COMMENTS from THE SAGEBRUSH

BY JOE TOWNSEND

Time has come for assessment and work on potted plants-especially those outside. Many plants in pots and hanging baskets outside are apparently dead from winters cold. Some of these, however, will come out with the coming of warm weather and with watering. They should be given a chance-they will make better plants generally than new ones started. The soil should be loosened in these planters and plants should be fed.

Many plants in various types of outside planters are simply dead and must be replaced. Now is the time to do this in most cases. The spring season generally is the best growing time of the year for these plants. It is cool, but not cold; it is warm generally but not hot; the humidity is generally higher. This combination is hard to beat. Get your plants off to a good start now, give them a chance to develop a good root system and get new growth well started. When the blazing heat of summer comes you will be glad you started early. Your plants will be better through the entire season. You get more for your time and energy spent now than any time in the year.

McBEE NAMED TO COMMITTEE

AUSTIN-----State Rep. Susan McBee of Del Rio has been named to the special House Committee studying drug abuse by Texas children by House Speaker Bill Clayton.

Rep. McBee replaces Rep. Billy Hall of Laredo as one of five House members on the committee. There are four lay members of the committee which is chaired by Rep. R. B. McAlister of Lubbock.

"I am delighted to have an opportunity to participate in this important study and I am optimistic that we will reach some positive and concrete results," Mx. McBee said.

Clayton instructed the committee to find out what can be done in classrooms to alert youngsters to the threat of drugs; find out how good ongoing programs for addicts are faring; and what might be done by law to dry up supply routes through Mexico.

Additionally, the committee is being given flexibility to explore new avenues in approaching the drug problem.

The committee is expected to hand Clayton a report by October with possible recommendations for the 65th Legislature.

"Rep. McBee will be an important member of the committee. She is a proven leader in the House and her ideas will greatly benefit the work of the committee," Clayton said.

JOE TOWNSEND

Deer are such creatures of habit. Sure, the pastures are dry, browse is in short supply and deer have to work hard to find enough to eat. Many of the deer, however, have developed the habit of being very friendly to civilization and feeding in flower beds, on yard ornamentals and plants carefully planted and nurtured by human hands. Though many of these have been eaten into the ground and there's no longer food to be found there, still the deer make their nightly rounds as though they might find new plants to destroy. Were they to spend their time in the pasture, they would doubtless find more to eat. People are just this much creatures of habit. Many things done as a matter of necessity become a habit and when the necessity is no longer there, the habit continues. Many times the habit has used up its usefulness and no longer is profit to be gained from it, but it is difficult to break the habit. The deer is guided simply by his instinct, but man has the ability to think and Want to shake up some of your teachers? Just whisper the word "deadline" or "UIL" to Mrs. Young, Mr. Lugo, Mr. Lester, or Ms. Howard. Guaranteed they will go ten feet in the air. Mr. Lugo and the fighting Tiger band journeyed today to Fredericksburg for the U.I.L. concert and sight reading contest. The second yearbook shipment is due Monday and Mrs. Young and Ms. Howard are cracking whips to meet that deadline. Saturday, April 3, the BHS Drama Society will go to Uvalde for U.I.L. one-act play competition. So, all in all, it would be well to whisper softly this next week.

Tomorrow, several BHS students will get a good introduction to culture when they go to San Antonio for a special student performance of Richard Wagner's "The Flying Dutchman." Students going include the following: Cathy Wills, Julian Soliz, Kim Baxter, Mario Longoria, Tiger Sheedy,, Fidencio Penales, Venita Gum, Walter Pierce, Tino Gomez, Martha Howard, Kimberly Trant, and Brenda Alston. They will be accompanied by Mr. Leo Lugo, Mrs. Sharon Trant, Ms. Howard, and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lester.

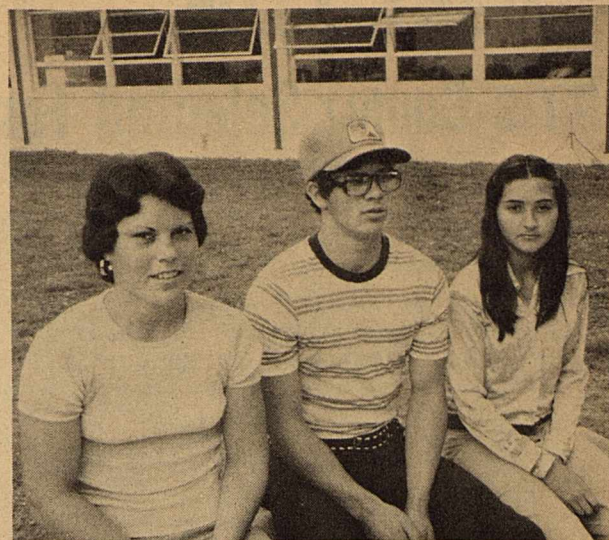

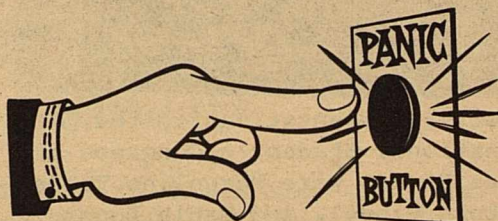

The new outdoor classroom is moving right along, under the direction of Mr. Lee Schermerhorn. Dirt for the flowerbeds was delivered last week. The sophomore biology class is working very hard to get things ready for the project. Any interested person is invited to donate time, money and/or materials for the project.

Several BHS athletes placed high in the Cotulla track meet last Saturday. John Jones placed first in the 330 intermediate hurdles and second in the 120 high hurdles. Maxine Meyer placed 1st for the ladies in the 440 yard dash and Traci Roselle got 2nd place in the shot put. A 2nd place in the mile relay went to the BHS team consisting of Monica Benites, Betty Meyer, Martha Pena, and Maxine Meyer. The boys are in Del Rio this weekend and the girls traveled to Jurgenton.

The junior class is working very hard on preparations for the Junior-Senior prom to be held April 24. Junior class president Bill Pratt is being very close-mouthed but assures all that it will be a night to remember.

In many cases, government purchasing practices that are intended to save money for taxpayers wind up costing them more. Sometimes, a lot more.
 The practice of buying equipment and supplies from the lowest bidder, for example, has been long-established in government as the most effective way to eliminate favoritism and make sure taxpayers are getting the most out of their money.
 But government bidding procedures lag behind modern business and management techniques. Too often, only the initial purchase price is taken into account with no consideration given to operating costs or maintenance. But operating costs—especially in a time of energy shortage—can add substantially to the price of equipment purchased by government.
 For example, the General Services Administration recently compared prices on two different air-conditioners. One of them cost $16 less than the other. But that would have been a false economy since the cheaper model cost $64 more to operate over a 7-year period.
 And, when buying for the Federal government—as the General Services Administration does—these dollar differences add up quickly.

As a result of its comparisons, the GSA decided to buy more expensive air conditioners. 27,000 of them. And it figures to save $400,000 in the bargain.
 Unfortunately, many government agencies still consider only the initial purchase price when calling for bids, with no thought given to the costs of operation.
 This approach has long been considered sound business procedure, and it's time government made more use of it. Even with limited use in government this practice is paying rich dividends to taxpayers.
 In one case, the GSA is buying some 8,000 hot water heaters that use 11 percent less energy than earlier models. They cost a bit more, but over the long-run they'll save an estimated $300,000.
 Another example is the recent purchase of 26,000 electric and gas ranges. They use energy much more efficiently than older models the government used to buy. During their lifetimes, these ranges will save $780,000.
 Considering operating and maintenance costs along with the initial purchase price is hardly a new idea to businessmen who have to keep a close eye on the balance sheet. But it has been used far too little by the Federal government.
