BETA DANCE TO FEATURE DOTTSY

IT WAS ARBOR DAY, Tuesday, March 16th, and five ash trees found homes at the Kinney County Playground. The Bi-Centennial trees were donated by the Alpha Epsilon Psi Chapter of the Beta Sigma Phi in honor of National Beta Sigma Phi week.

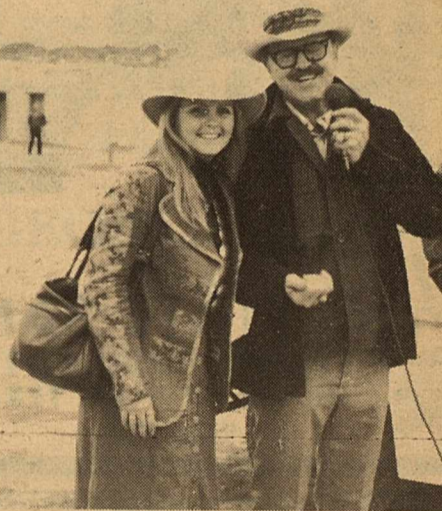

Gathered to plant the trees were (top row) Patty Spence, Donna Hennet, Wanda Jennings, Linda Young, and Pam McIntosh. (Bottom Row) Judge Tommy Seargeant, (who accepted for the County) and Genell Hobbs.

Dottsy, vivacious young singer who will be presented in a program in Del Rio in April by the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority chapters here, has completed her first album, her manager, J.R. (Happy) Shahan of Brackettville said here Tuesday.

The album, Shahan said, is considered by music folk a sure sampling of a star's ability to sell records; it is called "The Sweetest Thing" and was released last week.

Shahan said last week she had the female album of the week in the nation as reported by Billboard.

She is slated to appear in Del Rio April 3, at a dance sponsored by Beta Sigma Phi Sorority chapters here; the dance is planned to raise money for Val Verde Memorial Hospital.

DOTTSY WEEKEND GUEST

DOTTSY, SHOWN ABOVE WITH HAPPY SHAHAN AT ALAMO VILLAGE, was guest star at the re-enactment of the Battle of the Alamo on March 6th, as part of a bicentennial event sponsored jointly by the Bi-Centennial National Re-enactment Society and the Texas Army. The official re-enactment was attended by over 2,500 people. Rice University in Houston filmed the battle as a documentary project, and the Daughters of the American Revolution have commissioned a film for Public Service Television. Television crews from as far away as Houston (KPRC-TV) were on hand to film the event.

PHASE II OF BRACKETTVILLE'S DRAINAGE SYSTEM IS UNDER CONSTRUCTION.....The picture above shows City employees and heavy equipment working on the construction of the new drainage system.

Due to Brackettville's drainage improvements and the dam building cooperation with the U.S. Department of Soil Conservation the City was notified this week that Flood Insurance was no longer required on FHA and Government Housing Loans.

KAZEN IN WASHINGTON

The first major floor fight of this congressional session occurred last week over de-regulation of natural gas prices. We who believe that our nation must expand its domestic sources of energy supported legislation proposed by our Texas colleague, Bob Krueger, but we lost the fight when the House defeated his bill by a vote of 205-201.

The bill as passed retains controls on the major producers, provides some federal authority over some gas in intra-state commerce and thereby provides more federal control than now exists. I think the House action means we are unlikely to get any legislation this year, because I doubt that the Senate will accept the amended bill and if it should, I think the President would veto it. If this should happen, there are not sufficient votes to over-ride a veto.

MILK VETO SUSTAINED

Another bill which I favored, firming up price supports on milk, and providing quarterly parity adjustments, was vetoed. The Senate sustained the veto so that the bill will not come back to the House for a vote. I favored the proposal because I thought it would maintain an adequate supply of milk for consumers and protect smaller producers against increasing costs that might put them out of business. The President and his advisors took the position that the new price supports would increase the price of milk and place new burdens on the federal budget.

Some parity level adjustments are within the authority of the Secretary of Agriculture, and I would hope that if milk shortages developed, changes could be made to assure that there is an adequate supply of milk for the nation.

The White House is making frequent use of the charge that the Congress is engaged in "budget busting" expenditures. We recently voted passage of the Public Works act by a decisive margin; now it may be vetoed. On this legislation, as with our recent over-ride of a veto of the Labor-HEW appropriation bill, we are being charged with "fiscal irresponsibility" but this argument is untrue. The necessary funds for both bills were provided when the House set the fiscal 1976 expenditure level at $394 billion.

The Congress is aware of the economic conditions in our Nation. We don't want to spend recklessly, and we see some signs that economic pressures are easing. But certainly the nation's economic health is not robust. The public will benefit if we get more people back to work, cut the tax burdens of unemployment compensation and welfare, and let those workers help support faster economic recovery.

COMMENTS from THE SAGEBRUSH

BY JOE TOWNSEND

Now is the time to feed. The health and vigor of your grass, your shrubs, your trees, all through the summer, will be determined by the feed they get now. They have been asleep and now it's time for breakfast. These things are not like the person who is in the habit of not eating breakfast. The putting forth of new growth calls for much exertion of life by the plant. This can be assisted, improved and strengthened by a good feeding now. If these are well fed now, they will be much better prepared to stay green and beautiful through the summer. A person would never dream of going season after season and never feeding themselves and yet somehow, we expect grass, shrubs, and trees to stay in the same spot and feed from the same small spot of soil season after season. Investment in fertilizer now will reward you all summer. Don't make the greenery around your yard miss their breakfast.

by:

JOE TOWNSEND

While the front door of my shop was open about half way this morning a humming bird found her way in. She flitted around for a while feeding some on what few blooms there are in the shop. She even tried the artificial flowers. Then when I moved around, she decided to leave. She flew into the window and several times backed off and hit the window seeking a way out. She finally gave up on that and just flew around in the shop. We tried to herd her to the door, but she always flew too high. Finally, I just stayed with her until she became too tired to fly and I caught her and took her outside whereupon she took off like a jet.

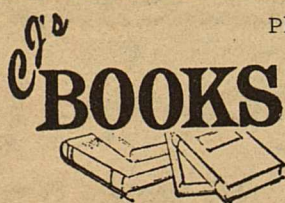

How like some people this lovely little creature. Of all the places to fly, she chose a relatively small opening to fly into trouble. She almost killed herself trying to get out through an impossible way. She flew so high she couldn't see the way out. She had been so enthralled with the prospect of getting in she'd forgotten it was also the way out. She was too hard headed to be guided to safety and was unwilling to be helped until she was too exhausted to fly. Then she found that one she thought to be her enemy, actually was her friend and probably saved her life.

So often man gets into trouble by sticking his nose in where it doesn't belong, and beats his head against a brick wall rather than admit he's wrong and needs help. He often turns against those who really care and finally finds himself at the end of the rope. Only then will he turn to capable help and then often under protest. Then like the hummer, he hastily flies away with never a backward glance at the benefactor. So many times we act like the bird when God is the benefactor and can be happy in the knowledge that when we do allow him, he will always rescue us--because He loves us.

Soil Conservation

by: Howard Ragsdale

A short history of conservation in the United States is presented in "Limits," a bicentennial slide set produced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service and available to the public.

The 15-minute production traces the growing awareness of Americans that our natural resources--soil, water, timber, wildlife and scenic beauty--which at first had seemed inexhaustible, were not without limits and had to be protected against exploitation.

"Limits" is appropriate for showing to all audiences interested in conservation: schools, conservation groups, television audiences, civic clubs and organizations.

Copies of the slide set can be purchased for $20.50 from the Photography Division, Office of Communication, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington D.C. 20250. The filmstrip can be ordered for $12.50 from Photo Lab, Inc., 3825 Georgia Avenue, N.W., Washington D.C. 20011. A programmed cassette with soundtrack and two copies of the illustrated narrative guide are included in the price of both the slide set and filmstrip.

Howard Ragsdale, district conservationist for SCS at Brackettville, said he can borrow a set for use locally if needed. It will, however, need to be scheduled well in advance of the day of showing.

ADULT STUDENTS PASS GED EXAMS

Four adult education students have taken and passed the state GED examination, according to Mr. Chuck Hall, adult education instructor. Sylvia Alvarado, Rosa Baker, Julia Terrazas, and Connie Waddell passed the GED test, which is the state's equivalent of a high school diploma.

The adult education class prepares people to take the test. It is not the easiest thing to do to go back to school and congratulations are in order. Several other members will take the test in the near future.

It's been a busy week on the campus. The election of next year's student council officers highlighted a week of vigorous campaigning. Next year's president will be Marion Johnson. Lou Ann Lindeman will serve as vice-president and Tony Koch will fill the office of secretary-treasurer. Congratulations to the student council for running a smooth election.

Last week, Marcelino Valdez Jr., Paula Lopez, and Dora Cabral represented BHS at the Rotary International Student Congress at Piedras Negras, Mexico. Approximately 130 students from all points of the globe participated in the event. This year's theme was "To dignify the human being."

The boy's and girl's track teams also brought home some honors last week. Maxine Meyer placed third in the 440 yard dash at Lytle and out of seventeen schools represented, our track team tied for sixth place.

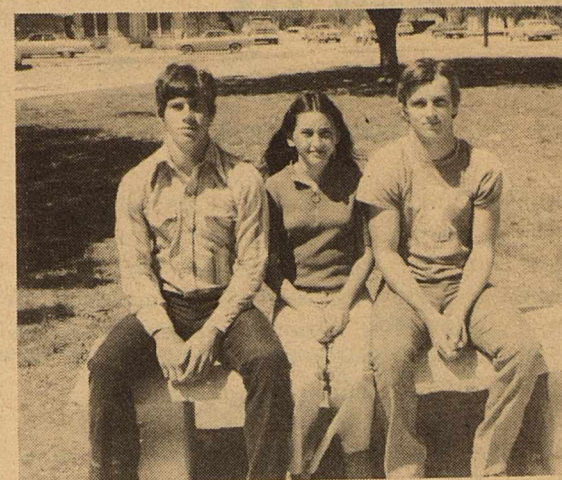

John Jones and Buck Smallwood came through for the fellows at the Pearsall meet. John placed 1st in the 330 high hurdles and 2nd in the 120 high hurdles. In the long jumps event, Buck placed third.

The tennis team, preparing for district competition, defeated Rock-springs 5 to 4 this past Tuesday. In the singles competition, winners were Sam Munoz, Mark Veltmann, Lou Ann Lindeman, and Kathy Dyer. As a team, Mark Veltmann and Tony Koch captured the double's honors. The netters have been practicing at Fort Clark while the BHS courts are under construction. The entire tennis team wishes to thank the Ft. Clark management for the hospitality. The meet this week at Sabinal will be the last one before district.

Wednesday, the Del Rio band presented a concert for BHS students. They played some of their contest numbers as well as several popular songs.

Also last week, BHS hosted Mrs. Ginger Karran and Mrs. Casey Lieberman of the San Antonio Opera Guild. The women presented a program on the opera, "The Flying Dutchman."

To encourage wise use of electricity in all-electric homes

CPL offers the ENERGY EFFICIENCY AWARD

A house doesn't use electricity—people do. But unless a home is properly designed and built, unless it is insulated adequately, and unless its major electrical appliances are selected and situated with efficiency in mind, its occupants cannot make the most efficient use of their electric service.

But if you're not an expert, how do you know that all these details have been tended to?

That is the purpose of the Energy Efficiency Award. It tells you that your prospective new all-electric home has been thoroughly checked by a trained technician from CPL and that it meets the rigid EEA standards. It means that if you live in such a home and if you follow CPL's suggestions for using electricity wisely, you are getting the maximum benefit of your electric service.

If you are thinking about buying a newly-constructed home, look for a sign in the yard that says "Energy Efficiency Award." If you are planning to build or remodel, ask your builder, realtor, or designer about it.

For more information on the Energy Efficiency Award and tips on how to make the most efficient use of electricity, drop by your CPL office.

CHILDHOOD CANCER

"Children with cancer have a much better chance of making a good recovery if they are treated in a hospital that uses the team approach to diagnosis and provides combined forms of treatment," says Laura Seargeant, chairman of the Brackettville Unit of the American Cancer Society.

She says that 50 percent of the boys and girls with acute lymphocytic leukemia--the most common childhood malignancy--are alive and well after five years if they have been treated at a cancer center. In the 1940's, the average life of a young cancer patient with leukemia was three months.

The overall childhood cancer death rate has been generally declining; from 8.4 per 100,000 of those under 15 years of age in 1950 to 6.2 in 1970, for example.

At the special cancer centers, doctors consult one another on the best treatment for each patient, and then prescribe surgery, radiation, drugs, or combination therapy. In the larger institutions, a staff of psychologists, social workers and nurses help the young patient and his family with the emotional and other problems involved in coping with childhood cancer.

She cautions parents that cancer in children is especially difficult to recognize, "since symptoms of malignancies may masquerade as trivial disorders."

The most common childhood cancers attack the blood, brain, nervous system and kidneys, and because a child is in a state of rapid growth, the cancers often grow fast, too, Seargeant says.

Cancer in children is relatively rare--among children under 15 only one in about 8,000 is likely to develop it. Still, it kills more American children in that age group than any other disease--about 3,500 each year.

What hope for the future?

"The American Cancer Society has given more than $3 million in grants for research in leukemia and other childhood cancers over the past year," Seargeant says. "Parents can do a great deal by telling their pediatrician about any striking changes in their child's physical behavior or growth patterns."

Senator Lloyd Bentsen Watching Washington

Detente is no longer part of President Ford's vocabulary. "I don't use the word anymore," he said in a recent interview, indicating that U.S. relations with Russia and China will now be based on a policy of peace through strength.

There's a lot to be said for the President's new approach. Detente means a relaxation of tensions. And the search for detente, especially with Russia, has been the centerpiece of U.S. foreign policy for several years now.

There has been a continuing series of negotiations and summit meetings and arms limitation agreements. There was the U.S.-Soviet space flight. And cultural exchanges between the two countries have substantially increased in recent years.

On the face of it, few people would argue with the need to lessen tensions between the United States and the Soviet Union. The Cold War dragged on far too long. And people in this country and throughout the world are weary of the continuing confrontation between the two great superpowers.

But there are serious problems, too, and I have been warning of the dangers in a single-minded pursuit of detente for several years now. I have had two primary concerns. First, in its search for detente with Russia and China, this country has virtually ignored our friends in this hemisphere and our allies in other parts of the world--Latin America, Japan and Western Europe.

Second, we have a right to expect that both sides will make concessions, and particularly in the case of Russia I am not at all convinced that this has happened.

Take the arms race. The U.S. military budget is decreasing by 3-4 percent a year, while that of the Soviet Union increases by the same amount. And Russia is outspending us militarily by about 45 percent.

There is a serious question about the intentions of the Soviet Union in the Middle East.

Both Russia and Cuba are fueling the flames of war in Africa.

And in Moscow recently, at the Communist Party congress, Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev endorsed detente only to the extent that it advances communism.

There is increasing evidence--disturbing evidence--that the leaders in the Kremlin look on detente as a one-way street; all give and no take. And they expect the United States to do the giving.

And now, President Ford has taken note of this by declaring that detente no longer describes relations between the United States and Russia.

"If we're strong militarily," the President said. "And if we continue that strength, we can negotiate with the Soviet Union, China and others to maintain peace."

We must remember that the Russians are still very tough political, military and ideological competitors of this country.
