HAWAII COMMENT.

We made a false step, Let us retrace that and in pursuance of our long established, safe and honorable policy, allow these people to decide their own fate. [Providence Telegram: dem.

The administration should order an e lection; and if the provisional government will not obey the order it should be enforce I by the same means to which that nondescript oligarchy owes its existence Pittsburg Dispatch; rep.

Grover Cleveland was not elected presideut of Hawaii, and he has the good sense to know it. Mr. Harrison badly blundered in imagining that he had jurisdiction in Hawaiin territory. It is a glerio s thing for the country that we have not a jingo administration. Rochester Union; dem.

Memphie Commercial: The unpleasact predicament in which the United States now finds itself in regard to the Hawaiian affair, is altogether the result of the absurd attitude assumed by this government at the beginning of the revolt. If the administration which was in power had acted according to common sense and the precedent of wise custom, the United States would simply have de clined to have anything to do with the af fairs of a country settled by freebooters and peopled by caunibals. America has entirely enough to do at home without embroiling herself in spots over the rest of the world. Colonization is strictly contrary to any same American policy. It is certainly to be hoped that this annoying absurdity will teach us a lesson.

Washington Star: George Washing ton warned his countrymen against a rancorous party spirit, and the warning has its application today. The republic has few more dangerous enemies than the citizen or the official whose bitter partisanship prevents him from seeing any virtue or merit whatsoever in the acts or opinions of a political opponent, and whose impulse, on assuming political power, is to discredit and tear down all things that his bredecessor of an opposite political faith has built up. This tenpecially noticeable in its effects upon the republics foreign policy.

"In Whose Favor."

A well-known contractor walked into a bank in this city the other day to cash a check for $40. The paying teller looked at the check a few minutes, then, counted One Copy 1 Year - . . . . $2.00 out $400 and handed it to the contractor, who, although he noticed the error, said not a word, but rolled up the bills and wadded them down into his pocket. This happened in the morning, before the officials of the bank had an opportunity to discover the error, the contractor walked into the office of the president of the bank.

"Is this bank responsible for the errors of its clerk?" he asked the president.

"If it can be proved that any of our clerks have erred, replied the president, in a very chilly manner. "we make the correction."

"Well, nobody saw this error made but myself,' continued the contractor, "and my word ought to be sufficient proof, I think,"

THE ISLE OF FEAR.

I was the only white man in Patuca, the chief town of the Honduras waikas. Ever since my arrival at the Mosquito shore, the waikas had piqued my curiosity by wonderful tales of a mysterious island which stood in the midst of an inland lagoon and which, they "I am sorry, sir," said the bank | said, was peopled by hideous demons who destroyed all who set foot on their terrible territory.

Years ago the Sukia had once ventured into the lagoon on a search for rare herbs and reptiles with which to work her spells and incantations.

sters, having the shape of men and the away the sharks and crocodiles, laid eyes of devils, rushed to the water's hold of the ropes attached to the haredge, and, waving their long, hairy arms, uttered the most horrible yells, which so terrified the Sukia that she bent to her paddle and never ceased her frenzied strokes until the pitpan grated on the pebby beach of the village.

And, as though this were not in itself a potent enough sign of the island being consecrated to Lassa and his attendant evil spirits, a headstrong waika buckra. in a moment of bravado, had gone to Dankwarra to fight Lassa, and from that day to this had never been heard rapidly opening and shutting. As the raft slid into the water, the bushes parted, and the faces appeared in the open.

They were no longer simply "faces." They were huge, towering, hairy forms that stood erect, with arms waving high above their heads. And now they came menacingly toward us. The waikas-and perhaps I, too-- gave one cry, and throwing ourselves on the raft with a shove we sent it gliding away from the island. At this the monsters waved their arms yet more frantically, and advancing to the water's edge gave utterance to a succession of yells, Just then the sun burst from above the woodland and fully revealed to my astonished eyes the forms of our pursuers. They were not men, not demons, but monkeys-and yet not monkeys, but hage gorillas! The island faded away, and the roors of the gorillas were lest in the distance. Back through the black creck we paddled out into the broad, swiftly flowing waters of the Rio de la Patuca. I tried to explain the identity of the
