Mung Beans and Grain Sorghums
Supervisors of the Hall County Soil Conservation District say that the interplanting of mung beans with grain sorghums is gaining in popularity with West Texas farmers.

Farmers can have their cake and eat it too by using mung beans as a soil builder interplanted with their grain sorghum cash crops. Many West Texas farmers have already discovered one or more of the following benefits of interplanting a legume with their grain sorghum crops: Yield of the following crop is increased, Equal or higher yield of the interplanted grain sorghum crop, No more water required for the grain sorghum crop due to the shading effect of the mung beans, Organic matter is added to the soil, Nitrogen is fixed in the soil by the mung beans.

Mung beans are plentiful and low in cost this year making it possible for every interested farmer to try this soil building practice during 1959 with very little expense. Mung beans do not climb up the grain sorghum stalks to interfere with the harvest of the cash crop, and by using the peewee size mung bean, no extra equipment is needed for interplanting. The peewee size is approximately the same size as grain sorghum seed and can be mixed right in the planter box for uniform planting.

Dryland should be interplanted with about 2 to 3 pounds of mung bean seed per acre with the normal rate of grain sorghum seed per acre. Interplanting mung bean seed cost is about 20c per acre on dryland. Seed is available through most all West Texas feed and seed stores.

If you would like more information about mung beans or other soil improving crops, contact your local Soil Conservation Service Technicians.

ner; the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Roy Widener and Mrs. Frank Fox- hall, mother of the groom-to-be.

A profusion of roses in pastel shades were used to decorate the entertaining rooms. In the dining room the table was laid with a yellow organdy cloth applied in yellow linen and centered with a lovely arrangement of talisman roses.

Alternating at the silver punch service were Misses Carol Ann Monzingo, Johnnie McWhorter and Lois Ann Clark.

Mrs. Therman Widener, sister-in-law of the bride-elect, presided at the register to secure signatures of more than one hundred guests who called during the evening.

On display in two rooms of the party suite was a lovely array of gifts.

COVER UP—Mary Ann Mobley, Miss America 1959, wears a bare-shouldered dress hidden for the moment under an Empire-styled jacket. The jacket dress by Lloyd Weill is of Everglaze cotton satin in a bright floral print.

IT'S THE LAW

Unordered Merchandise
Suppose the mailman delivers to you a package containing a necktie, a book, key-ring tags or a photograph record that you didn't order. Either with it, or by later mail, is a bill or request to remit the price. Do you know your obligations, and do you don't want the merchandise? Must you return it? Can you use it and not pay for it? If you keep it, or can you throw it away? Generally speaking, recipients of unordered merchandise are under no obligation (a) to return it, (b) to acknowledge its receipt, (c) to pay for it unless used; to give it particular care; or to keep it beyond a reasonable time. You are obligated to surrender

AROUND THE WORLD . . . in 80 days, too, if he can make it.
Frode Kristofersen of Denmark is attempting to make the trip in 80 days . . . without spending a penny the merchandise if called for in person by the shipper or his agent within a reasonable time. But you can demand storage charges before surrendering the item. If you mail it back at your own expense, you very likely will stay on the sender's mailing list and will receive other shipments in the future.

There are no postal regulations governing unordered merchandise, except where fraud is involved. Congress is working on legislation that will cover the situation. However, if you know what is in the envelope or package, you can write "Refused" across the face of the piece of mail and hand it back unopened to the mailman. No further explanation is required. You don't have to accept any class of mail. Further, your refusal probably will result in the sender having to pay return postage.

A ruling by the Federal Trade Commission holds it a violation of the Federal Trade Act for a sender of unordered merchandise to claim that "The receiver is under obligation . . . to pay for or return the merchandise." Hence, if you don't use the merchandise, you are within your rights in refusing to pay for it.

If another person's mail is improperly delivered to you, do not open it, as such action might make you liable to severe legal penalties. Such mail should promptly be re-deposited in a postal box with an appropriate notation thereon, such as the proper address or "not 14 South Brown Street," showing the address to which the mail had been delivered.

Greenhouses Now Cheaper With Use of Plastic

The use of plastic as a substitute for glass in greenhouse construction has reduced the cost of such structures to the point that backyard operations may be encouraged. Clyde Singletary, extension horticulturist, says the smaller, intensive operators who grow vegetable transplants and produce tomatoes out-of-season are particularly interested in the development.

The relative low cost of a plastic greenhouse can make a profitable enterprise for those interested in producing vegetables out-of-season. This is particularly true, says Singletary, because such vegetables usually find a ready market and move at satisfactory prices. He recommends that a small structure be used until the know-how for handling volume production is acquired.

Because of the unusual number of requests for information on the plastic structures, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service has just made available a new publication, M P - 341, "Plastic Greenhouses for Growing Vegetables." Copies are available at the offices of local county agents or from the Agricultural Information Office, College Station, Tex.

The publication covers such items as construction, including size, framing and the plastic cover, and heating and cooling systems. Drawing and photographs

SPORTS AFIELD
By Ted Kesting

There's a good reason for the resurgent interest in archery and bowhunting. It's a sport tailored to suburban living—the perfect backyard sport—quiet and safe. A sound, well-rounded basic outfit that you can hunt with costs as little as $50 says outdoor writer Dick Griffith in Sports Afield magazine. The whole family can have fun losing your arrows during the summer, but, reamed, you can take your bow into the autumn woods with a fair chance at are used to illustrate the important construction items.

Singletary believes that plastic greenhouses can be used very successfully in Texas and that operators with the required managerial know-how can develop a profitable enterprise on a small acreage and with a minimum investment. He emphasizes, however, the need for a person to acquire the needed managerial ability before getting into greenhouse production of vegetables on a big scale.

There's an important don't for beginners everyone agrees on. Bow weights are measured by the poundage required to draw the arrow full length. Don't buy a bow too heavy. You want fun, not muscles, and a heavy bow will tire you out and groove you in bad habits. The difference in killing power between a heavy and light bow is measurable only in the hands of an expert. That you are not. Griffith recommends a 62-inch, 45-pound laminated recurve bow. This is not too heavy but conforms with legal minimum hunting weight (45 pounds) set by some states.

Also: buy cheap arrows to begin with. You'll break and lose plenty. You need only three or four hunting broadheads. Practice on small targets for it will start fire-honing your eye quicker than blasting at a barnside. Do buy a good shooting glove and tab. A couple of good cuts on the forearm are all you need to begin flinching. (Nowhere near as dangerous a habit as in gun shooting, however.) Do join an archery club. You'll enjoy them and they'll enjoy you.

Two Early Papers West History Even to Tech

Two copies of two reports that will open the gates for a great Southwestern cattle industry have been given to the Southwest Collection at Texas Tech by Gen. Will Wilson.

One is a report to Congress in 1849 by Capt. John Pope on sections of Texas for an east-west route between the Red River and the Grande.

The other is a report on the west cattle industry and its effects made to Congress 30 years later by Joseph Nimmo.

Seymour V. Connor, College director, called the two reports "basic additions for the study of Southwestern history."

They are of practical as well as scholarly value because they show some of the little-known details behind Southwestern growth and development," he declared. "It's the type of material we need."

Gen. Pope's report was the first important document to come after the U. S. moved into what is now its western territory. The U. S. took over the vast expanse in 1848 after the Mexican War.

California gold rush followed in 1849, bringing pressures for routes across the South.

The federal government began making surveys to determine possibilities.

Gen. Pope was assigned the task of seeking a Southwestern route across the Llano Estacado, considered a formidable barrier because its flat top was dependable water sources.

It was who — more than 20 years ago — suggested the ground water that opened up plains to cattlemen and irrigated agriculture.

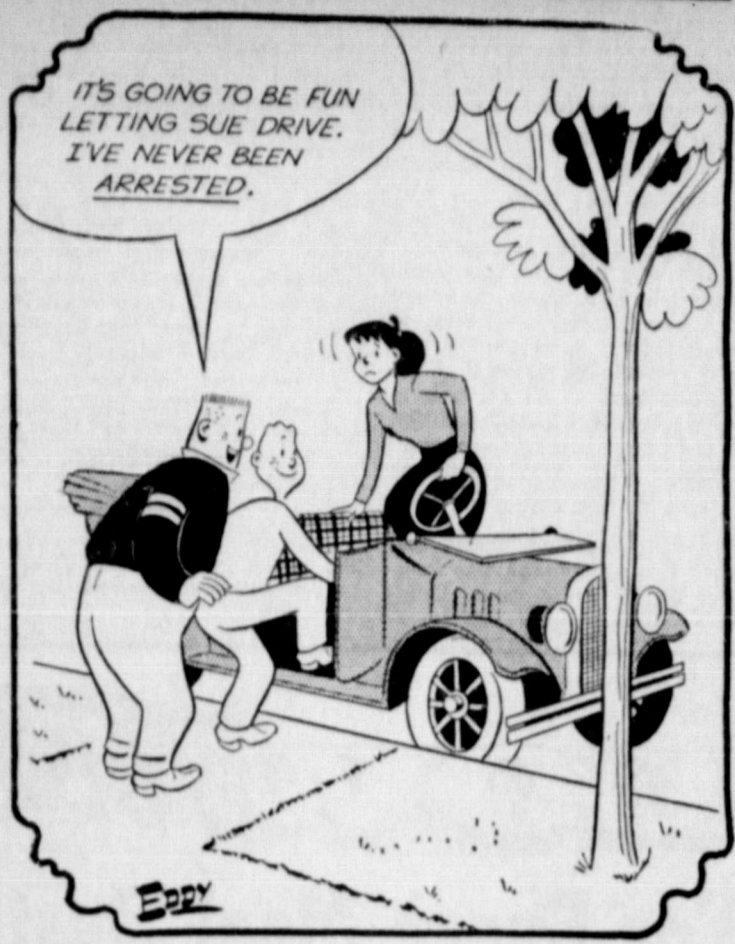

His personal account of the trip is reported in the rarest form given by Wilson.

He saw only possibilities for the use of a few domestic animals that could be watered from his hand.

Support, however, helped spur various cattlemen to move herds onto the rich tablelands the Indians were subsisting on.

Gen. Pope's report three decades ago details of a tremendous cattle empire that sent nearly a million head out of Texas alone in one year.

HALF-PAST TEEN

Wilson, who collects historical literature, came across the two rare documents during the annual book auction of the Texas State Historical Assn. Because of their particular significance in West Texas history, he decided to purchase them as gifts for Tech.

VA Will Pay For Ambulance Service If OK Given Ahead

The Veterans Administration can pay for ambulance service or other transportation of patients to its hospitals only when prior authorization has been given, the VA said recently.

In medical emergencies, the private physician who telephones a VA hospital to request emergency admission of a veteran may secure the travel authorization from the hospital by telephone at the same time.

The physician requesting the emergency admission should tell the hospital whether it is for an illness or injury that has been rated service-connected, and if it is not, whether the veteran can afford to pay for travel to the hospital.

Veterans admitted to VA hospitals for treatment of service-connected conditions are entitled to necessary travel to and from the hospital at Government expense, provided prior travel authorization is obtained from the hospital.

Veterans admitted to VA hospitals for treatment of non-service-connected conditions are entitled to this travel at Government expense only if they affirm under oath that they cannot afford to pay the cost of the travel and if prior travel authorization from the hospital has been obtained.

Mud Flaps Now Required on Almost all Trucks

Local Highway Patrolmen reminded truckers this week that under the provisions of a new law most vehicles with dual wheels on the rear are required to have mud flaps.

The bill provides that it shall be unlawful to operate any road tractor, truck, truck-tractor in combination with a semi-trailer, trailer or semi-trailer in combination with a towing vehicle, having four or more tires on the rear-most axle of such vehicle unless the rear axle of such vehicle be equipped with safety guards or flaps of a type to prevent slush, mud or gravel being transmitted from the vehicles rear wheels to the windshield of any following vehicle.

The law exempts buses, school buses, pole trailers and truck-tractors. The semi-trailer however must be equipped with the flaps.

The flaps must come within eight inches of the surface of the highway. These are not required when the structure of the rear of the wheels is within eight inches of the surface of the highway.

Anyone seeking further information on the requirements may contact the local Highway Patrolmen.

New Game Area Once Historic Cattle Spread

When the Game and Fish Commission takes over some 28,000 acres of the old Matador ranch in North Texas for a wildlife management area, it will be part owner of one of the most historic ranching spots in the State.

The Matador ranch was put together in the last 1870's after a cowboy by the name of Henry Campbell sold a group of Chicago financiers on providing a huge spread of rich grassland for a ranch that would run thousands of head of cattle.

The Game Commission recently contracted for the purchase of 28,000 acres plus, for slightly more than $700,000. It will be used as a game management area, primarily for turkeys and upland game.

Since this area once supported a heavy buffalo population, there will be some deer stocked on the property.

"Negotiations have been in progress for some time," according to the executive secretary of the Game and Fish Commission. "When we get final possession of the property extensive plans will be made to set up the management area."

This area is out of what is known as the East ranch, about six miles north and west of Paducah. It is well watered and good rangeland, with ideal habitat conditions for upland game, according to the executive secretary.

Mrs. H. E. Perkins of Dallas, is in Parnell this week visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. J. Welcher, and family.

Ed Kelley of Lubbock, formerly of Memphis, transacted business and visited friends here last weekend.

Diseases of the heart and circulation are responsible — year in and year out — for at least 150,000,000 lost man-days of work.

SENATOR ☆☆☆ Yarborough's Report

members of the Foreign Service of the State Department of America overseas. People from other countries form their part, in a great part, from the U.S. government employees.

because of the highly specialized type of work which these people are called upon to perform, they should be given the training possible. The act of these Americans can go a long way in helping prevent war. The current talks in Washington illustrate this.

co-sponsoring a bill to establish a Foreign Service Academy for people who will represent our country overseas. It would be a graduate school which would prepare people for their important roles in representing America.

Academy would be set up at the State Department. Each cadet would be required to pass entrance examinations, to insure that it is in each cadet would be required to sign an agreement to continue the course of study, unless the State Department separates from the school before that time. The bill would also provide for the State Department to have the Foreign Service of the United States for a least three years after graduation.

I feel that this bill would help our Foreign Service in two ways in their continuing business of putting this nation's "best foot forward" overseas. First, it would provide the service with better trained personnel in the highly individual business of being a State Department officer. Secondly, it would encourage a great number of the outstanding cadets to continue in a Foreign Service career. As in any business, experience pays dividends, and we need to encourage more young people to enter this important field.

The bill to set up this academy is currently being studied by a Senate Committee.

Estelline Eighth Grade Graduation Exercises Held

On Thursday evening, May 14, fourteen eighth grade pupils in the Estelline Public Schools received their certificates of promotion into high school. The program was presented by the class.

Donna Sue Eddins played the professional march. Bruch Richerson gave the invocation. Linda Bowman made the salutatory address. The class sang "The Best Things in Life are Free" and "Now the Day is Over," accompanied by Jo Beth Barnes. Henrietta Ward read the Class History. Wayne Sweett read the Class Will and Janie Buchanan read the Class Poem. Jacqueline Cosper read the Class Prophecy. Donna Sue Eddins gave the valedictory address.

Mrs. E. F. Kennedy presented Donna Sue Eddins and Linda Bowman five dollars each for having made 100 on every spelling lesson during the school term.

Wayne Turner, sponsor, certified the class to JoEd Cupell, superintendent of schools, who presented the diplomas. Linda Bowman played the recessional march.

Ushers were Frankie Longbine, Sandra Richburg, Brian Welch, and Sandra Hood. Class officers are: Wayne Sweett, Donna Sue Eddins, Jacqueline Cosper, and Linda Bowman. Other class members are Tony Stephens, Gayland Simpson, David May, Sandra Rogers, Carolyn Lambers, Teddy Barnes, and James Merrill, other than those already mentioned.

Mrs. Nannie Baird To Celebrate 90th Birthday May 23

On Saturday, May 23, in Fort Worth, a birthday is being celebrated — the 90th birthday of Mrs. Nannie L. Baird, whose life proves once again that America rewards the old-fashioned virtues of courage, determination and devotion.

Not that this unassuming woman considers herself remarkable. She is much more likely to talk about her four sons and three daughters, her 23 grandchildren, 43 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren than about the fact that the baking business she started in her home kitchen has grown to be the largest independently owned baking business in the nation.

Her neighbors had always praised the bread she baked. So in 1908 Mrs. Baird, using her own wood burning stove started baking bread to sell. The children helped her, the two oldest boys delivering the still-warm loaves in baskets to their customers.

More people wanted the loaf they were calling Mrs. Baird's Bread, so a larger range was bought. Later a little bakery was built in the back yard of the Baird home, and a horse-drawn wagon was bought to make deliveries. As the sons grew to manhood it became obvious that the demand for the kind of bread Mrs. Baird baked called for volume baking facilities.

First one large bakery was built, then others, until today there are five great modern bakeries turning out Mrs. Baird's Bread and cakes in key Texas cities.

Cemetery Working To Be Held at Hulver May 30

A cemetery working will be held at the Hulver Cemetery on Saturday, May 30, according to an announcement made this week by Clinton Richburg, treasurer of the cemetery association.

Mr. Richburg urged everyone to come and bring hoes and other garden tools with which to work. After the recent rains there is much work that needs to be done, Mr. Richburg concluded.

Mrs. P. B. Barrett of Vernon is visiting this week with her daughters and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hays.

Mrs. Pauline Knight visited in Borger over the weekend with her son and family, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Knight.
