Gas Company To Apply For Increase In Rates To Residential, Com. Users

Last week Lone Star Gas Company announced that it would apply for residential and commercial rate increases from the cities and towns it serves on its distribution system. The announcement was made in Dallas by the company's public relations and advertising departments.

Lone Star stated that any residential and commercial rate increase would be limited to 10 percent.

Approval of the rate increases will be submitted to the governing bodies of each town and city in which Lone Star Gas Company operates.

The application for rate increases, when presented to each city, will list increased cost of buying gas, higher property and equipment costs, increased costs for employee compensation, higher interest rates on borrowed money, and higher gross receipts, franchise and ad valorem taxes as primary reasons for Lone Star's income deficiency. According to the company, increases are needed in a substantial number of towns and cities to enable it to earn a reasonable rate of return on the fair value of properties used to serve the public.

It is estimated that when all rate requests are fully approved by the cities, Lone Star Gas Company will realize $5.2 million in additional revenue, based on volumes sold to residential and commercial customers in 1971 but adjusted to normal weather conditions.

Lone Star is also requesting the towns and cities to pass ordinances permitting automatic adjustment for the cost of gas.

A company spokesman added that "Lone Star has a commitment to its customers to vigorously compete for supplies of natural gas to keep its reserves in a favorable position. While other sections of the country are experiencing some shortages of natural gas, Lone Star has maintained favorable supplies."

The Texas Railroad Commission in March, 1972, authorized Lone Star Gas to adjust its intracompany "city gate" charge for gas sold to residential and commercial customers, based on the cost of gas purchased by the company according to the announcement. This rate adjustment permits Lone Star to receive 65 percent of the increase or decrease of the company's cost of gas from the towns and cities it serves on a semiannual basis.

Company officials state that they would ask all cities to grant the gas cost adjustment provision. A Lone Star spokesman stressed that "the need to continue adding new reserves and the spiraling cost which we must pay for gas create a problem recognized by the Railroad Commission. This gas cost adjustment provision will be a step forward in stimulating additional exploration and development of new natural gas reserves in Texas."

Homer Tucker, a Memphis resident for a number of years, now with the Texas Industrial Commission, met with approximately 20 businessmen and Chamber of Commerce leaders here yesterday afternoon.

The major item of interest was the newly received "Community Analysis Report," the Memphis Chamber of Commerce received from the Texas Industrial Commission.

This report is a comparison of Memphis with 57 other communities in Texas who are participating in the TIC's computer program system. The computer has 434 answers to as many questions stored, and any industry desiring to receive information concerning communities of the 3,000 to 5,000 population bracket, or any other size population, can receive this information from the Texas Industrial Commission.

Tucker was in Memphis following a TIC meeting held in Clarendon Tuesday.

About the "Community Analysis Report," Tucker explained that each participating community is rated against the other communities in its population bracket on each individual question.

A check of the report showed Memphis ranked high as first on some points, and near the bottom on others.

"When TIC receives an inquiry from an industry, interested in locating a plant in our state, they fill out a form specifying their needs. The computer compares these needs with answers stored, and prints out those cities or towns in the state which have the capabilities for meeting these needs, or surpassing them."

"Not all of the 434 questions are contained in the Community Analysis Report, just those which a rating might be of benefit to a prospective industry," Tucker said.

The advantages of the report is that it can be a great benefit to local community leaders in determining areas of weakness, things which need improving if the community is to effectively sell itself to prospective industry, he pointed out.

Tucker encouraged the establishment of an industrial team, a group of eight or ten, with answers ready for the vast number of questions which are normally asked by an investigation team from an industry. He said that those communities which are ready to meet prospective industrialists have the best chance in

Min. Browning Visits Memphis Seeking Help

Minister Louis Calvin Browning, founder and state director of the Youth Crime Prevention League of America, with offices at 944 East Ledbetter, Dallas, Texas, was in Memphis this week.

Min. Browning said, "We are asking each man, woman, boy and girl to mail $1.00 to build this state center in Dallas. If the Black Panthers can have a headquarters representing two percent of the black, then the 98 per cent should have a center."

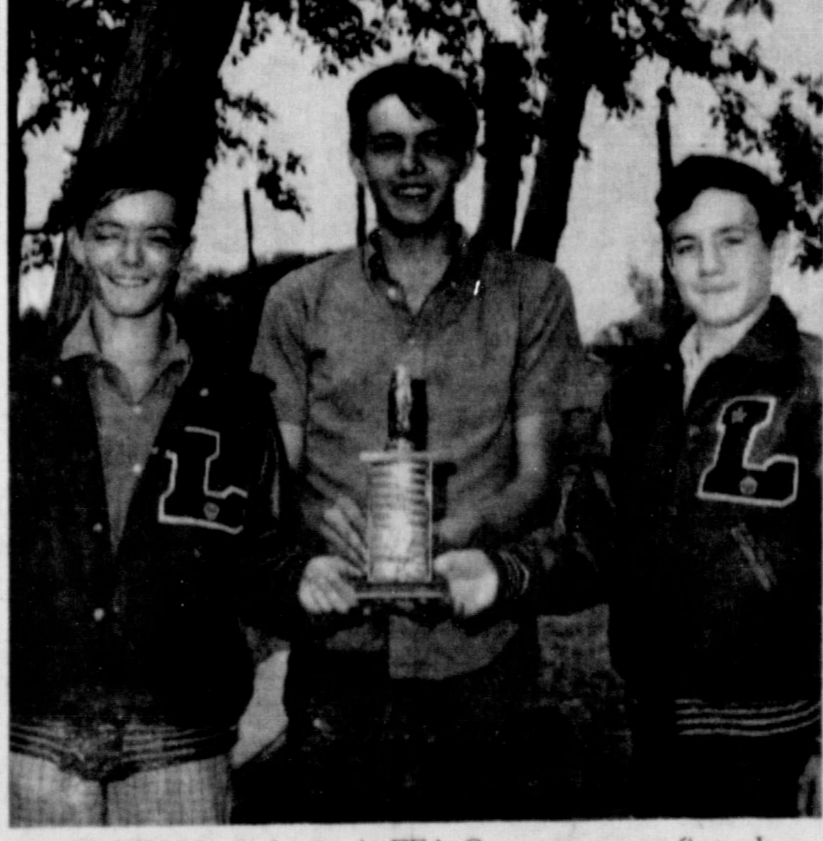

He also said that the Youth Crime Prevention League is dedicated to "The Christian approach to problems of crime and civil disorder."

Min. Browning held meetings here several years ago in local churches.

He reports that $18,000 has been spent for land in Dallas, paid by donations from across the state since the League was begun in 1958.

"We have raised another $10,000 toward the building of a $60,000 center on this property, and we need more donations," he said.

Both the Texas Senate and the Texas House of Representatives have passed documents endorsing and supporting the Youth Crime Prevention League of America, he said.

Is Hall County To Have 4,300 Population?

If you did not read the prediction by the planners of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission recently which indicated that Hall County's 1990 population would be 4,300, then you possibly aren't reading the Amarillo Daily News, or aren't keeping up with Panhandle developments.

According to these figures, the 23-county region is expected to gain in population by slightly more than 13.7 per cent over the 20-year period.

In all, 11 counties, according to the prediction, are supposed to increase in population, while 14 counties are supposed to decrease in population by 1990.

Hall County's predicted decrease figures at 29 per cent in 20 years, and is listed by PRPC as being in the declining southeastern Panhandle including Briscoe, Collingsworth, Donley, Gray, Hall and Wheeler.

These figures are just 18-year predictions, and will be soon proven or disproven.

In our way of thinking, the educated guess by PRPC study is somewhat in error in two major areas, one being the prediction that Randall County will jump in population from 53,885 now to 114,700 by 1990, and the other is that Hutchinson County will decline in population by over 50 per cent (24,443 now to 12,000 in 1990). We can't conceive of this type of population fluctuation in any given area within two decades.

These figures were compiled by the PRPC staff on the basis of an economic study by West Texas State University and past figures on interstate migration and a decreasing fertility rate.

Hall County has declined in population from 12,117 in 1940, 10,930 in 1950, 7,322 in 1960 and 6,015 in 1970. That is the trend for the past three decades.

PRPC's calculations could well prove accurate, but we feel advanced technology in agriculture rather than decreasing fertility is the major reason for farm decline.

Memphis and Hall County, like a lot of counties in rural America, has an older population than the national average. We have many houses occupied by only one or two persons, where, 20, 30 or 40 years ago a whole family lived in these houses. One or two things will occur when these homes are no longer needed by original owners. They will either remain vacant or will be occupied by others, possibly younger families. Housing is one of the main population stabilizing influences they will either remain vacant or will be occupied by others, possibly younger families. Housing is one of the main population stabilizing influences in given areas especially if job opportunity is available.

If Hall Countians want this area to retain its population, jobs must be made available and housing must be accessible in sufficient numbers. Other factors currently present will be sufficient for the next 20 years or more.

These other factors are: good schools, hospitals, churches, utilities, business establishments, recreational facilities, industrial plants, and the many services needed by agriculture for irrigation growth, seeding, handling of cotton, etc.

The question before us each day is whether or not our towns and our county are to survive. Each of our communities must be a desirable place to live for people to want to live there. Efforts to improve must be considered seriously, given the necessary support and backing.

Work done by our civic institutions needs the assistance and backing of all our citizenry. Survival is too important to all our lives for any of us to adopt pessimistic, argumentative or negative outlook. If each person would do his or her part in helping to create job opportunities and helping to locate new citizens in our county, the PRPC prediction could prove to be humorous, but if we wait, argue, despair, the decline will come and the prediction will be a reality. The future belongs to those who plan for it.

Tornado Season Calls For Preparation And Alertness

Mid-April is usually the time we enter the tornado season, and although this county has been most fortunate for several years, not all the advances in weather forecasting have made detection of these storms 100 per cent accurate.

First, each of us and all members of our families should know in advance where we are going should a tornado be sighted. Nor should we wait any longer to get to our storm cellar, or whatever place of safety we choose, ready for quick occupancy. It might be a good time to bring this shelter up to Civil Defense specifications if possible, for tornadoes are as much a part of the CD Program as nuclear fall-out.

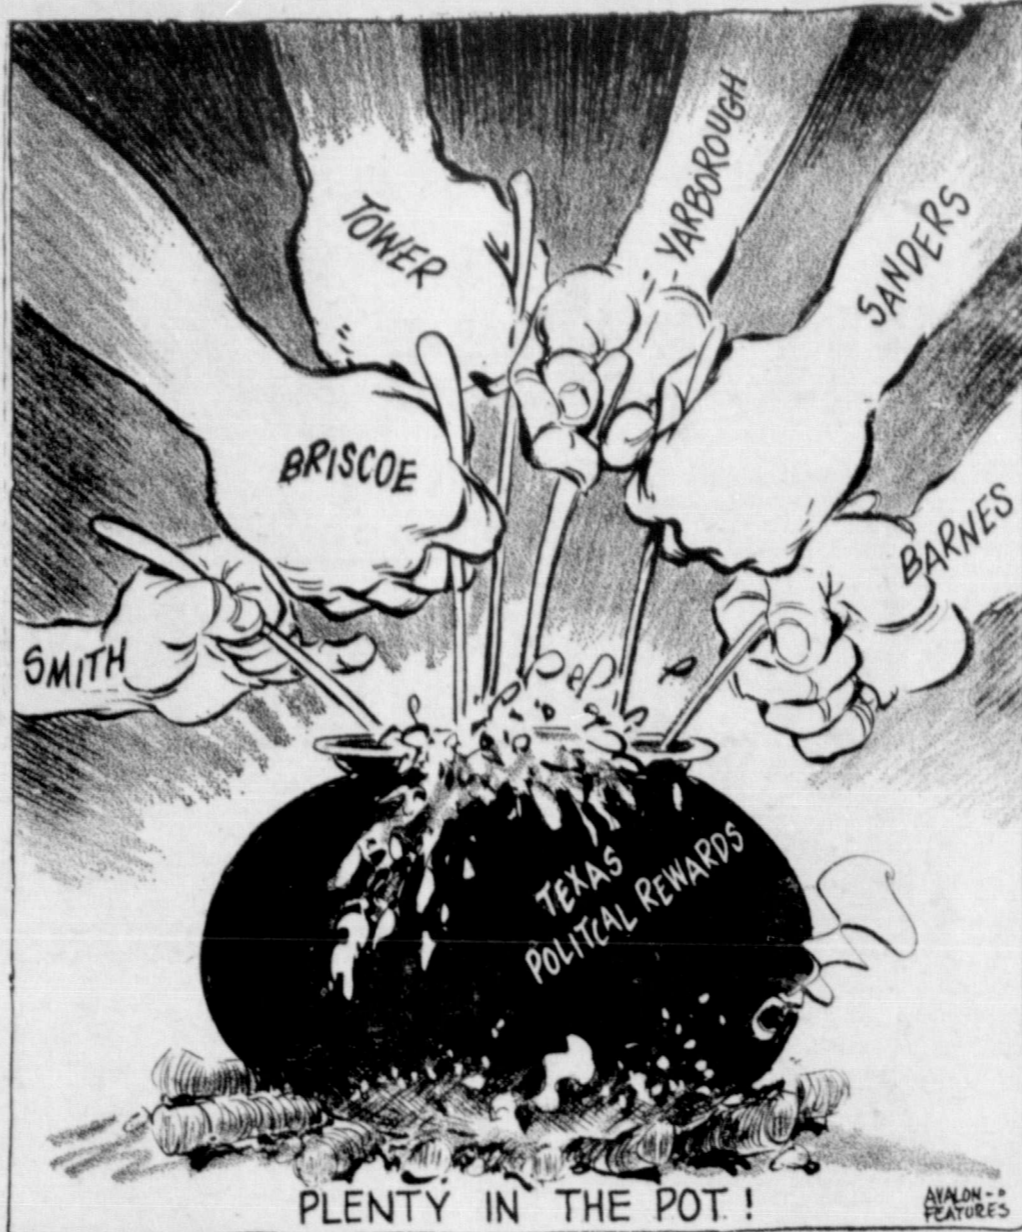

Not all tornadoes can be seen on radar screens. Most of the large ones are, but there are many tiny tornadoes, forming quickly and dipping to the ground briefly, that cannot be picked up. These also are deadly if the one point they touch down happens to be a building with people inside.

Our law enforcement officers will post a storm watch in all directions from Wellington whenever conditions require it. But at best, a few minutes must lapse from the time the storm is sighted until the warning can be given. If it is night and we depend on TV or radio, 10 minutes is about the shortest time elapse possible.

In any event, our best defense remains our own eyes, especially if we are outside the area where the fire department siren warning can be heard.

Cooking in a bag
There are some mixed information about the new technique of cooking in a bag. The following information should help you:

The Food and Drug Administration has stated that the data to date does not lead to the conclusion that cooking wraps or bags present more of a kitchen hazard than cooking by conventional means. However, everyone realizes that the average user, in order to get the greatest advantages from these products, must be educated to the simple techniques of their use. These are embodied in three simple steps the housewife can easily adopt:

First, always sprinkle one tablespoon of flour in the bag or wrap before placing the meat in. This simple step will reduce the chance of a sudden splattering or popping of hot grease.

Second, always use a pan large enough to contain not only the entire wrap, but deep enough to hold all the liquid that may be released during cooking. There always remains the possibility that some of the juice and fat may drip from the wrap or that the wrap may be punctured and all

50th Anniversary Celebration Of Mizpah Guild Is Well Attended

By VIRGINIA BROWDER
The observance of the Mizpah Guild's 50th Birthday Sunday, April 16, was well attended by local friends of the guild members and out-of-town guests and former members of the organization. Virginia Browder, as president for the local guild, acted as mistress of ceremonies during the afternoon's program in the sanctuary which was followed by much visiting, reminiscing, and refreshments in the Upper Room.

Mr. Owen McGarity, pastor of the local church, opened the program with a vocal solo, "Let the Mortal Flesh Keep Silence," accompanied by Gertrude Rasco at the pipe organ. An interesting and nostalgic history of the Mizpah Guild was written and given by Miss Rasco while Boodie Montgomery Grundy added various phases of the Guild's charitable endeavors through the years, and Mrs. Paul Montgomery told of the Guild's continuous concern and contributions to the Children's Home in Amarillo.

A candlelighting interlude in memory of Guild members who had gone to their heavenly reward as well as the three young men related to members who were killed during World War II, Pat Noel, P. E. Craver and Leon Peacock, was conducted by Ruth Finch Harrison assisted by Wilma Leslie. As was fitting, special music followed the candlelighting ceremony: The Gloria from "The Twelfth Mass" by Mozart with Carolyn Montgomery Myers at the piano and Miss Rasco at the organ.

As a humorous number on the afternoon program Estelle Cravel McCool read a poem she had written several years ago about "The Women of the Manse," the pastors' wives. And, as a conclusion to the entertainment festivities, six of the members of the Memphis Little Theatre representing "The Women of the Bible" appeared in costumes of Bible times and gave thumbnail descriptions of the part they played during that era. Those taking part in the sketch were Delilah played by Ann Farnsworth; Lydia played by Carol Deaver; Ruth Sheba, Mildred Stephens; Abigail was Roxie Parker; Jezebel played by Katherine Jones; and Sarah was Charlene Greene. Mrs. Herschel Combs was good enough to appear in time to take pictures of the cast in costume for the Guild and Little Theatre scrap books.

After being dismissed with a prayer by Rev. McGarity, the members and guests assembled in the Fellowship Hall for a gabfest and refreshments.

Cotton Nematodes Big Problem Of County Farmers

Root-knot nematodes are one of the most costly diseases plaguing West Texas cotton farmers, and fumigation for nematode control can be one of the most profitable production practices.

"Returns from fumigation can easily be 10 times the cost of the chemical when used correctly," W. B. Hooser, Hall County agricultural agent, pointed out this week. The agent recommended row treatment with one-third of a gallon per acre applied with one chisel under each row.

"Nematodes can be a real problem because the galls they form on the cotton roots resist water and nutrient intake from the soil. Nematode feeding and the toxic substance injected into the root further restrict growth and usually results in stunting and even death of the plant," he explained.

Plants weakened by nematodes are more susceptible to fungus problems such as seedling disease and Eusarium Wilt. Sand damage and moisture stress are also more likely to injure the plants.

Hooser cited research at Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center at Lubbock. Dr. Calvin Orr found that fumigation is most successful when the chemical is applied in firm, mellow seedbeds which contain sufficient moisture for germination. The soil temperature should be at least 50 degrees, but fumigation was successful at lower temperatures.

Dr. Orr also found that West

Texas farmers have considerable leeway in applying soil fumigants. Tests were successful where the chemical was applied as early as March about 15 inches below the top of the bed.

Hooser said that some farmers have been successful in applying fumigants at bedding time. In the case, the injection chisel should set the chemical six to eight inches below the soil surface and ridge the soil directly over the chemical. He warned that loose or dry soil will allow rapid loss of the fumigant and result in poor nematode control.

Fumigation can also be done at planting time with the chemical placed about six inches below the seed. This allows the roots to grow down through all the fumigated soil.

He again cited Orr's work at Lubbock and the success with dibromochloropropane (DBCP) which diffuses six inches in all directions from the point of injection and kills root-knot nematode larvae. Other types of chemicals have been tried, but gave more variable results.

Orr found that the most economical method of fumigation with DBCP is to use one chisel in the row directly below the future seed placement. The most economical rate is one-third gallon per acre when used below 40-42 rows.

Orr's research has shown that cotton with a tap root system performs as well when fumigated with a single chisel as when chisels 12 inches apart are used in the bed. With the single chisel method and one-third of a gallon of chemical per acre, the cost about three dollars per acre was an expected increase of about 10 pounds of lint.

"Let's Hold the Line on Taxes and Spending"

"No, I don't support a state income tax. There are too many ways to save money in government available to us. We can get more for our money than we're getting now, and do more with the tax dollar than we're doing now, so it's not necessary to place additional tax burdens on our people yet. We just have to stop the waste."

Research Shows That Arthritis May Be Caused By Invading Microorganisms

The weight of scientific opinion is shifting toward the idea that rheumatoid arthritis is caused by invasion microorganisms. But the issue still remains very much in doubt, reports "Chemical and Engineering News" in a three-part feature article by associate editor Howard J. Sanders.

With the introduction of cortisone in the late 1940's and with proof of its dramatic effectiveness in reducing inflammation and pain of rheumatoid arthritis, many researchers began to think the disease was caused by hormone abnormalities. But the necessary supporting evidence has not been obtained, and the theory that the primary cause is a bacterium, virus, or other pathogenic agent now has the largest following.

Strongly supporting the germ theory is the fact that the disease has symptoms similar to those of infectious disorders—inflammation, low-grade fever, lack of appetite, weight loss, a rapid sedimentation rate of red blood cells, and a high count of white blood cells.

This evidence is strictly circumstantial, however, since no one has conclusively connected the disease with a specific organism or organisms, the American Chemical Society weekly news-magazine emphasizes.

Actually, some types of arthritis (less than one per cent of all cases) are known to be caused by a microorganism. However, rheumatoid arthritis—the most destructive form of arthritis, affecting some five million American adults—is not one of these types.

Another body of evidence comes from arthritis-like diseases found in animals. Because these diseases are caused by bacteria or viruses, some scientists believe rheumatoid arthritis may also be caused by such organisms.

Various scientists have reported finding infectious agents in the joints of rheumatoid arthritis patients, but others discount the claims, contending that the organisms were merely contaminants picked up during experiments to isolate the organisms. Also, the presence of an infectious agent in a joint does not necessarily mean that the organism is a causative agent or even harmful.

One possible reason no organisms have definitely been shown to be present in arthritic joints is that these organisms are difficult to culture by present methods. Another possibility is that an agent may trigger the disease and then disappear from joints when the disease finally manifests itself.

In the past, the prime suspect has been a bacterium. The main reason is that bacteria are the best known of all microorganisms. Other organisms now under investigation include mycoplasmas (organisms bigger than viruses yet smaller than bacteria), bedsonia organisms (once believed to be viruses), and viruses. In all cases, the organisms mentioned have been claimed to be found by some investigators at the site of inflammation in joints of patients with rheumatoid arthritis or a closely related disease.

Despite arguments against the germ theory of rheumatoid arthritis, such as no conclusive discovery of such an agent in arthritic joints, the inability of other researchers to confirm reported discoveries of infectious organisms in affected joints, and the ineffectiveness of antibiotics in treating arthritis, the idea of an infectious agent or agents is still on the ascent.

YOUR COUNTY AGENT SAYS

CUT COTTON DISEASES

Two key management practices can reduce disease losses and increase profits to cotton farmers, points out County Agricultural Agent W. B. Hooser. These are, early planting and the use of top quality, acid-delinted seed.

Five of the nine major cotton diseases occurring in Texas can be controlled or reduced by purchasing high quality, acid-delinted cotton seed that has been treated with a fungicide. The diseases include anthracnose, ascochyta (wet weather blight), bacterial blight, boll rot and seedling disease. All of these are caused by either fungi or bacteria and are seed borne, explains Hooser.

The acid delinting process will

Holder in Due Course

Have you ever purchased on time installment plan? Sure you have. Practically all major appliances are purchased in this manner.

Here's how it works: You, as consumer, purchase a washer or dryer from one of the local appliance dealers in your city. You sign a time installment contract and promissory note for the purchase price, payable in monthly installments ranging from 12 to 36 months.

(It should be noted that the installment plan is utilized in the purchase of furniture, auto lessons, etc. as well as appliances).

Your promissory note for the purchase price of the washer and dryer is in turn assigned or transferred by the appliance dealer to a bank or other lending institution. By the terms of this assignment or transfer, the appliance dealer who sold you the washer and dryer is paid in full by the bank and you now begin to make regular payments to the bank for the purchase of your appliances.

The bank, who owns your promissory note now, is probably a "Holder in Due Course".

So what does this mean to you, consumer? Legally speaking, it means a great deal in terms of the rights and liabilities of all three parties—you, the appliance dealer, and the financial institution to this everyday commercial transaction.

What exactly is a "Holder in Due Course"? Generally, a "Holder in Due Course" is one who takes a negotiable promissory note in the regular course of business, paying a valuable consideration for it, and who has no reason to believe that the original transaction between you and the appliance dealer is other than legitimate. As a "Holder in Due Course", the bank is legally entitled to expect payment to be made by you according to the terms of your note. All well and good so far!

But, consider this situation: As you begin to use your new appliances, suppose the dryer ceases to function due to faulty installation by the appliance dealer. If the dealer is a reputable one, he will repair it or see that it is installed properly pursuant to your warranty. But suppose that the appliance dealer has in the meantime quit doing business or has moved from your city and cannot be located. What do you do now? Can you legally cease making payments until your dryer is repaired or replaced? If the bank is a "Holder in Due Course", the answer is no.

Remember, the bank paid valuable consideration for your note. It paid the dealer cost in full. It makes a profit from the interest you are paying on the note, and the bank more than likely would have had no reason to believe the dealer was other reputable. (Or at least it will be extremely difficult for you to prove otherwise).

When does this leave you legally? This leave you with monthly installment to pay on your note stuck with a faulty appliance with a questionable appliance dealer unavailable.

Before signing the contract and making your purchase, know with whom you are dealing. Is he a reputable and honest businessman? If you are not sure, check with your local Chamber of Commerce or Better Business Bureau.

Remember, when purchasing products or services on the time installment payment plan, your contract and note in many cases will be assigned to a "Holder in Due Course".

New Biography Is About Family Of Turkey Woman

"The Man David" a biography of the life of David Rumph written by Juanita Daniel Zachry of Abilene, concerns the life of the grandfather of Mrs. S. L. Owens of Turkey.

The book tells about the economic situation prior to and following the Civil War. The story brings out how one man and his family were affected by war, high taxes, loss of slave labor, a continuing decline in prices of farm commodities and finally days of Reconstruction.

David was born in Orangeburg, S. C., and orphaned at an early age. He arrived in Randolph County, Ga., at age 20 with a small legacy from his father's estate.

By 1860 David had become a prominent plantation owner and merchant with a valued estate of $200,000.

His refusal to be defeated by the Carpetbag government brought him to Texas in 1869. His progeny in Texas and surrounding states has erected a monument to his memory.

The book offers an appeal for a varied audience.

Local Taxpayers Paying $2,257,000 In Income Taxes

NEW YORK—How much will Uncle Sam be collecting from Hall County residents in income taxes on or before April 17th, which is the day of reckoning this year?

According to the government's calculations, it will be slightly more than was received from the local area a year ago, when it amounted to $2,248,000.

That is the estimate of what was turned in locally, as determined by a breakdown of the overall returns received throughout the State of Texas.

The statewide total was $4,495,000,000, the Treasury Department reports. Included in the amount is the portion of the tax collected via the withholding process.

Despite the sluggishness of the economy during the past year, the budget makers in Washington expect the receipts this year to be slightly higher than last year's.

The reasoning is that, despite the unusually high unemployment rate, the great mass of the working population was fully employed in 1971 and, for the most part, had bigger earnings than in 1970.

Consequently, they will have larger taxes to pay. For the others, who did not have steady employment, the taxes will be lower.

On the basis of the figures, it is calculated that residents of Hall County have been contributing approximately 0.05 per cent of the personal income taxes collected in the states.

Just how much more the Administration counts on receiving this year is indicated in the budget submitted to Congress in January. Nationally, it expects $86.5 billion in such revenues, or only about $300 million more than was collected in the past fiscal year.

Taxpayers in the local area will be bearing their portion of this increase. Their payments next month will be close to $2,257,000, it is estimated.

The new budget presented by the Administration, projecting income and expense figures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973, calls for individual income taxes of $93.9 billion, which is $7.4 billion more than this year.

If Hall County taxpayers are to produce their share of this rise and maintain their present standard of living, total income in the area will have to go up by about 8.6 per cent during this fiscal year.

Cancer Is No. One Killer Of Women Diseases

Cancer stands first among the six leading "killer diseases" of women, a recent report from the National Institutes of Health reveals.

Over one-fourth of the women of child-bearing age develop uterine cancer. A simple Pap test done annually can detect the presence of such tumors and can boost the survival rate from 10 to 90 per cent, depending on the time of detection and other factors. Yet most women go five years between medical examinations, it was reported.

Although uterine tumors are most common, breast cancer is the biggest killer. It is, in fact, the leading cause of death in women, accounting for 30,000 deaths a year, with approximately 70,000 new cases discovered each year. The death rate in breast cancer has remained unchanged in two generations, according to reports.

Mrs. Lorean Hart, Cancer Crusade chairman of Hall County, says, "We cannot stress too heavily the importance of education against cancer. The money involved is important, to be sure, but our American people must be made to realize that research and regular medical checkups are imperative if we are to wipe out this malicious enemy."

Too much sun can be a danger, the American Cancer Society warns. Use hats, beach umbrellas and lotions to safeguard against skin cancer.

Kinard-Heyne Nuptial Vows Solemnized In Abilene Sat.

Nuptial vows were solemnized at 7:30 p. m. Saturday, April 15, at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Episcopal in Abilene for Miss Janet Kinard of Abilene and Fred J. Heyne III of Corpus Christi. The Rev. E. P. Dentzer, pastor of the church, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cearley R. Kinard of Abilene and granddaughter of Mrs. D. L. C. Kinard of Memphis while the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Heyne, Jr., of Houston.

Music for the wedding was provided by Mrs. Dub Wooten, organist.

Attendants

Miss Laura Welch of Houston was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. Jim Kinard of Ithaca, N. Y.; Mrs. Jack Modesett of Corpus Christi, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Susan Engelhardt of Dallas, Miss Anne Lund and Miss Janet Neath, both of Houston.

The attendants wore identical gown of violet chiffon trimmed with ivory grosgrain ribbon. The fitted bodices were styled with portrait necklines and bishop sleeves, and the softly gathered skirts were worn a slipped length.

Miss Laura Modesett of Corpus Christi, niece of the bridegroom, served as flower girl. She wore an ivory silk organza dress trimmed with heirloom lace and tating. The dress was styled with a high rounded neckline, and brief puffed sleeves; it was sashed and deeply hemmed at ankle length.

Acolytes were Wyley Williamson and Lee Baird, both of Abilene.

Charles Heyne of Houston served as his brother's best man. Groomsmen were Jack Modesett of Corpus Christi, Jim Kinard of Ithaca, N. M., brother of the bride; R. G. Allen of Houston, Jack Baber of Memphis, Tenn., and David Graham of Houston.

Ushers were David Jefecoat of Dallas, Tommy Royce of Houston and Jim Parker of Corpus Christi.

The Bride

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a designer's gown of ivory silk organza. In Victorian manner the bodice was fashioned with a high neckline and deep yoke effect of re-embroidered Alecon lace and pearls in trellis pattern. The long tapered sleeves were accepted at the wrist with the same design. Satin ribbon marked the waistline and formed streamers at the back of the gently gathered skirt that was enhanced with lavish appliques of the beautiful French lace. Banding of the scalloped lace's pattern encircled the hemline and swept into flared train of court length.

MRS. FRED J. HEYNE III

Her heirloom veil of Belgian lace in Princess design that had been worn by generations of the groom's family was caught to a small Victorian cap of jewelled lace and swept over the back of the gown to beyond the train's hemline.

Immediately following the wedding trip, the newlyweds will be at home in Corpus Christi where the bridegroom is employed with Everhart Corporation.

The bride, a graduate of Cooper High School in Abilene, received a bachelor of arts degree from Southern Methodist University where she was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority.

The bridegroom, a graduate of St. John's High School in Houston, received a bachelor of business administration degree from the University of Texas and a master's in business administration from SMU. He was a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

The bridegroom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner at the Petroleum Club.

Attending the wedding from here were Mrs. D. L. C. Kinard, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Gailey and their daughter, Mrs. Kandy Brown of Gruver.

Last week's column I did on Mrs. A. H. Wilborn of Hall County, celebrating her 80th birthday. Since the men- tion of this young, bright, old lady, Gladys helped with this birthday in Amar- illo. Wilborn is the head of the former family moved to Amar- illo in 1911. She has three chil- dren, W. W. Cox of Amar- illo, Joe M. Mabedy of Mo- rehead, and Herbert O. Wil- born, who is presi- dent of the Wilborn Bros. Co. Wilborn is still serving as vice president of this company. She has always been active in church and civic affairs and has made the community a better place. She is very active in keep- ing with politics and doing what she can to help the people who would be a credit to her office he holds.

Though blind, she still has what is going on in radio and television. At the age of 89, she made her first trip to Mobile, Ala., alone, to congratulate to this lady who has been carrying out that "Let nothing discourage me" motto. This pioneer has many friends in Hall County who wish her many more birthdays.

Had visiting in Heritage Hall of our Hall County boys born and reared in the Community and was a member of MHS in the 1948 class of Dallas, Texas.

now, is James Smith, son of the late Ed and Ona (Nall) Smith, now of Amarillo. James served two years in the Army. A graduate of Kilgore College in diesel engineering, he married Bobby Jo Howard in 1950. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Howard of Lakeview. He started working for a heavy duty machinery company in Longview where he was for 8 years, then being transferred to Dallas where they have made their home the past seven years. They have one son, Mike, 15 years old, and one daughter, Renee, who is now 13. James' mother and one sister, Eddine, are now living in Amarillo and another sister, Mattie Ruth, is living in Fort Worth. James' father, Ed, and his grand- father, C. E. Nall, passed away in 1950. James is in the sales department for heavy duty machinery and told me of a recent sale he had helped with which was a 4 million dollar sale including scrapers, tractors and loaders. This sounded like a pretty fair sale. We did ask James what he thought of Hall County Heritage Hall and his reply was, "It is worth driving from Dallas to Memphis just to get to look this over." He is going to drive up with his wife and girls some weekend. James and his two sisters are Hall County taxpayers even though they live in other places.

It seems to me that it is hard to get everything equal where everyone would be happy. Equalization boards have been tried for many years and it seems that they cannot get taxes or anything else equal. In reading the Dallas News they seem to have trouble getting liberators satisfied. Now the ladies come up with another deal and I do not know how they will equal this with the men. They want time off with pay for their child to be born. About the only way I can think of to equalize this problem is to give the men 2 or 3 weeks off to go fishing.

Mrs. Pratt Foard had as her guests in Hall County Heritage Hall her two sisters, Mrs. Opal Foard of Brice and Mrs. Al- ma Mae Forbis of Wellington. Pratt and Watt Foard and John Er- on Forbis did their courtin' in Hollis, Okla., and won the three sisters in marriage. Pratt served with the Memphis school system for about 8 years and after this, worked at the court house until his death, which was about one year ago. One of the sisters in this group did tell me a little about Elmout Branigan. She said she used to go out on dates with Elmout's older brother and she talked like Elmout was a little stinker and pestered her all the time, even when she was watch- ing a ball game as he would pest- er her so much she would miss seeing the game.

I see by the daily papers 14 Chinese have been flown to the U. S. to play ping pong. I guess the U. S. should fly some of our good mumble peg players to China.

Other visiting in Heritage Hall the past week Bartell Leffew and Tal Knox of Santa Maria, Calif. Bartell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Leffew, who lived on and worked on the W. P. Dial farms in Hall County for about 30 years. There were 10 children in this family and only two now are deceased. Bartell has been living in Santa Maria for the past 32 years where he is in the cement business. He has one daughter, 25 years old, and one son, 23 years old. Bartell attend- ed school at Memphis, Friendship and Newlin.

Tal Knox is the youngest child of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Knox who lived and farmed on the D. A. Grundy place south- west of Memphis over 22 years. They first moved to Hall County in 1910. Tal said his last school teacher was Frank Garrett at Salisbury. He left here in 1936, making a resolution that he did not want any more cotton pick- ing and cow milking. There were 8 children in the J. B. Knox fam- ily and only three survivors. The two are Lillie and Willie (Bill) who are now living at Harbor City, Calif. I did ask Tal what he thought of Heritage Hall and he replied, "I think it is nice and a wonderful thing for Hall Coun- ty."

Mrs. Ted Young, resident of Childress for the past five years, had as her guests in Hall County Heritage Hall, Lizzie Jones and Mrs. Ruth Steiner of Childress. Mrs. Steiner's husband, W. M. (now deceased), taught school in the Childress area about 65 years. Mrs. Ted Young, the former Lina Hull, moved to Hall County in 1919, married Ted, the son of the late P. O. Young in 1924. Ted passed away in 1950. They had 6 children, now living, Thursa Mae of Lubbock, Doyle of Amar- illo, Carlyle of Gainesville, Juan- ella of Memphis, Margie of Plano. Mrs. Young now has 19 grand- children and five great-grand- children. She could remember the dirty 30's when she and Ted used the cross-cut saw to get fuel from the pasture for heat and cooking (mesquite brush).

When visiting in the Hall County Hospital the past Saturday, I was reminded by the ladies working in the kitchen that I had not given any comment on those who were working in this sani- tary, stainless steel kitchen and they really take good care of it. I think the cooking operation for all of the patients in the hos- pital is taken care of by seven ladies in two different shifts. Each meal for the patients is personalized with the name of the patient on their tray. In watching these ladies working in the kitchen, I thought of the song, "Whistle While You Work". Of course, they were not whist- ling, but they did have a smile on their faces that made them look like they were enjoying their work in trying to please sick people's appetites.

A visit I made in the hospital a few days ago was with Mrs. Lonnie Widner and her youngest daughter, Gayle, of Albuquerque, N. M. Gayle's young daughter was born here and they were taking young Christina out to meet the world for the first time. Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Widener will have several grand son- in-laws with these 8 granddaugh- ters growing up. As Mrs. Wide- ner stated, their family now con- sisted of 5 daughters, two sons and the 8 granddaughters.

In last week's column, I did say something about the cows and hogs not observing the highway rules and regulations. The past few days I did hear of two more of the accidents where the ani- mals were in the wrong lane. (Continued on Page 10)
