CATHOLIC CHURCH FESTIVAL A SUCCESS

St. Mary Magdalene Catholic Church's Spring Festival held on May 3rd, 1987 was a fun day. I want to thank all the merchants who donated to our auction. Due to their help we had a very good return. I also wish to thank all the people who worked openly and behind the scenes. There are too many to name as I wouldn't want to miss anyone. Also, last but not least, thanks to all the folks who came out and supported us on Sunday, both physically and financially. The raffle was won by Elizabeth Aguirre-1st prize; Ralph Blahnik-2nd prize; and Lupe Morgan-3rd prize. Once again, thank you all very much.

BAND CONCERT

Brackett ISD Band Director Dan Potter has announced the date for the high school and fifth-sixth grade concert. It is scheduled for next Tuesday, May 12 at 7:30 in the school auditorium.....

In addition to a special high school band presentation of the selection, "Instant Concert" and five beginning band numbers by the fifth-sixth graders several special service awards will be presented. Next year's drum major, head twillers for junior and senior high schools, and new twillers will be presented during the program.

SPRING DANCE RECITAL

The Brackett High School auditorium was alive with music and the dancing of the Beverly School of Dance pupils last Friday night as they presented their spring recital. The recital, entitled "Let's Meet at the Park", featured thirty of our local youths and also several of Mrs. Beverly Matzig's older students from Del Rio. Mrs. Matzig and Mrs. Janice Foster directed from backstage.

A beautiful backdrop was painted by Monea Meck and Kathy Bader and will be used in the Del Rio recital also.

Five different age groups of our local youth danced. The youngest group consisted of three-year-olds Susannah Davis, Savannah Massingill, Tana Ricks, Sarah Padgett, and Amanda Ward. They were featured in two dances--a tap dance in which they were children in the park, and a ballet dance titled "Roses". The four and five-year-old girls were Laura Lee Ballew, Jamie Bader, Emily Boyd, Tiffany Molina, and Sunni Jones. They performed a "Daisies" ballet dance, and they were "Ballgame Cracker Jacks" in their tap number. The next group consisted of first and second girls including Jackie Moore, Samantha Perez, Melanie Koenig, Amy Bader, Marcy Martinez, Brandy Meeks, Lindy LaMascus, Jo Lee Jones, and Drudell Carroll. In their ballet number they were "Skaters" in the park, and in their tap dance they were "Sail Boat Sailors". The oldest group of girls were third through fifth grade. Karla Hall, Teresa Perez, Sammie Ricks, Sarah Kelley, Cynthia Martinez, and Katie Hall danced as "Musicians" in a ballet number and as "Joggers" in their tap dance segment. All of the girls were featured in a "Tiptoe Through The

"THE NITTY AND THE GRITTY"

BY JOE TOWNSEND

One of the most beautiful of the roses is the Sweetheart Rose. The delicacy of the rose in full bud color is truly an outstanding work of the art of Mother Nature. Perhaps even more is this true of the Miniature Rose. If one but carefully examines these roses he will see the true beauty of the rose.

I stood one day this week in the midst of a wide variety of wild flowers. The showy yellow daisy, the Indian Blanket, the Indian Paint brush and the brown eyed Susan were truly magnificent in their profusion and rich color. I noticed however a few dots of color close to the earth. I took a moment to examine these. Here, obscure and almost unseen were some truly beautiful miniatures. Some white, some yellow, some blue and some a beautiful purple. Each was superb in its delicacy. Each was as much a sample of the true mastery of Mother Nature as the larger more showy flowers.

This is so true to life. Every town has its showy and highly visible leaders. The town would be bereft without them. They are the ones who move things and lead in making the place a better place. There are, however, the lesser lights. There are the many whose names are never mentioned at banquets or newspaper stories, but who none the less are true and delicate contributors to the life of the locality. Were it not for these, the lights of the leaders would not shine so brightly. Were it not for these, there would be little support for the leaders and hence little could be accomplished. Much of the true beauty of life in any community is found in people upon whom the bright light of recognition never falls, but who never the less are just as an essential part of the life of the community. God bless the "Little" people.

HUMAN SERVICES AT RISK

The Texas Legislature is trying to put together a budget for the next two years. With the pressure on to be frugal, legislators are focusing on dollars rather than people. Economic times are hard but Texas is still able to meet the needs of its poor children and disabled and elderly citizens.

Among the programs hardest hit in both the House and Senate budgets is the Texas Department of Human Services Community Care for Aged and Disabled. This is a group of programs which allow older and disabled Texans to live in their own or their family's homes instead of having to live in institutions or nursing homes. The services provided by Community Care programs include things such as: assistance with bathing, dressing, and homemaking; provision of hot meals; and day activity programs. Currently DHS is only able to serve one fourth of those eligible for these services. There are 3,000 people on the waiting list. As these programs are cut and care givers are under greater strain, abuse is on the rise. Now there is a new kind of abuse elderly and disabled people must contend with: governmental abuse--cut back in funds and withdrawal of services.

Because of the way the Texas budget is designed, those who will pay most dearly for problems are low income older and disabled Texans receiving health and human services. Two thirds of the Texas budget is dedicated or promised for specific agencies through the state constitution or laws. The remaining third, called general revenue, is the only portion available to cut and is also the sole source of state funding for human services. In the past twelve years funding for health and human services has been reduced from twenty four percent to fourteen percent of the general revenue.

Unless the state increases its revenues too many people will be hurt. The individuals cut from these services will not be able to "hang on". Funding for human services must not be cut.

OLDER AMERICANS CAN CONTROL
HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

(AUSTIN) -- As we grow older, it is only natural that our heart and blood vessels age. Our bodies become more susceptible to heart attack, stroke, congestive heart failure and high blood pressure. Chances of having any of these health problems increase with age.

But older Americans can continue to reduce their chances of suffering from these cardiovascular diseases by having their blood pressure checked twice a year. If such checks reveal high blood pressure, the patient can still manage a normal, if not moderated, lifestyle.

High blood pressure, or hypertension, is common in persons over age 65, but it should not be considered normal. More than 54 million American adults today have high blood pressure - more than 40 percent in people 60 and over. Although most high blood pressure cannot be cured, it can usually be controlled and reduced.

"The first way to control high blood pressure is to be aware of it," says Addison A. Taylor, M.D., president of the American Heart Association, Texas Affiliate. "You may be in your older years and feel great, but you may still have high blood pressure if you haven't had it checked in the last year. The American Heart Association recommends that older Americans have their blood pressure checked at least once a year through visits to the doctor, clinic, or community screening program," Taylor added.

If a community screening or your own blood pressure measuring equipment reveals a reading of equal or greater than 140 over 90,

FIRE -ON-THE-MOUNTAIN
CLOGGERS TO PERFORM

Traditional as well as precision is presented during a typical FIRE-ON-THE-MOUNTAIN performance. Under the direction of Rusty and Linda Carolan, the team performs annually at the Texas Folk Life Festival, Night in Old San Antonio and other Fiesta events, Wursthfest, San Antonio Livestock Show and Rodeo, plus 125-130 other events each year. Exhibitions range from business conventions to church functions, from television appearances to bluegrass concerts, from private parties to county fairs and festivals and even the World's Fair. Bookings included an 8-day tour in Venezuela with performances in Caracas, Valencia and Maracaibo.

Bluegrass music is the focal point during each exhibition since history reflects that both the music and the dance have similar roots.

Audience participation affords spectators the opportunity to join in. The FIRE-ON-THE-MOUNTAIN Cloggers also offer beginner lessons several times a year.

An historical presentation on the background of clog dancing includes everything from Cherokee war whoops to Irish Step dancing to the English Lancaster clog. Fiddle music recorded by Linda Carolan's late grandfather adds authenticity to the Irish and buck dance sections of the story. Buck dancing, which is closely related to clogging in its origin, provides the audience with a taste of fancy footwork.

The combination of lively bluegrass music and intricate footwork by the FIRE-ON-THE-MOUNTAIN Cloggers results in a performance both thrilling and unusual to watch.

The FIRE-ON-THE-MOUNTAIN Cloggers will be at the Old Quarry at Fort Clark Springs on May 9, 1987 at 8:00 p.m. Admission is $3.00 for adults and $1.00 for students.

TRACKS ALONG THE
BY DORTHY PAYNE

In the old days it wasn't all hardship and work, they had plenty amusing things to do and "Jack was far from a dull boy."

There were rodeos, picnics, dances, snipe hunts and fairs. Fair Day, that was the day you could see all your friends, the rivalry for prizes was furious, but that was the fun of it.

The Fair and the rodeos didn't come very often but the baseball games did. Every Sunday in season, it was hitch up the horse, pack a lunch and off to the ballgame.

There were ballgames in my time too, but I was told of a particular game in the early 1900's that was a lulu. It was when an oil company from Tulsa played Dirtybutter.

The town of Dirtybutter is no more. It has long since been swallowed up by the spreading town of Tulsa. But in 1912 Dirtybutter was very much alive, and it had a ball team.

My parents had been married about a year and lived in an Oil Company camp at the edge of Tulsa. There were two pitchers on the Tulsa Oilers team. The foreman's brother was one pitcher and my father, who was a southpaw, was the other. In fact my father could pitch either right handed or left handed which was very confusing to the batter.

On this particular Sunday, the home team, (The Tulsa Oilers), were scheduled to play the Dirtybutter team at Dirtybutter, so everyone hitched up their teams and drove their buggies and wagons about five miles through the blackjack oaks to the ball field at Dirtybutter.

Tulsa was a bustling, growing oil town at the time, and they drove through the town to Dirtybutter on the other side. Dirtybutter was located where the Tulsa Airport is now.

The game was going good for the Oilers except the umpire wasn't calling the pitches to suit the catcher, so he called for a strike over the plate about shoulder high.

Meanwhile, the spectators in the stands were rooting for their respective teams. Everyone was sitting behind the backstop and feelings were running mighty high. The Oilers had won all their games so far, and Dirtybutter was hoping to upset their apple cart. The rooters were getting louder and louder and becoming more and more unruly. Finally the inevitable happened and the spectators in the stands went to fist city.

Snyder, a peace loving rooter for the Oilers, stood up and tried to stop the fight, "now boys, this is a foolish thing to do," but he didn't have a chance to finish what he was trying to say, because he suddenly disappeared beneath the seats.

The free for all became so out of hand the ball players stopped playing ball to watch the fight. The rooters fought on the stands, under the stands, and out on the edge of the playing field.

When they finally played out, the ball game went on and although the score has long since been forgotten, the Tulsa Oilers beat Dirtybutter and went undefeated for the season.

When the pitcher complied the catcher squatted and let the pitch go by. It caught the umpire in the mouth, and when he came to he was more cooperative.

HIGHWAY COMMISSION APPROVES
65 MPH SPEEDS IN TEXAS

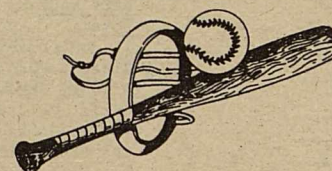

Following a public hearing required by Texas law, the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission voted this morning to increase the maximum speed limits on Texas' rural Interstate highways.

Pending action by Gov. Bill Clements, the increased speed limits will go into effect at 12:01 a.m., Saturday, May 9.

Raising the maximum speed limits on rural segments of Texas' Interstate highways brings into effect portions of Texas law that set speeds prior to 1974, the year the national speed limit was reduced to 55 mph. Under that law, large trucks can travel at 60 mph during the day and 55 mph at night. The new provisions will allow automobile motorists to drive 65 mph. These speeds do not apply to

After approving the new maximum speed limits, the highway commission informed the governor's office of its actions.

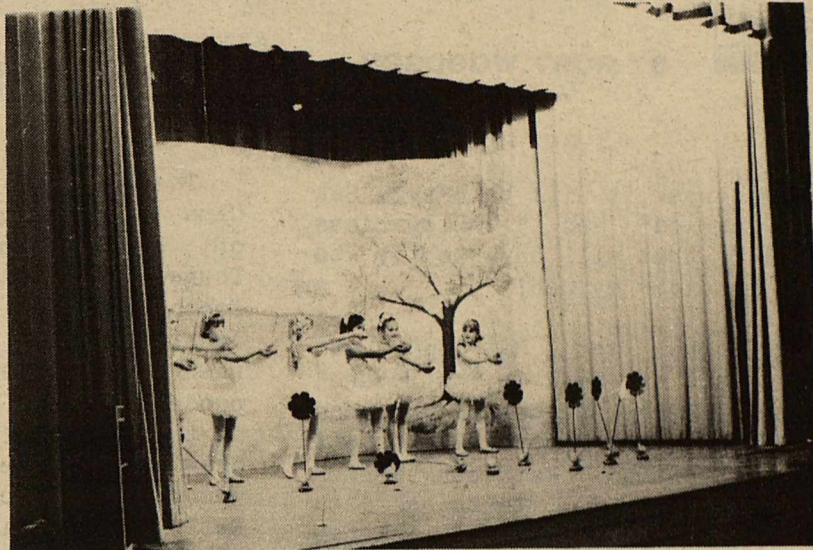

Under Texas law, the governor has seven days to sign a proclamation to implement the increase in maximum speed limits on Texas rural Interstate highways. The increase becomes effective when highway department crews post the new signs on rural Interstate highways on May 9.

BY RORY WOODSON

Hi, this week it will be "Peggy Sue got married" and " Stewardess school," that will have to try to stand up under my pen!

"Peggy Sue got Married" was reminiscent of "Back To The Future" although Peggy Sue was not as good as "Back To The Future" it's well worth watching. Kathleen Turner who plays Peggy Sue visits her 25th High School reunion and somehow goes back in time, back to her high school days. Imagine being able to change your entire future! The writers of this movie did and turned out a fairly good story. I give this one an 8 1/2.

"Stewardess School" accomplished exactly what it tried to do. It turned out to be a really good comedy. "Judy Landers" loans her beauty to this movie, and "Donald Most" (who by the way played Ralph Malph in Happy Days), who tries to give Spuds Mackenzie a run for his money as the original party animal. (Don't worry Spuds has nothing to worry about).

If ya'll like "Police Academy" then I know you'll like "Stewardess School" it's really worth watching! TILL NEXT WEEK -----HAPPY VEIWING

BRACKETT ALL SPORTS BOOSTER CLUB

The Brackett All-Sports Booster Club will conduct its final event of the current school year on Thursday, May 14 at the Powder Puff Football Game, during the halftime festivities of the annual event, when the drawing for a 1/2 processed beef will be held. Due to the number of unsold tickets the drawing has been delayed twice, according to club President Ron Kelley, but will definitely be held on that evening.

According to Kelley this has been a successful year for the club due to increased individual memberships and a generous group of Brackettville business memberships. The club will turn-over several thousand dollars in ear-marked funds for construction of a weight room when the Brackett ISD finds a suitable bidder in the next few weeks. Several raffles and cash donations have made this possible over the past three years. Other activities have included hospitality rooms for three basketball tournaments, two parent appreciation nights, chartering one football bus, and a donation to provide football insurance premiums. The club will be able to offer more help in the future to the athletic program now that the weight room needs have been met, according to Kelley, who wishes to thank all Kinney County residents for their individual and group help this year.

TEXAS LOTTERY

Legislation currently pending in Austin would authorize the establishment of a state lottery. If the measure is approved by the Legislature, Texas citizens will have the opportunity to vote on a constitutional amendment to permit the creating of the Lone Star Lottery.

Opponents are attempting to keep the lottery bill bottled up and to prevent legislators from submitting the issue to a referendum vote. Their arguments are in the form of time-worn myths that state lotteries prey on the poor, that they spawn compulsive gambling and so on.

The problem with these, and other, arguments is that they are personal opinions that cannot be documented. Study after authoritative study has conclusively shown that lotteries have no detrimental social effects.

The reality is that lotteries are exciting, entertaining games that are played by people in all socioeconomic groups in states across the nation. The public popularity of lotteries is clear: to date, voters in 28 states have approved lotteries by overwhelming margins.

Comptroller Bob Bullock estimates that a Texas lottery would contribute more than $600 million to the state treasury during the upcoming biennium and another $900 million during the succeeding biennium. Even these huge amounts would not erase the state's staggering deficit. These funds would, however, alleviate the need for cutbacks in higher education, highways and other key services. More importantly, lottery revenues would significantly reduce the need for further state tax increases.

Further, there is a broad base of grassroots support for a state lottery. According to public opinion polls, 68 percent—more than two-thirds—of all Texans want a state lottery. Even opponents acknowledge the fact that Texas voters will approve the Lone Star Lottery by huge margins if it is put on the ballot.

The track record of lotteries in other states is one of total success. Lotteries are generating billions of voluntary dollars that otherwise would be derived from mandatory taxes. Too, lotteries are providing millions of citizens in other states, not including Texas, with access to an inexpensive form of entertainment.

Our state budget problems, combined with the fact that Texans overwhelmingly favor a lottery, provide the Legislature with an easy answer: LET THE PEOPLE DECIDE.

BICYCLING PRECAUTIONS

Austin -- Whether you drive an old clunker with coaster brakes or an ultra-light, high performance bicycle, safety should be your top priority. A well-maintained bike is the first step in safe cycling, cautions Texas Safety Association (TSA).

In conjunction with National Bicycle Safety Week, TSA offers the following maintenance advice:

see your physician for a complete evaluation. "If the doctor tells you that you have high blood pressure, make sure that you understand the directions and follow them carefully," suggests Taylor. Proper treatment can usually bring high blood pressure down to normal levels, reducing the risk of heart disease.

Traditionally a doctor will try to treat high blood pressure through the following methods:

Diet: Reducing salt and sodium intake, eating a balanced diet & maintaining a good body weight can be important factors in reaching normal blood pressure.

Exercise: Moderate exercise, such as walking, can be an important asset in controlling and maintaining normal weight, and therefore, blood pressure. For some people with high blood pressure, exercise can be dangerous, so its important to follow your doctos's orders.

Medicine: Medicine may be prescribed for some cases of high blood pressure and when other treatment methods haven't succeeded. There are many different blood pressure treatment medicines available for doctors to prescribe.

"Lessening your chance of a stroke or heart attack makes blood pressure control worth it," states Taylor. "An added advantage is that some insurance companies will lower your insurance premium if you have reduced your blood pressure and have it under control," Taylor added.

For more information on high blood pressure, contact your local office of the American Heart Association weekdays during business hours.

* Be sure tires are properly inflated; the correct pressure should be embossed on the tire's sidewall. Caution: over-inflation can make a tire explode and cause serious injury.

* Make certain tires do not rub against the bike frame and that tire rims do not rub against brake pads.

* Replace missing, bent, or broken spokes.

* Check to see that brakes are working properly. Tighten loose brake cables, and replace them if they are frayed or rusty.

* If yours is a multi-speed bike, check to see that the gearshift levers shift smoothly -- any problems should be serviced by an authorized dealer.

* If buying a new bike this spring, be sure it "fits". When seated, you should be able to place one foot flat on the ground without leaning.

Additional safety tips to remember include wearing bright-colored clothing during the day and light-colored clothing at night. Add a headlight and taillight at night to improve your bike's visibility to motor vehicle drivers.

Wear a helmet every time you get on a bicycle and make sure child passengers do, too. About 75 percent of all bicycle-related fatalities are caused by head injuries. Each year, about 1,000 people are killed in bicycle accidents nationally.

Remember maintenance and safety precautions and avoid becoming one of those statistics.

CUTTING UTILITY BILLS
CAN BE A BREEZE

Many Texans pride themselves on how long they can wait before turning on the air conditioning each year. Others, especially those who have moved from northern climates, surrender early. But before the advent of mechanical cooling devices, millions of people survived hot Texas summers. The same natural cooling techniques are available today, and can help cut utility bills dramatically.

Ceiling, room and attic fans can help cut cooling costs, but there are also passive cooling methods that require no electricity at all. For example, cross ventilation may be effective for part of the cooling season. Wind creates areas of high and low pressure around a house. Air moves into a building through openings in the high pressure regions and exits at low pressure areas. Careful sizing and placement of air inlets and outlets can greatly enhance the cooling effects of cross ventilation. Open windows higher of the windward side of the house than on the leeward side for maximum air velocity and optimum cooling. Also, more air will circulate in the home if window openings are not directly opposite one another.

For more information about natural cooling and other energy saving ideas, call the Texas Public Utility Commission's toll-free Energy Hotline: 1-800-643-SAVE.

For America's Forests

Facts From the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture Forest Service

Who Owns America's Woods?

It may come as a surprise to some, but most U.S. commercial forest lands—those that can produce wood for market—are owned neither by the forest products industry nor by the Federal government, but by non-industrial, private forest landowners.

A diverse group that includes farmers, housewives, doctors, lawyers and numerous other occupations, plus retirees, together own some 278 million acres—or 58 percent—of the total commercial forest land.

A substantial number of these ownerships are small—under ten acres—and the timber on them may not be available for the growing needs of the U.S. market. Often, people just want to keep their "little piece of nature" untouched. Others are holding the land as an investment, hoping for higher prices in future years.

Whatever the reasons, they can spell problems for our timber supplies. The experts at the U.S. Forest Service warn that we are going to run short of wood at reasonable prices unless we change the way we manage our forests and the wood we get from them.

Federal, state and local governments also play roles in ownership of timberlands, but they have many uses in addition to timber production. For example, 1930s.

Surprisingly, most of America's forest land is owned by farmers and other private owners, not the government or the forest industry.

much of the National Forest System was originally reserved from the original Federal public domain to provide timber and protect watersheds. But later, the uses of these lands were expanded to include many things not compatible with timber production; such things as wilderness, research areas, recreation sites, etc. The same multiple use trend became common on other federal and state lands.

Much of the state-owned forest land was obtained by the states as part of land grants from the Federal government on entry into statehood. Some forest lands were acquired by state or local governments as tax-delinquent lands. This was especially true during the Great Depression of the Only 14 percent of the commercial timberland, where timber production is the prime purpose, is owned by the forest industry. The industry has tried to expand productive capacities by extending stewardship to substantial acreage of forest land, under long-term lease from farmers and other private owners.

Still, most of the timber in America belongs to private owners and the message is clear—there must be thoughtful management if we are to meet our needs for wood far into the future. More of these private lands must be put into wood production or the nation's wood supply will fall behind demand.

"ALAMO WING" RESERVE HISTORY
FILMED AT ALAMO VILLAGE

A C-5 Galaxy cargo plane at 500 feet passing over Happy Shahan's Alamo replica for a parting shot in an Air Force Reserve film.

BRACKETTVILLE-The skies of Kinney County rumbled April 13th when a mammoth C-5 Air Force cargo plane made more than a dozen passes over Alamo Village seven miles north of town. Flying at its lowest legal ceiling of 500 feet, the hugh plane was filmed as it cruised over Happy Shahan's famous Alamo replica for a film documenting the history of the "Alamo Wing" reserve unit at Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio. The 30-minute film will be used to recruit members and encourage employers to support their reservists.

The Alamo wing was the first reserve unit to make the transition from the Vietnam-era C-130 to the new C-5 Galaxy, the largest plane in the free world, says Col. Frank Maxwell. The reserve unit's story is important he said, because "the maturity of the wing parallels the maturity of the Air Force Reserve itself. Since it was started in the 50's, we've gone from so-called 'weekend warriors' to flying front-line aircraft with very important wartime roles."

The film is under direction of Brigadier General Carey Deckard, a well-known Air Force personality and media consultant from San Antonio. "This is more than a training film," he said. "This is a first-line production, a documentary. There's no difference between this and a production for a television show." Deckard's last film, an award-winning documentary on the 50th anniversary of Randolph Air Force Base which featured William Shatner of "Star Trek" fame, was shown as a television special in San Antonio.

In comparing Deckard's work to that of standard Air Force films, Major Karen Wetzal said, "this is going to look like Michaelangelo. Theirs usually look like paint-by-numbers."

The film also features Major Homer I. Lewis of Eagle Pass as one of three former Alamo wing chiefs to attain the reserve's highest rank. Of the six former reserve top guns, three came from the Alamo Wing.

The story will be narrated by Fess Parker of Walt Disney's "Davy Crockett" show. Parker and Shahan are two of many people who donated their time to the project, Wetzal said. "We would have never got to do it without all the volunteering of help we have had," she said. "We've had many, many, many donated hours."

The biggest bill for an hour's work would have gone to the plane. It takes 77 so-called "man hours" of preparation for every hour the C-5 is in the air, at a cost of roughly $8000 an hour, Maxwell said. But the hour of tricky maneuvering against the wind over Shahan's ranch gave the crew more training than they usually get in an hour, he added.

"To fly these low levels accurately over a single point was something new for that crew," said Captain Tom Lange, who radioed directions to the cargo plane from the Alamo compound.

"Because of its beautiful countryside, clean air and military history, Alamo Village is one of the most unique locations in Texas, if not the world," Gen. Deckard said as the plane flew East towards home.

Once again, Kinney County Public Library and the Texas State Library are co-sponsoring the Texas Reading Club this summer, featuring its theme "Animal Antics".

The Texas Reading Club is a program to encourage children and their parents to read and to use the library.

The Texas State Library selects a theme each year and produces posters, bookmarks, reading logs, and certificates to publicize that theme. Local libraries develop the programs.

To inspire program ideas, the state library publishes a guide to activities and crafts, to books and audiovisuals appropriate for the year's theme.

To help librarians and volunteers organize and manage a reading club, the Texas State Library provides a separate publication, A Librarian's Planning Handbook for the Texas Reading Club.

God's Harvest Is Never-Ending

"He who reaps receives wages, and gathers fruit for eternal life..."

— John 4:36

Paul in his letter to the Romans noted that "the wages of sin is death, but the free gift of God is eternal life in Jesus Christ our Lord." His words echoed those of Jesus when he told the disciples that their eternal life would come from the deeds he accomplished for God and that they would reap through their gathering of converts. Jesus was indeed God's instrument to harvest the believers in the Lord and his word. For God wisely gave all his children the option of free will in life, but their choice dictated what course their souls would take after death. How much better to be nurtured by God through Jesus and become a part of God's never-ending harvest than to be cast aside as unfit chaff as will the sinners among us.

LITTLE LEAGUE BEGINS

To the citizens of Brackettville and Fort Clark:

The Baseball season is about to begin, BUT, as the officers and a few very concerned parents have reviewed this years program, we have decided to go Babe Ruth in order to permit more youngsters to play ball.

We have decided on teams in the following age groups:

T-Ball - Ages 4-7

Bambinos - Ages 8-12

Babe Ruth - Ages 13-15

A problem has occurred that may not allow us to play the 13-15 age group because of the lack of interested citizens. We can not have a team unless we have more help from you, the citizens of our community.

We need your support or the boys and girls of this age group will not have a team. We need donations and sponsors. A special meeting has been called in order to determine whether or not there will be a league. Please come and support your kids in this effort. The meeting will take place May 11, 1987 at 7:00 p.m. in the High School Auditorium

If you wish to have the youngsters in your community playing, please make a special effort to be there even if your son or daughter can no longer play.

WELCOME BABY

A son was born to Crosby and Janna Boyd at the Val Verde Community Hospital on April 14, 1987 at 8:32 a.m. Milton Crosby Boyd III weighed in at 8 lbs. 1 oz. and measured 21 inches long. He is welcomed by his two sisters, Emily and Elizabeth.

BABY'S EMOTIONAL NEEDS

The basic needs of all children include warmth, shelter, food, clothing, love, and emotional support. Sometimes a family may provide very adequate shelter and food, but neglect the emotional needs of young children. Love and emotional support in the development years will go a long way toward assuring emotional and mental health when children grow up says Mrs. Sylvia Baker, Extension Agent-Home Economist.

In what ways can parents provide the "quality of love" that is needed?

First--through tender, gentle, yet confident physical handling of the infant, we demonstrate love.

Second--talking, humming, or singing to the infant are expressions of love.

Third--a simple act, like looking into your child's eyes when you talk to him or her communicates respect and love.

Fourth--smile for your child frequently when you are happy about what he does or says.

Fifth--allow the young children to touch your face--to be physically close when he wishes.

Sixth--gentle handling of the baby during bath and feeding times, as well as playtime, tells the infant that "you love him."

A child sufficiently loved in infancy will be able to give love as an adult.

PIANO RECITAL

Cathie Conrey and her students will present a Spring Recital Saturday afternoon, May 9th at 3:00 p.m. in the Town Hall at Fort Clark. Local students will be Elizabeth Boyd and Sonja Carrera. Christa Malik from Laughlin Air Force Base will play "O Sole Mio" and the remaining students from Del Rio will include Del Rio's Junior Miss, Jessica Hodge, who will play Rachmaninoff's Prelude in C# Minor. The public is cordially invited. Anyone who likes good piano music is welcome.
