Gidden, Townsend Win State Tennis Doubles

Climaxing their final season of high school tennis, the local high school girls team walked away with the state plaque to become the first MHS tennis players to win the state tournament.

Bettye Gidden and Trilby Townsend, both seniors, climaxed their high school playing careers by winning the highest competition matches the state has to offer without ever having to play the third set, during district competition at Clarendon, at the regional matches held at Lubbock, or the two state matches at Austin last weekend. Four games were the most they ever lost in a set.

The local girls crushed the Carrizo Springs team, composed of Linda Crawford and Jeanine Phillips, 6-1, 6-3, for the champion. (Continued on Page Ten)

The purpose of this study, Odom said, is to determine if there is a real need for a tax equalization program here, and if so, to cooperate with other organizations to bring about such a program.

Odom said at least three sub-committees will be appointed this week for the purpose of studying the financial conditions and tax needs of the schools and city government, to analyze tax rolls and to investigate the possibility of county cooperation in any proposed equalization program.

"A comprehensive tax equalization program certainly seems to be in order," Odom said, "but we are trying to go into this thing with open minds so that a real-

Accident Record Of Family Car Best in State

Drivers using automobiles for other than family driving are most likely to be involved in accidents.

The Association of Texas Fire and Casualty Companies reported automobiles beyond normal family-driving usage are far more likely to be involved in accidents than those in other occupations. Only six percent of drivers in fatal accidents, for example, are clerical workers and only four percent are business.

Department of Public Safety have maintained a constant level percentage factor—six percent annually—as drivers involved in fatal accidents over the past five years.

The number of farmers involved in fatal accidents is dropping off. Because of the decline farm population in Texas, farmers are less a factor now than at the beginning of the 1950 decade. Farmer-drivers are listed now in only seven percent of fatal highway accidents against 10 percent or more prior to 1952.

The number of fatal accidents involving military personnel has been cut even more; from 10 percent in 1952 to four percent in 1958.

The huge population segment of farmers, military personnel, and housewives in Texas are accounting for about 17 per cent of the fatal traffic accidents.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Fields and Mrs. Maggie Simons had as weekend guests Jim Simons and children, Janice and Jay, of Amarillo. Miss Linda Fields, who is employed in Amarillo, also visited with her parents over the weekend.

Curtis Harrell and family Lubbock and Adele Harrell Phillips visited with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Harrell, Mrs. W. B. Gilreath and family over the weekend.

Checkers in Reverse

Only a few days remain before the four-power summit conference in Geneva. Communist boss Khrushchev has threatened to conclude a separate peace with East Germany to isolate the West. Berlin as a geographical threat similar to the one posed by Fort Sumter a century ago.

Geographically at least, the President would find himself in the same dilemma at Lincoln: efforts to reach West Berlin and maintain the Americans and Germans there would be a serious risk. Although I hope I am wrong, it is doubtful the summit conference will approach a German solution. French President de Gaulle, on the same day that Khrushchev delivered his threat to Berlin, told the Congress in a joint meeting that he did not believe the troubles in Germany could be resolved at any time in the near future. If M. de Gaulle's view is substantially the one held by other Western leaders—and I believe that it is—the possibilities of even an approach to the German question appear rather remote.

I believe that the position

Khrushchev said recently if the Soviets should sign a German treaty the West would be denied access to Berlin by land, sea, or air. Another airlift, he indicated, would be met with force of arms. The East Germans and their Russian masters would regard the presence of a free Berlin as a geographical threat similar to the one posed by Fort Sumter a century ago.

Geographically at least, the President would find himself in the same dilemma at Lincoln: efforts to reach West Berlin and maintain the Americans and Germans there would be a serious risk. HALF-PAST TEEN

America finds itself in today is one we have frequently occupied since the end of World War II. Anyone with even a vague understanding of checkers can understand this position quite readily. Assume there are two opposing men facing each other across an empty square, and that all the other places on the board are filled. In a game of checkers, the obvious effort would be to lure the opposition into the empty square so that the man could be jumped.

In the international climate, however, the object is drastically reversed. Rather than lure the opposing man into the empty square, the aim has been to occupy that square as rapidly as possible and thus confront the opposition with the deadly choice of "jumping" the opposition or merely attempting to live with the new situation.

The Russians have played this game over the world with measurable success. We made the decision and rightfully, I believe, to "jump" them in Korea, but at the cost of thousands of men and many years of direct possibilities for World War III. The record shows, however, that in the majority of cases the United States has not considered it diplomatically and properly ethical to "jump" the other man. The examples of this are legion. And the Russians have reaped substantial gains all through Eastern Europe, Asia, and Africa. The upcoming summit conference will subject our foreign policy—past, present and future, to an important and possible far-reaching examination. I sincerely hope the President has done his homework well.

Checkers in reverse could be played in Berlin, if Khrushchev carries out his threats. And the far-reaching implications of this game can be seen with a simple review of the dilemma which faced the North at Fort Sumter.

Leon Seay Is May Graduate At Boys Ranch

Leon Seay, formerly of Memphis and now one of the 261 boys living at Cal Farley's famous Boys Ranch near Amarillo, is a member of the May graduating class of the Boys Elementary School.

He will receive his certificate of promotion this month and will enter the fully-accredited Boys Ranch High School next September.

Leon went to the Ranch three years ago and is now living in a new, stone house that was donated to the boys to help relieve the shortage of living areas on the fast-growing home for underprivileged boys.

He is well-adjusted to the broad vocational, educational, and recreational program of Boys Ranch and is especially interested in the non-sectarian religious activities, according to supervisors. He takes an active part in the services held every Sunday in the chapel, and attends the mid-week Bible classes. Leon also leads the evening devotional in his dorm where he lives with his "dorm parents" and 34 other boys.

The Memphis youngster is one of the most popular boys on the Ranch and is rapidly developing into the kind of man the people of Texas and Memphis will someday be proud of, in the opinion of Ranch supervisors.

Paducah Makes Stand Clear On Greenbelt

This week The Democrat received a letter from E. Kenneth Tooley, Paducah's director of the Greenbelt Municipal and Industrial Water Authority. He enclosed a copy of a letter he sent to Dr. H. S. Townsend, president of the Authority, clearing Paducah's stand in the Authority.

He said in his letter to The Democrat, "some misleading information has been put out about Paducah since we now have ample supply of soft well water."

Mr. Tooley asked that a news story be written to clear up this situation and present the true facts to the people of this area.

"Paducah is still a strong member of the Authority and intends to stay a strong member," Tooley concluded.

Giles Picnic Set For Mon. May 30

By VIRGINIA BROWDER

Yes, sir, it's time again for the Giles Picnic! The picnic ground has been cleared and cleaned of limbs and debris from last year's wind storm... the dance program has been doubled in length... the beef is a-fattenin' and the signs are right for a big day, with a goodly sprinkling of oldtime visiting and a few speeches.

Bob Ayers is gargling regularly so he can "MC" the festivities with pear-shaped tones of fun and foolishness. Hymn-singing and fiddle music headed by Richard Stotts aided and abetted by Mack Graham, Walter Johnson, and J. B. Yates will be the order of the day, with a goodly sprinkling of oldtime visiting and a few speeches.

It is to be hoped that Cotton John Smith of KGNC will be there with his good-humored patter to liven up the celebration. And, with him, should be Bill Rhue and his trusty camera to snap "shots" of the merry-makers from all angles.

Activities really get underway when "Flip" Breedlove, the bar-becue king of Clarendon, moves in with bean pot and cotton gloves to make camp and start the mesquite chunks burning in his bar-becue oven. And I'd bet my bottom dollar Jiggs Land will be there to make pizza pies.

And, by-the-way, since sunbonnets have become traditional with the Giles Picnic gals, if you don't have one see Mrs. Charlie Crow (1410 Main St., Memphis) and get your order in for a picnic bonnet.

If you've never attended a Giles Picnic, you've missed the time of your life. Come once and you'll never miss again. For the best food you ever ate and a bang-up good time Y'ALL COME TO THE GILES PICNIC, May 30th.

COMMENCEMENT

(Editor's Note: The following editorial was written by Congressman Walter Rogers from his office in Washington, and was addressed to the people of the 18th District)

In only a few weeks over 3,000 young Americans will graduate from High Schools in the 18th Congressional District. Some of them will begin careers immediately while others continue their education at colleges and universities all over the nation. But whatever their future plans and ambitions, the day when these young men and women are handed their diplomas is a proud one not only for the students themselves, but for the parents and teachers who have done so much to ensure that an education means understanding as well as knowledge.

Here in Washington, I am always reminded of our High School graduations as thousands of students from across the United States arrive for class visits. As they walk through the Capitol building and see the Congress in session, it will be only a few months until they begin to accept the responsibility for furthering the heritage which was in considerable part forged in that very building.

I trust that none of them ever ignores the fact that this heritage, which has made America so strong and free, is not something which was completed before their time. It is true that the basic groundwork was laid almost 200 years ago and that many significant advances have been made since. Nevertheless, the opportunities and even the necessities for building the American ideal are just as demanding in 1960 as they were in 1776.

After receiving their High School diplomas, our young people will confront a world which demands the utmost in precise thinking and resolute action. While our forefathers began a nation with the power, plow, and axe, people of today and tomorrow will continue the process with tools a thousand times more complex. This complexity should not frighten these young people, for within it lies the potential for great good. They should be aware that the potential for great harm is also there, and that their efforts can be directed against that harm.

In addition to this, I hope that the prospective graduates will remember that democracy is the most difficult of all possible forms of government. There is a trend in our nation to leisure and comfort, and it makes us all happy that more and more are reaping the benefits of our phenomenal advances. But the processes of our government can never become as simple and as carefree as many other facets of life. The leadership in the United States cannot summarily carry out this or that measure without taking into account the interests of millions.

This usually requires time, and even the revolution which has occurred in our communications system has not overcome the lengthy consideration which must be applied to most of our decisions. Many of us become impatient with the delays which surround much governmental action.

A smoother-running and more responsive government depends to a great extent upon a well informed people, and I think the students who are about to graduate from High Schools all over the Panhandle will play a major role in this regard. With twelve years of a fine education behind them, these youngsters are well prepared to grapple with the far-reaching and often confusing problems of an adult democratic society and sound government.

The graduation exercises will mean a fine reward to those who have worked and studied for what to them seems so long a time. To me, however, commencement always symbolizes the constant striving of people for a better understanding of our world — a striving which is the hallmark of democratic government.

To The People of Precinct One

I want to thank you who voted for me very sincerely.

I do not feel the people of this county owe me anything. Instead I owe the people and my county in which I live what little good I can do.

To you who voted for my opponents, I hold no malice, and may we keep our county where we can always vote for the candidate of our choice.

To Mr. Davis and Mr. Hutcherson: May I congratulate you in the manner in which you conducted your campaigns and for the vote you received. I wish Mr. Hutcherson a pleasant and successful term in his next term of office.

Yours sincerely,

E. S. Morrison

What Other Editors Say

A Business Or A Public Service?

Periodically the wire services as well as newsletters from our representatives in Washington tell us of the demands of President Eisenhower for higher postal rates. We hear demands that the price of mailing a first class letter be hiked to five cents, that the cost of mailing newsletters be doubled or tripled.

We are completely out of sympathy with Postmaster General Summerfield.

In the first place, if the department must have more money, the place to begin is not with first class mail. There is a vast difference between a business or personal letter and the loads of "boxholder type" mail that clogs our post offices each day. It costs just as much to deliver one of these unsolicited handouts as it does an important letter containing a check for $10,000.

Each time we make a trip to the post office, we leave almost as much mail in the post office waste basket as we bring to our office. This discarded "mail" comes under the general classification of "advertising." Unknown concerns from California to New York want to sell us something.

Direct mail is one of many forms of advertising. Others include billboard, newspaper, radio, and television and numerous gimmicks. All advertising media with the exception of direct mail stand on their own feet. They pay their own way. Why should this one form of advertising be subsidized by the public?

Secondly, it is an error to assume that the Post Office Department is a business. In reality, in historical precedent, and in everyday fact, it is a public service. It cannot be conducted as both.

Sure, it costs taxpayers money to run the Post Office Department. It also costs taxpayers money to run the White House, the Commerce Department, the Federal judiciary system, the FBI, the Department of Defense — almost every federal activity.

The costs of such public services all are taken for granted—except the cost of the Post Office Department.

Why? The answer is that the Post Office Department takes in a great deal of money, about $2,500,000,000 a year. No other Government department produces anywhere near as much revenue.

But because the Postal establishment costs more to operate than it takes in, and because a law requires annual reports comparing receipts with costs, the Post Office is singled out and charged with operating at a deficit.

Postal rates are a form of taxes. The Post Office does not keep the money it gets for selling stamps, but turns it into the treasury. Thus, in urging a postal increase, the administration is seeking an indirect tax increase.

Finally, the theory that the Post Office is a business doesn't make sense.

Would a business charge the same fee to deliver across the street as it does to handle a letter from Florida to Alaska or Maine to Hawaii? Does the telephone company charge the same to talk to Happy as it does to New York City or Boston?

Would a business take on a sideline job without remuneration, like selling duck stamps or registering aliens?

The Post Office is an essential public service, worth every cent it costs to operate.

Almost everybody uses the post office — in fact, everyone does to some extent.

The system operates at a deficit. So what? It's a question as to whether we pay the deficit every time we mail a letter or whether we pay it through other federal taxes. Some may say it makes little difference which way we pay this deficit—but it does! We get right back to the principle that the post office is a public service, something that we all benefit from, either as a mailer or receiver of correspondence and parcel post.

We believe Congress should ignore these asinine requests of the President and Postmaster General for another boost in rates.

Around and About
By HELEN COMBS

The beauty and fragrance of the roses in full bloom plus the kind words of friends who were nice enough to say that they missed our column of late inspired us, no doubt, to try our hand at writing again.

Weren't the lilac bushes beautiful this spring? And now comes the peonies. Our lone peony plant out did itself this season . . . it held about 40 of the most beautiful blossoms we have seen. I'm sure others of you have had beautiful plants, too; I know our neighbor, Ruth Goffinett, has some lovely peonies . . . she has several colors.

But, then, what is lovelier than a fence covered with beautiful roses? This sight greets us each morning as we leave for work and look toward the home of Doc and Connie Saye . . . looking further to the west we see a sight equal to a "Tyler Rose Garden" at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andy Womack. Many other homes have beautiful roses, but two which caught our eye this week were the rose hedge at the home of Lois and Ben Parks, and another fence at the home of Billie and Eddie Foxhall.

Graduation is at hand . . . perhaps one of the most thrilling and yet serious moments for those who are completing their high school education. The days will be full for the graduating seniors. Memphis students are returning this week from their senior trip to New Orleans. After graduation, the students will have the summer to start thinking in terms of what they want to do as adults. This is not an easy choice for most young people to make, and one which sometimes requires considerable thought and time in deciding.

As for us, we married into our profession. Thinking back to high school days, we disliked anything connected with writing and were devoted to all courses pertaining to math. What little success we have attained, we owe to our husband who was not shy with his pencil marks when he took us over as a newspaper student. Actually I believe he and Miss Mildred Hulsey, our high school English teacher, would run a close race in pencil marks. But of all our teachers, we think of Miss Hulsey with the greatest respect and appreciation. We have many such fine teachers in our local school system who will be remembered and respected by their students for years to come.

Congratulations are in order to Misses Betty Gidden and Trilby Townsend . . . who for the first time won the coveted State Tennis Championship for the Memphis High School. We are proud of you, Betty and Trilby!

We are proud of our local students, not only on a high school level but a college level. Recently Miss Jean Foxhall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lesley Foxhall, was one of 19 Southern Methodist University students named to membership in the Decima Chapter of Mortar Board. This is indeed an honor and requires a high scholastic rating. While at Baylor University, Miss Ouida Massey, a freshman, was named May Day Queen of the college in ceremonies there last week.

We think it's wonderful that our senior citizens can enjoy an active life these days. Mrs. J. T. Rasco, who is 82 years of age, left by train for San Francisco, Calif., May 1, to visit a sister, Mrs. Mary Shaffer, who is 88. We understand Mrs. Shaffer is quite ill.

Another senior friend of ours, C. L. Stout, called Tuesday morning to say it looks as if his country home had turned into a preserve for "wild life." That morning he had killed two rattlesnakes . . . one as big around as his arm with seven rattles remaining, and several had been broken off. Later in the morning, he found a bone protruding out of the ground and, after digging up the object, found it to be the skull of a buffalo. The Stouts, who have been living in town for several months while Mrs. Stout was recuperating from a recent illness, recently returned to their home, east of the city. Mrs. Stout is now doing nicely.

Then, again, it was a happy weekend for Mrs. N. A. Hightower . . . who had not only her two sons and their families home for Mother's Day, but received a surprise visit from her four sisters and their families.

Mrs. J. W. Arnold, Route 1, Lakeview, shared her happiness of the occasion by remembering us with a lovely friendship card. Mother's Day was a happy occasion for her. She writes that she was showered with red roses, ny-lons and pretty hankies from her children and grandchildren.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. C. Dunn of Lakeview who recently celebrated their Golden Wedding anniversary. The nicest thing possible has happened to us, Mrs. Dunn said. Our granddaughter and her family, Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Hall and Cathy and Gary of Baytown have recently moved here and are now in the process of remodeling a home to move into on Delaney Street. Mrs. Hall will be remembered as the former Rita Harmon and was reared by Mr. and Mrs. Dunn. The Halls will live in Memphis, but will be engaged in farming.

We'll grant that the most genial major with the U. S. Air Force in Germany last week was none other than our own Major Billy Joe Tumlinson, son of W. W. Tumlinson. After five daughters, twin sons, Peter Albert and Phillips Anthony, were born to Mr. and Mrs. Tumlinson in Germany last week.

Convention meetings were in order for three Memphis women the past few days. Mrs. Hulda Wilson enjoyed a reunion with graduates from Baylor Nursing School . . . Mrs. Melissa Anderson was in Abilene to attend a state convention for county tax assessors and collectors . . . and Mrs. D. L. C. Kinard was in Austin to attend the state meeting of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs. One of the highlights of Mrs. Kinard's trip was an invitation to attend the tea given in Austin honoring "Lady Bird," wife of Senator Lyndon Johnson. "It was done up in style with orchids being flown in from Hawaii for the occasion," Mrs. Kinard said.

The woman's point of view: Women take a lot of guff about the amount of money they spend on hats. But I never heard of one who spent $495 for a hat, another $495 for a motor and $25 on fishing tackle to catch a 25c fish she didn't intend to eat in the first place!

Until next week, "Don't be unhappy if your dreams fail to come true—be thankful your nightmares don't."

LAUNDERING CHAMP

Cotton has the desirable quality of being able to take thorough launderings in hot water with soap or detergents necessary to get a fabric really clean.

Cotton is not sensitive to heat. High temperatures of water, drying machine, or iron will not damage the fabric. Cotton launders best because it becomes stronger when wet, resists alkalis and bleaches, resists shrinking, and holds its fast colors.
