The Memphis Lions Club announced this week that a final distribution of free Sabin Oral Polio Vaccine will be held Sunday at the Hall County Courthouse in Memphis from 1:30 until 3:30 p.m., according to James Van Pelt, president of the group.

All persons who have missed receiving one of the three types which have been distributed here in the past are urged to take this opportunity to receive the vaccine.

The Sabin Oral Polio Vaccine is prepared in three different types, it was explained. During the past months the Memphis Lions Club, in cooperation with the Hall County Medical Society, has distributed free the three different types, on three different Sunday afternoons.

The reason for this is that the types need to be taken separately with at least two weeks time in between, Dr. H. R. Stevenson, Lions Club chairman in charge of the operation, said.

The "last chance" effort is for those persons who missed receiving any one of the three types. However, a person can take only one of the types Sunday, he said.

This is the last time that the club plans to provide the service for this area.

The vaccine is dripped on a cube of sugar and all the person has to do is eat the sugar. The service is made available at no cost to those receiving the vaccine. However, anyone wishing to contribute to help defray the cost of the program, will be allowed to do so at the end of the line, club officers explained.

Distribution of the vaccine is carried out at a rapid pace and it is anticipated that only five minutes of a person's time will be required to walk up the courthouse steps, receive the vaccine in the hall, and walk out the door at the other end.

Persons should enter from the west side of the courthouse.

With the large-scale use of the Sabin Oral Polio vaccine, it is anticipated that this disease will be brought under complete control.

The Dying Art of Doing Nothing!

Ruel McDaniel in an article published by "The Rotarian", official publication of Rotary International, who is author of Vinegaroon, a former Mayor of Port Lavaca, Tex., and a professional writer, advanced a theory with much merit about the dying art of doing nothing. It is a lesson well worthy of deep consideration and thought, before being dismissed as a lazy man's excuse for doing nothing.

McDaniel stated that since the five-day week is well entrenched in many business and industrial offices it would allow employees time to do nothing. But this is not necessarily true. He explained that a friend of his was put on a five day a week schedule, and that with Saturday's off, it just gave them more time to take trips to see relatives 1,060 miles away. He said, "Frank was in no shape to go to work Monday morning, but he did; and it required most of the week for his recuperation."

"For some reason, which perhaps is explainable by psychologists, people seem to be afraid to do nothing. They seem impelled to be doing something or going somewhere every spare moment. I don't think that is good for the individual or for the world," McDaniel said.

Then he quoted the following story: "It is said that when Charles Steinmetz, the electrical genius, went to work for General Electric, he spent his days for several weeks reclining in a chair in his plush office, much of the time with his hands laced back of his head, doing nothing. If his reputation had not been established already, he would have been fired; but his superiors apparently assumed if that was the way the genius worked, who were they to question it? When he finally did start to work, Steinmetz produced inventions and innovations that were vital in revolutionizing the electrical manufacturing industry. He is credited with contributing more than any other man to the growth of General Electric."

Sir Isaac Newton figured out the law of gravity and formulated theories about the universe that were ahead of his time by 200 years; and he got his initial idea about gravity when an apple fell and hit him while he lolled under an apple tree doing nothing.

"Every country needs the product of a thinking citizenship, but the average citizen takes precious little time to do nothing and think," McDaniel said.

"Near us lives a young junior executive in a chain of retail stores. His excellent college record and acquaintanceship with the right people got him the executive job. He has held it three years without advancement. He has ample time to do nothing, but I've never seen him in an idle moment. Almost every evening he and his wife have guests or they go to parties elsewhere . . . he and his wife visit her folks in a city 175 miles distant. It is logical to me that the reason he has not advanced is that he does not take time to do nothing—and allow his mind to work on the problems and needs of his company," McDaniel said.

McDaniel said in his article that Henry Ford, Thomas A. Edison and Harvey Firestone took periodic trips into the woods to be alone and to think about their problems. John Burroughs, the naturalist and writer, sometimes joins the trio at their camp and did nothing with them. He enhanced his knowledge of Nature and formulated ideas for books he later wrote.

George Washington as a young man spent a great deal of his time roaming the countryside of Virginia and doing nothing. He spent enough time doing nothing to permit his mind to speculate and wonder, and out of speculation and wonder emerged a practical education.

Florence Nightingale, the founder of professional scientific nursing, lay in bed doing nothing while recovering from fever, she formulated detailed plans for aiding sick and wounded soldiers fighting in the Crimean War and established nursing as an essential part of caring for the wounded in warfare.

The late William Muldoon, world famous for his physical-training methods, recognized the importance of doing nothing, in spite of his emphasis on physical activity. "When a man is mentally tired by honest work," he said, "he ought to seek relaxation in solitude. Don't do anything! Just relax."

McDaniel concluded his article with the following: "Time set aside for doing nothing can be the most rewarding time a man can spend. And even if his doing nothing fails to produce an earth-shaking idea, just becoming acquainted with himself for a few hours can be revealing experience. He may discover that his is not such a bad Guy, after all."

The man who takes time to do nothing has no reason to apologize to his family and friends. He has precedent on his side.

Git-A-Long 'n Blow Me Down

You may think of Texas a country of cowboys and ranches but you'd better add big ships and sailors to your thoughts too. Our great Gulf Coast is one of the busiest segments of coastline in the world.

Texas has important deep water ports located at Houston, Galveston, Corpus Christi, Freeport, Port Aransas, Orange, Brownsville, Port Arthur and Sabine Pass.

Houston is the largest of all the Texas ports and you'll see a United Nations array of ships when you visit this colossal gateway of our land.

One of the most impressive trips in Texas is that taken down the Houston ship channel to the great San Jacinto Battleground.

What Other Editors Say

The Good Old Summer Time
People of middle age and older have fond recollections of "the good old summer time."

This is associated with memories of barefoot kids with fishing poles and families sitting on the front porch with no greater demands for excitement than a cool breeze occasionally, a little bit of neighborhood gossip and a good view of the street and its passers-by.

Alas, like many other fond memories, "the good old summer time" is gone forever.

There still may be people somewhere sitting on front porches on summer evenings, but we don't think they live in Perryton.

More likely, if they are outside at all, they are on the patio surrounded by the trappings of modern America—the charcoal grill, the picnic table, lawn chairs, ice chest, transistor radio and maybe even air conditioner pulled up to blow across the outside living area.

Kids are not so simple these days, either. They are a product of mass education, a whole mountain of information which is crammed into them from an early age and a kid of 12 is apt to know a whole lot more about things than his pop did at 22.

The American Academy of Pediatrics, which has evidently made a study, says there are 12 things a child should know before he gets on a bicycle. Swimming is approached scientifically, and there are modern parents who would swoon before allowing junior to dive into an unsanitary, isolated "swimming hole."

The American Medical Association is all the time issuing bulletins on how to avoid the hazards of such summer activities as picnicking, sun bathing, skin diving, water skiing, boating, and walking in the woods. Going on an outing requires planning and equipment so much that the fun is half gone before the outing ever starts.

Summer time has changed. Air conditioning has changed it about as much as anything we know.

After all, what joy does the prospect of going outside to the heat, dust and insect laden world hold for a man parked comfortably inside his cool, air-conditioned house?

One Man's Opinion!

My favorite column of the month was Ray Erwin's in Editor & Publisher, in which he quoted from the Gossiper, house journal of the Worcester (Massachusetts) Telegram and Gazette. The quotation concerned a reader's responses about what he wants to see in his newspaper:

1. My name.
2. A front page article showing how crooked the city government is most of the time.
3. My wife's name.
4. A feature article showing 25 ways on how to cheat on income tax forms.
5. My kid's names.
6. A local news item about the affairs my neighbor is having.
7. A classified item offering a new home for sale for $4000.
8. More news about lawbreakers.
9. Less news about lawbreakers.
10. An editorial condemning high school teachers for being too liberal with "F's."
11. A wedding picture of the groom instead of the bride when he is more handsome than she is pretty.
12. A sports picture of me when I bowled 183.
13. More advertisement in items that the merchants are giving away.
14. A front page picture of my neighbor being hauled out of the bar by his wife.
15. A front page spread about the deadbeat who lives across the street from me who just had his car repossessed.

16. Forget the last one, I just got word from the finance company that they're coming after my car.

17. More letters to the editor naming the crooks we have in town.

18. A full page of local news, a page of national news, several pages of sports and comics, one page on divorces and three pages on all the domestic troubles we are having in town.

19. Less stuff about how cute everybody's kids are. My kids are better looking than those you rave about.

20. A complete biographical sketch about the "most important citizen in town", and be sure you spell my name right.

Neita Reed, Rusty Mosley Marry Saturday, July 27

Nuptial vows were solemnized at 7 p. m. Saturday, July 27, in the First Baptist Church for Neita Gale Reed, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Reed, Jr., and Russell Winfield Mosley, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Mosley of Hedley.

Rev. Gene Grace, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Hedley, read the double-ring ceremony.

Pre-nuptial selections were played by Mrs. Fern A. Miller, organist. She accompanied Mrs. Cliff Pederson of Memphis as she sang "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer," and also played the traditional wedding marches for the processional and recessional.

The bridal party stood before an arched candelabra holding lighted tapers, flanked by stands of greenery and gladioli, branched candelabra, and baskets of gladioli.

Family pews were marked by satin bows.

The Bride

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of imported Chantilly lace over tissue taffeta designed with a front lace panel, side and back tiers of scalloped lace and net ruffles. The full skirt was accentuated with a taffeta bustle swept into a wide free-flowing court train. The fitted bodice was highlighted with a scalloped scooped neckline, touched with pearls and sequins, and long sleeves that tapered to points over the wrists. Her finger-tip veil of imported illusion fell from a coronet, studded with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white feathered carnations and stephanotis centered with a white orchid. She also wore a single strand of pearls given to her as a gift from the groom.

The tradition of "something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue, with a silver sixpence in my shoe," was observed.

Mrs. John Binkley attended her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were: Miss Velma Jo Hutcherson of Memphis, Mrs. Montye Smith of Hobbs, N. M., sister of the groom, and Mrs. Benson Long of Wellington.

The attendants were attired in identical dresses of pale yellow silk organza over taffeta. The bodices were sleeveless, styled with round necklines in front and a low "v" in the back, featuring a full gathered skirt. They wore headresses of yellow taffeta rosettes with nose-length veils of yellow net, and carried bouquets of white daisies with streamers. All wore short white gloves except the matron of honor who wore white lace gloves.

Candlelighters were Miss Cynthia Evans and Miss Gayle Widener of Memphis, cousins of the bride. Their dresses were styled identically to those of the bridesmaids. They wore arm wristlets of white daisies.

Flower girls were Miss Sheri Davis and Miss Ranece Wilson, both of Memphis and cousins of the bride, and Miss Sarah Ann Smith of Hobbs, N. M., niece of the groom. They were attired in pale yellow taffeta dresses over batiste. The bodices were sleeve-

Pre-Nuptial Shower Fetes Miss Lebow

Miss Cleata Ann Lebow, bride-elect of Clifford Reeves of Amarillo, was complimented recently with a miscellaneous bridal shower at the lovely home of Mrs. R. R. Hill, 804 N. 18th St.

Guests calling between the hours of 8 to 9:30 p. m. were greeted at the door by Mrs. Hill and presented to the honoree, her mother, Mrs. C. A. Lebow and Mrs. Reeves. The guests then registered at a table laid with a white net cloth over American beauty taffeta underskirt. The table also featured flowers of American beauty and bride and groom figurines. Miss Linda Clayton presided at the register table.

The serving table had an overskirt of white taffeta overlaid with a white net cloth edged with satin ribbon and ruffles. The centerpiece was a white net ruffled parasol interspersed with white and American beauty satin ribbons. White wedding bells and sweetheart roses were placed at intervals around the parasol. Deadline Is Aug. 16 for Entries In Democratic Women's Art Contest

Mrs. J. A. Ballard of Estelline announced this week that she has received one entry so far in the State Citation Art Exhibition. The entry was submitted by Jessie Wayne Murdock.

Mrs. Ballard announced the deadline for entries into the contest this week. She said, "all entries must be in Tulia by 10:30 a. m. on Friday, Aug. 16, for judging at the R.E.A. Building there for our senatorial district."

Two drawings will be selected at Tulia to enter the State Citation Art Exhibition being sponsored by the women of the Democratic Party in Texas and scholarships and merit awards will be presented to the outstanding entries.

At Tulia, judging will begin immediately after 10:30 a. m. on Aug. 16. A reception and open house will be held for the public at 3 p. m. in the R.E.A. Building.

Blanks to enter the contest can be obtained from Mrs. J. A. Ballard of Estelline or Miss Vera "Tops" Gilreath of Memphis.

The State exhibition will be held at the JAL Ranch in Alvarado and a $500 scholarship award to be used for advanced study in any of the visual arts will be presented by Governor John Connally on behalf of the women of Texas' Democratic Party.

"The purpose of this competition is to encourage young people to become more aware of the tradition of the great heritage of Texas. The women of the Democratic Party of Texas are sponsoring this exhibit and competition in accordance with Governor Connally's emphasis on excellency in education," Mrs. Ballard said.

All entries must have been executed within the past two years and must be accompanied by sketch evidencing ability in subjective delineation. Work done under supervision is not eligible.

Media to be considered are oils, pastels, tempera, casein, water color, drawings in pen and ink, pencil or charcoal, and mixed media.

The scholarship division of the judging is open to high school students from the ninth through the twelfth grades, including 1963 graduates.

Mrs. Ballard encouraged any high school student who is interested in entering a drawing to obtain entry blanks from Miss Gilreath or herself.

Sure Way To Keep Bait Alive

To keep minnows, shrimp, crayfish, or other similar bait alive over long periods of time, for future use, put the bait in a galvanized bucket under an outdoor tap and adjust the faucet to a slow drip.

Drip will provide a slow but constant change of water and supply the needed oxygen. Add small amounts of corn meal at infrequent intervals, to assure ample food.

Distress Signal

A simple distress signal that can be used by the lost-in-the-woods person—or lost anywhere outdoors for that matter—is the toy balloon.

Keep several brilliant colored ones in your knapsack or boat or tackle box, along with a roll of heavy nylon line and some strong string. A balloon attracts attention and helps point out the spot. In case it breaks away—attach a note telling of your approximate whereabouts and outlining your predicament, needs, etc., if possible.

Normally the blood makes the entire circuit from the heart and through the arteries and veins and back to the heart in half a minute.

DA Has New Method On Quality Control

Management of mechanical harvesting of cotton is necessary to get top quality lint and new U. S. Department of Agriculture publication points out the importance of mechanical harvesting of cotton. The "Harvested Cotton" L-522-523 is a new publication which emphasizes the importance of mechanical harvesting of cotton and the share with ginners of the responsibility of producing quality cotton.

8-page illustrated leaflet covers cultural practices, timing of day to harvest, operation, and loading. Because cultural recommendations vary from area to area, the State Agricultural Experiment Station or county agent can give you the best advice on selection of cotton, insect, disease, and weed control, irrigation requirements, and important for growers to get cotton ginned as soon as possible, the publication. The quality of trail seed cotton can deteriorate if its moisture content is 10 percent or more. Other factors include the importance of harvesting equipment protected and in good operation.

Copies of the leaflet, at B. G. Reeves, cotton and mechanization specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Austin, Texas.

Handy in Hot Weather

A big problem most dove hunters face during the early hot part of the season is how to carry dead birds and shells without wearing a heavy hunting coat.

You can solve this problem by wearing a carpenter's apron instead of the bulky coat.

Drying Rubber Boots

When the inside of your rubber footwear gets cold and wet, you can do a quick and safe drying-out job by inserting in them a lighted light bulb.

Use the one like the mechanics use, with the protective wire screen.

Stockmen Advised To Watch For Acid Poisoning

Stockmen in many sections of the state with grazed out pastures are turning to supplemental pastures including drouth stunted plants of the sorghum family. Dr. C. M. Patterson, veterinarian for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, points out that some danger of poisoning exists when these plants are grazed.

The danger is from prussic acid, he explains. Prussic acid is the breakdown product of a glucoside normally present in some young, actively growing plants. It does not occur in a plant unless the growth is stopped by moisture stress or frost. Moisture stress may result from inadequate soil moisture or from excess moisture loss due to high temperatures and low relative humidity.

Dr. Patterson says all members of the sorghum family, including Johnsongrass and sudan, produce the glucoside under favorable levels of fertility and that this group of plants is the most dangerous of commonly grazed forages. The more luxuriant the plant growth, the more likely it will be dangerous when wilted.

If moisture stress is from depleted soil moisture, the plants may remain toxic for long periods, he says. If hot, dry winds cause the stress, the plants may be toxic only during the periods when evaporative losses exceed the plants' ability to pick up moisture from the soil. To illustrate, hungry animals turned into a field during the hot afternoon might be poisoned, but if turned in early in the morning, might fill up and quit grazing during the period of the day when the forage would be toxic.

Younger plants have a higher glucoside content than plants nearing maturity; therefore, if wilted would be more toxic, Patterson explains. He suggests grazing a few animals on fields in question early in the morning and under close watch for an hour. If no trouble occurs, it should be safe to turn in the herd. But, if any animal shows a tendency to become restless and breathe fast, get them out in a hurry. Death or recovery usually happens within an hour or two. Drenching with a syrup or sugar solution slows the release of prussic acid in the rumen, but a veterinarian should be called immediately for further treatment, he says.

SPORTS AFIELD

By Ted Kesting

Here are key tips for catching hot-weather bass: During midday in midsummer, look for large-mouth lunkers to be holed up in the cool, deep pockets. Fish these pockets slowly, on the bottom, with deep-running artificials; if that fails, use live natural baits such as frogs, large minnows or crayfish. Go to topwater plugs or shallow-running plugs when the water is cooled by a shower or night air.

When you broil fish, do it quickly, so that they come to your table juicy, not dry and tasteless. Minutes, seconds even, is the time gauge with fish. Two minutes too long can ruin the finest piscatorial delight and the memory that goes with a good catch.

Confronted by danger, the gorilla becomes an extremely dangerous animal whose fantastic strength is terrifying. Gorillas can and have seized a man by their huge arms, lifted him in the air, and, grasping one leg in each hand, torn the unlucky individual in half.

When using a coyote call, don't be too impatient. Call at least 20 minutes by your watch. Many a coyote has been run off by the impatient gent who gave up after 10 minutes. And when you pick up an go to try another location, move at least half a mile—better still, make a mile.

Frogs, minnows and crayfish are excellent bait for midsummer bass. In the large lakes of the Deep South, huge shiners six or eight inches long are particularly deadly. In the big western lakes, the great ugly squirming salamander, or water dog, reigns as king of all natural bass baits.

New Cotton Boll Separator Is Being Developed

An improved cotton crop and earlier harvesting may be brought to Texas and Oklahoma by an experimental cotton boll separator attachment, reports the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The attachment for cotton stripper harvesters effectively separates immature cotton bolls from mature bolls, thus solving a problem that has long complicated early harvesting. A USDA spokesman told of the new device at a recent meeting of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers. It was developed by the USDA scientists in cooperation with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, at Lubbock.

Laff Of The Week

"I came over to show you my new Cockney Spaniard."

In explaining the machine, the spokesman pointed out that cotton harvested before a killing frost has a higher lint quality than cotton harvested following a frost because the crop is exposed to less weathering. However, when the crop is harvested before frost, it contains many immature bolls that must be separated from mature cotton before it is ginned.

In the High Plains, cotton is usually harvested after the first killing frost by the non-selective process of stripping all bolls from the plants at the same time.

The new machine works by blowing the light, fluffy mature cotton through a conveyor into a wagon or basket. The heavier immature bolls drop into a box and are later piled in the field to dry. This cotton can be sold after it has dried, though it is of low quality.

Hall County Soil Conservation District News

To get the maximum net return from his land a farmer must follow a good conservation cropping system. A cropping system that includes soil improving crops in rotation with soil depleting crops.

In the Hall County Soil Conservation District the cropping system should include high residue producing crops such as sorghums and small grain in the rotation.
These crops add valuable organic matter to the soil which in turn increases the moisture and fertility holding capacity of the soil.
In addition, the residue from these crops left on the surface of the soil, protects the soil from water and wind erosion. This "dead litter" cover also helps hold soil

HALF-PAST TEEN

moisture that would otherwise be lost through evaporation. This can be an important item to the dryland farmer on the following year's crop.

Fall planted small grain will also serve as a winter cover crop to protect the soil until a cash crop such as cotton is planted on the land the following spring.

Alfalfa is another good soil improving crop that should be considered in a longer term rotation.
To get the most benefit from this crop it should be left on the land at least three years before returning to row crops on this land.
When the acreage of alfalfa is plowed out and returned to row crops, another portion of the cultivated land should be planted in alfalfa to keep the rotation going.

Other crops that are good soil improving and cover crops are the annual legumes such as cowpeas and guar for summer growing crops and Austrian winterpeas for a winter growing crop. They provide cover, organic matter and add nitrogen to the soil.

The soil improving crops that the farmer will use in his cropping system will depend upon which crops fit best into his farming operation. The main thing is to get these crops incorporated into the crop rotation on the farm to protect the soil from erosion, improve the structure and fertility of the soil and increase production per acre which means a higher net income to the farmer.

Deadline Set For Sunday's Golf Tourney

Dink Miller, chairman of the Memphis Country Club Tournament committee, announced this week that a men's handicap tournament will be held at the club Sunday.

Entry deadline is 7 p.m. Saturday, and entry fee will be $2.00 each.

Four-man teams will be organized and will contain an A, B, C, and D golfer in each team. Each golfer will be assigned a handicap taken from the board, Miller said.

Team prizes for first, second and third places will be given, Miller said.
