doppler lidars, Raman water vapor lidars, multi-channel microwave radiometers, infrared spectrometers, and acoustic systems. Each PISA will be highly complementary in their capability to profile wind, temperature, water vapor, and aerosols. PECAN will deploy balloon-borne radiosonde soundings at discrete locations to complement others from the National Weather Service and Department of Energy sites.

Fixed PISAs (FP): Six ground-based sites will house fixed instrumentation in Kansas and Nebraska during the project.

Mobile PISAs (MP): A fleet of mobile facilities will be dispersed in the region targeting specific weather objectives each day.

In addition to the Mobile PISAs, a fleet of mobile C-band and X-band Doppler radar trucks will be deployed in the region to specific weather targets and events based on the daily research objectives.

The NEXRAD radar network will be used in conjunction with the NSF/NCAR 10-cm polarimetric radar, S-PolKa, which will be used for supplementing the and will be operated only during PECAN nighttime deployments.

Safety is a big concern and many efforts have been put into planning for the safety of all personnel. The mobile crews will be based in Hays, Kan., but will depart Hays late afternoon in time to reach their intended location well before sunset. They will set up their instruments and begin collecting data in the daytime hours. They will stay in position collecting data while the thunderstorms form or move over the instruments. After the storms have passed for the evening, they will return to Hays or to a nearby hotel if it is too late to safely return to Hays.

The project coordinators will closely monitor staff and insure that fatigue is not affecting the staff. With about 25 nights of operations within the 45-day PECAN period, there will be nights off for the staff to rest and recover.

More information on the PECAN project can be found at www.eol.ucar.edu/content/pecan-nutshell. More information on the PX-1000 radar used by the ARR group can be found at <http://arrrc.ou.edu/px1000/>

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, July 19, 2015:

This year you often will wish to travel distant lands. Your desire to learn more emerge, as you recognize that there is a lot you don't know. Some of you even might decide to go back to school. If you are single, you could become involved with someone from a totally different culture. If this person enters your life after August, it will have great significance. If you are attached, hopefully this yearning to know and understand more will be shared by your sweetie. Learn to better understand each other's values and thought processes. VIRGO can be very critical when dealing with you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★

Recognize what needs to be done, and then just do it. Free yourself up as soon as you can and get into a favorite outdoor happening. Maximize the summer days. Make plans to meet up with an older friend or relative later in the day. Tonight: Don't be alone for dinner.

This Week: Your energy increases as the days go by.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★

Looking at you, one might think that you are on cloud nine, but that probably isn't the case. Others simply are noticing your tendency to smile a lot. Your natural love of life emerges. Live it up. Romance could be just around the corner. Tonight: Make the most of the moment.

This Week: Take some time off if you can.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★

A friendship could take an unexpected twist. How you deal with a changeable matter will make a big difference in the outcome. Maintain a sense of humor. You might feel the support of someone in a way you have not experienced before. Tonight: Say "yes" to an invitation.

This Week: Schedule some networking time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★

You might feel pulled in several different directions. Interference seems to keep happening in the form of calls and requests from others. You either will have to ignore the calls and do whatever you want or take off. Tonight: A close loved one wants to call the shots.

This Week: Question what you hear before taking a comment as fact.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★

You usually are very generous; however, you might feel as if a friend or a loved one might be somewhat deceptive or perhaps completely unrealistic. Schedule some time to have a discussion with this person. Tonight: You choose.

This Week: Keep a close eye on your finances.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★

A conflict could occur between you and a close loved one. You might have put this person on a pedestal. Don't be surprised when he or she falls off. Remember that it was you who put him or her there. Infuse the situation with some caring. Tonight: Do what you love.

This Week: Handle as much as you can Monday and Tuesday.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★

As much as you love to go out and about, you also need some time with a loved one or by yourself. Make plans around these needs, and you feel more ready to handle life's ups and downs. A change at home could make life even more enjoyable. Tonight: Get some extra zzz's.

This Week: You might not feel up to snuff until midweek.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★

You will become more in tune with a certain situation. Let go of any preconceived notions of what you think will happen. Clear your mind, and walk in with an open mind and some compassion. You might have a major surprise greet you. Tonight: Out on the town.

This Week: Push hard Monday and Tuesday, especially with key matters.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★

Share more of yourself when you are out with friends or at a meeting. You have many wonderful ideas; you just don't get feedback often enough. Pursue a favorite pastime and invite a friend along. Tonight: A get-together might be spontaneous, but it's worth staying up for.

This Week: Accept the lead role.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★

Maintain a sense of humor, even as a conversation or an interaction becomes very confusing. Sorting it out might only increase the chaos. Let it go for now -- you will gain clarity in a while. Relax at the beach or take a walk with a friend. Tonight: Easy works.

This Week: Speak your mind Monday and Tuesday.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★

You will be at the beck and call of a loved one, but you'll enjoy every moment. Your financial well-being might not be as clear as it needs to be. You could be working with a false premise on some level. Your perspective needs revision. Tonight: Be part of the team.

This Week: Work with an individual more closely Monday and Tuesday.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★

A strange conversation could occur with a loved one or dear friend. What becomes clear is that you are not on the same page. Be as realistic as possible. A call from a dynamic friend encourages more spontaneity. Go for what you want. Tonight: Keep plans as they are.

This Week: Allow others to give you more feedback than usual.

60-pound dead fish found in suburban Kansas drainage ditch

OLATHE, Kan. (AP) — A suburban Kansas City animal control officer says she was skeptical when a man called to report a 4-foot-long carp in a drainage ditch.

But Jamie Schmidt, a school resource officer with the Olathe, Kansas, Police Department, soon found herself wrapping up the 60-pound dead fish in trash bags and using a lift to get it into her truck. It was actually 3 1/2 feet long.

The Kansas City Star reports the unidentified man found the carp Friday in the ditch near an elementary school. Schmidt, who is filling in as animal control officer while the regular one is on maternity leave, thinks it came from a nearby lake after heavy rains.

Living Well Aware Symposium

Altrusa International of Pampa and Pampa Regional Medical Center are making plans for a second wellness event featuring Dr. Patsy Sulak and her husband, Dr. Jeffrey A. Waxman, a pediatric urologist at Baylor Scott and White Hospital. Dr. Sulak, creator of Living Well Aware, came to Pampa in October 2014 for a program at M.K. Brown where she spoke to over 200 attendees on general health issues. Brad Morse, Pampa Regional Hospital CEO, was so impressed with her presentation he began making plans for her to return to Pampa for a health symposium featuring her husband as well.

Dr. Sulak founded and directs Living Well Aware, a truly unique wellness program on disease prevention through healthy living. The website is www.livingwellaware.com. Her book "Should I Fire My Doctor?" and her keynote addresses and conferences delineate the eleven essential elements to health and happiness, empowering everyone to take ownership of their well-being and partner with their healthcare providers for optimal health.

Dr. Sulak is a nationally recognized practicing physician, research, speaker, and medical school professor.

She graduated from the University of Texas Health Science Center at the San Antonio School of Medicine and was named the 2006 Distinguished Alumna.

In addition to her busy clinical practice, teaching and research, she presents throughout the country to businesses, organizations, schools and healthcare institutions on numerous health issues with a focus on disease prevention.

Her husband, Dr. Waxman, is her partner in Living Well Aware and was instrumental in bringing the idea of Living Well Aware into their lives. He frequently speaks at LWA Conferences on "Change is Possible", outlining 6 areas of his life where he has made dramatic improvements by changing his thinking and habits.

The Living Well Aware Symposium will be held on Sunday, August 16, 1:30-5:30 at the Pampa High School Commons. Tickets may be purchased from any Altrusa member for $25.00 each. For more information call Kathryn Green at 806-669-0148.

AAA Texas: protect your home from burglars before leaving for summer vacation

SUBMITTED BY AAA TEXAS

COPPELL - With large numbers of families taking summer vacations this year, homeowners should ask themselves what they can do to deter a burglar from breaking into their home while they're away. According to the U.S. Department of Justice, more home burglaries occur during the summer - in July and August - since families are away or enjoying more time outdoors.

Homes are burglarized about every 12 seconds in the United States, and a homeowner loses an average of more than $2,000 in possessions and damages in these types of property crimes.

"Before homeowners and renters travel for vacation they should spend time reviewing a checklist and making sure plans are in place to deter opportunistic crooks who could target homes while people are away," said AAA Texas/New Mexico Representative Doug Shupe. "Nobody wants to return from a trip of a lifetime to find a thief has made off with valuable possessions from their home."

AAA Texas recommends these simple tips to help prevent home break-ins this summer:

1. Never announce your vacation plans on social media.
2. Lock all doors and windows before you leave.

Use deadbolts, dowels, and locking pins in sliding glass doors and windows to keep them from being pried open. Slowing down a would-be burglar will likely make them seek another home that's easier to break into.

3. If possible, install a monitored alarm system in your home. You may be eligible for a discount on your insurance premium after the system is installed.

Make sure your home insurance is up-to-date, and check with your AAA Texas or other insurance representative to ensure your policy provides adequate coverage if you own luxury goods, expensive jewelry and electronics.

4. Keep the exterior of your home and yard well lit with low-wattage outdoor lighting.

5. Close and lock the garage door. Side garage doors should be solid, without any glass and equipped with a strong deadbolt.

6. Stop all deliveries, mail and newspapers, or ask a trustworthy neighbor or friend to pick them up for you. Don't let mail, including bank statements and credit card offers, sit in the mailbox to advertise you're away and tempt a thief to steal your identity. Don't let newspapers, even free local papers, pile up in driveways.

7. Use automatic timers with inside lamps and a radio. Set those devices to come on at random times.

8. Remove spare keys from outside your home, especially near the front door or under a welcome mat.

9. Trim bushes in front of entrances, including windows.

This eliminates a burglar's ability to hide while breaking in. Have your lawn mowed while you're on vacation to avoid the appearance of being away.

10. Keep some blinds up and curtains open to keep up normal appearances but make sure nothing valuable is in plain view from outside the windows.

Put away personal documents, and place critical documents in a safety deposit box or leave them with a relative.

Hide expensive jewelry or place in a safety deposit box at your bank.

As North America's largest motoring and leisure travel organization, AAA provides more than 55 million members with travel, insurance, financial and automotive-related services.

Cobra believed to have bitten, killed man found dead

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin officials say a cobra believed to have bitten and killed an 18-year-old Central Texas man has been found dead.

Austin Animal Protection Supervisor Mark Sloat says a person called 911 early Friday morning to report finding a dead snake. The snake was found on the side of the frontage road of Interstate 35 near the home improvement store parking lot where Grant Thompson was found unresponsive Tuesday. He had puncture wounds on his wrist.

Thompson, who was transporting the snake in his car, was later pronounced dead.

Sloat says the snake will be held as evidence until it's determined what killed Thompson, who worked at a pet shop in his hometown of Temple.

When people searched Thompson's car they found another snake, six tarantulas and a bullfrog.

South Koreans face daunting task building for Olympic hockey

FRISCO (AP) — South Korean goalie Kye Hoon Park took up ice hockey on the advice of an elementary school teacher.

His teacher used to be an ice hockey manager. And Park used to get in fights all the time.

"So my teacher was like, if you're going to get in fights, then just play hockey," a smiling Park said through an interpreter during a recent visit by him and two teammates to a development camp for prospects of the NHL's Dallas Stars.

Hockey's roots aren't deep in South Korea, which has never qualified for the Olympics but will get an automatic bid as host in Pyeongchang in 2018. That leaves three years to try to get as competitive as possible under coach Jim Paek, a native of Seoul, South Korea, and two-time Stanley Cup winner with Pittsburgh in the early 1990s.

Stars general manager Jim Nill struggled to find an analogy that illustrates the task ahead of his friend and former colleague in the Detroit organization.

"Remember the Dream Team?" Nill asked in reference to the first group of NBA players to win Olympic gold — easily — in 1992. "Playing against ... It would be a small, small country that's never played the sport much."

There will be plenty of opponents looking like the Dream Team to the South Koreans.

"They've got to play against Canada, Swedens, Russians, Czechs, Finland," Nill said. "There's seven or eight world powers and then there's another group that's not quite there, but they're not bad teams, either. Korea is just getting their feet wet. It's a daunting task. You've got to start somewhere."

New Life Assembly of God

New Life Assembly of God is located at 1435 N. Sumner Street in Pampa. New pastor, Sergio Urrutia, said their mission is "New life Assembly of God is committed to fulfilling a four-fold mission.

Our primary reason for being is to evangelize the lost, worship God, disciple believer and to show compassion, to build a multi-ethnic body of believers.

New life commits to reaching out to Pampa in all areas of the township with special emphasis to our Latino brothers and sisters.

Our worship will be a reflection of our multi-ethnic mixture of disciples including Christian Latino music, contemporary music as well as the traditional hymns and songs of the church.

Outreach will have as its goal to produce new believers who in turn are able to witness effectively and make disciples who will in turn continue this cycle.

This will be effected through small group bible studies, both Bi-lingual services, and bibles."

Services are Sunday at 10 a.m. and Sundays and Wednesdays at 7 p.m.

A tribute to Thursday's fallen heroes

Some friendly patron's put flowers outside of Pampa's Army Career Center Friday morning after the happenings Thursday afternoon in Chattanooga, Tenn., where four marines were murdered by a lone gunman.

At the Rotary Club

Logan Thomas, the local game warden, spoke at Rotary Club this Wednesday for "Service above self." The Rotary Club meets at noon every Wednesday at the Pampa Country Club.

How did gunman go from typical suburban life to attack?

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Counterterrorism investigators are trying to figure out why a 24-year-old Kuwait-born man who seemingly had a typical suburban American upbringing attacked two U.S. military sites in a shooting rampage that left four Marines dead. Muhammad Youssef Abdulazeez of Hixson, Tennessee, did not appear to have been on the radar of federal authorities before the bloodshed Thursday, officials said, and they were still searching for a motive. Abdulazeez was killed by police.

Federal authorities were looking into the possibility it was an act of terrorism but said there was no evidence yet that anyone else was involved. For months, U.S. counterterrorism authorities have been warning of the danger of attacks by individuals inspired but not necessarily directed by the Islamic State group. Officials have said they have disrupted several such lone-wolf plots. A federal law enforcement official said authorities were continuing a search of his computer but had not found an extensive online presence and had not uncovered any evidence he was directly influenced by the Islamic State. The official was not authorized to discuss the case publicly and spoke on condition of anonymity. Residents in the quiet neighborhood where Abdulazeez was believed to have lived in a two-story home said they would see him walking along the wide streets or doing yard work. One neighbor recalled Abdulazeez giving him a ride home when he became stranded in a snowstorm. "It's kind of a general consensus from people that interacted with him that he was just your average citizen there in the neighborhood. There was no reason to suspect anything otherwise," said Ken Smith, a city councilman who met with neighbors Thursday night. Abdulazeez got an engineering degree from the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga in 2012 and worked as an intern a few years ago at the Tennessee Valley Authority, the federally owned utility that operates power plants and dams across the South. For the last three months, he had been working at Superior Essex Inc., which designs and makes wire and cable products.

Texas employers add jobs for third straight month

June 4.2 percent unemployment rate matches state's lowest since July 2007.

SUBMITTED BY TEXAS WORKFORCE COMMISSION
AUSTIN — marked its third straight month of seasonally adjusted job growth with the addition of 16,700 nonagricultural jobs in June. The state has added jobs in 56 of the last 57 months, including a total of 53,600 positions in the first half of 2015. Over the year, Texas has seen an increase of 269,900 jobs.

"Texas employers continue to create employment opportunities which is great news for the state and its' workforce," said TWC Chairman Andres Alcantar. "Texas Workforce Solutions is committed to developing partnerships and innovative solutions that equip workers with in-demand job skills." Texas' seasonally adjusted unemployment rate fell to 4.2 percent in June, down from 4.3 percent in May. This marks the third month this year that the rate has dipped to 4.2 percent, the lowest rate of unemployment for the state since July 2007. Texas continued to trend below the U.S. unemployment rate of 5.3 percent in June. "Texas workers have much to offer and many resources at their disposal to find the perfect occupational fit," said TWC Commissioner Representing Labor Ronny Congleton. "I encourage all Texas job seekers to register with WorkInTexas.com and join the largest free job-matching network in Texas." June's job gains in Service Providing industries were led by the Education and Health Services industry, which added 10,100 positions. Professional and Business Services added 8,300 jobs in June. Gains in the Goods Producing industries were centered in Mining and Logging, which saw an increase of 2,700 jobs during the month. The Amarillo Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA) boasted the lowest unemployment rate in the state in June, a not seasonally adjusted rate of 3.2 percent, followed by the Austin-Round Rock MSA with a rate of 3.3 percent and the Midland MSA which had a rate of 3.4

percent in June. Audio downloads with comments from Chairman Alcantar on the latest labor market data are available on the TWC website press release page. Employment estimates released by TWC are produced in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics. All estimates are subject to revision. Publishers Clearing House will knock – not call

They won't ask for money, either.

SUBMITTED BY THE BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU
 Calls to BBB regarding Publisher Clearing House Sweepstakes scams have increased. Like most scams, these calls capitalize on real stories but are just another way to trick you into giving away your money. The scammers hope you don't know the real deal from the fakes. In the scam Callers claim you have won millions of dollars but first you have to send money to receive your winnings. Once you agree and send money – any amount – they keep calling and asking for more. They claim the money is for fees, insurance, taxes or even postage to get through customs. They keep promising your money is coming by mail or wire transfer. Keep in mind, federal law dictates that no money has to be paid in order to win a prize. • In any prize promotion you do not have to pay money to receive your winnings. In the real Publishers Clearing House Sweepstakes • You will get a prize notification by registered mail. • You will NOT be asked to send money to claim you prize. When you win, the money comes to you. • You will have had to enter the sweepstakes – names are not chosen randomly. • Your name will be listed in the Winners Circle on the PCH website. If it's not – you didn't win. • For the grand prize - the PCH prize patrol will show up at your door with a bou-quet of flowers and TV cameras – just like in the commercials. They will not charge you to collect your prize. Report scams in the Scam Source section of our website. Contact Publishers Clearing House directly for information at 1-800-459-4724 or <http://www.pch.com/>.

Spanish town's summer advice: don't skip your siesta

MADRID (AP) — The heat is on, and a Spanish town is taking its afternoon siesta seriously.

Every summer day in Ador, a small farming town in eastern Spain, a policeman reads out a town hall proclamation recommending that locals observe the traditional siesta period between 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. The advice, given over a loudspeaker system, encourages people to keep children indoors and turn down the volume of TV sets and music equipment.

Mayor Joan Faus told The Associated Press on Friday that locals are not legally required to observe the siesta period.

But he said the town hall strongly recommends they stay indoors because "at that time of day it is dangerous to be outside" because of the summer heat.

We believe in family, the health of your family is as important to us as it is to you!

35,000 gallons of oil spills after Montana train derailment

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Three tank cars leaked an estimated 35,000 gallons of oil after a train hauling crude from North Dakota derailed in rural northeastern Montana, the latest in a series of wrecks raising concerns across the U.S. and Canada, authorities said Friday.

No one was reported injured in the accident Thursday night that temporarily led to the evacuation of some homes and followed recent oil train crashes including a 2013 derailment in Quebec that exploded and killed 47 people.

A hazardous-materials team contained the spill with earthen dams, and oil did not affect any waterways, according to a preliminary report by Michael Turnbull of the U.S. Department of Transportation to Montana's Public Service Commission.

Unlike many prior accidents, no explosions or fire were reported after the Burlington Northern Santa Fe train derailed about 5 miles east of the small town of Culbertson, near the North Dakota border.

But about 30 people were evacuated from their homes within a half-mile radius, Turnbull said. That order was lifted Friday morning.

There was no immediate explanation of what caused more than 20 cars to topple from the train, which had 106 loaded crude oil tank cars, two buffer cars and four locomotives. The tank cars typically haul about 30,000 gallons of oil apiece.

Two days ago, a BNSF train carrying a mixed cargo derailed about 20 miles away from Thursday's accident, damaging about a mile of track. There was no connection between the derailments, railroad spokesman Matt Jones said.

The latest accident knocked over a power line, and firefighters planned to spray foam on the wreckage to prevent a fire, Roosevelt County Chief Deputy Sheriff Corey Reum said.

"We're lucky it didn't ignite," Reum said.

Under a rule enacted in April, oil being shipped from North Dakota must be treated to reduce the chances of an explosion — by removing some of the volatile gases found in crude from the region. It was not immediately known if the shipment involved in Thursday's accident had gone through that process.

It forced the closure of U.S. Highway 2, the region's main artery, which was expected to stay shut through much of Friday, Reum said.

Investigators from the Federal Railroad Administration were on site, agency spokesman Michael Booth said, along with police and other responders. BNSF's response crews arrived late Thursday.

Roosevelt County is situated along one of the main corridors for Bakken oil shipments bound for refineries on the West Coast. About 12 BNSF oil trains a week pass through the county, according to information submitted by the railroad to state emergency officials.

U.S. transportation officials recently extended an order for railroads to notify states about shipments of hazardous crude-oil shipments and put in place new rules that require sturdier construction of tank cars hauling hazardous liquids. Critics have said the rules do not do enough to keep cars on the tracks and prevent derailments.

In addition to the 2013 Quebec accident, in which much of the town of Lac-Megantic was incinerated, trains hauling crude from the Bakken region of North Dakota and Montana have been involved in fiery derailments in Alabama, Illinois, Virginia, Oklahoma and North Dakota.

In year of parity, nearly every team has playoffs chance

NEW YORK (AP) — Clayton Kershaw looks around the major leagues and sees opponents convinced they can reach the playoffs.

"It's just a matter of everybody beating up on everybody," the Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher said. "We want everybody to feel like they're in it."

It's the year of parity in the major leagues, when almost no one has managed to break away from the pack or fall way behind. Kershaw, a three-time Cy Young Award winner and the reigning NL MVP, has a won-lost record reflecting the parity — he's 6-6.

Every team in the American League reached the All-Star break with a .450 winning percentage or higher. It's the first time an entire league did that since 1944, according to STATS, and many rosters that season were depleted of stars because of World War II.

"It's fantastic to see," Pittsburgh pitcher Gerrit Cole said. "All the teams at .500 all think they're going to finish over .500, and all the teams that are over .500, and even us, we're always fretting, looking behind our back."

Boston headed to the All-Star break in last place yet just 6 1/2 games from first — only the second time since division play began in 1969 the AL East spread was that close. The first-to-last gap has been that narrow in any division just nine times overall in the expansion era, STATS said.

"We're at the bottom of the barrel right now, but we're not that far out," Red Sox All-Star Brock Holt said. "It's just about going out and taking care of our business, and the standings will kind of take care of themselves towards the end of the year."

Oakland has the worst record in the AL but at 41-50 is just 8 1/2 games behind the West-leading Los Angeles Angels. While last in the AL Central, the Chicago White Sox are 41-45 and only 5 1/2 games out for the AL's second wild card.

"We have an unbelievable level of competitive balance," new baseball Commissioner Rob Manfred said. "When I look at the standings, I think we're in for one heck of a ride in the second half of the season."

There is a little more spread in the NL, where the St. Louis Cardinals have the major leagues' best record at 56-33 and Philadelphia owns the worst at 29-62. Other than the Phillies, Miami and Milwaukee, every team is within single-digit games back of a playoff berth.

"It just shows that there's not really that a monopoly of a franchise right now," Baltimore closer Zach Britton said.

Kansas City was 48-46 at the All-Star break last year, 6 1/2 games behind AL Central-leading Detroit and 2 1/2 back of Seattle for the league's second wild card. By October, the Royals were one win shy of their first World Series title since 1985.

Royals manager Ned Yost said the bunching gave his AL players extra incentive in the All-Star Game.

"Everybody in that locker room is going to have a chance to continue to move forward and be playoff bound," he said before the AL's 6-3 victory.

Toronto, Seattle and the Marlins are the only teams that have not made the playoffs since 2005. Increased revenue sharing, the luxury tax on payrolls and restraints on amateur signing bonuses have helped more teams become competitive.

While the Dodgers opened the season with a payroll of nearly $273 million for their 40-man roster, according to Major League Baseball's calculations, there was a huge dropoff after that to the Yankees at $220 million and Boston at $187 million. Six teams were at $140 million to $175 million, seven at $120 million to $125 million, and six more above $100 million.

"A lot of teams that are expected to win are learning that the revenues that they are making ... they're actually going to have to spend some of those revenues to create the gap and not stay where they're at, because teams are getting close to them," agent Scott Boras said.

All that crowding in the standings has its impact on talks as general managers approach July 31, the last day to deal players without passing them through waivers first.

"It makes the trade deadline a lot harder, obviously," Kershaw said. "Not as many teams think they're out of it. It makes it tougher to get pieces, which means you've got to build your team earlier in the offseason, in my opinion."

Magic Johnson backing new scholarship at Michigan State

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Earvin "Magic" Johnson is backing a new scholarship to help students facing the rising cost of higher education.

The Lansing State Journal reports (<http://on.lsj.com/1faOMV7>) that the former basketball star and members of the Michigan State University Black Alumni are hosting the inaugural MSUBA Classic on Aug. 11.

Money raised from the golf outing and luncheon will go toward the $50,000 necessary to start a new endowment. Once established, the Magic Johnson Scholarship would be available annually to students currently enrolled at Michigan State University.

Organizers are hoping to make the scholarship available to students in the fall of 2016.

Michael Jordan to be inducted in FIBA Hall of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Jordan, who won two Olympic gold medals, will be inducted in the FIBA Hall of Fame.

Basketball's governing body announced Friday that Jordan will be part of class of nine players who will be enshrined Sept. 19.

The six-time NBA champion won gold with the U.S. in 1984 at Los Angeles, then starred on the famed Dream Team in 1992 in Barcelona, Spain.

Jordan is already in the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame as an individual and with the rest of the Dream Team.

The rest of the class includes players Sarunas Marciulionis (Lithuania), Anne Donovan (U.S.), Vladimir Tkachenko (Russia/Ukraine), Rupert Herrera Tabio (Cuba), Antoine Rigaudeau (France); coach Jan Stirling (Australia), technical official Robert Blanchard (France) and contributor Noah Klieger (Israel).

They will be honored in Lille, France, then presented at halftime of the Eurobasket championship game on Sept. 20.

Developer celebrating new project for NFL retirees

OCOEE, Fla. (AP) — The NFL Alumni Association and a Florida-based developer are celebrating the start of construction on a new retirement center that will provide assisted living and memory care services for former NFL players.

Officials from both groups gathered for a ceremony in Ocoee, Florida to mark the $1.1 billion project led by Validus Senior Living. It is building 33 facilities nationwide over the next five years. The communities will be located in major cities with a high concentration of retired NFL players.

Hall of Famers Jack Youngblood, Kellen Winslow, Dwight Stephenson and others were on hand Thursday at the Ocoee site, which will have capacity for 158 residents.

According to the NFL and NFL Players Association, nearly 30 percent of players will develop Alzheimer's disease or some other dementia-related brain condition.

Brandon Marshall tweets that Jets 'will be my last team'

NEW YORK (AP) — Brandon Marshall says the New York Jets will be the last stop of his playing career.

The star wide receiver was answering questions from fans on Twitter on Thursday night when he was asked what team he expects to retire with.

The 31-year-old Marshall responded: "If I'm cut tomorrow, I'll retire. This will be my last team."

Marshall was acquired from Chicago in March. New York reworked his salary, increasing it from $24.3 million total to $26 million over the next three seasons.

He had 61 catches for 721 yards — his lowest numbers since his rookie season in 2006 — with eight touchdowns last season.

Marshall was asked by another fan how many more seasons he expects to play, and the receiver tweeted: "After Jets, I'm done."

Big Green Monster cukes? Rooftop garden thrives at Fenway

BOSTON (AP) — There's more green at Fenway Park than the infield or the monster wall.

The Red Sox are growing vegetables and herbs in a rooftop garden. The produce is used in food and cocktails sold at the concessions, at nearby restaurants and in the team's flagship restaurant that prepares meals for about 40,000 people during home games.

The 5,000-square-foot garden on the third-base side of Fenway has turned a previously unused part of the historic stadium into the largest of a handful of farms that have sprouted up in Major League Baseball stadiums, said Chris Knight, manager of facilities services and planning for the Red Sox.

The sight of a lush, green garden on the third level of the stadium excited Sox fan John Bunker, who recently travelled from his home in Palermo, Maine, to see the team in action and make a pilgrimage to the rooftop farm.

"This is great because although a lot of people love to come to Fenway and eat a hot dog, some people don't want to eat a hot dog, they want to eat something else — maybe a salad or a wrap with vegetables in it," Bunker said.

The garden is unique because the crops are grown in milk crates, which make it possible to move the farm if needed, said Jessie Banhazl, whose company, Green City Growers, is responsible for planting and maintaining the garden.

Growers use intensive methods, including drip irrigation and planting fresh crops right after others are harvested. That's enabled the garden to yield more than 2,000 pounds of tomatoes, cucumber, eggplants, all sorts of peppers, rosemary, basil, dill, parsley, tarragon and kale in the first three months, Banhazl said.

"So we're growing a little bit of everything," she said. "It's our first year doing the farm and so we thought we'd try out a bunch of different varieties to see what the kitchens were using, and also to just kind of experiment with what people liked."

Starting a farm at the iconic ballpark required checking the structural integrity of the roof and using lightweight soil, Banhazl said.

Growing crops atop a stadium packed with screaming fans can be distracting. Some, surprised to see a garden on the roof, wander over to ask questions.

"But we actually really enjoy that part of it. Being able to engage with the public is a huge reason why we do what we do," she said.

Determining what's grown involves consultations with chefs at the Red Sox flagship EMC Club restaurant.

"I've been here since 2006 and along with that came that farm-to-table mentality," said Rob Abell, senior executive chef at Fenway concessionaire Aramark, who oversees food preparations at the restaurant.

"For years we've been using all the local farmers — you know, kind of creating our dishes with what's in season and making sure that food doesn't travel too far to get to us," he said. "Well, it's ridiculous how close it is now because literally it's about 150 feet from us."

"A lot of folks come to Fenway Park and maybe it's a day they're eating our delicious hot dogs and sausages and pizza and chicken tenders," Abell said.

"But there are still thousands of people looking for something healthy, and it's just great to be able to give them that opportunity to go eat healthy at the ballpark if that's what they want to do."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, July 20, 2015:

This year you can verbalize your thoughts and feelings more clearly than you have in the past. People respond to your efforts. You will be busier and happier than you have been in many years. The period starting mid-August could bring a lot of emotional fulfillment. If you are single, you are likely to meet someone of significance. You won't have to go far to meet this person; it will happen naturally. If you are attached, the two of you enjoy clear and expressive communication. Schedule more dates and weekends away together. VIRGO has a precision that you lack.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You'll feel as if you can handle whatever heads your way. You could be feeling this way all day long, so make the most of it. You likely will be greeted by the unexpected. You will see many fast changes when you go in a new direction. Tonight: Take time to chat with a pal.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Your creativity encourages you to head down a new path. This new vision is the result of being able to detach. In the next few months, you will see a change in your romantic life. As a result, you will be much happier. Tonight: Add more spice to your life.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ You will appreciate some downtime, even if those around you don't encourage that kind of behavior. You will open up and be more creative once you get some much-needed personal time. Use caution with money matters. Tonight: Let the party go on and on.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Keep reaching out to someone at a distance. How you handle a certain situation could be much more effective if you detach, ask questions and are willing to re-evaluate your perspective about a key person in your life. Tonight: Catch up with a neighbor who has news to share.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Use caution with your finances, and you will avoid trouble. Your sense of humor comes into play when dealing with someone unpredictable who is full of light and energy. Understand what is happening behind the scenes, and move forward. Tonight: Balance your checkbook.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★
Relate directly to someone you care about. This person will be delighted to have your time and attention. In general, reactions today will shock you and send you into another dimension. Maintain a sense of humor. Don't overthink a situation. Tonight: As you like it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Know when you need to step back and say little. Close associates seem unpredictable. You might take someone's comments personally and not as they were intended. Keep smiling, and know what results you desire. Life might take an interesting turn. Tonight: Make it a quiet night.

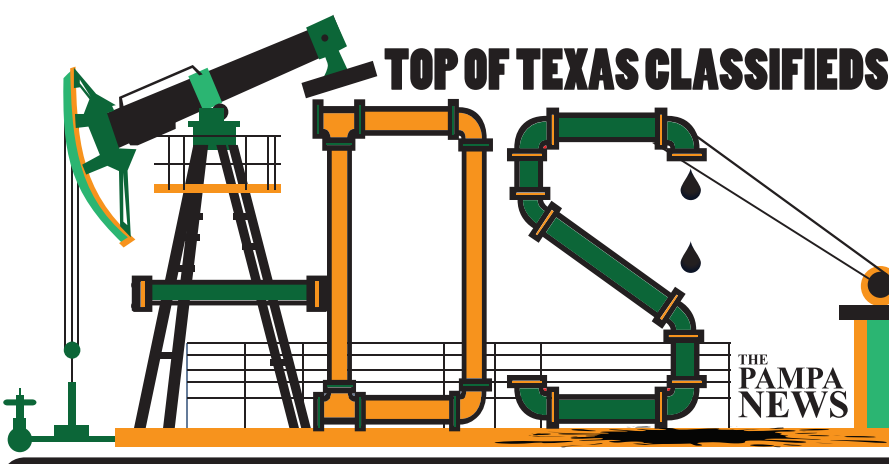

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Your ability to understand where a friend is coming from should be treasured by that individual. Don't push someone too hard right now. You'll have an opinion about what needs to happen, but so will he or she, and you might not concur. Tonight: All smiles.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You have the capability to turn a situation around if you so choose. Nevertheless, you can't seem to stay focused on one issue at the moment. Try to be more direct and upbeat in various areas of your life. Let go of what is difficult for now. Tonight: A must appearance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You'll push hard to achieve certain benefits, especially in business and financial matters. Remember that emotional security also is a high priority. Listen to what is happening with a friend or associate who might be far away. Tonight: A new vision becomes possible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ A partner, friend or loved one seems to want to push you in the direction that he or she would like you to head in. If you don't want to head down that path, speak up -- there are different paths follow. Expect a certain amount of flak. Tonight: Be a duo.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You might feel out of sorts as you head in a new direction. What you think you want and what you actually receive could be two different things. You need to lie low, even if someone is being fussy. What happens here could be crucial to your well-being. Tonight: Say "yes."

Legals / Public Notice

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
 The Planning and Zoning Commission of the City of Pampa will conduct a Public Hearing at 5:00 p.m. on August 5th, 2015 at City Hall, 200 W. Foster Street, Pampa, Texas in the City Commission Chambers. This will be a public hearing for the purpose of receiving public comments concerning the following request:
 Vincent Gerard and Associates, Inc. requests a Specific Use permit at a 0.0517 acre lease area out of 130.40 acres decided to Rusty Stevens, situated in Section 92, Block 3, I&GN RR Co. survey, Gray County, Pampa, Texas. More specifically, the lease site is located approximately 400 feet east and 300 feet north of the intersection of 18th Ave. & Holly Ln. The applicant proposes to install a 180' monopole cell phone tower for Verizon Wireless. This property is currently zoned A (Agricultural) and currently does not allow a wireless structure without a specific use permit for height and use. The City Commission will consider approval of a specific use permit following a recommendation to grant such a permit by the City's Planning and Zoning Commission. All interested parties are encouraged to attend this hearing. Public comments on the proposed specific use permit are welcome and will be heard.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating my boyfriend, "Derek," for four years. After a night of emotion-filled discussion, he asked me to marry him. I said yes, but it has always been a difficult idea for me to wrap my head around. I'm turning 21 and although that may be old enough for some people to get married and have kids, it scares the heck out of me.

I love Derek and I want to marry him one day. He assured me we could stay "engaged" for a few years, but it still makes me uneasy. We don't have a ring yet, and we agreed we wouldn't tell our families until we get one. It doesn't feel real because there's no ring and no one knows -- could that be why I'm so nervous?

I need a second opinion and some advice on whether to wait to tell anyone or tell people now. -- COLD FEET

DEAR COLD FEET: An engagement with no ring and no announcement hardly seems like an engagement at all. That's why you and Derek should rethink making any announcements until you BOTH feel ready to take such a big step. When the time is right, the idea of marriage and children will make you feel happy, not frightened.

Frankly, I think your fears may be well founded because you have had little life experience -- and once the ball starts rolling, stopping it may be complicated. That's why you and Derek should remain in a holding pattern until you are more confident about what you want to do.

DEAR ABBY: Although I am not considered bad looking, I'm not extremely beautiful either. Guys find my friends prettier than me.

For a few years I have been thinking about getting a nose job. My parents say I need to wait for all my facial features to adjust to my growing body to prevent facial disfigurement in the future. I think that's just an excuse. When is the right age to get a nose job? -- ALABAMA TEEN

DEAR TEEN: This is a question that should be answered by your personal physician. You didn't state your age, but I don't think your parents are stalling. According to WebMD, it is very important that before a young person has a nose job the facial bones have reached "adult size." The usual age for girls' noses to mature is 15 or 16. (Interestingly, for boys it is a year or so later.)

DEAR ABBY: My father had a son with a woman while he was dating my mother. Mom made Dad choose between her and his son. He chose Mom, and has had no contact with the boy. Dad doesn't want to interfere with his now-grown son's life. I, on the other hand, would love to reach out and meet my half-brother. Would it be overstepping boundaries if I do this? -- SOMEONE'S SIBLING IN MICHIGAN

DEAR SOMEONE'S SIBLING: I'd be curious to know how you became aware of your half-brother's existence, because I'll bet the topic wasn't discussed in your home. While I might have no objection to you reaching out to your half-sibling -- because I am not emotionally involved -- your mother will feel betrayed and angry. If you decide to move forward, be prepared.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

To order "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send your name and mailing address, plus check or money order for $7 (U.S. funds) to: Dear Abby -- Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price.

As I write this, it's confirmed: no McIlroy, Spieth continues his great play with the John Deere victory, and Rickie Fowler outlasted Matt Kuchar for the Scottish Open Championship. If there was going to be an American winner, then the run-up to The Open Championship would suggest that this is the year. Of course, there are several more links-oriented players like Adam Scott, Branden Grace, Louis Oosthuizen and Luke Donald, who're also showing good form.

What all of these players will have on display this week is a versatile short game. Take time to watch the sort of shots they craft from 40 yards in. Try and focus on their setup and angle of attack on the ball with the short shots. Notice where their hands are at impact. Notice what they do with their hands after impact. Watch their upper and lower bodies on the 40 yard pitch shots. There's a lot of opportunity to learn from the Pros this week.

Then, get out on the practice ground and see how that can help your game. Remember, a better short game pays off on the bottom line very quickly. And, as always, we're here to help. Contact us now at Pampa Country Club.

Regards,
Tim

TCU picked by media to win Big 12 Conference football title

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — TCU is the pick of the media to win the Big 12 Conference football championship.

Oklahoma is picked to finish third in the poll released Wednesday while Oklahoma State is picked fourth.

Baylor is picked to finish second.

TCU received 32 of 42 first place votes while Baylor received the other ten.

Texas is picked to finish fifth, followed by West Virginia; Kansas State; Texas Tech; Iowa State; and Kansas.

Former Razorback Cobbs arrested on prostitution count

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A former Arkansas Razorback and

NFL running back has been arrested on a charge of promoting prostitution.

Pulaski County jail records show 34-year-old Cedric Cobbs was booked into the jail about 1:30 a.m. Friday. No attorney is listed for him.

An arrest report says Cobbs drove a woman to a hotel Thursday night where she had arranged to have sex for money with an undercover officer. The report says Cobbs was arrested in the parking lot by other officers.

Cobbs played for the Arkansas Razorbacks from 1999 to 2003 and professionally for the New England Patriots and Denver Broncos.
