Ready For The Winter.

winter all before us, and the days getting cooler and cooler, the situation of Kinney in regards to preparedness for the winter is good. The country and range are in the best of shape and the grass is growing out green and strong, and such spells happiness for stockmen during winter. A good shower is needed only to complete the situation, and, from all recent indications, it is expected soon. The stockmen are jubilent over the situation.

Autos Still Speed.

That there are some auto mobilists who don't seem to take any warning as to the fatal possibilities of speeding seriously, was proven Saturday evening when an automobile, driven by a young fellow, rounded the sharp curve near Filippone Store and crashed into a wagon coming the other way. The automobile did not sound any warning and it took both by surprise. Only the quick movement of the man in the wagon who pulled his horses to one side saved both from serious injury.

Others still round curves at high speed and don't seem to worry about anybody who get in their way. Speeding still seems to be the fad, and the public will have to pay as usual.

Boosting Macie.

In this issue we publish an advertisement showing the merits of Macie, our little neighboring town in this County, and reciting all its advantages and resources, etc. George Jones, R. V. Sauer and D. Ohlenbusch are the promoters of the movement and are boosting for Macie. Macie! is in the midst of the most level and fertile portion of Kinney and in the artesian belt, as the Gaebler well, only one mile distant, shows.

The Macie country is well adapted to agriculture, and it is expected that now that Mr. Gaebler has demonstrated that the sulpher water of his well is successful in irrigating the soil and raising crops, that more acreage will be thrown open soon for cultivation.

Sycamore Crossing Bad.

It has been brought to our notice by a number of our people and other motorists who travel on the Del Rio-Brackett road that the Sycamore crossing is in a very bad fix and needs refixing very much. The road leads through the river bed and recent rains have played havoc with the road as it was in the first place. In many places it has been washed out and sports big ruts. #### WITH M'GRAW'S AID MERKLE LIVED DOWN FAMOUS MISCUE

Giants' Former First Baseman Became Great Player in Spite of the Jeers of the Fans.

In the recent trade which sent Fred Merkle, veteran first baseman of the Giants, to the Brooklyn club in exchange for Catcher Lew McCarthy, nothing stands out more prominently than the perseverance of John Mc-Graw, manager of the Giants, in making a ball player of Merkle after the latter had made his famous bonehead | 2 play of September 23, 1908. It was on that fatal day that Merkle failed to "touch second."

Merkle, hooted and hissed by the fans, derided by sport writers and twitted by rival players, but all the time patted on the back by John Mc-Graw, has held his head up all these eight years and has proved to the world that he is a real ball player in spite of his lapse of memory which gave Chicago the National league championship. Not only has McGraw stuck to Mer-Me in spite of his failure to touch second, but after the 1912 world's series, when Boston won from the Giants through Merkle's failure to catch an easy foul fly, McGraw again stood by and insisted Merkle was good enough for him. Fans have howled and laughed at Merkle for those two plays, but always McGraw has stood pat.

Merkle has vindicated the judgment of his former chief. When he perpetrated the first of his famous bad plays knew that censure probably would wreck whatever chance there was for Merkle to show any class as a first on in his effort to live down the miscue. And Merkle did it.

The work of this first sacker has been a prominent feature of every one of McGraw's drives pennantward. Merkle has been a heavy, consistent batter and a heady, dependable fielder in nearly every emergency. His slips have been no more than players considered wonderful have made, but they have come at a time when they stood out. No one ever has taken the trouble to proclaim his brilliant feats under the same pressure, so he has been called a "bonehead."

Merkle has slipped in his hitting this year, but the averages, for the long number of years he has been a major leaguer, show he has batted consistently around the .300 mark. Last year he hit just one point below that mark, and his fielding average was .989.

Pretty fair for a man called a bonehead by the critical public.

To Obtain Power That Will Drive Wheels of Industry.

Ten thousand feet up in the Sierras not far from Los Angeles, is beautiful Silver Lake and the romantic Silver Lake Falls, said to be one of the most picturesque spots in southern California. By the end of this year the falls will be no more and the waters of the lake will be generating electric current, which will be distributed over hundreds of miles of territory.

For a long period the lake was the subject of litigation, the city of Los Angeles claiming the right to its undeveloped power, but finally the title was held to be vested in a private corporation. Now that private corporation, the Nevada-California Power company is building a 10,000-horse-power hydro-electric plant, which will be in operation next year, and the construction of this plant has resulted in the destruction of Silver Lake Falls. In place of the falls the water will drop more than 2,000 feet through great pipes to turn the turbines which will generate the electric power.

Gigantic dams, 30-inch pipes of steel and great turbines and generators are being constructed. The site of the plant is 56 miles from a railroad and the company spent over $40,000 in construction of a road over which caterpillar tractors, each drawing three wagons, could transport material for the plant. It takes a week for each wagon train to make the round trip The plant will cost about $1,000,000.

POPULARITY OF UKULELE KEEPING HAWAIIANS BUSY

Manufacturers Can't Meet the Demand for This Musical Instrument in United States.

The vogue of the Hawaiian ukulele in the United States has resulted in making the manufacture of that musical instrument one of the important industries of the Hawaiian islands in the past few months, says one of Uncle Sam's representatives in Honolulu. At the end of August, 1915, manufacturers were turning out about 500 or 600 instruments a month, while a year later the output had been increased to 1,600 a month and the demand from United States music dealers could not be met. There are eight principal manufacturers of ukuleles in Honolulu, with a scattering of instruments coming from small makers in the other islands. Each manufacturer has turned his small workshop into a factory, adding new workers and increasing the plant as rapidly as possible. A company recently was organized in Honolulu with plans to manufacture from 1,000 to 2,000 ukuleles per month with improved machinery, the workers to be Hawaiians and Portuguese.

The originator of the ukulele, a Portuguese who is now head of a manufacturing company, is still an active worker in his own factory, and turns out about 700 instruments per month. Another Honolulu firm produces about 400 a month. The Hawaiians and Portuguese of Hawaii claim that the instruments made by them, especially of koa wood, are seasoned and properly prepared. The highest-priced products are heavily beaded. The tone is one of the most important items in the construction of the ukulele, and the Hawaiians and Portuguese claim that this is obtained only with the use of properly seasoned koa wood and proper attenforming, and of old factories being enlarged, will give an output close to 3,000 per month, or 36,000 per year.

BREAD COSTS HALF BILLION

Huge Sum Spent Annually in United States for Staff of Life and Other Bakery Supplies.

The people of the United States spend approximately half a billion dollars for bread and other bakery supplies every year in addition to the cost of that which is made at home. The value of the bread, biscuit, crackers and other bakery supplies made in the United States in 1914 was $491,-893,000, an increase of 23.9 per cent as compared with the output in 1909. These figures, taken from the census with the amount invested in 1909.

While the genius and energy of European chemists have been concentrated upon means and methods of destroying life and annihilating armed power, American chemists have been equally active in synthetic, constructive fields, swiftly evolving, one after another, various branches of industrial effort destined to emancipate us from a foreign commercial yoke.

"Among the many interesting features illustrative of this evolution were such exhibits as the following: The barium industry, now utilizing to the fullest extent the boundless domestic deposits of barytes; the contact sulphuric acid process, now unsurpassed in volume and perfection of method; chemical glassware and porcelain, equal to the finest products or Germany; bleaching powder of the highest grade, of which, two years ago, but one-quarter of the country's needs was of domestic origin; the numerous sodium compounds, such as the ferrocyanide and the chlorate, now effectively and satisfactorily replacing the corresponding potassium salts, formerly imported in such quantities; a large group of medicinal chemicals hitherto secured exclusively from

Formerly most of the coal-tar, benzol and ammonia, liberated by our by-product coke ovens, was allowed to go to waste. Now it is all recovered.

Arsenic Absorbed by Living Hair. New light has been thrown on the legal side of arsenic poisoning, says the Scientific American. It has been found that arsenic compounds are absorbed by the hair of living persons, though not absorbed after death. In the hair of a man arsenic has been known to reach a concentration of one to five parts in 100,000. The deposit takes place in the hair after it has been absorbed by the abdominal organs-liver and kidneys in particular. Therefore, in cases of acute, quick poisoning, a chemical analysis of the "No branch of American industry has hair would show no arsenic, while it neys. On the other hand, if slow arsenic poisoning were suspected, anbut not in the liver and kidneys, and poisoning was not recent. The legal value of such evidence is apparent.

Uncle Sam's Chemists.

Despite the monumental work of Rittmann, the discoverer of a new gasoline process; Dr. Harvey Wiley of pure-food fame, and the whole corps engaged in fertilizer experiments, public opinion will not give credit for any good thing to Uncle Sam's chemists. After making a low-cost record for producing smokeless powder at Pickatinny arsenal and producing "dannite" -our famous secret "high explosive 'D' "-the workers in explosives have succeeded in producing a flashless powder. The great heat developed in smokeless powder detonations causes flying particles to become incandescent, producing a flash, but this new explosive produces only a pear-shaped iridescent flow at the muzzle, invisible at two miles. At night, a mask as high as a mounted man (technically known as "mounted defilade") will conceal the glow; the "defilade" required at night for our present explosive is not exactly known, but artillery officers have been known to declare, pessimistically, that a mile would be none too high.

School Notes.

BY HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS.

Chas. Reming, Editor. Frankie Maddux, Ass't Editor. Harry Stadler, Critic.

Quite a number of new pupils were enrolled the first of the week; mostly in the lower grades.

We are sorry to note that Mary Miller is still absent from school on account of sickness. She is a member of the 10th Grade.

Charles Reming, a member of the 10th Grade, was absent from school last Monday, and it is unusual for Charlie to be out of school.

Most all the pupils who took part in the athletic games last Saturday, were still sore and somewhat stiff in their movements last Monday. But the pleasure and enjoyment they got but of the contests more than paid for the hard knocks they received in the game.

We have received letters from Misses Else Sauer and Marguerite Birnstiel, who are now students in the State Normal School at San Marcos. They are both well pleased with their work, and were both classified in the Junior Class. We shall expect a fine record of work from both of these young ladies at the State Normal.

Last Saturday afternoon a very interesting game of basket! ball was played on the High School court. The score at the close of the first third 6 to 2 in favor of the home team. In the Hext third Brackett fouled very often but Uvalde failed in her free throws. Brackett's center, Ada Partrick, was disqualified. Score 8 to 5 in favor of Brackett. The third began with Ruth Lowe as Brackett's center and Uvalde substituted guards. Again the home team fouled but Uvalde again failed to goal the ball. The goal score was 10 to 6 in favor of Brackett. We hope to have a return game soon. The line up! was:

THE LONE STAR RANGER

This is a story about the Texas Plains People

By ZANE GREY

SYNOPSIS.

The time of the story: about 1875. The place: The Texas cow country. The chief character: Buckley Duane, a young man who has inherited a lust to kill, which he suppresses. In self-defense he shoots dead a drunken bully and is forced to flee to the wild country where he joins Blad's cuttary band. Further, an amighte reseal outlaw band. Euchre, an amiable rascal, tells him about Jennie, a young girl who had been abducted and sold to Bland for a bad fate. They determine to rescue the girl and restore her to civilization. "I didn't see anybody but the greasers, an' I sure looked sharp. Comin' back I cut across through the cottonwoods past Bland's cabin plumb into Beppe, an' when I inquired of his boss he said Bland had been up all night fightin' with the Senora. We're pretty lucky."

"It seems so. Well, I'm going," said Duane tersely.

"Lucky! I should smile! Bland's been up all night after a most draggin' ride home. He'll be fagged out this mornin', sleepy, sore, an' he won't be expectin' heli before breakfast. "Buck, a last word-look out fer thet Bland woman!'

Duane merely nodded, and then, saying that the horses were ready, he strode away through the grove.

No outlaws were in sight. He saw everal Mexican herders with cattle. Blue columns of smoke curled up over some of the cabins. The fragrant smell of it reminded Duane of his home and cutting wood for the stove. He noted a cloud of creamy mist rising above the river, dissolving in the sunlight.

Then he entered Bland's lane.

While yet some distance from the cabin he heard loud, angry voices of man and woman. Bland and Kate still quarreling! He took a quick survey of the surroundings. There was not even a Mexican in sight. Then he Duane shot him. He fell forward, his gun exploding as it hit into the floor, and dropped loose from stretching fingers. Duane stood over him, stooped to turn him on his back. Bland looked up with clouded gaze, then gasped his last.

"Duane, you've killed him!" cried Kate Bland, huskily. "I knew you'd have to!"

She staggered against the wall, her eyes dilating, her strong hands clenching, her face slowly whitening. She appeared shocked, half stunned, but showed no grief.

"Jennie!" called Duane, sharply. "Come out. Hurry!"

She came out with uneven steps, seeing only him, and she stumbled over Bland's body. Duane caught her arm, swung her behind him. He feared the woman when she realized how she had been duped. His action was protective, and his movement toward the door equally as significant.

"Duane!" cried Mrs. Bland. It was no time to talk. Duane edged on, keeping Jennie behind him. At that moment there was a pounding of "Fever? How Long Have We Been the morning I had a little hope. "Where 're you taking Jen?" she cried, her voice like a man's.

"Get out of my way," replied Duane. His look perhaps, without speech, was enough for her. In an instant she was transformed into a fury.

"You hound! All the time you were fooling me! You made love to me! You'll never leave here alive. Give me that girl! Let me-get at her! She'll never win any more men in this camp." "Help! help! help!" she shrieked, in a voice that must have penetrated to the remotest cabin in the valley.

Suddenly she snatched a rifle off the wall and backed away, her strong hands fumbling at the lever. And she jerked it down, throwing a shell into the chamber and cocking the weapon. Duane leaped upon her. He struck up the rifle as it went off, the powder burning his face.
