A Time to ponder!

BY: GEORGE

WOW!!! 29 Candidates are running for office in the upcoming democratic primary for county offices. In most counties this would not seem like an astronomical number, but in 1976 there were just a little over 1100 registered voters in Kinney County.

AND JUST A PORTION OF THE OFFICES ARE UP FOR ELECTION IN THIS PRIMARY. Figure out the percentage of candidates to voters. It is high time that our community show interest in how our community is run and show sincere concern to what is and isn't going to happen.

I am glad to see this many people interested in our political affairs, after all, they say Hitler was put into office by less than 10% of the population. Of course, this could not happen here, Germany just had a one party system. Now before any of you get up set I am in no way inferring that Kinney County is like Nazi Germany was....Lo and Behold....I wouldn't even compare it to Duval County !!! After all, we are all just good loyal, red-blooded Americans.

Some other things are beginning to concern me though...the other day a very nice lady in our community said: "We are going to get a new library building and it won't cost us anything!" IT DOESN'T TAKE A MENTAL GIANT TO FIGURE THAT 1000 tax paying families are going to have to kick in $100 a piece to pay for this in the long run.

I have another suggestion for whoever wins in our next election Take our brand new jail that won't meet standards,,, and instead of trying to figure out how to get a federal grant to fix the "goof-ups"..sell it to the Hilton Hotel group. Just think of the prestige if we had a DOWNTOWN BRACKETTVILLE HILTON. The county would have money in the bank and it wouldn't cost us more money. Think of the tax income that could be derived.

Well heck, I got off the subject of elections...there are a lot of well meaning people involved in this thing.. I just hope...that everyone will exercise their American right..

THEIR AMERICAN DUTY TO OUR SERVICEMEN WHO GAVE THEIR LIVES SO WE MAY VOTE!

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

AUSTIN-----State Treasurer Warren G. Harding Wednesday said in inter-agency task force is working to pinpoint the state's cash needs in an effort to allow Texas to earn additional dollars from investment income.

The joint effort of the Treasury Department and the Comptroller of Public Accounts was created by Harding to focus on a cash flow forecasting system. The task force had an organizational meeting on February 1.

Such a system, Harding said, will give the state an estimate--hopefully on a day-to-day basis--on receipts and expenditures of state funds.

"By having a sophisticated forecast of out obligations on a continual basis, we will be in a better position to invest tax dollars in accounts that can earn interest for the state," he said.

Harding said about 88 percent of state revenue is currently invested in interest-bearing accounts and that these funds netted Texas some $29 million during the last three months of 1977.

"Interest income from Texas tax dollars may exceed $120 million over the next year," he said.

The money management task force will review state spending on an agency-by-agency basis for expenditure trends and compare this with revenue estimates to determine the percentages of state funds which need to be readily accessible from day to day in demand deposit accounts.

Unobligated funds can be invested to gain even greater interests income Harding said, and this move will strengthen the government's fiscal policies.

By using modern techniques of accounting and money management the state can get the maximum return on revenue income.

The task force is headed up by Morris Stevens, chief clerk of the Treasury Department, working in coordination with Ralph Wayne, Deputy Comptroller, and assisted by Scott Garrison, an assistant attorney general assigned to the Treasury.

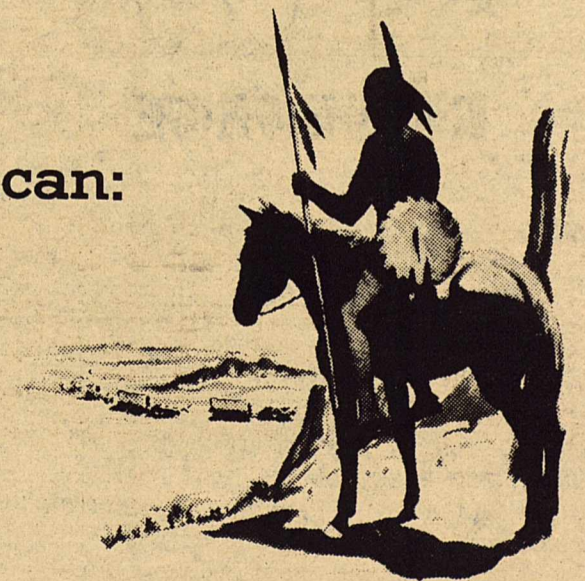

Their efforts are being augmented by staff and personnel from both the Treasury Department and the Comptroller office.

Between Us JOE TOWNSEND

Observing wild life is a fascinating and rewarding pastime. One thing that is quiet noticeable is that animals and birds all seem to know their limitations. They seem to be content to move within their natural limits. A deer may hang a back leg in a fence but it isn't because he couldn't and didn't clear the fence--he just dragged the leg a little to low. A humming bird never tires to set his wings and sail like a buzzard, a javelina never tries to climb a tree like a cat. Each animal moves within his own sphere of limitations and uses it to the fullest. How much mankind can learn in this realm. One of the saddest human specimen I know is one in a position above his capabilities. It is always pathetic to see a boy trying to do a mans job. And yet we often see people totally incapable of doing a job aspiring to and sometimes attaining that job. This leads to frustration of the individual and a miserable failure in the job. Many people may suffer in many ways as a result and all because some person refused to recognize his limitations. I sat drinking coffee in a cafe one morning when in walked a man wearing new "cowboy" boots, new jeans, new western style shirt and new "cowboy" hat. He came to our table and asked if we knew only ranchers. I told him I knew a few. He wanted to know where they lived. He wanted a job as a cowboy. All his life he'd wanted to be a cowboy and now he was ready to go to work. Could he ride a horse? No. Could he build a fence? He never had. Could he herd cattle or sheep? That shouldn't be too hard he'd watched them do it in the movies. Needless to say he never did get a job as a cowboy. But he still swaggers in his cowboy boots, hat, shirt and jeans. Not qualified to do what his childish fancies dreamed of to this day he has never proved himself a man by getting a job he could do and holding on to it. The tragedies of so many political offices is we elect people who are totally incapable of good performances. We'd all do better to recognize our limitations and move within them to our fullest capabilities.

The Native American:

The native American tribespeople, the "Indians" who were living here long before the first European settlers arrived, stand today as a proud symbol of strength, never forgetting their love for this land. We must not forget their contributions to this great nation

TIPS FOR GREEN THUMBS

by: JOE TOWNSEND

Have you watered your trees lately? They certainly do need to be watered. The ground is completely dry to a considerable depth. Trees are readying themselves to begin to awaken and put on their summer foliage. To assure their good start and a fine growing season they should be well watered now. It's easy to think that because the trees are dormant they need no water. This is a sad mistake. If the trees get too dry while dormant they can sustain considerable loss and have a very poor season. It's past time to wait for rain. Set water flow at a low rate and water long enough for the soil to be well soaked to the drip line of the trees and at a considerable depth.

DRIZZLES TEASES SOUTHWESTERN TEXAS:
 MOISTURE GROWING MORE CRITICAL

UVALDE--Southwest Texas Farmers continued land preparation for spring crops last week amid drizzle, but Mother Nature continues to deny general rainfall for the region.

Drizzle occurred over most of the region during the week but no areas were able to report more than light rainfall.

Land preparation was in full swing, especially in southernmost counties where land is being readied for corn and grain sorghum.

In LaSalle County, potato planting has begun. Sutton County reports that only irrigated small grains have escaped the results of dry, cold conditions.

Cattle remain in poor to fair condition with supplemental feeding remaining essential.

Q. Why is CPL building those costly new plants?

A. It is the only way we can assure you of continued reliable service.

Because of restrictions placed on the use of natural gas, Central Power and Light Company must turn to other fuels for production of electricity.

The Texas Railroad Commission ruled nearly three years ago that deliveries of natural gas used for making electricity must be curtailed—10 percent by 1981, and 25 percent by 1985. Also, the Public Utilities Commission of Texas has said it will not approve construction of any new gas-fired electric generating plants.

To insure that our customers would continue to have a reliable supply of power, we started making plans more than seven years ago for the switch to other fuels. By the mid-1980's about 40 percent of our electricity will come from coal-fired and nuclear plants.

Coleto Creek Power Station, our first coal-fired unit, is under construction and will begin supplying power by late 1979. CPL also has a 25.2 percent share in the South Texas Project, a nuclear plant being built in Matagorda County. The first unit will go into operation by late 1980, the second in 1982.

Because they are more complex, nuclear and coal-fired plants are more expensive to build than gas-fired units—and inflation continues to drive costs higher and higher. Rigorous environmental protection and safety systems add to the cost of these plants. Transporting huge quantities of coal over long distances is still another expense.

Inevitably, power production will cost more in the future than it has in former years. We must, however, build the new plants; we have no choice if we are to maintain a supply of power that will be available to you whenever you need it.

Present Day
Myths

by: JOE TOWNSEND

If a politician dies his wife is capable of taking his place. Current history is replete with cases where the politician's widow was appointed to fill his term. In many cases she has been simply a housewife, never deeply or actively involved in the responsibilities her husband had. However, on an emotional binge for political reasons she is appointed to immediately assume the load her husband was elected to carry. No thought is given to her qualifications, her experience, her capability. She is simply shoved into the job to draw the salary, carry the prestige (now this is a questionable nature) and claims the honor. With no more conscientious thought than this manifests it is small wonder that government has come in many instances to be irresponsible. Such an irresponsible action is only symptomatic of a deep integrity gap. As disturbing as the thought is, little consideration is shown for basic and fundamental consideration of needed qualifications where politics is involved. Emotions have their place, consideration of widows is a necessity, but common sense and integrity are essential elements of a successful government.

CMI continued from page 3 has sold over 225,000 copies in its first week and one half of release since January 18, will be touring together during the month of February. At the present time dates are set in Huntington, West Virginia; Greensboro North Carolina; Roan, Virginia; Richmond, Virginia; Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; Little Rock Arkansas; and a benefit show for the Kenny Rogers Muscular Dystrophy Center in Sykeston, Missouri; which will evolve into an annual event with this being its second year. The tour is promoted by C.K. Spurllock, and Keith Fowler of Country Shindig Promotions. Dottie and Kenny will also be appearing together on the Tonight Show and the Midnight Special in the near future.

BEN FRANKLIN

Ben Franklin was born in Boston Massachusetts, January 6, 1706. He was known as the cleverest person in America. He wrote many books. His best selection was POOR RICHARD'S ALAMANAC which became a large part of American Social Tradition.

During the American Revolution he helped draft and sign the Declaration of Independence and he wrote the Albany plan for uniting the colonies. Ben Franklin was not only a writer but an inventor too. He designed the Franklin store, lightning rod and proved that lightning is electricity. He also established a small library in Philadelphia where he put his writings. Benjamin Franklin died on April 17, 1790. We are lucky to have had a man like Ben Franklin, because he worked for our country.

BENTSEN BACKS FARM SUPPORT BILL CO-SPONSORS MEASURE INTRODUCED BY DOLE

WASHINGTON, D.C.--Senator Lloyd Bentsen on Monday agreed to co-sponsor legislation, proposed by Senate Agriculture Committee Member Robert Dole (R-Kansas), that would provide higher target price incentives to farmers who reduce their production.

"Over the past 3 years I have met with numerous farmers, ranchers and business men from agricultural areas of Texas. These discussions have borne out what many of my colleagues have become increasingly aware of in recent years: the American farmer is caught in the worst cost-price squeeze in modern times," Bentsen said in Senate remarks.

"Last year farmers in Texas has high crop yields. This efficiency should have been rewarded with good profits. Instead, the low prices they received for their products, coupled with tremendous cost increases pushed them further into debt. Their projections for this year's crop, based on the 1977 Farm Bill, once again show not only no profit but greater losses than last year."

"As a last resort, the farmer and rancher have turned to their elected representatives in the Congress for help."

The bill Bentsen is co-sponsoring would increase target price incentives up to parity levels for an individual farmer, depending on how much of his land is held out for production.

The Proposed target prices for wheat, for example, would start at $3 a bushel for a farmer who sets aside 20% of his land and range up to $5.04 a bushel for a 50% set-aside.

The target price for corn would range from $2.10 a bushel for a 10% set aside to $3.45 for a 50% set-aside, and the target for Upland cotton would go from $.54 a pound for a 20% set-aside to $.84 a pound for a 50% set-aside.

"I am convinced that many of the farmers, ranchers, and businessmen I have visited with in recent days will not be in business next year unless the government responds to their needs," Bentsen said.

They are in deep trouble and out country will also be in deep trouble if something isn't done."

"This legislation gives the farmer the flexibility he needs, while at the same time bringing production down to a level closer to current demand. An approach of this type allows the producer to make his own determination as to the risk he is willing to take," Bentsen said.

Watching Senator Washington Lloyd Bentsen

One billion dollars is such a large amount of money that it is hard to fully comprehend just how much it is.

If you had $1 million, for example, and spent it at the rate of $1 every second, it would all be gone in 12 days.

One billion dollars at that rate, though, would last for approximately 32 years.

And if you had $65 billion, and had started spending it in the year one A.D. you would still be spending it today. It wouldn't run out for 103 more years.

Given that perspective, $65 billion is quite a price tag, but a new study concludes that federal regulation of business cost that much and more in only one year, 1976.

In my role as Chairman of the Joint Economic Subcommittee on Economic Growth I will preside over hearings early this year to explore the high cost of government regulation. I want to know how many jobs it has denied American workers and how far it has helped to drive up prices.

Sixty-five billion dollars—$300 for every man, woman and child in the United States—is a terrible price for our economy to pay for government regulation.

And when you examine the horror stories of individual Americans who confront the giant federal bureaucracy it becomes even more terrible.

An elderly couple in Arizona, proprietors of a "mom and pop" auto business, testified before the Federal Paperwork Commission that they spend an average of 15 hours every week preparing federal reports.

An Army veteran made a 130-mile round trip to complete paperwork at a Veterans' Administration office, only to be told a few months later that he had to make the trip again to provide the same information for a different program.

The owner of a machine shop in Iowa was unable to complete the Census Bureau's massive MA-200 report on pollution abatement expenditures without changing his entire accounting system. He filled out the reports as best he could and offered to let the Bureau examine his books. The Bureau replied with a threat to take punitive action if its specifications were not met in full.

The recent study I am concerned about, titled "Public and Private Expenditures for Federal Regulation of Business," was conducted at Washington University in St. Louis.

It concludes that during 1976 it cost taxpayers $3 billion to support federal regulatory agencies and it cost businesses and industries over $62 billion to comply with the regulations issued by these agencies.

One of the witnesses I intend to call for the hearings is economist Murray Weidenbaum, the man in charge of the Washington University study.

The galloping growth of federal regulation is the source of serious economic problems for this country.

According to recent studies, for example, the costs of regulatory delay add more than $18,000 to the price of a new home that would otherwise sell for $30,000. In some areas, delay caused by local, state and federal regulations in home-building now averages 3½ years between submission of plans and groundbreaking.

A Harris poll indicates that 34 percent of all Americans do not possess the reading and comprehension skills necessary to complete a Medicaid application.

There are more than 5,000 different kinds of federal forms distributed to the public. More than 10 forms are filled out each year for every man, woman and child in the country.

Congress adds to the problem every year by writing sweeping laws which give broad lawmaking authority to regulation-writing bureaucrats.

I want to carefully examine this whole problem area, find out where we stand now, where we'll be 10 years from now if something isn't done and what it's going to take to call a halt to this alarming tendency toward government by regulatory decree.

No one regulates the regulators. It is time they were called to account.
