Modern Field House Is Constructed At Stadium

The new 50-foot by 100-foot Field House has been completed at the Cyclone Stadium in plenty of time for the 1960 football season.

The new field house, which is located at the south end of the field is a concrete and stucco structure with fiberglass insulation. It contains two shower stalls, opponents' dressing room, fully equipped, an equipment room, varsity room and coaches office.

The structure was built by crews from the Memphis Compress Company under the supervision of J. J. McDaniel, Memphis Independent School District and Memphis Compress shared costs and expenses on the building.

Other improvements at the field have been the painting of the press box, plus the installation of a new roof, painting of the concession stand which also received a new roof. The wooden ramp at the south end of the concrete bleacher seat section has been replaced with one of concrete. A sidewalk has been laid to the concession stand.

Other improvements include the installation of two new light poles and the repairing of the west section of stands.

Coach Don Lambert reported that the turf on the field was in excellent condition.

"Ike" Sekhon of Dallas Speaks To Joint Meeting of Lions, Rotary

Iqbal "Ike" Singh Sekhon, general manager of the $750,000 swanky La Tunisia Restaurant in Exchange Park, Dallas, was the speaker at a joint meeting of the Memphis Lions and Rotary Clubs Wednesday.

Sekhon, who prefers to be called Ike, was born and raised in Patiala, Punjab, India, where he received his B. A. degree from the University of Punjab in 1953.

Ike entitled his talk "Democracy in the Land of Maharajas and Snake Charmers." He broke his talk in two parts, India before 1947, and India after 1947. He explained that before 1947, India was not an independent nation. It was ruled by 526 Maharajas, many of whom were world-famous for their fabulous treasures and excesses, he said.

However, in 1947, India won its independence from England, and set up a democracy, he stated. The old system of Maharajas' rule was ended. Thus was born the new India, and the big job of building a modern nation was begun.

The speaker said that the major tasks were the development of modernistic farm methods, since 95 per cent of the farming was being done with the use of cattle and ox on plots of land smaller than three acres.

The second defect the government had to overcome was the fact that land holdings were in plots of five acres or less, with much of the land being leased by "absent landlords."

On the discussion of birth rate and over-population in India, Ike said that he felt the nation was not over-populated.

"The country has an abundance of natural resources that have not been exploited as yet," he explained.

So far, he added, over 90 per cent of the population is engaged in farming. If more industrial plants were built, there would be employment of the masses, and the standard of living would be raised.

"India does not want gifts in foreign aid from other countries," he explained, "they just want aid in the respect of helping start new businesses and industrial plants."

In response to a question regarding the struggle between India and Red China, Ike Sekhon said that there are two different philosophies at work in the two countries.

In Red China the families have been done away with, and work gangs have been organized to build China into a modern country by building dams on rivers, homes, use of modern equipment in farming, etc.

In India, the democratic government has allowed the people to keep their families and their religion, and through its three, five-year plans, has been trying to modernize the nation.

In answer to the question: "will India turn communistic?" Ike said that at the time the poor people had to choose between food, clothing and shelter under the communists, to starvation under a democracy which offered them only freedom of religion and the maintenance of the family as one unit, many would choose the food and clothing.

The speaker then turned to a lighter subject and discussed mar-

LOCAL YOUTH GIVES ACCOUNT OF GIGANTIC BOY SCOUT JAMBOREE

(Editor's Note: Following is an account of the Scouts' National Jamboree, written by a local Scout, Dana Gibson, one of Memphis' 11 boys who attended. Dana is serving as The Democrat's correspondent.)

Wednesday morning at 6 a. m. buses rolled out of Pampa with 160 boys on board. We stopped at Lamar, Colo., for lunch and had a chicken dinner. After we arrived at the Jamboree at 4 p. m., we set up tents and ate supper at 7 p. m. Most of the boys spent the rest of the evening until 10 p. m. trading with other Scouts.

Thursday morning we got up and cooked breakfast, and some of the boys washed dishes. The rest of the morning was spent fixing camp. In the afternoon, we went to the Air Force Academy where we toured the Planetarium. (This tour will help the Scouts with their astronomy merit badge tests.)

(Each Scout is working toward his Jamboree Achievement Badge. To receive it, each one must complete a list of some 20 items ranging from conservation skills to firing of .22 caliber shot guns. They also must receive 200 signatures from other Scouts through the process of trading items with them.)

Thursday evening we continued our trading and receiving signatures from Scouts of other states and countries.

Friday was one of our big days. We cleaned our area and prepared the meals. Also, we took showers, and was the water cold! It started to rain about supper time, so we cooked our meal under the tent fly. The rain stopped just in time for us to go to the big assembly.

At 6:30 p. m. the whole area marched down to the big arena. There were 56,000 boys assembled. They had a big show and the biggest fire works display any of us had ever seen. The skyrockets were of many different colors. Billy Cosby carried his troop flag on the three-mile hike to and from the arena.

Saturday morning at 5 a. m. part of the boys took a five-mile hike for the achievement award, and the rest went on the conservation trip. That afternoon the boys who went on the conservation trip took the hike and the other group went on the conservation trip. After supper we were tired, so we went to bed.

(The following are accounts of the Jamboree from local visitors who were in Colorado Springs over the weekend.)

The Lynn McKowns were there Friday and Sunday evening. The B. B. Gibson party were on the site Saturday and Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Hall were at the Jamboree Saturday. They were visiting their daughter who lives in Colorado.

A fairly accurate nose count listed the total Scout population at 56,000 boys, with approximately 19,000 adult leaders and service men. Visiting from noon to 10 p. m. Saturday were 30,000 persons.

All food is being cooked by charcoal, with a fire builder rising one hour earlier than the other boys to build the fire. The food is brought to each of the eight-man patrols. Everything is served in paper and plastic, with all food not eaten being disposed.

In each patrol, a fire builder, cook, assistant cook, water boy, dish washer, and camp site cleaner are appointed for each meal.

Scoutmaster B. B. Gibson reported that one of the most fascinating things was the four gigantic trading posts set up in each of the four areas. They are always surrounded by thousands of boys. Two hospitals have been set up, and each section has its own doctor and nurse.

Saturday, Gibson said, was the day for the great inter-troop visitations. The Adobe Walls Council was divided in two sections, with half being visited by Scouts from Indiana and Iowa, and the other

Hall County wheat farmers voted 79 for and 0 against in the 1961 wheat referendum, held at polling places in the county last Thursday. This information was announced early this week by Lynn McKown, manager of the ASC office here.

Over the nation, the referendum carried by one of the highest percentages in its eight-year history, 87.4 per cent. The only year it was higher was in 1957 when the referendum carried by 87.6 per cent.

Since the quotas were approved by the necessary two-thirds vote, producers who stay within the acreage allotted for their farms will be eligible for the full announced level of price support on their entire production which will be not less than 75 per cent of parity, McKown said.

The support rate in Hall County for 1960 wheat was $3.89.

Farm Safety Week In Texas Set For July 24-30

Governor Price Dainel by proclamation has designated the week of July 24-30 as Farm Safety Week in Texas. This same period has also been designated as National Farm Safety Week by the President of the United States.

In his proclamation, Governor Daniel said: "The Nation's economy is dependent upon the continued well-being and progress of our State's agricultural population. Accidents from farm work cause needless suffering, distress and loss of life each year among our rural families."

"By directing the attention of our rural residents to safety education, such worthwhile programs now being conducted can greatly reduce accidents. I urge all Texas farm families to increase their vigilance against needless accidents and further encourage interested organizations and individuals to participate in this program."

The Texas Farm and Ranch Safety Council points out that the purpose of the special week is to focus attention on the year-round need for reducing the number of farm accidents, and to cause those who can do something about the problem, to act. The farmer and his family, says the council, must carry safety into their everyday lives. Nationally, they add, farm accidents cost one and a quarter billion dollars annually, a sizeable sum any way you take it.

The ever-tightening cost-price squeeze faced by agriculturists makes accident prevention even more important, says the Council, because a single costly accident can just about squeeze out the profits from most family expenses.

The Council joins Governor Daniel in urging rural residents their number on project for the months ahead.

How Important The Orations?

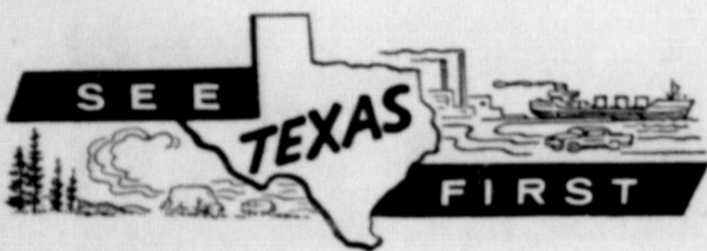

Citizens of this nation are recognizing that many changes have taken place in the techniques of the two great political organizations. Most of these have been brought about by the enormous improvement in the instruments of communication, both verbal and visual. The coverage by television, as we have seen at the two national conventions, proves this. It also means that plans must be made well in advance, and worked out in minute detail.

One thing, however, is still the same. The orators at the convention still take the absolute and positive approach in discussing the issues. The flamboyant style of the no-holds-barred approach, of which the late William Jennings Bryan was the greatest, remain. Today, the speakers face the merciless television cameras. As the opposition is blamed for mistakes, and the speaker's party receives its praise for all good things, the American people may watch and hear — and agree or disagree with the utterances.

We doubt if the mass of voters are swayed by the oratory as they once were. People are much better informed today, and are prone to take what they hear with "a grain of salt" in many instances. This is especially true as we watched the delegates themselves, at both conventions. Some looked bored and disinterested as the orators' voices boomed over the loudspeakers.

There is one field of agreement among leaders of both parties. That is the menace of Communism. This means more attention is being given to foreign affairs and defense. All internal problems of this nation are of secondary importance, in spite of the thousands of words which went into party platforms.

The old struggle is now own to convince the majority of voters that the nominees of each party can best serve the interests of the majority. This is the American way of having checks and balances. Until a better way is found, we will go along with the methods, which have served us in good stead for a long time.

In 1874, Chief Quanah Parker, son of the famous Cynthia Ann Parker, led some 700 picked Comanche, Cheyenne, and Kiowa warriors in battle against 28 brave frontiersmen and buffalo hunters in the Texas Panhandle.

He was defeated in this attempted "Alamo" style massacre by the small band of men that included the famous Bat Masterson and Bermuda Charlie.

This "Battleground of Adobe Walls" now rests peacefully just thirty miles north of Borger.

There are no dinosaurs in Texas, but we do have proof that the prehistoric monsters were here at one time.

Just travel twenty miles west of Cleburne to the town of Glen Rose, and you can see for yourself.

There you will find fossilized dinosaur tracks along the beautiful Paluxy River.

They have a fine specimen on exhibit downtown too.

You'll enjoy staying in Glen Rose, as it is a well-known vacation and health resort . . . famous for its mineral water.

Texas has been the home of many great and courageous men. A few words describing their feats often can imply the magnitude of their character.

Such are the words on a marker on the highway southwest of Llano, in Central Texas, which reads: "Enchanted Rock. From its summit, in the fall of 1841, Captain John C. Hays, while surrounded by Comanche Indians who cut him off from his ranging company, repulsed the whole band and inflicted upon them such heavy losses that they fled."

What Other Editors Say

Who's Doing The Tempting?

The Tribune was in receipt, this week, of a news item issued by the Highway Patrol listing the number of motor vehicle accidents investigated by their patrolmen in Cochran County this year and noting that no deaths had occurred in the county due to vehicle collisions.

In some places this kind of an announcement would call for a celebration and a round of back pats for the carefulness shown by drivers in this county.

However, there is no celebration in store for this county. For the item, though not issued with the purpose of congratulating Cochran Countians, does indicate several bad accidents have occurred. That no deaths have occurred cannot be attributed to the great skill of the drivers.

Two occasions over this past weekend certainly focused the light of "good fortune", or "fate" as our benefactor . . . rather than attribute it to careful driving.

On Saturday afternoon, with the ambulance approaching from the west, the stop light changed and a driver pulled his car right into the intersection under the stop light. The ambulance siren blaring, preceded by another car leading the way, was able to stop. But the first car collided with the car in the intersection. Fortunately, no one was killed, but to reason why, defies mortal explanation.

Then on Sunday of this week, west of Morton, a car overturned almost being demolished as it rolled several times before coming to a stop.

All through the day, early this week, folks were going by to look at the Parker vehicle, and coming back wondering how a car could have been so completely destroyed and the driver and passenger escape with their lives. Jimmy was severely cut, but his passenger wasn't hurt.

Once again we're at a lot to say why someone wasn't killed. Fate was on Jimmy's side.

There are those who don't like to talk about accidents in this manner. Some feel that there just isn't any point in saying things that might "tempt fate."

To this we can only reply, go see the Parker car and then decide, is it the writer who is tempting fate, or is it the driver?

It's never too often to remind folks . . . slow down, and live, or if you aren't interested in living, at least slow down and let others live.

—Morton Tribune

Interest Rates Down

The latest news from the financial world is that interest rates are dropping — both for home building loans and for business loans. This should be good news for all Americans.

Interest rates reached such a high level in 1960 that only those with huge sums of money were profiting from the excessive rates. The charge of Democrats — throughout the years — is that the Republicans profit from high interest rates because generally speaking, the Republican interests are those with money to loan, whereas many Democrats are those making the loans.

It is true that interest rates have been high in recent Republican administrations and lower in Democratic administrations. The fact is, however that now, in a Republican administration (and in an election year) interest rates are dropping as a result of normal forces at work in the money market. However, Administrative action — by the Federal Reserve Board — has undoubtedly affected the trend, and caused interest rates to recede.

As a long-term proposition, the party which seeks to ensue low interest rates will win votes. For the average family, the largest purchase of a lifetime is the purchase of a home. Whether that family pays 4 per cent or 6 per cent, and whether it pays for twenty or thirty years, are major financial decisions of the family's lifetime, and quite often, make a difference of several thousand

Therefore, from the standpoint of the majority, low interest rates are desirable. One of the goals of our government should be to provide the average American family with just and equitable interest rates for home purchases, and perhaps automobile purchases, and the "little man" is entitled to a fair break in this regard as he fights the economic battle of life and attempts to pay his not-inconsiderable tax bill.

Representative, 18th Congressional District Report From Washington

Paying The Price

National figures for the census will tell a story that we have known for some time. In what will be the most significant American migration in recent history, millions of people are forsaking the great urban centers of the nation. And at least by the children of these restless, modern Americans reach high school, of the United States will be with huge welt-like marks denote the most complex awesome cities the world has known. Many city dwellers park and play in "towns" range across hundreds of without interruption.

Trend has been obvious in ways. The most casual at wedding announcements handle newspapers will report many young couples to abandon their home in favor of larger cities. An bus and railroad station of a large metropolis will a portion of the millions out for the big cities each with their high hopes — and their every possession — with them. Just a short the outskirts of even the largest community ever row upon row of mass FHA financed homes — mark of sprawling suburban are the hard facts of an feature in American World War II. In some the massive "urge to move" inspiring insofar as it states that we have not lost the pioneering spirit which made a great. Our people still courage to venture into environments and test ways. Many of them, I am sure, are hopeful of benefiting their countrymen as well as themselves. We are not, as our enemies would have us believe, such an entirely contented and declining nation at all.

Nevertheless, the uncomfortable feeling remains that much of this surging movement toward our urban complexes is inspired by rather grandiose propaganda. To say that our smaller communities offer no opportunities is, in most cases, sheer fiction. To complain that the more rural areas of our country are "dull" displays an unpleasant modern neurosis, an unhealthy grasping for "something to do" and a strange inability to find it. And to paint universally rosy pictures of life in the metropolis is particularly deceptive, for the individual tragedies that can sometimes occur are as old as O. Henry's writings.

Old men whittling in front of the country store are as much a part of America as the high pressure brokers on Wall Street. We should be as proud of the kindly old general practitioner as we are of the most eminent heart specialist. And the man who rides a tall, bumpy tractor has fully as much stake in the American experiment as does the man who rides from directors meeting to directors meeting in a low, smooth limousine.

We have, I think, committed a fundamental error in emphasizing a certain brand of success all out of proportion to its true worth. We have too often dwelt upon the slick, the super-sophisticated, the "gee-whiz" type of endeavor. We have sometimes been willing to exchange quick, easy fame and success for slow, difficult, but profound satisfaction. This attitude has not been without effect.

We are now beginning to pay the price, and the amazing rush of so many of our people to urban areas is perhaps not the only toll. The source of many of our worries, such as conformity or trend toward bureaucracy, can also be traced to a shift in values. We would do well to remember that American strength lies to a great extent in its diversity and depth. The 1960 census, in revealing a partial loss of this vibrant quality, might well remind us of our duty to keep faith with all facets of our life.

This announcement was made in a joint press release by General Telephone Company and Communications Workers of America as issued by Frank A. Lennberg and Marvin Collins.

The settlement includes a general wage increase for the 2,840 employees represented by the Union. Initial estimates are that the increased wages will total to some $350,000. Included in the wage settlement is a shortening in wage schedule length to 72 months from 75 months, the release said.

On June 1, 1961, the company will institute a company-paid emergency medical expense insurance program for all regular employees. This program will provide coverage for extraordinary medical expenses of employees in amounts up to $10,000 through payment of 80 per cent of actual expenses after primary hospitalization and medical insurance has been exhausted.

Included in the settlement are four weeks' vacation after 25 years of service, expansion of call-out pay coverage, double-time for overtime worked on holidays, increased board and lodging expense allowance for certain employees, increased mileage allowance to employees using their personal cars for company purposes, clarification of certain overtime payment practices, improvements in job bidding procedures, betterments in grievance procedure, and a number of other contract improvements.

riage customs in India. He said that in 1955 it was made illegal for a man to take a second wife before divorcing the first. He then discussed the dowry system of obtaining a wife, and stated that the arranged marriage was still being practiced in India.

In conclusion, Ike said that the only way that world peace will ever be obtained is on a people-to-people level.

"We must visit with other people and have them to visit with us, for most men want only to be left alone, so that they can live a peaceful life," he said.

Ike came to the United States in 1954 and enrolled in Fresno State College in California. He finished his undergraduate studies in business administration in the spring of 1956. In the fall of that year he enrolled in Southern Methodist University for graduate work. He now needs only six hours to finish his masters work at SMU.

While attending SMU he met a girl named Dolores Brooks of Kaufman, and in June, 1958, they were married. Now they have one 10-month-old daughter.
