Textile Building Now Ready

Burlington Industries Issue Announcement

The formal announcement was made today concerning the location of a textile manufacturing plant in Memphis. The announcement received here from Burlington Industries is as follows:

"The management of Postex Cotton Mills, Post, Texas, has announced that they will start a new sewing operation in Memphis which will occupy the Boren Building at 608 West Noel street.

"Louie Burkes, plant manager of Postex, has expressed his appreciation for the fine cooperation received from the Memphis Chamber of Commerce, the Hall County Industrial Foundation and other interested citizens.

"The new plant will employ around 50 to 60 people to start with. The Postex manager has stated that this present operation is limited by the floor space in the Boren Building, but it will be expanded if the operation proves successful.

"Postex Cotton Mills are manufacturers of bed sheets and pillow cases. Postex is a unit of Burlington Industries, Inc., whose home office is in Greensboro, N. C. Burlington Industries has in excess of 100 plants and is the largest textile manufacturer in the world."

Burlington Industries, Inc., is the parent company which is establishing the textile manufacturing business in Memphis, as can be seen from the formal announcement at left.

Work on the project here has been continuing at a fast pace this week with the building almost completed and ready for occupancy.

The announcement concerning the Memphis operation came from Postex Cotton Mills in Post, and stated that Burlington Industries has in excess of 100 plants, and is the largest textile manufacturer in the world.

Equipment for the sewing of sheets in the plant here is expected to arrive today or tomorrow. The training of six employees will begin Monday and as soon as they are trained other personnel will be hired.

Last Friday and Saturday about 200 persons made application for employment with the firm. Of this number about 170 underwent preliminary testing for dexterity. This consisted of placing colored nails into holes in a board with the colors matching.

The building which the firm will occupy, at 608 West Noel St., has been painted and the floors finished. The installation of lights and plumbing is completed, and air conditioning is being installed.

Plans are also in the making for construction of a large building on an industrial site as soon as details can be worked out.

However, the company wanted to get into production here as soon as possible, so the building on Noel Street was readied in order that they might begin training personnel.

It is estimated that there is sufficient space in the building to employ about 60 persons. This number will be expanded when the new building is completed and operations moved there.

Friday and Saturday the Memphis Chamber of Commerce Welcomes assisted with the job interviews. Working on the committee were Mrs. D. H. Aronofsky, Mrs. J. W. Coppedge, Mrs. Herschel Combs.

Gov. Approves Money For Greenbelt Study

Work will get underway in the very near future on a detailed preliminary study for construction of a dam on the Salt Fork of Red River, Dr. S. H. Townsend, chairman of the Greenbelt Municipal and Industrial Water Authority, announced today.

His announcement followed telegrams from Rep. Walter Rogers and Sen. Ralph Yarborough, which informed the Greenbelt directors that a $59,300 advance for the project had been approved by Community Facilities Administration.

The Greenbelt Municipal and Industrial Water Authority, composed of Paducah, Childress, Hedley, Clarendon, Memphis, Quanah, and Wellington, made application for the advance to the Housing and Home Finance Agency, a branch of Community Facilities Administration, the latter part of June.

These funds will make possible preliminary engineering studies necessary for construction of an estimated $4,000,000 dam and reservoir in Donley County which will supply municipal surface water for the seven member-cities.

Engineering studies will begin as soon as the funds are available by Freese, Nichols and Endress, consulting engineers for the Authority, of Fort Worth. Additional core drilling at the dam site and further studies of the watershed will be made.

Dr. Townsend pointed out that work toward completion of the project had seemed slow, however, the board of directors had used every precaution to insure that proper steps were taken.

"We have made an extensive study of the Salt Fork's possibilities for quantity of water and for quality," he said.

He explained that water samples were taken at the dam site for five and a half years for complete assurance that water would be of the very best quality.

The site was originally located in Collingsworth County, but was recently moved upstream and into Donley County where the water was found to be one-half as hard.

Townsend said the project should begin rolling as soon as the money is received from the government agency and final proposals should be ready to put before the voters in the seven cities in the near future.

Where Are We Going?

During the past months there have been several instances uncovered where the U. S. government (and that's us taxpayers) have been taken to the cleaners. The probe into possible mishandling by various businesses will probably go on into many fields before it is finished. It really began in earnest when Congress began to look into the Billie Sol Estes case, and now it will probably cover many other areas.

There have been shortages of grain in warehouses reported, as well as cases of mixing commercial feed grain with grain for human consumption before it is shipped overseas. This goes a long way toward losing friends for us overseas.

An the problems are not all in the Agriculture Department either. The other day we ran across a small story concerning blue-serge uniform coats for the Air Force. It seems that the Comptroller General added up and found out that the Air Force spent 9.6 million dollars on 492,000 unneeded blue-serge uniform coats. This resulted in enough coats to take care of the Air Force for the next eight and one-half years. The Pentagon said the purchase took advantage of low prices, but the Comptroller General pointed out that it would cost something to store and preserve them, plus the interest on the money invested in the coats.

These, and similar happenings, seem to point to a general trend on the part of a lot of people to regard anything as right if it makes money for them. This is probably one of the most dangerous things facing the people of this nation today—a decay from within. If our moral fiber doesn't stand up to the various pressures of our own society, then we don't have to worry about Communism. Because we will not be around long as a major power anyway.

Scratch, Scratch, Scratch

This is the time of year the chiggers, red bugs, harvest mites, or whatever you call them, begin to make life miserable for those persons who enjoy the great outdoors. And they will probably last from now until cold weather takes care of them.

Chiggers have a special affinity for low, damp places covered with vegetation and do well in Bermuda grass. Since we have had considerable rain these past weeks, we have good prospects for a fine chigger crop. Actually it's the larvae of the chiggers which do the damage. They attach themselves with their mouthparts and suck blood until they become engorged and fall off. The fiery itching is caused by an anti-coagulant material they inject into their host. The adult chigger, large, red and velvety, are probably harmless to humans—but oh their wayward offspring.

A good way to check and see where chiggers are harboring is to stand a piece of black cardboard on end in the suspected area. If, after a few minutes, you see tiny, yellowish or pinkish mites accumulating on the upper edge, you know it's time to check your supply of insecticide. Chiggers also attack lizards, snakes, birds and rodents with the same vigor and resourcefulness they display in attacking humans. Light applications of sulphur on lawns and low branches of shrubs have been used successfully for years to control chiggers. Nowadays, the new insecticides such as chlordane and lindane give better results.

Helena Duel Added To Color

"Possessed of a colorful history" would be perhaps the most broad description of Helena, Texas.

Colorful is right, but the color is red. Red with the lifeblood of many men who saw the last of Texas at Helena.

A major contribution to this colorful history was made by the "Helena Duel."

Duelists' left hands were bound together. Then the two combatants were left to settle their differences with knives held in their free hands.

Hardly a game for cowards or weaklings, this duel! Yet it became the most popular sporting event for local entertainment.

Audiences and betting reached such large proportions that the recurrent winners were looked upon as local celebrities.

One of the stone buildings of the early town still stands—the old two-story courthouse. It is referred to as "the place where they talked things over before they lynched a man."

Anyone can guess how out-of-court settlements were made back in the early days. By the "Helena Duel," of course.

Tribute to the Cavalry

There is no need to tell the people of Texas of the bravery shown by the Cavalry in the days of the old west. Movies have portrayed this part of our history.

However, there is a marker far out in northwest Texas that so well conveys the perils faced by the Cavalry, that it bears reading. This marker honors the soldiers who died under the command of General R. S. Mackenzie in the Fourth U. S. Cavalry during the 1870's.

It reads: "With no hope of honor if victorious, no dream of mercy if they fell, and the certainty of death by torture if taken alive, they fought the savage Comanche and cleared the plains for the white man."

This marker is in the cemetery at Spur, Texas, in Dickens County.

ACROSS the DESK

What Other Editors Say

Salesmen Get Fines

The crew of encyclopedia salesmen that moved into town last week and left in a hurry after paying fines in corporation court must surely think Perryton is an unfriendly little city. These five young men, recruited off college campuses for summer work, received the standard type of high pressure training under a crew chief and set to work. They irritated people. They came into homes under false pretenses, saying they were "taking a public opinion poll" and got their feet inside the door. Once inside, they persisted, they irritated, they talked, they refused to leave. People started calling the police department to see if something could be done to get rid of the pests.

One of the salesmen called at the home of the county judge Gene Steed, who got his blood pressure up and collared the young man. Taken downtown, it was revealed that the encyclopedia crew had not paid the required city fee for a peddling permit. The others were rounded up, charge in corporation court, and fined. They seemed glad to get out of this town and on to greener pastures.

Why is it that an encyclopedia company has to resort to sales tactics like this to sell their wares? Encyclopedias are good to have, represent a major investment for a family, but an investment that most families eventually make. But they are not sold except by high pressure methods which usually leave the customer with the feeling that he has been taken over the hurdles somehow.

Justice

A symbol which most people have grown accustomed to is the statue of justice, standing blindfolded with a set of scales in one hand and a sword in the other.

Justice, in this country where one is innocent until proven guilty, is one of the things which has set this country aside from the many countries in the world run by dictators where one must prove his innocence before he is freed. By being blind, justice weighs the facts as presented to her and is not swayed by human frailties such as opinions former by appearance rather than facts.

It can be seen through the scales which justice holds that facts are weighed. This is good, too, for it gives the idea that not just the letter of the law, but the spirit of the law is considered in any case. Were it word for word that justice were enforced, there would be little justice to weigh and consider.

Most laws are passed with certain ideas in mind. As times of such tremendous magnitude. It is indeed enlightening to realize how little we know and how confined we are.

When we come back to earth and see the fireflies which intermittently light the darkened earth, we realize that we do not even understand them. Man has known and marveled at fireflies for centuries, but their real secret of illumination has eluded us.

As we race around trying to keep up with the Joneses and the Smiths, and not miss any of the latest television programs, it would do each of us good to take at least one evening off for relaxation, reflection and the enjoyment of a summer evening. Alone, or with your family, a period of meditation will be most rewarding. — Shamrock Texan

Time To Reflect

The early summer nights give each one of us an excellent opportunity to reflect on our lives. The temperature is usually very pleasant, and at times we have a full moon which makes the night appear to be almost semi-daylight and many times, we have a clear starry sky.

No other setting could better enhance a period to reflect one's life, to visualize future plans and hopes, to regroup one's ideals and start anew in their pursuit. In the long run, it will make little difference whether a person attains his goal but the fact that he has set goals with ideals is important to every living individual.

While sitting out in the summer night, it is fascinating to ponder the stars and the universe and try to determine exactly what purpose human life has in an overall plan

Memories Turning Back Time

40 YEARS AGO
August 3, 1912

On the 20th day of July 1867, just fifty-five years ago today John W. Briscoe had started from his home near Goshen church in Parker county to Veals station to attend the Masonic lodge when a bunch of Indians chased him some distance, but he being on a good horse outran them.

Dispatches from Oklahoma City say: Mayor J. C. Walton of Oklahoma City had a fair lead over R. H. Wilson for the Democratic nomination. Walton had pledged himself to form a Farm-Labor state government with state owned utilities and had been credited with declaring he would run the Ku Klux Klan "into the Arkansas River." Wilson was said to be supported by Klansmen.

Oscar Tucker was here from Estelline Friday.

Letters continue to come in, in the Democrat advertising contest but only a very few indicate that the writers are putting any effort worthwhile into the work.

Some Answers Received

Why Cross Dry Goods should continue to advertise in the Democrat. Because it will keep their business constantly before a great number of people. A business man who does not advertise is like a young man kissing his girl in the dark; he knows it but no one else does.

It will pay Chas. Oren to advertise in the Democrat because his goods are reliable and people who buy from him know that they get just what they ask for. People buy wedding and birthday presents when they are reminded by advertising.

What Is A Subsidy

There is an old saying, "the pot calling the kettle black." This saying is brought to mind quite often when one engages in a detailed study of "subsidy."

"A grant of funds or property from a government, as of the State or a municipal corporation, to a private person or company to assist in the establishment or support of an enterprise deemed advantageous to the public; a subvention. In practice subsidies are chiefly granted in aid of transportation enterprises, as to ship, canal, air-transport, or railroad companies, bounties on sugar being next in importance. A subsidy may be a simple gift or may consist in the payment of an amount in excess of the usual charges for any service, as in carrying the mails, or of funds to aid in establishing or maintaining a service or equipment larger or more powerful than the state of trade would warrant, as the building and keeping in service of vessels designed for use as cruisers and auxiliaries in war. Subsidy is often inactively used to designate an entire payment for services, as for carrying mail, which, properly speaking, includes compensation for actual services, and a subsidy proper consisting in the sum paid in excess of the compensation. In Ordinary usage subsidy **** often carries a derogatory implication."

To subsidize is defined by the same dictionary as "to aid or promote, as a private enterprise, with public money; as, to subsidize a steamship line." Funk & Wagnal's "New Standard" Dictionary of the English Language, has a brief definition of subsidy: "Pecuniary aid directly granted by government to an individual or commercial enterprise deemed productive of public benefit."

Since different groups prefer to place different definitions on "subsidy" in recent years has taken on a derogatory meaning. This is primarily due to the fact that many who receive aid and assistance from the government—Federal, State and local—have no difficulty in justifying the grants to themselves. However, there has been a tendency by some to bitterly criticize and condemn such assistance or grants going to others. This prompts the question of whether or not "the pot might be calling the kettle black." Numerous studies have been made on all of the subsidies paid by the several governments in this country and especially the Federal Government. In order to start from some common premise in the study of these matters, proposed guidelines have been laid down as to the elements that should be included in the definition of a subsidy and the following recommendations were made.

"A subsidy is an act by governmental unit inoling either

(1) a payment, (2) a remission or charges, or (3) supplying commodities or services at less than cost or market price, with the intent of achieving a particular economic objective, most usually the supplying of a general market a product or service which would not be supplied in as great quantity only at a higher price in the absence of the payment or remission of charges. Government loans made at lower than market rates of interest or at rates below the cost of funds to the Government and Government insurance provided at lower than private insurance premium rates may also appropriately be considered as subsidies.

This definition distinguishes subsidies from the following other types of assistance:

(a) Aids to foreign governments.

(b) Aids to business, or farmers, which are intended to help the businesses in any program of its own choice; in such a case the Government does not determine the program which it wishes to see fulfilled.

(c) Purchases or sales made on the Government's own behalf which may prove more profitable to the private seller or buyer than comparable transactions on the open market, except where a primary motive of such transactions is assistance to a particular segment of the economy. Thus some purchases of minerals for stockpiling and of surplus farm commodities could readily be conceived of as subsidies, whereas a Government contract for production of a plane or missile would not normally be considered to involve a subsidy.

(d) Grants-in-aid to States and local units.

One type of benefit that may have a subsidy element but often is not classed as a subsidy is differential tax treatment for particular categories of persons or groups, such as minerals' producers, corporations installing certain defense facilities, cooperatives, or producers of goods protected from foreign competition by tariffs."

Whatever may be one's personal views as to the general principle of subsidy, it would be very well to weigh the matter carefully before indulging in too harsh criticism of others. The critic might find himself the subject of his own criticism. In other words, he might be both the pot and the kettle.

Your TEXAS Department Of Public Safety

(Editor's Note: Following is the twelfth of a series of articles appearing in The Memphis Democrat detailing the evolution and organization of the Texas Department of Public Safety and the numerous vital services this agency provides for the people of Texas.)

Communications — Nerve Center Of The Public Safety Program

The Texas Department of Public Safety operates a statewide communications system comprised of radiotelephone and teletypewriter service twenty-four hours daily to provide efficient and rapid dissemination and exchange of information between the department headquarters and its field commands, area echelon points and mobile units.

It also provides the media for the coordination and dissemination of information between state and local law enforcement agencies throughout the state. The department headquarters also maintains a terminal in the national police communications network for interstate exchange of information through a toll-free radiotelegraphy system.

No part of the department's many services and enforcement techniques is more basic than that of communications in its fight against crime and its promotion of the public safety. Without an adequate communications system, no effective effort could be made. The communications system takes on added significance when measured against the vast geographical area of the state.

The department is constantly, through its engineering and operational techniques, expanding the system and perfecting its procedures.

In addition to its numerous law enforcement responsibilities, the department is charged by the Civil Protection Act of 1951 and by Executive Order to provide a statewide communications system operated in conjunction with the Office of Civil Defense Mobilization for the dissemination of warnings of possible enemy attack to the state departments and agencies and to the political subdivisions of the State. Warning procedures also are in use pertaining to actual or threatened danger from natural causes such as hurricanes, floods, tornadoes and other severe weather.

The department also is charged with the duty of organizing and coordinating concepts for installing, maintaining, operating and intergrading communications equipment and networks into a state defense and disaster relief function. During emergencies the department's communications system is prepared to handle information which serves to coordinate and direct the operation of the Governor's Defense and Disaster Relief Council.

The importance of an efficient communications system is reflected daily in the normal course of the department's work, pointed up not infrequently by emergencies small and large.

An outstanding example of this was on the night of September 29, 1959, when a Braniff airliner exploded and crashed near Buffalo, Texas, killing all 34 of its occupants.

The DPS communications system became activated when a highway patrolman observed a "large ball of fire" in the sky. He immediately radioed the Waco message center which in turn began checking airfields around the state to determine if any planes were missing.

Within a short time, another patrolman flashed the message that a plane had crashed in a field five miles east of Buffalo. From the scene he radioed that he had found a section of the plane and was able to read the word "Braniff." Waco communications sent a message to Dallas where communications men contacted Braniff Airways to learn that their airliner was in the area and overdue. Braniff provided the DPS with a passenger list containing 34 names.

The highway patrol captain who assumed charge of security and rescue operations advised headquarters through the communications system that an identification team was needed. By this time it was determined that there were no survivors. At the scene, temporary communications were set up, making use of walkie-talkies for the grim identification task. Later, the DPS mobile communications center arrived from Austin, providing more complete communications for the local area and a straight circuit to Austin.

Here was a case where good communications, through work on the part of all DPS personnel involved, and close cooperation among all agencies involved minimized the difficulties normally accompanying this type of operation. The result was that within 48 hours, all 34 of the victims of the tragic crash were identified and their next of kin notified.

Modern Medicine and MODERN PHARMACY

Have practically eliminated
DIPHTHERIA
SMALLPOX
TYPHOID FEVER

The advance of medicine in the early part of the twentieth century has reduced infant mortality to a minimum. Through modern medicine hundreds of contagious diseases have been brought under control.

In 1900 a medical encyclopedia was a household standby. With it the patient tried to diagnose and prescribe for any ailment. The tonics and medicinals available then were of questionable value, and often as reliable as the amateur diagnosis.

With the use of the sulfa drugs, penicillin and hormones—pneumonia, meningitis and scarlet fever have been successfully treated. So successfully, in fact, that these dreaded diseases have all but disappeared.

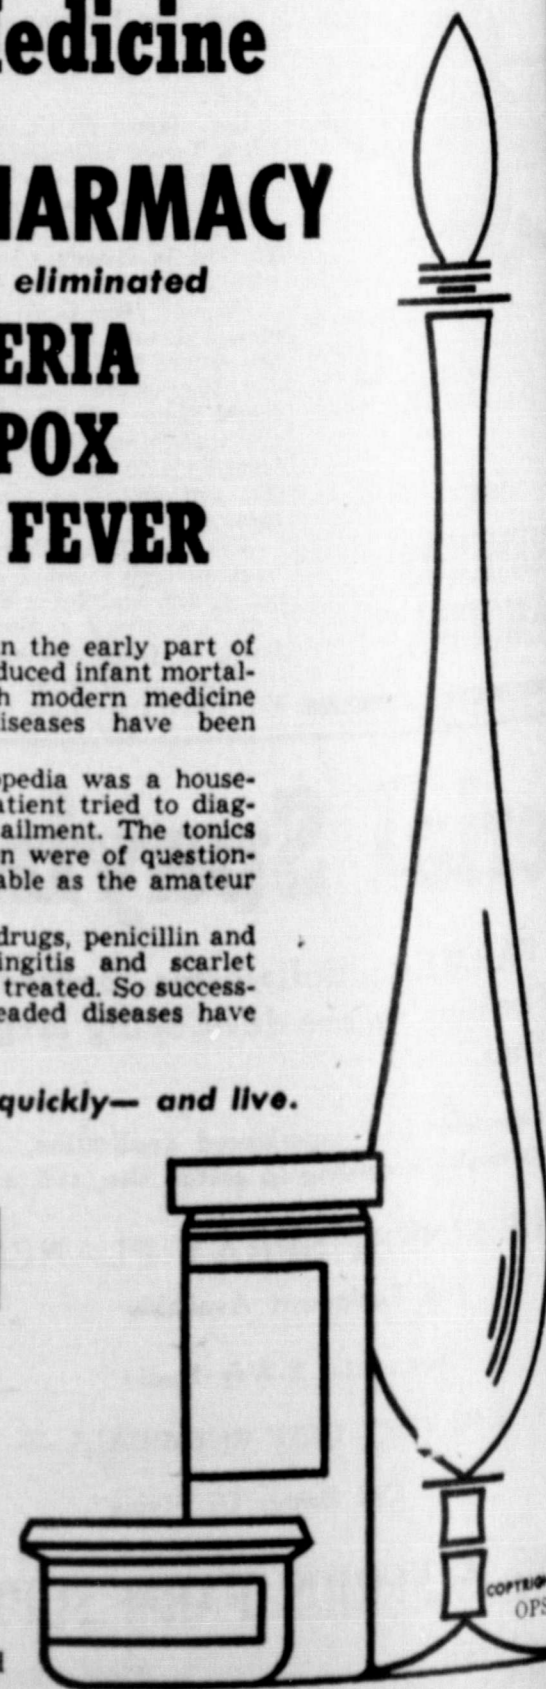

Today people get well quickly—and live.

Hall County Soil Conservation District News

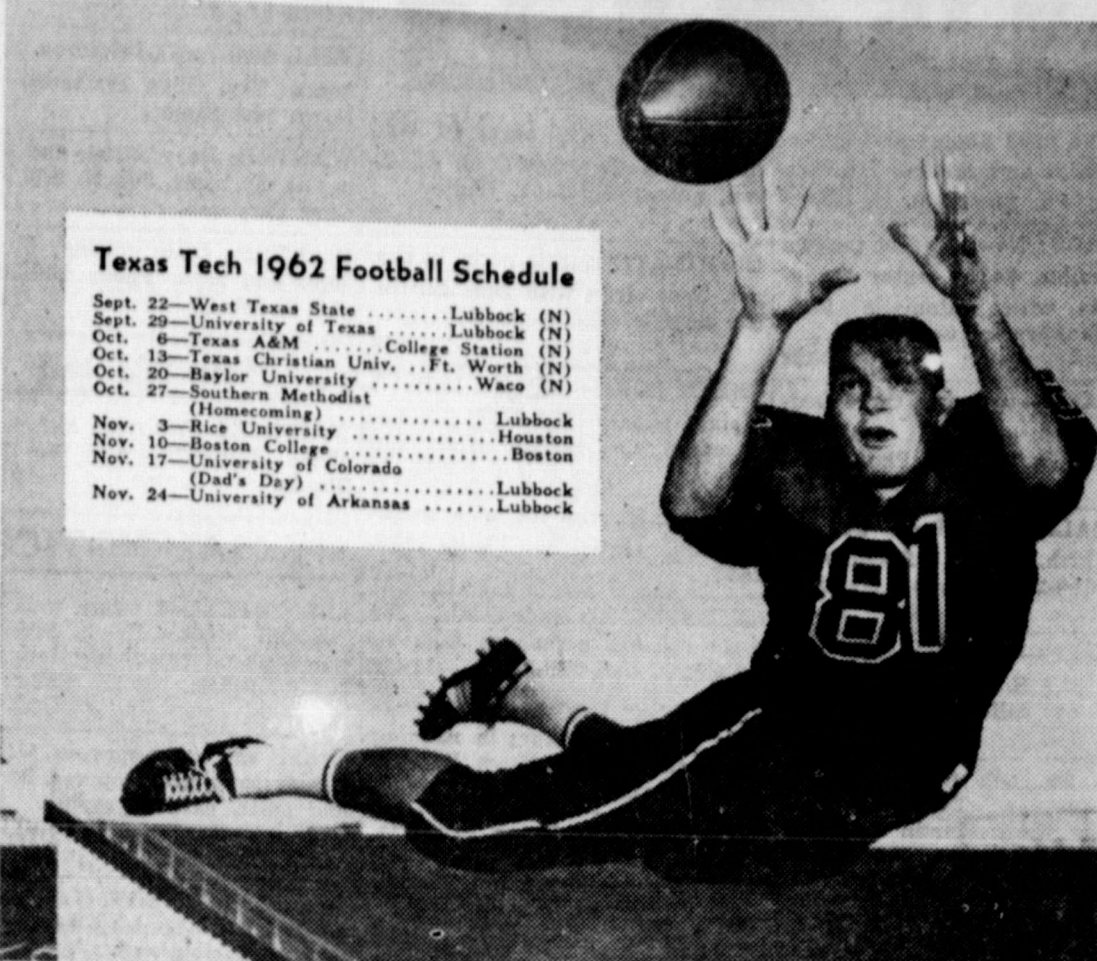

Do you want to see your land blowing this winter and next spring? If you don't then it is time to start making plans to prevent this blowing.

Farmers and ranchers of the Hall County Soil Conservation District are urged to plant a cover crop this fall. A cover crop is a crop established for the purpose of protecting the soil from blowing. Cover crops will also help prevent water runoff, increase water intake, add organic matter to the soil and help prevent nitrogen from leaching from the soil.

Close growing crops, legumes or non legumes are needed as part of a crop rotation in any row crop operation. Austrian winter peas, oats, barley and rye may be planted to serve as a cover crop for the protection of the soil. Legume seed should be inoculated before planting.

A small drill or interrow seeder is available to farmers and ranchers in the District. The Drill is located at the Wayne Hutcherson farm south of Memphis. The drill is especially adapted to interseed cover crops into a rowcrop. Two rows can be seeded in each middle. Cover crops can be seeded in this summer soon after the last cultivation or before harvesting without damage to the crop to be harvested.

Farmers and ranchers are reminded that it takes nature 400 to 1000 years to replace a single inch of top soil once it is blown away. Now is the time to begin thinking about planting that cover crop. Operators desiring additional information are invited to contact the local Soil Conservation personnel at the Court House in Memphis.

IT'S THE LAW in Texas
A public service feature of the State Bar of Texas

Gifts To Children

People often make gifts to youngsters and sometimes save on income and death taxes as well. The giver may set aside money for children until they become of age or until they need it.

But such gifts may be complex. For example, there are gift taxes on the subject of the gift, and income taxes on the income from it.

1. Parent or guardian may want to keep control of the money. If they keep such control, they may not complete the gift and the expected tax savings will go out the window. The parents' control may allow them to take back the gift, and so it is not really a gift.
2. Property is hard for children to manage. They cannot very well make contracts or buy or sell the property. But it costs too much, as a rule, to set up a trust for each piece of property for each child.

And so to encourage gifts to children, the law has a simple way to make and administer gifts under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act. This law applies mainly to gifts and stock shares.

The law creates the "custodian" with powers much like those of a trustee or guardian. He is often a parent-donor who manages the stock. He must reinvest or sell the stock for the child.

The custodian must act as a "prudent person." He cannot buy and sell the stock for his own benefit, nor can he be negligent. The gift can only be used for the minor's benefit, and for his support and education. The custodian cannot mingle his own property with the child's. After the child becomes 21 the whole gift or what is left of it must go to him.

In rare cases, the law may let a giver revoke his gift, as when he gave it in contemplation of the minor's marriage which did not take place. He may also revoke the gift if it was made as a result of undue influence or fraud.

Other ways of giving to minors are also fairly inexpensive. For example, one may create a trust fund for children which has tax advantages.

(This news feature, prepared by the State Bar of Texas, is written to inform—not to advise. No person should ever apply or interpret any law without the aid of an attorney who is fully advised concerning the facts involved, because a slight variance in facts may change the application of the law.)
