Abraham Lincoln, The Great Liberal

"Lincoln For The Ages" was published recently by Doubleday & Co. In it, "seventy-six distinguished Americans tell the Lincoln story," according to Ralph G. Newman who edited the copy and wrote the introduction. Among the 76 are such Lincoln students as Carl Sandburg, Adlai Stevenson, Paul H. Douglas and Ralph Yarborough, member of the national Lincoln Sesquicentennial commission and the Southern Historical Association.

Yarborough's chapter is entitled "Lincoln As a Liberal Statesman."

He begins with a definition of the world "liberal" as used in its highest sense.

The word does not imply a doctrine or a code. Rather it is an attitude towards or a way of interpreting life and those things which go into it. In a nutshell, it means freedom to think as one pleases, unbound by prejudice, tradition, and bigotry. Because of its innate meaning, it cannot stand for a particular philosophy or system. It is neither moral or immoral—it is unmoral. The kind of freedom on which our country was founded gives a man freedom to be an atheist rather than a Christian, if he so chooses. In another, and perhaps higher, sense, there is no true freedom outside Christ—yet to incorporate such freedom into a nation's constitution is to violate the spirit of our constitution which respects the religious dictates of a man's conscience however faulty they may be.

Lincoln wrote to a man in Massachusetts, "This is a world of compensations; and he who would be no slave must consent to have no slave. Those who deny freedom to others, deserve it not for themselves; and, under a just God, cannot long retain it."

This is liberalism.

On another occasion, Lincoln said, "No man is good enough to govern another man without that other's consent."

Upon these beliefs, this credo, Lincoln based and built his statesmanship. Toward the acceptance of this philosophy and its enactment into law he directed his every public act from the time of the great debates to the end of his life.

Perhaps Lincoln's greatest statement concerning liberalism was expressed when he said, "The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present . . . As our case is new, so we must think anew, and act anew . . ."

Again, this is true liberalism.

Lincoln believed in the ability of people to govern themselves. He expressed it this way, "Most governments have been based, practically, on the denial of equal rights of men . . . ours began by affirming those rights. They said, some men are too ignorant, and vicious, to share in government. Possibly so, said we; and, by your system, you would always keep them ignorant, and vicious. We proposed to give all a chance; and we expected the weak to grow stronger, the ignorant, wiser; and all better, and happier together. We made the experiment . . ." Wonder if Robert Welch wouldn't term Lincoln a communist—or at least a comsymp.

One cannot help but to see the similarity between Lincoln and Kennedy.

During the crises Lincoln faced, he was assailed as a vacillating weakling and hopeless incompetent. Even friends spoke patronizingly of his poor ability to cope with the tremendous problems which confronted him. It was bad enough so that Lincoln once wrote wistfully, "I have endured a great deal of ridicule without much malice; and have received a great deal of kindness not quite free from ridicule."

Critics called Lincoln a drifter, that he had no policy. He answered the accusation by informing his secretary, "My policy is to have no policy." Lincoln put principle above precedent. Some accused Lincoln of moving too rapidly. Others said he moved too slowly.

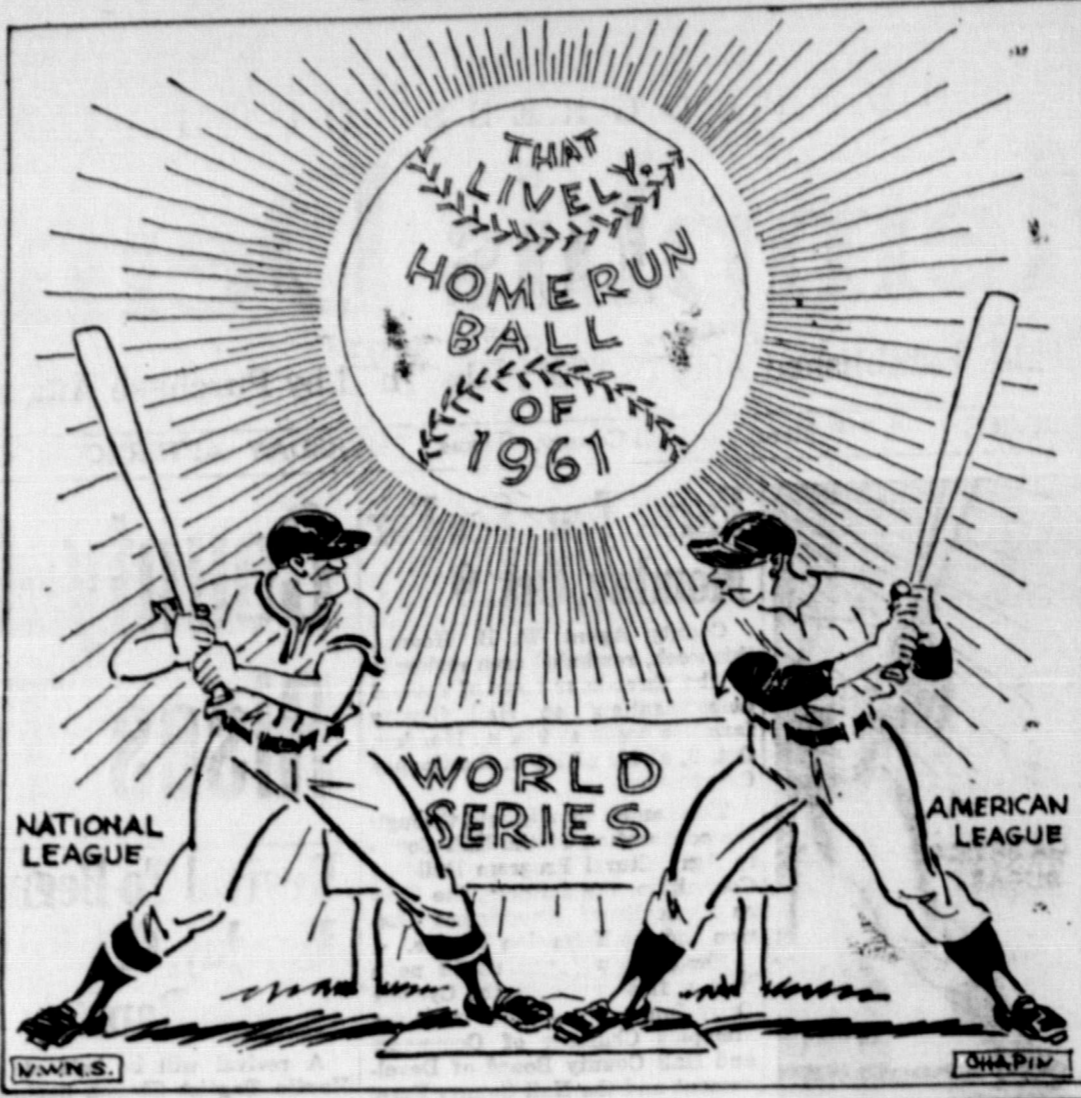

Does this sound familiar some 100 years later?

To Congress he wrote that he was struggling to maintain "that form, and substance of government, whose object is, to elevate the condition of men—to lift artificial weights from all shoulders—to clear the paths of laudable pursuit for all—to afford all, an unfettered start, and a fair chance, in the race of life. Yielding to partial and temporary departures, from necessity, this is the leading object of the government for whose existence we contend."

Yarborough concludes with this observation: "History itself has written the verdict. The paradoxes fall into place. The inconsistencies, so poorly understood at the time, make a pattern which is clearly distinguishable. Lincoln emerges not only as a liberal statesman but as the most liberal statesman we have had. For his every act directed toward the freedom of men."

Why Not Look Patriotic?

Is there something wrong about being patriotic . . . and showing it?

We think not. But majority opinion seems to lean another way. Where do you stand? Or do you stand at all, when the national anthem is played or the flag is carried by? A great many Americans don't, these days.

At the football game at Stinnett last Saturday night, when the Stinnett High School band played the National Anthem (and played it creditably, too . . . as we wish our own band would learn some day to do) we had an inclusive view of the crowd from the press-box. Most of them were standing, after a fashion . . . but not one in ten was standing erectly at attention, and not one in a hundred was rendering the civilian salute . . . head uncovered, and right hand or hat over heart. A few who were seemed ill at ease about it, as if feeling a little ridiculous in the eyes of their neighbors.

Even the officials on the field, who might be expected to set an example for the crowd, were slouching in various positions of ease.

There was a time when patriotism was taught in schools . . . beginning in the first grade . . . and practiced, too, with the pledge of allegiance opening each day's classes.

What's wrong with that? Next time you see the stars and stripes presented, or hear the national anthem played, stand up straight and tall and salute with pride. Give it a trial. You might find that it feels kind of good.

Decline and Fall!
 For a number of years people have speculated about the course of this nation's history, and as far back as 1788, Edward Gibbon pointed out some signposts in his study of the great Roman empire.

Gibbon, in his monumental work, "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," listed five chief reasons which he stated caused the fall.

Here they are:

1. The rapid increase of divorce. The undermining of the dignity and sanctity of home, which is the basis of human society.

2. Higher and higher taxes and the spending of public money for free bread and circuses for the populace.

3. The mad craze for pleasure, sports becoming every year more exciting and more brutal.

4. The building of gigantic armaments when the real enemy was within, the decadence of the people.

5. The decay of religion—faith fading into mere form — losing touch with life and becoming impotent to guide the people.

Are there lessons for us here today?

Altenhagen, Germany—

Heiner Ludemann, AFS Student, Writes To Memphis Friends

Hauptstrasse 100
Altenhagen Bielefeld
Western Germany

It is almost more than 10 weeks ago that I left Memphis. Since then I have traveled a lot, but now it has all come to an end.

Since August 31, I am going to school again in Bielefeld. It was a curious moment to see the old place again and to meet all my friends here. I don't think any of them have changed; except from several new teachers. The school is still running in its old tracks.

From now on I have to work very hard to be promoted into the 13th class next Easter. Especially scientific subjects like chemistry, physics and math will be difficult. During my absence the class has made much progress, which I still lack. Nevertheless, I have had plenty holiday, and I should have the energy to do it.

Beginning with my departure on June 23, I have been traveling almost continuously. In Tulsa, Okla., I joined a group of 28 other exchange students, who made up one of 54 AFS buses. Our journey together led us through Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, Delaware, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Massachusetts. We saw Washington, D. C., were addressed by President Kennedy, conquered New York City. The trip was so undeniably wonderful, and I enjoyed the friendship of my fellow AFS'ers so much that my stay in America has taken a most pleasant finish.

The final journey home was made by plane from New York across the Atlantic Ocean to Copenhagen, Denmark, and from there to Frankfurt, Germany, on July 29. It was a little strange to be back home, and I felt lonesome away from all my friends in Texas and on the bus.

However, my family didn't give me much rest but went on vacation. So I stayed another two weeks in Austria, Yugoslavia, and Italy.

Now I have found back into German life; I speak German as well as I did a year ago. Many people ask me about America and Texas, and I am always happy to tell them about my pleasant experience. I myself spend much thinking about the gone days in Memphis; at all times I would love to go through them again. I am aware of the kindness and friendship offered to me by the people

Hall County Soil Conservation District News

Soil Conservation is important to you no matter where you live or what you do. For hundreds of years people have used the soil that we are living on now. Some of our ancestors wasted the land because the land was plentiful and more could be had. The soil began to erode by wind and water erosion, soon all of the land was in use. Now we must save it for the generations to come.

The earth's population has been increasing for the last number of years. The larger the population the larger the food supply must be. While the population is increasing some of our soil fertility is decreasing by such hazards as wind and water erosion.

With these thoughts in mind our local soil conservation district was organized under the state and federal laws by local farmers and ranchers. The Hall County Soil Conservation District makes available technical services and specialized types of farm machinery. It promotes a program for the use and care of our land.

The Soil Conservation Service will make available to you a personalized plan of your farm or ranch. Such things as a soil and capability map of your farm becomes yours when you become a cooperater with the Hall County Soil Conservation District.

The Soil Conservation Service Technicians will review with you the type of soil conservation practices needed for your farm or ranch and explain the best methods of application, and also what assistance is available from the various U. S. D. A. agencies.

If you do not have a conservation plan for your farm or ranch or you have an old plan that needs revising — contact your local soil conservation Service at the Court House in Memphis.

President John F. Kennedy has proclaimed October 8-14 at National Fire Prevention Week. Now is the time to safeguard your home and your farm for fire in the Hall County Soil Conservation District. Farm fire losses in the United States in 1960 were estimated at $165 million by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Loss of life from farm fires was estimated at $50 last year.

November is the peak month for fires and loss of life. Ninety-percent of the fires and the deaths occurred between 8 P. M. and 8 A. M. Farm families particularly must rely on their own farm safety training, fire prevention check-ups, and private fire protection measures to safeguard their lives, income and property.

Some good fire prevention rules to follow are: keep your home free from all fire hazards by regular inspection, avoid carelessness with smoking and matches, do not allow trash and oily rags to accumulate in homes or farm buildings, a clean house or farm building seldom burns. Remove grass, weeds and dry vegetation from around farm buildings and fence rows. Replace damaged or worn electrical wires, and have at least a 50-foot length of garden hose connected for ready use inside the house in case of fire.

Now is the time to check your property for fire hazards — safeguard your life, your home, and your farm from fire!

Cotton IS STRONG

Cotton is a natural muscleman—strong as steel. Its fiber strength is 100,000 pounds per square inch—even stronger when wet. In the washing machine, in the rain, or soaked with perspiration, when extra strength is needed, cotton really flexes its muscles. Its toughness laughs at abrasion, as rugged Army field tests have shown, and you won't find cotton coming apart at the seams. There is no denying it—nothing looks like cotton, does like cotton, is like cotton. It's in a class by itself.

COTTON . . . the miracle fiber only Nature could have created

Ford Motor Company Concentrates On Entire 1962 Light Truck Line

Ford Division of Ford Motor Company has concentrated its entire 1962 light truck engineering effort to reducing truck operating costs, Eddie Foxhall, local Ford dealer, announced this week. He said that "in a deliberate effort to help businessmen combat inflationary-type operating costs, Ford has focused its prime attention on improvements in engineering rather than body changes."

Foxhall explained that the continued movement of the population into vast suburban areas has made it necessary for businessmen to travel greater distances in delivering consumer goods. As a result, he said, the increase in total truck mileage and delivery man-hours required is adversely affecting business profits.

In Ford's 1962 Business Fleet, truck buyers may select any of six economy-type engines, ranking in size and horsepower from a 144-cubic inch 85 horsepower 6-cylinder to a 292-cubic inch 170 horsepower V-8. Each engine has been designed to provide maximum economy and power for specific types of hauling jobs.

Typical of the many truck engineering advancements that have been incorporated into the Ford Business Fleet are those built into the 1962 Falcon Ranchero and Sedan Delivery trucks.

A new standard transmission interlock mechanism prevents a driver from "clashing gears." Increased use of asphalt deadener and other material provides an added sound absorption package.

Also built into every Ranchero and Sedan Delivery truck are such proven-owner convenience features as low loading height, easy-to-operate tailgate and level cargo floor with a full 800-pound load capacity.

In addition to the Falcon Ranchero and Sedan Delivery, trucks comprising Ford's 1962 fleet include the Econoline van and pickup, the light duty one-half, three-quarter, and one ton pickups, and the one-half and three-quarter ton 4-wheel drive. Medium duty trucks in the Ford fleet include the conventional and tilt-cab series with gross vehicle weights ranging from 15,000 to 21,000 pounds.

Outselling every competitive make economy truck in 1961, the popular Econoline maintains its distinctive appearance and quality for 1962. Both van and pickup feature a flat, all-steel floor, and the van has full 4 ft. by 4 ft. doors to both side and rear for easy loading and unloading.

Drivers of 1962 Ford pickups will ride more comfortably and experience less fatigue, in "driverized" cabs. Thick foam rubber seat pads provide standard pickup cabs with built-in comfort. In addition, the Ranchero has new standard and deluxe upholstery

Report From Washington

By WALTER ROGERS
Representative, 18th Congressional District

Bad Boys

It seems that the House of Representatives of the United States Congress adjourned on a sour note with both the United States Senate and the District of Columbia. The House seems to be in equal bad repute with both. Newspaper accounts here, both news stories and editorials, refer to the House adjournment activities as a "slick maneuver", "arbitrariness", "stubborn insensitivity to the national welfare", "double crossed the Senate", "writing offensive provisions into catch-all appropriations bills", "legislation by trickery," etc.

One editorial says, "It was stubborn insensitivity to the national welfare on the part of the House that killed the aid to education bill, cut deeply into the foreign aid program and doomed vital legislation for the District of Columbia." The offensive provisions charged to have been written into an appropriations bill by the House, no doubt, refers to some language put into the bill by the House which prevented some additional back door spending. The vital legislation for the District of Columbia referred to was a District of Columbia tax bill increasing the sales tax in the District of Columbia, among other things. One of the other things that was so abhorrent to the House was the inclusion in the bill of an amendment which would have permitted the District of Columbia to have participated in the funds originally appropriated to aid school districts which were unduly burdened by Federal installations. This is commonly called the impacted school areas bill. The amendment to which I refer which was included indirectly what the House had refused to do directly, that is, pay to the District of Columbia the sum of approximately $36 million. This matter was presented to the House on two separate occasions. On the first occasion, by a Roll Call vote, the House refused to accept such an amendment by a vote of 142 to 159. Four days later the matter was again brought before the House and on another roll call vote, the proposition lost to the tune of 173 nays to 97 yeas. It was an excellent example of a gimmick to bypass the Appropriations Committee and the appropriations procedures of the House.

Many of the advocates of Federal aid to education supported the amendment and argued that it would be a breakthrough into the field of Federal aid to education. This argument did not help the cause of those trying to insert the amendment, because it will be remembered the Federal aid to education bill failed in the House earlier in the year.

The Congress came in for some bitter criticism on other measures concerning the District of Columbia. One of these had to do with the fact that the Senate had voted $2,550,000 in connection with the National Capitol Transportation Agency. A conference between the House and Senate resulted in this amount being cut to $1,085,000. We were also criticized because the House refused to yield concerning disqualification requirements having to do with benefits for the unemployed. The result was the bill is still pending. Another item drawing criticism was the failure of the House to go along with certain proposals designed to "improve" the urban renewal and redevelopment procedures. The House was taken to task not only in the newspapers but also on television and radio, and was accused of being irresponsible for failure to do things for the District of Columbia.

I bring you this story because I think the people all over the country should know that the House of Representatives, in my opinion, opinion, elected for two-year terms so they would and could remain close to the people, have by their action in these matters proven that the "voice of the people" is still being heard in loud and clear tones in the Nation's Capital.

Hall Farm Bureau Convention Set For October 21

The Hall County Farm Bureau annual convention will be Saturday, Oct. 21 at 7:30 p.m. at the Travis School in Memphis it was announced this week by H. A. Hodges, president.

"This is the harvest season of ideas in Farm Bureau, and local Hall County Farm Bureau members are being urged to participate in the annual process by which the organization decides its positions on hundreds of issues on local, state and national levels," president Hodges stated.

"The process begins at the grass roots," Hodges said, "with discussion meetings attended by Farm Bureau members. The first official step in the process is the county annual convention at which county policies and recommendations on state and national issues are adopted after discussion and debate.

"All adopted resolutions pertaining to county-level matters become policies for the local organization for the ensuing year. All approved resolutions dealing with state and national matters are forwarded as recommendations on national issues for consideration by the national Farm Bureau convention to be held this year in December in Chicago.

"The number of delegates for a county is based upon the size of membership of that county. Hall County Farm Bureau, which had 266 members in 1960, was eligible to send three delegates to the state convention last year.

"Finally," Hodges said, "policy development process culminated at the national convention in December where delegations from 49 states adopt policies for Farm Bureau where. Here, too, the size of delegations is based upon the number of members. Only three states, Illinois, Indiana and Texas, have more voting delegates," he explained.

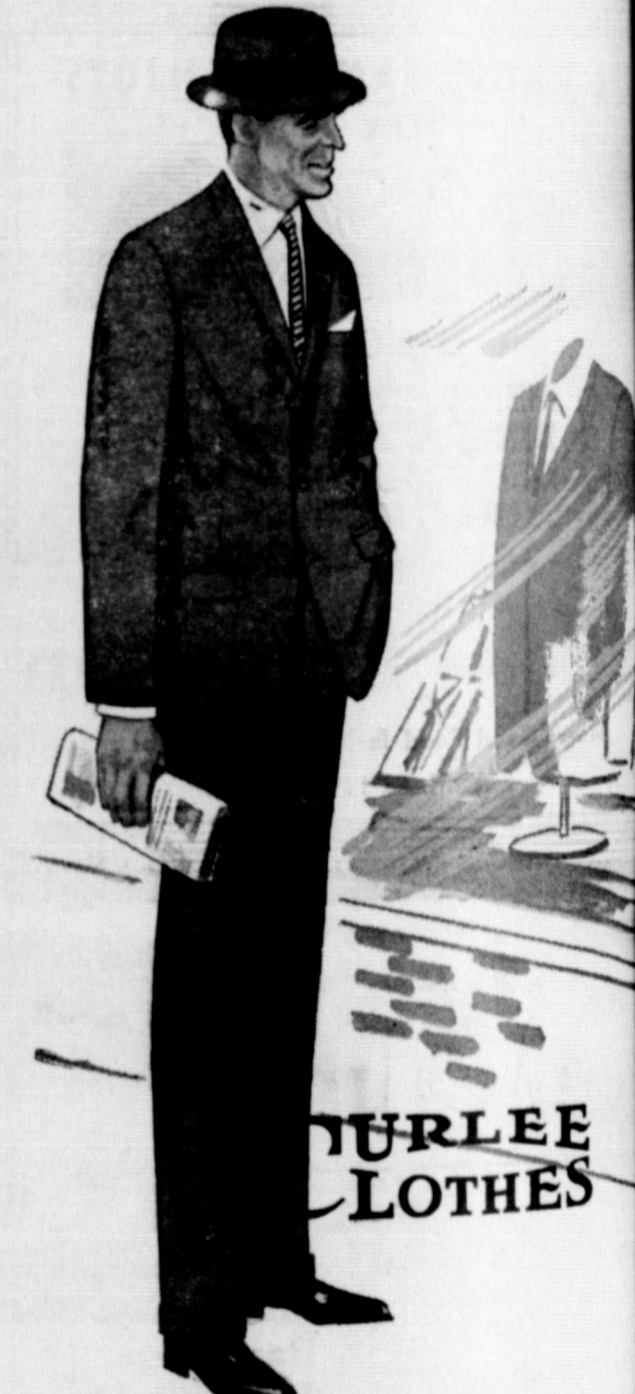

President Hodges said, "Bureau policies are not made given in such a poll system one's ideas based on his own information and prejudice. It's different."

"To be adopted as a Farm Bureau policy, an idea must sound enough to survive rough-and-tumble areas of the collective knowledge of thousands of members of Farm Bureau that determines the organization's policies. The members that are involved, the likely will be the result of a fair and reasonable sound," Hodges concluded.

Home Poisonings Kill Hundreds Of U. S. Citizens

The amateur gardener is exposed to many hazards and must exercise constant care when using yard tools and equipment, Lone Star Gas Company Manager T. J. Bridges cautioned this week.

Lone Star and The Memphis Democrat are co-sponsors of the 1961 Home Safety Program in Memphis.

Almost 12 per cent of all home accident fatalities occur in the yard, according to a survey reported by the Kansas Board of Health and the Nassau County, N. Y., Health Department.

Of the total deaths, 5.6 per cent were caused by falls; 1.6 per cent by exposure to fire; 1.3 per cent by suffocation; and 3.1 per cent by miscellaneous causes.

Principal dangers are careless handling of rakes, hoes, and careless use of the power lawnmower. Turn hoes, rakes, etc. downward when momentarily laid aside and store properly when not in use. Observe these safety rules when operating the power mower:

1. Avoid using an electric mower when the ground is wet. You may cause a short circuit or slip on the damp grass and fall against the blades.
2. Before using, clear lawn of stones, wires, and other articles that the mower may catch and throw into the air. If an object discharged by a mower strikes you or a bystander, it may cause serious injury.
3. Be sure that children and pets are at a safe distance when you are using the mower.
4. Be sure of your footing and balance when you are operating the mower on an incline. Downhill mowing is especially dangerous.
5. To push the mower over obstructions, tip it by manipulating the handle rather than by reaching under the mower.
6. Stop the engine before removing objects from reel or rotary blades.
7. Disconnect plug wires when you are working on the underside of the mower.
8. Store fuel in a closed metal container and keep it out of the reach of small children.
9. Shut off mower before leaving the mower unattended.
10. Keep flame away from the mower while refueling.
