CITY WINS

CITY OF BRACKETTVILLE FLOAT AWARDED ROCKSPRINGS CENTENNIAL PARADE GRAND TROPHY

The City of Brackettville with 100% participation of the City Staff proceeded to Rocksprings Saturday to help the residents and guests of that fair City celebrate their centennial. The City Staff is proud to announce they won not only the first place trophy for floats but they were also awarded the Grand Trophy for the best parade entry.

Departing Brackettville at 6:30 Saturday morning the "caravan" arrived in Rocksprings at 8:40 and proceeded to put the float together. Judging commenced at 9:30 and at 10 o'clock Frank, Ginger, Josie, Rose Mary, David, Juan, Larry, Blue, Manuel and Hector moved smartly to the beat of the music representing Brackettville with honor and dignity.

The City Manager and his wife with Bruce and Dorothy Clements rode their Tennessee Walkers as representatives of Fort Clark Springs and Brackettville.

The Parade culminated at the Fair Grounds and was followed by many assorted booths for nourishment, sightseeing and late mother's day gifts. A fiddlers contest, fashion show, Mariachi Band, evening dance, helicopter rides were but part of the activities enjoyed by all.

MOSQUITO PROGRAM

The City of Brackettville will commence its annual mosquito Spray Program on Tuesday, May 17 with planned spraying everyother Tuesday throughout summer infestation period.

We take this opportunity to remind all residents that we will be spraying with Malathion ULV and not using a diesel base - you will not necessarily see a heavy fog mist emitting from sprayer. This type of sprayer covers a much wider area with more concentration of lethal spray than "old fashioned systems."

Please tell children and others not to play around or follow truck as spray in large doses could be injurious to their health.

Juan Cardenas, the operator in charge will provide all protection feasible and your continued cooperation is appreciated.

PET VACCINATION DAY

The City of Brackettville will be conducting its Annual Pet Vaccination Day at the Fire Station, City Hall from 8A.M. to 12 noon Saturday, May 14, 1983.

State requirements direct all cats and dogs be vaccinated annually commencing prior to their fourth month of age. Dr. Zack Davis will conduct the program and vaccinate the pets for a fee of five dollars ($5.00) for the convenience of all County residents. Your participation is encouraged and welcome.

MEDICAL NEWS

That endless search for an easy way to lose weight is still on. A substance currently being promoted heavily as a weight-loss wonder is spirulina.

The Texas Medical Association says, however, that the only lasting way to lose weight is to exercise regularly and to cut back on calories.

Many health food stores sell spirulina as a food or food supplement in the form of a dark green powder or pill. Spirulina is one of about 1,500 known species of blue-green algae that grow in brackish ponds and lakes in mild and hot climates throughout the world.

Pure Spirulina is a source of protein and contains a number of vitamins and minerals. But in the amounts normally consumed when taken according to label directions, the nutrients derived are insignificant. As a food, spirulina can me marketed legally as long as it is labeled accuragely and contains no contaminated substances.

Claims have been made that phenylalanine, an amino acid found in spirulina and most other protein sources, acts on the brain's appetite center to switch off hunger pangs. But a Food and Drug Administration panel reviewing phenylalanine in 1979 found no reliable scientific evidence to prove it is safe and effective as an appetite suppressant.

The FDA Says some nutritionists fear that consuming large amounts of spirulina might have an effect similar to that of liquid-protein diets. For some dieters, this meant heart problems and even death.

The FDA noted that because algae are single-celled organisms, they are rich in nucleic acids. These provide not only much protein but also large amounts of uric acid, which could result in kidney stones, or gout.

TEXAS PREVAILING WAGE

Texas' Prevailing Wage Law is a bad law. Passed during the Depression it was intended to preserve local wage structures and protect local jobs. Unfortunately, its intended effects are quite different from its actual effects.

The Law requires that, in calling for bids and awarding public works contracts, Texas' state and local governments determine the "prevailing wage" in relevant locality, specify the prevailing wage in bids and contract awards, and monitor and enforce the payment of the prevailing wage.

Because no statutory guidelines are provided, awarding agencies exercise considerable discretion in determining the prevailing wage. In many cases prevailing wages are neither adequately nor accurately determined.

Indeed, union wage rates are frequently used as proxies for the prevailing wage -- even though these rates are generally the highest rates to be found in a locality.

Predictable, "Prevailing wages" are generally set above the market clearing wage. The effects on workers -- particularly minority and unskilled job seekers -- and on taxpayers are unambiguously bad.

A higher-than-market-clearing "prevailing wage" means that employment is lower than it otherwise would be, that fewer construction projects are undertaken, and that contractors must both limit the number of unskilled positions and cut back on apprenticeship and on-the-job training opportunities.

Moreover, because small and medium construction firms typically employ helpers to assist journeymen on their nongovernment projects they are generally frozen out of the public works bidding process. Put simply, while they cannot readily change their modes of operation they cannot pay helpers and unskilled workers the inflated "prevailing wage."

The result is a decline in the number of competitive bids, higher-than-necessary bids, higher-than-necessary construction costs, and inefficient use of tax dollars. All of this at a time when

Texas' fiscal situation is worsening, and the need for infrastructure investment is greater than ever!

Texas' Prevailing Wage Law is a well-intentioned but unambiguously bad law that is anti-competitive, discriminatory, and wasteful of scarce resources. It has not been repealed because the costs of the law are borne by many, while the benefits accrue to a few vocal special interest groups.

Individual workers do not benefit, minorities and unskilled workers do not benefit, and taxpayers do not benefit. The only gainers are the unions whose inflated wage scales and inefficient work rules are subsidized, and large contractors who are insulated from competition.

Good public policy is not a zero sum game. Special interests do stand to lose if Texas' Prevailing Wage Law is repealed. But their losses will pale in comparison to worker, minority and taxpayer gains.

WHY JUNK?

The origin of the Arabian horse remains a zoological mystery. Experts can't agree on its origins. Some historians argue that its ancestry traces to the wild horses in northern Syria, southern Turkey or the southwestern area of Arabia. We do know that by 1500 B.C., people of the East had developed mastery over the hot blooded horses that were the forerunners of the breed that has come to be known as Arabian.

Historic artifacts dating back to the 16th Century B.C. testify to the high honor paid to the Arabian horse. Its image appears on seals, rings, and various monuments. Egyptian hieroglyphics proclaimed its value and writings in the Old Testament are filled with references to the might and strength of the horse.

Today, there are more than 270,000 purebred Arabian horses registered in the U.S., more than in all the other countries of the world combined.

For free information on this proud and versatile breed, or for a list of breeders, write to the International Arabian Horse Association, 224 East Olive Avenue, Dept. P, Burbank, CA 91503.

SUL ROSS UNIV.

Sul Ross State University is offering two graduate level courses on teaching economics with emphasis on the free enterprise system in Texas public schools June 20 - July 22.

According to William L. Beaty, assistant professor of business and director of the Free Enterprise Institute, participants in the program will be eligible to have their university housing, books, tuition and non-refundable fees for these courses provided free through the sponsorship of the Texas Bureau for Economic Understanding.

Teachers who must rent non-university housing or commute from outside Alpine may be eligible for a stipend to offset these expenses. A $25 non-refundable enrollment is required upon application and will constitute the entire cost of these courses.

The two courses are Economics 5302--Seminar in Economic Affairs: Free Enterprise; and Economics 5304--Research and readings in Economics: Free Enterprise.

The 5302 course examines basic economic theory and studies the benefits and controversies surrounding the free enterprise system in the United States and other western nations. Economics 5304 traces the economic development of the American free enterprise system from the time of colonization to the present.

Workshops are also planned to aid school teachers in designing lesson plans for teaching economics with emphasis on the free enterprise system.

For more information on the course offering, contact Beaty at the Sul Ross campus or call 915-837-8071.

HEALTH TIPS

Carrying Medical Information Aids Victim During Emergency
When the ambulance arrives, you may not be conscious. Even if you are, you may not be able to communicate with emergency personnel.

They must act rapidly and without error. Knowing your medical background would help them enormously, but you are unable to provide it. They do the best they can without it.

This scene is replayed each year for an estimated 1 million Americans, according to the National Safety Council. The victims are either unconscious or unable to provide the important medical information at the scene.

The Texas Medical Association says this breakdown in communication can be critical. It also can be avoided by carrying a wallet card or wearing special jewelry that provided emergency personnel with the information.

The 21,500 member TMA has officially endorsed "The use of appropriate individual medical information cards" in case of accident or illness.

The cards can provide personal identification, medical data, information on electrocardiograms, and a signature authorizing treatment and surgery. This helps ensure the best, quickest treatment possible.

Check with your doctor, pharmacist or local medical society for information on where to obtain medical cards or bracelets.

A surgeon is so called from the Greek words meaning "one who works with his hands."

PERSONAL COMPUTERS

Computers. Microcomputers. Personal Computers. That's about all we hear about these days. How computers will do this and that for our business and home.

But what are the hard, cold facts about microcomputers? Should every agricultural producer in South Texas buy one? Do they really need one? Will microcomputers save time and make crucial business decisions?

These questions and many others will be answered during an uncoming seminar, "Microcomputers for the Farm and Ranch Family," which will help agricultural families determine if computer gadgetry is necessary for them and what types of hardware and software programs are available.

The seminar is May 24 - 25 at the Airport Holiday Inn, 77 N.E. Loop 410 in San Antonio. It comes on the heels of a similar clinic held in Austin which attracted an overflow crowd of participants including many couples who were interested in computer use for the home as well as the farm and ranch.

Included in the major topics for discussion are Microcomputer Applications for Farm and Ranch, Computer Hardware and Software-- A Description of Features and Their Purposes, Tips on Selecting a Microcomputer, and Texas A&M's Role in Computer Software Development.

Advanced sessions include discussions in Operating Systems Commands and Features plus Introduction to BASIC Programming Modules.

Participants can select from Four of six concurrent sessions featuring Accounting Systems, Electronic Spreadsheets, Home and Family Resource Management, Crop and Livestock Management Decision Aids, Farm and Ranch Financial Management, and Marketing and Policy Decision Aids.

Sixteen Computer specialists from Texas A&M and it's agencies, Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Texas Agricultural Experiment Station will lead discussions in the Various sessions. Commercial computer exhibits will provide participants acutal "hands on" experience in working with different hardware.

A nominal registration fee covers two meals, three refreshment breaks and a notebook containing microcomputer educational information.

Registration forms are available from your county Extension agent or by contacting Joe Pena, Extension management economist at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center in Uvalde (512-278-9151).

Texas Oil & Gas . . .

Additional State Taxes Will Hurt Ailing Industry

By Avery Rush, Jr., Chairman, Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association

The Texas petroleum industry has been the greatest entity underwriting the cost of government and its services to the people of Texas through tax payments to governments at all levels, which include the state, cities, counties, and school districts. Today, the level of support — with one-year payments in excess of $4.7-billion — remains unparalleled. So does the need for it.

In Fiscal Year 1982, the industry paid $2.5-billion to the state in severance, franchise, and regulatory taxes; 28-percent of all state tax collections. In Calendar Year 1981, the industry supported local governments with $1.2-billion in property tax payments. This support of cities, counties, and school districts accounted for one-quarter of such collections statewide. Now, Bob Bullock, the state's comptroller, has released a report showing that 30-percent of Texas' sales tax collections — more than $1-billion — is linked directly or indirectly to the various parts of the petroleum industry. Direct payments account for $372-million, with indirect effects adding another $654-million.

These figures underscore the importance of the role of Texas' petroleum industry in the state's overall economic wellbeing. When the petroleum industry is healthy, the economy of Texas is healthy.

Unfortunately, the Texas petroleum industry has not escaped the effects of a general downturn in business activity throughout the industrialized world. As a result, it now flounders in a part of its business cycle characterized by more crude oil than the marketplace will accommodate, with accompanying lower prices and a resulting lack of enthusiasm by investors. These factors, combined with uncertainty over what the Congress will do about decontrolling natural gas prices and what OPEC plans for production levels and prices, have prompted a lessening of industry activity in Texas and elsewhere.

For example, rotary drilling rigs actually making hole in Texas during the first part of April totalled 704. This is down from 1,119 so engaged one year ago and 1,221 at the same time in 1981.

Despite these disquieting figures, oil men — efficient, experienced, dedicated oil men — remain committed and optimistic that the industry will recover. After all, you have to be a supreme optimist to be in this business in the first place.

That said, however, the fact remains that the petroleum industry could use help and understanding from the people of Texas. The one thing this industry does not need at this juncture is to have what little investment capital is available to finance exploration siphoned off through additional state taxes.

THE MARX BROTHERS

The Marx Brothers had a screen sister, Margaret Dumont, who provided the romantic interest for Groucho in a multitude of films. Her first appearance with the Marx Brothers in the stage version of "The Cocoanuts" typified their future life together.

Standing in the wings, waiting for her cue to go on stage, Miss Dumont realized that the brothers had long abandoned the script and were improvising with wild abandon. Hesitantly, she waited in the wings until Chico and Harpo caught sight of her and immediately ran off stage in the opposite direction. Groucho clearly hadn't a clue as to what he was supposed to say, but turned to Miss Dumont and said, "Ah, Mrs. Rittenhouse! Won't you--lie down?"

Groucho's trademark (along with the walk, the cigar and the eyebrows) was his penchant for larger-than-life ladies, and after that first hilarious encounter, they were almost always in the form of Margaret Dumont.

"There ought to be a statue erected," someone once wrote, "or a Congressional Medal awarded, or a national holiday proclaimed, to honor that great woman, Margaret Dumont--a lady of epic ability to take it, a lady whose mighty love for Groucho is a saga of devotion, a lady who asks but little and gets it.

Surrounded by brothers who are surely a little odd, she does not think so. To her, her world of Marx Brother pictures is rational, comprehensible, secure. Calmly she surveys it, with infinite resource she fights to keep on her feet in it."

To say that the brothers were "surely a little odd" was the understatement of the century. To the absolute despair of their scriptwriters, directors and fellow actors, the brothers were incapable of sticking to a script. Maybe no one can fully understand the amazing chemistry that existed between them or unravel the brilliance of their career together.

Each brother had a very definite personality which followed him through their series of films. Groucho, the most quoted of the bunch, was the one with the funniest lines. Harpo was the mime--an eloquent pantomimist with a curly blonde wig and an assortment of mechanical props (including a horn and a harp) and Chico, the sly "tootsie-footsie ice cream" vendor, quick to point out the faults in others but never admitting his own. Another brother, Zeppo, played a straight man in their earlier films.

Even their real life could be classified "Marxian." Their father was an unsuccessful tailor nicknamed 'Misfit' and they were dubbed their stage names in a poker game. Chico (Leonard) the oldest, was born in 1891, Harpo (Adolph) in 1893, Groucho (Julius) in 1895 and Zeppo (Herbert) in 1910. Gummo (born Milton) was a fifth brother who did not make movies with them.

Their career spanned vaudeville and cinema, being rescued by Irving Thalberg at MGM when their movie career seemed to be dimming. His early death had a bad effect on their careers from which they did not really recover. Their last movie appearance together was in 1949 in "Love Happy." Separate movie roles kept them in the public eye, though, and Groucho's successful transition to television ensured his continuing popularity.

Chico died in 1961, Harpo in 1964, and Groucho in 1977. At Six Flags Stars Hall of Fame, in Orlando, Florida, however, their zany humor lives on the set of "Animal Crackers," the successful 1930 film version of their first vaudeville hits.

Keep Those Cards and Letters Coming

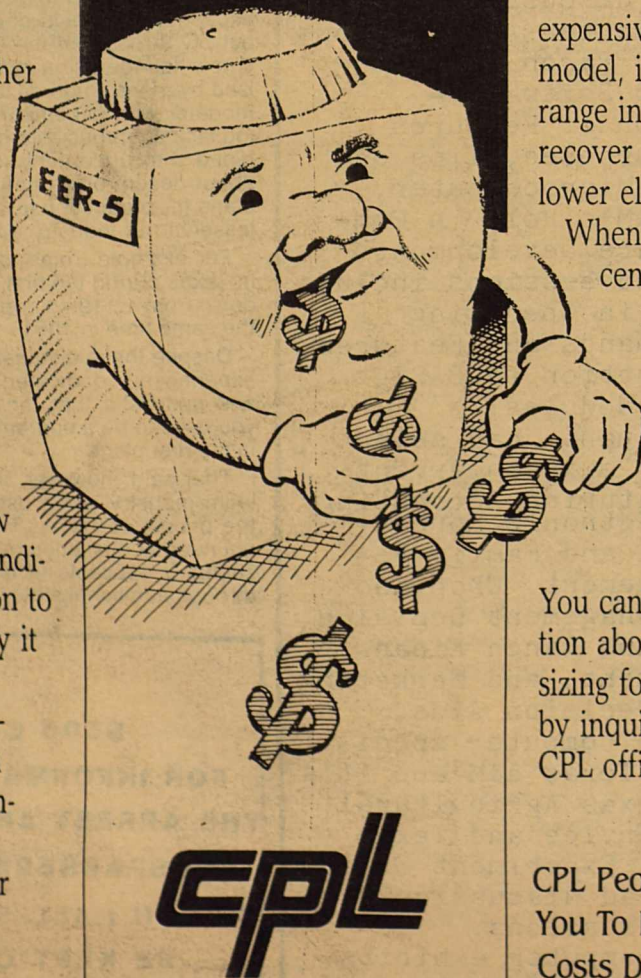

Senator Tower was a bit overwhelmed by more than 250,000 cards and letters urging repeal of legislation which would require income tax withholding on interest and dividends, but he wants to reassure all of his friends in Texas that he is working to see the measure removed from the books.

Save money on electricity with an EER/SEER air conditioner of 8 or more

Time to buy new air conditioning? Whether you're shopping for a window unit or a central system, you can save money on operating costs if you choose a model with an Energy Efficiency Ratio (EER or SEER) of 8 or above.

EER and SEER are ratings that indicate how much cooling the air conditioner delivers in relation to the amount of electricity it uses. Because it is engineered to run more efficiently, a system with a high EER/SEER will consume less energy, thus helping you reduce your electric bills.

Although a high efficiency unit may be more expensive than a standard model, it is a better long-range investment. You will recover the extra cost in lower electric bills.

When you're selecting central air conditioning, it also is important to make sure the unit's cooling capacity--measured in BTU's--is right for your house.

You can get more information about the correct BTU sizing for your new home by inquiring at your CPL office.

News Indicates U.S. In Recovery Cycle

The recession which has plagued our economy during the past two years began gradually. Recovery will come in the same fashion, but the economic news from the first quarter of 1983 shows that we are indeed well into the recovery cycle.

In the early stages of a recovery, businesses liquidate their inventories and then place new orders to rebuild their stocks. This causes industrial production to rise, which, in turn, means that laid-off workers begin to be rehired.

During the first quarter of 1983, the economy grew 4 percent, a much greater growth in gross national product than had been predicted.

Industrial production during the early part of the year rose three months in a row, following 16 months of decline. At the end of the first quarter, factories were operating at the highest capacity levels in five months. For example, the percentage of capacity for the steel industry alone rose by 20 percent from the fall to the spring.

Business inventories are continuing to decline, which means that even more industrial production can be expected in the spring and summer.

The economy is now ready to move into the next stage of recovery. Consumers are stepping up their purchases. This means that payrolls will increase as production levels rise in response to this new demand. When that happens, unemployment will drop.

However, we must not take continued recovery for granted. We must stay with the basic elements of the Administration's plan which have spurred this recovery. In short, we must not sabotage the recovery by instituting massive tax increases or letting domestic spending get out of control again.

CATTLEMEN'S ASSN..

U.S. Threatens to quarantine Texas cattle over Brucellosis
Texas Cattlemen are asking the state's consumers to join them in seeking passage of new state animal health laws to avert a threatened federal quarantine of the multibillion-dollar cattle industry, says Frates Seeligson, president of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

The warning, from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service Monday, concerns bovine brucellosis. The disease causes abortion or reduced calving rates, mastitis and an illness called undulant fever, which can be transmitted from infected cattle to man.

The quarantine would shut down almost all interstate movement and sales of beef and dairy cattle from the state. It would cover all cattle, including those not infected with the disease, Seeligson said.

James O. Lee, Jr., acting APHIS administrator, told the Texas Animal Health Commission that if the legislation isn't passed, the only viable option available to his department would be to "impose and enforce a quarantine of the state of Texas."

TAHC supports SB366 and HB 701, introduced by state Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, and state Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Godley, to make those changes in the brucellosis law.

"Today, Cattlemen in Texas face severe restrictions on movement of cattle out of state as a result of the inability to conform to the new federal regulations on bovine brucellosis. The cost of this curtailment, in times of drouth, could be as much as 80 to 130 million dollars per year to the industry," Seeligson, a San Antonio cattleman, said. "The new brucellosis law must be enacted if we are to avoid this economic impact. The quarantine and equally restrictive import regulations by other states can be avoided if the new bill is enacted this session. TSCRA strongly supports the passage of the new law."

The greatest negative impact will be on commercial cattle operators if the bill fails to pass, Seeligson emphasized. Texas exports about two million head of cattle and calves per year.

Under quarantine, all heifers and bulls over six months of age must come from a herd which has had two completely negative tests 120 days apart, the last test having been done within 30 days of movement. All certified free herds lose their status unless tested three times a year.

In times of drouth, as many as 3.5 million head of cattle per year move from Texas to grass outside the state. If cattle were denied access to such grass or other markets and were sold in Texas for slaughter at a 30 to 40 percent discount, the cost could be as much as 100 dollars per head or a loss of 50 to 100 million dollars per year, he said.

Registered cattle breeders, who supply pureblood seedstock to commercial and other registered cattle herds, export approximately 20,000 head of breeding cattle per year. A survey of registered operators showed that they believe they would suffer about a 25 percent discount on their stock if forced to sell only in Texas. This would impose a loss of about 5 million dollars per year.

The restricted movement of show cattle exhibited in the state's major livestock shows because of the quarantine would reduce or eliminate such shows as Houston, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Dallas and El Paso. The loss in state revenues would be many millions of dollars per year, Seeligson warned. With the quarantine, the two-compartment plan for Texas, where West Texas has greater freedom of cattle movement than East Texas with its higher rate of infection, would be lost.

All Texas cattle would have the same restrictions under the quarantine.

"The prospect of a federal quarantine or equivalent state curtailment of cattle movement poses an enormous burden for Texas Cattlemen and consumers, but this impact can be avoided completely if the new brucellosis legislation is enacted in the present session," Seeligson reiterated.
