Only 17 Farmers Take Cotton "B" Plan

A total of 17 Hall County cotton farmers chose to take the "B" plan cotton allotment which will provide them with a 40 per cent increase in acreage at a lower support price, Lynn McKown, manager of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation office said this week.

This number was 1.7 per cent of the total number of farmers, 918, who have cotton allotments this year. The original county cotton allotment was 91,841 acres for the 1959 crop.

There are 59 farms in the Soil Bank with all of their land. These farms have a total allotment of 172 acres. This acreage cannot be planted, leaving a figure of 8,869 acres. Those who entered the "B" plan will receive an additional 704 acres, making the total which can be seeded 89,073 acres.

Over the state as a whole 21,184 farmers chose the "B" plan. This was 10 per cent of the Texas cotton farmers and will increase the state allotted acres by 419,215, an increase of 6 per cent.

City Election To Be Tuesday; Howell, Ward In Mayor Race

B&PW Club Will Urge Voters To Go To Polls Tues.

A project to "get-out-the-vote" in the city election Tuesday is being sponsored by the local Business and Professional Women's Club, Mrs. Mary Jameson, president, announced today.

Members of the club Thursday at noon voted to promote this project. All persons who have telephones will be contacted prior to the election and urged to go to the polls Tuesday to cast their vote.

The club is not endorsing any candidate, but is urging citizens to vote as a public service project.

School Balloting Will Be Held In Various Districts Saturday

A total of 11 absentee ballots had been cast in the city election by Thursday morning, according to City Secretary Dwight Kinard.

A large vote is expected Tuesday, if the absentee balloting can be taken as any indication of the turnout.

"This is the greatest number of absentee votes we have had in several years," the city secretary said.

Considerable interest has developed in the race for mayor where H. J. Howell and Lloyd Ward are both seeking the position. This is the only place on the ballot where there is any opposition.

M. E. McNally Jr. is seeking the post of alderman from Ward No. 1 and O. M. Gunstream is running for re-election in Ward No. 2. Ben Parks is seeking the post in Ward No. 3 and E. C. Rice in Ward No. 4. Rice is also running for re-election.

Aldermen with one more year to serve are E. E. Roberts, Ward No. 1; Gene Hughs, Ward No. 2; Ed Foxhall, Ward No. 3; and B. O. Shankle, Ward No. 4.

Only 149 men paid their city poll tax this year, however there are many others who will be able to vote due to being over 60 years of age by Jan. 1, 1959.

It was also explained that no city poll tax is required of women; so every woman who paid the state poll tax is eligible to vote. Those who are over age may also vote.

In Ward No. 1 there were 44 men who paid their city poll tax; Ward No. 2, 23; Ward No. 3, 67; Ward No. 4, 14. The boundaries of the various wards and the place where the election for that ward will be held is as follows:

Ward No. 1—the area south of Main Street and east of 8th Street. Balloting will be in the city tax office.

Ward No. 2—the area south of Main Street and west of 8th Street. Balloting will be in the Chamber of Commerce office.

Ward No. 3—the area north of Main Street and west of 10th Street. Balloting will be in the city tax office.

Ward No. 4—the area north of Main Street and east of 10th Street. Balloting will be in the city tax office.

Over 200 MHS Exes Here Fri.

Approximately 200 Memphis High School ex-students were in attendance Saturday night at the Travis Cafeterium to hear Jack Sitton of Carlsbad, N. M., speak on the greatest threat to this nation's security.

Sitton, a 1933 graduate of the local schools, told the group that the greatest threat to this nation is from within.

"The threat of which I speak comes not from Russia... It comes mainly from our own apathy," he said.

"And what can you and I do to stem the tide of such tremendous forces? We can take an active role in our local and state public affairs. We can participate actively in our own precinct and county politics.

"As a practical matter, your single vote in state and national elections counts but little. But you can make your influence felt a thousand times over if you will take an interest in your precinct and county party political meetings. You may think that politics are dirty and unpleasant, and you want no part of them. But you and I, and all of us, are going to have to take a hand.

"We are going to have to help settle the little questions of government in order to help settle the big questions of government.

"This is the only way we can help preserve our country and our heritage," he concluded.

Mrs. Mildred Stephens, president of the association, presided at the event and Paul Hancock gave the invocation.

The senior class, sponsor of the event, decorated with an Easter motif featuring a rabbit, Easter basket and a program book with the title "Happy Easter Exes."

Bill Whitten, senior president, gave the welcome address and Shirley Reed Bryant the response.

Carrol Walls Hill, a 1921 graduate now living in Dodge City, Kans., told some of her experience. (Continued on Page 12)

License Sales Shows Gain of Three Over 1958

Vehicle registrations this year were three above the number tabulated last year, according to Mrs. W. C. Anderson, county tax collector and assessor.

As the deadline for registering passed April 1, there had been a total of 3173 vehicles supplied with new license plates.

Last year at the same time there were 3170 vehicles registered.

Automobiles led the number with a total of 2146. Next were commercial vehicles with 475 being listed, followed by farm vehicles with a total of 424.

There were 87 trailers registered, and 41 miscellaneous vehicles.

Area-Wide TV Meet To Be Held Friday

Citizens from Hall, Donley and Childress counties were urged this week to attend an area-wide meeting in Memphis Monday evening, April 6, to hear facts about better television reception.

Issuing the invitation was Brown Smith, president of the Hall County Farm Bureau. Members of the Bureau are sponsoring a move to establish better reception, and have invited Odel Setliff to be here Monday evening.

The group will meet in the Memphis High School auditorium. The session will get underway at 8 p.m.

"Since we are in a fringe area for television, we believe we have a chance to improve reception," Smith said.

"We have an opportunity to get a new tower for the purpose of rebroadcasting television programs to residents of this area, who depend on it for most of their entertainment. An arrangement has been made with Mr. Setliff, who can give us this good reception, to meet with us and explain all details.

"All citizens of the three counties are urged to attend the Monday meeting. Cost of getting better television reception will be explained as well as other details of the program," Smith added.

Report From Washington

By WALTER ROGERS
Congressional District Representative, 18th

More About Spending

One of the leading stories in a Washington newspaper last week started off as follows:

"The House last week handed President Eisenhower a second victory in as many days when it voted 315 to 57 to increase the United States' contributions to the World Bank and International Monetary Fund in the current fiscal year, rather than in 1960."

The debate brought out that the 1 billion 375 million dollars would be charged to the federal debt. The federal debt now stands at 285 billion dollars. I was among the 57 who voted against it.

The following headline headlined the other victory referred to in the above story: "President Triumphs as House Approves Money for Aid Fund"

The story began like this: "President Eisenhower won an important victory in the House yesterday when a bipartisan majority approved 100 million dollars in new money for the Development Loan Fund by a vote of 191 to 85."

The Development Loan Fund is a part of the foreign aid fund. I was among the 85 who voted "NO."

These two actions cost the American taxpayer 1 billion 475 million dollars, which will be borrowed money on which interest must be paid by that same taxpayer.

The whole transaction reminded me of the story of the music critic who was given an assignment of reporting on an appearance of a string quartet. His brief but most revealing review of the performance read as follows:

"Last evening at the City Auditorium a string quartet played Brahms. Brahms lost."

When I saw what happened to the American taxpayer last week, I couldn't help but think of poor Brahms.

More About Spending

The Supplemental Appropriations Bill came before the House last week and included some items for the District of Columbia to supplement their funds for this year, because they were facing a deficit of some 5 million dollars. Each year the federal government, because of the great amount of federal property owned in the District on which no taxes are collected, makes a contribution or federal payment in lieu of taxes to the district. This has been set for next fiscal year at 25 million dollars. It was claimed that the payment last year was too small and that additional sums had to be provided. When the Appropriations Committee cut the supplemental amount requested by some 3 million dollars, the local press rose up in arms and editorialized in news stories and on the editorial page against Congress.

This federal payment has long been a sore spot with many people, and I decided to look a few figures to see what the financial status of a citizen of the District of Columbia was, compared to that of a citizen of the states. My discovery was most revealing. For instance, the net long-term debt that each citizen of Texas owes on a state and local basis is $298.45. The New Yorker owes $472.86. The man from Delaware owes $498.07. The Oklahoman owes $233.41, and the man from Massachusetts owes $406.08. The man from the District of Columbia owes $45.61. In fact, he owes less in local indebtedness than any of the people in any of the states of the United States before the admission of Alaska. The figures are not available on Alaska; hence, cannot be quoted. These revealing figures would indicate that the federal gravy train has been working pretty well for the District of Columbia.

More About Spending

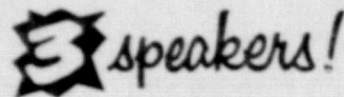

It was revealed a short time ago that it cost the federal taxpayers 390 thousand dollars to send 110 deputy marshalls to Little Rock during the trouble there last year. No one has yet been able to come up with a figure on how much the Army cost, but I can tell you that it was stupendous. The 390 thousand dollar figure included $28 per day that was paid to the deputies who were on temporary employment, 80 thousand dollars for travel, $5200 for communications, 1 thousand for fees, 10 thousand (mostly for ammunition), $7700 for police equipment, $5200 for Social Security taxes.

Last week one Representative offered an amendment to keep the Secretary of Agriculture's office operation consistent with his actions in regard to feed and grain supports. His amendment would put Mr. Benson on 60 per cent of parity. Needless to say, it was opposed by the Administration.

Many Famous Persons Claimed By Death in 1958

Between the launching of the U.S. satellite and the overthrow of Cuban dictator Fulgencio Batista, the year 1958 saw the deaths of many notable persons. Some of those whose names are listed in the World Book encyclopedia year-book were famous when they died—others were forgotten. The deaths of Tyrone Power, the Todd and Ronald Colman and the first successful motion picture projector. Most of the public may not have recognized the name of entertainer Maude Nugent when she died. But they probably have heard of "Sweet Rosie Gray," one of the songs she composed.

The sports world lost Mel Ott, who hit 511 home runs for the New York Giants, ranking third among all-time greats. Baseball also lost the Brooklyn Dodgers' pitcher who bled all 26 innings of the longest game in major league history in 1920. While the music world sang the praises of W. C. Handy, Tin Pan City noted the passing of Canadian-born Alfred Bryan, who wrote the lyrics for "Peg O' My Heart" and "There's Danger in Your Eyes." Another composer who died was British-born William Harling, who wrote the U. S. Army Academy's official march, "Point Forever."

Nationalist China lost a friend General Claire Chennault, who flew over China during World War II. Opie Fangborn, who flew from New York to Washington state in 1931, made the first non-stop Pacific flight, passed away. And while the East and West were launching their missiles, the producer of the rocket-powered aircraft, George Ernst Heinkel, died.

Notorious women around the world will long remember French designer Lucien Lelong. The Frederick Wierk is immortalized by the unglamorous quonset hut designed for World War II servicemen.

A class by himself was Javier Zamora, a Columbian Indian who lived to be 167 years old in 1958 when he visited in the U.S. New York doctors, however, were conservative—they said he was "perhaps" more than 150 years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McQueen visited their four children of Wichita, Kan. here this weekend with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ira McQueen.

Roy Alvin Massey Writes From England

 The night our party broke up at two A.M., and I went to the taxi stand to get a taxi. The taxi night was so thick that I had to see my hand in front of me, and all the taxi drivers were trying to drive in the fog. The railway system stops at midnight, so I couldn't go home by train. I was stuck, no taxis, no trains, and no way to get home, so I had to walk home, and I never walked home, and I never knew the way in the fog. However, I decided to walk, and I started out on my journey. I knew how to get through the fog, and I knew my way. I felt pretty sure of finding my way. Considering myself smart for figuring this out, I started out for the arch, but as I walked I saw a sign that said "I'll go to the Spring Dance with you on one condition. Ask me."

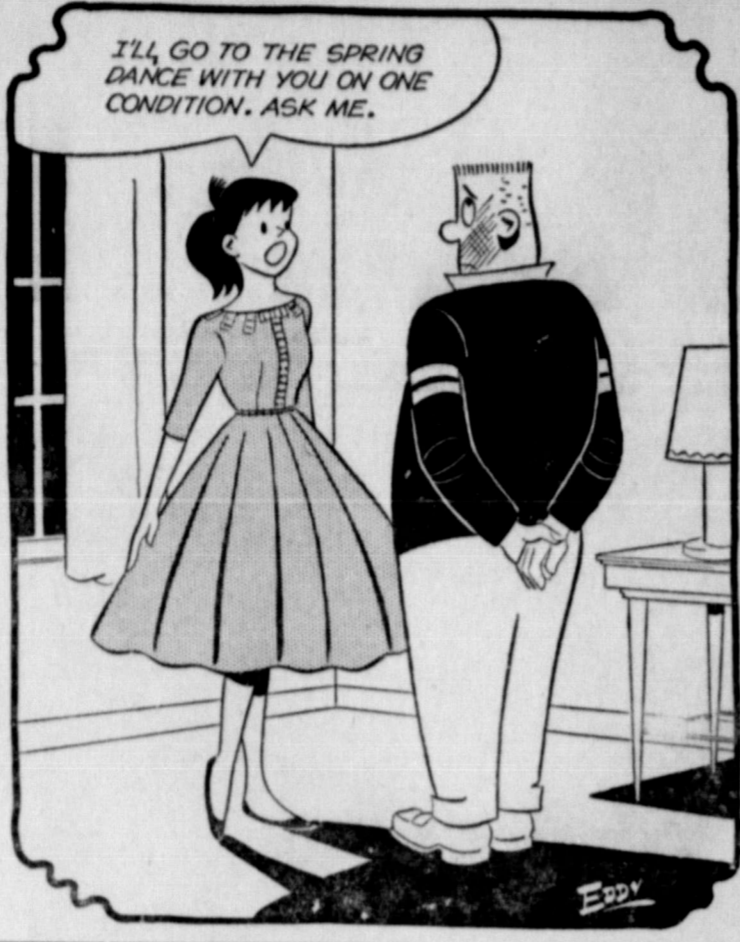

Not being able to work, and with time on my hands I decided to see the sights of London. Even though I have visited London twice before, there are so many things of interest I haven't seen, and many things I want to see again. I started with the British Museum, which has many things of interest, including one of the finest Egyptian collections in the world. If you don't like mummies you can go to the wonderful manuscript section where you find all types of ancient manuscripts, such as Bibles, and Psalters, and very interesting old maps. You will also find there such things as the Magna Carta, a deed to Shakespeare's house at Stratford on Avon, many Papal Bulls, and the original manuscripts of Byron, Keats, Shelley, Milton, Lord Byron, and many others. One could spend days there and not see half there is to be seen.

Next on my list was a return to Westminster Abbey. There many English kings and queens are buried as well as many other famous English people such as Charles Dickens, Robert Browning and all the other literary figures in Poet's Corner. The coronation chair with the famous Stone of Scone is in the abbey and the tomb of the Unknown Soldier is there also. It is filled with history and is wonderful to wander through, as one wonders how people could have built such a magnificent structure over seven hundred years ago.

After leaving Westminster Abbey I walked up the road to the Royal Banquet Hall of Whitehall Place. It is the only building remaining of Whitehall, which was the Royal Residence during the reign of the Stuarts in the seventeenth century. It was in front of the Banquet Hall that Charles I was beheaded when Oliver Cromwell usurped the Throne of England and made himself Lord Protector. It now houses a war museum which is rather interesting. On the ceiling of the hall are beautiful paintings by Rubens, who was commissioned to decorate the ceiling. The museum contains relics of all the wars and battles in English history, such as Napoleon's hat, and other things belonging to him, and a replica of the Battles of Waterloo and Hrafalgar done in miniature. But to me the building itself was the most interesting, because it is a landmark of the last Royal Court that existed as such in England. The life of that court was very well described in Kathleen Winsor's book, "Forever Amber."

I have been many times to the National Gallery to see the great paintings there of such artists as Gainsborough, Reynolds, Goya, Delacroix, El Greco, and countless others. Adjoining the National Gallery is the National Portrait Gallery which houses portraits of most of the famous personages in English history. There are six portraits in this gallery by Gilbert Stuart, including one of his famous paintings of George Washington. I was glad to be able to study these, and when I took my painting to be inspected, we took it in and compared it to Stuart's other works there.

In London, near Liverpool Station, there is a market open on Sunday mornings, called Petticoat Lane. Here one finds gaudy cheap merchandise, and second hand goods, and I'm told that often stolen and smuggled goods are moved through the dealers in Petticoat Lane. There is not much one with any taste would want to buy there, but it is fun to go and see and hear all the Cockney merchants trying to convince the shoppers that what they have is a true bargain. Evidently, they are quite convincing to a great number of people, as they seem to do a nice business with their "junk". It's very quaint, and I would advise any visitor to London to go there some Sunday, not to buy, but to look. I have been there twice, and I always find it amusing. If one fancies, they can buy anything there from secret cold remedies and pickled eels, to souvenir handkerchiefs, with London scenes or even fur coats.

After leaving Petticoat Lane one can go to Hyde Park for a very amusing Sunday afternoon observing the soap box orators. Each Sunday afternoon one corner of Hyde Park is filled with self styled authorities on everything from religion to nudism. On one box a man will be telling you of a sure way of getting to Heaven, while on the next box another assures you that the whole world is doomed and is going to Hell. One speaker will be shouting the glories of being a member of the Communist Party, while another is trying to convince everyone that a Monarchy is the only sensible form of government. One will be condemning America as a despicable nation because of its racial prejudice and segregation, and another will be shouting that all the Blacks in England should be sent back to Africa. So one must let what he hears pass in one ear and out the other, and just enjoy observing the spectacle. The important thing is that the people have the freedom of speech to say what they feel like saying. As one famous American put it, "I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

Another Sunday I made a trip out of London a few miles to Kew Gardens. It is a bit early to go to the gardens, but in this wonderful retreat, one can find at one time or another throughout the year, almost every type of flower there is in the world. It is beautifully laid out with trees, and ponds, and plants, and it is right on the River Thames. I hope I have a chance to get back when there are other flowers in bloom.

I haven't seen as much Theatre in London as I usually do when I'm here, but I have seen some very nice things, and I intend to see many more. The first thing I saw was a revue called "For Adults Only", in which a very dear friend of mine starred. It was quite funny and very successful. The next thing I saw was the American musical, "West Side Story". It was very enjoyable, and it is such a success that it is sold out for weeks in advance. The nicest evening was when I went to see Beatrice Lillie in "Auntie Maime". She was delightful as only Bea Lillie can be. We have very good friends in common, so I let her know that I was coming to the show that evening. She invited me backstage for cocktails after the play and she was most charming. I have quit drinking so it is sometimes awkward when I'm invited for drinks, but she was very gracious and we got on very well. I am having lunch with her next week and she has invited me for a weekend to her country home, which needless to say, I am looking forward to.

Last Wednesday evening I went to the famous Old Vic Theatre for a production of "Macbeth". I thoroughly enjoyed it, and only wish we had something in America that could compare with that marvelous company. They do only classical plays, and they do them to perfection. Along with their productions of Shakespeare, they have been doing plays by Ibsen, and Moliere. I hope to see some more of them before leaving London.

On rainy days I like to go to places which are interesting only on the inside such as the Law Courts. I have been both to the Royal Courts of Justice, where the civil cases are tried and to the Central Criminal Courts, better known as the "Old Bailey". It is quite interesting to observe the British system of court procedure. The judges are dressed in scarlet robes, trimmed in ermine, and wear long white wigs, and the barristers, (or lawyers, as we call them) are dressed in black robes and wear shorter white wigs. The prisoners in criminal cases sit in an enclosed place called the box. The judge is addressed as Milord (My Lord) instead of Your Honor, and he never sits in the center of the bench, but always to the left side, as the center is reserved for Royalty, or the Lord Mayor. The judicial system is full of tradition, as is almost everything in England, but it is very fair and very respected.

Very near the courts is a very interesting building known as the Old Lady of Threadneedle Street; it is the Bank of England. Very near the Bank is the London Stock Exchange, where stocks and bonds from all over the world change hands. I went in and watched the proceedings from the glassed-in galleries, as by tradition, no one is allowed on the floor of the exchange except brokers, jobbers, and their clerks. In fact if one is found on the floor who is not authorized, he may be picked up and bodily thrown out, as has happened on occasion. The most interesting thing about the stock exchange is the manner of dress of the men in the stock business. They all wear Oxford grey business suits, complete with vests, and wear either a bowler hat or high top hat, and carry a rolled umbrella. It is something to see as many as two thousand men on the floor, all dressed alike, as if they were for Permin at the French Club, as it was his birthday. All the members of the Royal Ballet were there. I knew many of them, and it was nice to meet those I didn't know.

People have been so wonderful to me since I've been here, and I'm constantly being invited to parties, and dinners and special things. I am having such a wonderful time here in London that I don't like to think of ever leaving. However friends of mine are begging me to come to the continent, so I may leave after Easter and go to other parts of Europe.

I had planned to tour the Continent with my sister, but she has about decided not to come to Europe this summer so my plans have changed. I had also planned a trip to the Orient this fall but I may decide to come back to the States instead. I have no definite plans, but I am enjoying my trip and hope things are such that I can extend it as long as possible.

I think so often of my friends in and around Memphis, and wish all of you could be here to enjoy the charm of Europe with me. It would be a pleasure to hear from any of you as it is always good to get mail and news from home. My best wishes to all of you.

Yellow Lawns May Indicate Iron Shortage

Iron chlorosis, a condition of yellow and ornamentals characterized by yellow or bleached leaves due to iron deficiency, was recently combated with powdered chelate about 85 per cent of the time in 78 demonstrations conducted last year, County Agent W. B. Hooser said this week.

Demonstrations were conducted in various areas of the state in ranging from sands to clays from acid to alkaline.

The problem is usually associated with soils in high lime, but sometimes occurs on acid soils," explained W. F. Bennett, extension soil chemist. "Nitrogen deficiency symptoms are similar to those of iron chlorosis and home owners should make sure nitrogen is met before treating for deficiency."

Mild cases of the deficiency may be corrected with dry applications of iron. Bennett said. More severe cases on lawn grasses usually require treatment with iron applied in spray, since it is generally more effective in this form.

Iron chelates are generally more active and give longer-lasting results than iron sulfate. Manufacturers directions for use of the chelates should be followed carefully. Suggested rates vary with the plant being treated and the condition of the soil.

Treatment about every four to six weeks may be necessary to maintain the desired color in areas where the problem is common or recurrent, Bennett said.

Further information may be obtained by contacting County Agent Hooser.

Vegetation Is Big Problem On Many Lakes

Surveys conducted on several inland lakes and reservoirs indicate that vegetation is probably one of the biggest problems listing on these lakes. Water involved here the Highlands Reservoir, Sheldon Reservoir, Lake Houston, and Turtle Bayou at Lake Anahuac, according to the director of Inland Fisheries, Texas Game and Fish Commission.

Netting and seining samples taken from the Highlands Reservoir revealed its poor condition since restocking in 1957. Water pumped in from Lake Houston reinfested the lake with many rough fish.

Noxious vegetation remains the main problem in Sheldon Reservoir. Census data revealed that the harvest of bass from the lake was adequate for the length of time that was spent fishing. But generally all catches were a poor representation of the stocking that took place during the previous two years.

All actual survey work was conducted on Lake Houston; however, a major vegetation problem is present. A hyacinth concentration of approximately 40 acres was located in the upper end of the lake. The City of Houston was notified about the area and spraying will begin soon.

A hyacinth control program was initiated on Lake Anahuac upon discovery of a vegetation problem. However, inclement weather prevented completion of the job.

During the surveys, large numbers of white bass were found in Turtle Bayou. An attempt will be made to catch these fish for restocking Lake Houston.

Mrs. R. E. Clark visited with her son, John and his wife Patsy in Dallas over the weekend.

Tagging of White Bass at Texoma Shows Results

White bass tagging is proceeding in Lake Texoma to obtain valuable data about this important species, according to the director of inland fisheries of the Game and Fish Commission. The study is expected to establish the movement of the fish, where they actually spawn, their age and growth factors.

Some 460 white bass were tagged and released to make a total of 3,253 fish worked during this particular project. These fish were collected with hook and line, gill nets and some were salvaged from the draft tubes of the Denison powerhouse. When the U.S. Corps of Engineers shut down the main generators for annual repairs many fish are trapped by the well gates.

As in the past, concessionaires and conservation employees on the lake were contacted to stimulate continued interest in the project and to pick up any returned tags.

A letter of acknowledgment was sent to the angler catching a tagged fish whenever his name and address was available.

Thus far, 59 tagged fish have been reported. Of these, 24% of the gill net collected fish have been returned while only 11% of the salvaged fish and 5% of the hook and line bass have been recaptured. In comparison to the total fish collected for tagging, 70% were taken with hooks, 25% from the powerhouse, and only 5% were caught in gill nets.

Sugar Industry Made Hawaii a "Melting Pot"

The world's sweet tooth helped make Hawaii one of the greatest "melting pots" in the world.

When the first white men explored the islands in the late 1700's, Hawaiians numbered about 300,000. But civil wars and diseases brought from other islands slashed the native population.

With the growth of the sugar industry in the 1800's, the Islanders looked to other nations to supply the labor needed for plantations. Chinese were brought to the islands in 1852, followed by Polynesians from other South Sea Islands, Japanese, Portuguese, Germans, Italians, Spaniards, Puerto Ricans, Koreans, Filipinos, Russians and Poles.

Today there are only about 12,000 full Hawaiians and some 80,000 part-Hawaiians among the 600,000 Islanders.

Here is a breakdown of the Hawaiian population, according to the World Book encyclopedia:

Japanese	40%
Part Hawaiian	17%
Caucasian	15%
Filipino	13%
Chinese	7%
Full Hawaiian	3%
Puerto Rican	2%
Korean	1%
Others	2%

Savings Bonds sales in Hall County totaled $25,705 during February. Sales for the first two months of 1959 amounted to $70 which was 22.7% of the county's 1959 goal of $194,000.

Tax Committee Slaps Governor
The House Revenue and Tax Committee slapped the Governor's tax program by killing his "escheat" tax measure by a vote of ten to six. The Committee reported the bill unfavorable with the recommendation that it not pass. Then in a surprise move the committee turned around, reconsidered its previous vote, and voted to postpone the measure. This parliamentary strategy would keep this tax bill from getting to the floor of the House in a minority report.

This escheat bill is the one which would transfer all dormant bank accounts and all dormant accounts with insurance and transmission companies into the State Treasury.

Appropriation Bill Out of Committee

The House Appropriation Committee has read out the giant appropriation measure for the next biennium. This measure consisting of well over one hundred pages now comes before the one-hundred fifty man house for debate. It will probably be a week or ten days before the bill is brought up for discussion. In the meantime much study will have to be given this spending bill.

Of course, the less money we spend in the appropriation bill the less taxes we will have to raise. Consequently, it seems to me that we should give equal weight to cutting expenditures where possible before we start levying more taxes on the people of Texas. This is always a hard job but let's hope we can keep our tax bill as small as possible.

Soil Conservation News

With the approach of the spring early summer planting season it is time to plan the planting season soil improving program says Ben D. Oliver local technician.

Soil improving program adapted to the area covered by Hall County Soil Conservation District are cowpeas, such as eyes, crowders, Chinese New Era, and Brahams.

There are several benefits to be derived from summer grown legume soil improving crops. The benefits are increased in the following crops, improved tillage conditions, protection of the soil from wind, hot sun, and hard frosts. There are no soils in the state that do not need the benefits.

Cowpeas can be planted from May 15 to July 15. They should be drilled at the rate of 25 to 30 pounds per acre, drilled, or 10 to 15 pounds per acre, in rows. Cowpeas can be planted with a drill or regular row crop planter.

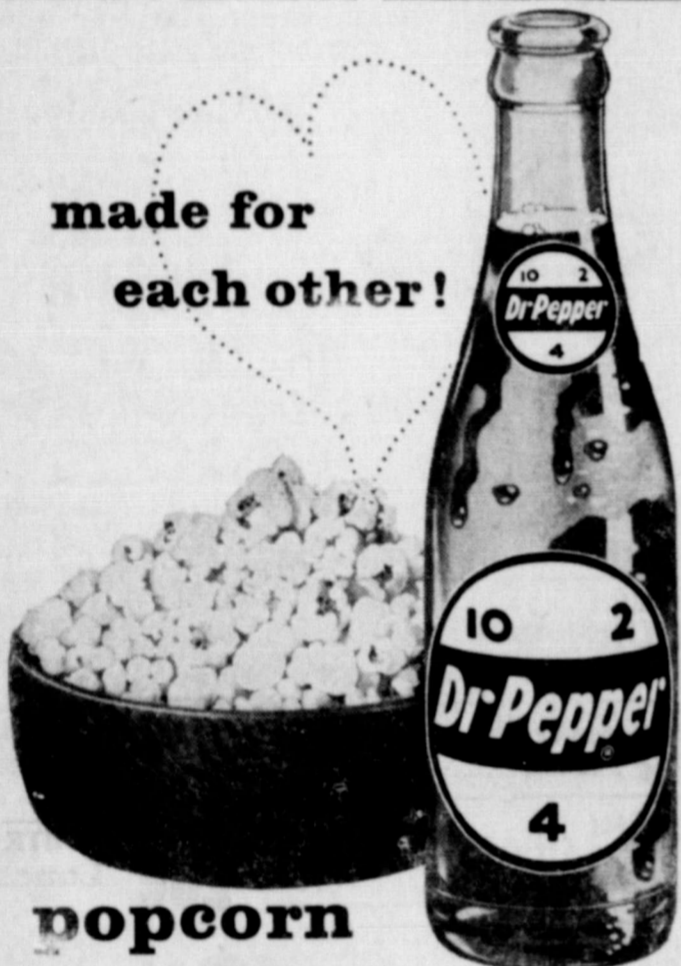

Cowpeas can be used as a cash crop as well as a soil improving crop. Good bright seed sell well on the market and the seed are good for some feeders in cattle range and protein.

Cowpeas are planted from May 1 to July 15 at the rate of 4 to 6 pounds in rows or 10 to 15 pounds per acre. A wheat drill is used when planting in rows and a row crop planter, with plates, is used for row planting.

When planting summer legumes it is urged to inoculate the seed with nitrogen bacteria. Experiments have proven that the seed from legumes are greatly benefited when the seed are inoculated.

Additional organic material for protection these crops can be obtained with grain sorghums. County Agent, SCS of Hall County, or local SCS technician can give you more detailed information on the growing of legume crops.

Over eight and nine thousand acres of soil improving crops were planted in the District last year and a fairly large acreage is expected for 1959.
